Before the withdrawal of the German Parliamentary Discipline bill, it was noted in Germany, with some surprise, that the measure had created more excitement outside of Germany than at home. The provisions of that bill did seem obnoxious to a stranger, and especially to Americans, accustomed as we are to the utmost freedom of debate. But it is always easier for people to become inflamed by the misfortunes of remote nations than to be moved by circumstances nearer home. It is a demonstrable proposition that good Americans pass more sleepless nights and anxious days on account of the Anti-Socialist laws of Germany than even the Germans do. We can imagine one of our excellent Communists shaking a sleepy German by the shoulder and crying, "Wake up, there! Don't you know that you are a victim of the most crushing tyranny on earth?" The victim of tyranny smiles drowsily and takes another mug of beer. No, he does not know that he is persecuted and downtrodden. Sometimes his good-natured, stolid face beams with a ray of intelligence when his voluble French friend shows him the malevolent oppression of the Kaiser, but, on the whole, he is content to let his friends do his swearing and relieve his mind for him. And it must be admitted that his friends very much enjoy doing it.

The defenders of human liberty throughout the world held a meeting at Chickering Hall the other night, in which German despotism was very severely handled. If the Kaiser or that bad man, Bismarck, could have heard what was said about them, they would undoubtedly have felt, as Warren Hastings did on a certain occasion, that they were the basest criminals on the earth. There was a painful lack of Germans. The meeting was arranged for the purpose of giving naturalized Germans an opportunity to ventilate their wrongs; but, in the language of the Chairman, Mr. John Swinton, of the editorial staff of our brilliant contemporary, the New-York Sun, "the Germans had decamped." Not one was to be found. Vainly the Chairman rapped his knuckles on the stand and demanded to know if there were any down-trodden Germans in the hall who would like to ascend the platform and recite their wrongs. Not a down-trodden responded. It was proposed to send out agents with lassoes and compel some fugitive German Socialist to come in, just as the good fathers of the California mission were used to lasso Indians who were to be baptized into the faith. Where was the use, moaned the Chairman, of organizing a meeting of German Socialists to denounce German Anti-Socialist laws, if the German Socialists would not attend? The meeting in this respect was a failure. "They had crawled out of it," said the disappointed Chairman, although he had understood that they were "the most voluble nation on the face of the earth."

The failure of the German-American Socialists to rise to the emergency is one of the most discouraging signs of the times. In consequence of the laudable efforts of the Socialists in Germany to reduce the number of crowned heads, by means of shot-guns and other weapons, this peaceful and patriotic class is outrageously persecuted. Men who have gone out gunning for Emperors have actually been put to death; and such a popular prejudice has been created against sportsmen of this variety that the relatives of one of them changed their names in order to disguise their relationship to the unsuccessful marksman. When it was discovered that certain Socialist societies were preparing to kill Emperors, Princes, and other imperial vermin, stringent laws were enacted against them, and these oppressed people were notified that they must not interfere with business of the crowned heads. A thrill of indignation ran along the cable under the briny depths of the Atlantic, and Mr. Justus Schwab called an impromptu meeting of exiled patriots at his lager-beer shop. It was numerously attended. A great deal of beer was drank, and the resolutions of the assemblage took the shape of 5-cent nickels, which flowed into Schwab's money-drawer like the leaves of Vallambross. There was no lager at Chickering Hall the other night. Neither were there any German Socialists.

Why this lukewarmness? Why do not the heart-broken exiles of despotism rise up and denounce the tyrannical laws of "the man of blood and iron"? Is it possible that the German-Americans are so sleek and comfortable in their republican American homes that they do not care for their persecuted brethren beyond the sea? Is it possible that they do not know that king-killing, like poaching, is declared unlawful, and that a Socialist who takes aim at a paltry Emperor is actually arrested and tried as if he were an ignominious chicken-stealer? These are the facts, and yet, strange to say, our German Socialist friends stolidly drink their lager while Swinton, Citizen Deury, and the seedy young man with eye-glasses combine to blister Bismarck and make things hot for the crowned heads. It is a bad sign when victims of tyranny do not know when they are victims of tyranny. It is lamentable that Americans and Bohemians should be compelled to manage the denouncing business, while those who are most interested (or should be) in this attempt to make tyranny tremble placidly look on and smile. But Germany is a great way off, and even the thunder-tones of the Chickering Hall meeting must roll over the heads of many abuses nearer home before the bad old Kaiser will hear them. Unless our fellow-countrymen can secure a few real victims to assist in the next protest against German imperialism they had better take up some native-born grievance. It is a pity to waste so much useful sympathy on a foreign country which does not seem to want it.

One of the most remarkable productions of the late George S. Hillard was a lecture delivered in his thirty-eighth year on the "Connection between Geography and History." This was the first presentation in the Republic of the principles of comparative physical geography, afterward unfolded by Guyot in his work. "The Earth and Man," made up from a course of lectures given in Boston. Hillard's "Life of Captain John Smith," after it had appeared in Sparks' "American Biography," was republished in England without the author's name, as a native performance. In early life he was regarded, no doubt justly, as far superior, intellectually, to Charles Sumner, whose law partner he temporarily was, and he would probably have achieved much more in politics, had he possessed Sumner's excessive industry and adhesiveness of purpose. Although he had been six years a paralytic, he retained full mental vigor and all his wonted cheerfulness to the last. Allusion has been made in some of the newspapers to his domestic unhappiness. His marriage was a most striking instance of temperamental incompatibility. Both he and his wife were amiable, estimable, and affectionate, but totally devoid of sympathy one with the other. They could no more coalesce than oil and water; and yet each made a heroic struggle during 40 years to this end. They separated only two years ago, their common friends having decided that separation was the best thing, as the author's growing ailment rendered any lack of spiritual or mental concord too serious to be longer endured. The ill-assorted couple had great respect for one another; but any approach to harmony was simply impossible. In the first years of their marriage they had a son, and his loss was an affliction from which the father never entirely recovered. It very rarely happens that so excellent and admirable a man and woman as Mr. and Mrs. Hillard have been hopelessly prevented, by radical differences of constitution and disposition, from making one another happy.

Germans of a statistical turn are letting in a considerable amount of uncomfortable light upon the social condition of those who live in their capital city. Every one knows that Berlin is a town of hasty creation. From a quiet, well-ordered place, it has within a few years expanded into a great, bustling metropolis. But, though there has been a gain in size, it cannot be said that the city has increased proportionately in other desirable respects; on the contrary, the augmentation of human want and misery seems to have outstripped the growth in population. Take one curious change, that is, the increase in the number of those who live on third stories. In 1861 they were only 3½ per cent. of the population, while in 1871 the proportion had risen to 8½ per cent., and since that time the increase has been gradual, though slow. Every year the ratio of citizens of Berlin who live in cellars grows larger, while the number of those who pass through the rigors of a North German Winter without a fire or stove in their rooms is terribly large. Besides this, it is estimated that one-eighth of the entire population is composed of men and women who are little better than tramps, living from hand to mouth, and only working when forced to do so. Perhaps these facts may account for the rapid spread in Berlin of Socialism, as this is a theory wonderfully attractive to those who have nothing to lose by any change.

The bitter jest recently leveled at the great champion of French Republicanism, by changing the pharse "Vous m'embêtez" (you bore me) into "Vous me Gambettez," is a fair illustration of the well-known saying that the enemies of a French politician always aim at coupling him with some ridiculous association. Indeed, the party warfare of France, for generations past, has been chiefly waged by means of those nicknames in which her people excel. One of Louis XV.'s upstart favorites was actually driven from Paris by the mockery which converted his newly-acquired title of La Vandière into "L'Avant-hier," (the day before yesterday.) The deadliest of the countless hostile epithets applied to Marie Antoinette was that of "La Boulangère," (the bakeress,) which kept alive the absurd calumny that she had withdrawn a quantity of grain from the public stores, in order to sell it for her own benefit. The fate of the Directory of 1795 was sealed the moment France began to speak contemptuously of its members as "Les Avocats," (the lawyers.) The massacre of the 4th of December was needed to efface the nickname of "Soulouque" applied to Louis Napoleon, in stinging allusion to the mock Emperor of the Haytian negroes, and there can be little doubt that the spirit fostered on that occasion by teaching the soldiers of the Algerian Army to speak of the Parisians as "Bedouins" rendered the butchery ten-fold more bloody than it would otherwise have been.

The late J. Blair Scribner was so much admired and loved by his maternal grandfather, Hon. John I. Blair, after whom he had been named, that the latter had determined, it is said, to leave him a large amount of property. He was so desirous that his elder grandson should be the senior partner of the publishing house that he bought, it is said, Mr. Armstrong out of the firm in order that its style might be changed from Scribner, Armstrong & Co. to Charles Scribner's Sons. By this change the entire financial responsibility and management of the house devolved upon Blair Scribner, who was very capable and ambitious, though not strong enough to endure the strain. He had been ailing for some time, and his physician had urged him last Autumn to go South for rest and recreation. But he was unwilling to leave his post, and by rigidly adhering to it he really died from overwork. Had Mr. Armstrong remained in the firm, it is not unlikely that Blair Scribner would still have been alive. Thus his grandfather's generosity defeated the very purpose he had so fondly cherished. The uncertainty of life and death is shown in the fact that Blair Scribner, less than 30, is dead, while his grandfather, John I. Blair, is yet vigorous at over three score and ten. Few young men had brighter prospects or more to live for than Blair Scribner, and his early death illustrates the bitter sarcasm of fortune.

In spite of the careful study that has been given to the disease, diphtheria must still be classed as an unexplainable physical disorder. For a long time it was supposed to be of modern origin, but medical historical research has shown that there is good reason for thinking that it prevailed with deadly effect in India as long ago as 600 B. C., and that the fatal epidemic called in the Talmud "sekara" was essentially diphtheritic in its character. But from this time forward to the seventeenth century there is no disease described with which it can be compared. At that time there were many deaths from this cause; but it appears to have made a complete leap over the eighteenth century, and not to have been taken into professional account until about twenty years ago. Since that time, 1858, it has been intermittent in its severity, when any given locality is considered, though it has never disappeared, when this and other large countries are taken into account. What regulates its coming and its going is, however, an unsolved mystery. Of the nature of the disease itself the same uncertainty exists, some physicians classing it with the very common disorder known as croup, while others, of seemingly equal authority, maintain that there is no connection between the two. Indeed, almost as much is learned by what it does not do as by what it does. In this way it has been repeatedly shown that it is governed by family or constitutional attractions, since, when one member of a family has it, other members of the household are much more liable to be attacked by it than friends or nurses who are not related by blood ties, even though the exposure in the latter case should be greater than in the former. In view of the number of cases of sickness from this cause in this City at the present time, it would be well for all to bear this last-named circumstance in mind, for the frequency with which two or more members of a family die within a short time from this disease is one of its most painful features. It is, at least, satisfactory to know that the number who recover is now much larger than it once was, for in ancient times it was styled an incurable complaint, while the present rate of mortality from this cause is less than 40 per cent. of those who suffer from it. The fact of its complete absence through long terms of years certainly indicates its possible preventability, and in these days of enlightened medical research it will be strange if some way is not discovered of stamping it out as effectually as small-pox has been eradicated.

In consequence of the prospectively unprofitable character of most of the great mercantile pursuits in England, and the ill-success that has attended many of the investments made by British capitalists in foreign national loans, it is probable that the amount of unemployed money held in London seeking secure investments is larger now than it usually is. This sum, under ordinary conditions, has been estimated to be about £120,000,000, but it would not be surprising if it now footed up to £150,000,000, for many of the large landed proprietors have not yet begun to feel the contracting pressure of hard times upon their incomes. Under these circumstances, if our business interests revive within the next year or two, it would not be strange if English capital was to flow this way to supplement our own in the development of our various industries. There are certain American investments which are not likely for a long time to come to prove attractive to foreign capitalists. Among these may be ranked the loans of certain Southern and Western States; the stock of railroads, particularly those in the West, and shares in mining ventures. In all of these British investors have had bitter experience, and the lesson so hardly learned is likely to be remembered. But these, while they represent many of the channels through which floating money is absorbed, do not include countless opportunities for using capital which a great and growing country like this has to offer when business is in a flourishing condition. In California the custom was adopted long ago of establishing large loaning institutions supplied wholly with funds drawn from the other side of the Atlantic, and though this has already been done here on a small scale, it is not improbable that the practice may be extended in the immediate future. In these cases, the money is placed by the foreigners in the hands of managers upon whose honesty and business keenness they can rely, and, though the scope of operations is frequently carried outside of what would be termed legitimate banking, the investors feel secure in the thought that they will not be called upon to meet unreasonable losses. It is true that this field is at present more than filled by home accumulations, as holders of bank stock know to their sorrow, but 12 months or 24 months may change all this.

VICEREGAL VISITORS AT NIAGARA.

Niagara Falls, Jan. 23.—The viceregal party spent yesterday visiting the scenery about the Falls. The visitors followed the river on the Canadian side to the new suspension bridge, and crossed to the American side. Turning to the northward, they kept on the outskirts of the town, then, following the river road, they reached the bridge and crossed to Goat Island. Luna Island was next visited. They next went to Prospect Park, which was beautifully decorated with flags and arches, after which they descended the inclined plane to the ice mound below the American fall. They went thence along the rough path across the ice bridge, on which there are three saloons for the sale of refreshments. On seeing these the Marquis of Lorne laughingly remarked that it was the first time he had ever seen a refreshment booth made of solid ice with a stove burning briskly in it. They then finished the walk across the ice bridge, and taking the sleighs which were in waiting at the foot of the ferry road, returned to their hotel.

GENERAL NOTES.

Rents have fallen from 25 to 30 per cent. in Quebec.

The California Constitutional Convention has rejected all the propositions to extend the elective franchise to women.

Cincinnati papers record with evident pride that nine foundlings have been found on door-steps in that city since New Year's Day.

A Connecticut farmer and his son have been badly poisoned in the hands by buckskin gloves purchased in Bridgeport. Sumac is supposed to have been used in the tanning.

An Iowa girl eloped with her lover and was married the other day, while her dearest lady friend, closely veiled, led her cruel father a wild-goose chase in another direction.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton has been delighted by the discovery that the State of Indiana exempts widows and spinsters possessing $1,000 of property from taxation on one-half that sum.

Hon. Artemas Ervin and Mr. James Cox, of Lowndes County, Miss., quarreled on Monday afternoon, 6th inst., and fell at each other with their pen-knives. Both were seriously, perhaps fatally, cut.

The Toledo brewers refuse to employ any man in cutting ice who does not furnish a ticket from a saloon-keeper patronizing them. Consequently, if a man doesn't drink beer he can't have work.

The Boston Advertiser says that Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes used but one pen for all his literary works from 1857 until September of last year, when he sent it to the makers to be repaired, with a "certificate of honorable service."

Of the 232 divorces in St. Louis last year, 123 were granted by default—many, probably, by collusion between the parties, and in some cases unknown to the defendant. There are now pending about 200 cases undisposed of.

A tailor in Concord, N. H., has made, in compliance with the order of an eccentric customer, a pair of trousers which measure 20 inches in circumference at the thigh and 13 inches at the ankle, and have a spring-bottom of 24 inches.

The use of pennies in St. Louis, which was begun about a year ago, is reported to be increasing, and many citizens are finding them not only endurable but indispensable. And this is found true not only of the poorer classes but of wealthy people.

The National Journal of Education prints letters from Prof. Andrew P. Peabody, D. D., of Harvard College; William Lloyd Garrison, and John G. Whittier, disapproving military drill in schools as tending to the cheapening of human life and the reckless use of deadly weapons.

Mr. Hugh Johnston, of Catasauqua, Penn., took his wife sleigh-riding on Tuesday. On the way she complained of feeling cold, and he wrapped her more closely in the robes. She made no further complaint, but when they reached home Mr. Johnston discovered that she was dead. Heart disease was the cause.

The Lebanon Courier predicts that Gov. Hoyt will make one of the most popular Executives Pennsylvania has ever had. It says he is a genial gentleman, in full sympathy with the people, with a personal magnetism that wins the regard of all who approach him, added to which are an honest purpose and a natural and cultured ability.

Gen. Wade Hampton, of South Carolina, has been interviewed again. He says he is a hard-money man of the strictest sect, but thinks resumption was had too suddenly and has cost too much. He would have neither greenbacks nor national bank-notes, and, in fact, wants no other financial institutions than State banks. He says that South Carolina ought to pay its debts, and admits that there were "irregularities" in the late election. Looking forward, he expresses the belief that the Democracy can succeed in 1880 on the platform of constitutional rule, self-government, and no sectionalism.

AMUSEMENTS.

"IL TROVATORE" AT BOOTH'S.

Mr. Strakosch's company, with the addition of Mme. De Murska, gave a performance of "Trovatore" last evening at Booth's Theatre which was worthy of much praise. The house was full, and the artists who sang had no cause to complain of a lack of appreciation. Mme. De Murska's Leonora was a meritorious performance, but the rôle demands dramatic force and the grand style, which Mme. De Murska does not possess beyond scores of other Leonoras who have appeared on the New-York stage. Indeed, her rendering of the part was not up to the standard of some artists who are not yet forgotten. She sang, however, carefully, and introduced some of her exceptionally brilliant high notes and florid execution, which never fail to arouse the enthusiasm of an audience. The triumphs of the evening were Miss Cary's Azucena and Mr. Adams' Manrico. Miss Cary was in superb voice, and sang, as she acted, with the skill of an experienced artist. If she would contrive to make herself look like Azucena, and sacrifice the attractiveness of her stage presence to the dramatic requirements of the part, she would in every sense be entitled to the first place on the operatic stage in this rôle. It was, nevertheless, a noble performance by Miss Cary, and received, as it deserved, the heartiest applause. Mr. Adams was in better voice than he has been on any other evening of the season, and gave a spirited and artistic rendering of the part of Manrico, which improved as it progressed. In the duet with Azucena, in the fourth act, he was without fault, and no better performance of this favorite part of the opera has been heard for many a day. Signor Pantaleoni was not particularly good as the Count. The minor parts and the chorus were fairly given, but the orchestra, as usual, were inclined to be noisy, and the conductor had his hands full in his efforts to keep them under control.

GENERAL MENTION.

This evening the Lingards may be seen at the Broadway Theatre in "Our Boys." This amusing play will be given at the two performances to-morrow.

Mr. Charles Fechter will make his appearance on the Boston stage next month in the "Duke's Motto." Later in the season he is expected to play in this City.

Unusual preparations are now being made at Niblo's for the coming revival of that ancient and well-worn spectacle "The Black Crook." This seems to indicate a return to the "good, old times," as the vague past is generally termed.

It may be well to recall the fact that the hundredth anniversary of the death of David Garrick, the most illustrious name in English theatrical annals, occurred last Monday. Davy—as Johnson affectionately called him, the same Johnson who had previously lampooned him—died on the 20th of January, 1779. His last appearance was made in "King Lear."

On the return of Mlle. Aimée to the Park Theatre in April, a company made up mostly of new faces will be introduced to the public. The second prima donna will be Mlle. Berthe Legrand, who is unknown here, and the tenors will be M. Guteam and M. De Howey. Offenbach's latest success, "Madame Favart," is one of the novelties to be presented by the

WORK IN THE NEW CAPITOL

PROPOSITIONS AND DISCUSSIONS IN THE ASSEMBLY.

MORE SUGGESTIONS FOR INSURANCE LEGISLATION—THE REFEREE SYSTEM ATTACKED—A SUBSTITUTE FOR MR. BROOKS' RESOLUTION ABOUT THE INFERIOR COURTS TABLED—TALKING ABOUT SALARIES IN THIS CITY.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—In the order of introduction of bills to-day, Mr. Skinner brought forward the bill, of which an outline was sent yesterday, proposing the abolition of the Insurance Department. Upon Mr. Fish's request, the bill was read through as introduced. It was listened to with attention, puzzling some members, while it astonished others. In the line of life insurance matters, Mr. Hepburn introduced a bill requiring life insurance companies to issue paid-up policies to policy-holders upon lapsed policies in certain cases. Mr. Ogden, of Kings, introduced a bill in relation to foreign insurance companies doing business in this State. It provides that no company organized under the laws of any foreign Government shall hereafter be admitted to transact the business of fire insurance in this State, unless it shall have deposited in the Insurance Department as security for its policy-holders in this State a sum at least equal to $500,000, provided, however, that this act shall not apply to any such foreign company now authorized to transact such business in this State. Such sum of $500,000 deposited with the Insurance Department shall be invested in the manner now provided by law as to the assets of insurance companies organized under the laws of this State.

Mr. Wells, of Westchester, introduced a bill designed to check abuses in the appointment of Referees, particularly in the City of New-York. It is well known that some of the Judges have had their favorite Referees, to whom they have referred cases in spite of the protest of all parties to the action, the court claiming the right to appoint any one, even if the parties to the suits were willing to agree upon some one else. It is believed by the promoter of the bill that there is no reason why parties should not agree upon a Referee of their own selection. Mr. Wells' bill provides that in actions to foreclose mortgages for the partition or sale of real estate and for the admeasurement of dower, whenever a referee shall be appointed for any purpose, the court shall appoint as such Referee any reputable attorney of the Supreme Court that may be agreed upon by the plaintiff and such of the defendants who have appeared, or attorneys; and in cases where none of the defendants have appeared, then the court shall appoint as such Referee any reputable attorney of the Supreme Court, nominated by the plaintiff. The bill expressly provided that no person shall be appointed as Referee who holds any position as clerk or otherwise in any court of this State, or who has any interest whatever in the action.

Mr. Yaroum, of Erie, opened the discussion, opened by Mr. Brooks upon the question of the reduction of salaries in New-York City. He moved Mr. Brooks' resolution regarding the inferior courts from the table, and offered a substitute for it, as follows:

Whereas, It appears by the financial estimate of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of the City of New-York that the expenses of maintaining the judiciary of said City, including the offices of the Commissioner of Jurors, for the year 1879, will reach the enormous sum of $885,484, as more fully appears by the schedule annexed hereto; and

Whereas, In the judgment of this House the expenses of this branch of the City Government can be greatly reduced without in any degree impairing the efficiency of the administration of justice.

Resolved, That it be referred to the Committee on Affairs of Cities to hear, determine and report to the House at the earliest practicable day, in the interest of economy and reform, the proper remedies to reduce the expenses and to remove other abuses, if any, growing out of the administration of justice in the City of New-York.

After the Clerk had read the proposed substitute, Mr. Brooks, who was evidently not satisfied, desired to have a vote taken, separately, on his resolution and the substitute. This the Speaker decided would not be done. Mr. Brooks then declared his reasons for aiming his resolution at the Court of General Sessions, which was that it is a court established by legislative action and within its control. Mr. Hayes said that while he had no disposition to obstruct the member from Richmond, he objected to passing a resolution to instruct the Committee on Cities. The whole matter should be referred to the committee, and he therefore called up his resolution regarding the sealing down of the salaries, which he offered as an amendment to the amendment of Mr. Varnum. Mr. Varnum rather hastily accepted the amendment. Then Mr. Strahan expressed his opinion that the scope of the inquiry to be undertaken should be wider. It should be extended to all the boards and departments. He then went over the resolution of Dr. Hayes, calling attention to what appeared to him, Under, in that it omitted to strike at the salaries of certain employes.

Mr. Hepburn, speaking more directly than the gentleman from New-York, suggested that the phraseology of the resolution was too limited. He favored Mr. Brooks' resolution, because he believed it good generalship to attack the enemy in detail. If all departments were assailed together, opposition would be concentrated. He trusted that the opposition to the resolution would not be frittered away by referring it to the Committee on Cities. Mr. Fish asked whether it would not be better to have local authorities fix the salaries, rather than the Legislature, knowing nothing about them, should attend to the matter. Further on, Mr. Strahan alluded to the action of the Governor, who had vetoed bills to reduce salaries because the passage of them was considered an unconstitutional interference with local authority. It was Mr. Strahan's opinion that it would not do to mince matters by attacking in detail. The bill to reduce salaries should be comprehensive. There was public opinion enough in favor of such a bill to drive it through. He gave notice that he proposed to introduce such a bill at an early day. Mr. Husted, seeing that the discussion which was becoming tiresome to the Assembly, was likely to result unprofitably, moved to lay the whole matter on the table, but not until he and Dr. Hayes had had a sharp passage, in which Mr. Husted objected very fiercely to the insinuation of Mr. Hayes that he was opposed to reducing salaries in New-York. The matter was tabled.

THE SENATE'S WORDS AND DEEDS.

LOOKING AFTER RECEIVERS OF SAVINGS BANKS—THE BILL ABOUT COMMISSIONERS OF WATER-SUPPLY FOR NEW-YORK PASSED—A PROPOSED NEW CAPITOL CELEBRATION.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—Lieut.-Gov. Dorsheimer presented to the Senate this morning the report of the Capitol Commission, of which he is a member, and the reading of which was listened to with marked attention. The Commissioners invite the severest scrutiny of the Legislature and of the public into their official acts, both as respects their economy and wisdom.

The report of the Acting Superintendent of Banks was received in answer to Senator Jacobs' inquiry as to the number of savings banks that had failed in the last 10 years, the names of Receivers, &c. The Superintendent says he is unable to give the names of Receivers or any details of their acts, for the reason that when a Receiver is appointed the bank is taken out of the jurisdiction of the Bank Superintendent, and the law does not compel him to report to anybody but the court that appointed him. He advises a change in the law so as to require reports to be made also to the Bank Department, where the public naturally looks for information. He says he has asked for information from several Receivers, who have declined to furnish it. Mr. Jacobs said that, from information he had received, he was satisfied that some of these Receivers were putting the money of depositors into their own pockets, where they intended to keep it as long as possible, and it was very likely these were the men who refused information to the Bank Superintendent. He therefore offered a resolution, which was adopted, calling upon the Superintendent for the names of those Receivers who had refused to answer his inquiries.

Judge Robertson's bill, enlarging and simplying the powers of the Commissioners appointed last Winter to take steps for procuring an additional supply of water for New-York, was read a third time and passed, with only one dissenting vote—Ecclestine's. The bill was drawn by the Corporation Counsel of New-York, and its passage asked for by all the persons officially interested in the work of procuring an additional water-supply. Senator Wagstaff asked and obtained unanimous consent for the passage of a bill authorizing the Controller to issue duplicate certificates to the Manhattan Savings Institution in place of those stolen last Fall.

Senator Ecclestine offered a resolution, which was adopted, calling upon the New-York Police Commissioners to report, in 10 days, what steps they have taken to reduce the pay of policemen, and under what authority they are acting.

Senator Harris called up a resolution, offered by him two weeks ago, for the appointment of a joint committee of the two houses to take into consideration the propriety of getting up some kind of a ceremonial whereby the transfer of the Legislature from the old to the new capitol might be properly commemorated and put on record. A long discussion followed, in which the Albany hobby of everlastingly glorifying the new Capitol was humorously and sarcastically treated. Mr. Ecclestine thought there had been enough celebration of the new Capitol until the structure was completed. He was in favor of waiting until the entire meal was served up, instead of stopping to say grace over each individual dish. Mr. John Reed had no objection to the celebration, if it was done without expense to the State, but he thought that, for the present, the people had about all they could do to pay the bills for the Capitol without incurring additional expense for banquets such as the world progressed. Mr. Ecclestine, who appeared to be the only serious man in the debate, rebuked Mr. Ecclestine for his sobriety in talking about a celebration in which he was only a guest, and the expense of which was paid by the citizens of Albany, as something "we" had done. He would remind Senators that for the last three years not a cent had been paid in taxes by the people of this State for the new Capitol. All the appropriations had been taken from unexpended balances of appropriations for other purposes. This brought Mr. Jacobs into the discussion. He quoted the laws of 1877, from which it appeared that over $1,000,000 was raised by tax that year for the new Capitol. The debate finally ended in the adoption of the resolution for the appointment of a committee. The motive for the whole thing is said to be to afford an opportunity for certain Senators and Assemblymen to air their eloquence in making speeches at the proposed celebration.

Senator Murphy introduced, by request, a bill transferring the Dock Department of New-York to the Department of Public Works. Also, by request, a bill providing for a reduction of the number of Judges of the Marine Court to four, by forbidding the election of successors to the next two Judges who e terms expire.

COST OF THE NEW CAPITOL.

THE COMMISSIONERS' REPORT OF THE PROGRESS OF THE WORK—THEY THINK THE STRUCTURE CAN BE COMPLETED FOR $4,200,000.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—The New Capitol Commissioners have submitted to the Legislature their report of the work of the past year. Its main points are as follows:

They report that they have expended during 1878 the sum of $1,026,463 72, and that there was on hand the sum of $21,272 66, being the unexpended balance of the appropriation made by the act of May 13, 1876. There is now due and unpaid and to become due upon contracts $340,910 14. During the year 1878 the north centre section of the new Capitol has been finished and furnished. The Assembly Chamber, with its appurtenances, has been made ready for the Assembly. The room designed for the Court of Appeals has been prepared for the use of the Senate, and several adjoining apartments have been fitted up for the officers of that body. Four rooms have been furnished and set apart for the Governor, and about 30 minor apartments have been prepared for committee-rooms and other purposes. The walls of the south centre section, and those upon the court have been raised to the roof line. A sidewalk has been built along the north side of the building, the street in front thereof has been repaved, and three crosswalks have been laid across Washington-avenue. One-half of the basement of the whole building has been finished. All the exterior drains have been completed, and pipe laid a distance of half a mile, giving the building an independent water supply.

"On the 18th day of January, 1878," the report continues, "in answer to the resolution of the Assembly, the New Capitol Commissioners transmitted an estimate of the cost of the completion of the new Capitol made by the Superintendent and the architects, by whom it was stated that the building could be built and furnished for the sum of $5,198,622. Since the said estimate was made, a large portion of the new Capitol has actually been finished and furnished, and we are, therefore, able to test the accuracy of our estimate by the result of last year. The finished portion is about one-quarter of the area of the whole building, but it is considered that it contains two of the three great rooms, one of the three stair-cases, one-half of the heating apparatus, five of the seven elevators, one-third of the furniture, one-half of the entire water supply, the whole exterior drainage, and that one-half of the basement has been finished; also, the walls of the court and the south centre have already been built up to the roof line. It is clear that the work done last year bears a larger proportion than one-fourth to the work estimated upon in 1878. One-quarter of the estimate for last year is $1,299,655. The work actually done and the materials actually purchased have cost $1,294,227 92. Therefore, if we are correct in supposing that one-quarter of the work estimated for last year has been completed, it is clear that we are quite within our estimate. After carefully considering the subject, and in view of last year's experience, we renew our statement of January, 1878, and say that for the sum of $4,200,000 additional appropriation all the liabilities may be paid and the new Capitol finished and furnished. The Commissioners have reason to believe that the building can be contracted for within the said sum, to be completed in two years from the date of contract.

"The resolution of the Assembly above referred to asks the commission for an estimate of the cost of administering the new Capitol after the same shall be completed. On this point it is doubtless a great danger of waste and extravagance in this direction. The expenditures of the Capitol at Washington amount, as we are informed, to about $300,000 per annum. We are informed, also, that when the new Capitol may be cleaned, lighted, warmed, and in all respects properly cared for for a moderate sum; but to accomplish this it is, in our opinion, necessary that its administration should be kept free from partisan influence. To that end a force of 43 men has been organized to serve during the session of the Legislature, who will take care of the machinery, attend the fires, run the elevators, and do all the work of cleaning the buildings, and also perform all police duty. The appointments to this force have been equally divided between the political parties, and it is proposed that the men shall serve during good behavior. We believe that upon a system like this the cost of maintaining the new Capitol, when the same shall be completed, may be brought within $75,000 a year, and our estimate for maintenance during the year 1879 is $25,000."

NATIONAL GUARD METHODS.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—At the meeting of the National Guard Association to-day, the Committee on Amendments to the Code reported adversely on the amendment extending the term of service to seven years; also adversely to recommending the exemption clause of $1,000; also as to the State paying pensions, recommending the amendment be referred to the Executive Committee with power; also adversely to appointing an additional Second Lieutenant to every separate company. It was resolved that all matters for legislative action be submitted to the Adjutant-General for approval. A resolution was adopted that every member of the National Guard be required to attend 90 parades or drills before being entitled to his discharge. The matter in relation to loading and firing was then considered. Upton's Tactics were recommended, but, on motion, the whole matter was laid over. A report of the Committee on Rifle Practice was referred to the Executive Committee. The committee on the proposed tax exemption of members of the National Guard reported that it had consulted the Acting Adjutant-General in regard to it, and he said he was heartily in favor of it. The report was accepted and adopted. The matter of reducing the number of returns now prepared by officers was referred to the Acting Adjutant-General to see what could be done as to reducing them. Cols. Belknap, Clark and Cruger were appointed to consult with him on the subject. The following-named officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Col. A. J. Parker; First Vice-President, Gen. J. M. Varian; Second Vice-President, Gen. W. F. Rodgers; Treasurer, Col. W. H. Thompson; Recording Secretary, Major R. V. Young; Corresponding Secretary, Major M. B. Carr; Chaplain, Rev. J. F. Durree. After the annual address this evening the association attended a banquet at the Delavan House. The next annual meeting will be held in New-York on Jan. 22, 1880.

RAILROAD TROUBLE REPORTED SETTLED.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—It is reported here that the controversy concerning the laying of the track of the Boston, Hoosac Tunnel and Western Railway across the Hart estate, at Schaghticoke Point, has been arranged, and workmen are placing the iron bridge across the river. Through trains from Mechanicsville to Eagle Bridge will be running in 10 days. The grading from Eagle Bridge eastward is being prosecuted with vigor.

FOOD TO REMAIN CHEAP.

The bottom fell out of the bull movement in breadstuffs and provisions yesterday, and the whole speculation was bearish. Pork declined 45 cents per barrel and lard 25 cents per 100 pounds from the highest figures of Wednesday. The stories put afloat during the past few days by the bulls have all proved on investigation to be without basis in fact, thus leaving the movement without a leg to stand upon. It is believed that the speculators who started the rise have quietly unloaded upon the gudgeons they drew into their train. The foreign advices were less favorable, and had a tendency to check export and depress business. Freights for grain for prompt shipment, on berth, were strong and room by steam was scarce. Sailing room was also steady and tonnage was offered less freely. Shipowners anticipate a hardening of the freight market, and were consequently less eager for cargoes. All these causes, together with the thaw and the abundance of money, contributed to render the markets generally weaker. Winter wheat and corn, both spot and options, were much depressed.

A PARRICIDE ARRESTED.

At a late hour last night Detective O'Connor, of the Eleventh Precinct, arrested Martin Coleman, Jr., of Newark, who stabbed his father during a quarrel at their residence in Newark, Jan. 16. Young Coleman had charge of several horses belonging to his father. The latter thought that his son was neglecting them, and the two quarreled. Coleman picked up a boot and struck his son with it. The latter drew a knife and stabbed his father in the arm, from the effects of which Mr. Coleman died on Tuesday night. Last night Detective O'Connor learned that young Coleman had been seen in this City, having fled from Newark, and after a search, arrested the parricide late last night. He was taken to the Union Market Police Station, where he admitted that he had stabbed his father, but denied any intention of killing him. Coleman was locked up for the night, and will be taken back to Newark to-day.

YORK, Penn., Jan. 23.—Martin Ettinger, while returning home last night, was waylaid by a party of men, headed by Charles Manly, and severely beaten. He lies in a critical condition.

A BRILLIANT RECEPTION.

LADIES' DAY AT THE UNION LEAGUE.

THE CLUB-HOUSE TURNED INTO A FLOWER GARDEN—A NOTABLE DISPLAY OF PAINTINGS—THE DISTINGUISHED GUESTS—A STRIKINGLY BEAUTIFUL SCENE.

The annual ladies' reception at the Union League Club last evening was an exceptionally brilliant social event. The vestibule of the Twenty-sixth-street entrance was banked on each side with potted palms and other exotic plants. At each turn of the staircase stood a camellia tree in full bloom, supplemented by a basket of trailing vines and sweet-smelling flowers pendent from the banisters. On the centre table in each room, throughout the building was an immense basket of cut flowers, and many of the mantels were similarly decorated. All the chandeliers were festooned with similax interspersed with flowers. The main hallway on the second floor was hung with banners of silk, embroidered with heraldic devices, and similar banners alternating with silken national flags ornamented the walls of the theatre, which served as a dancing hall. Bernstein's band were seated upon the stage, the front of which was completely banked with potted plants in full bloom, and they were further hidden by a double silken curtain of green and crimson and gold. Every room was brilliantly lighted, and with the paintings and statues and elegant appurtenances of the club-house itself, the rich toilets of the ladies, and the glittering uniforms of the officers of the Army and Navy present, the scene was a strikingly beautiful one.

Seldom has such an excellent collection of paintings been gathered, even in the art gallery of the Union League Club, as that which delighted the guests of last evening. There were four from Mrs. A. T. Stewart's collection, including Bouguereau's great canvas, the "Return from the Harvest," and Judge Hilton contributed no fewer than 13, among which may be mentioned Beaumont's "Tomb of Philip Pot," Capobianchi's "Treasure-room of Baron Rothschild," Bridgman's "Checkmate," and Alvarez's "Mme. Pompadour's Toilet." Other pictures particularly worthy of note were "The Vidette," by Meissonier, contributed by M. Knoedler & Co.; "The Dress Parade," by J. G. Brown, same owner; "Tendresse Maternelle," by Leon Perrault, from Mrs. Marshall O. Roberts' collection; "Near Chartres," by Rico, "La Parisienne," by Boldini, and "Master of Hounds," by Gérome, contributed by A. Spencer; "Birthday of Washington," by Baugniet, "Philip II. at Hampton Court," by Escosura, and "Spanish Muleteer," by Vibert, from the collection of S. P. Avery; a "Landscape," by Daubigny, contributed by Francis A. Stout; "The Seashore—Looking Eastward at Sunset," by O. K. Gifford; "Waiting for the Bathers," by E. L. Henry; "The Apprentise," by W. M. Chase; "Escort of the Pasha," by Pasini, owned by Robert Lenox Kennedy, and "Grecian Page," by J. Elliott Gregory. There were 70 canvases in all. The gallery was lighted in the early part of the evening by an electric lamp, which brought out all the beauties of the paintings, but was severely trying on the toilets of the ladies. An accident whereby the glass receptacle underneath broke and allowed a globule of melted copper to drop upon a lady's train, caused the wearer to faint at about 10 o'clock. In smothering the incipient conflagration a gentleman destroyed his gloves and burned his hand. The lady's dress was only slightly damaged.

After depositing their overgarments in the rooms set aside for that purpose on the upper floors, the guests first paid a visit to the art gallery, and the next teentre of attraction was the supper-tables, which were set in the billiard-room beyond. The steward of the club had outdone himself. In the centre of each table was an immense basket of cut flowers, and this was flanked on all four sides by decorative pieces of the most intricate and artistic kind. The pieces of structures were imitated, from a red brick building to a bee-hive, and these were variously ornamented by candied statues, flowers, fruit, birds, and animals, and by stuffed birds, the latter in the most artistic manner, and colored to the life. But the crowning piece of all was an immense structure representing an arch, with a rocky grotto beneath. Prone on the top lay a nymph, surrounded with all the beautiful mysteries known to the French cuisine, and underneath, in an artificial pond of real water, swam a dozen or two of live golden carp.

The formal reception took place in the Madison-avenue parlor of the second floor, at 10 o'clock, and half an hour later the dancing was begun in the theatre. There were 20 dances on the programme, mainly waltzes and galops. At this time the building was crowded to its limit. The toilets of the ladies were notably tasteful and rich, and there was a brilliant display of valuable jewels. A few of those present were Hon. Hamilton Fish, Sr., son and daughter, Judge and Mrs. Noah Davis, Mr. and Mrs. William Sloane, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Butler, Judge Henry Hilton, Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Harper, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. John Sloane, Mr. Joseph Seligman, Mr. and Mrs. Chesley Richardson, Miss Richardson, Miss Minnie Stanton, Miss Kellogg, Mr. and Mrs. George DeWitt, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Charles Warren, Mr. and Mrs. Seymour A. Dance, Hon. Elliott C. Cowdin, Hon. Chauncey M. Depew and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Brown, Miss Bonney, Miss Barrett, Hon. Joel W. Mason, Thomas Rutter and daughters, Gen. Fry, United States Army; Commodore Erben, United States Navy; Mr. and Mrs. Salem H. Wales, Josiah M. Fiske and wife, E. L. Henry, J. F. Cropsey and wife, Daniel F. Appleton, Paymaster Stevens, United States Navy; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel P. Avery, Major E. D. Judd, United States Army; Hon. Joseph H. Choate and wife, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Darling, Gen. Arnold, Effendi Egnatz, Mr. and Mrs. Robinson, Capt. Phipps, Asa Bird Gardner, Leonard Jerome and daughter, Hon. Thomas Murphy and daughter, Charles E. Develin, United States Navy; Gen. Kilpatrick, Dr. Edward Kershner, Mr. and Mrs. George C. Magoun, Gen. James Porter, Hon. Isaac H. Bailey and daughter, Rufus F. Andrews, Charles L. Tiffany, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Wagner, Commodore Nicholson, United States Navy; Gen. J. G. Barnard, Gen. Benham and wife, Capt. Thomas Ward, Gen. Crittenden, Col. Bird, Assistant Surgeon J. P. Kimball, Col. Fletcher, Mrs. Wallace, Mrs. Cornelius Groot, Miss Groot, Mr. E. L. Hilton, Gen. Alexander J. Pyne, Grayton Ives and wife, Mrs. Shillaber, of California, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Southwick, M. Gienzer, of Paris, Miss Vance, George Cabot Ward, and several hundred others.

At 11:30 o'clock supper was served, and the hungry guests did ample justice to the bountiful and varied menu that had been provided. In addition to the room before described, there were four other rooms, connected into a series of supper rooms, and these were constantly filled with family parties who did not care to mingle with the throng below. It was after midnight when the last guests left their departure. The success of the reception is largely due to the following gentlemen:

Committee of Arrangements—Fletcher Harper, S. Franklin Stanton, George W. Dillaway.

Art Committee—James W. Pinchot, Cyrus Butler, Edward L. Henry, Francis A. Stout, Frank Waller, Stephen H. Tyng, Jr., George McClure.

Floor Committee—Frederick C. Richardson, William Carpender, Charles A. Wyckoff, Samuel W. E. D. Stokes, Henry D. Babcock, Sully Gilles, Edward T. Dyer, Isaac F. Roe, Gilbert E. Jones, Alexander G. McCosh, Daniel Lord, Jr., T. Chesley Richardson, Isaac Henderson, Jr., William A. Paton, Thomas L. Manson, Jr.

Reception Committee—George Cabot Ward, John Jay, Robert L. Kennedy, Noah Davis, John A. Stewart, Benjamin G. Arnold, Charles L. Tiffany, R. Ogden Doremus, James A. Roosevelt, Nathaniel F. Bailey, William H. Maxwell, Horace Porter, Joseph E. Gay, Frank Waller, Nathaniel A. Prentiss, Caritale Norwood, Jr., Charles F. Hardy, Edwin J. Morgan, Enoch L. Mason, Marshall O. Roberts, Daniel F. Appleton, Cornelius R. Agnew, Thomas Hillhouse, Adrian Iselin, J. Pierpont Morgan, Henry J. Scudder, Charles G. Landon, Sandford R. Gifford, John Bloance, Chaselas Lanier, George Montague, David R. Garnies, Amos F. Eno, Robert Lenox Belknap.

THE WESLEYAN UNIVERSITY CLUB.

TENTH ANNUAL DINNER OF THE MEMBERS—ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The New-York Wesleyan University Club gave its tenth annual dinner last evening at the Westminster Hotel. Rev. Dr. Daniel Curry, President of the club, occupied the chair, and at his right were seated Rev. Dr. D. D. Foss, President of the University; Judge George G. Reynolds, of Brooklyn; Judge Northrop, of Connecticut, and Orange Judd, a member of the University Board of Trustees. Among the other guests were Rev. Dr. J. M. King, Rev. George E. Reed, Stamford, Conn.; Rev. G. L. Thompson, and Dr. C. L. Bonnell, of Brooklyn; Profs. Van Vleck and Lane, and Assistant Corporation Counsel Dean. Rev. Dr. Foss, in response to the toast, "The University," said that it had been found necessary to practice retrenchment in the expenses of the university, and the heaviest part of the burden had fallen on the Faculty, who, rather than permit a curtailment of the regular course of studies, had voluntarily surrendered 10 per cent. of their salaries. As a result, the college was now in an encouraging financial condition. A subscription of $6,584 had enabled the trustees to meet last year's deficit. The toast of "The Alumni," was responded to by Judge Reynolds, who said that of the 1,000 graduates of the college, one-half were ministers of various denominations; some were members of studies, had voluntarily surrendered 10 per cent. of their salaries. As a result, the college was now in an encouraging financial condition. A subscription of $6,584 had enabled the trustees to meet last year's deficit. The toast of "The Alumni," was responded to by Judge Reynolds, who said that of the 1,000 graduates of the college, one-half were ministers of various denominations; some were members of the three state-cases, one-half of the heating apparatus, five of the seven elevators, one-third of the furniture, one-half of the entire water supply, the whole exterior drainage, and that one-half of the basement has been finished; also, the walls of the court and the south centre have already been built up to the roof line. It is clear that the work done last year bears a larger proportion than one-fourth to the work estimated upon in 1878. One-quarter of the estimate for last year is $1,299,655. The work actually done and the materials actually purchased have cost $1,294,227 92. Therefore, if we are correct in supposing that one-quarter of the work estimated for last year has been completed, it is clear that we are quite within our estimate. After carefully considering the subject, and in view of last year's experience, we renew our statement of January, 1878, and say that for the sum of $4,200,000 additional appropriation all the liabilities may be paid and the new Capitol finished and furnished. The Commissioners have reason to believe that the building can be contracted for within the said sum, to be completed in two years from the date of contract.

"The resolution of the Assembly above referred to asks the commission for an estimate of the cost of administering the new Capitol after the same shall be completed. On this point it is doubtless a great danger of waste and extravagance in this direction. The expenditures of the Capitol at Washington amount, as we are informed, to about $300,000 per annum. We are informed, also, that when the new Capitol may be cleaned, lighted, warmed, and in all respects properly cared for for a moderate sum; but to accomplish this it is, in our opinion, necessary that its administration should be kept free from partisan influence. To that end a force of 43 men has been organized to serve during the session of the Legislature, who will take care of the machinery, attend the fires, run the elevators, and do all the work of cleaning the buildings, and also perform all police duty. The appointments to this force have been equally divided between the political parties, and it is proposed that the men shall serve during good behavior. We believe that upon a system like this the cost of maintaining the new Capitol, when the same shall be completed, may be brought within $75,000 a year, and our estimate for maintenance during the year 1879 is $25,000."

NATIONAL GUARD METHODS.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—At the meeting of the National Guard Association to-day, the Committee on Amendments to the Code reported adversely on the amendment extending the term of service to seven years; also adversely to recommending the exemption clause of $1,000; also as to the State paying pensions, recommending the amendment be referred to the Executive Committee with power; also adversely to appointing an additional Second Lieutenant to every separate company. It was resolved that all matters for legislative action be submitted to the Adjutant-General for approval. A resolution was adopted that every member of the National Guard be required to attend 90 parades or drills before being entitled to his discharge. The matter in relation to loading and firing was then considered. Upton's Tactics were recommended, but, on motion, the whole matter was laid over. A report of the Committee on Rifle Practice was referred to the Executive Committee. The committee on the proposed tax exemption of members of the National Guard reported that it had consulted the Acting Adjutant-General in regard to it, and he said he was heartily in favor of it. The report was accepted and adopted. The matter of reducing the number of returns now prepared by officers was referred to the Acting Adjutant-General to see what could be done as to reducing them. Cols. Belknap, Clark and Cruger were appointed to consult with him on the subject. The following-named officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Col. A. J. Parker; First Vice-President, Gen. J. M. Varian; Second Vice-President, Gen. W. F. Rodgers; Treasurer, Col. W. H. Thompson; Recording Secretary, Major R. V. Young; Corresponding Secretary, Major M. B. Carr; Chaplain, Rev. J. F. Durree. After the annual address this evening the association attended a banquet at the Delavan House. The next annual meeting will be held in New-York on Jan. 22, 1880.

RAILROAD TROUBLE REPORTED SETTLED.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—It is reported here that the controversy concerning the laying of the track of the Boston, Hoosac Tunnel and Western Railway across the Hart estate, at Schaghticoke Point, has been arranged, and workmen are placing the iron bridge across the river. Through trains from Mechanicsville to Eagle Bridge will be running in 10 days. The grading from Eagle Bridge eastward is being prosecuted with vigor.

FOOD TO REMAIN CHEAP.

The bottom fell out of the bull movement in breadstuffs and provisions yesterday, and the whole speculation was bearish. Pork declined 45 cents per barrel and lard 25 cents per 100 pounds from the highest figures of Wednesday. The stories put afloat during the past few days by the bulls have all proved on investigation to be without basis in fact, thus leaving the movement without a leg to stand upon. It is believed that the speculators who started the rise have quietly unloaded upon the gudgeons they drew into their train. The foreign advices were less favorable, and had a tendency to check export and depress business. Freights for grain for prompt shipment, on berth, were strong and room by steam was scarce. Sailing room was also steady and tonnage was offered less freely. Shipowners anticipate a hardening of the freight market, and were consequently less eager for cargoes. All these causes, together with the thaw and the abundance of money, contributed to render the markets generally weaker. Winter wheat and corn, both spot and options, were much depressed.

A PARRICIDE ARRESTED.

At a late hour last night Detective O'Connor, of the Eleventh Precinct, arrested Martin Coleman, Jr., of Newark, who stabbed his father during a quarrel at their residence in Newark, Jan. 16. Young Coleman had charge of several horses belonging to his father. The latter thought that his son was neglecting them, and the two quarreled. Coleman picked up a boot and struck his son with it. The latter drew a knife and stabbed his father in the arm, from the effects of which Mr. Coleman died on Tuesday night. Last night Detective O'Connor learned that young Coleman had been seen in this City, having fled from Newark, and after a search, arrested the parricide late last night. He was taken to the Union Market Police Station, where he admitted that he had stabbed his father, but denied any intention of killing him. Coleman was locked up for the night, and will be taken back to Newark to-day.

YORK, Penn., Jan. 23.—Martin Ettinger, while returning home last night, was waylaid by a party of men, headed by Charles Manly, and severely beaten. He lies in a critical condition.

IMAGINING A PAGAN JURY.

JOSEPH COOK ON MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE.

A PRELUDE ON THE CAUSES OF BUSINESS DEPRESSION—THE STANDARD OF CHURCH MEMBERSHIP.

Mr. Joseph Cook attracted a very large audience to the hall of the Young Men's Christian Association last evening to hear his lecture on "Marriage and Divorce," which he preceded by some remarks on the "Causes of Business Depression." In respect to the latter topic, the lecturer began by calling attention to the fact that for about 200 years past periods of commercial depression had been recurrent at regular intervals of 10 years. He next considered the causes to which scientists had attributed these effects, such as the spots on the sun and the fluctuations of harvests, and said that there were other causes, more directly within the province of human thought and control, which he believed had great influence in the material prosperity of the world. Among these were injudicious investments and enterprises; the tendency to over-investment in that which promised large profits, but which was destroyed because it was invested in by too many, and the inefficiency of legislation referring to commercial interests, such as injudicious bankruptcy laws, which were almost invariably opposed by the creditor class and advocated by the debtor class in business. One of the great remedies which Mr. Cook believed could be applied to a cause of this depression was to purge the Church of unworthy members; or, in other words, to set up a higher standard for church membership. Under the voluntary church system of the United States Judas does not always go out and hang himself, even when he carries the bag! Our churches were too often used as a sort of standard by which to judge of the social stature of men. There was too much of the Sunday club about them. They were cultivated as a kind of society which added to social prestige and kept families in good social flavor. He made as great a distinction between these Sunday clubs and Christian churches as he did between Christians and mere church members. The stories of defalcations from day to day, and of commercial dishonesty, involving among its principals so many members of these fashionable church clubs, had a demoralizing effect upon honest commercial enterprise, at the same time that they tended to weaken the influence of the Church itself. He thought that the whole Christian community should begin at once the work of reform, commencing operations in the parlors. In this way the Church had an opportunity to reach the world within one zone by availing herself of the interdependence of commerce between the countries. Let the secular arm of the Church reach around one-half the earth and the spiritual arm encircle the other half, and the union of the two would bring about a better state of thrift and lay a better basis of existence for the life of to-day and of the hereafter.

In speaking of the subject of marriage and divorce, Mr. Cook modeled his argument upon a very picturesque plan by considering the sanctity of marriage as against the free-love theory before a jury. In order to meet the views of free lovers as to impartiality and to avoid sectarianism, before a modern Christian bench, he selected his jury mainly from the pagans of ancient and modern times. He then named the characters of Phocion's wife, Pericles, Hampden, Thomas Jefferson, Pliny the Younger, Cornelia, Mrs. Browning, and other personages who had been distinguished for their marital and paternal fidelity, self-sacrifice, and devotion to woman's station. Confucian writings and utterances that the fountain of conjugal loyalty was the existence of supreme affection, and that without it marriage could not naturally result, and should, therefore, be opposed by the laws. An unhappy marriage, he said, would otherwise be "home," "the red-hottest Gehenna to be found on this planet." Mr. Cook cited the whole animal creation to show that the same state was the natural condition of all animated beings, and claimed that philosophy and mythology alike demonstrated the truth, justice, and beauty of this law and its principle. Let it be the sentiment of nature that the home is to be founded wherever supreme affection exists, and the means are at hand to maintain that home, and he would answer for the execution of the laws. There would then be no lack of recruits in the world, because it would be surrounded by the watch-fires of blazing social hearths which would consume the very principles and foundations of the system of Communistic Socialism.

The lecturer closed by analyzing the methods by which the secret of supreme affection might be ascertained to exist, and claimed that in going into the ranks of paganism and secularism, for his jury, he had secured the right swing of his forces into action at all, but had won the fight without it. Finally, to close up the ranks of the great army which maintained the inviolability of marriage, the lecturer spoke of extracts from the writings of Goethe, Shakespeare, and Tennyson, and then brought the Bible and Christ's personal teachings to sustain the dictum "What God has joined together, let no man put asunder."

TALMAGE'S TABERNACLE.

DISAGREEMENT OF THE JURY IN THE SUIT OF MR. GELSTON AGAINST THE TRUSTEES.

The trial of the suit of William H. Gelston, formerly Treasurer of the Brooklyn Tabernacle, to recover $1,342 loaned by him to the church, was continued at the Brooklyn City Court, before Judge Neilson, yesterday. A number of witnesses were called for the defense, to prove that the subscriptions received for the liquidation of the debt were given in good faith, and with no secret understanding as to the time or manner of payment. The court excluded all testimony offered as to arrangements, private or otherwise, for the payment of the debt not made on the 17th of February, the day on which Mr. Kimball, the debt-raiser, obtained the subscriptions from Mr. Gelston and others which liquidated, as claimed, the greater part of the church's debt. Mr. Kimball testified that he was requested to assist in raising the debt of the church by Mr. Talmage and Major Corwin; he believed that the debt was stated to him as $69,500. Witness did not think that the terms of the subscriptions required them to be paid within six months, as claimed by Mr. Gelston; he thought an arrangement for a longer period had been made for the larger subscriptions. Mr. Silcox, one of the Trustees who resigned with Mr. Gelston, testified that he subscribed $5,000 on the Thursday preceding the meeting which Mr. Kimball appealed for subscriptions; the Pastor induced witness to subscribe that amount, the arrangement being that $2,000 should be paid the first year and $1,000 on each of the three following years. The testimony was ruled out, as the arrangement was made prior to the 17th of February. Mr. Pearsall, for the plaintiff, offered to show that the debt was $97,805 on the 17th of February, when it was falsely represented to be $69,500. The offer was ruled out, as not material to the case.

Albert Latham testified that he became was put down for $500 on the 17th of February without his authority, while he was at home sick in bed.

Mr. Talmage was called by the plaintiff, who desired to show by the witness that private arrangements were made with certain of the subscribers as to the manner in which their subscriptions were to be paid, as the plaintiff claimed that these private arrangements deceived people who openly subscribed in the church, intending to pay the money within the six months, in ignorance of the fact that many of those who were pledged for subscriptions and whose pledges had been handed up before the congregation, had already made private arrangements enabling them to pay by installments in four or five years. These private arrangements, it was claimed, released those who were deceived by them from pledges to pay made in good faith. As Dr. Talmage's testimony related principally to conversations prior to the 17th of March, between different persons, during which private arrangements were made for the payment of sums to be subscribed, it was ruled out by the court. Mathew Arbuckle, the corner plaster

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

SALES AT THE STOCK EXCHANGE—JAN. 23.

FIRST BOARD—10:30 A. M.

N. C. 6s, o. J. & J.		Can. So. 1st c'f's		Pull. Pal. Car.
$1,000.....	13⅝	30,000.....	73⅛	100.....	80
5,000.....	31⅞	5,000.....	73⅝	Delaware & Hud.
D. of C. 3.65s C		Ohio & Miss. 2d.		100..h.o.s3.	44⅞
15,000.....	81¼	15,000.....	82	126.....	44⅞
29,000.....	81½	1,000.....	83	Pacific Mail.
1,000.....	81⅝	5,000.....	82⅞	100.....	13
E. C. R. & N. 1st.		Cen. Pac. gold.		N. Y. C. & H.
45,000.....	73⅜	6,000.....	107⅜	9.....	b.c.115
N. J. C. 1st con.as.		C. P. 1st. C. & O. Br.		Erie Railway.
4,000.....	79½	1,000.....	86½	2800.....	b.c. 25⅜
1,000.....	79⅞	C. P. 1st. S. J. Br.		2800.....	25¼
5,000..b.c.	79¾	5,000.....	98	Erie Railway pf.
N. J. C. Adjust.		Un. Pac. 1st.		500..b.c.s20.	44⅞
9,500.....	94½	10,000.....	107¼	Michigan Central.
12,000.....	94¾	Pacific of Mo. 1st.		100.....	b.c. 80⅝
10,000.....	94⅞	1,000.....	107¾	L. S. & M. S.
5,200..b.c.	94	Pacific of Mo. 2d.		900.....	b.c. 71½
N. J. C. 1st cons.		2,000.....	104¾	Panama.
1,000..s.3.	94	K. P. 1st. m. F. & A.		400.....	b.c.123
N. J. C. conv. as.		with coup. cer.		Chi. & N. W.
1,000.....	79¾	3,000.....	112½	3000.....	b.c. 60
1,000.....	79¾	Kan. Pac. as. Div.		400.....	60⅛
1,000.....	79¼	Trust Rec.		100.....	b3. 60⅛
K. & D. M. 1st.		3,000.....	77	100.....	s3. 60⅛
10,000..b.c.	84	C. & N. W. 1. C. 1st.		600.....	60⅜
L. & W. B. con.as.		1,000.....	61	200.....	60⅜
7,000.....	4½	St. L. K. C. & N. R. E.		600.....	60⅝
8,000.....	47⅜	34 ⅞⅜.		Han. & St. Jo.
M. & St. P. 8s. 1st.		2,000.....	97¾	800.....	b.c. 58⅛
10,000.....	12⅞	2,000.....	b.c. 98	C. C. C. & I.
M. & St. P. c. a. f.		A. & T. H. inc.		100.....	b.c.c. 44⅜
3,000.....	102⅜	3,000.....	43	100.....	c. 44¾
6,000.....	102¾	L. & S. I. 1st. s.fd.		600.....	45
M. & St. P. 1. & D. x.		5,000.....	98	300.....	45¼
10,000.....	99⅞	L. & S. 1st. s.fd. by		Illinois Central.
32,000.....	100	Lake Shore.		25.....	b.c. 84⅛
2,000.....	100⅛	3,000.....	98⅜	200.....	84⅜
N. W. C. 6s.		C. & S. 1st. s.fd by		Central of N. J.
3,000.....	106¾	C., C. & I.		100..b.c.b3.	41
1,000.....	106⅞	4,000.....	92¼	C. M. & St. P.
Gr. Chic. 1st.		Mich. Cent. Ex.		300.....	b.c. 40⅝
5,000.....	108	1,000.....	96¾	200.....	b3. 40⅜
C. C. C. & I. con.		L. & N. con. '93.		300.....	40⅜
5,000.....	99⅜	3,000.....	103	C. M. & St. P. pf.
5,000.....	99⅝	C. & N. W. 1st.		200..b.c.	84¾
M. & E. 1st con.		1,000.....	90⅛	Wabash.
7,000.....	92	3,000.....	90¼	125.....	b.c. 22⅜
D. & R. 7s.		Jefferson.		1500..b.c.b3.	52⅜
1,000.....	97	1,000.....	88	Morris & Essex.
D. & H. C. 7s. '94.		1,000.....	88	2000.....	82⅞
1,000..c.	99½	S. L. & S. F. 2d.		Chi., Bur. & Q.
D. & R. G. 1st.		3,000.....	30⅜	200.....	84⅞
3,000.....	87¾	Am. D. I. Co. 7s. as.		5.....	b.c.161¼
8,000.....	87⅞	5,000.....	30	New-Jersey So.
Erie 4th.....	100⅛	Fourth Nat. Bank.		100.....	2
1,000.....	100½	100.....	95	200..b.c.s3.	2
M. & St. Jo. con.		Ninth Nat. Bank.		200.....	2¼
1,000.....	105	10.....	79	M. K. & T.
C. R. I. & P. 6s.		Wells-Fargo Ex.		25.....	b.c. 67⅜
1917 C.		10..b.c.s3.	97¼	P. Ft. W. & C. pf.
1,000..b.c.	110⅜	Bank of Com.		10.....	105⅛
Met. Ela. 1st.		24.....	118	S. L. I. M. & S.
5,000.....	98⅜	St. Nicholas Bank.		100.....	b.c. 18⅜
M. & T. con. s.		100.....	49½	100.....	c. 18⅝
5,000.....	49½	Adams Express.		100.....	c. 18⅞
8,000.....	49¼	10.....	106⅜	Dub. & S. City.
5,000..b.c.	49	Quotations.		30.....	b.c. 61
M. K. & T. 2d.		25.....	28	Chicago & Alton.
10,000.....	15	Western Union.		5.....	b.c. 85
N. Y. Ela. 1st.		100.....	b.c. 97⅜	Han. & St. Jo. pf.
25,000.....	105⅛	600.....	97¾	$. L. I. M. & S.
No. Missouri 1st.		200.....	97⅝	320..b.c.	37
1,000..b.s3.	83¼	200.....	b3. 98	Ohio & Miss.
Mich. Cen. 8s, s. f.		1510.....	97⅞	200..b.c.s3.	9¾
3,000..b.c.	111			60.....	b.c.s3.	9¾

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—11:15 A. M.

U. S. 5s O. '81.	U. S. 4½ C. 1907.	U. S. 5s 10-40 R.
$100,000 b.c.	106¾	$24,000 c.	106	40,000.....	106⅜
60,000.....	106⅜	U. S. 4s R. 1907.		U. S. 4½ C. '91.
U. S. 5-20 R. '67.	11,000..b.c.	100	25,000.....	106
10,000.....	102

SECOND BOARD—1 P. M.

D. of C. 3.65s C.		S. L. K. C. & N. R. E.		Central of N. J.
$3,000.....	81½	7s '95.		100..b.c.	40⅛
B. C. R. & N. 1st.		2,000.....	98	200.....	40⅜
10,000.....	70	T. & W. 1st. S. D.		700.....	40⅜
6,000..b.c.	69¾	x mat. coupon.		200.....	41
K. & D. M. 1st.		6,000.....	95	200.....	41⅛
10,000.....	94¾	T. & W. 1st. s. cp.		C. & P. pf.
N. J. C. Adjust.		1,000.....	84½	100..b.c.	91⅞
5,000.....	94⅜	T. & W. con.c., xcp.		Chi. & R. I.
47,000..b.c.	90	T. & W. con. c., xcp.		400..b.c.b3.	125⅜
N. J. C. Adjm't.		C. & I. C. & I. 1st.		C. M. & St. P.
5,000.....	94⅜	Lake Shore.		5.....	b.c. 40⅝
N. J. C. 1st. '99½		10,000.....	96⅝	100.....	b3. 40⅝
3,000..b.c.	117⅜	1,000.....	96¾	400.....	40⅝
M. & St. P. 1st, l. & D. x.		Pacific of Mo. 2d.		500.....	40⅝
5,000.....	100¼	Ninth Nat. Bank.		800.....	40⅝
L. & W. B. con. as.		25.....	70	100.....	40⅝
5,000..b.c.	47½	American Ex.		C., M. & St. P. pf.
D. & R. G. 1st.		30.....	b.c. 47	500.....	b.c. 81⅝
8,000.....	88⅜	Adams Express.		100.....	81⅞
Mor. & Es. con.		100.....	105	Wabash.
5,000..b.c.	93	25.....	b.c. 105½	100..b.c.	22⅞
Erie 4th.		At. & Pac. Tel.		400.....	22⅞
10,000.....	106	100.....	38	200..b3.	22⅜
B. & St. Jo. 8s. con.		Delaware & Hud.		Morris & Essex.
2,000.....	103⅛	100.....	44⅛	1000..b.c.	82⅜
15,000.....	105⅝	Pacific Mail.		200.....	82⅜
R. N. Y. & E. 1st.	1916	100..b.c.	13⅜	100.....	82¼
5,000.....	112⅜	500.....	13⅝	C. R. I. & P.
Can. So. 1st g'd.		100.....	13⅜	500..b.c.	17
21,000.....	73⅜	N. Y. C. & H.		Del., L. & West.
2,000.....	73¼	25..b.c.	114⅞	300.....	b.c. 52⅜
M. Y. Ela. 1st.		20.....	113	400.....	52⅜
7,000.....	105⅛	Erie Railway.		100.....	52⅜
3,000.....	105¼	3200..b.c.s3.	25¾	200.....	b3. 52⅜
Ohio & Miss. 2d.		200.....	25¾	Chi., Bur. & Q.
80,000.....	84	Michigan Central.		60.....	b.c. 114
C. P. 1st. S. J. Br.		250..b.c.b3.	80⅜	100.....	114⅜
1,000.....	98	L. S. & M. S.		M. E. & T.
C. P. 1st. C. & O. Br.		100..b.c.b3.	71⅞	100..b.c.	57⅜
1,000.....	96½	1150.....	71⅝	St. L. & S. F. pf.
C. P. 1st. T. D.		Illinois Central.		100.....	94⅜
with certificate.		100..b.c.	84⅜	St. L., K. C. & N.
5,000.....	73⅜	100.....	84⅝	100..b.c.	8
E. T. & G. 2d. '96.		C. & N. W.		N. Y. L. E. & W.
with sp. cer.		1800..b.c.	60⅜	5.....	b.c.161¼
7,000.....	105	Chi. & N. W. pf.		Ohio & Miss.
Pacific of Mo. 1st.		100..b.c.b3.	86⅜	200.....	10⅜
7,000..b.c.s4.	104⅜	200.....	85¾	California.
A. & T. H. 2d, pf.		300.....	85¼	Ohio & Miss. pf.
1,000.....	83	500.....	s3. 85¼	200..b.c.b3.	23

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—1:30 P. M.

U. S. 5s C. '81.	U. S. 5s '81, R.	U. S. 6s. Cur.
$1,000..c.	106⅜	$100,000	106¼	$100,000.....	120⅛
15,000.....	106½	U. S. 5-20 R. '67.	10,000.....	120⅞
U. S. 10-40 R.	10,000..b.c.	101⅞
20,000.....	105

SALES FROM 2:30 TO 3 P. M.

L. & W. B. con. as.		Lake Shore.		Central of N. J.
$5,000.....	47⅛	1000.....	73⅜	500..b3.	41¼
K. P. 1st 7s. D. Div.		3000.....	73⅛	400.....	41⅜
Trust Rec.		1600..b.s3.	73	100..b3.	41⅜
7,000.....	76⅜	2500.....	72⅜	600.....	41⅜
L. & No. 1st.		1000.....	72¼	200.....	41⅜
5,000.....	107	800.....	72⅜	60.....	41⅜
H. & St. Jo. 8s. con.		1700.....	72	200.....	41⅜
3,000.....	103⅜	200.....	s3. 71⅞	100.....	41⅜
11,000.....	106	800.....	72	100.....	41⅜
N. Y. Ela. 1st.		1000.....	72⅛	200.....	41⅜
46,000.....	105¼	1000.....	72⅛	1000.....	42
Ohio & Miss. 2d.		1000.....	72¾	200.....	42⅛
80,000.....	83½	Kansas & Texas.		200.....	41⅞
Cen. Pac. gold.		700.....	6	200.....	41⅞
15,000.....	107¼	Pittsburg.		200.....	s3. 41⅞
At. & L.		100.....	91⅞	200.....	s3. 41⅞
5,000.....	60	200.....	92	300.....	41⅜
Adams Ex.		Rock Island.		200.....	41⅜
60 sh.....	105¾	800.....	125⅛	St. Paul.
Buffo Tufnel Co.		100.....	125⅜	800.....	40½
70.....	3⅛	100.....	125⅝	200.....	40⅝
100.....	3	Fort Wayne.		1400.....	40⅝
Quicksilver.		10.....	106	2020.....	b3. 40⅞
300.....	14	19.....	105¾	200.....	40⅞
Pull. Pal. Car.		North-west.		300.....	40⅞
50.....	79	300.....	c. 60¾	500.....	40⅞
At. & Pac. Tel.		300.....	s20. 59⅜	100.....	40⅞
500..b.s3.	38¼	1000.....	59¾	St. Paul pf.
Delaware & Hud.		600.....	60⅛	100.....	81⅜
100.....	44	3300.....	61	100.....	81⅜
208.....	44⅛	200.....	61⅛	100.....	82
200.....	44⅛	600.....	60⅞	200..c.b3.	81⅞
100.....	44⅜	600.....	60⅞	200.....	81⅞
200.....	44⅞	800.....	60⅜	200.....	81⅞
100.....	44⅞	500.....	60⅞	100.....	81⅞
300.....	b3. 44⅞	400.....	60⅞	Wabash.
100.....	44⅞	100.....	60⅞	300..b3.	22⅞
Western Union.		North-west pf.		400.....	22⅞
700.....	97⅛	100.....	85⅛	425.....	22⅞
2300.....	97⅜	100.....	b3. 85⅜	10.....	22¾
N. Y. C. & H.		100.....	85⅝	200..b.10.	22¾
100.....	114⅜	350.....	86	200.....	22⅞
Erie Railway.		100.....	85½	200.....	22⅞
200.....	25	100.....	85¼	200.....	22⅞
600.....	25⅜	300.....	85¼	100.....	22⅞
1850..b3.	25⅞	300.....	85	200.....	22⅞
600.....	24¾	5000.....	85¼	200.....	22⅞
2850..b3.	26	500.....	85⅝	Ohio & Miss.
1800..b3.	25⅞	100.....	85⅝	1300.....	10⅞
1000..b3.	25⅝	C. C. & I.		400.....	10⅞
400.....	25⅞	135.....	45⅞	500.....	10⅞
1050.....	26	710.....	45¾	1200.....	10⅜
200.....	25⅞	400.....	45⅞	400.....	10⅜
1400.....	25⅜	400.....	45⅝	100.....	10⅜
2100.....	25⅞	100.....	45⅝	Ohio & Miss. pf.
1800.....	25⅝	100.....	45½	100.....	28½
Erie Railway pf.		100.....	45¼	Han. & St. Jo.
900.....	s20. 45	100.....	b3. 45¼	400.....	52⅛
800.....	s15. 45	100.....	45⅜	1000.....	52⅜
100.....	45⅜	100.....	45⅜	100.....	52⅜
900.....	s20. 45	Han. & St. Jo.		7200.....	52⅞
100.....	s30. 45⅝	50.....	15⅜	3000.....	53
100.....	s10. 45⅝	400.....	s3. 14⅜	600.....	b.c. 52⅞
100.....	s10. 45⅛	200.....	s3. 14⅜	500.....	52⅞
Pacific Mail.		Kansas Pacific.		600.....	52⅞
200.....	s3. 13⅜	200.....	9¾	1000.....	52⅞
250.....	13⅜	New-Jersey So.		2300.....	52⅞
900.....	13⅜	100.....	17⅜	900.....	52⅞
Michigan Central.		C. R. & I.		1000.....	52⅞
300.....	80⅝	107.....	114	St. L., K. C. & N.
800.....	80⅜	St. L. & S. F. 1st pf.		100.....	8¼
100.....	80⅜	100.....	9¾	300.....	8
Illinois Central.		Morris & Essex.		N. Y. L. E. & W.
20.....	84⅞	400.....	82⅜	100.....	3⅛
440.....	84¼	C. C. & I. C.		800.....	32½
100.....	84¼	100.....	5½	100.....	s3. 32¼
100.....	84⅛

MINING STOCK EXCHANGE SALES—JAN. 23.

(All Prices are in Currency.)

SECOND CALL—1 P. M.

Buckeye.		Consol. Va.		Silver Hill.
$500.....	b.c. .13	20.....	b.c. 8	100. b.c.s10.	2⅜
500.....	b.c. .14	10.....	b.c. 8	California.
100. b.c.b30.	.14	5.....	b.c. 8¼	10.....	9¾
500.....	b.c. .13	20.....	s3. 8	Dahlonega.
1000. b.c.s3.	.12	500. b.c.b30.	8¼	500. b10.	.15
500.....	b.c. .12	Independence.		Hukill.
500.....	b.c. .12	25.....	b.c.s.1.60	100.....	s.10
100.....	b.c. .12	100.....	b.c.s.1.60	Imogene.
100.....	b15 .12	10.....	b.c.s.1.60	100.....	s10. .20
American Flag.		100.....	b.c.1.60	Lacrosse.
500.....	b30. .22	Gold Pieces.		500.....	.29
100.....	.20	100. b15..	.20	500.....	.29
100.....	.20	500. b.20.	.20	100.....	.29
100.....	.21

THIRD CALL—2:30 P. M.

Bertha & Edith.	Lacrosse.	Lacrosse.
600..... b.c. .11	100..... .29	500.....	.29
500. b30. .12	100..... .29	100.....	.29
500. a.s.b3. .12	100. b5.. .29	100..... b3.	.30
Buckeye.	100..... s30. .29	100..... b5.	.30
100..... b.c. .12	100..... .29	300. a.c.b5.	.30
500..... b.c. .12	100..... .29	100. a.c.b5.	.30
100. b.c.s10.	.12	100..... .29	100. a.c.b5.	.30
American Flag.	100..... .29	California.
500. b.c.b30.	.22	100..... .29	10. b.c.b30.	10¼
500. b.c.b5.	.23	500..... b30.	.30

THURSDAY, Jan. 23—P. M.

The business on the Stock Exchange today was large in volume, and the dealings were well distributed. All classes of shares found ready buyers, and under brisk purchases an improvement in prices, ranging from ¼ to 4¼ ₱ cent., was established, the advance being most marked in Erie, North-western, Ohio and Mississippi, St. Paul, Lake Shore, C., C., C. & I., Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, and New-Jersey Central. During the afternoon a reaction of ¼ to 1 ₱ cent. took place under realizations, but the decline was subsequently fully recovered in some instances, and the market closed strong and buoyant in tone.

The transactions aggregated 305,158 shares, including 89,025 Erie, 55,250 Lake Shore, 47,590 North-western, 37,400 Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, 21,445 St. Paul, 20,200 Ohio and Mississippi, 9,400 Western Union, 8,785 New-Jersey Central, 5,400 Wabash, 5,110 C. C. C. and I., 3,250 Michigan Central, 3,200 Morris and Essex, 2,270 Delaware and Hudson, 1,900 St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern, 1,770 Hannibal and St. Joseph, 1,750 Pacific Mail, 1,700 Pittsburg, 1,600 Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph, 1,400 Missouri, Kansas and Texas, 1,200 Iron Mountain, 1,185 Illinois Central, and 1,120 Rock Island.

Erie common advanced from 25⅛ to 26, and closed within a fraction of the highest point. The preferred rose rapidly from 44⅜ to 46½, and closed at 45⅛, as against 42½ yesterday. Lake Shore advanced from 70⅝ to 72¼, and after receding to 71⅞, rose to 72⅜ in the final dealings. Canada Southern sold at 48 throughout the day. Michigan Central rose from 80 to 80¾, and closed at 80½. Northwest common advanced from 59½ to 61¼, reacted to 60⅝, recovered to 61, and finally sold at 60¾. The preferred sold up from 84½ to 86½, reacted to 85, and rallied to 85⅜. St. Paul common rose from 40⅜ to 40⅝, fell off to 40¼, and sold up to 40⅞ at the close. The preferred advanced from 81 to 82, receded to 81⅜, and recovered to 81⅝. C., C., C. and I. rose from 45⅞ to 46, and reacted to 45¼. Union Pacific fell off to 67¾. Ohio and Mississippi advanced from 9⅝ to 11 for the common, and from 24⅜ to 29 for the preferred, with final sales at 10½ and 28½, respectively. Wabash fluctuated between 22½ and 23, with opening and closing sales at 22¾. St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern sold at 7⅞@8¾ for the common, and 32⅜@32⅞ for the preferred. Missouri, Kansas and Texas fell off from 5¾ to 5⅝, and rose to 6. Hannibal and St. Joseph common declined from 15 to 14¾. The preferred sold at 37@37½. Iron Mountain rose from 16⅜ to 17. Morris and Essex advanced from 82⅞ to 83, fell off to 82⅜, and rallied to 82¾. Delaware, Lackawanna and Western advanced from 51¾ to 52⅜, reacted to 52½, rose to 53, fell off to 52½, and finally sold at 52⅜. Delaware and Hudson declined from 44½ to 43⅝, and rose to 44⅞. New-Jersey Central fell off from 41 to 40¼, rose to 42, and reacted to 41⅝. Pacific Mail advanced from 12⅞ to 13¾, and closed at 13⅝. Western Union rose from 97 to 98, reacted to 97¼, and recovered to 97⅝. Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph sold at 38@38¼. Among investment shares Rock Island rose to 125¾, Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy to 114⅝, New-York Central to 115, Fort Wayne to 106½, Pittsburg to 92, and Illinois Central to 84⅜. The final sales were at a slight reaction from these prices.

The money market was easy, with large offerings of capital at 2@3 ₱ cent. on railway and miscellaneous collaterals, and as low as 1@1½ ₱ cent. to the Government bond dealers. Discounts are unchanged.

The foreign advices reported a very buoyant market for American railway shares at London, with a still further improvement in prices of ¼ to 6¼ ₱ cent. Erie was most conspicuous in the upward movement, the preferred advancing 6¼ ₱ cent., to 44¾, and the common 1 ₱ cent. to 25⅝. Illinois Central rose 1 ₱ cent. to 86¼. New-Jersey Central 1 ₱ cent., to 42, and Reading ¼ ₱ cent., to 13¼. United States bonds were considerably lower, doubtless in consequence of the announcement of the formation of the syndicate to float the 4 ₱ cent. loan in Europe, and the belief that redemption of the 5-20s and other issues will proceed more rapidly than heretofore. United States 10-40s were reported at 107½, against 109¼ yesterday, while 5s of 1881 declined ⅞ ₱ cent., to 106⅞; 4½s ¼, to 108⅜, and 1868s ¼, to 103⅜. British Consols were firm at 97¼@96⅜ for both money and the account. Bar silver was quoted at 50¾d. ₱ ounce. The Bank of England Directors, at their weekly court this morning, made no alteration in the discount rate, which remains 4 ₱ cent. The bank gained £526,000 bullion for the week ending yesterday, and £10,000 to-day on balance. The proportion of the bank's reserve to its liabilities is now 31⅞ ₱ cent., as against 30¾ ₱ cent. last week. At Paris, Rentes rose to 113f. 92½c. The weekly statement of the Bank of France shows an increase in specie of 10,425,000f.

In the Sterling Exchange market to-day there were free offerings of bankers' and commercial bills, the pressure to sell being chiefly lost at utable to the feeling of uncertainty which prevails in regard to the probable operations of the new syndicate. The nominal asking rates were reduced from $4 86½ to $4 86 for bankers' long, and from $4 89½ to $4 89 for sight drafts, with actual business at a concession of 1 cent from these figures. Cables sold at $4 88½@$4 88¾, and commercial bills at $4 82½@$4 83½.

Government bonds were firm for 4s and 4½s, but weak and lower for the other issues, notably 10-40s, which declined 1 ₱ cent. The market, generally speaking, is weakened by the rapid refunding of the public debt and the decline in prices at London. The subscriptions to the 4 per cent. loan at Washington to-day amounted to over $9,000,000. Railroad mortgages continue in active demand, and with few exceptions, still higher prices were recorded to-day. Metropolitan Elevated Firsts rose to 79⅜, New-Jersey Central convertibles to 96, St. Paul, I. and D. Division, Extension, to 100¼, do., consolidated Sinking Funds to 102¾, Delaware and Hudson coupon 7s of 1894 to 99½, Denver and Rio Grande Firsts to 88¾, North Missouri Firsts to 108¼, Ohio and Mississippi Seconds to 83½, Kansas Pacific 6s, Februrary and August, with coupon certificates, to 112½, Cincinnati and Springfield Firsts, guaranteed by C., C. & I., to 92¼, Chicago, St. Paul and Minneapolis Firsts to 90½, Toledo and Wabash consolidated convertibles, ex coupon, to 70. St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern Real Estate 7s of 1893 to 98, Kansas Pacific 7s, Denver Division, with coupon certificates, to 78½, and do. 6s, J. and D., 1896, with coupon certificates, to 105. Cincinnati and Springfield Firsts guaranteed by Lake Shore, fell off to 98½, and recovered to 97. Hannibal and St. Joseph convertibles declined to 105, and subsequently rose to 106. New-Jersey Central Firsts were strong at 117⅜; do. consolidated assented full off to 79¼, convertibles assented to 79, and Lehigh and Wilkesbarre consolidated assented to 47½. Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern Firsts declined from 70½ to 69¾. In State bonds, Louisiana Consols advanced to 65, fell off to 64¼, and rallied to 64½. District of Columbia 3.65s sold at 81⅝@81¾. North Carolina old, January and July, declined to 18¾.

UNITED STATES TREASURY, NEW-YORK, Jan. 23, 1879.

Receipts.....	$1,693,801 50
Payments.....	1,134,244 72
Balance, coin.....	114,568,920 85
Balance, notes.....	45,245,513 61
United States notes redeemed.....	63,995 00
Coin received for United States notes.....	2,700 00

CLOSING QUOTATIONS—JAN. 23.

	Wednesday.	Thursday.
United States 4½s, 1891, coup.....	106	106
United States 5s, 1881, coup.....	b.108⅝	106½
United States 5-20s, 1867, coup.....	102¾	102¾
Bills on London $4 85½@$4 85¾	$4 85@$4 85½
New-York Central.....	114⅜	114⅜
Rock Island.....	125⅛	125⅛
Pacific Mail.....	13	13⅝
Milwaukee and St. Paul.....	40⅛	40⅞
Milwaukee and St. Paul pref..	81	81⅝
Lake Shore.....	70⅛	72⅜
Chicago and North-western.....	59⅜	60⅜
Chicago and North-western pref..	84½	83⅜
Western Union.....	97	97⅝
Union Pacific.....	68⅛	67⅝
Delaware, Lack. and Western..	51⅝	52⅜
New-Jersey Central.....	40⅞	41⅝
Delaware and Hudson Canal..	44	44⅛
Morris and Essex.....	82⅝	82⅜
Panama.....	123	123
Erie.....	24⅞	25⅜
Ohio and Mississippi.....	9⅝	10⅛
Harlem.....	142	142
Hannibal and St. Joseph.....	14⅜	14⅜
Hannibal and St. Joseph preferred.	35½	37½
Michigan Central.....	80½	80¼
Illinois Central.....	83⅞	84⅛
Wabash.....	22⅞	22⅜
Canada Southern.....	48	48
Iron Mountain.....	16⅛	17
Pittsburg.....	91¼	92

The extreme range of prices in stocks and the number of shares sold are as follows:

	High-est.	Lowest.	No. of Shares.
New-York Central.....	114⅞	114⅜	345
Canada Southern.....	48	48	300
Erie.....	26	25⅛	64,625
Erie pref.....	44⅞	44⅜	3,400
Lake Shore.....	72⅜	70⅜	55,250
Wabash.....	22⅞	22⅛	5,400
North-western.....	61⅛	59⅛	32,650
North-western pref.....	86⅛	84¼	14,940
Rock Island.....	125⅜	125⅛	1,120
Fort Wayne.....	106	106	100
Milwaukee & St. Paul.....	40⅞	40¼	14,720
Mil. & St. Paul pref.....	82	81	6,725
Pittsburg.....	92	91⅜	1,700
Del., Lack. & Western.....	53	51⅞	37,400
New-Jersey Central.....	42	40¼	8,795
Delaware & Hudson Canal..	44⅞	43⅝	2,270
Morris & Essex.....	83	82⅜	3,200
Michigan Central.....	80⅝	80	3,250
Illinois Central.....	84⅜	84⅛	1,185
Union Pacific.....	68	67¾	275
C., C., C. & I.....	46	45⅞	5,110
Chicago, Bur. & Quincy..	114⅜	114	621
Chicago and Alton.....	84⅜	84¼	200
Iron Mountain.....	17	16⅜	1,200
C., C. & Ind. Central.....	5⅛	5⅛	100
Hannibal & St. Joseph.....	14⅝	14⅝	150
Hannibal & St. Joseph pf.	37⅜	37	920
Ohio & Mississippi.....	11	9⅝	18,300
Ohio & Mississippi pref...	29	24⅞	1,900
Panama.....	123	123	100
Western Union.....	98	97	9,400
A. & P. Telegraph.....	38¼	38	1,600
Pacific Mail.....	13⅝	12⅞	1,750
Quicksilver.....	14	13½	400
Kansas Pacific.....	9⅜	9¼	200
Mo., Kan. & Texas.....	6	5⅝	1,400
St. L., K. C. & N.....	7⅞	7⅝	900
St. L., K. C. & N. pref.....	32⅞	32⅜	1,000
New-Jersey Southern.....	2⅛	1⅞	450
Adams Express.....	105	105	225
Total sales.....			305,158

The following were the closing quotations of Government bonds:

	Bid.	Asked.
United States currency 6s.....	120¾	121
United States 6s, 1881, registered..	106⅝	107
United States 6s, 1881, coupon.....	106⅝	107
United States 5-20s, 1867, registered.	101⅞	102⅛
United States 5-20s, 1867, coupon..	101⅞	102⅛
United States 5-20s, 1868, registered.	102⅛	103⅛
United States 5-20s, 1868, coupon..	102⅛	103⅛
United States 10-40s, registered.....	105⅛	105¼
United States 10-40s, coupon.....	105	105¼
United States 5s, 1881, registered..	105¼	106⅛
United States 5s, 1881, coupon.....	106⅛	106⅝
United States 4½s, 1891, registered..	106	106¼
United States 4½s, 1891, coupon.....	106	106¼
United States 4s, 1907, registered....	99⅞	100⅛
United States 4s, 1907, coupon.....	99⅞	100⅛

The following is the Clearing-house statement to-day:

Exchanges.....	$73,190,996
Balances.....	3,953,329

The following were the bids for the various State securities:

Alabama 5s, '83...	45	Mo. H. & St. J. due '86.	104
Alabama 5s, '86...	45	Mo. H. & St. J. due '87.	104
Alabama 8s, '86...	45	N. Y. 6s, G. R., '87.	110
Alabama 8s, '88...	45	N. Y. 6s, G. O., '87.	110
Ala. 8s, A. & O. R..	5

JAN 1879

THE REAL ESTATE MARKET.

The following City real estate was sold at public auction at the Exchange yesterday, Thursday, Jan. 23:

Richard V. Harnett, foreclosure sale, Louis P. Ehrichs, Esq., Referee, sold the four-story brick building, with lot 25.6 by 101.8, No. 1,591 2d-av., west side, 102.2 feet north of 82d-st., for $10,500, to James Mulry, plaintiff.

E. A. Lawrence & Co., foreclosure sale, William H. Gibson, Esq., Referee, sold five lots, each 25 by 99.11, on East 146th-st., north side, 475 feet east of 10th-av., for $2,000, to Lydia S. Floyd, plaintiff.

C. J. Lyon, foreclosure sale, George P. Smith, Esq., Referee, sold two lots, each 25 by 99.11, on West 151st-st., south side, 100 feet east of 10th-av., and plot of land 155.7 by 100, on 10th-av., south-east corner of 151st-st., for $14,500, to Jacob K. Lochman, as Executor and plaintiff. Also, similar sale, H. Brewster, Esq., Referee, sold a plot of land, 99.11 by —, on 8th-av., south-east corner of 154th-st., running through to Macomb's road, for $8,000, to same purchaser.

The remaining sales were adjourned as follows: Sale by Richard V. Harnett of a plot of land, on 10th-av., north of 212th-st., to Jan. 27; sale by A. J. Bleecker & Son, of 15 96-100 acres of land, known as Lots D and G, on a map of Hunt's Point farm, to Feb. 3; sale by E. F. Raymond of the building, with lot No. 733 Broadway, north of Waverley-place, to Feb. 13; and sale by F. G. & C. S. Brown of the dwelling, with lot, No. 350 West 32d-st., west of 8th-av., to same date.

RECORDED REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

NEW-YORK.

Wednesday, Jan. 22.

15th-st., n. s., 97 ft. e. of Livingston-place, 22x77.6: Francis Gaetcha and wife to Frederick Meisner. Executor $10,000

Washington-av., Lot No. 8, 50x100, 232 Ward; Sarah Halsey to Elizabeth Halsey 3,000

Allen-st., w. s., 100.2 ft. w. of Canal-st., 25.2x65.7½; Martin Hoss and wife to J. G. Rudolphe 16,000

103d-st., West, No. 303; Daniel M. Edgar and wife to William R. Beadleston and others 8,500

Lexington-av., s. w. corner of 40th-st., 19.2x85; Charles Warrous and wife to Harry W. Watrous 100

Same property; Harry W. Watrous to Ruth A. Watrous 100

Eldridge-st., No. 83, 25x100; Henry W. F. Hocke, Executor, to Henry C. Almer 7,300

Same property; Charles H. Schenbel and others to Henry C. Almer 7,300

19th-st., n.s., 350 ft. w. of 7th-av., 25x95; John Hanlon to William Dermody 5,000

Same property; William Dermody to Fannie Hanlon 5,000

50th-st., s. s., 20 ft. e. of 1st-av., 20x100; William A. Mowatt and wife to George A. McMurtry. 10,000

Madison-st., n. s., 216 ft. e. of Scammel-st., 23.9 x96; A. Erbe, Referee, to Bank for Savings.. 5,000

Madison-av., No. 1430; Charles Dugdin and wife to Clarence S. Day 38,000

78th-st., s. s., 381.3 ft. w. of 3d-av., 18.9x80.2; James Gilroy by Matthew C. Reynolds 10,500

Avenue A, w. s., 25.8 ft. s. of 82d-st., 25.6x106.8; F. Swartz, Referee, to August Baumgarten 5,000

Pearl-st., No. 206; E. S. Rapallo, Referee, to William F. Dornbusch 6,225

Pearl-st., n. s., 357.8 ft. w. of 9th-av., 25x94.9; John Wallace to William Wallace ..... nom.

53d-st., n. s., 75 ft. e. of 9th-av., 27x52; Charles Woodall to Joseph H. Burtis ..... nom.

46th-st., n. s., 140 ft. e. of 5th-av., 20x100.5; A. A. Reddell to Robert A. Chesebrough 25,132

Same to Same, s. s., 140 ft. e. of 5th-av., 20x100.5 26,065

4th-av., w. s., 55th to 56th st., 100x200.10; Andrew Scheer to William Nolan 105,000

Eleventh Ward, No. 9, 21.10½x98.9; also, Grand-st., No. 570, 26x75; Hannah Gumpert to Edward J. Gumpert ..... nom.

Fordham-av., s. s., 89 ft. s. of 8th-st., 75x209; also, Fordham-av., n. of 8th-st., 25x209.3, 24th Ward; Cecelia H. Pohle and others to Thomas A. Oliver ..... nom.

53d-st., n. s., 234 ft. e. of 1st-av., 20x100.5; William R. Guernsman and wife to Margaret Fallman 7,000

Southern Boulevard and Grant-av., Lot No. 214, 89x86x104, 23d Ward; Same to Same 1,500

66th-st., East, No. 310; Anton Gerstner and wife to Ferd. A. Siegbahn 8,025

LEASE RECORDED.

1st-av., s. s., 72.1½ ft. s. of 4th-st., 24.4x85, 20 years; John J. Astor to Louis Klemann $500

MORTGAGES RECORDED.

Bassford, Sarah E., and husband to A. S. Underhill; w. s. Avenue B, n. of 9th-st. 3 years $10,000

Christman, George B., and wife to Theresia Johenning; w. s. 2d-av., n. of 43d-st. 5 years. 2,000

Dornbusch, William, and wife to J. F. Bichm; s. s. Pearl-st., 3 or 5 years 3,000

Everett, Samuel H., and wife to The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New-York; 144 West-st., and Nos. 214 and 216 Washington-st., 18 months 75,000

Everett, Samuel H., and wife to George Opdyke; same property, 5 years 20,000

Felton, Louisa to H. Cavernann; No. 152 Thompson-st., 5 years 3,500

Fonika, Lydia, and husband to John Carey, jr., and others. Trustees, &c.; n. e. corner of 2d-av. and 64th-st., 3 years 5,000

Freudenburg, Frederick, and wife to Charles H. Reed; s. s. Rivington-st., e. of Attorney-st., 5 years 10,000

Kerr, Levi, and others to William Rockefeller; a. a. corner of 8th-av. and 54th-st., 1 year.... 60,000

Lennon, Patrick, to John Smith; n. s. 18th-st., e. of 10th-av., 1 year 6,000

McCloskey, John, to the Mutual Life Insurance Company; a. a. corner of Avenue B and 8th-st., and also Nos. 183 and 185 7th-st., 18 months 87,500

Niederstein, Apolonia, and others to Charles A. Hubert; w. s. Norfolk-st., s. of Hester-st., 1 year 4,220

O'Reilly, Bridget, to Jeannette C. Patterson; n. s., 25 feet e. of 9th-av., 5 years 1,000

Roberts, John J., to T. S. Ormiston; s. s. 5th-st., w. of 8th-av., 2 years 2,000

Siegbahn, F. F., and wife to Maria Peak; s. s. 66th-st., e. of 2d-av., 5 years 7,500

Noble, William, and wife to Andrew Soher; w. s. 4th-av., from 55th to 56th st 105,000

ASSIGNMENTS OF MORTGAGES.

Bual, Julius, to Moses Behr $3,000

Carty, Michael, to Allen Hall ..... nom.

Gesenex, Frederica, to Mete Doscher 3,600

Hubert, Charles A., to Charles Baner 2,000

King, Archibald G., Executor, &c., to King, Executor, &c. 11,000

King, Archibald G., Executor, &c., to A. G. King, Trustee, &c. ..... nom.

CITY REAL ESTATE.

THE DESIRABLE PROPERTY NO. 61 West 14th-st., 75 feet east of 6th-av., building 25x 112, suitable for dry goods, furniture, or any business, to lease or sell. Apply on premises.

NEW OF EAST 127TH-ST., NEAR STUYVESANT PARK.—A well-located, fine, medium-size dwelling; parlors. Permits from V. K. STEVENSON, 2d., offices 4 P-ne, 35 East 17th-st., and 661 5th-av.

HARLEM—RAPID TRANSIT.

Houses, stores, and floors, to let and for sale. PORTER & CO., No. 173 East 125th-st.

REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION.

ADRIAN H. MULLER, Auctioneer.

ESTATE OF JOHN H. POWERS, DECEASED.

EXECUTOR'S SALE OF VALUABLE IMPROVED AND UNIMPROVED PROPERTY.

ADRIAN H. MULLER & SON will sell at auction on TUESDAY, Jan. 28, at 12 o'clock, at the Exchange Sales-room, No. 111 Broadway, the following described real estate:

FOURTH-AVENUE.—The four-story brick stores, with lease of lots, situate on the north-east corner of 4th-av. and 11th-st., Nos. 99, 101, 103, 105, and 101 4th-av. The leases are from the Stuyvesant estate.

STONE AND PEARL STREETS.—The brick stores and lot No. 26 Stone and No. 61 Pearl-st., running through from Pearl to Stone-st.

CANAL AND MOTT STREETS.—The brick and frame buildings and lots Nos. 178 and 180 Canal-st., corner of Mott-st.

THIRD-AVENUE, SIXTY-SIXTH AND SIXTY-SEVENTH STREETS.—Eight lots, comprising the entire easterly front on Third-av., each 25 feet front by 100 feet deep, on 66th-st., and 14 lots on 67th-st., commencing 100 feet east of the 3d-av.; street lots are each 25x100 feet, except the two easterly lots on each street, which are 30x100 feet each.

ELM-STREET.—The lot on the north-west corner of Elm and Catharine-lane.

FORTY-SECOND-STREET.—One lot, south side, 300 feet west of 7th-av., 25x98.9.

SIXTY-SECOND, AND SIXTY-FIFTH STREETS.—Six lots, north side of 63d-st., 325 feet west of 8th-av., and four lots, south side of 69th-st., 375 feet west of 8th-av.

RIVERSIDE-AVENUE.—Seven lots, easterly side of Riverside-dr., 225 feet north of 119th-st., and opposite Riverside Park.

TWELFTH-AVENUE.—Plot of vacant lots on 12th-av., between 125th and 128th sts., opposite Riverside Park.

EIGHTY-FIFTH STREET.—Four lots, south side, between 11th and Riverside-ave.

TWELFTH-AVENUE.—One water lot, north-east corner 94th-st.

SOUTHERN BOULEVARD, CROSS AND TWO HUNDRED AND TWENTY-SECOND STREETS.—Seven 19 lots.

BROOKLYN.—Thirty-two lots, comprising the entire block bounded by Columbia, Sigourney, Otsego and Halleck sts.

HUGH CASSIDY, Executor,
HENRIETTA B. POWERS, Executrix.
ESTATE OF JOHN H. POWERS, Deceased.

Book-maps at the office of the auctioneers, No. 7 Pine-st., and of the Executor, No. 11 Pine-st.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR the Southern District of New-York.—In the matter of ALEXANDER C. ROGERS and WILLIAM H. EDWARDS, Bankrupts.—In Bankruptcy.—Notice is hereby given that there will be sold at public auction, on the 8th day of February, 1879, at 2 o'clock P. M., on the premises, the following described property, viz.: Two lots at Menlo Park, New-Jersey, situated on the corner of Cedar-street and Middlesex-avenue, and numbered 13 and 14, in block 12, said down on map of the Menlo Park-Homestead Association, filed in the office of the Clerk of Middlesex County. Said lots are each 50 feet 6 ins. in front and rear, and 150 feet deep. A copy of said map may be seen at the Post Office at Menlo Park.

ja17-law3wF B. F. RICE, Assignee.

CITY HOUSES TO LET.

TO LET OR LEASE,

THE FOUR LOTS, with the BUILDINGS THEREON, situated at the north-east corner of 41st-st. and Park-av., constituting the southerly portion of the

GRAND UNION HOTEL.

Apply to HORACE S. ELY,
No. 22 Pine-st., New-York.

TO RENT OR LEASE—ON 57TH-AV., BETWEEN 11th and 12th sts., a large double house; will be thoroughly repaired and altered to suit a desirable tenant. Apply to C. L. SMITH, No. 212 East 9th-st.

NO. 102 WEST 39TH-ST.—PARTLY FURnished house to responsible party; rooms reserved.

STORES, &C., TO LET.

NO. 129 CHURCH-ST.—SECOND, THIRD, and Fourth Lofts to let; very light and desirable. Apply to GRACE & ELY, No. 32 Pine-st.

OFFICES TO LET
IN THE
TIMES BUILDING.
APPLY TO
GEORGE JONES,
TIMES OFFICE.

TO LET OR LEASE—THE NEW STORES NOS. 503 AND 505 BROADWAY, 50x200, NOS. 507 AND 509 BROADWAY, 50x200, AND NO. 511 BROADWAY, 25x200, extending through to Mercer-st.; central location for dry goods business. These spacious stores, with basement and sub-basement, can be rented as a whole, or will be divided to suit tenants. Apply to HORACE S. ELY, No. 22 Pine-st.

TO LET—NO. 18 WALKER-ST.—FIVE-STORY modern building; iron front. Can be rented as a whole, or will be divided. Apply to HORACE S. ELY, No. 22 Pine-st.

SHIPPING.

WHITE STAR LINE.

UNITED STATES AND ROYAL MAIL STEAMERS FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.

NOTICE—The steamers of this line take the Lane Routes recommended by Lieut. Maury, U. S. N., on both the outward and the homeward passages.

BRITANNIC, Capt. Perry.....Saturday, Feb. 1, noon.
REPUBLIC, Capt. Ismes.....Thursday, Feb. 6, 8 P. M.
GERMANIC, Capt. Kennedy.....Sat., Feb. 15, 12:30 P. M.

From White Star Dock, Pier No. 52 North River.

These steamers are uniform in size and unsurpassed in appointments. The saloons, state-rooms, smoking, and bath rooms are amidships, where the noise and motion are least felt, affording a degree of comfort hitherto unattainable at sea.

Rates—saloon, $80, $90, and $100, gold; return tickets on favorable terms; steerage, $28.

These steamers carry neither cattle, sheep, nor pigs.

For inspection of plans and other information, apply at the company's office, No. 37 Broadway, New-York, or No. 140 Walnut-st., Phila. E. J. CORTIS, Agent.

CUNARD LINE.

NOTICE.

With the view of diminishing the chances of collision, the steamers of this line take a specified course for all seasons of the year.

On the outward passage from Queenstown to New-York or Boston, crossing the meridian of 50 at 43 latitude, or nothing to the north of 42.

On the homeward passage, crossing the meridian of 50 at 42, or nothing to the north of 43.

FROM NEW-YORK FOR LIVERPOOL OR QUEENSTOWN.

PARTHIA...WED., Jan. 29 | ABYSSINIA...WED., Feb. 12
SCYTHIA.....WED., Feb. 5 | BATAVIA...WED., Feb. 19

Cabin passage and return tickets on favorable terms, including a special low rate for the Fall and Winter months.

Steerage tickets to and from all parts of Europe at very low rates. Freight and passage apply at the Company's office, No. 4 Bowling Green. CHAS. G. FRANCKLYN, Agent.

GUION LINE.

UNITED STATES MAIL STEAMERS FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.

Leaving Pier 38, N. R., foot of Kingsland.

MONTANA.....TUESDAY, Jan. 28, 9 A. M.
WISCONSIN.....TUESDAY, Feb. 4, 3 P. M.
WYOMING.....TUESDAY, Feb. 11, 9 A. M.
NEVADA.....TUESDAY, Feb. 25, 7:30 A. M.
MONTANA.....TUESDAY, March 4, 2 P. M.

These steamers are built of iron, in watertight compartments, and are supplied with every requisite to make the passage across the Atlantic both safe and agreeable, having bath-room, smoking-room, drawing-room, piano, and library. Experienced surgeon attends each one, and caterer on each steamer. The state-rooms are all on deck, thus insuring those greatest of all luxuries at sea, perfect ventilation and light.

CABIN PASSAGE, (according to state-room,) $55, $65, and $75. INTERMEDIATE, $40; STEERAGE, $26.

OFFICES, No. 29 BROADWAY, Cabin.
WILLIAMS & GUION.

STATE LINE

TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, DUBLIN, BELFAST, AND LONDONDERRY.

From Pier No. 42 N. R., foot of Canal-st., as follows:

STATE OF CALIFORNIA.....Thursday, Jan. 30
STATE OF VIRGINIA.....Thursday, Feb. 6

First Cabin, $55 to $70, according to accommodations: excursion tickets, $110 to $130. Second Cabin, $40; excursion tickets, $75. Steerage at lowest rates.

AUSTIN, BALDWIN & CO., Agents,
No. 72 Broadway, New-York.

STEERAGE tickets at No. 45 Broadway, and at the company's pier, foot of Canal-st., North River.

NORTH GERMAN LLOYD.

STEAM-SHIP LINE BETWEEN NEW-YORK, SOUTHAMPTON, AND BREMEN.

Company's pier foot of 2d-st., Hoboken.

NECKAR.....Sat., Jan. 25 | WESER.....Sat. Feb. 8
WESER.....Sat. Feb. 1 | ODER.....Sat. Feb. 15

RATES OF PASSAGE: FROM NEW-YORK TO SOUTHAMPTON, HAVRE, OR BREMEN.

First cabin.....$100
Second cabin.....60
Steerage.....30

Return tickets at reduced rates. Prepaid Steerage certificates, $30. STEERAGE TICKETS TO ALL POINTS IN THE SOUTH OF ENGLAND, $30.

OELRICHS & CO., No. 2 Bowling Green.

INMAN LINE ROYAL MAIL STEAMERS.

FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.

CITY OF CHESTER.....Saturday, Jan. 25, 7:30 A. M.
CITY OF MONTREAL.....Thursday, Jan. 30, 11 A. M.
CITY OF BERLIN.....Saturday, Feb. 8, 6:30 A. M.

From Pier No. 37 North River, foot of Charlton-st.

CABIN, $60, $80, and $100, gold. Return tickets on favorable terms. STEERAGE, $26. Prepaid certificates at lowest rates. Saloons, state-rooms, smoking and bath rooms amidships. These steamers do not carry cattle, sheep, or pigs. JOHN G. DALE, Agent,
Nos. 31 and 33 Broadway, N. Y.
Philadelphia Office, No. 105 South 4th-st.

ANCHOR LINE U. S. MAIL STEAMERS, NEW-YORK AND GLASGOW.

From Pier 20 North River, foot of Jay-st.

Devonia.....Jan. 25, 7 A. M. | Anchoria.....Feb. 8, 6 A. M.
Ethiopia.....Feb. 1, noon. | Bolivia.....Feb. 15, noon.
Cabins, $30 to $80, according to state-room; rates at reduced rates.
Second Cabin, $40. Steerage, $28.

NEW-YORK TO LONDON DIRECT.

From Pier 20 North River, foot of Jay-st.

Castalia...Jan. 25, 7 A. M. | California.....Feb. 1, noon.
Cabins, $55 and $65. Excursion tickets at reduced rates.
HENDERSON BROTHERS, Agents, 7 Bowling Green.

GENERAL TRANSATLANTIC COMPANY between New-York and Havre.

Company's Pier, (new,) No. 42 North River, foot of Morton-st.

FRANCE, Trudelle.....Wednesday, Feb. 5, 3:30 P. M.
CANADA, Franeau.....Wednesday, Feb. 19, 3:30 P. M.
AMERIQUE, Delon.....Wednesday, March 5, 3 P. M.

Steamers marked thus " do not carry steerage passengers.

Checks drawn on Credit Lyonnais of Paris in amounts to suit.

For freight and passengers apply to
LOUIS DE BEBIAN, Agent, No. 55 Broadway.

IMPERIAL GERMAN MAIL.

Hamburg American Packet Company. Line for PLYMOUTH, CHERBOURG, and HAMBURG.

GELLERT...Thurs., Jan. 30 | LESSING...Thurs., Feb. 13
CIMBRIA...Thurs., Feb. 6 | SILESIA...Thurs., Feb. 20

Rates of passage to Plymouth, London, Cherbourg, Hamburg, and all points in England: First Cabin, $100; second cabin, $60; Steerage, $30.

KUNHARDT & CO., C. H. RICHARD & BOAS, General Agents, General Passenger Agents,
No. 61 Broad-st., N. Y. No. 61 Broadway, N. Y.

ROTTERDAM LINE.

Steamers leave Jersey City, near Pavonia Ferry.

W. A. SCHOLTEN.....Saturday, Feb. 1
MAAS.....Wednesday, Feb. 12

Cabin, $65-$70. Intermediate, $45-$50. Steerage, $25. H. G. CALKOEN, Agent, No. 27 South William-st.
FUNCH, EDYE & CO.,
27½ So. Wm-st., Freight Agts. 150 Bway, Gen. Passage Agt.

THE RED STAR LINE FOR ANTWERP.

Carrying the Belgian and United States mails. Sailing every 12 days from New-York to Antwerp.

VADERLAND sails Saturday, Jan. 25, 3 A. M.

For rates of passage and other information apply to PETER WRIGHT & SONS, General Agents, No. 307 Walnut-st., Phila., and No. 52 Broadway, New-York.
JNO. McDONALD, Agt., No. 5 Battery-place.

NATIONAL LINE—FROM NEW PIER 39 N. R. FOR LONDON, (Victoria Docks:)—
Holland, Wed., Jan. 22, 3 P. M. | Canada, Feb. 5, 8:30 A. M.
Egypt, Sat., Feb. 1, 11:30 A. M. | Erin, Sat., Feb. 8, 6:30 A. M.
Cabin, $50 to $70, currency; steerage, $26. Drafts from £1 upward issued at very low rates. Company's offices, 69 and 73 Broadway. F. W. J. HURST, Manager.

SAVANNAH AND FLORIDA.

From Pier No. 43 North River, at 3 P. M.

CITY OF MACON, Capt. KEMPTON.....Saturday, Jan. 25
CITY OF COLUMBUS, Capt. RICKERSON...Wed., Jan. 29

Connecting with the Central Railroad of Georgia Atlantic and Gulf Railroad, Georgia and Florida Steamboat Company, and with the new and elegant iron steamer ST. JOHNS.

C. D. OWENS, Agent. GEO. YONGE, Agent. Ocean S. S. Co. and Central R. R. of Ga., Savannah. Central R. R. of Ga., Savannah. No. 315 Broadway. No. 409 Broadway.

FLORIDA RAILROAD AND STEAM-SHIP LINE.

ONLY DIRECT LINE TO FLORIDA.
SAILING EVERY SATURDAY.
LOWEST RATES OF FREIGHT AND PASSAGE.
Steamer ASHLAND, SATURDAY, Jan. 25.
And every SATURDAY thereafter.

For Fernandina, Jacksonville, Pilot Pt. No. 2, M. R., at 3 P.M

Only line issuing through tickets and bills lading to all points in Florida, and on Chattahoochie, Appalachicola, and Flint Rivers, and BRUNSWICK, Ga., insurance 1 per cent. Bills lading signed on pier. For further information, through bills lading, and passage rates, apply to HENRY R. ROBERTS,
No. 177 West-st., up stairs.

UNITED STATES AND BRAZIL MAIL STEAM-SHIP LINE.

FOR ST. THOMAS, PARA, PERNAMBUCO, BAHIA, AND RIO DE JANEIRO,

Connecting at St. Thomas with German steamers for Porto Rico and Spanish Main. The new first-class iron steam-ship CITY OF PARA, Capt. CARPENTER, will sail for the above ports on Wednesday, Feb. 5, at 3 P. M.

Postal way-bill receipted for at 3d. Freight must be paid in advance. Freight at low rates taken for the above ports. Freight received at Roberts' Dock. Insurances lower than by any other line. Shippers desiring insurance can effect same under our open policy. For freight engagements or passage, having elegant accommodations, apply to C. H. MALLORY & CO., Agents, Office, Pier No. 20 East River.

PACIFIC MAIL STEAM-SHIP COMPANY.

Pier foot Canal-st., North River.

FOR SAN FRANCISCO via 1STHMUS OF PANAMA: Steam-ship COLON.....Friday, Jan. 31, noon
Connecting for South and Central America and Mexico.

From San Francisco for Japan and China:

Steam-ship CHINA.....Wednesday, March 5, noon
From SAN FRANCISCO to HONOLULU, NEW-ZEALAND, and AUSTRALIA:
Steam-ship CITY OF NEW-YORK, Monday, Feb. 17, noon

For freight or general information apply to Company's office, on the pier, foot of Canal-st., N. River, and for passage at Company's Station Office, No. 1 Broadway.

SHIPPING.

NEW-YORK AND HAVANA DIRECT MAIL LINE.

These first-class steam-ships sail regularly at 3 P. M. from Pier No. 13 North River, as follows:

Steamer SANTIAGO DE CUBA.....WED., Jan. 29
Steam-ship .....SATURDAY, Feb. 8

Accommodations unsurpassed. For freight or passage apply to WILLIAM P. CLYDE & CO., No. 5 Bowling Green. LAWTON BROS., Agents in Havana.

NEW-YORK, HAVANA & MEXICAN MAIL S. S. LINE.

Steamers leave Pier No. 3 North River at 3 P. M.

FOR HAVANA DIRECT AND VERA CRUZ.

Calling at Progreso, Campeche, and Frontera.

CITY OF VERA CRUZ.....Saturday, Jan. 25
CITY OF WASHINGTON, (Havana only,) Thurs., Feb. 6
CITY OF MERIDA.....Saturday, Feb. 8

Steamer leaves New-Orleans Jan. 29 and Feb. 19 for Vera Cruz via Matamoros, Tampico, Tuxpan, connecting with steamer for Havana, New-York, and above ports.

F. ALEXANDRE & SONS, Nos. 31 and 33 Broadway

GREAT SOUTHERN FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE, FOR CHARLESTON, S. C., FLORIDA PORTS, AND ALL POINTS IN THE SOUTH AND SOUTH-WEST.

SAILING FROM PIER NO. 27 NORTH RIVER, WEDNESDAYS AND SATURDAYS at 3 P. M.

CHAMPION.....SATURDAY, Jan. 25
GULF STREAM.....WEDNESDAY, Jan. 29

SUPERIOR PASSENGER ACCOMMODATIONS.

Insurance to destination, one-half of one per cent.

Goods forwarded free of commission. Passenger tickets and bills of lading issued and signed at the office of

JAMES W. QUINTARD & CO., Agents,
Office on the Pier,
Or W. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 5 Bowling Green.
Or BENEDICT D. HASKELL, General Agent,
Great Southern Freight Line, 317 Broadway.

PALMETTO FREIGHT LINE.

VIA STEAM-SHIP TO CHARLESTON, S. C., and the SAVANNAH AND CHARLESTON RAILROAD, to all points in the South and South-west.

Freight rates and Through Bills of Lading signed at Pier No. 27 North River.
CHAS. D. OWENS, General Agent
Palmetto Freight Line,
No. 315 Broadway.

NEW-YORK AND CUBA MAIL S. S. LINE FOR HAVANA DIRECT.

FROM PIER 17 EAST RIVER AT 3 P. M.

Magnificent accommodation for passengers.

S. S. NIAGARA.....Saturday, Feb. 1
S. S. SARATOGA.....Wednesday, Feb. 12

Tickets issued also for
VERA CRUZ AND WEST INDIA ISLANDS
in connection with French and English S. S. Lines from Havana. JAMES E. WARD & CO., No. 113 Wall-st.

RAILROADS.

METROPOLITAN ELEVATED RAILWAY.

Open from 5:30 A. M. to 12 P. M.

RECTOR-ST.—Nearest point for Wall-Street Ferry, and connects with cars for South Ferry.

CORTLANDT-ST.—Nearest point for Jersey City and Pavonia Ferry.

PARK-PLACE.—Nearest point for Post Office, City Hall, and Barclay-Street Ferry to Hoboken.

CHAMBERS-ST.—Nearest point for Pavonia and Erie Railway Ferry.

FRANKLIN-ST.

GRAND-ST.—Nearest point for Desbrosses-Street Ferry to Jersey City, and connects with cars for Desbrosses and East Grand Street Ferries.

BLEECKER-ST.—Connects with cars for East and West.

EIGHTH-ST.—Nearest point for Christopher-Street Ferry to Hoboken, connecting with cars for Christopher and East Tenth Street Ferries.

FOURTEENTH-ST.—Nearest point to Union-square, Wallack's and Lyceum Theatres, Academy of Music, Irving and Tammany Halls, connecting with cars for East Twenty-third and Thirty-fourth Street Ferries.

TWENTY-THIRD-ST.—Nearest point to Booth's, St. James, and Park Theatres, Grand Opera-house, Delmonico's Garden, and Masonic Temple, and Twenty-third-Street Ferry to Jersey City.

THIRTY-THIRD-ST.—Nearest point to Standard, Broadway, and Fifth-Avenue Theatres, Aquarium, and San Francisco Minstrels, connecting with cars for Astoria Ferry.

FORTY-SECOND-ST.—Connects with New-York Transfer Company's cabs, for Grand Central Depot.

FIFTIETH-ST.

FIFTY-EIGHTH-ST.—Nearest point for Central Park, connecting with cars of Belt Line Railroad.

For up-town trains take east-side stations.

For down-town trains take west-side stations.

FARE 10 CENTS.

Except between the hours of 5:30 and 7:30 A. M. and 5 and 7 P. M., when the fare is 5 cents.

WM. R. GARRISON, President.
M. VAN BROCKLIN, Superintendent.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

GREAT TRUNK LINE AND UNITED STATES MAIL ROUTE.

On and after Jan. 19, 1879.

Trains leave New-York, via Desbrosses and Cortlandt Streets Ferries, as follows:

Express for Harrisburg, Pittsburg, the West and South, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, 9 A. M., 6 and 8:30 P. M., daily.

For Williamsport, Lock Haven, Corry, and Erie at 8:30 P. M., connecting at Corry for Titusville, Petroleum Centre, and the Oil Regions. Williamsport and Lock Haven, 9 A. M.

For Washington, Washington, and the South, "Limited Washington Express" of Pullman Parlor Cars, daily, except Sunday, 10 A. M.; arrive Washington 4:12 P. M. Regular at 8:30 and 10:40 A. M., 12 M., 3:30 P. M. Sunday, 4:30 A. M. and 10 P. M. For Baltimore, 4 P. M., except Sunday.

Express for Philadelphia, 4:30, 7:30, 8:20, 9, (10 limited,) 11 A. M., 1, 3:30, 4, 5, 6, 7:30, 8:30, and 10 P. M. Sunday, 4:30 and 9 A. M. & 4

BRILLIANT BILLIARD PLAY.

FOURTH DAY OF THE TOURNAMENT.

DALY DEFEATS GALLAGHER—THE LATTER PLAYS A GREAT SCIENTIFIC SHOT—SCHAEFER BEATS RUDOLPHE—THE FRENCHMAN GETS EXCITED.

The games of the Brunswick and Balke Championship Tournament at Cooper Institute, yesterday, while they were marked by much brilliant play, were peculiar in the matter of enthusiasm and excitement, the enthusiasm being elicited by a great shot by Gallagher, and the excitement by a heated war of words by Rudolphe, prompted by the trivial circumstance of a ball rolling over a tiny bit of chalk. Maurice Daly vanquished Thomas J. Gallagher in the afternoon, and in the evening Jacob Schaefer overcame the excitable A. P. Rudolphe. Daly won the lead, but missed from the string, giving Gallagher a "leave" that yielded 12 points. Daly made a pretty two-cushion long "draw," and, with a few gracefully-played "position" shots, gathered the ivories in the right-hand upper corner, where he played them freely and well for 43, and then got them into position for a "nurse" on the top rail. He was in splendid trim, and played with an easy grace worthy of Garnier. The ivories broke about three-quarters of the way across the rail, and he played a number of neat shots, among them being three fine "banks" to bring them once more under control, but retired on an easy shot, after completing a run of 103. Gallagher grew nervous, as usual, and made but 3; tried again, and made 4, and then gathered a "goose-egg." Daly had also been playing small counts, but was fighting hard for the rail, at the same time widening the big gap between his score and that of his adversary. The St. Louis man, finding the balls rolling hard for him, began to play "safety," but the young New-Yorker very nearly knocked the life out of the "safe" leaves, and renewed his efforts to gather the spheres on the rail. In his seventh inning he made but 1, but it was as finely-executed a single-cushion shot as could well be played. Gallagher played for 13, and left the balls in splendid position for his opponent, who was not slow to take advantage of it to gather 30 points, which made his score 208 to Gallagher's 39. In the eleventh inning he gained the rail he had so long fought for in two shots, and began to "nurse" the ivories down the right-side cushion, playing them with much delicacy. They "broke" on his fifty-fourth shot, but a beautiful "kiss" shot and a delicate "massé" brought them seemingly under control. They were not what they seemed, however, and they quickly scattered, and the player retired after scoring 76. He gave his opponent 1 on a "safety" play in the succeeding inning, but left the ivories so that the St. Louis man could not count. The latter, however, got them into a fair position directly afterward, and gathered them on the top rail, where he began to play a pretty "nurse," but slipped up on an unlucky "massé," after having added 35 to his score. Daly also followed with an equally fine nurse for 35, and then retired, carrying his score to 243, Gallagher's being 79. The latter missed, and once more Daly rolled the spheres to the rail, and resumed his graceful play, while carom followed carom, until the balls "broke" once more, and forced the player to adopt open-table shots for position, which he quickly gained, and began to "nurse" once more with consummate skill. for a time, when the balls again slipped away. Being unable to regain control of them the player sat down, having by a run of 56, increased his score to 412. Gallagher scored 8, and the New-York expert followed with a neat 43. The balls "froze" on Gallagher after he had counted 12 and obtained good position. He retired after playing a few more open-table shots with his score increased to 111, which figures, by a run of 14 in the succeeding inning and in the next a brilliantly-played run of 68 points, he still further increased to 193. It was the first time he had gathered the ivories on his favorite right side rail, and Daly frequently uttered the comment, "good shot," as the player rolled the balls gently toward the top of the table. They "broke" away on his sixty-fourth shot, and he stopped to study the puzzling position in which they were placed. A ball lay near the cushion against the middle of the right rail cushion, while the "spot" white ivory lay directly in front, and nearly touching it. The player's ball lay near the rail, about a foot and a half away from the other balls. It was a position from which he could not make a "bank" successfully, and, after deliberating, he determined to essay an almost impossible "cushion-kiss" shot. He drew with a slight "reverse English" from the spot-ball, everything depending upon the cushion of the left side rail. This caused the "spot" white ball to strike the red, which touched the cushion about midway above the bottom right hand "pocket," whence it glided to the bottom rail, and crossed diagonally to the left rail cushion, and glided away from it to meet the player's ball with a caress "kiss," just as the latter rolled with its "reverse" from the left rail cushion. It was a splendidly calculated shot, and, by all odds, the most brilliant yet played in the tournament, and was deservedly rewarded by prolonged cheers and hand-clapping. The player was now regaining his nerve, and was beginning to press Daly, who, in his twenty-third inning, forced his ball off the table, giving his opponent a second point on a "miss." Gallagher quickly took advantage of it, and played viciously to overcome his adversary's lead, but though he did the best up-hill work he has yet exhibited, Daly was gradually taking advantage of his bad luck, and wedging in small runs, which crushed out Gallagher's chance of regaining his grand total, and finally, by a run of 63, the New-Yorker closed the game in the twenty-eighth inning, beating the St. Louis man 306 points. The score was as follows:

Daly—0, 103, 14, 3, 23, 0, 25, 1, 30, 4, 76, 2, 0, 5, 35, 0, 56, 43, 1, 6, 0, 1, 0, 54, 0, 2, 63—306.
Gallagher—12, 2, 4, 0, 0, 0, 6, 13, 1, 2, 0, 1, 2, 35, 1, 1, 8, 27, 14, 68-21, 5, 21, 27, 0, 21, 6—294.
Winner's Average—21 12-28; loser's, 10 24-27.
Best Runs: Daly—103, 56, 76, 63; Gallagher—68, 35.
Time of Game—Two hours and thirty-eight minutes.
Umpires—Mr. Pulsifer for Gallagher, Mr. Colville for Daly.
Referee—Michael Geary; Marker—G. H. Ellis.

When Rudolphe, the Frenchman, and Jacob Schaefer, one of the star billiardists, crossed cues in the evening, Rudolphe put in an objection against the balls, and the referee having overruled it, spotted the red ball with a fancy finger shot, and gave the lead to his adversary, who won the "bank" for it. Schaefer opened with a 4 to his profession, gathered in a "goose egg," which he stoned for with a neatly-played 14. In the sixth inning Schaefer played brilliantly for position, but failed to gain it, as, like his adversary, he was not yet warmed up to good work. He made 30, to which the Frenchman responded with 44, and began varying his play with some of his famous "blunting," stopping, as he gathered the balls in a subsequent inning, and walking over to the championship emblem, which he very lowingly scrutinized, amid general laughter. He sat down after counting 29, and Schaefer gathered from his leave a fine position on the right side-rail, and began to "nurse" the ivories along it with his accustomed skill until they "froze" on his fifty-fifth shot, and he retired with a score of 115 to Rudolphe's 138. A miss on both sides followed, and then Schaefer gathered the spheres on the left side-rail, down which he nursed them quickly, but with great delicacy, clicking out carom after carom with clock-like regularity. He turned the corner, and began a long series of "kiss caroms" on the bottom rail, until they reached and turned to the right side-rail. A little later, on his one hundred and twenty-sixth shot, the white object-ball rolled over a piece of chalk [and settled. Schaefer at once notified the referee, who walked toward the table with the design of lifting the ball and removing the obstruction. Rudolphe at once sprang to his feet and protested, and brilliant billiard shots gave place to hot verbal shots at the referee. "I must move the ball, to take away the chalk," said Mr. Geary, flashing slightly, whereupon the Frenchman sailed out in wild excitement, "No! No! the balls must not be moved," and then as the spectators heartily hissed and cried "Leave it to the referee," Rudolphe turned toward them and exclaimed: "The rules do not allow it," while amid the general uproar, Mr. Geary carefully lifted the ball, brushed away the chalk, and replaced the ivory in its original position. Schaefer attempted to resume his nursing, when Rudolphe threw himself in front of him, and cried, "No, No! this game is out," while the young Chicagoan gave him an impatient shove aside. Rudolphe kept up his objections, and seizing a copy of the rules, in which nothing covering the disputed point appears, demanded that he should read them. Geary waived the paper aside, and said, "You are not playing this game on technicalities, but on honest principles." A remark which was greeted with applause and followed the Frenchman's objections. A little later, Rudolphe said, rather good-naturedly, "Well, let the past go," and then turning to the referee, exclaimed, amid general laughter, "No hard feeling, you know." The players then resumed their game in good spirits, although the incident for a time disconcerted them, and displayed brilliant play, Schaefer running steadily toward the home stretch, and closing the contest at length, beating Rudolphe 304 points. Appended is the score:

Schaefer—7, 4, 8, 0, 9, 30, 1, 3, 0, 1, 52, 0, 170, 1, 1, 37, 32, 14, 41, 2, 0, 23, 30, 35, 14, 7, 22—800.
Rudolphe—0, 14, 1, 3, 23, 46, 5, 10, 0, 29, 3, 0, 7, 3, 6, 0, 8, 20, 24, 5, 36, 5, 4, 16, 0, 21—296.
Winner's average, 22 6-27; loser's, 11 10-26.
Best runs—Schaefer, 170, 88; Rudolphe, 46, 36.
Umpires—Mr. Newburger for Schaefer, Mr. Neil Bryant for Rudolphe.
Time of game—2 hours and 3 minutes.

This afternoon George Slosson will play Randolph Heiser, and William Sexton and Maurice Daly will meet in the evening.

A YOUNG MAN'S SUICIDE.

Frederick Bissell, a young man aged 18 years, residing with his mother at No. 437 Classon-avenue, Brooklyn, committed suicide yesterday morning by cutting his throat and shooting himself through the head. Melancholy, induced by a fear of consumption, caused the young man to take his life. Young Bissell was over six feet in height and still growing. The weakness caused by this rapid growth led him to fear that he would die of consumption. He was not engaged in any business, but purposed to commence the study of medicine next Fall. Yesterday morning he was more than usually cheerful, and, after taking breakfast with his mother and sister, went up to his room to put on an overcoat, his mother having requested him to go down town on some business. A few minutes after he had entered his room the report of a pistol was heard. Mother and daughter ran screaming to the young man's room, but found the door locked. No answer was returned to their cries for admittance. Hastily summoning Dr. Hamilton, who lives close by, the bedroom door was forced open, and the dead body of young Bissell was found on the floor. On one side of him was an open razor and at the other a revolver with one chamber discharged. He had first cut a jagged wound in his throat and then placing the barrel of the pistol close to his right ear, sent a ball crashing through his brain. Coroner Simms will hold an inquest. Young Bissell's relatives are in good circumstances.

SUICIDE OF A GERMAN SOLDIER.

THE END OF A FAST LIFE—FROM AFFLUENCE TO POVERTY—HIS DEATH BY POISON.

George von Glasenap, a German soldier, about 35 years of age, committed suicide yesterday afternoon, in a cheap lodging-house at No. 110 Chatham-street, by swallowing poison. Glasenap came to this country in 1873. He was born in Brandenburg, received his education at the Military Academy of Potsdam. In 1862 he entered the Prussian Army as Ensign in the Twenty-fourth Regiment of Infantry, garrisoned at Spandau. His father was Division General, one of his brothers held an important office at the Army Head-quarters, and several other near relatives held responsible and influential military appointments. Glasenap was transferred, as Lieutenant, to the infantry of the Guard, and that took him to Berlin, where his taste for fast life could be indulged in. When the war between Prussia and Austria broke out Glasenap's regiment went to Bohemia, and he distinguished himself at Koniegratz and other places, and won the esteem of his superiors for his bravery and good judgment. After the war, when the regiment went back to Berlin, Glasenap plunged into fast life, and his father had more than once to pay his debts. At the opening of the Franco-Prussian war Glasenap was transferred to one of the regiments of the line, and won distinction at Metz, and afterward at many points on the way to Paris. At the close of the war, and when Glasenap had again reached Berlin, he fell among his old companions, and gave free rein to his passion for fast life. The result was that his father peremptorily refused to pay his bills, and then Glasenap got into such trouble with his creditors that he left home secretly and came to this country. He brought with him letters of introduction to several prominent men. But he was thrown upon his own resources and had to live moderately. He became acquainted with Dr. Morwitz, of the Philadelphia Demokrat, and through his influence was placed on the staff of the New-Yorker Journal.

A short time before the opening of the Centennial Exhibition Glasenap went to Philadelphia, and was given a position on the editorial staff of the Demokrat. After the Exhibition he went West and Southeled extensively. He took poor care of himself and of his reputation, and when he returned East found evil reports ahead of him. He reached this City about a year ago, and could not immediately secure literary work. He sold wines for a Beaver-street house on commission, but made a poor living at that. Eventually he secured some work on the Handel's Zeitung, but did not continue it long. Tuesday night last he went to the Centennial Hotel, in Chatham-street, and got a room. He had no baggage, and seemed anxious to conceal his identity. Yesterday morning, at 3 o'clock, he again went to the same hotel and requested to be shown at once to a room, as he had an important letter to write. The clerk told him there was no fire in the room at the time, and offered him the privileges of the office for writing. Glasenap accepted the offer, and wrote a long letter. He then went to the room assigned to him. At 11 o'clock the chamber-maid found his door open and, looking in, saw him lying on the outside of the bed. She thought his appearance singular, and informed the clerk, who went up, and, supposing from Glasenap's looks that he was ill, attempted to arouse him. Failing to do so, he became alarmed and notified the Police. They summoned an ambulance, but before it reached the place Glasenap was dead. The letter he had written was found at the head of the bed. It was addressed to Charles Bledel, No. 131 William-street, spoke of the writer's intention to destroy himself, and was otherwise incoherent. At the end it contained a request that his friends would see that his debts of honor were paid, and gave a list of them, suggesting that it be sent to his family. Coroner Wollman had the body removed to the Morgue. The name of the poison used by the suicide is not yet known, as he went to some pains to destroy the bottle and label after taking it. The body will be buried in Potter's Field, unless claimed by Glasenap's friends.

THE PLANETARY CONJUNCTION.

A BANK OF CLOUDS RENDERS ITS OBSERVATION UNSATISFACTORY.

While no material questions of physical or mathematical astronomy could possibly hinge on the conjunction of Jupiter, Venus, and the crescent moon, glimpses of which only were attainable last evening, owing to the dense bank of clouds lying low down in the western horizon, the probable brilliancy of the display was sufficient to entice many persons, armed with all sorts of instruments, to the highest house-tops in the City. Our professional masters of astronomy did not, however, trouble themselves with any attempts to observe the phenomenon, being sufficiently familiar with Jupiter and his satellites to care to examine them in cold weather. As the wind was strong and incessant at sunset and after, it was no boy's play to use a telescope, mounted in the ordinary manner, at a high elevation, except under the shadow of some friendly wall, to protect the tube from tremor. The sun setting at two or three minutes past 5 o'clock, and traveling in a path very oblique to the plane of the horizon, the long twilight was expected to offer a series of very interesting optical phenomena at this conjunction, Jupiter's banded disk looming brightly out of the red light of the sunset from 12° to 15° above the horizon, and the crescent moon lying faintly outlined against it, 10° higher up. Compared with what imagination had anticipated, the reality was thus very dull and disappointing. The view was not a lengthened one, nor was it very clear, the colored clouds through which the sun had just descended extending upward about six degrees. The situation of Venus and her disk could be dimly discerned a little below and to the south of the giant of the solar system. Higher up in the south-west, well above the cloud-bank whose edge obscured the two planets in conjunction, Saturn rode free of intervening mist. At the earliest moment, say about 5:18, a glimpse of the planets was caught and retained for a few moments. Jupiter setting about 6 o'clock, and the moon 34 minutes later. The interval between 5:30 and 6, which was generally selected as the best time for observation, did not prove a remunerative half-hour to those who were inclined to brave the cutting wind. The result was that everybody retired in disgust before the proper moment for the dropping of the curtain, a whiff of high air having rewarded their efforts, which was nearly all that could be expected of a phenomenon low down in the horizon after a recent storm. Happily, no questions of astronomy hinged upon observing the phenomenon, as would have been the case with an occultation, by which some data for determining the positions of the planets might have been recorded. On Sunday Saturn and the moon will be in conjunction, and on Friday next, directly after sunset, the moon will commence her journey across the Pleiades—a phenomenon commonly known as their occultation.

THE COUNTERFEITERS ARRAIGNED.

Ulrich and Cole, the counterfeiters who have been held in the Essex County (N. J.) Jail for several days on a charge of being engaged in counterfeiting a plate used in printing $100 Treasury notes, were arraigned before United States Commissioner Keasbey yesterday. William B. Guild, Jr., counsel for Cole, said that, with the permission of the Commissioner, his client would waive an examination. Mr. Keasbey said he had no desire to press the examination, and the prisoner was remanded. His wife was present during the proceedings. She is a woman of about 40, and and was elegantly dressed. Ulrich also waived an examination by advice of counsel, and he, too, was remanded. Before going back to jail he told an interesting story of his enlistment in this country for the Crimean Army, his transfer to Boston, hence to Halifax, and finally to England. He was one of the famous "Six Hundred," according to his own story, and was severely wounded in several places upon the head. After his return to New-York he fell in with Jim Colwert, a partner of Cole, who induced him to engrave a vignette which he did, without knowing what it was to be used for, after which he engraved a $5-note plate, from which notes were printed and sent to Hamburg. He also engraved a $50 plate. They printed in all about $250,000. The counterfeit notes were sold principally to emigrants coming to this country.

MINING SHARES ON THE STOCK-LIST.

The Governing Committee of the Stock Exchange have decided to admit to dealings on the Exchange the securities of all solvent mining companies, one of the conditions of approval of an application being that an expert appointed by the Exchange shall be permitted to investigate the books and mines of the applicants, the latter to pay his expenses. As a starter, the committee have placed upon the regular list the $10,000,000 of stock of the Homestead Mining Company, of Dakota. They have also admitted to the regular list the $1,200,000 of new 7 per cent. income bonds of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal Company and the $2,450,000 of new 7 per cent. income bonds of the Central Railroad of New-Jersey.

SUIT FOR BREACH OF PROMISE.

A young woman named Elizabeth Smith, who lives with her stepfather, Mr. Horatio Holden, at No. 1,253 Third-avenue, yesterday petitioned Judge Donohue, in the Supreme Court, Circuit, Part I., for the appointment of a guardian ad litem. She stated that she desired to begin a suit for breach of promise of marriage against Reuben W. Green, whom she charged with having, in August, 1877, pledged himself to her, and with having recently discarded his promise by marrying one Ada Smith, with whom he now lives in Bridgeport, Conn. Judge Donohue appointed Mr. Holden the guardian of the petitioner.

MISCELLANEOUS CITY NEWS

THE LATE JOHN BLAIR SCRIBNER.

HIS FUNERAL SERVICES NUMEROUSLY ATTENDED—REV. DR. VINCENT'S ADDRESS.

The funeral services over the remains of the late John Blair Scribner were numerously attended yesterday afternoon at the Church of the Covenant, Park-avenue and Thirty-fifth-street. Among those present at the church were representatives of nearly all the publishing houses, and many persons of literary distinction, including E. C. Stedman, Rev. Edward Eggleston, Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge, Col. Thomas W. Knox, Noah Brooks, A. D. F. Randolph, W. H. Appleton, Rev. Drs. Taylor and Chapin, Messrs. Blakeman and Ivison, George A. Leavitt, Henry Holt, Mr. Flagg, of E. P. Dutton & Co.; James Miller, Robert Carter, James Oakley, Mr. Maynard, of Clark & Maynard; Mr. Dick, of Dick & Fitzgerald, and Mr. Armstrong, of the late firm of Scribner, Armstrong & Co. All the employes of Charles Scribner's Sons were present, and occupied seats in the body of the church. After a brief prayer at the house by Rev. Dr. M. E. Vincent, the body was borne to the church at 2 P. M., the family of the young publisher, his brother-in-law, Mr. Walter Larned, of Chicago, and the following pall-bearers accompanying it thither: Dr. J. G. Holland, Whitelaw Reid, Roswell Smith, J. Henry Harper, Col. Alexander B. Crane, Edward L. Burlingame, Thomas Powell Fowler, and James R. Osgood. The casket, a rich one of rosewood, embellished with silver mountings, was deposited in front of the pulpit, and on its lid were placed two simple floral tributes. The services began with an invocation by Rev. Dr. Philip Schaff, and the singing of the hymn "Friend after friend departs." Rev. Dr. T. Shedd read a passage of Scripture, after which Rev. Dr. Vincent delivered an eloquent address. He said among other things:

It is much to be able to say of a young man, that his ideal of living has from the first contemplated an active and useful relation to society. In the conditions of society which have grown up here, too many youths have taken advantage of circumstances similar to his, to throw themselves upon the community as drones and dead weights, thus adding themselves to the dangerous classes; for every useless man is dangerous. He seemed to have a better ideal from the first. The example of a father whom he greatly honored, and who set his mark deeply upon this community by his high Christian character and contagious energy, seemed to have possessed him thoroughly. He had literary tastes, perhaps literary ambitions, and had made some progress in a course of liberal study; but at the death of his father he abandoned his college course and entered upon the business, where he felt that he would be himself and could give his undivided energies to master the every detail. The abandonment of distinctively literary pursuits for business is always a trial to one who is thoroughly in love with them. Whatever of this there was in his case was doubtless somewhat mitigated by the nature of his business, which kept him among books and literary associations; yet he was, during his business life, assiduous in his efforts to extend his knowledge and to broaden the culture. Books were the companions of his leisure. Not very long before his death he was speaking of a contemplated foreign tour, and even then, when the state of his health and his need of rest might have justified him in thinking only of his own enjoyment, he was making plans for others. He had a pride in the thought of the house retaining its old name, and of taking his father's position and developing his father's plans. Even those who feared that the burden would be too great for his strength could not withhold their sympathy from the honorable aspiration of a son to perpetuate a father's name and success. To Blair Scribner the position meant something more than the name. He let himself fully into it. He took his share of the actual burden cheerfully and enthusiastically. He might have carried an equal amount of enthusiasm and energy into a far different and less honorable channel, even in the conduct of business. Bad books pay. Shallow literature circulates more quickly and widely than good and noble literature, and these facts furnish a temptation to authors and publishers. He was true to the traditions of the house, and aimed to give the public not one page "which, dying, he would wish to blot." He was a conscientious man, not only in the great lines of business integrity, but in the details. He gone in the freshness of his manhood, his high aims unreached and his ambition unfulfilled. To his friends, said the preacher in conclusion, he leaves the legacy of an unblemished reputation. To himself he leaves a heritage in heaven, and carries with it, alike in its prosecution as in its sudden close, a lesson to the young men whose relations with him were so tender, so loyal, and genial. To his comrades, fired with like ambitions, competitors with him in the race for success, the speaker would say, draw near, and look upon the pale face, and see where honors and earthly rewards will lead.

After a prayer by Rev. Dr. Murray and the pronouncing of the benediction by Dr. Vincent, those present were permitted to view the body, which was interred in Greenwood Cemetery.

The employes of the firms of Charles Scribner's Sons and Scribner & Welford held a meeting at the Park-Avenue Hotel yesterday and adopted appropriate resolutions of respect and esteem for their late employer.

HOW TO VALUE IMPORTED GOODS.

THE NEW METHOD OF ASSESSING DUTIES PROPOSED BY THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

The Chamber of Commerce held a special meeting yesterday to discuss the report of the committee on Revenue Reforms presented at the last regular meeting and published in THE TIMES of the 3d inst. The report proposes to substitute home market values for foreign values in determining the dutiable values of imported goods. Mr. Jackson S. Schultz, Chairman of the committee, opened the discussion by stating at length the reasons which prompted the committee in proposing the change. He admitted that neither by the method suggested, nor by any other that can be devised, can smuggling be prevented, when exorbitant duties make this contraband business profitable. He thought, however, that the difficulties which have arisen during the past few years between the Government and the merchants must satisfy everybody that we cannot go along much further with our present methods. He described in detail the absurdities of the current system, and concluded that so real are its complications and so liable to permit, and even encourage, under-valuation, that honest importing at the present time is impossible, and very soon there will only remain the agents of foreign manufacturers to supply our consumers through jobbing houses. He then considered the question of substituting a specific for ad valorem duties, and claimed that it would be a vast improvement, but was of the opinion that a uniform duty on articles consumed alike by the rich and poor will never meet the approval of the people as represented in Congress. The various objections offered thus far to the proposed change were next detailed and answered, and the speaker gave it as his opinion that all that can be raised can be met by proper provisions of law, or by Treasury regulations. Mr. Schultz concluded as follows: "Home valuation is to be determined by the wholesale market value at a specified time. This value is applied to all invoices attacked by the Government. The consignee or owner must present a full descriptive invoice to the Collector of the port of his merchandise. He may estimate the value in this invoice. He may withhold all information except such as will aid the examiner in determining the intrinsic value of the goods. He may even withhold the trade-mark by which the goods are recognized in the market, for it is no intrinsic value that the Government has a right to levy duties, not on extrinsic. These belong to acquired character, and cannot be bought or sold like merchandise. There is no law or regulation requiring trade-marks to be attached to merchandise, and, therefore, evasion is no crime. The trade-marks may be withheld and put on with the consent of its owner after the goods have passed the Custom-house. This may be done under the present system, and would, no doubt, be more frequently done under a system of home valuation. But when once we come to understand and concede that foreign merchandise is to be judged by its intrinsic, rather than its extrinsic, value, all difficulty would disappear, and much of the injustice now inflicted under our present tariff laws would be avoided. No doubt this method of judging of value would render necessary a higher order of talent in our appraiser's department, but this has been needed even under our present system, and should not be looked upon as a misfortune. In Great Britain, where essential portions of the "home valuation" policy has prevailed, the non-exposure of actual invoices is looked upon as one of the features which recommends the system; and on reflection it will appear most desirable to avoid this exposure here. While, both in theory and by Treasury regulation, the employes of the service are enjoined not to expose the invoices to the examination of outside parties, we know practically that such exposures are common, and if any system can be devised that shall avoid the possibility of such an outrage, it certainly is to be commended. It will be perceived by those conversant with the present methods of determining dutiable value that if home valuation is substituted substantially on the plan here suggested, that most of the obstructed methods now employed will be entirely done away with. There will be no long list of imaginary values attached to invoices; no question of the name of the consignor. There need be no consular certificates; no oaths as to foreign cost or market value. All oaths now taken, both before and after entry, can be greatly modified, or altogether dispensed with. If bonds are required at all, they need be for no more than the dutiable value of the goods; but, under a proper system of home valuation, we are greatly in hopes to do away with all bonds, as we see no reason why bonds should be given for goods which go into consumption, first having paid the required duty in cash. In is otherwise with goods placed in bonded warehouse for the accommodation of the merchant, or transported in bond to interior Custom-houses. It is perfectly notorious that most of the present forms of entries of goods and the payment of duties were inaugurated and made necessary by a former system of credits, which were extended to the merchants on their transactions with the Government; and now that these credits have been discontinued, they appear unnecessary for the safety of the Government, as they are certainly onerous to the merchants."

In conclusion he said: "Your committee have not entered into the detail provisions of law or regulations that would be required to put this new method of collecting our revenue into operation. Whether the commissions allowed the importer over his estimate of market value should be 5 or 10 per cent. would depend upon the nature of the goods. If staple, like sugar and iron, the second judge that 5 per cent. would be proper. If fancy goods, like gloves and silks, then 10 per cent. Then, too, the question of estimating and allowing for damage would be one of those detail questions that could hardly be more complicated in the proposed than in our present methods. The expense of collecting the revenue under this system would be far less than at present. With the single exception of the Appraiser's Department, we should judge that one-half the office force could be dispensed with. The examiners and appraisers would require to be men of the highest standing and experience. But all we seek will be accomplished, if we direct attention to this reform as a practical measure. All matters of detail can well be left to Congress and the Secretary of the Treasury."

Considerable discussion followed, generally favorable to the proposed change, and when a vote was taken the report of the committee was unanimously adopted. Merchants and others interested are requested to send in objections and suggestions, and the committee will give them due consideration in the preparation of a bill which they intend to present to the next Congress for adoption.

ISAAC PERLSTEIN'S TRIAL.

BEGINNING OF THE DEFENSE IN THE GENERAL SESSIONS COURT.

The General Sessions Court room was crowded yesterday during the continuation of the trial of Isaac Perlstein, who is accused of attempting to burn a tenement-house full of human beings. The first witness called by Assistant District Attorney Rollins was Harvey P. Miller, a policeman detailed for duty at the Fire Department, who testified that he arrested the prisoner on Nov. 14, at No. 62 East Broadway, in company with Bernstein and Freeman; he searched Perlstein, and found on his person various memorandum-books and papers, which he handed to the Fire Marshal. Fire Marshal Sheldon was recalled, and identified the articles produced as those handed him by Officer Miller; the arrest of Perlstein had been made at his instigation, and the action of Firemen Perley and Dempsey had been carried out under his direction; witness had had a conversation with Perlstein on Nov. 14 at Police Head-quarters; after cautioning the prisoner that he need not say anything that would criminate himself, the latter made a statement which was read over to him before he signed it. The statement (produced) was identified by witness, and offered in evidence by Mr. Rollins.

Mr. Charles W. Brooke, counsel for the prisoner, here interposed, for the purpose of examining the witness. The Fire Marshal, in reply to his questions, stated that the prisoner had been brought from a cell at Police Head-quarters to the detectives' room, when about to be questioned in relation to the arson. He spoke to the prisoner as a man who was charged with the crime, but used no threats or inducements in order to extort the statement. Mr. Brooke objected to the evidence, but Judge Cowing admitted it. Mr. Rollins then read the statement of the prisoner, which set forth that he knew nothing whatever of the fire at No. 11 Ludlow-street, and had never been in that house. He denied any knowledge of, or acquaintance with, either Levy, Bernstein, or Freeman, but said he had met them frequently at Siegel's saloon, the alleged rendezvous of the gang. On cross-examination by Mr. Brooke, the Fire Marshal admitted that the statement of the prisoner was not in his exact words, but contained his answers written in narrative form.

Mr. Brooke called Fireman Charles H. Perley, a son of the Fire Commissioner, and had the three codefendants with the prisoner—Bernstein, Freeman, and Levy—placed at the bar for the purpose of being identified. After identifying Freeman, the latter, pointing his finger at Perley, said: "He ought to know me, because I kicked him out of mine house." Levy bore his identification meekly, but the third prisoner, Bernstein, became enraged and exclaimed, "Of course, he is one of the."

Assistant District Attorney Rollins to the witness—Did your acquaintanceship with the man Freeman commence in the way he has described?

Perley—Yes, Sir; the conduct bids me do so, sirrs.

The witness was further examined by Mr. Rollins, for the purpose of contradicting the statements in Perlstein's statement. Perley swore that on each of the three days succeeding the fire he had seen the prisoner at No. 62 East Broadway in company with Bernstein, Freeman, and Levy.

Gustav Smith, of the Insurance Patrol, was recalled by Mr. Rollins, for the purpose of showing the value of the goods burned in Levy's premises. Mr. Brooke objected, and the witness was withdrawn. Mr. Rollins then announced the close of the case for the prosecution.

Mr. Brooke, in moving that the court direct the jury to acquit the prisoner, stated his grounds. There was, he said, no proof tending to show any burning of the premises named in the first and second counts of the indictment as the dwelling-house of Isaac Kosnisburg, the testimony being solely directed to proving what had been done in the premises occupied in the ground floor by the insurance agent. In addition to this, the third count in the indictment, which charges Joseph Levy with having set fire to his own premises, describes no offense under the statute, there being no evidence that any person was in the premises at the time the act was committed. Mr. Brooke, in concluding his motion that the case be taken from the jury, argued that the prosecution had failed in proving whether the fire was accidental or premeditated.

Assistant District Attorney Rollins, in opposing the motion, said that it was sufficient, in order to comply with the requirements of the statute, to prove that the building in question had been used as a dwelling, and that particular building had been set on fire. Such proof, which, he claimed, he had produced, would be amply sufficient to sustain the indictment.

Judge Cowing, in rendering his decision, said that, anticipating the motion of Mr. Brooke, he had examined this question with great care, and would deny the motion of counsel.

Mr. Brooke, in opening the case for the defense, claimed that the evidence for the prosecution was weak, purely circumstantial, and in no way calculated to inculpate the prisoner. He would prove that the witnesses who had sworn for the prosecution were utterly mistaken in their identification of Perlstein. The prisoner, he would show, instead of being engaged in the perpetration of arson on the night of the fire at No. 11 Ludlow-street, was enjoying the society of his family in his own home, and knew nothing of the alleged burning.

GUMBLETON SEEKS MORE DELAY.

Artemas H. Holmes, the counsel for Mr. J. Adriance Bush in his proceeding to compel the County Clerk to exhibit his fees books, went before Judge Barrett, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday morning, to obtain the writ of peremptory mandamus, in accordance with the decision rendered on Wednesday. Judge Barrett at once signed the order, and it was sent to County Clerk Gumbleton, whose legal duty it is to prepare the precept directed to himself. Mr. Holmes followed the order to the County Clerk's office to obtain the precept, and to make an immediate demand to be allowed to examine Mr. Gumbleton's books. He was there referred from one clerk to another in search of the papers, until he had wasted about 15 minutes in fruitless labor. In the meantime the counsel for the County Clerk went before Judge Barrett and asked for a stay of proceedings, which was promptly refused. They then resorted to Judge Donohue, in the Supreme Court, Circuit, Part I., and their application was successful. An order was issued directing the relator, Mr. Bush, to show cause on the first Monday of February why a stay of proceedings pending an appeal to the Supreme Court, General Term, should not be granted. On learning of this order, Mr. Holmes applied to Judge Donohue to amend it by making it returnable to-day, which application was granted.

CIVIL SERVICE IN THE POST OFFICE.

Superintendent Gayler and Inspector Gardner on Wednesday last conducted a civil service examination in the Post Office to determine the successorship, by promotion, to the Chief Clerkship of Station B, a branch office. Chief Clerk Paige, of Station E, died recently, and the Chief Clerk of Station B was promoted to the vacancy, the former being a more important station. Twenty competitors entered the examination, and Sixth Assistant Postmaster-General James E. Ward and Postmaster-elect Pelton, in December, 1877, under a resolution of its Directors, its liabilities are small in amount, and the assets are more than sufficient to pay them off.

The fourth of a series of entertainments to the homeless boys of the East Side was given last night at the Rivington-Street branch of the Children's Aid Society. The programme consisted of recitations and singing by Miss Mary E. Cherry, piano solos by Miss Agnew, and humorous songs by Mr. E. L. Lentilhon. The reception hall was filled with an enthusiastic company of newsboys and bootblacks, who applauded vigorously, especially when any of the performers referred to labor or restitation. The entertainment closed with a feast of ice-cream and cake, contributed by Messrs. W. L. and A. L. Smith.

BROOKLYN.

Mary Eldridge, aged 34 years, of No. 70 Sullivan-street, was found dead on the floor of her bedroom, at noon yesterday, by her son Julius, who had just returned from school. Death resulted from apoplexy.

A contract has been made by the Board of City Works with George S. Glendening to clean the sewers and sewer basins of the city for one year at $8,500. There are 312 miles of sewers and 5,800 basins.

Mary Mindler, residing corner of Lorraine and Clinton streets, was severely bitten on the arm and leg by a bloodhound owned by William Schenck, who lived close by. The injured woman was taken to St. Peter's Hospital.

A recent inspection of the Ridgewood pumping station demonstrated the fact that the machinery was so neglected by the employes superseded some time ago by competent mechanics, appointed by the present Board of City Works, that if the change had been delayed a little longer a serious accident must have occurred, which would have deprived the city of water for days.

Charities Commissioners Henry and Shipman have discovered that the county is being extensively swindled in the matter of the contracts for supplies to the public institutions at Flatbush. The resignation of A. J. (better known as "Jumpy") Michaels, a well-known Ring Democrat, who has occupied for years the position of Inspector of Supplies at the county buildings, was demanded at once and given without a moment's delay.

John Butler, a colored man, fell from a second-story window of the house No. 59 Remsen-street, last evening, to the street. In his descent he struck against the iron railing surrounding the area, a spike of which entered his abdomen. Butler was removed to the Long Island College Hospital. His injuries will probably prove fatal. Butler was standing on the sill of the window, cleaning the glass, at the time of his fall.

Timothy Riley, of No. 145 Siegel-street, and George Gilmore, of No. 225 Ellery-street, were found in the possession of a horse and sleigh, yesterday morning, by Officer Hirschoff, of the Sixth Precinct, for which they could not account. The men were arrested, and it was subsequently ascertained that they had stolen the sleigh from in front of a saloon, where it had been left by Frederick Wise, of No. 23 Lorimer-st. Wise, the owner, while he went inside to transact some business. Riley and Gilmore were held for the Grand Jury by Justice Guck.

LONG ISLAND.

Some time ago it was announced that Mrs. Appolonia Gunser, widow of John Gunser, who was murdered at East Williamsburg on the night of the 13th of May, 1877, had been married to a wealthy grocerynan named Henry Dukin. Dukin, after living with Mrs. Gunser about one week, abandoned her. As various times his wife endeavored to effect a reconciliation with him, but failed, and now cross suits for divorce are pending between them.

At an early hour yesterday morning burglars broke into the Southern Railroad Depot at Springfield, Town of Jamaica, and stole a few articles. The thieves then visited the store of Charles Smith, a short distance from the depot, where they forced an entrance through a rear door. They stole from the store, in which also the Post Office is kept, $40 in postage-stamps and cigars to the value of $10. The thieves then effected an entrance to Mr. Smith's dwelling apartments, which they ransacked and carried off several articles of clothing. Mr. Smith's loss is about $300.

WESTCHESTER COUNTY.

Coroner Schirmer yesterday began, at White Plains, an inquest on the body of Joseph Jackson, the colored man who died on Tuesday night from a pistol-shot wound inflicted upon him the night before by William Harris, in that village. By the testimony of the physicians who made the autopsy, it appears that the ball cut the right jugular vein and death would have sooner resulted but for coagulation of blood at the point of incision. The inquest is to be continued.

NEW-JERSEY.

Nicholas Kuebbe, of Hoboken, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Whitehead yesterday charged with smuggling tobacco, cigars, and snuff. The examination was postponed until Tuesday next, and in the meantime the accused was admitted to bail in $4,000.

The City of Paterson is supplied with water by a private corporation, and, as the 10-year contract expires next year, the project of the city's building new works is again agitated. The city's annual rental now is about $18,000.

Danner, who is walking, at the Paterson

The New-York Times.

VOL. XXVIII.....NO. 8541. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JANUARY 25, 1879. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

WHO SHALL BE COLLECTOR?

THE COMMITTEE VOTE TO REPORT IN GEN. ARTHUR'S FAVOR.

STRONG POINTS MADE IN THE CLOSING PORTIONS OF GEN. ARTHUR'S REPLY TO MR. SHERMAN'S CHARGES — THE COMMITTEE AGREE TO REPORT IN FAVOR OF REJECTING MERRITT'S CONFIRMATION.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The New-York Custom-house cases were this morning under consideration again by the Senate Committee on Commerce, and the reading of Collector Arthur's answer to the Sherman charges was concluded. The close of the communication was quite as effective as was its opening. In regard to the Secretary's charge that the Collector, influenced by political considerations, appointed incompetent men to office, the answer makes an unqualified denial, and states that the only purely political appointments made in the Custom-house during Gen. Arthur's administration, were made at the request of the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, who, it is alleged, frequently wrote to the Collector in the name of the President for places in the Custom-house. Further than this, the answer sets forth that a number of the candidates so pressed for appointment by the President were rejected because they were unable to pass the rigid examination to which all applicants for position in the Custom-house were subjected. In addition, the answer declares—what is well known to be a fact—that, when he was suspended Gen. Arthur received from the Secretary of the Treasury the warmest assurances that no fault could be found with him as a public officer, and that if he desired it, he [the Secretary] would gladly write him a letter to that effect.

After the reading of the answer had been concluded, the Senators present—Messrs. Conkling, Spencer, McMillan, Jones, of Nevada, Gordon, Ransom, and Dennis—were enjoined to the strictest secrecy, and this evening great difficulty has been experienced in obtaining trustworthy information regarding the proceedings. It is known, however, and can be stated definitely, that after some unimportant discussion, the committee, without a contending vote, agreed to a report in favor of rejecting the nomination of Acting Collector Merritt. Senator Randolph was absent with the Teller committee in South Carolina, and, of course, did not vote. It is understood, however, that he is paired with Senator Patterson. As to the action of the other Democrats on the committee, it is only known definitely that they did not offer any objection to the adoption of the report against Merritt, but it is stated on what seems to be good authority, that they declined to bind themselves by voting in favor of it. There is hardly a doubt, however, that at least two of them will, when the report is presented to the Senate, vote with the majority of their committee.

There is known to be some difference of opinion in regard to the merits of the case as far as it relates to Surveyor Graham, and there is a probability that he will be confirmed. In regard to Gen. Merritt, however, the committee is practically unanimous. There was no executive session of the Senate to-day, and an effort is now being made to have the injunction of secrecy removed and the whole matter considered in open Senate. If this effort fails there is hardly a doubt that the long-pending contest will be settled in executive session on Tuesday next.

THE PROGRESS OF LEGISLATION.

SPECIAL ASSIGNMENTS MADE BY THE HOUSE — INDICATIONS THAT BUSINESS WILL NOW BE PUSHED—THE FREE SHIPPING BILL ABANDONED.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Several special assignments for the consideration of pending business were made by the House to-day, which may be regarded as an indication that the work of the session will be vigorously pushed forward, and after next week it is probable night sessions will be held regularly. Friday and Saturday nights of next week have been assigned for the consideration of private bills. The bill for the erection of a building for the accommodation of the Congressional Library is fixed as a special order for Saturday, Feb. 1. The Census bill is made a special order for Tuesday, Feb. 10, and Wednesday night next is set apart for the consideration of reports from the Committee on Commerce. This committee has decided to abandon the bill to issue American registers to foreign-built ships purchased by citizens of the United States, for the reason that there is no chance for its passage at the present session. The Committee on Ways and Means is anxious to obtain another day to make reports, but is not likely to succeed. To-day an unsuccessful effort was made to have a day set apart for the consideration of the bill readjusting the tariff on sugars. The indications are that the committee will be unable to get this bill before the House. It was adopted two weeks ago by the Committee on Ways and Means, but is opposed by the four most prominent members of the committee — Messrs. Wood, Kelley, Garfield, and Banks. This division in the committee will insure the defeat of the bill, even should its friends succeed in getting it before the House.

POSTAL LAW AMENDMENTS.

PARLIAMENTARY QUESTIONS RAISED BY THE HOUSE ON THE POST ROUTE BILL—THE SENATE APPOINTS A COMMITTEE TO INQUIRE IN REGARD TO ITS RIGHTS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The Post Route Bill, which was passed at the last session, and upon which the two houses were unable to adjust their differences, occupied the entire session of the Senate to-day. The amendments made by the Senate to this bill included the Brazilian subsidy and the franking privilege, and changed the rate of postage on foreign books in accordance with the recent postal treaties. To these amendments there was decided opposition in the House, but particularly to the subsidy. It was claimed by the House conferees that the amendment touching the postal rates changed the Revenue laws, and therefore was an invasion of the constitutional right of the House of originating measures of this character. The real objection, however, on the part of the House conferees was to the subsidy clause, and a point was raised on the postal clause because of the parliamentary advantage which such an objection would give. Speaker Randall, who is strongly opposed to all subsidies, sustained the points raised against the Senate amendments, and the House conferees were instructed not to consider the amendment made by the Senate on postal rates on foreign books. In consequence of this position on the part of the House no agreement was reached, and the bill came up to-day in the Senate on a motion to appoint a new conference committee with certain instructions. After several hours spent in discussion, the entire matter was referred to a select committee of five Senators to inquire as to the prerogatives of the respective houses as to amendments of the character alluded to, and whether it is competent for the Senate to instruct a conference committee.

THE ALABAMA CONTEMPT CASE.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEY MAYER AND MARSHAL TURNER RELEASED—EFFECT OF THE PROMPT ACTION OF THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—A short time ago a question of jurisdiction arose in Alabama between the United States and State officers, which resulted in the arrest of United States Marshal Turner and United States Attorney Mayer, the former being committed for contempt, and the latter held to answer for contempt of the authority of the State court. It appears that in a trial before the United States court certain ballot-boxes were obtained by the United States Marshal and Attorney, and placed in charge of the court. Subsequently, the same cases, which were pending in the United States court, or cases similar to them, were taken before the State court, and a process was served upon Marshal Turner and Attorney Mayer to produce the ballot-boxes. To this process answer was made that the boxes in question were not in possession or control of the respondents, but were in custody of the United States court. The answer was deemed insufficient and unsatisfactory by the State court, and an order was issued for the arrest of the two United States officers. Turner was committed to jail for contempt, and Mayer was held to answer upon the same charge. Upon the facts being reported to the Attorney-General, an order was issued to apply to the United States court for a writ of habeas corpus to have the two officers taken before that court. The Attorney-General expressed a determination to defend the United States officers and to free them from the arrest of the State court, and sent Solicitor-General Phillips to Alabama to attend to the matter as his immediate representative. The decided action of the Attorney-General seems to have had a good effect upon the State officers, and to-day information was received at the Department of Justice that Marshal Turner and Attorney Mayer had been discharged from custody, and the charge of contempt withdrawn. Solicitor-General Phillips is now on the way to Alabama, in pursuance of the instructions of the Attorney-General.

CONGRESSIONAL TOPICS.

SENATOR PATTERSON CONTEMPLATING ANOTHER ATTACK ON THE ADMINISTRATION—DEMOCRATIC OFFICER WITH WHOM THE PRESIDENT IS SATISFIED.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—It seems to have been settled that the contest between Messrs. Corbin and Butler, of South Carolina, for a seat in the Senate, will be considered and acted upon within the next two or three weeks. In an interview had with him to-day regarding the matter, Senator Patterson stated that when the case came up he would vote as he had previously done—in favor of Butler. During the discussion which will be brought about by the contest, he purposes making an exhaustive speech, in which he promises to denounce the Hayes Administration in unmeasured terms. He says that, compared with his former memorable effort in the direction indicated, the coming speech will be as a drop of sulphuric acid compared to a cart-load of dynamite.

Alarmed by the reports of a prospective change among United States officers in the South, and especially in Georgia, Col. Fitzsimmons, the distinguished Democrat who was recently made United States Marshal for that State, has sent a friend or two to Washington to look after his interests. Senator Gordon has also interested himself in the matter, and to-day called upon the President and asked him if it was true that he intended to remove Col. Fitzsimmons. The President replied that he had no intention of interfering with the Georgia Marshal; that he had no fault to find with his administration, but on the contrary, regarded him as one of the best Federal officers in the South.

The geological and geographical surveys of the State of Colorado, which have been conducted by Prof. Hayden for several years past, have been completed, and the value of the work for the advancement of science and the development of the mining and agricultural interests of the State have been acknowledged by the Legislature of Colorado in a joint resolution, passed Jan. 14, an engrossed and certified copy of which was received by Prof. Hayden to-day.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24, 1879.

The receipts from internal revenue to-day were $284,163 80, and from Customs, $205,482 98.

The subscriptions to the 4 per cent. loan since yesterday's report have amounted to $3,795,100.

Dr. Linderman, Director of the Mint, is sinking slowly. His physicians have no hopes whatever of his recovery, but say that he may last a day or two.

Gen. Sherman will start South on his tour of inspection to-morrow. Gen. Van Vleit will join Gen. Sherman at Atlanta, though he will not be with him in an official capacity.

The Controller of the Currency has called for a report showing the condition of national banks at the close of business on Wednesday, Jan. 1, 1879. The report is called for on that date for the purpose of obtaining, as nearly as can be ascertained, the condition of the banks on the day provided by law for the resumption of specie payments.

The Secretary of the Treasury has issued a circular to Consular officers, requiring them, in accordance with the Consular Appropriation act, to furnish to the Secretary of the Treasury, or to such Customs officer as he may direct, as often as may be required, the prices current of all articles of merchandise usually exported to the United States from the port or place in which the Consular officer is stationed.

The bill introduced to-day by Senator McPherson to extend the limits of the port of New-York is a copy of the bill introduced in the House by Mr. Hardenbergh transferring to the New-York collection district all that part of Hudson County, N. J., which is now within the Newark district. The Assistant Collector at Jersey City, authorized by section 2,535 of the Revised Statutes, is to have power to enter and clear vessels, &c., under such instructions as he shall receive from the Collector of the Port of New-York.

The House Committee on Public Lands today adopted a resolution by a vote of 6 to 3 that the Chairman be requested to prepare a bill to be reported to the House referring all claims to the Pancho Grande Quicksilver Mines to the Court of Claims, in order to determine the ownership of the property, and that the Attorney-General of the United States appear before said court in behalf of the Government. The above action is intended to settle the question of ownership as between Mr. McGarrahan and the New-Idria Company and the Government.

The bill to reduce and reorganize the Army and the bill to make rules for the government and regulation of the land forces of the United States, introduced by Mr. Burnside to-day, are but little more than a revision of the "Burnside army bill." The first of the two bills is that portion relating to organization, appointments, staff details, and assignments, military instruction at colleges and universities, and the retired list, with sundry amendments; and the second contains the remaining portions of the original bill without alteration. The first bill contains 59 sections and covers 30 pages, the second 665 sections and covers 195 pages.

The first of the two Presidential Messages transmitted to the House to-day related to the claim of the Choctaws and Chickasaws to additional remuneration, in accordance with the provisions of the treaty of 1855. It was accompanied by sundry documents relating to the subject, and a recommendation from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs that the questions involved be submitted to Congress for action. The second Message was in reply to a resolution calling for the papers and documents pertaining to the claim of J. C. Landreau against the Republic of Peru, for an alleged violation of contract with regard to certain deposits of guano by him discovered. He asserts that he is entitled, under a Peruvian concession, to one-third of the value of such deposits, but being unable to enforce his claim in the Peruvian Courts, he prays for the interposition of this Government in his behalf.

The bill introduced to-day by Senator McPherson, "To incorporate the Spanish-American Commercial Company," names as incorporators Joseph Dilworth, George A. Berry, Henry Lloyd, William Frazier, William B. Negley, and Richard E. Bread, and such others as may be associated with them, and proposes to give the company a national charter "to manufacture, purchase, store, sell, ship, transport, and deal in goods, wares, and merchandise, and to contract for, build and maintain ships, docks, wharves, warehouses and grain elevators, with power to purchase, hold, mortgage, and convey real and personal property, and to do and perform all things necessary to carry the provisions of this act into execution." Section 2 provides that the company may, under the authority of any Government at peace and amity with the United States, engage in public works which may be necessary to develop and increase the lawful business and commerce thereof, and to facilitate trade with the United States, having respect to all laws and foreign treaties of the United States. The capital stock of the company is fixed at $10,000,000, and the principal office of the company is to be in the City of New-York.

TURKEY AND AFGHANISTAN

LATEST PHASES OF THEIR TROUBLES WITH THEIR NEIGHBORS.

RUSSIA ADVISED NOT TO HURRY THE EVACUATION OF ADRIANOPLE—RUSSIAN VIEW OF THE AFGHANISTAN CAMPAIGN—THE BULGARIAN CONSTITUTION — TURKEY'S INTERNAL MATTERS.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 24.—The Golos complains of the delay in the signing of the definitive treaty between Russia and Turkey, advises the Russian Government not to hurry about the evacuation, and says that Russia's opponents are intriguing to delay the settlement of the Eastern Roumelian questions until the departure of the Russian Army. "It is therefore advisable," says the Golos, "that the troops should remain at Adrianople until April, so that the Porte may still feel the influence of their presence when the result of the election for a Prince of Bulgaria is declared."

The Golos, in another article, says: "England is de facto sovereign in Afghanistan, and has every chance for carrying through her plans in Asiatic Turkey."

The St. Petersburg Gazette says that Yakoob Khan has fled from Afghanistan.

According to trustworthy information, Shere Ali will not come to St. Petersburg, but will remain in Tashkend.

TIRNOVA, Jan. 24.—The Constitution for Bulgaria has been ratified by the Czar of Russia, and has arrived here. It will be translated into the Bulgarian language and communicated to the foreign Consuls and Bulgarian Assembly. The time consumed in the translation of the Constitution will probably retard the meeting of the Assembly to the 6th or 10th of February, when it will be opened by Prince Dondoukoff Korsakoff, the Russian Governor of Bulgaria.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 24.—The Bulgarian Militia in the Balkan districts have been rearmed.

Negotiations have been commenced between the Porte and Austria on the question of the occupation of Novi-Bazar.

The French Government having represented to the Porte the necessity of the early arrival of the Ottoman Commissioner at Adrianople, the Porte has sent the required maps and instructions to Mukhtar Pasha, with orders to proceed to Aino, the place finally appointed for the meeting of the Greek Frontier Commission, as soon as possible.

VIENNA, Jan. 24.—A special dispatch from Cettinje to the Political Correspondence says: "Since the Turkish Commissioners arrived at Podgoritza the prospects for a pacific surrender of the territory ceded to Montenegro have materially improved."

LONDON, Jan. 25.—The Standard's Berlin dispatch says it is reported that Austria has informed the powers that she will not forego the right to occupy Novi-Bazar, but will not exceed the boundaries fixed by the Berlin Congress.

THE FRENCH REPUBLIC.

A DENIAL OF THE REPORT THAT M. DUBORT HAS RESIGNED FROM THE MINISTRY—MACMAHON'S THREATENED RESIGNATION—THE AMNESTY TO COMMUNISTS.

PARIS, Jan. 24.—The Havas Agency utterly denies the resignation of M. Teisserenc du Bort, Minister of Agriculture and Commerce, and says that his appointment to the Governorship of the Bank of France was discussed, but that the post being otherwise filled his resignation is not now contemplated.

The manager of the Lanterne (newspaper) has been sentenced to three months' imprisonment, and to pay a fine of 2,000 francs, for libeling Government officers.

It is said that President MacMahon told M. Grévy, President of the Chamber of Deputies, that he would resign should the Chamber of Deputies impeach the De Broglie Cabinet.

It is stated that Gen. Davoust will be appointed Chief of the General Staff of the Ministry of War.

Three transports will be sent next month to bring the pardoned Communist convicts from New-Caledonia.

VERSAILLES, Jan. 24.—Before the adjournment of the Chamber of Deputies to-day, the Minister of Public Instruction presented a bill making primary education obligatory after Jan. 1, 1880. The Chamber adjourned over to Tuesday next. The motion in favor of amnesty will be presented next week.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—A Paris dispatch to the Standard says a youth has been arrested at Lille for threatening to assassinate Gambetta. The threat was a mere foolish attempt to extort money.

The budget for 1880 was presented to the Chamber of Deputies yesterday. It estimates a surplus of £66,000.

The Paris correspondent of the Times says M. Renan and Victor Lefranc are mentioned as candidates for the vacant life Senatorship, and that the latter has the best chance.

THE PLAGUE IN ASTRACHAN.

MEASURES TO PREVENT ITS SPREAD BEING DEVISED.

VIENNA, Jan. 24.—The New Freie Presse states that the German and Austrian delegates have agreed to propose to the International Sanitary Commission, which met to-day, the immediate adoption of the following measures: The dispatch of doctors to the infested districts in Russia to study the character, progress, and local extension of the plague; the complete prohibition of importation of all merchandise from the infected region, and certain articles coming from any portion of Russia; and, finally, a quarantine of 20 days at all the Eastern and South-eastern frontier stations against all persons coming from the infected districts.

The Austrian Government intends introducing a bill in the Reichsrath for meeting the expenses of precautionary measures against the plague.

At the conference of the International Sanitary Commission to-day, at which Germany, Austria, and Hungary were represented, the measures to prevent the plague proposed by the German and Austrian delegates were in substance adopted. The regulations relative to imports from Russia are slightly less stringent than the programme reported provides, but the commission resolved, in the event of the spread of the epidemic, to close the frontier.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 24.—An official messenger from Astrachan states that there have been no cases of plague at Wetlianka since the 9th inst.

CURRENT FOREIGN TOPICS.

THE SUPPOSED PIRATICAL STEAMER—ICE-BLOCKED RIVERS—AFFAIRS AT THE VATICAN—A ROYAL RUSSIAN WEDDING.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The owners of the ship Ralston, whose Captain is credited with the letter to the Admiralty published yesterday, reporting suspicious acts of an unknown steamer 50 miles west of Fastnet, announce their conviction that the affair is either a hoax or a delusion.

Steam-boat traffic on the Thames is again interrupted by floating ice. A dispatch from Bremen says: "There is considerable drift ice in the river, but communication between here and Bremerhaven is not much troubled."

The Globe learns from Cronstadt that 2,000 workmen have been discharged from the Nicolaieff Dock-yard, in pursuance of the economic policy now prevailing in most of the Russian naval establishments.

The Daily Telegraph's Paris dispatch says: "It is rumored that Mgr. Roncetti, the Apostolic Internuncio, who lately rendered good service at Rio de Janeiro, is in accord with the conciliatory views prevailing at the Vatican, and will shortly replace Mgr. Meglia, the Apostolic Nuncio here. It is also hinted that the Pope intends changing the representatives of the Vatican at Vienna, Lisbon, and Madrid."

The striking operatives of the Blackburn Cotton Mills have resumed work at the former rates of wages.

The United States fregate Constitution has been repaired and taken out of dock preparatory to starting for home.

An additional inquiry into the loss of the steamer Pommerania has been begun before the Hamburg Maritime Board. The evidence so far is favorable to the officers of the Pommerania as regards the brilliancy of her lights and the observance of the rule of the road.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 24.—The Grand Duchess Anastasia, daughter of the Grand Duke Michael, was married to-day to Prince Frederick of Mecklenburg-Schwerin at the Winter Palace with grand ceremonies. The city is illuminated to-night. Te Deums were sung in all the churches. The bells will continue to be rung for three days.

MADRID, Jan. 24.—It is officially announced that the gendarmerie have seized 30 muskets and a Republican flag and seal in the town of Reus, in Catalonia, and arrested three prisoners.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 24.—A pernicious fever is causing great mortality among the inhabitants of the Rhodope district.

PARIS, Jan. 24.—Snow is still falling here.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—At Preston 300 more mill operatives have struck work. At Ashton-under-Lyne the cotton manufacturers yesterday resolved to reduce the weavers' wages 5 per cent. The notices of the reduction will expire on the 14th of February. The master spinners of the same districts will hold a general meeting on Tuesday to consider the question of the spinners' wages.

A steamer, supposed to be the Healeden, Capt. Rooke, last reported at Havre, from New-Orleans, has been much damaged by collision at Rouen.

ENGLISH MARKET REVIEWS.

CONDITION OF THE LONDON MONEY MARKET AND THE LIVERPOOL COTTON AND GRAIN MARKETS DURING THE PAST WEEK.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The Times, in its financial article this morning, says: "The Bank of England's return yesterday is unsatisfactory. It indicates a further considerable withdrawal of notes. The proportion of the reserve to the liabilities is increased in consequence of the reflux and the importation of coin and bullion, but the amount of the reserve shows a slight decrease in consequence of the increase of the note circulation. It is a curious sign of the disordered condition of credit to find money almost unlendable at the same time that notes continue to go into circulation. There is no business demand for them. Their withdrawal is merely an indication of popular distrust or of the prudence of other banks. In this sense we might say that several millions of the £33,243,000 now nominally in circulation is really a part of the reserve, being money in the possession of the banks.

"There was an active inquiry for bar silver on Thursday, but the complete absence of supplies prevented business. The demand was principally for India. Early in the day, 50½ pence per ounce was quoted; later, 50⅛ pence, and, finally, 50⅜ to 50⅝ pence was given as the nearest price. It seems to be the current opinion that Germany will not sell under 51 pence per ounce."

Silver is quoted to-day at 51 pence per ounce.

LIVERPOOL, Jan. 24.—This week's circular of the Liverpool Cotton Brokers' Association says: "There was considerable business in cotton in the early part of the week, and prices advanced, but since Tuesday the market has been quiet, and quotations generally are as at last week's report. American advanced early in the week from ⅛ to ¼ penny, but the tone is now quieter. Quotations generally are unchanged. In Sea Island there was a good demand during the past fortnight, and prices were a half-penny higher. Futures were a shade to sixteenth higher on Friday, with considerable business, and advanced 1-16 to 3-32 on Saturday, when the improvement was maintained; since then they have been weak, and the whole advance was gradually lost, the market closing steady at last Thursday's prices."

A leading grain circular says: "Scarcely any change is noticeable in the wheat markets of the Kingdom, which generally maintain previous rates, although the demand is far from active. The number of cargoes off coast has been reduced to seven. Several have gone to British destinations, and some to the Continent. Those arriving meet with limited inquiry, sellers asking the late prices. The same may be said with regard to parcels for shipment and on passage. On the spot a fair business was done in wheat, sellers accepting rather less money for Californian, but for Winter fall prices were obtainable. Corn is held for an advance, in all positions. At this market to-day the demand for wheat was moderate, the red American about supporting Tuesday's prices. In Californian the turn was in favor of buyers. Flour was unchanged. Corn was rather higher, but the demand was disappointing, and the market closes only a shade over Tuesday's currencies."

TRENOR W. PARK'S TOWN BONDS.

TROY, N. Y., Jan. 24.—The towns of Berlin, Petersburg, and Stephentown, in Rensselaer County, and Bennington, Vt., issued bonds to the amount of $500,000 in 1865 to aid in the construction of the Harlem Extension Railroad. Nearly all the bonds were taken by Trenor W. Park, and it is asserted that Park assured the townspeople that all that was asked was a loan of credit, and that interest and principal would be paid promptly by himself and the company. Interest has not been paid in several years, and Park sued the towns. In the case of Berlin, tried before the United States Court to-day, Judge Wallace presiding, the Judge directed the jury to find a verdict for Park and against Berlin of $9,000. A stay of 30 days was granted, and the case will go to the United States Supreme Court, which, it is said, has never passed upon such a case.

RESTORED TO THE MINISTRY.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 24.—The East Hanover Presbytery to-day, by a vote of 15 to 6, removed the sentence of suspension from Dr. E. T. Baird, late Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Publication, who was suspended last year for alleged irregularities in connection with funds of the concern, and restored him to the Gospel ministry. The grounds for this action was that the Presbytery finds that Dr. Baird has made a distinct and penitent acknowledgement of the moral wrong done by him, and that he expresses penitent sorrow for the great injury to the cause of Christ and the Church resulting therefrom.

CANADIAN BANK STOCKS RECOVERING.

MONTREAL, Jan. 24.—The reaction in bank stocks to-day is most noticeable in the Consolidated Bank, which sprung from 46, the closing price of yesterday, to 51, at which it closed at this morning's board. The Bank of Montreal appreciated 1 per cent., and other bank stocks fully recovered what they lost the previous day. The panicky feeling has given way, and more confidence is felt in the market.

AN EXAMPLE FOR PUBLIC OFFICERS.

FREEHOLD, N. J., Jan. 24.—The Grand Jury, at its present term, having censured the practice of the Board of Freeholders of charging the county with rations and forage on their days of meeting, in accordance with an old custom, but without the sanction of law, at the meeting of the board at this place on Monday last each member paid his own bill.

DAMAGES FOR SIX BROKEN PROMISES.

FREEHOLD, N. J., Jan. 24.—In the case of Abigail Morris against Capt. Leonard Seely, of Red Bank, for damages for six breaches of promise of marriage from 1870 to 1878, during which time three children have been born to her and two suits for damages settled, the jury to-day awarded the plaintiff $1,100.

TWO PRISONERS ESCAPE FROM JAIL.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 24.—About 7 o'clock last night, as Jailer Rodgers entered the corridor of the jail at Shelbyville, Ky., to lock up the prisoners for the night, he was struck in the face by a lump of coal. "Bill" Owsley, held for "Klukluxing," and William Read, a confidence operator, escaped. The jailer fired at them, but without effect.

A LABORER BLOWN TO PIECES.

TROY, N. Y., Jan. 24.—A laboring man employed in the Port Henry Iron Mines was blown to atoms yesterday by the premature explosion of a blast. He leaves a wife and nine children.

DID NOT WANT THE OFFICE.

BALLSTON, N. Y., Jan. 24.—Elisha G. Morse declined the office of County Treasurer to-day, and Stephen C. Medbery, Republican, of this place, was appointed.

COURT OF APPEALS.

ALBANY, Jan. 24.—The following is the Court of Appeals day calendar for Monday, Jan. 27: Nos. 38, 35, 36, 18, 45, 46, 34, 7.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Jan. 24.—Walter Blair, of Philadelphia, who fell from a train on the Pennsylvania Road, near this city, on Thursday, died to-day.

SHREVEPORT, La., Jan. 24.—In making up a train here, to-day, two cars jumped the track, instantly killing Henry Wheaton, son of the Clerk of the Caddo Parish Court.

GENERAL TELEGRAPH NEWS

SITTING BULL ASKS FOR PEACE.

MESSENGERS SENT TO ASK FOR TERMS—THE CHIEFS PROMISE TO PUNISH THOSE WHO COMMIT DEPREDATIONS—SITTING BULL TIRED OF WAR.

CHICAGO, Jan. 24.—Reference was made yesterday to the fact that two of Sitting Bull's emissaries had recently met Col. Wood, of the Eleventh Infantry, United States Army, at Fort Bennett, Dakota, and communicated to him the wishes of that chief in regard to a return to the United States. Gen. Sheridan has just received Col. Wood's official report concerning this meeting. These runners who came into the fort were Sioux, called Black Wolf and The Fox. They reached Fort Bennett on Jan. 10, and left the main hostile camp a month ago. They reported that a day or two before they came away a council was held. All the chiefs and leading men were present, among them Sitting Bull. This Indian said: "When I look back southwest from here, I see my country where I formerly lived. I long to be back there again. I find that warring is a very bad thing. By that I lost my country and caused my people a great deal of suffering. From this day on I want to quit making war on the whites. I hope to quit it forever—now and forever. I hope to have no more trouble with the whites, and I hope to make peace." They do not remember all he said, but that is about the substance of it. His speech was well received by the council. Other chiefs spoke in about the same strain.

Sitting Bull then proposed to send runners to the different agencies to find out on what terms the Indians could come in. This was agreed to by the other chiefs; there was no opposition. Sitting Bull and Big Road then selected 13 messengers from the different bands. Each was told to go to the agency to which his band belonged. All received the same instructions from the council, which were to find out the conditions under which they could return to their agencies, to tell nothing except what they were told to tell, and to bring back such messages as they should receive from the authorities there. Sitting Bull was very anxious to let all know, and to let the "Great Father" know, that he wished to make peace.

The two runners further said to Col. Wood: "The Indians desire to return to the agencies to which they belong. There is no game in the British possessions, and that is the reason we moved over the line. We all moved over about two and a half months ago. There is more game on this side, particularly between the Missouri and the Yellowstone. The Indians are suffering a great deal for want of food. We stopped war because we were starving. That is the reason the council was called together. I have attended all the main councils held in our present camp. The feeling expressed in all these councils has been for permanent peace. In those councils laws were made to punish any one who committed depredations on the whites. A party of young men, soon after stole wood on a steamer, killed a settler and brought them into camp. The Indians punished the leader by killing him. I tell you this as evidence that our people are all for peace. I was in hopes that all this and our desire for peace would have been known to all the American people before we arrive here. Sitting Bull said to me before leaving: 'I believe you will have great difficulty in making the officers believe in your good intentions, but act like a man and then they will believe you.'"

TRYING TO OUST A CONGRESSMAN.

IGNATIUS DONNELLY'S ABSURD ATTEMPT IN MINNESOTA TO UNSEAT A REPUBLICAN.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 24.—The notice of contest served by Ignatius Donnelly upon W. D. Washburn, elected member of Congress from this district by 2,700 majority, has been regarded as a joke, but the contestant goes on taking testimony to present to the House with the utmost seriousness, trusting that the wish of the Democratic House to assure another State to its party in the event of the election of President lapsing there, will override legal obstacles to his admission. The charges which are the basis of the contest are bribery and intimidation of employes in manufacturing establishments in Minneapolis, where Washburn lives. Donnelly took testimony in St. Paul for some days, mostly hearsay, and, in conclusion, yesterday and to-day he has been sitting in Minneapolis, taking most voluminous evidence in support of the theory of bribery of workmen. Witnesses testify to having heard somebody boast of having made money by changing politics from Donnelly to Washburn. Only one man swore to having been directly approached by a man who claimed to represent Washburn with an offer of money. An attempt was made this morning to show compulsion of employes by Washburn's agents to compel men employed in his mills to vote for him. All this sort of thing is regarded as very absurd here in the face of 2,700 majority.

DISASTERS TO VESSELS.

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia, Jan. 24.—A dispatch received at Pictou last night from St. Thomas gives intelligence that the bark Anna A. Rich, of Pictou, had put in there in distress, while on the passage from Baltimore for Europe. The vessel was damaged and Capt. Rich swept overboard during a hurricane on Jan. 4.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 24.—The brig Fidelia, Capt. Davis, of Bangor, Me., from Navassa, with 480 tons of phosphate, yesterday afternoon struck a heavy cake of ice and sank in three fathoms of water, off the mouth of West River, five miles below Thomas' Point, in Chesapeake Bay, about 40 miles from this city. The decks of the brig are above water, and the crew remain on board. The Captain has reached here, and is preparing to raise his vessel immediately. The Fidelia, which encountered severe weather at sea, and sustained some damage, came in the Canea Dec. 31, and was prevented by the ice from coming up to Baltimore. The cargo will not be materially damaged by the water.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The bark Matilda C. Smith, from Baltimore, before reported off Point de la Coubre, signaling for assistance, has been towed into the River Gironde.

The Norwegian bark Anne Margaretha, Capt. Jacobson, from Rouen, Jan. 6, for Baltimore, is ashore off Bollard Point. The crew was saved.

The Norwegian bark Anne Margaretha, before reported ashore off Bollard Point, will be a total wreck.

REFUNDING THE DEBT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The Secretary of the Treasury, this afternoon, issued the eighty-fourth call for the redemption of 5-20 bonds of 1865, consols of 1867. The call is for $20,000,000, of which $10,000,000 are coupon, and $10,000,000 registered bonds. The principal and interest will be paid at the Treasury on and after the 24th day of April next, and the interest will cease on that day. The following are descriptions of the bonds:

Coupon Bonds—Dated July 1, 1867, namely: $50, No. 1 to No. 64,000; $100, No. 70,001 to No. 85,000; $500, No. 55,001 to No. 62,000; $1,000, No. 73,001 to No. 86,000, all inclusive; total coupon bonds, $10,000,000.

Registered Bonds—Redeemable at the pleasure of the United States, after the 1st of January, 1879," as follows: $50, No. 2,271 to No. 2,550; $100, No. 16,401 to No. 18,500; $500, No. 9,301 to No. 9,350; $1,000, No. 31,901 to No. 35,500; $5,000, No. 8,301 to No. 10,150; $10,000, No. 15,401 to No. 17,000, all inclusive; total registered bonds, $10,000,000; aggregate, $20,000,000.

SALMON IN NEW-ENGLAND RIVERS.

PLYMOUTH, N. H., Jan. 24.—The President of the Fish Commission this week placed in the Pemigewassett River 1,000,000 young salmon, making a total of 2,000,000. The United States Fish Commissioner all over New-England report great success in efforts in hatching thus far.

CONTEST OVER THE ARLINGTON ESTATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—At Alexandria, Va., to-day, the Arlington case was again before the United States Circuit Court, Judge Hughes presiding. Nearly all the time was occupied in the examination of witnesses to prove the general practice of the United States Direct Tax Commissioners in refusing to accept taxes from any but the owners of the property or those personally interested. This refusal to receive taxes was proved in this case, a brother-in-law of Gen. Lee having authorized Mr. Fendall, an attorney, of Washington, to pay the taxes on the Arlington estate, and the Commissioners having refused to accept the tendered amount. It was developed during the testimony that the will of the late G. W. P. Custis had been lost, having probably been taken from the Court-house of Alexandria County during its occupancy by the Federal forces, and to-morrow evidence will be produced to prove the loss of the original instrument. With the exception of this evidence, the testimony is all in, and the court adjourned to-day in order to give counsel on both sides time to draw up instructions to the jury, and it is probable that the argument will be on the instructions only.

MURDERED BY HER FATHER.

SUICIDE OF THE MURDERER—DETAILS OF A TERRIBLE TRAGEDY IN IOWA.

DAVENPORT, Iowa, Jan. 24.—A terrible tragedy occurred near Daytonville, Washington County, Iowa, last night, in the murder of Miss Emma Hull by her father, O. P. Hull. Mr. Hull was a highly-respected and wealthy farmer, and his daughter Emma was a beautiful girl of 18 years, a leader in the society in which she moved, and apparently the idol of her father, nothing being left undone by him for her comfort and happiness. This feeling of late seemed to have increased into a mania, so that her absence from home even for an evening caused him much anxiety. Last night she attended a spelling school in the neighborhood, in company with others of the family, which seemed to give Mr. Hull more than ordinary uneasiness. On their return he arose from bed and met them. Soon all retired without anything noticeable occurring.

About 1 o'clock in the morning one of Emma's sisters, sleeping in the same bed with her, called to her mother that something was the matter with Emma. The mother came into the room, and, striking a light, was horrified by the sight of her daughter lying dead in a pool of blood. At the same moment Mr. Hull came into the room and, with the exclamation: "O, mother!" shot himself through the head with a revolver, dying instantly. Emma was found to have been struck on the head with an axe just in front of the ear, her head being almost cut in two.

A TOLEDO ELEVATOR BURNED.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Jan. 24.—The Dayton and Michigan Railroad Company's Elevator B, with its contents, consisting of 143,000 bushels of grain, mostly corn, was entirely destroyed by fire at noon to-day. The loss is estimated at $85,000. The building was insured in Cincinnati for $25,000, and the insurance on the grain amounts to $44,900. The fire, which started in the cupola, is supposed to have been caused by friction in the machinery. The building was erected in 1859, cost $30,000, and was the smallest of the company's elevators at this point, having only 150,000 bushels grain capacity. The grain in store at the time of the fire was owned by various commission firms in this city. There were 120,000 bushels of corn, 10,000 bushels of wheat, and 13,000 bushels of flax-seed. The following is a list of insurance companies having policies on the grain: Franklin, of Columbus, Ohio, $6,000; Insurance Company of North America, $2,500; Penn-sylvania Fire, $3,000; Scottish Commercial, $5,000; Imperial and Northern, of London, $1,000; Commercial Union, of London, $400; Liverpool and London, $2,500; London Assurance, $2,000; People's, of Trenton, N. J., $3,000; Ohio, of Dayton, $1,000; Commonwealth, of Boston, $2,500; Dayton, of Dayton, $1,000; York, Pennsylvania, $3,000; Amazon, of Cincinnati, $2,500; New-Hampshire, $2,000; St. Paul Fire and Marine, $1,000; People's, of Newark, N. J., $2,500; British and Mercantile, $2,000; Hartford, $1,000; Springfield (Mass.) Fire and Marine, $1,000; total, $44,900.

OTHER LOSSES BY FIRE.

G. Brown's large frame building in Front-street, Milton, Penn., occupied by A. Lockman, confectionery dealer; Biden & O'Brien, auctioneers, and G. Brown, Jr., residence, was destroyed by fire last night, with its contents. During the fire a terrific explosion occurred, instantly killing James Goodman and injuring several other pers supply of Bokhara. The Ameer submitted and became a tributary to the Czar. Anglo-India woke up again. The Czar declared Afghanistan outside the sphere within which Russia would feel called upon to exercise her influence. Negotiations thus opened up led to Russia accepting of the line of the Upper Oxus as the boundary of Afghanistan. While the Czar and his officers were making these and similar protestations and arrangements, they were planning an expedition against Khiva. Anglo-India inquired if this were true. Russia denied it. In 1872 Lord Loftus told the English Government it was true. It was still denied by Russia. At last, when the truth could no longer be kept back, the Russian Ambassador assured Anglo-India that the expedition was "only a little one" to punish brigandage. "Far from the intention of the Emperor taking Khiva," he said, "positive orders had been given to prevent it." A few months later, June 10, 1873, Khiva fell; the whole of its territory on the right bank of the Oxus was annexed; the suzerainty of Russia was forced, and an enormous indemnity was imposed upon the Khan. It was in 1873 that Shere Ali, of Afghanistan, implored the Viceroy of India for an alliance against Russia. The history of the Russian mission to Kabul, the intrigues of Kauffman, the determination of Anglo-India to go to Kabul likewise, the insult offered to her mission, the declaration of war, the wild series of Russia and Bulgaria for volunteers for Kabul, and the invasion of Afghanistan are the events of the past few months; and the impartial critic will, in considering the action of England, take into account the treacherous advance of Russia upon the frontiers of the British Empire in the East. Those who write for the critic of these Old World subjects to take a comprehensive view of the Afghan question and its influences on Russian and English policy, Col. Malleson's volume will be found of incalculable value. There is no "fine writing" in it; no attempt at eloquence; nothing sensational; it is a careful marshalling of historical facts, and a calm contribution to the history of an engrossing subject.

NEW MAGAZINES.

Mr. Edmund Yates kept his secret well. Nobody outside his own select contributors knew that he had a fresh project for 1879 until the announcement was made in the World of Jan. 1 that a new monthly called Time would appear in March, and that Mr. Yates having "been sufficiently fortunate as a literary conductor in another quarter," hoped "to be successful in this fresh enterprise." Time, it is said, "will produce some of those more thoroughly popular features for which we must go back to the periodical literature of which the first successes were witnessed 20 years ago." The first novel will be from the pens of the authors of "Ready-Money Mortiboy," and in addition to this announcement I am enabled to give you some particulars as to the other contributors to Time, the advent of which is creating quite a flutter of interest and curiosity in literary circles. Time will be the same size as the Cornhill, numbering 128 pages. It will contain 12 or 14 different articles every month, four or five of a reflective, serious, political, scientific, or literary character, the rest modeled on the style and manner of the early volumes of Household Words. Mr. Yates has had a peculiarly fabulous experience for the inspiration of a magazine which will aim at combining the excellences of the old with the requirements of the new in serial literature. The first editor of Temple Bar and Tinsley, he was, under the late Charles Dickens, one of the most constant contributors to All the Year Round in the best days of that delightful magazine. He will write for Time some reminiscences of his famous editor of those days. His papers will contain some entirely new letters by the author of "Pickwick." Mr. Gilbert will contribute a new series of "Bab Ballads," and Mr. Christie Murray, whose first essays in literature and journalism were made under the editorship of your correspondent, has already gone forth among the laborers for the purpose of making new studies of the short and simple annals of the poor. Mr. Bret Harte will write the introductory stanzas in No. 1, which is to be an example of "a periodical amusing without flippancy, earnest without dullness, and instructive without pedantry." Though magazines are no longer the popular publications they were, it is quite possible that a new monthly conducted with the spirit of the old ones when they were new may achieve a distinct and gratifying success. The mopthlies of to-day are conducted on the shabby editorial system of getting the most literary work at the lowest rate of pay. Lots of amateurs and nobodies have thus found their way into the writing circles, and the best literary and scientific names are now conspicuous by their absence in pages which they once adorned and made readable. Men of established reputation can no longer afford to write for the magazines as the novelists, and magazine proprietors can no longer afford to pay them. While magazine editors have thus been letting their periodicals drift to the very worst, newspaper editors have been encouraging the best pens to write for them, thus, whenever opportunity offers, transferring from the legitimate domain of periodical literature sketches of travel, scientific essays, social-articles, and critical reviews, which at one time were only to be found in perfection in the pages of our magazines. The Nineteenth Century is the one exception to the general dullness of English periodical literature. Time may take up the running on another track, and in the matter of interest and "value received" it will be easy to run its more immediate competitors off the course. The Biograph has appeared. There is nothing more interesting or instructive than biography, and occupying this ground cleverly, there is no reason why the Biograph should not succeed. No. 1 contains original histories of Wilkie Collins, John Hollingshead, Henry Irving, Theodore Martin, Canon Girdlestone, and other well-known men, together with notices of men who are still fighting their way. No. 2 is to contain a series of answers to questions which have been put to Mr. Gladstone, including the reason why the ex-Premier changed his political creed from Conservatism to Liberalism. The Athenæum stigmatizes the questions as impertinent, and almost suggests that they are a hoax. But the Athenæum is not a political organ, and may be excused for not seeing the importance, in the eyes of the political world, of such questions as these: "By what mental changes or external causes did Mr. Gladstone consciously pass from the Conservative to the Liberal side?" "Does Mr. Gladstone's 'moral antipathy'—if it be wholly moral, as many persons contend—to Lord Beaconsfield date from the attacks made on Sir Robert Peel, or is it of more recent origin?" Mr. Gladstone has answered theso and four other questions for the Biograph of February, which promises to be a very attractive number.

ART PUPILS AND ART SHOWS.

Whatever becomes of English trade, English art is going to be a big thing in the future. The commercial supremacy of Great Britain may be a dead letter, but her artistic life is a growing reality, destined, possibly, to lead the nations in painting when America leads them in manufactures. A nation like England, whose very gloom inspires the imagination with wonder and gives a halo of romance to incidents which pass unregarded among southern peoples; a nation cradled in difficulty, having a history unequaled in the records of individual acts of courage and self-sacrifice; a land of mysterious beginnings, thick with curious superstitions, studded with the remains of giant builders, carrying the mind back to the days when ghosts and fairies were recognized as realities, when merchant venturers sailed to unknown seas, and the world was daily waiting to be explored; a nation with such records, such incitements to artistic work, such subjects for poems on canvas, and such a wealth of hill and dale, of tree and meadow, of bosky dell, with monkish ruins by running streams, all pulsating with historic associations—when such a nation gets itself into the practice and study of art, the world may look forward to the coming of its conqueror in those inspiring contests which bring Heaven down upon the earth. For those who like to study historic parallels, the marvelous art progress and promise of England may offer much matter for reflection in connection with the decline and fall of those great Asiatic nations whose noble lives present but a blaze of artistic luxury. I have been spending a good deal of time among art schools and art exhibitions. First, the exhibition of the West London School of Art, held at Portland Road, one of the most important of the South Kensington institutions, and under the careful direction of Mr. Steward, an authority more particularly on the antique. Here I find an array of works full of a new power, fresh from the easels of students mostly under 20. It is a mixed school, one among thousands now scattered over the length and breadth of the land; and the master looks with pride on the trophies of the year, which include national, local, and other prizes. When one regards this nucleus of art education, remembering that the majority of the students are from the middle, some of them from the artisan, classes, the wide influences which radiate from such a centre need not be insisted upon. Then the weight of the studies are from the highest branches of poetic art to the esthetics of common life, and the decorative uses of art in the humblest ways. This is the key to the changes which have taken place in the furnishing and decoration of English houses within the past few years and which is going down to the very cottages of the poorest. Children of to-day are trained to art with advantages such as no other country at the moment possesses. The result will be to lift the efforts of the next generation and give to the English by training what the French possess by nature, an artistic instinct. Nothing has so much astonished me for some time as the exhibition of the works by the Female School of Art, under the especial patronage of the Queen, which has been open to the public for a couple of days only. "If the time has not yet come for a history of that training college whose 'girl graduates' are beginning to make their names famous in the wide world of art, it is surely not far hence," says the art critic of a leading journal, contemplating the works of the girls who are coming to the front in this school, established by Miss Gann, who is fortunate enough to have secured the royal patronage. During the year eight students have won their way from this art college into the schools of the Royal Academy, while her Majesty has purchased two pictures from the pupils' exhibition, and national and other prizes in the South Kensington competitions, fill several cases. The examples of the art work of the year mark another step forward among female art students, and promise to keep untarnished the lustre which the fame of Rosa Bonheur in France and Elizabeth Thompson in England has shed upon woman in her highest efforts in the broad fields of culture. The Loan Exhibition of Old Masters, opened this week at Burlington House, coupled with the previous one, brings to light another bewildering collection of treasures. It would seem as if the art contents of our royal palaces, ducal houses, and galleries of private collectors are literally inexhaustible. No matter how many loan shows we may have, there are always vast stores of gems behind. When the Queen has given up to the Burlington House committee the keys of her rarest treasures. Holbein drawings, studies by Leonardo da Vinci, are here in startling abundance. Seventy drawings by Raphael, 50 by Michael Angelo; miniatures by Cooper, Oliver Dixon Cruse; portraits by Reubens, Vandyck, Hals, and Lancret; paintings of priceless value from the galleries of the Duke of Buccleuch, the Duke of Devonshire, Earl Wharncliffe, and the University of Oxford; the exhibition is one of matchless interest, and must prove invaluable to the crowds of students and pupils and teachers, who daily mix among the throngs of ordinary sight-seers.

ST. AUGUSTINE'S LABORS.

TEACHINGS WHICH DIRECTED CHRISTIAN THOUGHT FOR TEN CENTURIES—DR. LORD'S LECTURE.

Dr. John Lord discoursed yesterday in Chickering Hall on St. Augustine, the greatest of the Fathers and the greatest light of Christian antiquity, since he directed the thinking of 1,000 years, and is the authority of the Latin Church on questions of theology. Unlike most of the great Fathers, his parentage was obscure, and he owed nothing to the circumstances of wealth and rank. His father was a heathen and lived in heathenish sin. His mother, Monica, was remarkable alike for piety and intellect. Most of the illustrious men of the world have had remarkable mothers. Until he was 16 he was lazy, quarrelsome, neglectful of his studies, and hated Greek especially. But his mind was inquiring and his nature genial. The first work which stimulated his brain was the "Hortensius" of Cicero, a lost work which was an exhortation to philosophy. So he sought philosophy. Those, in his time, who made the greatest pretension to it were the Manicheans—as shallow as they were arrogant and boastful. These people imposed upon him at first by their subtle theories about the origin of the universe. But his mind was logical, and he loved the definite. The Manicheans ceased to interest him, since he could learn nothing from them that was really new. He was now 30, and taught rhetoric for his support. In other words, he was a school-master or Professor. Disgusted with Carthage, where he lived, he turned his steps to Rome in search of truth. He was always a searcher after truth, even in the depths of sin. But he did not find truth at Rome, although he frequented the lectures of the philosophers of the new academy. They did not give him the repose he sought. He found in Rome a great moral desert to him. He found everybody busy in the pursuit of money, or immersed in pleasures. They had no time to give to him—an unknown rhetoric teacher. From Rome he went to Milan, and its Bishop, Ambrose, converted him, intellectually, to the acceptance of Christian truth. But he continued to lug his sins. At last, he wrestled with the angel and was converted in his heart by the Epistles of St. Paul. He was now 32, and resolved to withdraw from the marts of lip-labor and the selling of words, to enter into the service of the Master who had called him from death unto life. He returned to Africa, after being baptized, and lived wholly about Hippo, his study in his native town. Being on a visit to Hippo, the people clamored for his ordination, and he became a priest, and soon after Bishop of this small Numidian town. There his great power consisted not so much as a preiate, or even a preacher, as a theologian. It was his mission to head off the heresies of the day. He first turned against the Manicheans, his early friends, and exposed their errors and denounced their pride of reason. He then fought the Donatists—not an infidel sect, but bigots—who made the rite of baptism depend on the character of the officiating priest. They formed a powerful party, and were schismatics. One of the great ideas of Augustine was the unity of the Church, which the Donatists practically subverted.

But his great work was the defense of the doctrines of Paul against the Pelagians, whose great teachers were Pelagius and Celestius—men of great ability and irreproachable morals—two doctors of whom the schools were justly proud. Nothing disagreeable marked their teachings or manners. The essential principle which they advocated was man's ability to practice any virtue independently of Divine grace; hence perfection was a matter easily attained and a Saviour needless. Instead of the atoning sacrifice, a ritual resurrection of man by the death of Christ. Why should there be a Divine redemption if man could save himself? Whether Pelagius has been fairly represented by his opponents, it is certain that many of them was antagonistic to Paul and undermined religious faith. The foundations of Christianity were assailed, as they were afterward by Abelard. So Augustine came to the rescue.

The central principle of the theology of Augustine was man's inability to rise in virtue without Divine grace. He felt that all that is vital in theology must radiate from the recognition of the sovereign power in the renovation and salvation of the world. All his personal experiences, all his observations, confirmed the authority of Scripture. His views of election, grace, and Providence all radiate from one central idea of the supremacy of God and the comparative littleness of man, and his theology was more cheerful than that of his adversaries, since it gave more hope to the miserable people of the falling Empire, who could not claim the virtues of Pelagius. The Divine interposition is based on infinite love. It is the helping hand of Omnipotence. I need not detail the results of this famous controversy. The danger to be feared from the Pelagians was not from their organization as a sect, but their individual opinions. And if not even Augustine, Pelagianism would have taken; so deep a hold of Christendom that it would have become the creed of the Church, because, for a time, it was all the fashion. But the fame of Augustine does not rest on his controversies alone. He wrote treatises on almost all subjects of interest. His essay on the Trinity is worthy of Athanasius. His "Soliloquies" are unsurpassed by Christian writers. His sermons on the Psalms is sparkling with tender effusions. Perhaps his greatest work was the amusement of his leisure hours—a philosophical treatise called the "City of God," in which he raises and replies to all the vital questions of his day—a sort of Christian poem on our origin and end, and a final answer to all the gods of antiquity. Besides his various treatises, 363 of his sermons have come down to us, as well as numerous letters, all of which formed the staff of the reading of the ecclesiastics of the Middle Ages. For 40 years he was the oracle of his day, and he was the oracle of the Church for 1,000 years. And this extraordinary man, of Bernard, of Calvin, of Leibnitz, of Bossuet, all of whom merely reproduced his ideas, and acknowledged him as the fountain of their own greatness. He has been equally appealed to by Arius, Catholics and Protestants. What a mighty fame—what a perpetuated influence did this Bishop of an unimportant town leave behind! So great is the power of ideas. Such is the form of original genius.

The next lecture, on Tuesday, will be on "Leo the Great."

THEY WERE NOT PROUD.

From the St. Paul (Minn.) Pioneer-Press.

Yesterday morning, about 10 o'clock, two young ladies were seen going down Third-street, one leading and the other driving a cow. The young ladies were good-looking, and trudged along till a dry goods store on Third-street was reached. Here they tied the animal and disappeared in the store, whereupon a young man was seen to rush out of the back door, and it was some time before he could be found. A few evenings since Mr. Lyon accused the young ladies of being too proud to accept the duties of a farmer's daughter, and promised to cash a $50 silk dress if they would perform the above act. So yesterday morning, attired in farmerish calico costumes, they drove Mr. Faber's cow from the barn, attached a rope, and while Miss Faber led the animal, Miss Hendricks walked behind with a broomstick to hasten the trip. Without fear, they passed down Third, from the Seven Corners to Wabasha, there tied the animal and hastened to receive their wages.

AN ATTEMPT AT SUICIDE.

Capt. Julian Welling, of the Fifth Regiment, National Guard, attempted suicide last night, at 10 o'clock, by shooting himself twice in the head, while at the regimental armory, in West Twenty-third-street. The wounds are not dangerous. Capt. Welling, who keeps a saloon at No. 24 Bond-street, was driven to this act by continued business reverses.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Jan. 24.—At the Coroner's finquest, this morning, upon the body of Annie Davies, who died at the house of Mrs. Alice Landis, on Orange-avenue, from the effects of criminal malpractice, the jury returned a verdict against Mrs. Landis, as principal, and Charles S. Olden and Annie McGrath as accessories to the death of the girl.

SHOT BY HIS MISTRESS.

"OOFTY GOOFT" AND MRS. HOOPER.

THE SCENES ENACTED IN THEIR BOARDING-HOUSE YESTERDAY MORNING—A LIVELY TIME WITH AN INFURIATED WOMAN AND A JEALOUS MAN—MRS. HOOPER SHOOTS "OOFTY" IN THE SIDE.

Augustus Phillips, widely known as "Oofty Goofs," the German dialect writer, whose real name is Augustus P. Alden, was shot and dangerously wounded yesterday morning, at 4:30 o'clock, by his mistress, Mrs. Mary Hooper. The couple had been living together as man and wife in a furnished room on the third floor in a boarding-house at No. 142 West Sixteenth-street. They hired their apartments one month ago under the name of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Phillips. "Oofty Gooft" was born in this City. He is about 42 years of age. He comes of an eminently respectable and well-to-do family. His father is Judge Alden, a retired Judge of the Supreme Court of this State, and a man of great wealth. His mother was a Phillips, and she belonged to a good family. When the war broke out young Alden joined the Ellsworth Zouaves as a private, and followed the fortunes of that organization until its leader's death. When the regiment was reorganized he left it and joined a New-York City regiment. When he became of age he had a yearly income of $5,000 settled on him, and that made him independent and a young man of leisure. He was a favorite with Democratic politicians of the old Tammany regime, and was a prominent member of the Americus Club. After the war he began to write political sketches and "bits" in German dialect under the nom de plume of "Oofty Goofs," and acted for some time as theatrical manager for George Knight. Some three years ago he bought out the "Resort Musicals" of Alfred Barron, at Twenty-eighth-street and Broadway, and took the personal management of the place. But the acquaintances which Alden made there proved the bane of his life, and one of them was Mrs. Mary Hooper. Alden had been married and was divorced. Mrs. Hooper claimed to be a widow and to belong to a very respectable family. While Alden ran the Resort Musicals Mrs. Hooper was a frequenter of the place. She lived at that time alone in furnished apartments. No one of her associates knew what had become of her husband. Their acquaintance soon ripened into intimacy, and eventually Mrs. Hooper became Alden's acknowledged mistress, and she even succeeded in inducing him to proclaim her as Mrs. Phillips, his wife, he himself always passing as Augustus Phillips, few knowing that his last name was Alden. Mrs. Hooper is about 28 years of age, well formed, of fair complexion, coarse featured, with blonde hair, and a very thick, short neck.

The intimate friends of both Alden and the woman have for some time known that she has been tired of him and found another lover. On Thursday night Alden and Mrs. Hooper visited the London Theatre, in the Bowery. They remained there until a very late hour, and before going home visited a saloon and got quite intoxicated, and separated on their way home. Mrs. Hooper ran across her "friend," and she took him to her room. They entered the house at 2:30 o'clock yesterday morning. They made so much noise at the front door that Dr. Quinlan, who has his office on the ground floor, and who was sleeping therein, awoke, opened his door, and looked out to see what was the matter. He was astonished at the condition of Mrs. Hooper, and at her having a strange man with her. But he said nothing, and the couple went up stairs. They had not been there half an hour before Alden came to the house. He was under certain people under the influence of liquor, but quite cheerful, and he noticed Dr. Quinlan's door open, and called out to him in a loud, cheery voice, "Hello, Doctor, how are you? Good night!" Dr. Quinlan studied over the prospective situation up stairs, and, satisfied that all was well, ceased listening. He heard nothing for some time, and then loud laughing and talking. This was followed by noisy scolding, and then by a prolonged silence. The quarreling and scolding were resumed, and then a woman was heard screaming at the top of her voice. In a moment Mrs. Hooper rushed into the physician's office out of breath, her hair streaming down over her shoulders, her dress starting out of her head, and with nothing but a loose night dress on her person. "My God, Doctor, my husband is shot; come up stairs!" she screamed, and then ran over to the Doctor's couch, and attempted to drag him from it by main force. At that time she carried a revolver in her right hand. Arrived at Alden's room. Dr. Quinlan saw him sitting on a chair placed beside his bed. His face was more covered with blood, and his hands were tightly clasped to his left side. "Doc.," he said, "I'm shot." "Yes, and I did it, Doc.," chimed in the woman, and she began to dance wildly about the room, flourishing the revolver in all directions, "and I wish I'd killed him, and I'll kill him yet, so I will, so I will," she screamed wildly, and danced around the room like a maniac. Dr. Quinlan attempted to coax the weapon from her, but she laughed at him. Then Alden tried to coax it from her. She laughed at him. He got very angry and, forgetting all about his wound, sprang from the chair, seized her by the throat, threw her to the floor, and disarmed her. He then swooned from exhaustion. His insensible condition for a time brought the woman to her senses, and she became quite repentant over what she had done, and help she could to the Doctor, and by their united efforts Alden was laid upon the bed and undressed.

Dr. Quinlan then examined the wound. A bullet hole was found in the hypochondriac region of the left side between the eleventh and twelfth ribs, and the blood was flowing freely from it. The patient was too low to admit of probing, and Dr. Quinlan sent out for Dr. David Phillips, of No. 209 West Fourteenth-street, to hold consultation with him. It was decided to administer ether to Alden. This was done, and when the patient was thoroughly under the influence of the anæsthetic the wound was probed, but a half hour's search failed to find the location of the bullet. The pistol was a French seven-barreled affair, shooting a ball of small calibre. Five chambers were empty, and two empty cartridges were found on the floor, and a third in Alden's pocket. Dr. Quinlan, having dropped there while Mrs. Hooper was dancing around flourishing the weapon. She said that her husband scolded and quarreled with her because she had gone home with a rival, and during the quarrel drew the pistol and fired one shot at her, when she took it from him and fired at him. She said the ball let struck him, and that she regretted it had not killed him. Then she wept because he was wounded, and called him between her sobs, "My Gus, my Gus! oh, don't die! Will you?" She would not tell the name of the man who went home with her, or other particulars of the affair. She declined to say how her male companion had got out of the house, or whether he was caught in the room by Alden.

Alden, during his lucid intervals, refused to say a word about the matter. He was put to sleep with a solution of morphine, a prescription of which was made and left in the room, and he was left under Mrs. Hooper's care. Dr. Phillips then went home and Dr. Quinlan retired to his office. It was then that Mrs. Hooper was strictly enjoined to allow Alden to sleep as long as he would, as he needed absolute rest, his system being in very bad condition from excessive use of alcohol, and being quite liable to erysipelas. Dr. Quinlan had not been down stairs two hours, when he heard a great uproar up stairs again and ran up. He entered the room quietly, and found the two fighting back to back to the door, poking Alden in the side with a poker, and saying to him: "Ah, you're jealous of me—you're jealous of me, ain't you? That's what ails you, I know you." She succeeded in awakening the unfortunate man, and when his eyes were open and he realized the situation he said, "Doctor, I can't stand this. I won't stand it. I'll be—if I will. This woman won't let me alone." She then turned and saw the Doctor, who explained to her the serious nature of her conduct, and told her that Alden would surely die unless allowed sleep and rest, and threatened to have him removed to the hospital unless she changed her conduct. She fell on her knees and begged pardon. She was again left in charge of Alden, at his own request, and he sank again to sleep.

Dr. Quinlan again went down stairs. He had not been in his office half an hour before he again heard a noise up stairs. He ran up, and again caught Mrs. Hooper tormenting Alden with his poker, and he again remained to quell his jealousy. He was thoroughly aroused this time, and was sitting up in the bed, bleeding at the side, and kicking at her with his bare feet as hard as he could. She was beating him with the poker across the toes, and saying, "You're only jealous, you're only jealous, that's all, so it is." When Alden saw the Doctor enter the room he sprang out of the bed at the woman, and struck her two blows with all his might on the nose. She fell bleeding. He fell to the floor exhausted in a deep swoon. The blood from her nose spread over her entire person, and she sprang to her feet with a shriek of horror. Doctor, look at me! I'm murdered, I'm murdered!" and ran screaming down the stairs. Alden's wound began to bleed again, and he was taken down into Dr. Quinlan's office. Mrs. Hooper attempted to get at him there. She was threatened with arrest. That had no effect, and two officers of the Twenty-ninth Precinct were sent for. When they arrived she was taken to the street in her night dress, her hair streaming and her person covered with blood, crying that she was murdered. She looked as if she was. A cab was procured and she was taken to the Twenty-ninth Precinct Station-house. Alden recovered and insisted on going to the station-house. He did not appear to be in bad condition, and was allowed by the officers to walk, and with his way to Thirtieth-street with an officer on each side of him. Capt. Williams met him in the station-house and asked what ailed him. Alden attempted to speak, but swooned before he could utter a word. He was restored, and swooned five times in succession, and was then taken in an ambulance to an insensible condition to the New-York Hospital. There he recovered during the afternoon, but refused to talk about the case. His wound was examined, but the bullet could not be found. The House Surgeon decided that he was in no immediate danger unless peritonitis or erysipelas should set in. Drs. Quinlan and Phillips think that the ballet may have penetrated the abdominal wall into the stomach, or fallen into the abdominal cavity, in which case the chances are much against Alden's recovery. A singular fact in connection with the wound is that the small circle of inflammation surrounding the bullet-hole in Alden's side increased from one inch in diameter to about 10 inches in diameter during his trip from his home to the station.

When Mrs. Hooper reached the station-house she acted as if she had been literally cut to pieces, and alleged that she had been "beaten and kicked to a jelly from head to toes." When she was taken to the hospital and washed and examined it was found that her bruises were of an exceedingly trifling character, although she claimed that her internal injuries would undoubtedly prove fatal. She admitted to Capt. Williams that she had shot Alden, said she meant to kill him, and regretted that she hadn't. She was kept as a prisoner in the hospital.

SCOTLAND'S GREATEST POET.

COMMEMORATING THE ANNIVERSARY OF THE BIRTH OF ROBERT BURNS—THE CALEDONIAN CLUB AT DINNER.

The New-York Caledonian Club celebrated the anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns by giving a dinner at its club-rooms, No. 118 Sullivan-street, last evening. The dining-hall was draped with American and British flags, and above the President's chair a blue flag bearing the cross of St. Andrew surmounted a large oil-painting of Burns. An orchestra supplied music during the dinner. There were about 200 members of the club present, wearing sprigs of heather in their lapels, many of whom were accompanied by ladies. Chief C. G. Nicholson presided. After dessert had been finished great steaming plates of "haggis," the Scottish national dish, were placed on the tables. Everybody having been helped, ex-Alderman Arnott, of Brooklyn, delivered "the address to the haggis." The toasts were drunk in goblets of grog, composed of Scotch whisky, slightly diluted with water and sweetened. The first toast, "The Immortal Memory of Burns," was drunk in silence, and the toast of the evening, to "The Genius of Burns," was responded to by Mr. Andrew McLean, of the Brooklyn Eagle. It was due to the genius of Burns, he said, that Scotchmen felt at home the world over. His songs had preceded them and secured a welcome for them, and his was the only name in all secular literature that served as a spell to assemble men once a year in every city in the civilized world. The Scotch alone, of all the people active in modern affairs, could point to a bard whose services to humanity were so concededly great that they could, without having to explain the grounds of their admiration, proceed on every anniversary of his birth to glory in the lustre he shed upon their nationality. Burns' poem, "A Man's a Man for a' That," had been given to the world as the accompaniment of the mighty effort for liberty made by the men who stormed the Bastile, and those who resisted the British troops at Bunker Hill. In contemplating the genius of Burns the first characteristic which forced itself upon one's attention was his intense love of liberty for all men, and his sympathy for the soldiers of liberty wherever they showed themselves. It had been said that at a meeting in Dumfries, when the health of King George was proposed, Burns had said that he preferred to drink the health of a better man—George Washington." The speaker read a letter written by Burns at that period, which had shown with what confidence he had looked upon the contest for popular government in the American colonies. After reciting to the editor of the London Star the points of a sermon which he had heard in glorification of the English revolution, and the overthrow of the Stuarts, Burns wrote as follows: "Man, Mr. Publisher, is a strange, weak, inconsistent being. Who would believe, Sir, that in this, our Augustan age of liberality and refinement, such a scene so justly sensible and jealous of our rights and liberties, should be animated with such indignation against the very memory of those who would have subverted them—that a seventy-four gun ship under our national protection should complain, not against our monarch, but his favorite advisers, but against our whole legislative body, for similar oppression, and almost in the very same terms, as our forefathers did of the house of James? I will not, I cannot, enter into the merits of the cause, but I dare say the American Congress in 1776 will be allowed to be as able and as enlightened as the English Convention was in 1688, and that their posterity will celebrate the centenary of their deliverance from as as duly and sincerely as we do ours from the oppressive measures of the wrong-headed house of Stuart." That visitation, so decisively indicated, the direction taken by the active sympathy of the poet, and in that, if there were nothing more, Scottish-Americans had a special warrant for celebrating the anniversary of his birth under the flag to whose centenary he had so hopefully looked forward. The selection of the age in which Burns lived must, the speaker said, be properly regarded, or many of his poems would appear harsh and, perhaps, ribald. His had been a battle-field in which he commanded sometimes more positive than courtly phrases or mealy-mouthed speeches. In those days the pretensions of the favored classes had been supported by the hypocrisy of the bigot, and, in order to take the foot of the King from the neck of the host, they must cast off and shiver the shield of superstition. When Burns' songs were scrutinized in detail it was astonishing to note the acuteness of his muse, the liveliness of his fancy, and the versatility of his art. Jeffrey had not been in error when he called him "the Scottish Shakespeare," for only in Shakespeare's works could be sound so intimate an acquaintance with all the emotions of the human mind. Through the genius of the peasant's child the skylark would sing in the mind, the bluebell would be fragrant in the imagination, and the torrent would leap from the mountain side in the memory of many of Scottish birth who might never again look upon the lakes, hills, and valleys of their native land.

A SILVER WEDDING.

MADISON-AVENUE DELIGHTED WITH AN ANNIVERSARY RECEPTION.

The Madison-avenue residence of Mr. Levi M. Bates, the dry-goods millionaire, was the scene last evening of one of the most elegant anniversary receptions which have been given for many years. The occasion was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the marriage, (in the little country village of Bristol, Vt.,) of Levi M. Bates, then a penniless Vermont boy with the world before him, to Miss Martha Arnold Tucker. The hall, the parlors, the stairways were festooned with smilax. Baskets of flowers depended from every doorway, and an immense shield of red and white roses guarded the entrance to the parlor. Among the distinguished society notabilities who graced the occasion were Judge Samuel Jones and wife, Mr. Frank Vincent and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sanger, Mr. and Mrs. Martin J. Cooley, Mr. and Mrs. C. Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Wood, Mrs. B. H. Van Auken and B. H. Van Auken, Jr., the Misses Hargous, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Shattuck, Mrs. Amos F. Eno, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Van Valkenburg, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Graham Dunn, Mrs. William A. Budd, Miss Bradford, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Juillard, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Darling, Commodore C. K. Garrison and wife, Mr. and Mrs. James Motley, Mrs. Clarence Mortimer, Mr. and Mrs. Henry D. Nicoll, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Stout, and many others. Messrs. Irving A. Fisher, William Ives Washburn, R. King Schults, and W. G. Bates, nephew of the millionaire, acted as ushers, distinguished by white and scarlet rosettes bearing a silver monogram representing the initials of the groom and bride. In the front room on the second floor was displayed an array of presents, silver, of course, which made a sort of Aladdin's cave of the apartment. One of the most elegant was a front-work silver service, weighing 200 ounces, presented by the employes of the firm. A white silk pennon bearing a suitable legend and the names of the donors accompanied the gift. A handsome silver fruit service bore the card of Mr. and Mrs. V. Mumford Moore. Mr. Frank Vincent presented an olive dish and fork; Commodore and Mrs. C. K. Garrison a gold ice-cream set; Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Pitcher presented a card-receiver of elegant pattern. There were also elegant mementoes of the occasion from Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Reed, Miss Vincent, Mr. and Mrs. Henry D. Nicoll, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Taylor, T. E. Roberts, George N. Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. Hoagland, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Hillard, Dr. and Mrs. Henry D. Nicoll, Mr. and Mrs. John Downey, and many others. A portfolio of water-color paintings of the wild flowers of Vermont, from Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Skidmore, must not be forgotten, nor must the splendid silver-mounted, silver-lined basket, $4 in presence, sed by Mr. Bates to his wife, nor the elegant painted screen, mounted in silver, which was the gift of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Wallace. A life-size crayon of Mr. Bates, presented by his wife, gave an artistic air to the display; and there were objects of certu, silver-mounted, innumerable. Mrs. Bates received her guests in an elegant jaune silk elaborately trimmed with lace. A diamond necklace and two diamond stars in her hair were the only ornaments. A beautiful silver bell entwined with loops of smilax swung above her head, and a large floral monogram entwining the initials of the happy couple was the emblem of the occasion.

A BROOKLYN BARBER SHOT.

A few minutes before 9 o'clock last evening, Peter Taritino, a barber, residing at No. 307 Hamilton-avenue, attacked one of his assistants named Matlino with a razor, and cut him severely. During the affray Matlino was shot, receiving a slight wound. The Police did not learn of the facts until after midnight, and could not ascertain who fired at Matlino. The cause of the quarrel is said to have been a criminal intimacy between Matlino and Taritino's wife. Matlino was taken to the Long Island College Hospital. His wounds will probably prove fatal.

THE MURDER OF HARRY MADDEN.

The post-mortem examination made upon Harry Madden's body yesterday by Deputy Coroner Cushman revealed the fact that he died from a gunshot wound in the front part of the throat, severing the windpipe and shattering the larynx. The opening in the throat was one and one-half inches by one inch. A few bird or duck-shot were found within the wound and in the muscles of the neck on the left side. Madden was shot by John Smith in an Oliver-street saloon Thursday night.

ST. MARTIN'S TALE RETOLD.

HOW DEMOCRATIC TESTIMONY WAS PROCURED.

THE WITNESS REITERATES THE MAIN PARTS OF HIS AFFIDAVIT—DETAILS REGARDING THE DISTRIBUTION OF TILDEN'S CORRUPTION FUND—EFFORTS OF THE CONSPIRATORS TO INDUCE ST. MARTIN TO WITHDRAW HIS RECANTATION.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The Potter Investigating Committee met again this morning at 11 o'clock, and resumed the cross-examination of the witness St. Martin, who testified that since his arrival in Washington he had been staying a part of the time at the Metropolitan Hotel, and since then at his cousin's house. He had not received any money from anybody since he came here.

The Chairman—You stated in your testimony at New-Orleans that you were appointed Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms on the Friday previous to your examination. Is that right? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did you get your appointment in New-Orleans? A.—Yes, Sir; from Mr. Maddox. The subpœnas were not given to me by Mr. Potts, the Sergeant-at-Arms, but by Mr. Maddox.

Q.—Did you go into the country at once? A.—No, Sir; I kept the subpœnas in my pocket for a day or two, and then I went to Mr. Stenger, the Chairman of the sub-committee, and received from him money to pay my expenses.

Q.—Was that the first time you saw Mr. Stenger—the day you got the money from him to serve the subpœnas? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—When did you again see Mr. Stenger? A.—I might have seen him the day before I was examined; I cannot say; after giving my testimony I went to Bayou Sara; I saw Carter and Maddox the next day, and stated that I was going to expose them.

Q.—And the next day you were discharged from your position as Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms? A.—I do not remember whether it was the next day or not.

Q.—You were discharged because you told Maddox and Carter that you would expose them? A.—No, I do not say that, but it looked so to me.

Q.—Do you know you were discharged because Gov. Cox would have you discharged? A.—No, Sir; I never heard that before.

Mr. Cox—Is that the fact, Mr. Chairman?

The Chairman—I saw it in the paper.

Mr. Cox—It is a mistake, Sir; it is the first time I have heard of it; I did insist that my particular subpœnas that I wanted to serve in Donaldsonville should be served by a man from Washington, and I had it done.

Mr. Stenger—I think you suggested that St. Martin should serve no subpœnas.

Mr. Cox—That is possible.

The Chairman (to witness)—That was the end of your service; you only made those two trips to the country? A.—That is all. My first trip was to Aymand plantation, where I saw Duncan.

Q.—Who was it gave you instructions about serving the subpœnas upon Armstead and St. Martin? A.—They were given by Maddox, Carter, and Weber.

WITNESSES REPORTED AS "NOT FOUND."

Q.—You speak of having a lot of subpœnas to serve on Republican witnesses; were they? A.—They were a lot of colored people; I afterward saw them on the witness stand.

Q.—And you did not find them? A.—I did not find them because I was instructed not to find them; I could have brought them if I had wished to.

Q.—The Democrats asked you to find out if the witness would testify the way they wanted; if not, you were not to serve the subpœnas? A.—It was not given to me that way; they told me if I thought that the witness would go back on his former testimony to subpœna him, and if I could work on him to get him to do it it was all right.

Q.—Did you ever mean to say that you did not find a single man who would not go back on his testimony?

The Witness (laughing)—You can see from the testimony that there was no witness that I brought that did not go back.

Q.—Did you find anybody that was willing to stand to what he had formerly said? A.—They all were, but I got them to go back with some trouble.

Q.—You could not find any that were not willing to go back on their testimony? A.—I could have found some if I wished, no doubt.

Q.—But you did not, and when you say in your affidavit that you could not find them, it was not exactly the way you wanted them, and that you returned the subpœnas "not found," you did not mean that? A.—Well, not exactly.

Q.—Now, you say that the statement in your affidavit that you acted under instructions from Mr. Stenger in serving the subpœnas is a mistake? A.—Yes, and I did not know of it until I read it in the LITERARY NOTES.

—A new novel by Miss Braddon is forthcoming.

—Mrs. Jameson's biographer calls Lady Byron the sphinx woman.

—A. N. McNicoll discusses "Robert Browning" in the January Gentleman's Magazine.

—Archbishop Trench's "Lectures on Mediæval History" has reached a second edition in England.

—Mr. W. D. Howells' new story, "The Lady of the Aroostook," will be completed in the March Atlantic.

—It is a sign of the times that the "Poems of Arthur Hugh Clough" has reached the sixth edition in England.

—Mr. E. Maunde Thompson has been appointed Mr. Bond's successor in the keepership of manuscript at the British Museum.

—Mr. W. C. Coupland has undertaken (for Messrs. Trübner, London.) the translation of Hartmann's "Philosophie des Unbewussten."

—"A Socialist" publishes through the offices of Charles P. Somerby a reply to the arguments of Dr. Roswell D. Hitchcock on Socialism.

—A fourth and enlarged edition of Charles Clement's admirable essay on Michael Angelo, Leonardo, and Raphael has just been published.

—The fifth part of Mr. Grove's new "Dictionary of Music and Musicians," just out, carries the work from "Ferrarese del Bene" to "Guitar."

—The new Health Primers issued by D. Appleton & Co. are on "Premature Death: Its Promotion or Prevention," and on "The House and its Surroundings."

—Another choicely edited book of verses by John James Piatt makes its appearance, with Houghton, Osgood & Co., of Boston, bearing the name: "Poems of House and Home."

—Abby Langdon Alger has translated for Roberts Brothers, of Boston, a treatise on "Reading as a Fine Art," by Ernest Legouvé, of the French Academy. Legouvé amuses while he instructs.

—The late Stephen H. Carpenter, Professor of Logic and English Literature in the University of Wisconsin, at the time of his death, had just ready for the press a translation of "Beowulf," with notes.

—Mr. C. W. Curtis, of this City, is about to publish a catalogue of the works of Velasquez and Murillo, founded on studies made in Spain and elsewhere, and the use of the author's large collection of engravings.

—Oscar Pletsch, the delightful and ever fresh illustrator of children's books, has brought out a new volume, entitled "Guckaus," which means "Peep-bo," and contains charming wood-cuts of German child life.

—The total number of new books and of new editions and reprints published in 1878 in England amounts to 5,314, against 5,095 in 1877. The American importations for the year were 620, and other foreign works were 182.

—The English Quarterly Journal of Science edited by William Crookes, becomes a monthly with the February issue. The January number contains an article on "Sanitary Science in the United States, its Present and its Future."

—The business of making birthday books is decidedly brisk. The "George Eliot Birthday Book" is to be followed by one devoted to Byron, another to Lonfellow, and we are soon to have a "Birthday Book of German Literature."

—According to the Athenæum, Mr. Edison has completed arrangements with Messrs. Sampson Low & Co. and Messrs. Harper & Brothers for the simultaneous publication in England and America of his new work on the electric light.

—Dr. Henry Maudsley, after 15 years' service as joint editor of The Journal of Mental Science, published by authority of the English Medico-Psychological Association, has retired. His place is filled by Drs. D. Hack Tuke and George H. Savage.

—"Shadows of Coming Truth" is the title of a new work which Mr. Eliot Stock, London, is to bring out immediately. It will be a consideration of the broad aspects of religion viewed in connection with the doctrines of development.

—The February number of the Magazine of American History is entirely devoted to the commemoration of Washington, and contains 70 of his letters (1754–80) never before published, with a great variety of historical matter concerning him that not hitherto been accessible.

—The January Contemporary Review contains Prof. Monier Williams' Oxford lecture on "Afghanistan and the Punjaub." Other articles are, "The Moral Responsibility of Bank Directors," by Mr. A. Taylor Innes, and "Atheism and the Church," by Canon Curteis. The alcohol discussion is also to be continued.

—Just ready at Harper & Brothers are "Goldsmith," by William Black, and "Hume," by Prof. Huxley, in the "English Men of Letters;" "An International Episode," by Henry James, Jr.; "Gulliver's Adventures," by Lucy Lamb, and Crabb's "English Synonyms," a new and revised edition.

—D. Appleton & Co. will shortly publish in their "Handy Volume Series" "The Disturbing Element," by the author of the "Heirs of Redclyffe;" the "Multitudinous Seas," with illustrations; Mr. Thackeray Bunce's "Origin of Fairy Tales," and Dr. Guernsey's "Carlyle, his Life, his Books, his Theories."

—Mr. W. T. Dobson's book, "The Classic Poets, Their Lives, and Their Times," is not even "damned with faint praise" but condemned out and out as "heavy" and "dull," written "without a vestige of critical power or any fullness of knowledge," by a critic in the Academy, who sees "no reason why the book should have been written."

—A volume of selected speeches and reports on finance and taxation by Mr. John Sherman has been published through D. Appleton & Co. at the request of friends of the Secretary. The first is that on the Morrill Tariff bill in the House of Representatives in 1860; the last his annual report to Congress in 1878 as Secretary of the Treasury.

—Smith, Elder & Co., of London, issue a volume of poems for a new singer, whose name does not appear upon the title page. "Constance, a Tale," is by an Anglo-Indian, who lays the scenes in India. Other poems, chiefly relating to India, follow the main story. A liberal appendix of notes gives greater exactness to the allusions to Oriental manners and scenes.

—D. Appleton & Co. have issued the first and second of their "Health Primer Series," consisting of Exercise and Training, by C. H. Ralfe, M. D., and Alcohol: Its Use and Abuse, by W. S. Greenfield, M. D. The contributors to the series embrace many distinguished English scientific men, such as G. M. Balfour, J. Mortimer-Granville, J. Langdon Down, and others. The next primers will treat of The House and its Surroundings and Premature Death: Its Promotion or Prevention.

—The new Revue Historique, which has already won an excellent reputation on its merits, is the rallying-point in France of those who lean towards a free interpretation of history, and a spirit of complete independence. It inclines to sympathy with the Liberal school. The Revue des Questions Historiques, on the other hand, makes no secret of its Ultramontane sympathies and of its determination to maintain the rights of the Church. Both periodicals are conducted by men of consummate ability and Benedictine erudition.

—G. P. Putnam's Sons will shortly bring out a new edition of Mr. O. B. Frothingham's "Life of Gerrit Smith. It will differ from the first in omitting the author's original conjecture with regard to Mr. Smith's motives in disclaiming a knowledge of the plans of John Brown, thus leaving the reader free to draw his own conclusion. The biographer still maintains Mr. Smith's complete acquaintance with the old hero's main project, but admits the probability that he, in common with the general public, supposed a different project was entertained at Harper's Ferry.

—Sampson Low & Co., London, are about to publish, in cheap monthly volumes, a series of illustrated biographies of great artists, similar to Mr. Sweitser's "Artist Biographies." Recently from the press of Houghton, Osgood & Co. They will be compiled from the latest authorities, and will give the results of the important researches which have been carried on during the last 20 years in the field of art history. Each volume will be a monograph on some artist, and will contain his portrait and as many examples of his art as can be readily procured. Among the earliest biographies promised are Rembrandt, Titian, Holbein, Turner, Leonardo, Raphael, and Michael Angelo.

—The Literary Churchman, (W. Skeffington & Son, No. 163 Piccadilly, London, W.,) besides its usual supply of thoroughly honest reviews of English and Continental works in theology and general literature, announces for publication during the year the following papers on parish organization: "The Parish Priest in his Study," "The Parish Priest in his Pulpit," by Canon Ashwell; "The Institutions of the Parish," by the Dean of Lichfield; "Communicant Classes," by Canon Butler, Vicar of Wantage; "The Parish Choir," by the editor; "The Schools of the Parish," by the editor; "How to Retain Young Men," by Rev. H. G. Shuttleworth; "Parish Missions," by Canon Walsham How; "The External Good Works of the Parish," "The Offertory," by Sir A. Brady.

—The late Rev. Joseph M. Finotti, who died in Colorado Jan. 10, was a noteworthy person among the literary men of Boston. He was once the literary editor of the Pilot. His "Life of Blessed Peter Claver" proved an interesting contribution to American literature on the slavery question from the Roman Catholic point of view. At the request of the late Archbishop Bailey and other prelates he undertook the important work of a bibliography of Roman Catholic literature in America. He published an octavo volume on this subject in 1871, which covered the field from the earliest publications down to 1820, and was engaged upon a supplementary volume up to within a short time of his death. He came of a family of high repute in Italy, and had made himself a master of the English language and literature.

—Messrs. Charles Scribner's Sons will publish shortly "The Game Fishes of the United States," a work which will undoubtedly attract the attention of both the naturalist and sportsman. This publication will not only be remarkable for its illustrations, but will be considered as authority for its text. Mr. S. R. Kilbourne, the well-known painter of fish, has made careful pictures of some 20 different kinds of fish, and Prof. G. Brown Goode, of the Smithsonian Institution, Assistant United States Fish Commissioner, has given all the facts in the natural history of each species, furnishing a complete synonymy of the various names applied to the same fish in different sections of the country. The pictures will be exact reproductions of studies of the fish, made under the inspiration of pure air and open sky.

—An attempt is making to preserve the fast-disappearing folk-lore and dialects of Bushmen, Hottentots, and Kafirs in South Africa. Literary productions of great antiquity, handed down to the present generation in a manner similar to that in which the Homeric poems reached the age of Pisistratus, have been found among them, and Prof. A. H. Sager writes to the Academy that the South African Folk-Lore Society, just forming, proposes to issue once in two months a small periodical, at a shilling a year, exclusive of postage, in which this literature shall be published accurately in the language and words of the narrator, with a translation added in English, French, or German. Americans interested in this work can obtain information of the Secretary of the society, care of Miss L. C. Lloyd, Cape Town, South Africa, to whom also subscriptions may be sent.

—The late Mrs. Grote was a remarkable woman. Her Eastern home was the resort of the Mills, father and son; of both the Austins, of Charles Buller and Sir William Molesworth; and at her later home might often have been seen Henry Hallam, Chevalier Bunsen, George Cornewall Lewis, Jenny Lind, Chopin, Mendelssohn, and Thalberg. Her first contributions to the Westminster Review were prompted by a desire to add "a few pounds" to the scanty income allowed to the young couple by the elder Mr. George Grote. She proved a helpful husband to undertake the "History of Greece," and lived to write the "Personal Life of George Grote," in which at one time she appeared as an outside critic of Mr. Grote and at another as "the very pulse" of his existence. Her literary companionship with her husband was constant and unique, like that of George Eliot with the late George Henry Lewes. The only other work from her pen, besides various essays, is a "Memoir of the Life of Ary Scheffer."

—With the change from a bi-monthly to a monthly, the International Review has been placed in the hands of new editors. They are two Boston literary men, Henry Cabot Lodge and John T. Morse, Jr., both of whom are well trained to their work. Mr. Lodge is in charge of the department of American history at Harvard University, and was formerly, in company with Mr. Henry Adams, editor of the North American Review. He is a strong and vigorous writer, and a man of good literary judgment. Mr. Morse has won a high reputation by his "Life of Alexander Hamilton." He is the author of several other works, and has been an industrious contributor to current literature. The proprietors of the International are to be congratulated on securing the editorial services of men who are well qualified to give it a larger hold upon American readers. Its business management will remain in the hands of Henry P. Barnes, who for several years has also discharged the duties of editor. The new editors show their hand for the first time in the March number.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

D. APPLETON & CO.

—"Exercise and Training." By C. H. Ralfe, M. D. "Health Primers."

—"Tales from the German of Paul Hyse." "Collection of Foreign Authors."

—"Alcohol, Its Use and Abuse." By W. S. Greenfield, M. D. "Health Primers."

—"My Guardian." By Ada Cambridge. Illustrated by Frank Dickse. Paper, 60 cents.

—"Appleton's Illustrated Hand-book of American Winter Resorts." For Tourists and Invalids.

—"The Speaking Telephone, Electric Light, and Recent Electric Inventions." By George B. Prescott. With illustrations.

HARPER & BROTHERS.

—"Samuel Johnson, His Words and His Ways." Edited by E. T. Mason.

—"Captain Nelson. A Romance of Colonial Days." By Samuel Adams Drake. 75 cents.

—"Robert Dick, Baker, of Thurso: Geologist and Botanist." By Samuel Smiles, LL. D.

—"A Primer of Spanish Literature." By Helen S. Conant. "Half-hour Series." 25 cents.

—"The Vicar of Wakefield." A Tale. By Oliver Goldsmith. "Half-hour Series." 25 cents.

—"An Eye for an Eye." A Novel. By Anthony Trollope. "Franklin-Square Library." 10 cents.

T. B. PETERSON & BROTHERS, PHILADELPHIA.

—"Jarl's Daughter; and Other Stories." By Mrs. F. H. Burnett. Paper, 25 cents.

HENRY B. ROGERS, M. D., DUNKIRK, N. Y.

—"New and Original Theories of the Great Physical Forces." Published by the Author.

SHOE AND LEATHER REPORTER OFFICE.

—"Almanac and Directory for 1879."

GEORGE P. ROWELL & CO.

—"American Newspaper Directory of All Newspapers, &c., Published in the United States, Territories, the Dominion of Canada, and Newfoundland."

MARTIN B. BROWN.

—"Board of Health of the City of New-York. Fifth and Sixth Annual Reports of the Health Department.

MACMILLAN & CO., LONDON.

—"Dictionary of Music and Musicians." Part V., "Ferrarese del Bene" to "Guitar."

SCRIBNER & CO.

—"A Selection of Spiritual Songs; With Music for the Church and the Choir." Selected and arranged by Rev. Charles S. Robinson, D. D.

HARROUN & BIRKSTADT.

—"Neophonography; A Method of Short Alphabetic Writing." By James Richardson.

ROBERTS BROTHERS, BOSTON.

—"Signor Monaldini's Niece." "No Name Series." Sheets and cloth. $1.

—"The Dramatic List; A Record of Performances of Living Actors of the British Stage." Compiled and edited by Charles Eyre Pascoe.

—"Reading as a Fine Art." By Ernest Legouvé, of the Académie Française. Translated from the ninth edition. By Abby Langdon Alger. 50 cents.

HOUGHTON, OSGOOD & CO., BOSTON.

—"Poems of House and Home." By John James Piatt.

POTT, YOUNG & CO.

—"The Celts." (Conversion of the West.) By Rev. G. F. Maclear, D. D.

—"The English." (Conversion of the West.) By Rev. G. F. Maclear, D. D.

—"The Northmen." (Conversion of the West.) By Rev. G. F. Maclear, D. D.

—"The Continental Teutons." (Conversion of the West.) By Very Rev. Charles Merivale, D. D., D. C. L., Dean of Ely.

LITTLE, BROWN & CO., BOSTON.

—"Brazil and the Brazilians." By Rev. James C. Fletcher and Rev. D. P. Kidder, D. D. Ninth edition. Revised to date.

ROSE-BELFORD PUBLISHING COMPANY, TORONTO.

—"'Twas in Trafalgar's Bay." By Walter Besant and James Rice. Paper.

RANDEL & BRUNO.

—"Grace's Exposure; or, Unsweetened Sugars." By William H. Grace. Pamphlet. 50 cents.

D. LOTHROP & CO., BOSTON.

—"Autobiography and Memorials of Ichabod Washburn." By Rev. Henry T. Cheever. $1.

IVISON, BLAKEMAN, TAYLOR & CO.

—"New and Practical System of the Culture of the Voice and Action." By Prof. J. E. Frohsher. Improved edition.

FORTY-FIFTH CONGRESS.

THIRD SESSION—Jan. 24.

SUMMARY.

In the Senate, Mr. Saulsbury called up his resolution calling upon the Secretary of the Treasury for information in regard to commissions paid to bankers in the negotiation of bonds, and it was adopted. Mr. Ferry reported amendments to the Post Office Appropriation bill, similar to those attached to the Post Route bill of last session, and a debate ensued thereon. Finally, the amendments were referred to a specially committee. Mr. Edmunds moved to take up his resolutions reaffirming the validity of the last three constitutional amendments. After various dilatory motions had been acted upon, the Senate adjourned till Monday.

The House of Representatives ordered a session for Wednesday night for the consideration of reports from the Committee on Commerce. The bill appropriating $60,000 for the transportation of bullion, and $40,000 for miscellaneous expenses, was passed, with the Senate amendments. The House then went into Committee of the Whole on the private calendar, and a burlesque report was made in regard to a claim for a pair of trousers and a blanket destroyed by Gen. Aiken, S. C. Mr. Bragg, of Wisconsin, objected to several war claim bills. Twelve private bills were passed, after which the House took a recess till 7:30 P. M. The evening session was devoted to the consideration of bills from the Judiciary Committee.

SENATE.

ARREARS OF PENSIONS.

Mr. Morrill, of Vermont, presented a petition of a large number of citizens of Vermont favoring the bill granting arrears of pensions. Laid on the table, the bill having passed the Senate, In presenting the petition Mr. Morrill said that in his opinion many persons who signed the petition would not have done so if they had known of the amount involved. He would have hesitated in voting for the bill had he known of the large amount required to pay such arrearages.

Mr. Conkling, of New-York—What is that amount?

Mr. Morrill replied that he understood the Commissioner now estimated it would be about $80,000,000.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

The Vice-President laid before the Senate a memorial of Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Susan B. Anthony, and other officers of the National Woman's Suffrage Association, favoring the passage of the joint resolution now pending before the Senate, proposing an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit the several States from disfranchising persons on account of sex, and, also, that the Judiciary Committee of the House be discharged from the further consideration of that resolution, where it rests on account of a tie vote, that it may be brought to a direct vote in the House. Referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

RAILROAD DISCRIMINATION.

Mr. Sharon, of Nevada, presented resolutions of the Nevada Legislature praying for the passage of a law prohibiting alleged discriminations, exactions, and extortions of the Central Pacific Railroad Company in that State. Referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. Sharon said the evils complained of had existed for a long time. The people of his State had rights which the Government reserved to itself. The Government had subsidized this road with the land and money of the people, and they had a right to demand that Congress should see that they were not imposed upon by the railroad corporation. In other words, the creature could not rise above the creator.

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS.

The following bills were introduced and referred:

By Mr. Grover, of Oregon—To restrict the immigration of Chinese into the United States. Referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

By Mr. Morrill, of Vermont: (by request)—A bill to incorporate the Spanish-American Commercial Company. Referred to the Committee on Manufactures.

He also introduced a bill extending the limits of the Port of New-York. Referred to the Committee on Commerce.

BANKERS' BOND COMMISSIONS.

Mr. Saulsbury, of Delaware, called up the resolution, submitted by him on the 17th inst., and published in full at that time, calling upon the Secretary of the Treasury for information in regard to commissions paid to bankers or others for services in negotiating the sale of United States bonds; whether interest had been paid on called bonds, at the same time the interest was accruing on bonds sold to redeem the same; how much such interest had been paid, and whether the proceeds from the sale of Government bonds had been left on deposit in any national bank acting as a Government depository.

Mr. Morrill, of Vermont, submitted an amendment, providing "information already communicated to either house of Congress shall not be repeated, but reference to documents already printed shall be found shall be made, and the names of subscribers to the popular loan since June, 1877, to whom no commissions have been paid may be omitted."

The amendments were agreed to, Mr. Saulsbury, and the resolution was agreed to as amended.

POSTAL AMENDMENTS.

Mr. Ferry, of Michigan, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported amendments to the Post Office Appropriation bill, similar to those attached to the Post Route bill of last session, which were agreed to. They amend section 3,893 of the Postmaster-General to readjust the compensation hereafter to be paid for transportation of mails on railroad routes, each railroad company to be paid according to the service performed and the speed maintained, and divide mail matter into four classes, as follows: First, writing matter; second, periodical matter; fourth, merchandise; and fixing the rate of postage thereon the same as provided in that bill.

The amendments were referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. Ferry said that at the close of the last session of Congress the Conference Committee on the House bill to establish post-routes submitted a report which was not acted upon, for the reason that the House refused to consider the amendments of the Senate, claiming that one of them was in the nature of and constituted a revenue bill. It had been understood that the Conference might lead to an agreement upon the bill, and he hoped the Senate would order a new conference.

Mr. Kernan, of New-York, inquired if some of the amendments to the bill did not propose a subsidy of $300,000 per annum to the Brazilian Mail Steamship Line.

Several Senators on the Democratic side—Yes, yes.

Mr. Ferry said his object in having another conference was to see whether the two houses of Congress could not agree upon the bill in the main by striking out the subsidy or other objectionable features.

Mr. Hamlin, of Maine, denied that this bill was a revenue bill. If it was a revenue measure to add an appropriation for mail service between Brazil and the United States, then there were many bills originating in the Senate which might be called revenue bills.

Mr. Ferry said the provision to which the House excepted as a revenue measure was that allowing all books admitted to the mails for conveyance therein under the provisions of the Postal Union Treaty to be delivered free of any Customs duty, under such regulations as may be agreed upon by the Secretary of the Treasury and the Postmaster-General.

Mr. Kernan said this Brazilian subsidy business should come up as an independent proposition. The bill also contained an amendment regulating the franking privilege, and that also should come up as a separate measure. Pending discussion, the morning hour expired.

Mr. Ferry moved the consideration of the conference report would be continued.

Several Senators who are opposed to the Brazilian subsidy objected.

Mr. Ferry then moved to postpone all prior orders and proceed with the consideration of the conference report on the Post-route bill. Agreed to—yeas 30, nays 22, as follows, (Republicans in roman; Democrats in italics; Independent in SMALL CAPITALS:)

YEAS.

Allison,	Ferry,	Merrimon,
Blaine,	Garland,	Mitchell,
Burnside,	Hamlin,	Paddock,
Cameron of Penn.,	Hill,	Plumb,
Chaffee,	Hoar,	Rollins,
Christiancy,	Howe,	Sargent,
Conkling,	Johnston,	Sharon,
Conkling,	Jones of Nevada,	Spencer,
Dawes,	McMillan,	Windom,
Dorsey,	Morey,	Withers—30.

NAYS.

Bailey,	Grover,	McPherson,
Beck,	Harris,	Morgan,
Booth,	Hereford,	Saulsbury,
DAVIS of Ill.,	Jones of Fla.,	Thurman,
Davis of W. Va.,	Lamar,	Voorhees,
Dennis,	McCreery,	Wadleigh,
Eaton,	McDonald,	White,
Gordon,		Wilkers—24.

PAIRS.

Allison,	Ferry,	Oglesby,
Anthony,	Garland,	Patterson,
Blaine,	Hoar,	Plumb,
Booth,	Howe,	Rollins,
Burnside,	Jones of Nevada,	Saunders,
Conkling,	Kellogg,	Spencer,
Conkling,	McMillan,	Wadleigh,
Dorsey,	Mitchell,	Windom—23.
Edmunds,	Oglesby,

The Senate, at 4:50 P. M., adjourned until Monday.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

ARCTIC EXPLORATION.

Mr. Wood, of New-York, introduced a bill authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to accept for the service and purpose of exploration by way of Behrings Straits, the ship Jeanette, tendered by James Gordon Bennett. Referred.

COMMERCE REPORTS.

A session was ordered for Wednesday night for reports from the Committee on Commerce.

THE SUGAR BILL.

Mr. Robbins, of North Carolina, asked to have Wednesday next fixed for the consideration of the Sugar bill.

Mr. Banks, of Massachusetts, objected.

THE CENSUS BILL.

On motion of Mr. Cox, of New-York, the Census bill was made a special order for the second Tuesday in February.

WAR CLAIMS.

Mr. Robinson, of Indiana, from the Committee on War Claims, reported a bill declaring the intent of the act entitled "An act to indemnify the States for expenses incurred by them in defence of the Union." Referred to the Committee of the Whole.

THE TRANSPORTATION OF BULLION.

On motion of Mr. Hale, of Maine, the Senate amendments to the bill appropriating $60,000 for the transportation of coin and bullion, and $40,000 for the miscellaneous expenses of the House, were concurred in.

PRIVATE BILLS—A BURLESQUE REPORT.

The morning hour having expired, the House went into Committee of the Whole, with Mr. Bell, of Georgia, in the chair, on the private calendar.

Nearly all the War claim bills were objected to by Mr. Bragg, of Wisconsin.

One of the bills created much amusement. It was for the relief of a private soldier who had lost his trousers and blanket by a fire at Aiken, S. C. The report (made by Mr. McCook, of New-York,) was of a burlesque character. It stated that the claimant was to blame, and that Hines (the soldier) was "lying down in his tent, enjoying needed repose after a day's labor in asserting and maintaining the sovereignty of the General Government." It is true the report continued, "that those who seek to hold him responsible refer to the general and careless use of the pipe by our weary warriors, and others have attempted to account for the catastrophe by calling attention to the dangerous habit of soldiers carrying matches in their trousers pockets. Both of these theories, although plausible, are rejected by your committee, and after patient investigation they are of opinion that the fire originated in some unaccountable manner." The report goes on to say that a gratuitous issue of trousers and blankets had been made to Hines, and that this was a fatal mistake. His commanding officer, unwilling that Hines should appear before the people of Aiken trouserless, had made proper haste to rehabilitate him, and that gratuitous, unmutilated issue, which was given red tape or circumlocution, but without it Hines would be in undisputed possession of a pair of trousers and a blanket, to which he would have no legal title."

The committee rose, and 12 private bills reported by it were passed by the House.

ARMY REORGANIZATION.

Mr. Banning, of Ohio, presented a substitute for the Army Reorganization bill, and asked to have it printed. So ordered.

The House, at 5 o'clock, took a recess till 7:30, the evening session to be for business from the Judiciary Committee.

EVENING SESSION.

JUDICIAL BILLS.

Mr. Butler, of Massachusetts, from the Judiciary Committee, reported the Senate bill to create an additional Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

On a point of order made by Mr. Eden, of Illinois, the bill was referred to the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Butler also moved to go into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of the bill.

The motion was rejected by a vote of 45 to 70.

Mr. Butler made the point of order that there was no quorum voting.

Mr. Eden moved to adjourn. The motion was defeated by a vote of 33 to 86.

A call of the House was then ordered. The roll-call showed the presence of 154 members—more than a quorum—and further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

The question was then put on Mr. Butler's motion to go into Committee of the Whole, and it was rejected.

Mr. Lynde, from the Judiciary Committee, reported back the Senate bill to amend section 5,497 of the Revised Statutes, by providing a penalty for embezzlement on the part of officers in the internal revenue service. Passed.

Also, a bill to divide the Southern Judicial District of Georgia in two districts.

On motion of Mr. Hill, of Georgia, (who said that the bill named a county which had no existence at all,) the bill was recommitted.

Mr. Pryor, of Maine, from the same committee, reported back the Senate bill for taking of testimony to be used before Congress in cases of private claims against the United States. Passed. It provides that any committee of Congress, before which private claims may be pending, may order testimony to be taken before any Master in Chancery within the judicial district where the evidence is to be taken, which evidence shall be forwarded to the committee issuing the order.

Several other bills from the same committee were passed, and at 10:20 the House adjourned.

NOMINATIONS BY THE PRESIDENT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The President sent the following nominations to the Senate to-day:

George Leavitt to be Collector of Customs for the District of Machias, Me.; Adam Wolf to be Surveyor of Customs at Nashville, Tenn.; John Murphy to be Register of the Land Office at Harrison, Ark.

Postmasters—Hiram B. Fargo at Greenville, Mich.; John Clinton at Brownsville, Tenn.; Tinis H. Little at Aberdeen, Miss.; Henry S. Glover at Macon, Ga.; D. W. Davis at Dorien, Ga.

COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS.

NEW-YORK, Friday, Jan. 24, 1879.

The receipts of the principal kinds of Produce since our last have been as follows:

Ashes, pkgs.	47	Hemp, bales	1
B. E. Peas, bags	173	Hides, bales	91
B. W. Flour, pkgs.	76	Hops, bales	594
Beeswax, bxs.	450	Leather, sides	21,328
Cotton, bales	1,861	Spirits Turp., bbls.	3
Cotton-seed-oil, bbls.	53	Oil-cake, pks.	1,393
Cotton-seed-cake, bgs.	500	Oil-meal, bags	710
Copper, bbls.	16	Pork, pks.	833
Copper, cakes	131	Beef, pks.	278
Dried Fruit, pkgs.	9	Cut-meats, pks.	11,372
Eggs, pkgs.	602	Lard, tcs.	6,756
Flour, bbls.	15,091	Lard, kegs	10
Corn-meal, bbls.	700	Butter, pkgs.	4,951
Corn-meal, bags	410	Cheese, pkgs.	2,809
Wheat, bushels	149,750	Dressed Hogs, No.	502
Corn, bushels	70,808	Starch, pkgs.	2,982
Oats, bushels	14,050	Stearine, pkgs.	137
Rye, bushels	850	Sumac, bags	699
Malt, bushels	8,203	Tallow, pkgs.	621
Barley, bushels	5,600	Hair, pkgs.	73
Peas, bushels	4,040	Tobacco, hhds.	77
Oat-meal, bags	184	Tobacco, pkgs.	988
Flax-seed, bags	1,016	Whisky, bbls.	2,424
Grease, pkgs.	480	Wool, bales	69
Grass-seed, bags	1,047

BOOTS AND SHOES—Business has been somewhat brisker and is generally satisfactory as to sales. The offerings have been more liberal, affording an attractive assortment of seasonable goods.

DRUGS, DYES, AND DYEWOODS—With a fair call noted for the leading kinds of Drugs and Dyes, prices have been generally quoted steady, the principal holders showing confidence.....English Chemicals have met with a fair, steady demand on the previous basis as to prices.....Essential Oils have been attracting more attention, and the leading kinds have been quoted firm.....Dyewoods have been unchanged as to values, on, however, a restricted business.

FLOUR AND MEAL—State and Western Flour has been quite moderately dealt in since our last, and prices have been quoted, as a rule, barely steady. The offerings have been comparatively free. The better qualities of Superfine and No. 2 attracted the most attention.....Sales have been reported since our last of 13,700 bbls. at all grades.....included in the reported sales were 1,800 bbls. low Extras, for shipment, within the range of $4 10@$4 20, and 1,000 bbls. choice Double Extra Mill Extras, mostly for the West indies, at $4 70@$5, for about fair to very choice, in new pks., and for English markets, at $5 25@$5 50 for 2,600 bbls. Minnesota and Wisconsin clear, (these at $3 60@$4 75, of which about 1,000 bbls. for export, mostly at $3 90@$4 92½.....and 1,000 bbls. Spring Wheat, at $3 90@$5, barrel, at $4 50@$5 35;) 4,598 bbls. Patent Extras, (these at $5 50@$7 25;) 928 bbls. Superfine, (these at $3 15 for inferior to fair, $3 20@$3 50 for good to choice, and $3 60 for very fancy Winter: 600 bbls. very good to choice Winter went at $3 40@$3 50;) 750 bbls. No. 2, (these at $2 35 @$2 50 for common to fair, and $2 60@$2 65 for almost choice to fancy Winter at $2 80@$3, the latter rate delivered;) and sundry lots unsound and Sour Flour at from $3 25 @$3.....Southern Flour has been quiet and steady. 600 bbls. sold, in lots, mostly Extras, at from $4 25@$5 50.....Rye Flour quoted steady; 880 bbls. sold, chiefly at $4 85@$5, for fair to choice, and $5 25@$5 50 for fine.....Corn-meal fairly active, at former prices; 1,800 bbls. were sold, of which 1,500 bbls Brandywine at $2 80.....Buckwheat Flour has been in moderate request, and quoted at $1 70 @$1 85, selling mostly at $1 75@$1 80, (fancy lots ruling higher.).....Buckwheat, last, sold at 48c.

FISH—A generally firm but rather quiet market has been reported since our last.....Sales include 1,100 bxs. Layer Raisins at $1 57½@$1 60; 1,500 bxs. loose at $1 70; 1,800 half bxs. Valencia do. at 9½c.; 280 bbls. Currants at 3¾c.@4c.; 100 cases Sardines, quarter-bxs., at 11c., 115 casks Turkey Prunes at 5½c.@5¾c.; 20 cases Citron at 13¾c.

GRAIN—A restricted business has been reported in Wheat for shipment, however, has been offered with less urgency and quoted generally steadier, in instances a shade dearer, though leaving off at the extreme close less buoyantly. The speculative inquiry has been quite moderate. Spring Wheat has varied little in price, but has been very quiet. Cable advices were of rather weak markets. Reports from the West were variable, but at the close of a trifle firmer.....Sales have been reported to-day of 323,000 bushels, (of which 163,000 bushels for export,) including 3,200 bushels Extra White at $1 12@$1 12½, (an odd car-load reported as low as $1 10¼, and boat-loads quoted as high as $1 13;) 13,000 bushels White State at $1 11@$1 11½; 18,000 bushels No. 1 White $1 10½@$1 10¾; 800 bushels do., steamer grade, at $1 07; 40,000 bushels No. 2 Red, on the spot, 07@$1 07½; 800 bushels No. 3 White at $1 03½@$1 04; 14,000 bushels ungraded White at $1 07@$1 10¾; 2,000 bushels No. 1 Red at $1 09½; 2,000 bushels No. 2 Red at $1 09½@$1 09¾; 32,000 bushels do., January options, at $1 09¾; 24,000 bushels do., February options, at $1 09½@$1 09¾, and 2,000 bushels do., March options, at $1 11; 1,600 bushels No. 3 Red at $1 03½@$1 04, closing at $1 04 for car lots, (owing to a boat load higher;) 13,000 bushels Amber at $1 07@$1 08; 17,000 bushels No. 2 Amber at $1 07½@$1 07¾; 40,000 bushels do. January options, at $1 07¾; 16,000 bushels do., February options, at $1 08; 3,000 bushels do., March options, at $1 09¼; 3,000 bushels ungraded Amber at $1 08@$1 11; 2,500 bushels No. 1 Spring at $1 04; 2,000 bushels No. 2 Spring at 98c.@ $1 01; 1,000 bushels No. 3 Spring at 93c., (of which 8,000 bushels choice Chicago at 93c.;) 18,000 bushels unraised Spring at 72c.@98c., (chiefly at 72c.@73c.;) 7,200 bushels Rejected at 69c.@72c. Little active business has been reported in Corn for early delivery at a shade firmer prices. The main call has been for No. 2, old crop, for shipment. New York was quoted Mixed and No. 2 in demand for export. Options tame but indicative of steadiness.....Sales have been reported of 296,000 bushels, (of which 224,000 bushels for early delivery,) including New-York No. 2 at 51c., delivered, and choice, to arrive, at 48c.; do., in store, 56,000 bushels prime, at 46¾c. @47c., (48,000 bushels at 47c.;) New-York No. 2, January option, 47¾c.@48c.; do., February, 48c.@48¼c.; do., March, 48¾c.@49c.; New-York steamer Mixed, 46¾c. @47c.; do., March, 16,000 bushels, at 46¾c.@46¾c.; No. 2 Western, 46¾c.@47c.; do., January option, 46¾c.; steamer Mixed at 45¾c.@46¾c.; Western Mixed, January option, 46¾c.@47c.; do., February, 8,000 bushels, at 44¾c.; Mixed Western, ungraded, 46¾c.@48c., (for Grades 1 to 2 Southern Mixed, New-York, 46¾c.@47c.; 10,000 bushels for export at 45¾c., and 8,000 bushels at the same price.; New-York steamer White, a sample lot, at 48c.; do., February, 48¾c.; Mixed Western, new, at 46c.@46¾c.; No. 2 White, 49c.@ 49¾c.....Rye held firmly, but dull; odd lots of Jersey from store, sold at 75c.; Canada, unsettled; a boat-load of six-rowed State rumored sold without reliable particulars.....Malt and Peas as last quoted.....Oats have been unusually active and generally higher; the main call was for the speculative line; more inquiry was reported for the grades of No. 2 White, chiefly for April option, and for Mixed, chiefly for early delivery.....Sales have been reported since our last of 1,000 bushels, including New-York Extra White quoted at 38c.@38½c.; New-York No. 1 White 38c.; New-York do., 2 White, 37½c.; New-York No. 2 Mixed, April delivery, 50,000 bushels, at 34c.; New-York No. 3 White, 2,800 bushels, at 32½c.@33c.; New-York No. 1 quoted at 31½c.; New-York No. 2 at 31c.@31¼c.; New-York No. 3 quoted at 30½c.; White Western, 3,600 bushels, at 33¼c.@35c.; Mixed Western, 1,400 bushels, at 31½c.; White State, 4,800 bushels, at 33c.@35c.; Mixed State nominal at 31c.@32c.; Rejected at 31½c.; New-York rejected, 700 bushels, at 29½c. and a car-load of Jersey at 31c. Feed quoted as before, on a fair inquiry.....Bale Hay has been in generally good request, especially the better qualities, which have been quoted firmer.....We quote shipping qualities at 85c.@90c., for poor to fair; for very choice, and retailing qualities at 95c.@98c. for fair to very choice ₱ 100 ℔. Clover, 90c.@95c.; Salt Hay at 30c.@45c.....Straw has been more active, with prices quoted at from 40c.@ 60c.; Oat, 30c@45c.....Seed steady on a slow

JAN 25 1879

INDEX TO CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS.

AMUSEMENTS—Seventh Page—6th and 7th cols.
AUCTION SALES—Seventh Page—7th col.
BANKRUPT NOTICES—Sixth Page—7th cols.
BOARDING AND LODGING—Seventh Page—5th col.
BUSINESS CHANCES—Seventh Page—4th col.
BUSINESS NOTICES—Fifth Page—5th and 6th col.
CITY HOUSES TO LET—Seventh Page—1st col.
CITY ITEMS—Fifth Page—5th col.
CITY REAL ESTATE—Seventh Page—1st col.
COAL AND WOOD—Seventh Page—4th col.
COPARTNERSHIP NOTICES—Seventh Page—5th col.
DANCING—Seventh Page—7th col.
DEATHS—Fifth Page—6th col.
DIVIDENDS—Seventh Page—5th col.
ELECTIONS—Seventh Page—5th col.
FINANCIAL—Seventh Page—4th col.
FURNISHED ROOMS—Seventh Page—5th col.
HELP WANTED—Sixth Page—4th col.
ICE-CREAM—Seventh Page—7th col.
INSTRUCTION—Sixth Page—6th col.
LEGAL NOTICES—Seventh Page—6th col.
MARRIAGES—Fifth Page—6th col.
MISCELLANEOUS—Sixth Page—4th col.
MUSICAL—Seventh Page—7th col.
NEW PUBLICATIONS—Fifth Page—6th and 7th cols.
RAILROADS—Seventh Page—3d col.
REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION—Seventh Page—1st col.
RELIGIOUS NOTICES—Sixth Page—5th and 6th cols.
REWARDS—Seventh Page—7th col.
SAVINGS BANKS—Seventh Page—4th col.
SHIPPING—Seventh Page—2d and 3d cols.
SITUATIONS WANTED—Sixth Page—4th col.
SPECIAL NOTICES—Fifth Page—6th col.
STEAM-BOATS—Seventh Page—3d and 4th cols.
STORES, &c., TO LET—Seventh Page—1st & 2d cols.
TEACHERS—Sixth Page—6th col.
WATCHES, JEWELRY, &c.—Sixth Page—4th col.

The New-York Times.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JAN. 25, 1879.

AMUSEMENTS THIS EVENING.

BOOTH'S THEATRE.—At 2 P. M.—Aida.
WALLACK'S THEATRE.—Ours. Matinée.
UNION-SQUARE.—Banker's Daughter. Matinée.
PARK THEATRE.—Dot. Matinée.
NIBLO'S GARDEN.—Ben. McCullough. Matinée.
STANDARD THEATRE.—H. M. S. Pinafore. Matinée.
THEATRE COMIQUE.—Vaudeville. Matinée.
FIFTH-AVENUE THEATRE.—Dr. Clyde.
ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—Hayden.
THE AQUARIUM.—Afternoon and Evening.
SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS.—Minstrelsy. Matinée.
CHICKERING HALL.—Symphony Concert.
MASONIC HALL.—Tom Thumb Troupe. Matinée.
GILMORE'S GARDEN.—Skating and Music.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

TERMS, POSTAGE PAID.

The Daily Times, per annum, including the Sunday Edition.....$12 00
The Daily Times, per annum, exclusive of the Sunday Edition..... 10 00
The Sunday Edition, per annum..... 2 00
The Semi-Weekly Times, per annum..... 2 50
The Weekly Times, per annum..... 1 00

BRANCH OFFICES OF THE TIMES.

The Times Up-town Office—No. 1,258 Broadway.
Paris Office of The Times—No. 39 Rue de Lafayette.
The Times is on sale in London at No. 449 Strand, W. C., from Henry F. Gillig & Co., and at Mr. Stevens', No. 4 Trafalgar-square.

The Signal Service Bureau report indicates for to-day in this region, warmer southerly to westerly winds, and partly cloudy weather, with slight changes in barometer, followed during the night by colder north-west to south-west winds and rising barometer.

Whatever may be the duty which Senators owe to the "dignity" of their august body, it is a great pity that it should have to be asserted in defense of a Brazilian subsidy and the franking privilege. Yesterday the Post-route bill of last session came up on a motion to appoint a new Conference Committee, the House having rejected amendments from the Senate, including the two above mentioned. The motion was agreed to by 30 to 22, seven Democrats voting in favor of, and two Republicans against it. Subsequently a debate ensued on the action of the House as a denial of the rights of the Senate, and a number of Senators warmly condemned the course of the other body. We are strongly inclined to believe that the House was justified both by law and custom and by sound policy, in rejecting the amendments referred to. They were in the nature of new legislation, and the rules of the Senate forbid them as such. They were precisely such propositions as the Senate has many times refused to receive in an appropriation bill from the House; and they were certainly mischievous, as well as impertinent. The Senate injures its influence as a conservative body by such propositions, which may fairly be called tricks, and if its rights have really been encroached upon, it would do well to select some other subject in connection with which to vindicate them.

Senator Edmunds made another attempt to get his resolutions before the Senate yesterday, and failed by the action of Senators Garland and Bruce. The former, although paired with Mr. Kirkwood, of Iowa, on political questions, saw his way clear to vote for an adjournment, expressly intended to defeat a Republican proposition. Had he obstained from voting and had not Mr. Bruce absented himself, there would have been a tie, and Mr. Wheeler would doubtless have decided the vote against adjournment. It will be seen that it will prove exceedingly difficult for the resolutions to be got before the Senate. The Democrats evidently do not desire to debate the propositions submitted by Mr. Morgan in their name. It would not be unlike Mr. Edmunds to renew the effort he is making as often as he thought the Democrats would resist it.

The Record's report of the speech of Mr. Bragg, of Wisconsin, on Wednesday shows that it was even more radical and effective than it appeared from the press summary. He took the strongest ground against all claims for damages by the war, and declared that there was no principle on which they could be justified; that they were the creation of a statute, and fell to the ground if the conditions of the statute had not been fully observed. His assertion that there was not one in a hundred claimants who was loyal was fully accepted by Mr. Ellis, of Louisiana, who declared that it was those who sustained the rebellion who were "loyal—loyal to their country, loyal to their God, loyal to the noblest and holiest emotions that ever animated the human heart"—[the italics are Mr. Ellis'.] One would say that if this be true, the Court of Claims might as well be abolished forthwith, and to do Mr. Ellis justice, he declared himself ready to vote for a constitutional amendment which should forever bar all claims growing out of the war.

Mr. Ellis made a curious diversion, in the course of his speech, in order to justify the Southern attempt to draw indefinite millions from the Treasury for internal improvements. He said that "the old Democratic doctrine of non-internal-improvement by the General Government" "rested upon the doctrine of State sovereignty, in other words, the right of secession." By the defeat of the rebellion the basis of the doctrine as to internal improvements was swept away, and "we recognize as the result of the war a great and radical change in the spirit of our Government." This is a very remarkable instance of the extraction of comfort from misfortune. We do not suppose that Mr. Ellis has any personal interest in the levee question, but, if he had, the refreshing coolness of his position ought to entitle his claim to generous consideration.

The Committee on Commerce has agreed to report the rejection of the nomination of Mr. Merritt, as Collector of this port. There was no dissenting vote, though the disposition of the Democratic Senators who were present is not accurately known. The action of the committee will not occasion surprise, in view of the facts cited by Collector Arthur in response to the accusations of the Secretary. It is very unfortunate that a man in Mr. Sherman's position should expose himself to such criticism as these facts justify. In addition to those which have already been made public, it will be seen by our dispatches this morning that the only "political appointments" for which Mr. Arthur can be blamed were made at the request of the Treasury Department, in behalf of the President. The general charge of incompetency is met by Mr. Sherman's own offer to attest Mr. Arthur's high character as an officer. If Mr. Sherman's attack on Mr. Arthur were made from personal motives, it would be contemptible; if, as is more probable, it be made in pursuance of the "policy" of the Administration, it is pitiable.

WESTERN USURY LAWS.

The belief that the loanable value of money may be determined by law is asserting itself. In New-York it has taken the form of a bill introduced by Senator Edick, of Otsego, fixing the rate of interest at six per cent. In the West, it obtains expression in the Messages of Governors, Republican and Democratic. Gov. Croswell, of Michigan, proposes the repeal of the provision of law authorizing contracts to be made at rates not exceeding ten per cent., and the substitution of a uniform rate of seven per cent. Gov. Cullom, of Illinois, suggests the reduction of the maximum rate to eight per cent. Gov. Phelps, of Missouri, recommends a reduction to six or seven per cent., and the enactment of a more stringent Usury law. Gov. Pilsbury, of Minnesota, does not commit himself to any specific change: he holds that the price of money is too high, and that legislation should make it cheaper.

An examination of the reasons assigned in support of these propositions does not inspire confidence in the financial sagacity of their authors. The Michigan Governor only knows that "an abundance of money can now be obtained on good security at seven and eight per cent."; and he jumps to the conclusion that these conditions are permanent. The Governor of Illinois concedes that "in commercial centres and in older communities" free trade in money may be expedient; for newer communities he would have stringent measures to prevent the exaction of heavier rates than those which the Legislatures deem desirable. Because money can be had in Chicago and St. Louis at eight per cent. while the farmers pay ten, he appears to think that the latter are an aggrieved class, for whose benefit the law should make an eight per cent. rule. He is confirmed in this opinion by the alleged cheapness of money in New-York and other Eastern cities, and the ability of the Federal Government to float a four per cent. bond. The Governor of Missouri dwells upon the same facts, and uses an argument still more muddled. Thus, admitting that in these times distrust is wide-spread, and that, for that reason, money is not easily obtained, he proceeds to make of the lenders' caution a grievance for which the debtor is entitled to redress. A rigid Usury law seems to his imagination just the thing required. The borrowing class—according to this Solon—will then have the advantage and money will be cheap! The Governor of Minnesota belongs to the same order of wise men. He has a vague notion that the "natural law of supply and demand" is as applicable to the price of money as to the price of wheat, but somehow, he believes, the law of the State, by reducing the maximum interest, may produce low rates of interest and thereby "increase the wealth of the State." He knows that circumstances compel business people to be satisfied with a small margin of profit, and he cannot discover why the man who has money to lend should not be equally accommodating.

If Gov. Pilsbury, obeying the dictates of his own logic, proposed the enactment of a law fixing the maximum and minimum price of a bushel of wheat, or of a barrel of flour, or of Minneapolis blankets, or of store goods in St. Paul, or the price of lots at Duluth, his friends would consider the propriety of transferring him to an insane asylum. All these things, it would be said, must be left to regulate themselves in the open market. The proposition would not be more absurd, however, than is the proposal to regulate the value of money on a basis to be determined by the value of money in other places. Minnesota, we are told, should not pay higher rates of interest than are paid in neighboring States. What is possible in Illinois and Michigan should be made possible, by law, in Minnesota. Gov. Cullom is a victim of the same delusion. Cities may be left to care for themselves, he argues; rural districts require the guardianship of the Legislature. But what causes the difference? For reasons which may or may not be good, lenders prefer the security of city property, where business activity gives greater assurances of value and availability, to farm property in sparsely-populated districts. Hence the acceptance of a lower rate of interest in one case than in the other. The law cannot obliterate the causes of the distinction, but, by denying the right of the lender to act upon the promptings of his judgment, it will increase the farmer's difficulty as a borrower. The average Western farmer is not a stickler about the rate of interest when he seeks the use of money, and he will be likely to prefer the getting of it at ten per cent. to the inability to get it which the passage of a rigorous Usury law will produce. The difficulties of a Missouri borrower will be still further increased if it be understood that legislation embodies the spirit manifest in Gov. Phelps' Message. The creditor is treated as a hard-hearted wretch, whom the law should fetter always and punish when it can; while the debtor is depicted as a long-suffering mortal, who should have the help of the law in his efforts to prevent the collection of borrowed money. Perhaps we should call this the orthodox Missouri doctrine,—so perfectly in keeping is it with the practice of indebted counties and municipalities, and with the attitude of the Missouri Democracy toward Eastern people who have money invested in the State.

Fallacious as are the arguments presented by these Governors in behalf of a legislative crusade against dear money, they have a parallel in the ideas entertained in regard to the causes of the present abundance of capital and the low rates of interest that prevail. In each case it is assumed that the supply of money is destined to remain in excess of the demand, and, therefore, that borrowers will hereafter be able to obtain it on their own terms. Let Gov. Cullom, or Gov. Phelps, or Gov. Pilsbury come to New-York, or Boston, in his private capacity, as a borrower, and he will quickly discover his mistake. He will find that the accumulation of idle capital denotes a disordered condition of credit which renders the lending of money almost impossible. There are no great enterprises to absorb capital; corporate loans are not heard of; business has not regained activity; and when borrowers do appear ordinary evidences of credit are unavailable. The banks, being choked with money, lend it at call, on securities that are immediately convertible. The proceeds of bonds called in for redemption, and much other capital, find their way into four per cent. bonds. Nevertheless, Messrs. Cullom, Phelps, and Pilsbury would have a hard time if they tried to obtain money, with no other evidence of fitness as borrowers than the ownership of Western farms. The fact would then dawn upon them that all the signs of cheap money which excite the envy of the West are results of an abnormal state of things, and will disappear whenever confidence shall be re-established and business activity restored. Moneyed men will not then be satisfied with four or six per cent. interest; and those of them who are inclined to invest in the West will either choose States that recognize a reasonable degree of freedom or will exact conditions stringent in proportion to the risk incurred. The true method of lowering Western rates of interest is to inspire confidence in the integrity of borrowers and in the administration of the law when contracts are involved. Of all the Governors who cry aloud for Usury laws and an enforced reduction of interest, not one has touched this method of obtaining the benefits desired.

A TIMES LIBEL SUIT.

The Times has had its fair share of libel suits. It may be doubted whether a newspaper can be at once aggressive, fearless, and independent, without being, with more or less frequency, sued for libel. In these days of an overcrowded legal profession, with its natural outgrowth of "speculative" lawyers, a libel suit against a newspaper is not, necessarily, a very expensive luxury for the plaintiff. In nine cases out of ten such suits are instituted merely for the purpose of silencing unpleasant criticism, or of inducing the public to believe that the person who has been assailed is eager and ready for the opportunity to "vindicate" himself. It will be readily inferred that the great majority of newspaper libel suits never come to trial. That, at least, has been the experience of The Times.

These remarks are not intended to apply to the libel suit which was yesterday closed by a verdict against The Times for six cents damages. The suit in question belonged to quite a different category from that with which we have been most familiar. The plaintiff had a grievance for which he mistook his remedy; the defendant had, unwittingly, caused pain and mortification to a most estimable and reputable gentleman, for which ample satisfaction was not accorded him. No injury was inflicted which could be appraised in a court of justice; no misunderstanding existed which a frank interchange of views could not have removed. Mr. Ellison S. Keitt, of Newberry, S. C., commonly known as "Col." Keitt, sued The Times for $50,000 as a solatium for the injury done to his reputation by the publication of a dispatch stating that Col. Keitt, of Newberry, S. C., had been arrested on a charge of bigamy. The person who had been arrested was one Thomas Keitt, of Newberry, a mulatto member of the South Carolina Legislature, a former slave, born on the Keitt plantation, and inherited as a chattel by E. S. Keitt, and whose right to be distinguished as "Colonel" happened to be decidedly more questionable than that of the plaintiff. The dispatch and a subsequent paragraph in which its publication was justified, assumed the reputed blood-relationship of the mulatto Keitt to his former masters, and though that assertion was not complained of as part of the alleged libel, it obviously furnished the animus of the prosecution. We may state now, as we would cheerfully have done at any time had the proofs been presented to us, that Thomas Keitt's assumed relationship to his former masters rested on mere casual gossip, and that his paternity is satisfactorily accounted for without connecting it with those whose name he adopted. We may add that the language of the dispatch was not such as to make a clear enough distinction between Ellison S. Keitt and Thomas Keitt, and that, though it could by no possibility have been held to apply to the former by those who knew him, its publication evidently exposed him to a somewhat annoying kind of notoriety, of which we very sincerely regret having been the occasion.

That the explanatory paragraph which was elicited by the letter from Col. Keitt's attorney did not express any such regret was mainly due to the character of the demand made upon us and to the interpretation which we put on the motives which instigated the arrest and subsequent conviction of Thomas Keitt. Col. Keitt did not seek from us either explanation or apology; he demanded the name of the person who had written the "private letter from South Carolina" on which the dispatch was based. Unless in the case of willful misinformation, a newspaper is not justified in divulging for purposes of prosecution the names of its news-gatherers. Toward our Southern friends we hold this obligation doubly binding, inasmuch as it would be very easy to find Southern juries who would regard their connection with The Times as in itself a crime. It happened, also, that about the same time we had received threatening demands from certain illicit distillers in North Carolina, and from other Southern citizens who fancied themselves aggrieved by the strictures of our correspondents, for the names of these correspondents. Regarding all these demands as part of a common desire to bully and to silence The Times, we treated them with very scant courtesy. We are free to confess that we misapprehended the character of Col. Keitt's request as completely as we believe he mistook the mode of eliciting a satisfactory explanation. Rightly or wrongly, too, the arrest and very prompt conviction of Thomas Keitt was believed to be part of a scheme of the White League Democracy of South Carolina to obtain complete control of the Legislature. That consideration did not tend to give us any special tenderness for the feelings of Mr. Ellison S. Keitt.

Better acquaintance with that gentleman has impressed us with the conviction that he is totally incapable of pursuing any object by mean or underhand methods. His demeanor on the witness-stand was that of an honorable and upright gentleman, who was perfectly careless what effect his testimony might have on his own case, but was scrupulously careful to avoid any concealment of the truth. He frankly admitted that his reputation had not suffered from the publication of the alleged libel, and he testified without any hesitation to the faithful manner in which the mulatto Keitt had discharged the functions of County Commissioner, Keeper of the Poor-house, and legislator. He had assisted in the defense of his former slave on the trial for bigamy, and Thomas Keitt, on his recent liberation from the Penitentiary, got a fresh start in life from Mr. E. S. Keitt. That the latter gentleman is not free from the characteristic weaknesses of the Southern planter, may be inferred from his persistent prosecution of the suit which was decided yesterday. For him, as for his distinguished friends who testified to his character and his exclusive claim to the designation of "Col." Keitt, there is but one society in South Carolina where "distinction" can originate, or whose recognition can raise a man above unnoticed obscurity. That society is, of course, all on one side of the color line. A kind master Mr. Ellison S. Keitt obviously was; a just employer, a public-spirited citizen, and a cultured gentleman he undoubtedly is. But we should suppose him to be incapable of regarding the negro in public life as anything but an anomaly, to be got rid of as quickly as possible, and we have had proof how keenly he resented the pretension that his former slave could possibly be spoken of in terms which were also applicable to himself. The moderation with which a Northern jury has appraised the damage which he has sustained may contribute to the educational process of which he and men like him stand so much in need. Could that process be accelerated, we should regard as one of the most hopeful instrumentalities for the regeneration of the South the influence on public affairs of men like Col. Keitt of Newberry.

FIRE INSURANCE RATES.

The fire underwriters of this City have decided for the present to go back to the system of schedule rating which was in force here five years since; and on this account those who have within the past few days been compelled to take out new policies of insurance or renew old ones have found that the premium asked was considerably larger than was demanded only a fortnight ago for insuring similar risks. Although this has been a sudden move, the action has not been unforeseen. For some months past our fire underwriters have been thinking of forming an association for the purpose of increasing the rates received for insuring property within our Municipal limits, and prior to the first of the two great fires we have recently had, a large number of them voted to organize a tariff association, and appointed a committee to prepare rules and regulations for the government of its future members. It cannot be doubted that the large losses which most of our companies have lately met with have made it far easier than it otherwise would have been to put this plan into execution, for, in order that it may succeed it is necessary that the underwriters should wholly abandon the reckless competition in rates which has gone on with increasing severity since 1875. This they might have done even had there been less reason for the change than there now is; but there were many who did not believe that an era of good will and friendly confidence could follow a period of mutual distrust and bitter business rivalry, with no other reason for the transition than the votes of a hundred or more underwriters. It is true that most of the fire insurance companies were doing a losing business in this City before this year opened, but as a rule it needs more than a general average of unsuccessful business to bring underwriters into hearty co-operation. If this were not so, they would have combined forces in this City twelve months ago, for New-York business was much more disastrous in its results in 1877 than it was in 1878. To make a union effective among independent companies some great striking loss was needed, and this having come, there is no reason why, with careful management, a well-arranged tariff of rates should not be maintained in this City.

It may be taken for granted that the system of rating found so serviceable in former days, when the underwriters were working together with the harmony that they now hope to attain, will be continued in the future. At that time the business buildings were carefully surveyed and a proportionate rate given to each; but what should be avoided by the new organization, if it wishes to have a term of life extending through years, is the error of starting this on too high a scale. The policy which the New-York Board of Fire Underwriters followed for some time after the Chicago fire seemed to be summed up in the words, "Make hay while the sun shines." The rates were pushed up to an unnecessarily exorbitant point, and every business enterprise had to pay a tax, for which it received no equivalent, in order to satisfy the greedy demands of the underwriters. But this very haste to make money brought about its own cure, for the premiums received were so much in excess of the value of the risks assumed that it no longer needed judgment and experience to become a successful underwriter. Any one who possessed a tariff-book could not go wrong, and in most cases he could cut down considerably on the printed rates without putting the company that he represented in more than ordinary peril. Both men and money gravitate toward a business that is exceptionally profitable, and thus the underwriters of this City found, after a period of unalloyed success, that they had brought into existence a large number of rivals and competitors. The past five years has been spent in an effort to equalize matters, so that the ratio between insurance capital and the property to be insured might be brought down to its normal condition. The experience has been a hard one; agency companies have been forced to discontinue business in this City, while a number of our local organizations have become insolvent. But at last a point has been reached which would seem to justify a change of practice, and instead of testing each other's financial vitality, the managers of these corporations may now ask themselves, is it not about time to earn something for those who hold insurance stock?

No property-owner can rightly object to the insurance companies receiving a fair return for the risks they assume, for their ability to pay a loss may at any time be to him a question of the highest importance, and to cramp their resources is to lessen the security they can offer to their policy-holders. But it is one thing to be well-paid and another thing to be over-paid, and the rock upon which the tariff organization is likely to split will be in mistaking the latter for the former. The volume of premiums received for insuring property in this City during the year 1878 will soon be definitely known, and this might be used as a basis for common action. The rates ought to be so adjusted that the companies shall receive in premiums from $1,200,000 to $1,500,000 more this year than they did last year. This might be done without raising the hostility of business men, on whom the extra load would principally fall, or without encouraging companies from other States that do not now do business in this City to come here. If more than this is attempted, though the profit for the time being may be large, the usefulness of the association will come to a speedy end, and its members will sink into a condition in which they will be no better off than they now are. All that the underwriters need to make them continuously fortunate is common prudence, a virtue which hitherto they have never seemed to possess.

CIVILIZED DOGS.

An eminent French veterinary surgeon has recently expressed the opinion that dogs are peculiarly susceptible to the influences of civilization. He finds that those animals which are brought up in the salons of Paris display a dignity and decorum in their behavior and show an intelligence altogether unknown to the boorish brutes that pass their days among the uncouth peasants of the rural districts. Well-educated dogs that move in the refined circles of the metropolis have a fine sense of propriety, not to say delicacy, and that calm self-possession that comes of good breeding, and often exhibit a keen sense of humor and even an appreciation of the higher forms of wit. On the other hand, those that associate with coarse characters about farm-yards and stables are usually awkward and stupid creatures or are given to rowdyish and unruly ways, such as their plebeian surroundings are calculated to beget. Any one who has associated on terms of intimacy with dogs, or has been a careful observer of their habits and manners, will find no difficulty in confirming the opinions of this French authority. He must have noticed that there are most emphatically dogs and dogs, and that their differences correspond in no small degree to the social and educational advantages which they have enjoyed. Dogs in a wild and unregenerate condition are little, if any, better than the Bushmen and Hottentots of South Africa or the savages of Patagonia and the Pacific Islands. In communities which we are wont to call civilized, but which in reality present a deplorable mixture of civilization and barbarism, where brutishness is carried to a degree of which the untutored savage is wholly incapable, dogs vary almost as much as men in their character. They may not rise to the same heights, but neither do they sink to equal depths. Everbody must have encountered dogs whose dignity of manners and ready perception of the fitness of things have put to shame the clumsy disregard of the proprieties which is so often found even in respectable human society. Certain it is that when not debased by evil associations, which even dogs cannot wholly resist, they are capable of an honesty and a fidelity to important trusts which are often deplorably lacking in men placed in similar circumstances.

Perhaps the noblest specimens of canine character are to be found in the middle ranks of life, where they associate chiefly with good, sensible people, who are accustomed to give a fair account of themselves, and to have duties and responsibilities that develop sturdy qualities. Here dogs are to be met with which never shirk their duty, are true to every obligation in life, resolute, faithful, and courageous, and free from that sloth and supercilliousness that are apt to come from luxurious surroundings. There are also aristocratic dogs, as ready to presume upon their social condition and become intolerable anobs as those human creatures with whom they are brought in contact. They sit in barouches and ride through the Park with a sense of superiority and an enjoyment of their absurd pretensions that are evident to the most careless observer. The pampered poodle or the petted pug becomes fastidious and lazy, and is often almost as shallow and conceited as those from whom he derives his manners and his education. That he does not read trashy novels and make fashionable calls is due to the single peculiarity, whether we regard it in his particular rank in life as a misfortune or otherwise, that nature has denied him the capacity for articulating words. No doubt, he has his frivolities that are quite as enervating and foolish, but which we cannot understand on account of a corresponding deficiency in our nature. It may be noticed that dogs which associate with sporting men, hunters, horsemen, and the like, partake of their tastes and enter with great zest into their pastimes. Dogs that are brought up on farms are apt to be clumsy, hulking fellows with some rough good qualities, but no conception of elegance of manners or propriety of behavior.

No doubt much depends, among civilized and uncivilized dogs, on descent and birth as well as education and social breeding. "Blood will tell" in the canine as decidedly as in the human race. Silk purses from sows' ears is a difficult manufacture, however the figure may be applied. Excellence of material is essential to excellence of product, no matter what skill and care may be expended in the intervening process. The higher and better qualities of character are developed through generations as well as in a lifetime, and happy is he that has a favorable start. The inheritor of intelligence and noble impulses has an advantage that gives the efforts of education a double effect. This is undoubtedly true of human beings and no less so of dogs. But it proves all the more that the latter are susceptible to civilizing influences, and who shall say how far they may be carried? Already some dogs are more to be respected and admired than some men, and fit to serve as examples of behavior. Which race has the higher average of good qualities is a question not to be decided off-hand, though it may be admitted that men reach far wider extremes. These considerations raise a frequent question of the proper treatment of canine members of society; for why should they not be admitted to belong to society? Man is not the only living thing necessary to the strength and progress of civilization. The humbler portions of the community perform a useful part, and have a right to be considered members. May we not, then, so cultivate and educate dogs as to make them at once more useful and more edifying? This would be better than the policy of repression, of muzzling and tying up or killing off, which should only be applied to the rank and unregenerate socialists among them. The policy which our friend Prof. McShane O'Donnell would have society carry out in respect to human beings might be applied to dogs without exciting the repugnance which its more general application would certainly arouse. That is, the vicious and worthless might be weeded out and doomed to a merciful destruction, and the rest improved and elevated with the greater care. Perhaps the success of this policy would give us a canine population of such excellence that it would exert a very beneficial influence by its character and example upon the human part of society, and greatly promote the progress of the world toward a purer and sounder civilization.

A short time ago a paragraph appeared in a London newspaper, presumably one of those "society" journals which so successfully make mischief, to the effect that "a very disagreeable story is told about a neighbor of Mr. Whistler, whose works are not exhibited to the vulgar herd. The Princess Louise, in her zeal, therefore, graciously sought those at the artist's studio, but was rebuffed by a 'not at home,' and an intimation that he was not at the beck and call of Princes." Mr. Rossetti writes that the story "is certainly disagreeable enough, but is devoid of the smallest nucleus of truth;" that he does not run after great people, but that the man who could rebuff the Princess Louise, to whom loyalty is due not more to her exalted position than to her well-known charm of character and artistic gifts, must be a curmudgeon, indeed, and he should have felt highly honored by her Royal Highness' visit. Society papers are furiously denounced in London now, but they survive because they maintain prurient the taste they helped to stimulate, and, moreover, the majority of those they attack have such weak points in their harness that even if innocent in the special spot assailed, they would submit to almost anything rather than appear in the witness-box.

Lucretia Mott, who lately delivered an address before the Pennsylvania Peace Society, and was unanimously elected President for the ensuing year, is, in many ways, one of the most remarkable women of the time. Although vigorous in mind as ever, and taking part in public affairs, she has just passed her eighty-sixth year, having been born Jan. 3, 1793. We can hardly think of a single man or woman still in active life, unless we except Peter Cooper and Sojourner Truth, who has reached such an age as Mrs. Mott. She was one of the very first Abolitionists in the Republic, having determined in her fourteenth year, while at a Quaker boarding-school in this State, to abstain from the use of anything produced by slave labor. This was when William Lloyd Garrison, usually called the Father of American Abolitionism, was only 3 years old. She was also conspicuous in the first Woman's Rights Convention, held at Seneca Falls, more than 30 years ago, and she has been devoted to the causes of woman and anti-slavery, and helped them ever since, by all the means in her power. In her twenty-sixth year she became a preacher—she has always been a zealous member of the Society of Friends—and traveled afterward in different States, including Maryland and Virginia, advocating the interests and emancipation of the negro and the most liberal views of the Quakers. She ascribes her longevity, with excellent bodily and mental health, to her simple mode of living, her continual self-restraint, and her constant intellectual activity.

The Colorado beetle or potato-bug has always been a terror to British agriculturists, who have been apprehensive that it might be imported from America and do the mischief it has done here. English entomologists have, therefore, been examining the subject, and have come to the conclusion that it is very doubtful if the beetle can be acclimated on British soil. They say that the insect does not thrive west of the Rocky Mountains, where the climate is more like that of England than it is in the Eastern States, and that while the American flora flourishes in England, the American fauna does not. Another reason for belief in entomic immunity is that there is a much larger number of insectivorous birds in Britain than here. The beetles would certainly play sad havoc in the tight little island should they get over there; for it is so very small that such an army of them as has invaded the West might ravage it from Cornwall to Northumberland in a single night.

Although the rents of dwelling-houses in certain sections of the West End of London are probably fully as high as the prices asked for residences on Murray Hill, it is none the less much easier in the English capital, or in its immediate neighborhood, to hire dwellings on moderate terms than it is here. It may be that the advertisements of real estate agents are not wholly to be depended upon, and that what appear to be highly advantageous offers, when read in the Times or the Telegraph, would turn out to be quite the contrary if they could be tested by personal examination. But after quieting one's judgment by this consideration, the fact still remains that the scale of prices ranges much lower there than here, and it cannot be that all the houses that are in the market are undesirable ones. One reads, for instance, of a mansion at Sydenham, (which, as most of those who have been in London know, is a respectable and fairly attractive suburb,) containing seven bedrooms with dressing-rooms, three reception-rooms, a dining-room, breakfast-room, morning-room, library, and conservatory, with coach-house and out-houses for the servants, which may be had, thoroughly furnished, for the modest sum of $140. This is but one sample, taken at random out of a host of offers; but will any one who has searched through Brooklyn, the Oranges, and the towns along the Hudson, point to a like instance of moderation on the part of American house-holders? The furnished house that can be had for $700 a year, even in the freshly-settled districts of New-Jersey, would not afford a basis for a description similar to the one we have just given, though the ingenuity and exaggeration of the owner or his agent were exercised to the utmost. And yet land is, if anything, dearer in and around London than it is here, and the cost of materials is not much less than it now is with us. It would thus seem that in spite of all the reductions that have been made we have not yet got our rents down to a gold basis, for there is no reason, now that our currency troubles have passed, why it should cost more to live in New-York than it does in London. The protective tariff adds unnecessarily to some of our expenses, but these increases are set off by the lower price at which we can buy food.

John Norris, who died at Petersburg, Va., a few days ago, is said to have been the last survivor of the famous naval engagement fought by Commodore Perry on Lake Erie, nearly 66 years since. He was a volunteer in the cavalry commanded by Col. Richard M. Johnson—the man who did not kill Tecumseh—and was with the forces of Gen. Harrison at Camp Seneca, on the Sandusky River, when Perry asked for volunteers for his ships. Norris, who was the first of 20 to answer the call, served on board the Caledonia, which captured the British brig Hunter, after a fierce contest. Several years ago an effort to gather all the survivors of Perry's victory at Put-in-Bay resulted in the discovery of only four. Soon after three of them died, and the death of Norris removes the last survivor; so it is said at least. But we cannot believe it. We feel sure that in a few months, or weeks, perhaps, we shall be reading of the decease of another last survivor of that engagement, and in due time of another and still another. No man ever seems to be the last of anything. The mere fact that anybody has taken, or is presumed to have taken, any part in any memorable event appears to insure extraordinary longevity. And then there are always an inordinate number of survivors of battles and the like. Nothing but the conviction that a human being cannot live much beyond 100 years prevents us from getting accounts of fellows alive to-day who had fought at Cannes, Philippi, and Actium.

The great enlargement in the size both of steam and sailing vessels, which has taken place within the past few years, is an illustration of the theory of gradual development and natural selection. It is not a great while ago that it was thought that a sailing vessel of more than 1,000 tons register, and a steamer of over 2,500 tons, were too large and cumbersome to be profitably used; and singular as it may seem to us now, the opinion was at the time a sound one, and those who greatly varied from it did so at considerable loss to themselves. Take the case of the ship Great Republic, which, before she was razeed, was not, if we remember aright, much, if any, larger than quite a number of sailing vessels that are now afloat. But twenty years ago her size made her a naval wonder, and, furthermore, caused her possession to be financially disastrous to her owners. There was always delay attending her loading, for she was as ill-suited to the demands of trade, as then understood, as a man twelve feet high would be to a modern dwelling-house. Besides this, her running expenses were more than proportionately greater than those of smaller craft, for experience had not then taught ship-owners how to rig and man large vessels in an economical manner. The same may be said of the Great Eastern, which was constructed out of time, and which, if it had not been for the unforeseen work of laying submarine cables, would long ere this have been broken up and sold for old iron. But in all probability sailing vessels and steamers will, within a few years, be built which will outrank in size both of those above mentioned, and their dimensions will be in them a profitable feature; only the growth will be regular and in accordance with the laws of supply and demand. This adaptation of means to ends is seen in the increased capacity of the transatlantic freight steamers, which now often carry 5,000 and 6,000 tons of freight with but little more outlay than was formerly required to transport one-third of the amount. A steamer that can carry 5,000 tons of wheat can be sailed, in consequence of recent improvements, almost as cheaply as one that can carry but 2,500 tons. There will be a small addition to the coal bill, and two or three more coal-heavers and stokers will be needed; but after paying these, if sufficient cargo can be had, the former can be run at a profit where the latter would not obtain a high enough rate of freight to pay expenses. It has been suggested that in establishing a new line of freight steamers between this port and Europe the New-York Central Railroad Company's managers have not borne this circumstance sufficiently in mind. The steamers that have been named for this route are relatively small boats, and if the competition in ocean rates became excessive, they would soon be driven from the trade by such vessels as the Hooper, which came to this port not long ago, or by such large freighting boats as those which Messrs. Leyland & Co., of England, are running between Liverpool and Boston.

AMUSEMENTS.

"MIGNON" AT BOOTH'S THEATRE.

A full audience, ready to applaud, and only too anxious to be pleased, assembled at Booth's Theatre last night, attracted by the names of Mme. Di Murska, Miss Kellogg and Miss Cary. The opera was Thomas' "Mignon," with Miss Kellogg in the part of the heroine, and Mme. Di Murska as Filina. It is an ungracious task to have to record the fact that neither of these ladies can be said to have scored a success. An apology was made in advance for Mme. Di Murska, who was announced to be suffering from a cold, and criticism is therefore, in her case out of place. Miss Kellogg was, apparently, in robust health, as her performance in the first act showed. She was not at all satisfactory in her rendering of the rôle, for she seemed in the first act to have retained from her last appearance the air of Carmen in her action, and to those who remember Nilsson's lovely impersonation of Mignon, this was a fatal blight in her effort throughout the evening. Nor did she sing very well it may be added. Her "Non conosci" was her best effort, but it lacked the finish which a prima donna of Miss Kellogg's reputation should give it. Miss Cary made an impression in the slight part of Federico, and was warmly welcomed by the audience, with whom she is always a favorite. The male parts were unmistakably weak. Mr. Westberg, the tenor, has a light, smooth, and perfectly musical voice, but as yet lacks power for the operatic stage, and is necessarily ineffective, though he phrases well and knows how to sing. The chorus and orchestra were as bad as usual. The season will be concluded with a matinée this afternoon, when "Aida" will be performed.

GENERAL MENTION.

The new management of the Fifth-Avenue Theatre will begin to-night, and "Dr. Clyde," which is said to be a very amusing play, will be seen for the first time in its English dress. A new local drama by Mr. James Steele MacKaye will be brought out at this theatre after "Dr. Clyde." It is also announced that "A Midsummer Night's Dream" is in preparation.

The third symphony concert of the Chickering Hall series will be given this evening by an orchestra under the direction of Mr. Carlberg, with the assistance of Mr. Richard Hoffman and Mrs. Barton, soprano. The programme is full and varied, containing Beethoven's "Fourth Symphony," Mendelssohn's "Ruy Blas" overture, a new concerto for piano and orchestra, by Brüell, and a cavatina of Mozart. There was a large attendance at the rehearsal on Thursday afternoon, and the audience to-night will undoubtedly be in accordance with the merits of the concert.

The "Arion" celebrated their twenty-fifth anniversary last night at Steinway Hall, by a concert, in which they had an excellent orchestra, under their conductor, Dr. Damrosch, and Mrs. Swift, soprano; Miss Henne, contralto; Mr. Bischoff, Mr. Graff, Mr. Remmertz, and others. There was a full house and a highly successful concert. Mrs. Swift, who is known as the soprano who succeeded

STATE LAW-MAKERS' PLANS.

YESTERDAY'S WORK IN THE SENATE AND ASSEMBLY.

APPROPRIATION FOR EQUIPPING THE NATIONAL GUARD PASSED IN THE ASSEMBLY—THE MANHATTAN SAVINGS BANK RELIEVED—A NEW SYSTEM OF REFEREES SUGGESTED—PROCEEDINGS IN THE SENATE.

ALBANY, Jan. 24.—"Unanimous consent" has until to-day carried every bill through the Assembly that its promoter was anxious to see passed. To-day the first Committee of the Whole House was formed, and a bill was considered, reported, read a third time, and passed in the usual course. The Chairman of the committee was Mr. Sloan, and it took up the Senate bill to appropriate $200,000 for equipping the National Guard. Mr. Husted, in order to explain the bill, moved to strike out its enacting clause, and then told the House that two years ago, when troops were called out to protect the railroads from threatened destruction, it was discovered that the National Guard, which was considered of very little account, was really of a great deal of importance as a protection to life and property. It was also discovered that it was very imperfectly equipped. Last year an effort was made properly to equip the guard, and the speaker suggested that $500,000 would be necessary. The Adjutant-General thought that the amount was too much to ask, so the speaker yielded to his superior officer and half that amount was appropriated. The result was that the Guard was only half equipped, while $200,000 would equip it completely.

Mr. Brooks supported Mr. Husted, explaining to Mr. Hepburn—who objected to appropriating so much money, without more consideration of the bill, at so early a stage of the session—that the Ways and Means Committee had given the matter an examination, and approved the bill, after it had amended it so as to provide for the care of the equipments to be purchased. Mr. Langbein and Mr. Brennan also spoke in favor of the passage of the measure, and it was passed—77 votes in the affirmative and none in the negative.

The Committee on Banks yesterday held a meeting in the Assembly Chamber, the committee-rooms not being ready for occupation yet, and considered the resolution offered by Mr. Flynn, calling upon the Manhattan Savings Institution for information. Mr. McLean, one of the Directors of the bank, appeared, and gave an account of the robbery of the institution, and of the efforts its Directors had made to enable it to resume business. He said that several lawyers had made overtures to the bank officers to assist them in obtaining possession of the stolen securities, but that none of the offers had been considered. He said that in the meantime brokers had been making offers to depositors to buy their books at a discount of 25 per cent., thus throwing suspicion upon the Trustees. Mr. McLean then described the bill passed in the Senate, which was introduced to authorize the City of New-York to reissue bonds held by the Manhattan Savings Institution, and said that if this bill could be passed, then Congress would not hesitate longer about the reissue of the Government bonds, and that with both measures adopted the bank would undoubtedly reopen next week. The bill from the Senate was moved this morning by Mr. Strahan, and Mr. Sloan made a presentation of the facts for the benefit of the depositors. He said he was opposed to hurrying through such bills, but this case called for prompt treatment, and he believed that it would be well to pass the bill. Unanimous consent was given to read it a third time, and it was passed by a vote of 81, without opposition.

Mr. Langbein's bill in relation to the appointment of official Referees in the First Judicial District provides that the Presiding Justice of the Supreme Court, the Chief-Justice of the Superior Court, the First Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, and the Chief-Justice of the Marine Court, then appoint 20 "good and reputable gentlemen," members of the Bar of the degree of counsellor at law in the Supreme Court, and residents of New-York, to act as official Referees. Their fees are to be paid by the prevailing party, and the taxes shall be: For every attendance and adjournment without hearing, $4; for every attendance and hearing, examination of witnesses, production of documentary evidence, or argument of counsel, $3; for making a report and engrossing a copy for the court, 10 cents per folio of 100 words, and a like sum for all necessary copies of testimony, exhibits, or other papers; for attendance on sale of real estate when adjourned, $3; when sold, $5 for each lot or parcel sold; for drawing and executing a deed or other conveyance as such Referee, $5.

Mr. Hayes' bill to prevent the making and publication of false or deceptive statements in relation to the business of fire insurance is an amendatory act. It makes it the duty of the Superintendent of the Insurance Department to bring violations of the law to the attention of any company committing the same, and if the company is chartered by the State, to report it to the Attorney-General for dissolution. If it be a company incorporated in any other State or country, it shall be his duty to revoke its authority to do business in the State.

Mr. Langbein offered a resolution, which was adopted, calling upon the Police Commissioners of New-York to report within 10 days the steps taken by them to reduce the pay of the Police force, and under what authority they act. Mr. Gentsch, of Erie, called by resolution upon the Canal Board for the roll-call of 1879. Mr. Saunders, of Madison, asked that the use of the Assembly Chamber be accorded to the State Medical Society for Wednesday evening, Feb. 5; and Speaker Alvord, rising to debate the question, favored granting the request, suggesting that the old Capitol was the building to be used for such purposes and not the new one.

Mr. Strahan pushed through to its third reading the bill authorizing the City of New-York to sell a strip of land on the north side of the Park Office, which the United States authorities propose to roof over and thus furnish a place where the mails can be unloaded under cover. There being scarcely more than enough members in the House to furnish the requisite number of votes, it was ordered to third reading.

Mr. Holahan caused some merriment by offering a resolution, which was read and then returned to its writer as not being of the privileged order. It provided that the Clerk be ordered to furnish 127 ear-trumpets for the use of members, and that acoustic apparatus be raised behind the Speaker's seat. The Assembly adjourned until Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

The session of the Senate was brief and the proceedings unimportant. Senator Hicks' bill, extending the privileges of married women, was discussed in committees and progressed. The bill comprises only one section, which reads as follows: "A married woman may enter into any engagement, transaction, or contract, with any other person, respecting property, the same as she might if she were unmarried." Mr. Ecclesine opposed the bill as a dangerous innovation on old established doctrines relative to the rights of married women, and one that would lead to very bad results.

J. F. Pierce introduced, by request, a bill prohibiting the building of an elevated railroad in Myrtle-avenue, Brooklyn. The Brooklyn delegation in both houses appear to be between two fires in the matter of elevated railroads for that city, and are afraid to take the responsibility of any act touching the subject, even to the introduction of a bill. Two-thirds of their constituents are clamoring for quicker transit, either elevated or underground, while the other third, comprising real estate owners and horse railroad companies, are threatening with political death any member who shall advocate quick transit, unless it be by land and through a route that will not interfere with their interests.

Senator Robertson has appointed the new Senator, Thomas Murphy, to the same places on the standing committees that were held by his predecessor, John Morrissey.

RECEIVERS NOT TO BE FOUND.

REPLY OF SUPERINTENDENT LAMB TO THE SENATE'S CALL FOR INFORMATION.

Superintendent Lamb yesterday sent in a communication to the Senate, as follows:

To the Honorable, the Senate:

In compliance with the resolution of your honorable body, * * * "That the Superintendent of the Banking Department be requested to inform the Senate who the Receivers are that refused to answer his inquiries, and also to communicate the names of those Receivers whom he cannot find," I respectfully report that, in seeking information as to the liquidation of insolvent banks, I found a tabular exhibit in a public newspaper, (THE NEW-YORK TIMES,) which purported to give the titles of the failed savings banks, the names of the Receivers or Assignees, and other facts. I had personal knowledge of the preparation of that exhibit in the Fall of 1877, and feel some confidence in its substantial accuracy. The record shows these statements:

Name of Bank.	Date of Closing.	Name of Receiver.	When Last Dividend was Declared.
Guardian	Nov., 1871	Jeremiah Quinlan, removed. Peter J. O'Donohue, removed. John T. McGowan.	Aug., 1874.
Bowling Green	Nov., 1871	Sheppard F. Knapp	April, 1873.
Market	Jan., 1872	James Banks, removed. Francis W. Worth, Assignee, died. John L. Platt, Assignee.	March, 1873.

I wrote to these alleged Receivers and Assignees and to all others therein named, using the New-York City Directory to obtain the precise address. No answer was made by each alleged Receivers or Assignees above-named, and a second inquiry was addressed to each one of them, but no reply has yet been received by me, and none of the letters of inquiry have been returned to the department. From all the others responses were procured.

As I have already reported, the National Savings Bank of New-York was closed in 1871 by its Trustees, and its affairs are said to have been settled, and the depositors are reported to have been paid in full by John B. Green, Treasurer of the corporation. I am not aware, however, that the transactions have ever been examined and the accounts audited and approved, as is the custom in cases of regular proceedings in insolvency. It is true, as far as I am informed, that no depositor has made a complaint at the department that he had not been paid.

I was also informed, upon authority which I deemed trustworthy, that Daniel Pratt and Patrick Lynch, of Syracuse, have been, if they are not now, the Receivers of the People's Safe Deposit Company and Savings Institution of Syracuse and Utica, which failed in 1872. To them I also sent letters of inquiry, but have never received any reply to them. I cannot affirm that in these four cases I have found the actual Receivers of the insolvent corporations. I have used such wit as I have to find them. The persons supposed to be Receivers, and to whom inquiries were addressed, have failed to give me any information as to whether they are Receivers or not, and if they are, to state what their transactions have been and what the situation of the estates is. Very respectfully yours,

HENRY L. LAMB,
Acting Superintendent.

NOTES FROM THE STATE CAPITAL.

ALBANY, Jan. 24.—The Senate Committee on Retrenchment has had one or two meetings, at one of which it adopted a resolution calling upon the Controller for a report of the salaries paid in all of the State departments. The Controller replied that the information was contained in his annual report. The committee then adopted a resolution calling upon the Controller for a detailed list of all the clerks, messengers, &c., employed in the various State departments, with the salary paid to each.

Judge Osborn has confirmed the action of Charles E. Patterson, Receiver of the Merchants' and Mechanics' Bank of Troy, in bringing an action against the Schaghticoke Woolen Mills upon two $1,000 notes due the bank. He also authorizes the Receiver to commence such action against the Trustees of the said bank and the employment of Moses Warren, of Troy, and Rufus W. Peckham, of Albany, as counsel.

GENERAL NOTES.

A St. Louis woman applied to the Mayor for money from the City Treasury to defray the expenses of her suit for divorce.

Canadian papers report that the Prince of Wales is under promise to visit Ottawa during the tenancy of the present occupants at Rideau Hall.

The Boston Post says that "few or no great men live in their descendants." And it is right in the homs of the Adamses that such language is used.

The late Major John H. New, of New-Orleans, bequeathed all his property to a lady in Europe who once nursed him and his wife through a severe sickness.

A Memphis paper says that Gen. Pillow's death, some months since, was caused by inflammation originating in one of the wounds he received in Mexico.

The Louisville Courier-Journal alleges that a pointer dog in Virginia kept up for four miles with a train running 20 miles an hour, and was lifted aboard without stopping.

A Democratic paper in Kentucky reports that the Republicans of that State are bringing forward the name of Gen. Eli H. Murray for Governor, and it speaks kindly of him.

The Western Association of General Passenger Agents, at its session in St. Louis, voted to limit the amount of baggage to 150 pounds for each passenger ticket of any kind.

A Greenback member of the Legislature of Iowa, visiting the State Insane Asylum, asked the Superintendent if they had received any Greenbackers as patients, and was told that they were not allowed to admit incurables. He turned the subject.

Charles Schmidt, the fashionable tailor in New-Orleans, in the good old days before the war, bequeathed nearly $25,000 to charitable institutions of that city, including Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish asylums. His estate is valued at $80,000.

The Dubuque (Iowa) Times commends the President's selection of Major William G. Thompson for Chief-Justice of Idaho, and says that he is one of the ablest lawyers in Central Iowa, a gentleman of learning, honor, large experience in his profession, a sound Republican, and of great personal popularity.

A woman has appeared in Pittsburg, Penn., claiming to be the widow of Hon. Robert W. Mackey, and will contest his will. She asserts that she was married to him 20 years ago, and had two children, a son and daughter, by him. Mr. Mackey's will was made two years ago, and divides his property equally among his three sisters and one brother.

The Mary Fletcher Hospital in Burlington, Vt., built and endowed by Miss Mary Fletcher, of that city, was formally opened on Wednesday, the principal address being delivered by Dr. D. B. St. John Roosa, of this City. The cost of the site was $25,000, and of the buildings $50,000, and the permanent endowment fund of the hospital is $110,000.

The Cleveland (Ohio) Leader says that if the editors of honest-money newspapers in the West should some time publish their recollections of the personal advice, abuse, and protest that they have received, from intelligent and honest men, too, against the iniquity of fighting on the side of the "gold bugs," their collective reminiscences would form an interesting and instructive history.

Baltimore is to have another art exhibition in the Spring, especially of American pictures, and an agent is to be sent to this City to select about 100 late productions of artists here. Seventy-five per cent. of the net proceeds of the exhibition are to be applied by the Trustees of the Peabody Institute to the purchase of paintings, a preference being given to American art, and 25 per cent. will be paid to the Decorative Art Society of Baltimore.

New-Hampshire reports the death of six centenarians in 1878, the oldest being 111 years of age. Mrs. Maria Beers, of Cheshire, Conn., celebrated her ninetieth birthday on the 21st inst., and there were 10 lady guests present whose ages, with her own, aggregated 909 years, the oldest being 93. The aggregate ages of six brothers and sisters living in Livingston County, this State, is 496 years, the oldest being 88 and the youngest 74. Three of the family have died, aged respectively 81, 80, and 50 years, the last of a fever contracted in the West.

A SLEIGH-RIDE WITH VARIATIONS.

From the Trenton (N. J.) Gazette, Jan. 24.

A party of 14—seven girls and the same number of young men—who reside in this city, started out the other evening behind a pair of shoeless mules for a ride to Dutch Neck, and it was with considerable difficulty that the aforesaid mules could retain their footing. Everything went along as merry as a marriage bell for about five miles, when to the discomfiture of the party the sleigh broke down. There was no blacksmith within miles of them, and the consequence was that the fellows were compelled to put their shoulders to the wheel and draw the sleigh the balance of the distance, while the girls sat within, enjoying themselves hugely. They reached their destination in the wee sma' hours of the morning, when they sauntered homeward, and sat down with a knitted brow around the stove until daylight. After considerable difficulty a blacksmith was secured, who restored the broken parts, and the homeward journey was begun. The mammas spent a sleepless night, and during the whole of the morning many and varied were the inquiries, until the excitement reached such a pitch that several parties started out to find the lost sheep. They had not proceeded far when they met the prodigals homeward bound and bringing their mules behind them.

AN EARTHQUAKE IN JEFFERSON COUNTY.

They have come to the conclusion in Jefferson County that an earthquake occurred there on the 15th inst. The Watertown Times says: "It is believed by very many people in the city that the singular reports heard at different points in the city on the morning of the 15th were caused by an earthquake. The reports were distinctly heard at Dr. Rosa's, Col. Flower's, A. M. Farwell's, Dr. Porter's, H. E. Conger's, Merrist Andrus', at several places on State and Factory streets, at the hotels, and at many other places about town. A gentleman from Black River said the reports were also heard there. At Dr. Rosa's house the inmates thought there were burglars in the cellar, and every one in the house got up. At one place the servant girl was so badly frightened that it was only after great effort that she could be made to understand that something awful had not happened. Nearly everybody in the city who was not sleeping soundly at that time heard the strange noises."

PRIZE FIGHTERS PLEADING TECHNICALITIES.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 24.—Arthur Chambers, John Clark, and John King were given a hearing at the Central Station this morning. They were charged with conspiring to engage in a prize fight. The prisoners' counsel contended that the Commonwealth could not make out a case against the accused, since the fight, even if had been agreed upon, had been arranged to take place outside of Pennsylvania, and the Commonwealth could not deal legally with the proposed breaches of the peace in Canada. The prosecution brought a number of witnesses to prove that a fight for money had been publicly arranged, and asked that the case be sent before the Judge in order that the question at issue could be passed upon. The defendants were accordingly held in $1,000 bail each for their appearance at court.

HOW THE DEMOCRATS WON.

THE TELLER COMMITTEE INVESTIGATIONS IN CHARLESTON AND NEW-ORLEANS—MORE OF THE STORY OF INTIMIDATION AND TISSUE TICKETS.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Jan. 24.—The Teller committee was engaged to-day in hearing evidence as to the conduct of the late election in Sumter, Williamsburg, and Richland Counties. Butler Spears, colored Republican, of Sumter County, testified that he was pursued and fired at by Democrats, and W. H. Singleton testified to finding packages of tissue tickets in the ballot-box at Swimming Pen Precinct.

The Democrats then put up C. H. Moise and Marion Moise, white Democrats, of Sumter, who testified to the general good feeling toward the colored people in the county, and the non-interference of the Democrats with the Republican meeting on Oct. 12. The former said he was disgusted with the conduct of the Democrats in offering violence to Sam Lee, and that the tissue tickets in the Sumter box could only have got there by fraud.

S. J. Hanna, colored, Supervisor, testified to being assaulted and driven from the polls at Kingstree, in Williamsburg County.

Deputy Marshal Pendarsa, colored, at the same place, was assaulted by a party of Democrats, who then, without being sworn, voted tissue tickets by the handful. Other Supervisors testified to being refused admission to other polling-places in the county.

R. E. Blair and J. H. Johnson, Republican Supervisors at Camden, in Kershaw County, testified that the polls were crowded by whites so that the colored people could not vote, and that he found large numbers of tissue tickets in the ballot-boxes.

J. M. Cantey and W. M. Shannon, Democratic Supervisors at the same place, and W. D. Trantham, County Chairman, testified that after 9 o'clock in the morning the crowding was over, and that everybody who chose to do so could vote, and that many colored people abstained from voting at the instigation of their leaders.

N. S. Shelton, Edward Benson, Preston Thompson, and other Republican Supervisors in Columbia, testified to interference with the United States officers by Democrats; also, to the voting of tissue tickets wrapped up in large Democratic tickets, and to the fraudulent voting, extensively and generally.

NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 24.—The counsel delegated by the Teller Investigating Committee to remain here and take testimony, to-day heard one witness. M. J. Cunningham, member of the Legislature for Natchitoches Parish, testified as follows: The general tenor of witnesses on the Republican side is to the effect of conspiracy on the part of Democrats to break up the negro meetings for political effect; such testimony is unqualifiedly false; there was no organized band such as Blount describes; no such action against Blount and others was taken for protection, they having threatened to get the negroes together and burn the town; it was reported that Blount had 10 or 12 armed negroes in his house; after consultation it was concluded it would not be safe to allow him to remain there garrisoned; I was acting Chief of Police; the affair was quietly managed; no violence or banishment was contemplated; it was solely for the purpose of preserving the peace that we determined to arrest him; no violent threats were made, as stated by Blount and his wife; I consider the Bredas as the most bloodthirsty men in the parish. If there were acting with Democrats they proposed to kill the Republican leaders; it was natural for us to think when they turned over to the other side, they would propose to kill us. The testimony of the witness throughout was contradictory of the Republican witnesses, except as to Blount, the Bredas, and others being advised to leave the parish, but the witness said the cause was not political. He declined to express an opinion as to whether it would be safe for the Bredas to return, they having done great injustice to the whole people of the parish.

THE WEATHER.

SYNOPSIS AND INDICATIONS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25—1 A. M.—Generally clear weather prevails in the Southern States, with warmer southerly winds and no change in the barometer. The barometer has fallen, with increased cloudiness and slight rise in temperature in New-England and the Middle States, where the winds have shifted to southerly. The barometer has fallen and the temperature risen in the lake region, with southerly and westerly winds and partly cloudy weather. Warmer and generally clear weather has prevailed in the North-west, with southerly to westerly winds. The barometer has risen rapidly in the Upper Missouri Valley, with colder northerly winds. The barometer is apparently lowest north of the lake region and high on the South Atlantic coast. The lower Mississippi has risen slowly. The Tennessee and Cumberland have fallen. The Ohio has risen 18 inches at Pittsburg, and fallen one foot at Louisville.

INDICATIONS.

For the upper lake region, the Upper Mississippi and Lower Missouri Valleys, warmer southerly to westerly winds and partly cloudy weather, with rising barometer, and, in the northern portions, light snow.

For the Middle States, warmer southerly to westerly winds and partly cloudy weather, with slight changes in barometer during the day, followed during Saturday night by colder north-west to south-west winds, and rising barometer.

For New-England, partly cloudy weather and light snow, with southerly to westerly winds and slight changes in temperature, with slight fall followed by rising barometer.

For Tennessee and the Ohio Valley, warm southerly to westerly winds, shifting to colder north-westerly, partly cloudy weather and stationary or slowly rising barometer.

For the lower lake region, south-west to north-west winds, with partly cloudy weather, followed during Saturday night by rising barometer and lower temperature.

For the South Atlantic and Eastern Gulf States during Saturday, warmer southerly to westerly winds and partly cloudy weather, with stationary or slowly-falling barometer.

For the Western Gulf States, warm east to south winds, partly cloudy weather, and stationary or falling barometer during the day, followed during the night by winds shifting to colder northerly, and rising barometer.

For the Northern and Central Pacific coast regions, generally cloudy weather and light rain.

For the Southern Pacific coast region, clear or fair weather.

The lower Mississippi and upper Ohio Rivers will rise slowly.

IN THIS CITY.

The following record shows the changes in the temperature for the past 24 hours, in comparison with the corresponding date of last year, as indicated by the thermometer at Hudnut's pharmacy:

	1878.	1879.		1878.	1879.
3 A. M.	15°	25°	3:30 P. M.	33°	36°
6 A. M.	17°	25°	6 P. M.	30°	36°
9 A. M.	20°	26°	9 P. M.	29°	33°
12 M.	24°	30°	12 P. M.	30°	32°

Average temperature yesterday.....30°½
Average temperature for corresponding date last year.....24°½

THE EXPERTS OF THE CUE.

SLOSSON'S AND SEXTON'S BRILLIANT PLAY.

SOME REMARKABLY LARGE RUNS SCORED—SLOSSON BEATS HEISER AND SEXTON DEFEATS DALY—THE FINE POINTS OF THE LATTER STRUGGLE.

The first week of the Brunswick and Balke Championship Tournament, after chronicling the largest run on record, was closed yesterday at Cooper Institute, with two of the most brilliant displays of scientific billiard-playing ever witnessed in the City. In the afternoon George Slosson, the Chicago star, and Randolph Heiser met, Slosson winning an easy victory. In the evening a very large number of ladies and gentlemen were entertained with an equally brilliant game between William Sexton, ex-champion, and Maurice Daly, in which the latter was defeated. Both games were marked by some astonishingly large runs. George Slosson whittled out a piece of chalk and chatted with Heiser pleasantly before the afternoon game began, and then both young men "banked" for lead, which Heiser won, but failed to use to any advantage. The players took some time to warm up to their work, and neither scored anything of account until the seventh inning, when Slosson, with 10 shots, gathered the balls on the top rail and began to swing his cue with graceful ease, tapping out carom after carom. The ivories turned to the left side rail and "broke," and the young Chicagoan began to play some pretty "position" shots, and soon brought them into obedience to his will again, and they rolled, with a gentle clicking, toward the bottom of the table, while the Boston boy player, Heiser, stood leaning against a post watching Slosson with a critical and admiring eye. The balls clicked out 140, and still obeying the young magician's wand-like cue, glided into position on the bottom rail. The player drove them onward with gentle caroms, but at 170 they began to grow refractory. They were quickly brought under control again, however, and rolled on a journey along the right side rail toward the point at which they had originally started. They "froze" on the two hundred and eighth shot, but Slosson made a pretty stroke from the string, and resumed his fine "position" play, and retired after having made 215 caroms, his score standing 231 to Heiser 8. The Boston boy could not get in trim, and once more the wand of Slosson was raised, and the ivory spheres were drawn into position on the left side rail, where they began another journey, guided by the player's cue, and, as he tapped, tapped, tapped with monotonous regularity, they responded with a faint "click," "click," "click," as though they were the pendulum of a clock wound up to run forever. They slowly stole away on the fifty-ninth shot, however, and gave Heiser an opportunity to play some brilliant shots, but he was unable to gain control of the balls. Slosson had meantime scored 300 in 37 minutes, by play that, for grace, skill, and judgment could not well be surpassed. He gathered the balls in the crotch later on, and fought hard for position, which he did not gain until he had played 30 fine shots. The balls "froze" directly afterward, and, counting from the string, he renewed his fight for the rail, but failing in the effort, retired after having scored 51 caroms, nearly 30 of which were prettily scattered on the open table. Heiser missed, and again the young Chicagoan returned to his task and rolled the balls up the left side rail. They broke away once, but did not free themselves from the cue, which quickly drew them unwillingly back, until, after 54 caroms, the cue slipped, and the player sat down, leaving Heiser a splendid position on the right side rail. The latter took advantage of it and began to reveal glimpses of brilliancy at "nursing," until the ivories meanly "froze" upon him after he had played 34 caroms, and he retired, not being able to count from the string. Poor play on both sides followed for a number of innings, "goose eggs" being gathered with frequency, until, in the twenty-fourth inning, Slosson drew the balls to his favorite rail, and then followed another brilliant display of "nursing," and open-table caroms, which brought the spellbound ivories across to the right side rail, up which they journeyed with their clock-like ticking, until they had chimed 119, when they evinced an inclination to "spread." They did "spread" directly afterward, and, having played them for 11 more, Slosson retired with a score of 553 to Heiser's 65. The young Bostonian went up to the table, played a splendid "round-the-table" position shot, brought the ivories to the left upper "crotch," and began to "nurse" them down the left side rail, but unfortunately slipped up on a "miss-cue," and retired amid applause after making 47. Slosson then played them neatly for 34, seemingly "miss-cueing" purposely on an easy shot to give his friend Heiser a chance to increase his score. The chance, however, was not taken advantage of, and with 13 caroms the Chicagoan closed the game, adding another piece of brilliant work to his credit. The following is the score:

Slosson—6, 0, 4, 2, 4, 0, 215, 2, 59, 0, 8, 1, 0, 0, 13, 51, 54, 0, 0, 0, 2, 0, 2, 130, 34, 12—600.
Heiser—0, 0, 0, 0, 4, 5, 1, 3, 0, 0, 0, 2, 0, 1, 2, 5, 0, 34, 1, 0, 1, 7, 1, 0, 47, 3—115.

Winner's average, 23 2-26; loser's, 4 11-26.
Best runs—Slosson, 215, 130; Heiser, 47, 34.
Umpire—Mr. Pulsifer for Heiser, Mr. Slosson for himself.

Referee—Mr. Michael Geary. Marker—G. H. Ellis.
Time of game—1 hour 31 minutes.

When Sexton and Daly walked up to the table in the evening, they were both greeted with applause while they chalked and sand-papered their respective cues. The "ivories" gave the lead to Sexton, who liked after making a scouting stroke from the string. The play on both sides was indifferent, although occasionally varied with a brilliant shot, until the fifth inning, when Daly left the balls in position, but slipped up on a difficult long "single cushion" shot, which left the balls in admirable position. The ex-champion immediately gathered the balls on the right side rail, and began to "nurse" with consummate skill and delicacy playing the balls slowly toward the bottom rail. "Seventy-seven," cried the marker, and with the exclamation the balls turned the corner, and the soft echoes of "kiss caroms" were heard through the hall for some moments, and then gave place to the clicking echoes of "nurse caroms." "One hundred and eight," was announced by the marker, and another corner had been turned with the ex-champion's well-known skill, and his cue, like Slosson's, seemed to have become the wand of a magician, whose influence the balls could but submissively obey. Slowly and softly they rolled together along the cushion. One hundred and eighty-two had been rung out, and they turned the top rail and traveled along it, counting 200 as they were half-way down. They unexpectedly "froze" on the two hundred and fourteenth shot, after having rotated the length of the table, and the player retired on an inaccurate shot from the string, with a score of 214 to Daly's 29. The latter walked to the table, swung his cue backward and forward for a difficult draw shot, and struck his ball too low, driving it off the table, forfeiting one point to Sexton. The ball was picked up and spotted, and in 12 shots Sexton had them again on the left side rail, and resumed his "nurse" game with marvelous delicacy of touch and great judgment. He caromed, and caromed, and caromed, until the marker's lungs began to weaken. Still the ivories kept rolling gently on the cushion, when the player, who was now thoroughly warmed to his work, was suddenly brought to a stop by a "freeze." It did not seem to disturb him, however, for he counted from the string, and began a series of the most beautiful position shots, but at length slipped up on an unlucky "miss-cue," because he had forgotten to chalk his cue. Daly saw the game quickly slipping away from him, but went to the table apparently cool and self-possessed, and began to handle his cue with grace and skill, until a spectator cried across the hall, "look out," disconcerting the player just as he was about to make a difficult "massé," and he sat down with a knitted brow after scoring 27 points. Sexton responded with 7, one of which was a brilliantly-executed "massé" that elicited loud applause. He was now nearly 300 ahead of his adversary, and in his tenth inning, after striving hard to gain the rail, gathered the balls on the right side rail and resumed his "nursing," playing carom after carom in rapid succession until his seventy-eighth shot, when he slipped up, leaving Daly as fine a "set up" as the latter could ask him in an earlier stage of the game. Daly now began some of his opponent's skillful play on the rail, driving the ivories in a reverse direction toward the bottom rail. They "broke" after a time, however, and he played some very fine shots on the open table, being frequently interrupted by applause. He failed to capture a good position, however, and retired after increasing his score to 109, Sexton's being 443. In a succeeding inning he gained the left side rail, after some pretty "position" shots, and then the clicking of the clock-work cue responded to the tapping of the player's skillfully-manipulated cue. They traveled slowly down the rail, turned the corner to the bottom rail, while the hush that had fallen upon the assembled spectators was broken by a shout of applause as 100 was called. From the bottom rail the ivories rolled to the right side rail, and clicked out 163, and then "broke." The chimes of caroms ceased, and were suspended by some beautiful open-table shots, and when the player retired at last, he had completed a run of 173, which ran his score up to 282. Sexton now began to swing his cue through his fingers, and to study the table for "position," playing every shot with great care and judgment. In the fifteenth inning, when he had 116 to go to close the game, he gained position on the right side rail, and by rapid and pretty "nursing" won the game, beating his opponent 316 points. Appended is the score:

Sexton—1, 1, 3, 0, 214, 123, 1, 5, 15, 77, 3, 11, 13, 17, 116—500.
Daly—1, 5, 7, 16, 0, 2, 27, 5, 5, 41, 0, 173, 1, 1—284.
Winner's average, 40; loser's, 20 4-14.
Best Runs—Sexton, 214, 123, 116, 77; Daly, 173, 41.
Umpire—Both Mr. Sexton and Mr. Daly acted for themselves.
Referee, Mr. Michael Geary; marker, G. H. Ellis.
Time of Game—1 hour 33 minutes.

On Monday afternoon A. P. Radcliffe will play Randolph Heiser, and in the evening Albert Garnier will cross cues with George Slosson. No games will be played on Saturdays during the tournament.

THE PASSAIC COUNTY GRAND JURY.

INDICTMENTS PRESENTED AND RECOMMENDATIONS MADE—THE M'DONALD LIBEL CASE.

The Passaic County (N. J.) Grand Jury came into court yesterday afternoon with 21 bills of indictment, (making 38 in all,) a presentment, and a sort of memorandum or semi-presentment. It was understood some days ago that the Morris Canal and Banking Company had been indicted for not keeping in proper repair a bridge at Browertown. A presentment was brought in yesterday against the company for the bad condition of the 14 other bridges of the company in Passaic County, especially on account of the excessive narrowness of some and the steepness of the approaches. The "semi-presentment" alluded to recommended that the County Jail be so altered as to provide for the separation of juveniles from other criminals, and complimented the Warden's management of the jail in other respects. It also recommended that all churches and halls in the city should have ample means of egress in case of a panic. This was suggested by the recent panic in the Cross-Street M. E. Church, which is extremely deficient in this respect.

It is understood that there were some very warm discussions in the Grand Jury on Wednesday, and again yesterday morning and afternoon, regarding the indictment of Joseph P. McDonald for libel in his Labor Standard. A bill was once voted upon and rejected, and one of the Grand Jurors incautiously dropped some remarks outside about who voted for and against the bill. Mr. McDonald published the reported vote, and warned people not to trade with the Grand Jurors who had voted to indict him. This raised a new breeze in the Grand Jury, and the excitement was very high. Two or three determined efforts were made this week again to indict him, but unsuccessfully, it is understood.

A communication was presented to the Grand Jury yesterday morning from the Director of the Board of Chosen Freeholders, inviting the fullest scrutiny into the administration of the county affairs, and tendering every facility to promote a thorough investigation. The communication was laid upon the table, only two or three members favoring an investigation.

OBITUARY.

J. T. WILLIAMS.

The death was announced on the Stock Exchange yesterday of Mr. J. T. Williams, another old member—the third among the founders of the Exchange in as many weeks. Mr. Williams was born in this City on Oct. 29, 1819, and was consequently in his 60th year. His father, Jabez Williams, was a prominent ship-builder, and on attaining his majority the young man became a member of the firm. Jabez Williams & Son subsequently removed their yards to Greenpoint, being the pioneers of the ship-building interests at that place. Mr. Williams came to Wall-street in 1854, and was one of the original 50 who formed the old Open Board of Brokers. He was also one of the first to join the Stock Exchange. He passed through the panics unscathed, and accumulated a large fortune. During the past four or five years he did no commission business, but retained his office at No. 26 Broad-street, confining his operations to speculations on his own account. In the early history of Brooklyn he was elected a Supervisor by the Whig Party on a local question of excessive county taxation, but after serving his term declined further political honors. His residence, at No. 3, 216 Fulton-street, was regarded as one of the finest in the city of churches. He leaves a widow and one son, who is a member of the firm of Davol & Co., brass-founders. His disease was inflammation of the liver. His funeral will take place from his late residence at 2:30 P. M. to-morrow. The Stock Exchange have appointed the following committee to take suitable action: James Mitchell, W. H. Johnson, L. H. Niles, C. Benedict, and D. S. Norbury.

TRYING TO RETRIEVE AN ERROR.

WILLIAM WINTER REPENTS HAVING GIVEN A DEED OF TRUST—HIS LONG ENDEAVOR TO SET IT ASIDE.

An old man named William Winter, now almost 70 years of age, has, for more than 10 years, been trying to set aside a deed of trust which he executed to Daniel C. Birdsall in 1863. He is the son of Gabriel Winter, who was a well-known lawyer of this City half a century ago, and who died in 1862, at the age of 80 years, leaving a large estate. In his youth William Winter is said to have been gifted with great mental powers. These, however, were lessened by his excesses as he grew old, and in 1863 he was so weak mentally that his brother-in-law, John Livingstone, a lawyer of this City, began proceedings to have him declared a lunatic. The case was carried to the Court of Appeals, where the decision was in favor of Winter, which led to fear further legal proceedings against him, he executed to Birdsall the trust deed for real estate valued at $200,000, which he now desires to have vacated. He alleges that it was procured by Birdsall by "deceit and fraud;" that the latter was in collusion with John Livingstone, who was desirous of depriving him of his property, and that after Birdsall had obtained control of his estate he treated him (Winter) very badly. Several years after the deed was executed Livingstone and Birdsall quarreled, and the former instituted an action to have the latter removed from his Trusteeship. After much litigation the Court of Appeals decided that Livingstone had no right to maintain his action. Birdsall soon afterward retained his place and Judge Barnard appointed John H. White as his successor. White, it is said, has been unfaithful to his trust, and when he died, Samuel F. Webster, the present Trustee, succeeded him.

The present suit was begun in 1871 against John H. White, Mortimer Livingstone, and Henry W. Livingstone, and the title was not changed when White died. The defendants Livingstone are the sons of John Livingstone and the nephews of the petitioner. They appear in the case because, through the alleged collusion of Birdsall and John Livingstone, Winter executed a trust deed which set forth that Birdsall should collect the rents of Winter's real estate in the City and Flushing, Long Island, and pay over to the petitioner a certain sum annually until his death, upon which event the property should go to his children, if he should have any lawful issue, or to his nephews. Winter dislikes John Livingstone, and he seems not to have any love for the latter's sons, and, as he considers that he has been very badly treated since he allowed the control of his property to go out of his hands, he is very anxious that the deed of trust should be vacated. The suit was called for trial yesterday before Judge Potter, in the Supreme Court, Circuit, but was adjourned until Monday upon the motion of Mr. John Livingstone, who appears as counsel for the defendants. Ex-Judge John K. Porter, Ira Shafer, and Solomon F. Higgins are of counsel for Winter.

ARRIVALS AT THE HOTELS.

D. C. Robinson, of Albany, is at the St. James Hotel.

Ex-Congressman O. B. Matteson, of Utica, is at the Park-Avenue Hotel.

T. B. Blackstone, President of the Chicago and Alton Railroad Company, and J. J. Mitchell, of St. Louis, are at the Fifth-Avenue Hotel.

Speaker Thomas G. Alvord, of Syracuse; Jeremiah McGuire, of Elmira, and Major C. E. Suter, United States Army, are at the Metropolitan Hotel.

DEATH OF A FRENCH SENATOR.

PARIS, Jan. 24.—M. Paul Morin, a life member of the French Senate, is dead. He was a Republican.

Important! Dr. William Hall's Balsam for the lungs cures coughs, colds, croup, consumption, and all diseases of the throat, chest, and lungs.

Use Henry's Carbolic Salve for pimples, freckles, cuts, sores, burns, &c.—Exchange.

Practical Wisdom.

An ancient adage says: "In time of peace prepare for war." Is it not equally wise to prepare for sickness in time of health? When anticipating a journey, guide-books and maps are studiously examined, and all possible information of the route and country obtained. Yet many make the "journey of life" and throughout the entire trip remain almost strangers to themselves, in profound ignorance of their abilities, and have no knowledge of the physiological laws that govern mind and matter. To such, life is like a boy handling an engine, he may have ascertained how to start and stop it, but he knows not how to keep it in running order. The PEOPLE'S COMMON SENSE MEDICAL ADVISER, an illustrated work of over 900 pages, is designed by its author as a popular hand-book of anatomy, physiology, hygiene, medicine, and the most common diseases to which all are liable, and with which many are afflicted. The work is replete with sound, practical suggestions. Price, $1 50. Address the author, R. V. PIERCE, M. D., Buffal

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

SALES AT THE STOCK EXCHANGE—JAN. 24.

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—10:15 A. M.

U. S. 5s C., '81. $10,000.....b.a.106⅝
U. S. 6s C., '81. $10,000.....120⅜
U. S. 4½ C., '91. $1,000...a.c.108⅛

U. S. 6s Cur., 1907. $1,900...b.a.100
U. S. 4s C., 1907. $90,000...a.120⅛

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—11:15 A. M.

U. S. 5s 10-40 C. $10,000.....105
U. S. 6s Cur. $50,000...b.a.105⅜
U. S. 4s C., 1907. $10,000.....106⅛

U. S. 5s, '81, R. $10,000.....120⅝
U. S. 4½ R., '91. $20,000...s.a.106⅛
U. S. 4s C., 1907. $10,000.....b.a.106

FIRST BOARD—10:30 A. M.

S. C. 6s, non-fd. $5,000.....1½
D. of C. 3.65s C. 9,000.....82
Mo. 6s, '87. 4,000 b.a.105
Tennessee 6s, old. 1,000.....38¼
5,000.....38⅜
A. C. & N. 1st. 5,000.....b.70
2,000.....b.a.70
B. C. R. & N. 1st. 5,000.....70⅜
5,000.....70⅝
K. & D. M. 1st. 8,000.....88½
C. R. I. 1st con as. 5,000.....b.a.70
4,000.....b.c. 80
D. S. & R. G. 1st. 18,000.....89⅝
4,000.....89¾
5,000.....b.89⅞
2,000.....b.89⅞
N. J. C. 1st, '90. 10,000.....114
N. J. C. 1st con. as. 5,000.....b.a.98
C. P. 1st, C. & O. 1st. 10,000.....b.a.111½
M. & St. P. con. 7s. 10,000.....103
5,000.....103
2,000.....103
5,000.....70½
2,000.....b.c. 69
2,000.....b.c. 69
W. C. C. & I. C. 1,000.....106⅞
M. & St. P. 1st & D. 15,000.....103⅛
15,000.....103⅜
10,000.....100⅛
30,000...b.c.100⅜
Am. D. I. Co. 7s. 5,000.....b.c. 58
Am. D. I. Co. 7s. 4,000.....b.c. 59
4,000.....b.c. 59
2,000.....b.c. 60
W. C. C. & I. C. 1,000.....106⅞
M. & St. P. con. cv. 10,000.....b.a.70
M. & St. P. 1st & D. 3,000.....103⅛
D. & H. C. 7s. 6,000.....97½
D. & H. C. 7s, '94. 1,000.....b.a.110
1,000.....100
H. & St. Jo. 8s, con. 10,000.....108¼
N. Y. Elev. 1st. 5,000.....98⅜
N. Y. Elev. 1st. 10,000.....105⅜
D. & H. C. 7s, '94. 2,000.....b.c. 90
D. & K. G. 1st. 2,000.....106
2,000.....90
2,000.....89⅞
1,000.....89¾
1,000.....89⅝
18,000.....89¾
1,000.....89⅞
5,000...s3. 89¾
C. C. & I. C. 5s. 10,000...b.c. 99⅜
Mt. Kis. 1st. 2,000.....98¾
Mich. Cen. 8s. s. f. 5,000.....111¼
Louisiana, consol. 2,000.....64⅞
D. of C. 3.65s C. 1,000.....82
L. & W. R. con. as. 10,000...s3. 84½
10,000.....84⅝
L. & W. R. con. as. 10,000...s3. 84⅞
10,000.....84⅞
L. & W. R. con. as. 10,000...s3. 85
Rio Mississ. 1st. 5,000.....b.a.106
2,000...s30.108⅛
St. L. K. C. & N. R. E. 75-95. 9,000.....93½

SALES FROM 2:30 TO 3 P. M.

Louisiana, consol. 2,000.....64⅞
D. of C. 3.65s C. 1,000.....82
L. & W. R. con. as. 10,000...s3. 84½
10,000.....84⅝
L. & W. R. con. as. 10,000...s3. 84⅞
10,000.....84⅞
L. & W. R. con. as. 10,000...s3. 85
Rio Mississ. 1st. 5,000.....b.a.106
2,000...s30.108⅛
St. L. K. C. & N. R. E. 75-95. 9,000.....93½

Illinois Central. 100.....84⅜
100.....84⅝
100.....84½
100.....84⅝
200.....67
100.....86½
Pittsburg. 92
Lake Shore. 928
3210.....72⅜
3400.....72½
1100.....b3 73⅛
Erie. 100.....72⅞
1300.....72⅝
500.....72⅞
400.....72⅝
North-west. 62
500.....62⅜
500.....62¼
500.....62⅜
300.....62⅝
800.....62⅜
1300.....62⅝
1400.....b3. 62
Rock Island. 1200.....92⅛
400.....92⅜
2000.....92⅝
400.....92⅞
North-west pf. 1000.....b.a. 83⅜
1200.....85⅛
1000.....85⅜
800.....85⅝
800.....b3. 85⅞
Central of N. J. 800.....41⅜
100.....41⅝
100.....b3. 42
Ohio & Miss. 200.....41½
St. Paul. 1800.....41¾
100.....41⅞
1500.....41⅝
3100.....41⅞
1000.....41⅞
500.....41⅞
500.....41⅞
Ohio & Miss. pf. 200.....b.a. 97½

Del., L. & West. 300.....53⅜
100.....53⅝
100.....53⅜
6920.....53⅝
100.....53⅜
100.....53⅝
100.....53⅜
100.....53⅝
100.....53⅜
500.....53⅝
100.....53⅜
100.....53⅝
100.....53⅜
100.....53⅝
100.....53⅜
4,225
5,600
500
100.....53⅜
100.....53⅝
Wabash. 700.....23⅞
2000.....23⅝
200.....23⅞
100.....23⅝
100.....23⅞
100.....23⅝
600.....23⅞
900.....23⅝
Albany & Sus. 100.....b.c. 80
Morris & Essex. 900.....82¾
100.....82⅞
100.....82⅝
100.....82⅞
St. L. K. & N. 100.....b.a. 14⅜
Chi. Bur. & Q. 100.....b.c. 104
Han. & St. Jo. 200.....b.c. 14⅜
Ohio & Miss. 100.....b.a. 37⅜
Kansas & Texas. 100.....b.c. 14
Kansas Pacific. 100.....10¼
100.....b.a. 10⅜
100.....11
100.....b.c. 10⅜
Quicksilver. 100.....b.a. 15
100.....b.c. 15
300.....c. 2
Fort Wayne. 10.....107½
Chi. & N. W. 100.....b3. 37
St. L. K. C. & N. pf. 400.....b.c. 33⅞
Del. & Hud. 100.....b.c. 34⅜
New-Jersey So. 12.....161
Ohio & Miss. pf. 100.....b.a. 89⅜
100.....b3. 89⅞
100.....b3. 90
100.....b.a. 89⅞
100.....b.a. 90
100.....b.a. 89⅞
100.....b.a. 90
100.....b.a. 89⅞
100.....b.a

THE REAL ESTATE MARKET.

The following business was transacted at the Exchange yesterday, Friday, Jan. 24:

Bernard Smyth, foreclosure sale, R. G. Reardjice, Esq., Referee, sold the five-story stone-front stone, with lot 33.3 by 74.11 by 33 by 50.6, No. 2 New Chambers-st., south side, 5 feet south of Chatham-st., for $32,400, to Thomas H. Barowsky, plaintiff.

William Kennelly, foreclosure sale, Charles F. Estwick, Esq., Referee, sold the four-story building, with lot 24.2 by 100.5, No. 433 West 46th-st., north side, 224.2 feet east of 10th-av., for $11,000, to Denis Morgan, plaintiff.

E. F. Raymond, foreclosure sale, Edward Patterson, Esq., Referee, sold the five-story brick building, with lot 25 by 100, No. 20 6th-av., east side, 25 feet north of 3d-st., for $16,000, to Cordelia E. Yrelin and others, as Executors and plaintiffs.

Richard V. Harnett, foreclosure sale, J. S. Potter, Esq., Referee, sold one lot, 25 by 102.2, on East 76th-st., south side, 250 feet west of 3d-av.; and one lot, 25 by 102.2, on East 76th-st., south side, 25 feet west of the above, for $5,000, to John W. Surbank, plaintiff.

James M. Oakley & Co., foreclosure sale, Peter B. Olney, Esq., Referee, sold a plot of land, 100.11 by 100, on 10th-av., south-east corner of 121st-st., for $4,000, to Louisa F. Calve, plaintiff.

L. J. & I. Phillips, foreclosure sale, H. Brewster, Esq., Referee, sold a plot of land, 82 by 178 by 158.2, on West 125th-st., north side, 100 feet west of 8th-av., for $4,000, to Mary A. A. Woodcock, plaintiff.

Stevenson, Jr., foreclosure sale, J. Grant Sinclair, Esq., Referee, sold the three-story brick dwelling, with lot 18 by 65, No. 34 West 44th-st., south side, 394 feet east of 6th-av., for $5,800, to David L. Mills, plaintiff.

RECORDED REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

NEW-YORK.

Thursday, Jan. 23.

Lodlow-st., e. s., lot No. 1,336, between Broome and Delancey sts., 25x87.6; Henry Broesler and wife to Margaretha Hamburg..... $7,600

113th-st., s. s., 220 ft. w. of 8th-av., 20x100.11; Michael Reilly and wife to James Fitzpatrick. 2,550

126th-st., s. s., 175 ft. w. of 7th-av., 12½x99.11; Bernard M. Smith to Jane A. C. Platt.. nom.

126th-st., s. s., 275 ft. w. of 7th-av., 12½x99.11; Same to Same..... nom.

East-st., e. s., 75.2 ft. s. of Rector-st., 25x87.5; Rebecca Abrahams and husband to Rane B. Abrahams..... nom.

East Broadway, No. 173, 26x100; Rebecca Abrahams and husband to Abraham Morris..... nom.

4th-st. East, No. 289, 97.8x96; Henrietta Ketchum and others to Brad Israel..... 6,000

Allen-st., No. 163, 25x74.8; F. J. Joachimsen, Referee, to Elizabeth Koch..... 8,000

84th-st., s. s., 450 ft. w. of 9th-av., 25x204.4 to 85th-st., s. s. Peter, Referee, to Laura W. J. Carmalt..... 6,500

Mott-st., s. s., 96.10 ft. e. of Terrace-place, 25x100, 234 Ward; S. D. Gifford, Referee, to Westchester Fire Insurance Company..... 1,000

William-st., No. 63, 22x100; Peter Voiter and wife to Joseph Voiter..... 5,000

Troy-st., s. s., 115.3 ft. s. of Sydney-st. to Berkshire-st., 17.11 irregular; Ernest F. Fabb to Alice F. Seagerson..... 6,250

Columbia-av., n. corner of Jefferson-av., 100x100, 24th Ward; August Meyer and wife to Mary H. Rank..... 850

38th-st., s. s., 25 ft. w. of 2d-av., 20x72.6; Frank K. Thieg to Margus Heyman..... nom.

38th-st., s. s., 98 ft. w. of 2d-av., 20x72.6; John D. Grade to Frank K. Thieg..... nom.

39th-st., s. s., 300 ft. w. of 2d-av., 12.5x39.8; James L. Miller and wife to George A. Mc-Dermott..... 1,250

91st-st., s. s., 475 ft. w. of 3d-av., 50x100; Ephraim D. Brown, Executor, to John Clapp, Jr..... nom.

91st-st., s. s., 375 ft. w. of 3d-av., 50x100.8; Same to Same..... nom.

44th-st., n. s., 145 ft. e. of 6th-av., 25x100.5; Same to Same..... nom.

Market-sts., No. 97; Charles K. Strong and others, Trustees, to Kate S. F. Carter..... nom.

LEASES.

University-place, w. s., 70.7 ft. s. of 9th-st., 23x90.8, 21 years; Sailors' Snug Harbor to John B. Haddon..... $600

University-place, s. w. corner, 21 years; Same to Same..... 800

Pinkney-st., No. 256, 5 years; John H. Meyer to Robert Walsh..... 2,000

6th-st., s. s. corner of 1st-av., 3 years; Peter Hoffman to William Wolf..... 840

8th-av., Nos. 644, 646, 648, 3 years; George Leask to Jacob Dux..... 600

MORTGAGES RECORDED.

Clapp, John, Jr., to Stephen Brown; s. s. 91st-st., w. of 3d-av., 1 year..... $10,000

Congregation Pnai Jeruel to Henrietta Ketchum and another; No. 239 East 4th-st., 5 years. 4,000

Durkin, Patrick, to John McCullough; s. w. corner of 2d-av. and 2d-st., 2 years..... 1,000

Haber, John, and wife to Henry E. Stevens; n. w. corner of 9th-av. and 57th-st., 6 months.. 1,200

Jones, Nathaniel H., and wife to Peter Dodge; Kingsland and others, Executors, &c.; w. s 2d-av., s. of 93d-st., 5 years..... 7,000

Koch, Elisabeth, to Henry Schiky; w. s. Allen-st., s. of Stanton-st.; installments..... 750

Morris, Abraham, and wife to Rebecca Abrahams; No. 178 Rivington-st..... 7,500

Poillon, W., and wife to Rachel A. Poillon; w. s. 8th-av., s. of 133d-st., 3 years..... 10,000

Rosenbaum, Samuel, and wife to Peter Dodge; s. s. Norfolk-st., lot No. 1,598, 5 years.. 8,000

Same to Same; n. s. 126th-st., e. of Avenue A, 5 years..... 5,000

Smith, Delia, to The Mutual Life Insurance Company; No. 47 East 81st-st., 18 months.. 7,000

Titus, Oliver, to Henrietta E. Titus; n. w. corner of Valentine and Central av., 3 years.. 1,000

Wright, I. E., and wife to John Ross; s. s., 124th-st., e. of 2d-av., 1 year..... 2,500

MARRIAGES.

Barton, William H., and another, Administrator, &c., to Sarah A. Conklin..... $2,000

Housman, Edward A., to Jacob E. Lockman and another, Executors..... nom.

Kingsley, Henry C., to the President and Fellows of Yale College, New-Haven..... nom.

Rainford, Rosa R., to George D. Rainford..... 24,500

Rosa, George R., to Gustav Engelke..... nom.

Wind, Hyman, to Moses Newburger..... 400

CITY REAL ESTATE.

FOR SALE—AN ASSORTMENT OF HOUSES, gold prices, from $3,800 to $13,000. Situate on 82d 81st, 80th, and 79th sts. Two beautiful corners, 79th and 80th sts. and 1st-av. desirable as an investment. Call and see them. Office, corner 79th-st. and 1st-av.

FOR SALE—PRIVATE DWELLINGS AT LOW figures: East 9th, 12th, 13th, 29th, 58th, and 62d sts.; West 11th, 126th, and 142d sts.; must be sold. L. J. CARPENTER, No. 36 3d-av., Bible House.

THE DESIRABLE PROPERTY, NO. 61 West 143d-st., 75 feet east of 6th-av., building 26x112, suitable for dwelling, boarding-house, or any business, to lease or sell. Apply on premises.

HARLEM—RAPID TRANSIT.
Houses, stores, and floors, to let and for sale.
PORTER & CO., No. 173 East 125th-st.

REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION.

ADRIAN H. MULLER, Auctioneer.

ESTATE OF JOHN H. POWERS, DECEASED.

EXECUTOR'S SALE OF VALUABLE IMPROVED AND UNIMPROVED PROPERTY.

ADRIAN H. MULLER & SON will sell at auction on TUESDAY, Jan. 28, at 12 o'clock, at the Exchange Sales-room, No. 111 Broadway, the following described real estate:

FOURTH-AVENUE.—The four-story brick stores, with lease of lots, situate on the north-east corner of 4th-av. and 11th-st., Nos. 101 4th-av. and 101 4th-av. The leases are from the Stuyvesant estate.

STORE AND FLAT, 97 EIGHTH.—The brick stores and lot No. 26 Stone-st. and No. 61 Pearl-st., running through from Pearl to Stone-st.

CANAL AND MOTT STREETS.—The brick and frame buildings and lots Nos. 178 and 180 Canal-st., corner of Mott-st.

THIRD-AVENUE, SIXTY-SIXTH AND SIXTY-SEVENTH STREETS.—Eight lots, comprising the entire easterly front on 3d-av., between 66th and 67th sts., and 14 lots on 66th-st., and 14 lots on 67th-st., commencing 100 feet east of the 3d-av.; street lots are each 25x100 feet, except the two easterly lots on each street, which are 20x100 feet each.

ELM-STREET.—The lot on the north-west corner of Elm and Catharine-lane.

FORTY-SECOND-STREET.—One lot, south side, 300 feet west of 7th-av., 25x98.9.

SIXTY-EIGHTH AND SIXTY-NINTH STREETS.—Six lots, north side of 68th-st., 325 feet west of 8th-av., and four lots, south side of 69th-st., 375 feet west of 8th-av.

RIVERSIDE-AVENUE.—Seven lots on easterly side of Riverside-av., 2.5 feet north of 116th-st., and opposite Riverside Park.

TWELFTH-AVENUE.—Plot of water lots on 12th-av., between 118th and 118th sts., opposite Riverside Park.

EIGHTY-FIFTH STREET.—Four lots, south side, between 11th and Riverside-av.

TWELFTH-AVENUE.—One water lot, north-east corner 81st-st.

BETWEEN DEVOE AND TWO HUNDRED AND TWENTY-SECOND-STREET.—About 19 lots.

BROOKLYN.—Thirty-two lots, comprising the entire block bounded by Columbia, Sigourney, Otsego and Hallock sts.

HUGH CASSIDY, Executor,
HENRIETTA C. POWERS, Executrix.
ADRIAN H. MULLER & SON, Auctioneers.

Book-maps at the office of the auctioneers, No. 7 Pine-st., and of the Executor, No. 11 Pine-st.

CITY HOUSES TO LET.

TO LET OR LEASE.

THE FOUR LOTS, with the BUILDINGS THEREON, situated at the north-east corner of 41st-st. and Park-av., constituting the southerly portion of the

GRAND UNION HOTEL.

Apply to HORACE S. ELY,
No. 22 Pine-st., New-York.

TO LET—FROM FEB. 1, NUMBER OF NEW three-story brick houses; very choice; all conveniences; must be seen to be appreciated; Nos. 411 to 425 West 51st-st.; rent, $700. For particulars apply to JOSEPH CORLIT, No. 253 9th-av.

STORES, &C., TO LET.

OFFICES TO LET
IN THE
TIMES BUILDING.
APPLY TO
GEORGE JONES,
TIMES OFFICE.

OFFICE TO RENT—IN THE FINE BUILDINGS, No. 36 Beekman and No. 18 Spruce sts.; admirable location for publishing house or agency or manufacturers; steam heat. JAMES PRICE, 200 Broadway.

STORES, &C., TO LET.

FIRE-PROOF.
MORSE BUILDING,
NASSAU AND BEEKMAN STS.
LAW AND INSURANCE OFFICES TO LET FROM MAY 1.
ROOMS DIVIDED TO SUIT TENANTS.
ELEGANT
BANKING AND INSURANCE OFFICES
ON THE PRINCIPAL FLOOR.
PLANS AND PARTICULARS WITH
S. E. & G. L. MORSE,
NO. 138 CHAMBERS-STREET.

TO LET—NO. 18 WALKER-ST.—FIVE-STORY modern building; iron front. Can be rented as a whole, or will be divided. Apply to
HORACE S. ELY,
No. 22 Pine-st.

NO. 198 CHURCH-ST.—SECOND, THIRD, and Fourth Lofts to let; very light and desirable. Apply to HORACE S. ELY,
No. 22 Pine-st.

NOS. 22 AND 24 8TH-AV.—MAGNIFICENT STORE, FACing Hotel Brunswick; law rent. Keys from V. K. STEVENSON, Jr.,
4 Pine or 35 East 17th-st.

SHIPPING.

GUION LINE.
UNITED STATES MAIL STEAMERS.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.
Leaving Pier 38, N. R., foot of King-st.
MONTANA.....TUESDAY, Jan. 28, 9 A. M.
WISCONSIN.....TUESDAY, Feb. 4, 3 P. M.
WYOMING.....TUESDAY, Feb. 11, 9 A. M.
NEVADA.....TUESDAY, Feb. 18, 3 P. M.
MONTANA.....TUESDAY, March 4, 9 P. M.

These steamers are built of iron, in water-tight compartments, and are furnished with every requisite to make the passage across the Atlantic both safe and agreeable, having bath-rooms, smoking-room, drawing-room, piano, and library; also, experienced surgeon, stewardess, and caterer on each steamer. The state-rooms are all on deck, thus insuring those greatest of all luxuries at sea, perfect ventilation and light.

CABIN PASSAGE, (according to state-room,) $55, $65, and $75. INTERMEDIATE, $40; STEERAGE, $26.
OFFICES, NO. 29 BROADWAY.
WILLIAMS & GUION.

WHITE STAR LINE.
UNITED STATES AND ROYAL MAIL STEAMERS
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.

NOTICE.—The steamers of this line take the Lane Routes recommended by Lieut. Maury, U. S. N., on both the outward and the homeward passages.

BRITANNIC, Capt. PERRY.....Saturday, Feb. 1, noon.
REPUBLIC, Capt. INMAN.....Thursday, Feb. 6, 2 P. M.
GERMANIC, Capt. KENNEDY.....Sat., Feb. 15, 12:30 P. M.
From White Star Dock, Pier No. 52 North River.

These steamers are unsurpassed in size and unsurpassed in appointments. The saloons, state-rooms, smoking, and bath rooms are amidships, where the noise and motion are least felt, affording a degree of comfort hitherto unattainable at sea.

Rates—saloon, $80, $90, and $100, gold; return tickets on favorable terms; steerage, $26.

These steamers carry neither cattle, sheep, nor pigs.

For inspection of plans and other information, apply at the company's office, No. 37 Broadway, New-York, or No. 140 Walnut-st., Phila. R. J. CORTIS, Agent.

CUNARD LINE.

NOTICE.

With the view of diminishing the chances of collision, the steamers of this line take a specified course for all seasons of the year.

On the outward passage from Queenstown to New-York or Boston, crossing the meridian of 50 at 43 latitude, or nothing to the north of 42.

On the homeward passage, crossing the meridian of 50 at 42, or nothing to the south of 41.

FROM NEW-YORK FOR LIVERPOOL OR QUEENSTOWN.
PARTHIA.....WED., Jan. 29 | ETRURIA.....WED., Feb. 12
SCYTHIA.....WED., Feb. 5 | SAXONIA.....WED., Feb. 19

Cabin passage and return tickets on favorable terms, including a special low rate for the Fall and Winter months.

Steerage tickets to and from all parts of Europe at very low rates. Freight and passage office, No. 4 Bowling Green. CHAS. G. FRANCKLYN, Agent.

STATE LINE,

TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, DUBLIN, BELFAST, AND LONDONDERRY.

From Pier No. 42 N. R., foot of Canal-st., as follows:
STATE OF INDIANA.....Thursday, Jan. 30
STATE OF VIRGINIA.....Thursday, Feb. 6

First Cabin, $55 to $70, according to accommodations; excursion tickets, $100 to $130. Second Cabin, $40; excursion tickets, $75. Steerage at lowest rates.

AUSTIN, BALDWIN & CO., Agents,
No. 72 Broadway, New-York.

STEERAGE tickets at No. 43 Broadway, and at the company's pier, foot of Canal-st., North River.

NORTH GERMAN LLOYD.
STEAM-SHIP LINE BETWEEN NEW-YORK, SOUTHAMPTON, AND BREMEN.
Company's pier foot of 2d-st., Hoboken.
NECKAR.....Sat., Jan. 25 | MOSEL.....Sat., Feb. 8
WESER.....Sat., Feb. 1 | ODER.....Sat., Feb. 15

RATES OF PASSAGE FROM NEW-YORK TO SOUTHAMPTON, HAVRE, OR BREMEN.
First cabin.....$100
Second cabin.....60
Steerage.....30

Return tickets at reduced rates. Prepaid Steerage certificates, $30. STEERAGE TICKETS TO ALL POINTS IN THE SOUTH OF ENGLAND, $30.
OELRICHS & CO., No. 2 Bowling Green.

INMAN LINE ROYAL MAIL STEAMERS.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.
CITY OF MONTREAL, Thursday, Jan. 30, 11 A. M.
CITY OF BERLIN.....Saturday, Feb. 8, 8:30 A. M.
CITY OF NEW-YORK.....Thursday, Feb. 13, 10:30 A. M.

From Pier No. 39 North River, foot of Christopher-st.

CABIN, $60, $80, and $100, gold. Return tickets on favorable terms. STEERAGE, $28, currency. Drafts at lowest rates. Saloons, state-rooms, smoking and bath rooms amidships. These steamers do not carry cattle, sheep, or pigs.
JOHN G. DALE, Agent,
Nos. 31 and 33 Broad-st., N. Y.
Philadelphia Office, No. 105 South 4th-st.

ANCHOR LINE U. S. MAIL STEAMERS,
NEW-YORK AND GLASGOW.
From Pier No. 20 North River, New-York.
Devonia.....Jan. 25, 7 A. M. | Anchoria.....Feb. 8, 6 A. M.
Ethiopia.....Feb. 1, noon. | India.....Feb. 15, noon.

Cabins, $60 to $80. Excursion tickets at reduced rates. Second Cabin, $40. Steerage, $28.
NEW-YORK TO LONDON DIRECT.
From Pier No. 46 North River, foot of Charles-st.
Castalia.....Jan. 25, 7 A. M. | California.....Feb. 1, noon.

Cabins, $55 and $65. Excursion tickets at reduced rates.
HENDERSON BROTHERS, Agents, 7 Bowling Green.

GENERAL TRANSATLANTIC COMPANY
between New-York and Havre.
Company's Pier, (new,) No. 42 North River, foot of Morton-st.
FRANCE, TRUDELLE.....Wednesday, Feb. 5, 3:30 P. M.
CANADA, FRANCEUIL.....Wednesday, Feb. 19, 3:30 P. M.
AMERIQUE, DELORD.....Wednesday, March 5, 3 P. M.

Steamers marked thus " do not carry steerage passengers.

Checks drawn on Credit Lyonnais of Paris in amounts to suit.

For freight and passengers apply to
LOUIS DE BEBIAN, Agent, No. 55 Broadway.

IMPERIAL GERMAN MAIL.
Hamburg American Packet Company's Line for PLYMOUTH, CHERBOURG, and HAMBURG.
GELLERT.....Thurs., Jan. 30 | LESSING.....Thurs., Feb. 13
GUMBRIA.....Thurs., Feb. 6 | WESTPHALIA.....Thurs., Feb. 20

Rates of passage to Plymouth, London, Cherbourg, Hamburg, and all points in England: First Cabin, $100; second cabin, $60. Steerage, $30.
KUNHARDT & CO., C. E. RICHARD & BOAS,
General Agents, General Passenger Agents,
No. 61 Broad-st., N. Y. No. 61 Broadway, N. Y.

ROTTERDAM LINE.
Steamers leave Jersey City, near Pavonia Ferry.
W. A. SCHOLTEN.....Saturday, Feb. 1
MAAS.....Wednesday, Feb. 12

Cabin, $65-$70. Intermediate, $45-$50. Steerage, $23.
H. CAZAUX, General Agent, No. 27 South William-st.
FUNCH, EDYE & CO., L. W. MORRIS,
27 & 29 Wm-st., Freight Agts. | 50 B'way, Gen. Passage Agt.

SAVANNAH AND FLORIDA.

From Pier No. 43 North River, at 3 P. M.
CITY OF MACON, Capt. KEMPTON.....Saturday, Jan. 25
CITY OF COLUMBUS, Capt. NICKERSON.....Wed., Jan. 29

Connecting with the Central Railroad of Georgia, Atlantic and Gulf Railroad, Georgia and Florida Steamboat Company, and with the new and elegant iron steamer ST. JOHNS.

GEO. YONGE, Agent,
C. D. OWENS, Ocean S. S. Co. and
General Agent A. & G. R. R., Central R. R. of Ga.,
No. 315 Broadway. No. 409 Broadway.

FLORIDA RAILROAD AND STEAM-SHIP LINE.
ONLY DIRECT LINE TO FLORIDA.
SAILING EVERY SATURDAY.
LOWEST RATES OF FREIGHT AND PASSAGE.
Steamer ASHLAND, SATURDAY, Jan. 25.
And every SATURDAY thereafter.

For Fernandina direct, from Pier No. 19 N. R., at 3 P. M.

Only line issuing through tickets and bills lading to all points in Florida on Florida Railroad, Apalachicola, and Flint Rivers, and BRUNSWICK, Ga. Insurance ¼ per cent. Bills lading signed on pier. For further information, through bills and passage rates, apply to
J. K. ROBERTS,
No. 177 West-st., up stairs.

UNITED STATES AND BRAZIL MAIL STEAM-SHIP LINE.
FOR ST. THOMAS, PARA, PERNAMBUCO, BAHIA, AND RIO DE JANEIRO.

Connecting at St. Thomas with German steamers for Porto Rico and Spanish Main. The new first-class iron steam-ship CITY OF PARA, Capt. CARPENTER, will sail for the above ports on Wednesday, Feb. 5, at 2 P. M.

Positively no freight received after 3d. Freight must be paid in advance. Freight rates taken for the above ports. Freight received at Roberts' Dock, Brooklyn. Insurance lower than by any other line. Shippers desiring insurance can effect same under open policy. For freight engagements or passage, having elegant accommodations, apply to C. H. MALLORY & CO., Agents, Office, Pier No. 20 East River.

PACIFIC MAIL STEAM-SHIP COMPANY.
Pier (old No. 43) North River.
FOR SAN FRANCISCO via ISTHMUS OF PANAMA:
Steam-ship ACAPULCO.....Friday, Jan. 31, noon
Connecting for South and Central America and Mexico.

From San Francisco for Japan and China:
Steam-ship CHINA.....Wednesday, March 5, noon
From SAN FRANCISCO to HONOLULU, NEW-ZEALAND, and AUSTRALIA:
Steam-ship CITY OF NEW-YORK, Monday, Feb. 17, noon

For freight or general information apply to Company's office, on the pier, foot of Canal-st., North River, and for passage at Company's Ticket Office, No. 287 Broadway.

NEW-YORK, HAVANA & MEXICAN MAIL S. S. LINE.
Steamers leave Pier No. 3 North River at 3 P. M.
FOR HAVANA DIRECT AND VERA CRUZ.
Calling at Progreso, Campeche, and Frontera.
CITY OF VERA CRUZ.....Saturday, Jan. 25
CITY OF WASHINGTON, (Havana only,) Thurs., Feb. 6
CITY OF MERIDA.....Saturday, Feb. 8

Steamers leave New-Orleans Jan. 29 and Feb. 19 for Vera Cruz via Mazatlan, Tampico, Progreso, connecting with steamers for Havana. New York and above ports.
F. ALEXANDER & SONS, Nos. 21 and 23 Broadway.

SHIPPING.

GREAT SOUTHERN
FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE,
FOR CHARLESTON, S.C., FLORIDA PORTS, AND ALL POINTS IN THE SOUTH AND SOUTH-WEST.

SAILING FROM PIER NO. 27 NORTH RIVER.
WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS at 3 P. M.
CHAMPION.....SATURDAY, Jan. 25
GULF STREAM.....WEDNESDAY, Jan. 29

SUPERIOR PASSENGER ACCOMMODATIONS.

Insurance to destination, one-half of one per cent.

Goods forwarded free of commission. Passenger tickets and bills of lading issued and signed at the office of
JAMES W. QUINTARD & CO., Agents,
Office on the Pier.

Or W. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green.
Or BENTLEY D. HASELL, General Agent,
Great Southern Freight Line, 317 Broadway.

PALMETTO FREIGHT LINE.
VIA STEAM-SHIP TO CHARLESTON, S. C., and the SAVANNAH AND CHARLESTON RAILROAD, to all points in the South and South-west.
Prices of rates and Insurance at lowest figures.
Bills of lading signed at Pier No. 27 North River.
CHAS. D. OWENS, General Agent
Palmetto Freight Line,
No. 315 Broadway.

NEW-YORK AND CUBA MAIL S. S. LINE
FOR HAVANA DIRECT.
FROM PIER 17 EAST RIVER AT 3 P. M.
Magnificent accommodation for passengers.
S. S. NIAGARA.....Saturday, Feb. 1
S. S. SARATOGA.....Wednesday, Feb. 12

Tickets issued also for
VERA CRUZ AND WEST INDIA ISLANDS
in connection with French and English S. S. Lines from Havana. JAMES E. WARD & CO., No. 113 Wall-st.

NEW-YORK AND HAVANA
DIRECT MAIL LINE.
These first-class steam-ships sail regularly at 3 P. M. from Pier No. 13 North River, as follows:
Steamer SANTIAGO DE CUBA.....WED., Jan. 29
Steam-ship .....SATURDAY, Feb. 8

Accommodations unsurpassed. For freight or passage apply to WILLIAM P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green. LAWTON BROS., Agents in Havana.

RAILROADS.

METROPOLITAN
ELEVATED RAILWAY.
Open from 5:30 A. M. to 12 P. M.

RECTOR-ST.—Nearest point for Wall-Street Ferry, and connects with cars for South Ferry.
CORTLANDT-ST.—Nearest point for Jersey City and Communipaw Ferries.
PARK PLACE.—Nearest point for Post Office, City Hall, and Barclay-Street Ferry to Hoboken.
CHAMBERS-ST.—Nearest point for Pavonia and Erie Railway Ferry.
FRANKLIN-ST.
GRAND-ST.—Nearest point for Desbrosses-Street Ferry to Jersey City, and connects with cars for Desbrosses and East Grand-Street Ferries.
BLEECKER-ST.—Connects with cars for East and West.
REPUBLIC, Capt. IVERSON.....Thursday, Feb. 6, 3 P. M.
GERMANIC, Capt. KENNEDY.....Sat., Feb. 15, 12:30 P. M.
From White Star Dock, Pier No. 52 North River.

These steamers are built of iron and unsurpassed in appointments. The saloons, state-rooms, smoking, and bath rooms are amidships, where the noise and motion are least felt, affording a degree of comfort hitherto unattainable at sea.

Rates—saloon, $80, $90, and $100, gold; return tickets on favorable terms; steerage, $26.

These steamers carry neither cattle, sheep, nor pigs.

For inspection of plans and other information, apply at the company's office, No. 37 Broadway, New-York, or No. 140 Walnut-st., Phila. R. J. CORTIS, Agent.

CUNARD LINE.

NOTICE.

With the view of diminishing the chances of collision, the steamers of this line take a specified course for all seasons of the year.

On the outward passage from Queenstown to New-York or Boston, crossing the meridian of 50 at 43 latitude, or nothing to the north of 42.

On the homeward passage, crossing the meridian of 50 at 42, or nothing to the south of 41.

FROM NEW-YORK FOR LIVERPOOL OR QUEENSTOWN.
PARTHIA.....WED., Jan. 29 | ETRURIA.....WED., Feb. 12
SCYTHIA.....WED., Feb. 5 | SAXONIA.....WED., Feb. 19

Cabin passage and return tickets on favorable terms, including a special low rate for the Fall and Winter months.

Steerage tickets to and from all parts of Europe at very low rates. Freight and passage office, No. 4 Bowling Green. CHAS. G. FRANCKLYN, Agent.

STATE LINE,

TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, DUBLIN, BELFAST, AND LONDONDERRY.

From Pier No. 42 N. R., foot of Canal-st., as follows:
STATE OF INDIANA.....Thursday, Jan. 30
STATE OF VIRGINIA.....Thursday, Feb. 6

First Cabin, $55 to $70, according to accommodations; excursion tickets, $100 to $130. Second Cabin, $40; excursion tickets, $75. Steerage at lowest rates.

AUSTIN, BALDWIN & CO., Agents,
No. 72 Broadway, New-York.

STEERAGE tickets at No. 43 Broadway, and at the company's pier, foot of Canal-st., North River.

NORTH GERMAN LLOYD.
STEAM-SHIP LINE BETWEEN NEW-YORK, SOUTHAMPTON, AND BREMEN.
Company's pier foot of 2d-st., Hoboken.
NECKAR.....Sat., Jan. 25 | MOSEL.....Sat., Feb. 8
WESER.....Sat., Feb. 1 | ODER.....Sat., Feb. 15

RATES OF PASSAGE FROM NEW-YORK TO SOUTHAMPTON, HAVRE, OR BREMEN.
First cabin.....$100
Second cabin.....60
Steerage.....30

Return tickets at reduced rates. Prepaid Steerage certificates, $30. STEERAGE TICKETS TO ALL POINTS IN THE SOUTH OF ENGLAND, $30.
OELRICHS & CO., No. 2 Bowling Green.

INMAN LINE ROYAL MAIL STEAMERS.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.
CITY OF MONTREAL, Thursday, Jan. 30, 11 A. M.
CITY OF BERLIN.....Saturday, Feb. 8, 8:30 A. M.
CITY OF NEW-YORK, Thursday, Feb. 13, 10:30 A. M.

From Pier No. 39 North River, foot of Christopher-st.

CABIN, $60, $80, and $100, gold. Return tickets on favorable terms. STEERAGE, $28, currency. Drafts at lowest rates. Saloons, state-rooms, smoking and bath rooms amidships. These steamers do not carry cattle, sheep, or pigs.
JOHN G. DALE, Agent,
Nos. 31 and 33 Broad-st., N. Y.
Philadelphia Office, No. 105 South 4th-st.

ANCHOR LINE U. S. MAIL STEAMERS,
NEW-YORK AND GLASGOW.
From Pier No. 20 North River, New-York.
Devonia.....Jan. 25, 7 A. M. | Anchoria.....Feb. 8, 6 A. M.
Ethiopia.....Feb. 1, noon. | India.....Feb. 15, noon.

Cabins, $60 to $80. Excursion tickets at reduced rates. Second Cabin, $40. Steerage, $28.
NEW-YORK TO LONDON DIRECT.
From Pier No. 46 North River, foot of Charles-st.
Castalia.....Jan. 25, 7 A. M. | California.....Feb. 1, noon.

Cabins, $55 and $65. Excursion tickets at reduced rates.
HENDERSON BROTHERS, Agents, 7 Bowling Green.

GENERAL TRANSATLANTIC COMPANY
between New-York and Havre.
Company's Pier, (new,) No. 42 North River, foot of Morton-st.
FRANCE, TRUDELLE.....Wednesday, Feb. 5, 3:30 P. M.
CANADA, FRANCEUIL.....Wednesday, Feb. 19, 3:30 P. M.
AMERIQUE, DELORD.....Wednesday, March 5, 3 P. M.

Steamers marked thus " do not carry steerage passengers.

Checks drawn on Credit Lyonnais of Paris in amounts to suit.

For freight and passengers apply to
LOUIS DE BEBIAN, Agent, No. 55 Broadway.

IMPERIAL GERMAN MAIL.
Hamburg American Packet Company's Line for PLYMOUTH, CHERBOURG, and HAMBURG.
GELLERT.....Thurs., Jan. 30 | LESSING.....Thurs., Feb. 13
GUMBRIA.....Thurs., Feb. 6 | WESTPHALIA.....Thurs., Feb. 20

Rates of passage to Plymouth, London, Cherbourg, Hamburg, and all points in England: First Cabin, $100; second cabin, $60. Steerage, $30.
KUNHARDT & CO., C. E. RICHARD & BOAS,
General Agents, General Passenger Agents,
No. 61 Broad-st., N. Y. No. 61 Broadway, N. Y.

ROTTERDAM LINE.
Steamers leave Jersey City, near Pavonia Ferry.
W. A. SCHOLTEN.....Saturday, Feb. 1
MAAS.....Wednesday, Feb. 12

Cabin, $65-$70. Intermediate, $45-$50. Steerage, $23.
H. CAZAUX, General Agent, No. 27 South William-st.
FUNCH, EDYE & CO., L. W. MORRIS,
27 & 29 Wm-st., Freight Agts. | 50 B'way, Gen. Passage Agt.

SAVANNAH AND FLORIDA.

From Pier No. 43 North River, at 3 P. M.
CITY OF MACON, Capt. KEMPTON.....Saturday, Jan. 25
CITY OF COLUMBUS, Capt. NICKERSON.....Wed., Jan. 29

Connecting with the Central Railroad of Georgia, Atlantic and Gulf Railroad, Georgia and Florida Steamboat Company, and with the new and elegant iron steamer ST. JOHNS.

C. D. OWENS, GEO. YONGE, Agent,
General Agent A. & G. R. R., Ocean S. S. Co. and
No. 315 Broadway. Central R. R. of Ga.,
No. 409 Broadway.

FLORIDA RAILROAD AND STEAM-SHIP LINE.
ONLY DIRECT LINE TO FLORIDA.
SAILING EVERY SATURDAY.
LOWEST RATES OF FREIGHT AND PASSAGE.
Steamer ASHLAND, SATURDAY, Jan. 25.
And every SATURDAY thereafter.

For Fernandina direct, from Pier No. 19 N. R., at 3 P. M.

Only line issuing through tickets and bills lading to all points in Florida on Florida, Apalachicola, Appalachicola, and Flint Rivers, and BRUNSWICK, Ga. Insurance ¼ per cent. Bills lading signed on pier. For further information, through bills and passage rates, apply to
J. K. ROBERTS,
No. 177 West-st., up stairs.

UNITED STATES AND BRAZIL MAIL STEAM-SHIP LINE.
FOR ST. THOMAS, PARA, PERNAMBUCO, BAHIA, AND RIO DE JANEIRO.

Connecting at St. Thomas with German steamers for Porto Rico and Spanish Main. The new first-class iron steam-ship CITY OF PARA, Capt. CARPENTER, will sail for the above ports on Wednesday, Feb. 5, at 2 P. M.

Positively no freight received after 3d. Freight must be paid in advance. Freight rates taken for the above ports. Freight received at Roberts' Dock, Brooklyn. Insurance lower than by any other line. Shippers desiring insurance can effect same under open policy. For freight engagements or passage, having elegant accommodations, apply to C. H. MALLORY & CO., Agents, Office, Pier No. 20 East River.

PACIFIC MAIL STEAM-SHIP COMPANY.
Pier (old No. 43) North River.
FOR SAN FRANCISCO via ISTHMUS OF PANAMA:
Steam-ship ACAPULCO.....Friday, Jan. 31, noon
Connecting for South and Central America and Mexico.

From San Francisco for Japan and China:
Steam-ship CHINA.....Wednesday, March 5, noon
From SAN FRANCISCO to HONOLULU, NEW-ZEALAND, and AUSTRALIA:
Steam-ship CITY OF NEW-YORK, Monday, Feb. 17, noon

For freight or general information apply to Company's office, on the pier, foot of Canal-st., North River, and for passage at Company's Ticket Office, No. 287 Broadway.

NEW-YORK, HAVANA & MEXICAN MAIL S. S. LINE.
Steamers leave Pier No. 3 North River at 3 P. M.
FOR HAVANA DIRECT AND VERA CRUZ.
Calling at Progreso, Campeche, and Frontera.
CITY OF VERA CRUZ.....Saturday, Jan. 25
CITY OF WASHINGTON, (Havana only,) Thurs., Feb. 6
CITY OF MERIDA.....Saturday, Feb. 8

Steamers leave New-Orleans Jan. 29 and Feb. 19 for Vera Cruz via Mazatlan, Tampico, Progreso, connecting with steamers for Havana. New York and above ports.
F. ALEXANDER & SONS, Nos. 21 and 23 Broadway.

SHIPPING.

FOR BRIDGEPORT AND ALL POINTS ON Housatonic and Naugatuck Railroad. Fare $1. Steamers leave Catharine-slip daily, (Sundays excepted,) at 11:30 A. M.

FOR NEW-HAVEN, HARTFORD, AND THE NORTH.—Steamers leave Peck-slip for New-Haven at 5 and 11 P. M., connecting with road.

STEAM-BOATS.

$1 50 TO BOSTON.
VIA THE OLD, RELIABLE
STONINGTON LINE.
CONNECTING WITH ALL POINTS EAST.
NOT A TRIP MISSED IN SEVEN CONSECUTIVE FIVE YEARS.

The elegant steamers STONINGTON and NARRAGANSETT leave Pier No. 33 North River, (foot of Jay-st.,) at 4:30 P. M. daily, (except Sundays.)

Special first-class limited tickets, good only on 2:45 A. M. train from Stonington, sold via this line from New-York to Boston for $1 50.

Tickets for sale at all principal ticket offices. State-rooms secured at offices of Westcott Express Company and at Nos. 263 and 207 Broadway, and at Metropolitan and Fifth-Avenue Hotel Ticket Offices.

PROVIDENCE LINE, FOR FREIGHT ONLY.
Steamers ELECTRA and GALATEA leave Pier No. 29 North River, (foot of Warren-st.) daily, (except Sundays,) at 4 P. M. for Providence direct.
Freight via either line taken at lowest r

THE END OF A LIBEL SUIT.

COL. KEITT AGAINST THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

THE LAW AND THE FACTS IN THE CASE—$50,000 DAMAGES ASKED FOR—THE JURY GIVE PLAINTIFF A VERDICT FOR SIX CENTS.

Early in September, 1877, Thomas Keitt, a mulatto member of the South Carolina Legislature, residing at Newberry Court-house, in that State, and sometimes called, among his intimate associates, "Col. Keitt," was arrested at Newberry and committed to jail on a charge of bigamy. The fact of his arrest was communicated to THE TIMES on Sept. 5, in a special dispatch from Washington, which was published in THE TIMES on Sept. 6. On this publication Ellison S. Keitt, a brother of the late Lawrence M. Keitt, sued THE TIMES, in the United States Circuit Court, for libel, claiming that he was the only "Col. Keitt" residing at Newberry Court-house; that the dispatch referred to and reflected injuriously upon him, and that it was false. He asked for $50,000 damages. The trial was begun on Wednesday last, before Judge Shipman and a jury, in this City, and yesterday the plaintiff received a verdict awarding him 6 cents damages. The printed dispatch from Washington set forth that one "Col. Keitt, of Newberry, S. C.," had been arrested and held to await the action of the Grand Jury, at that place, on a charge of bigamy; that he was a near relative of Lawrence M. Keitt, who was somewhat conspicuous in Congress before the war, and that the exposé would make a stir among the best people in that section. The plaintiff, in his complaint, set forth that he was widely and favorably known and respected in South Carolina and other States; that the publication in question was false, defamatory, wicked, and malicious, and was published with intent to injure him in his good name and reputation. Nelson Smith and William A. Beach appeared as counsel for the plaintiff, and Joseph H. Choate and Allen W. Evarts for the defendant. On behalf of the plaintiff a large number of depositions were read, among the deponents being Gov. Wade Hampton, Gen. John S. Preston, Archbishop Lynch, of Charleston, Attorney-General Youmans, and other eminent residents of the Palmetto State. These gentlemen all deposed, in effect, that they had known Ellison S. Keitt for periods varying from 10 to 25 years; that they knew his brother, Col. Lawrence M. Keitt, who had been for years a member of Congress, and who was killed in battle near Richmond, in June, 1864; that since his death the plaintiff was known to them and generally throughout the State as "Col. Keitt," or as "Col. Keitt, of Newberry," and that they knew of no other Col. Keitt. On cross-interrogation they all deposed that he was a white man, but some of them had heard of a colored man named Keitt, from Newberry Court-house, who had been a member of the Legislature, and had held other public offices since the close of the war; they never knew of his being called Col. Keitt, and did not know that he had ever held any Militia rank, but had heard that he was convicted of bigamy in September, 1877. Col. A. H. H. Dawson, of this City, was examined, and testified to his introduction to, and acquaintance with, the plaintiff as Col. Keitt, of South Carolina. Under cross-examination by Mr. Choate, Col. Dawson, referring to the profusion of military titles in the South, said "it would be a small crowd that a man could throw a stone into, down there, without hitting a Colonel." Mr. Choate asked the witness whether Lawrence M. Keitt was not the same Keitt who was commonly known as having assisted Preston S. Brooks in his assault on Charles Sumner, on the floor of the United States Senate in 1856, but the question was excluded by the court on general grounds of the avoidance of acerbity and unpleasant reminiscences on this trial. Mr. Choate claimed the right to prove it as an element tending to show in what respect the Keitt family had won its most historical renown.

Ellison S. Keitt testified in substance that we was a citizen of South Carolina, born at Orangeburg, and had lived since 1862 at Newberry; in 1863 he went into the Confederate Army as a Captain; on the evacuation of Charleston he was placed in command at Sullivan's Island, and, after that period, was called Col. Keitt, and became so known throughout the State; in 1868, 1869, 1871, and 1872 he visited the North, and was widely introduced as Col. Keitt; he knew a colored man named Tom Keitt, who had achieved political distinction and was born a slave in the Keitt household, but he had never held any military rank or title. It was a common thing for slaves and ex-slaves to adopt the names of their former masters—sometimes they adopted fancy names, the names of distinguished men—they had numbers of Washingtons and Jacksons down there, and there was also a Rufus Choate. This information created a lively ripple of amusement in court, which Mr. Choate heartily enjoyed, and thereupon he proceeded to cross-examine Mr. Keitt. The witness admitted that he had never received an actual commission for any rank in the rebel service, and that it was only after the war closed he was known as Colonel, having been, as Mr. Choate phrased it, "a Captain in war and a Colonel in peace." Mr. Keitt said he did not think it was a very common thing for persons at the South to call each other "Colonel" or "Major" when they had not been in the military. The name Keitt belonged to Tom, the colored man, only by adoption. "Just the same," rejoined Mr. Choate, "as your title of Colonel is Tom white or black?" "He is a mulatto," replied the witness. "Did you know his mother?" continued Mr. Choate. The witness said he did, and that she was a slave to his father, and was black. "Then Tom's white blood didn't come from her?" queried Mr. Choate. "I suppose it came from his father, whatever its source may have been," said the witness. "What is his height?" "About five feet eight or nine inches," answered Mr. Keitt. "And as heavy as you are?" was Mr. Choate's next ingenuous inquiry. "No, Sir;" said the witness promptly; "I am about six feet, Sir—in my boots." The witness went on to say that Tom was at one time his slave, left to him by his father's will, and that Tom's mother also was born a slave on the Keitt plantation; the witness' father owned about 100 slaves or more, most of whom were born slaves to him; Tom was at the time of his birth the only one of mixed blood, but at the time the elder Keitt died there were two or three other mulattoes, who had been born among them. When witness returned from the North in 1872 he found Tom was a candidate for election as County Commissioner, and he was elected and filled the office acceptably; he was afterward made keeper of the Poor-house, and in 1876 and 1877 was elected to the Legislature; for the latter office Tom was opposed by Judge Pope, Dr. Barrow, and Col. Keitt, the witness, but Tom defeated them all; in September, 1877, he was convicted of bigamy and sent to State Prison. His arrest made some sensation in Newberry, but not in the State at large; it got into the leading and local newspapers down there, of course.

From points Mr. Choate led the witness to admit squarely that he was well known wherever he was known at all, and that among those who knew him he was still as well thought of as ever. He had been a widower since May, 1862, and that fact also was generally known to all his personal friends. "Then," rejoined Mr. Choate, "no one would have supposed that you could commit the crime of bigamy?" The witness replied in effect that some of his friends, who had not heard from him for some time, and did not know whether he was married again or not, wrote to him, and as times were very corrupt in South Carolina then, there was no telling what a man might not do. His friend Gen. Garlington wrote asking if it was true, and offering to defend him on trial if it was the fact that he had been so charged. "Probably he thought that the defense of a widower against the charge of bigamy would be an easy matter," suggested Mr. Choate. Mr. Keitt closed his testimony by saying that he had telegraphed a denial of the charge to the South Carolina press as soon as it was known to him; that his denials were printed, and a few days afterward he put the case in the hands of a New-York attorney to seek a retraction from THE TIMES and protect his interests. An explanation appeared, but it was an unsatisfactory one.

For the defense it was shown, by depositions of numerous residents of Newberry, that the negro Tom Keitt was reputed by local gossip in the county to be the natural son of some member of the Keitt family by a slave mother, among the affiants being many county officials and old settlers in Newberry; that he had held various public positions, and was ultimately convicted of bigamy. Witnesses were examined orally also, showing that the writers and the publisher of the dispatch had never heard of the plaintiff, nor that he was known as Col. Keitt; that the dispatch containing the alleged libel was published as ordinary current news, and was intended by the correspondent who wrote and sent it to refer to a negro, there being a political contest at the time for the possession of his seat as a member of the Legislature, and it was thought that this arrest was a means resorted to to get rid of him politically. Gen. Carlos J. Stolbrand, now a resident of Orleans, La. S. C., but who had been Chief of Artillery of the Fifteenth and Seventeenth Army Corps, under Gens. McPherson and Sherman, during the war, testified, also, that he knew Tom Keitt as a member of the Legislature, and that he had at first been pointed out to him as Col. Keitt, a member of the Legislature from Newberry County, Keitt being at the time a member of the committee before which the witness had official business pending.

When the testimony was closed Mr. Choate said that the facts all being now before the court, so that the motives or malice could be fairly judged of, he felt it his duty to offer this plaintiff any proper publication, as a vindication, which he might ask, and which was due to a gentleman, as they believed the plaintiff to be.

Mr. Beach, on behalf of the plaintiff, declined the offer, unless it was accompanied by the offer of such a sum of money as would be a reasonable compensation for the expense to which Col. Keitt had been subjected in vindicating himself.

This offer having been declined, Mr. Choate proceeded to sum up the case in a closing argument for the defense, insisting, among other things, that there was entire absence of malice, and that in any event the plaintiff's reputation had not been injured appreciably by the publication. Mr. Beach exhausted the case in an argument of two hours' duration, and demanded a full verdict for damages.

Judge Shipman charged the jury yesterday morning. After stating the character of the action, he said that a libel was a false and malicious publication, tending either to injure the memory of one dead or the reputation of one living, and exposing him to public hatred, contempt, or ridicule. Every publication which charged or imputed to any person that which rendered him liable to punishment was prima facie a libel, and implied malice in the publisher. The publication of this article was not denied, or the responsibility of the defendant for damages, if the publication was untruly spoken of or concerning the plaintiff. Neither was it denied that, if it was spoken of or concerning the plaintiff, it was untrue in fact and malicious in character. The first material question of fact was whether it was uttered of or concerning the plaintiff. [The court here read the alleged libelous publication.] The plaintiff said that he had long been the only resident of Newberry Court-house, known as Col. Keitt; that he was a well-known citizen of South Carolina; had filled offices of honor and trust, and that for many years past he had been universally known throughout the State as Col. Keitt, and was recognized by that title as the brother of the late Lawrence M. Keitt, and was by marriage and descent connected with prominent families in that State. He also claimed that the publication could have no other intent than to cast upon him a charge of crime. The defendant claimed that it referred to one Thomas Keitt, a mulatto, who lived at Newberry, who had been a member of the Legislature; who had been arrested for the crime of bigamy; who was called "Col. Keitt," and who was reported to be the natural son of some one of the Keitt family other than the plaintiff. The question of fact, then, was, Of whom was this publication uttered? The plaintiff urged that the assertion that the libel concerned a negro was a pretense, because it was abundantly proved that the negro never was an officer of the Militia, and never was known as or styled "Colonel;" and, further, that the testimony in regard to his paternity clearly showed that there was no general reputation on the subject, the talk being only occasional gossip and scandal. He further said that the whole tenor of the article indicated that he was the person referred to. The defendant asserted that Thomas Keitt was aptly identified by the description in the publication. The court would here say that if the author of the publication intended to have the community understand that it described the plaintiff in terms as unavoidably to convey to the minds of all persons who were acquainted with his name the information that he was charged with crime, it was not a defense to say that, although the language naturally and obviously pointed to the plaintiff, the publication was applicable to another person, whose identity was concealed from the knowledge of the public. It was not a defense that the description was applicable to some other person, if the natural and obvious and intended meaning of the language did not point to such person, but did intentionally point to the plaintiff and conveyed to the public the charge that he had committed the crime named in the publication; and when the court said that the author of the publication intended the public to understand that the plaintiff was meant, the court did not mean that it was necessary to prove that the editor of the paper had such intent. If the editor or publisher made his newspaper the vehicle of a libel he was responsible, although he did not know it was a libel. Who, then, was intended by the utterer of this publication to be understood as charged with crime? Did he mean the plaintiff or Thomas Keitt? The jury had heard the testimony of Mr. Carson and Mr. Kirke, for the defense, to prove this, and they could look at all the circumstances, and an examination of the tenor and phraseology of the libel itself would be important. Mr. Carson's testimony was that he was informed by Mr. Kirke that he was a member of the Legislature of Thomas Keitt, and styled Col. Keitt, had been arrested for bigamy, and that it was supposed by the party friends of the arrested person that his arrest was caused by persons of the opposite party for the purpose of having his seat in the Legislature declared vacant. Did Mr. Carson intend to communicate by this dispatch the information that Thomas Keitt, a mulatto, was the person designated, or did he mean a different person, answering the description of the plaintiff? If the latter was true, it was immaterial that he had in his mind and knew that Thomas Keitt was the man actually charged with the offense. If the publication charged the plaintiff with crime, and if, while the utterer had in his mind the facts in regard to Thomas Keitt the publication intentionally and maliciously led the public to put their statement that the plaintiff had been arrested, then the defendant was liable. If neither of these facts were found in favor of the plaintiff then the defendant was not liable. The jury found upon the questions thus submitted in favor of the plaintiff, then the only remaining question was that of damages. If an editor published a false and malicious publication he was liable to pay the actual damages which the plaintiff had sustained in his feelings and reputation. If no actual damage was sustained, then the verdict might be for nominal damages. If express malice was proved the jury might give punitive damages, but such damages were not claimed here. The plaintiff had stated that he was annoyed and wounded by the publication, and that he received a letter from Gen. Garlington, a friend, in regard to it; that he took immediate measures to correct it by telegraphing to the Charleston News and Courier; that he had a large acquaintance at the South, and had made many acquaintances at the North, and feared that the publication would cause him annoyance with acquaintances and those unaware of his domestic condition and affairs. It was also shown that the article was the subject of comment at Newberry and of current remark. The plaintiff was entitled to compensation for the actual injury to his reputation. That his reputation had not suffered among his friends was manifest. How much it had suffered among those who knew him casually, mere acquaintances, could not be accurately told. In the matter of damages there was no arithmetical rule, but the jury could give just damages for the injury actually sustained. They were not to give damages merely to punish the defendant, neither were they to pay the plaintiff, either in whole or in part, for his outlay or expenses of suit. They were to deal justly, impartially, and uninfluenced by prejudice or passion, to give such a sum as in their judgment would be a meet recompense for the injury which the plaintiff had sustained.

The jury, after a retirement of about three hours, rendered a verdict for the plaintiff for 6 cents, as above stated.

NEW RAILROAD FACILITIES ON CONEY ISLAND.

The necessary legal proceedings having been completed, with the early Spring, the Prospect Park and Coney Island Railroad will construct a new road some two and a quarter miles, beginning at Cable's and terminating at Norton's, the western extremity of Coney Island, the point known as the Steam-boat Landing. The new road will run back of the hotels, at some 800 feet from the ocean, and some 400 feet beyond Surf-avenue. Surf-avenue is to be 120 feet in width, and will be an extension of the Concourse. The advantages of this railroad to both Brooklyn and New-York will be very evident. It opens to the public a portion of the island which has heretofore been little visited, as it affords some two miles of the best bathing, this part of the beach allowing bathing at high or low tide. New-York visitors can take the steam-boats, and landing at Norton's, will be able to reach the centre and eastern portions of the island. Another branch of this same road will be carried to the Prospect Park Fair Grounds. Mr. Charles Green, the well-known trainer, who has had for so long under his special charge Mr. Bonner's and Mr. Vanderbilt's horses, has just secured a long lease of these grounds, and proposes having races on the track during the Summer. The numerous visitors to Cable's, who were restricted in prior seasons to railroad traveling alone, can in the coming Summer take the water communication, as now devised by the Prospect Park and Coney Island Railroad.

AN EVENING'S ENTERTAINMENT IN A NEW-JERSEY CHURCH.

A course of popular entertainments has been undertaken by the Methodist Episcopal Church of Westfield, N. J., for the benefit of a special fund. The first one was given on Thursday evening with an admirable programme of readings by Mr. Alfred E. Pearsall, and organ recitals by Mr. C. H. Edwards. Every piece was applauded, and one of the organ selections was encored. Mr. Pearsall's readings were particularly happy. His pathetic rendering of "Singing Joseph" and "Surly Tim's Troubles" were notable instances of dramatic power, while his interpretation of the humorous was equally successful. The audience fairly roared over his "Brother Watkins," "A Night of Trouble," "Business in Mississippi," and other irresistibly funny things. But the last thing on the programme, a burlesque of the modern choir, was of all others a never-to-be-forgotten performance. The people laughed till they cried, and everybody went home talking about it. The next entertainment in the course will be a lecture by Rev. Dr. J. H. Vincent, of Plainfield, entitled "That Boy's Sister."

THE O'SULLIVAN BARRATRY CASE.

The trial of John C. O'Sullivan for barratry was concluded in the Hudson County Court of Quarter Sessions, and was given to the jury at 4:30 o'clock. Judge Garretson, in his charge, defined the law of barratry and the offense itself. "Barratry, he said, was the stirring up of strife, trouble, and litigation; inciting others to bring suits, or bringing suits personally for purposes of revenge. Even where there was just cause for the suits the offense was complete, provided the prosecution was for malice, and not to uphold the dignity of the law and vindicate justice. As to the law, Judge Garretson said that it required that three malicious suits should be proved to establish the crime of barratry, and if the jury were of the opinion that three cases had been made out against O'Sullivan it would be their duty to convict; if not, they should acquit. At the conclusion of Judge Garretson's remarks the jury were conducted to their room and locked up. At 11 o'clock they had not agreed upon a verdict, and were locked up for the night.

MISCELLANEOUS CITY NEWS

THE METROPOLITAN ROAD.

STEPS NOW BEING TAKEN TOWARD ITS COMPLETION — WHAT VICE-PRESIDENT BAIRD SAYS.

Mr. John Baird, the Vice-President of the Metropolitan Elevated Railroad, in speaking yesterday to a TIMES reporter respecting the completion of the road, said that the foundations were all opened on the West Side from Eighty-third to One Hundred and Sixth-street, and a great many of them had been built. A few of the foundations above Eighty-third-street had to be dug very deep on account of the peculiar formation of the ground, and consequently the work at that particular point has been somewhat delayed, but they expect to have them completed next week. As soon thereafter as the contractors, Messrs. Clark, Reeves & Co., of Phœnixville, Penn., deliver the iron, they will commence putting up the superstructure. At Ninety-second-street the road crosses an aqueduct, which will cause some delay, but the company expect to have the iron-work and stations up as far as One Hundred and Fifty-ninth-street, Eighth-avenue and Harlem River, as early as July 1. The work is also nearly completed through Fifty-third-street, from Sixth to Eighth avenues, and they expect to commence running above Fifty-third-street, on Eighth-avenue, in about three weeks.

In regard to the lower end of Church-street, Mr. Baird said that the company had bought all the property from Morris-street to and including the old depot of the Harlem Railroad, now used as a depot by the New-York Elevated Railroad. They have obtained possession of most of the property, and have commenced tearing down some of the buildings. Some of the leases, however, will not expire before May 1, and this will retard their progress somewhat at this point. They are going ahead, however, as fast as possible, and have men now at work preparing the foundations, and they expect to get across Broadway to Beaver-street by May 1. The work through Beaver-street will be delayed, Mr. Baird said, on account of the difficulties to be encountered in the laying out of the foundations, owing to the intricate nature of the sewer connections, and gas and water mains in that street. The engineers completed the drawing of the exhibits for Division and Allen streets yesterday, and they will be sent to the Commissioner of Public Works either to-day or Monday for his approval. The present expectation of the company is to have the iron-work and stations completed from Beaver-street to Harlem by Sept. 1, including the remainder of the distance from the present terminus of the road at Morris and Church streets.

When asked in regard to the kind of road the company proposed building on the East Side, Mr. Baird said that the structure would be heavier than that on the West Side, and would be adapted to the laying of three tracks, instead of two. The road now being built on the West Side, above Eighty-third-street, is also heavier than that on Sixth-avenue, below Fiftieth-street, and is intended for three tracks. The engines intended for use on the East Side are to be heavier than those now in use on the West Side, and the cars will be, if anything, nicer than the old ones. Mr. Baird said that Mr. Pullman, of the Pullman Palace Car Company, was in the City a few days ago, and said that he had prepared designs for the new cars, which were far ahead of the old ones, and that the designs were approved by the Board of Directors. The intention was, Mr. Baird said, to give the people on the East Side just as good a road, and just as nice cars as the people on the West Side. In conclusion, Mr. Baird said that the company had got all the money they needed to build the road, the contract for the iron had been awarded to Clark, Reeves & Co., of Phœnixville, Penn., and he saw no reason why the road should not be completed by the time specified—Sept. 1. He had no idea that the bill introduced into the Assembly by Mr. Eidman, of the Kingsland & Newtown Company, to cut in Division and Allen streets, and the lower end of First and Second avenues, forbidding the building of an elevated railroad east of Third-avenue, would become a law. He believed that a majority of Judge could be found in the City, or even in the State, who would grant an injunction restraining them from building the road. The people in Fifty-third-street, he said, threatened the company with an injunction, but they had refused to carry out their threats, and he had no fears of their doing so.

The route of the East Side branch will be through Beaver-street to Pearl, through Pearl (over the track now operated by the Harlem Railroad) to Chatham-square, thence through Division-street to Allen, through Allen to First-avenue, through First-avenue to Twenty-third-street, thence to Second-avenue, and up Second-avenue to the Harlem River. The entire distance is about eight miles. In the narrow streets the columns will be erected on the edges of the sidewalks, with girders spanning the roadway, and on streets that are over 50 feet wide, like First and Second avenues, the railroad will occupy the middle of the street. The strength of the structure will be sufficient to sustain eight times the weight it is ever intended to carry. On the West Side road the structure is calculated to support four times as great as it is ever intended to carry.

The total number of passengers carried by the Metropolitan Road daily is between 50,000 and 60,000, and the number of trains run each day is 441, distributed as follows: From 6 to 7 A. M., 20 trains; 7 to 8 A. M., 27; 8 to 9 A. M., 29; 9 to 10 A. M., 29; 10 to 11 A. M., 28; 11 to 12 A. M., 22; 12 to 1 P. M., 21; 1 to 2 P. M., 23; 2 to 3 P. M., 31; 3 to 4 P. M., 32; 4 to 5 P. M., 33; 5 to 6 P. M., 32; 6 to 7 P. M., 28; 7 to 8 P. M., 21; 8 to 9 P. M., 16; 9 to 10 P. M., 17; 10 to 11 P. M., 17; 11 to 12 P. M., 17. The number of passengers carried daily by the New-York Elevated Road is about 90,000.

THE KILLING OF OFFICER FURNESS.

IS WILLIAM L. PALMER SANE OR INSANE?—HIS APPEARANCE BEFORE THE COMMISSION.

Dr. John Ordroneaux, Col. John R. Fellows, and Charles B. Waite, the Commissioners appointed by Judge Gildersleeve to inquire into the sanity of William L. Palmer, Jr., who shot and killed Officer Asa H. Furness, of the Fourteenth Precinct, in the Metropolitan Hotel last month, met in the District Attorney's office yesterday. Assistant District Attorney Ball appeared for the prosecution, and William P. Dixon, a cousin of the prisoner, looked after the interests of the accused. Palmer was brought down from Bellevue Hospital by two court officers. His appearance was exceedingly wild, and his actions suggestive of an unsound mind. On being placed at the bar, Mr. Dixon stepped forward and offered to shake hands with the prisoner, but the latter indignantly spurned the offer, and charged his relative with being one of the persons who had entered into a conspiracy to kill him. He drew himself up to his full height and gesticulated wildly whilst the indictment was being read over to him. After Clerk Hall had got through, the accused said savagely: "I am not guilty. Is that all you want with me?" Mr. Dixon handed to the Clerk a special written plea of insanity, and it was placed on the records.

As Palmer was about being taken from the court-room, he turned sharply, and, approaching Judge Gildersleeve, said: "Your Honor, I am entitled to a trial. Can't I have the privilege of choosing my own lawyer, and is it not my right to go before the Grand Jury?"

"Certainly," said Judge Gildersleeve, humoring the prisoner, "the District Attorney will attend to all that for you."

Palmer bowed his acknowledgments, and was taken from the court-room to the chamber in which the Commissioners sat. Here he surveyed the arbiters of his fate with suspicion, and informed the officer in charge that they also were in league to poison him.

The Commissioners, finding that the order of the court under which they were appointed did not give them the power to inquire into the prisoner's sanity at the time of the murder, but only directed them to ascertain his sanity at the present time, adjourned until to-day, when, under the amended order of the court, they will take testimony as to the prisoner's insanity at the time of the commission of the murder. If, under this order, they find Palmer insane, it will put an end to all further proceedings by consigning the prisoner to a lunatic asylum. Under the first order of the court, the finding of the prisoner to be at the present time would not put a stop to further proceedings, the accused being simply sent to an asylum and kept there, his return to a sane condition rendering his trial for the offense necessary.

Palmer has all the appearances of a lunatic, and it is said that Drs. Gray and McDonald, who have already examined him, have given it as their opinion that he is insane. He is possessed of the mania that all the attaches of Bellevue are his enemies. The people laughed till they cried, and everybody went home talking about it. The next entertainment in the course will be a lecture by Rev. Dr. J. H. Vincent, of Plainfield, entitled "That Boy's Sister."

THE TRIAL OF ISAAC PERLSTEIN.

TESTIMONY OF THE ACCUSED IN HIS OWN DEFENSE—EVIDENCE IN FAVOR OF AN ALIBI.

The immense crowds who thronged the General Sessions Court room yesterday afforded ample testimony of the general interest taken in the trial of Isaac Perlstein, for having, as alleged, set fire to the crowded tenement-house No. 11 Ludlow-street for the purpose of obtaining the insurance on the burned property. The prisoner displayed extreme nervousness yesterday, and scarcely lifted his eyes from the floor, unless to take a furtive glance at the jury. Judge Cowing took his seat at 11 o'clock, and the trial of what will undoubtedly be known in the criminal history of New-York as "the great arson case" proceeded. At the opening of court Assistant District Attorney Rollins again recalled Charles H. Parley, who testified that when Perlstein, Bernstein, and Freeman left their head-quarters, at No. 62 East Broadway, for No. 11 Ludlow-street on the night of the fire the prisoner carried a basket. When they had reached their destination witness did not notice the demijohn which he had previously seen in Freeman's hand.

"Well," said Mr. Rollins, "was the basket large enough to hold a Democrat—a demijohn I mean."

The mistake of the prosecuting officer was received with roars of laughter. When it had subsided, witness said that the basket was large enough to contain a demijohn.

Isaac Perlstein, the prisoner, then took the stand, and, in answer to the question of his counsel, Mr. Charles W. Brooks, stated that he was a peddler and lived at No. 28 Market-street; on the entire day and night of the fire he was at home with his family, and retired at 11 P. M.; four days afterward he was arrested, and locked up in a cell all night; next morning he was examined by Fire Marshal Sheldon, and, although able to speak only a little English, answered the questions put to him as well as he could; the Fire Marshal then wrote out a statement and read it to him, and although witness did not understand it, he signed it; he was told, he said, that unless he answered the questions put to him he would be imprisoned for life.

Assistant District Attorney Rollins then took the prisoner in hand, and subjected him to a very trying cross-examination. The witness said he had come to this City from Pennsylvania about 10 months ago, and admitted having been convicted for the larceny of $12. He denied, however, having been implicated in the theft of $490 from an Italian at Wilkesbarre. He denied emphatically that he was on terms of intimacy with Freeman, or had ever had any acquaintance with him socially or through business. The statement that he had been in Freeman's company 25 times during October and December was, he said, false, as was also the assertion of the witnesses for the prosecution, that he had left No. 62 East Broadway with either him or Bernstein. He denied all knowledge of the fire at Joseph Levy's rooms, No. 11 Ludlow-street, or of a fire at the house in which Levy's brother lived, No. 47 Ludlow-street. He never was in No. 11 Ludlow-street, he said, and therefore could not have had any hand in the fire. His household effects were insured, but he had never set fire to them, nor (proudly,) had his father before him.

Mr. Rollins then proceeded to cross-examine the prisoner in relation to the finding on his person the cards of a number of lawyers, that of an adjuster of losses by fire, and other suspicious memoranda, but Mr. Brooks came to the rescue with a timely objection, and Judge Cowing ruled the evidence out.

Handing the prisoner a memorandum-book, Mr. Rollins asked the prisoner to read the contents of one page. Mr. Brooke again came to the rescue, and Judge Cowing asked the prosecutor the nature of the testimony.

"Well, your Honor," said Mr. Rollins, "I want the prisoner to read this, because I have had it translated, and am perfectly satisfied that the entries refer to a number of other incendiary fires in which the prisoner has been implicated. They give the particulars of six separate fires, with the names of the occupants of the buildings in which they occurred, and in three of these cases I can show by them that all four—Perlstein, Levy, Bernstein, and Freeman—were at the spot five minutes before the fires were discovered. These fires had all occurred between April and October of the past year. Judge Cowing thought it safer to exclude the evidence, and did so.

Rosa Perlstein, the prisoner's wife, also took the stand, and testified that on the night of the fire her husband came at home at about 11 o'clock, after spending the evening, playing dominoes with Jacob Benjamin, a boarder; her husband's sister, Mrs. Cohen, and several other persons were in the house all the evening. In answer to Mr. Rollins's questions, Mrs. Perlstein said she could not then remember any other particular occasion on which her husband had staid in all evening, although confident he had often done so.

The brother, Benjamin, Mrs. Jesse Cohen, sister of the prisoner; Anna, his daughter, and Esther Rabinowitz were also examined to corroborate the prisoner's evidence in support of an alibi.

Harris Walford, who lived at No. 11 Ludlow-street, was called, and testified that it was he, and not Charles H. Perley, who had broken in the doors of Levy's apartments on the discovery of the fire. This concluded the testimony for the defense, and both sides announced the close of their case. The case will be summed up to-day.

SUPERINTENDENT SMYTH ENJOINED.

A few days ago Judge Gilbert, of the Supreme Court, rendered a decision granting an injunction against John F. Smyth, Superintendent of the Insurance Department, and others. This order enjoined Mr. Smyth and his successors or assistants from proceeding under an order of Judge Westbrook, granted in Ulster County on Dec. 14, 1878, authorizing and permitting Smyth to pay out the sum of $130,000, being the amount of a trust fund deposited with his predecessor in office by the defunct National Life Insurance Company. The suit was originally brought in the name of Ann Reese against William Smythe, Acting Superintendent of the Insurance Department, but since superseded to John F. Smyth, as Superintendent. In the settlement of the terms of the order, Judge Gilbert holds that this suit was pending when the proceeding before Judge Westbrook was commenced; that the latter proceeding was unauthorized, and that there are conflicting claims and interests set up in this action, which cannot be adjudicated in the proceeding referred to. He therefore orders that the defendant, John F. Smyth, and all others acting for or under him, be enjoined from proceeding further under Judge Westbrook's order, and from paying out, distributing, or in any manner parting with the fund or securities, or any part of them; and, further, "that all persons whatsoever be and they are restrained from proceeding further under the said order, and that James W. Husted, the Referee, named in said order of Judge Westbrook, be and is restrained from further proceedings in reference to or under the powers given to him in that order."

SENTENCED FOR MANSLAUGHTER.

Frank McKenna, one of the proprietors of the liquor saloon at No. 118 Mulberry-street, who was convicted of manslaughter in the third degree, was called up for sentence by Assistant District Attorney Bollins, in the General Sessions Court, yesterday. McKenna and his brother attacked a youth named William B. Willse, in Mulberry-street, in September last, and in the row which ensued Willse received a pistol-shot wound, from the effects of which he died. The most strenuous efforts had been made by the relatives of the prisoner to secure a mitigation of punishment, but Judge Cowing was unapproachable. His Honor sentenced McKenna to the full penalty—four years in State Prison at hard labor. After the sentence was pronounced, Mrs. Oates, the mother of McKenna's victim, accompanied by her husband, left the court and proceeded homeward through Centre-street, followed by McKenna's mother. The latter abused Mrs. Oates in the most shameful manner, calling her exceedingly foul names. Justice Smith, on the statement made by Mrs. Oates, issued a warrant for Mrs. McKenna's arrest.

ANOTHER MISSING PERSON.

Lewis E. Hepburn, a son of Rev. George G. Hepburn, of Eatontown, N. J., has been missing from his home since Wednesday, Jan. 15. He started about 9 o'clock A. M. on that day to go skating on Pleasure Bay, four miles distant, where he was seen and recognized about 11 o'clock. There were a great many skaters there all day, but, although diligent search has been made and every conceivable theory followed to discover his fate or whereabouts, he has not been seen or heard of since that hour. He is over 17 years of age, is feet 9 inches tall, and wore a blue-black overcoat and otter-skin cap. A white silk handkerchief was tied around his neck, having the initials "L. K. H." worked in one corner. Young Hepburn is an expert skater and swimmer, and his disappearance so early in the day and in the midst of so many persons has caused great anxiety among his relatives and friends.

A SUIT FOR A TAILOR'S BILL.

When Henry George Poole, the famous London tailor, died several years ago, it was found that among his creditors was Mr. Edward J. Arnott, the actor, who is well-known in this City, from the numerous troubles he has had, on and off the stage. In 1877 Mr. Charles Bentley Bingley, the Executor of the estate of Poole, sued Arnott, in the Supreme Court, and recovered a judgment. An execution was issued, and was returned unsatisfied, upon which an attachment and an order to Arnott to appear for examination on supplementary proceedings were granted. Arnott disobeyed the order, was adjudged guilty of contempt of court, and was fined $100. He paid the fine recently, and an order was made by Judge Lawrence for his examination on supplementary proceedings on Jan. 14. He was called out of the City Jan. 13, and his counsel obtained an adjournment. Judge Lawrence, in Supreme Court, Special Term, yesterday, amended his former order, and fixed the examination of Arnott for Feb. 24 next.

CITY AND SUBURBAN NEWS.

NEW-YORK.

The Montana brought 12 immigrants yesterday.

There were 25 new cases of scarlet fever and 7 cases of diphtheria, and 8 deaths from scarlet fever and 2 from diphtheria, reported to the Health Department yesterday.

There are now three more vessels of the Union-Line loading at the New-York Central wharves—the Cosmopolitan, for Liverpool; the Nellie, for Hamburg, and the Glenbervie, for London.

A half-mile skating race for boys and a mile race for all comers are to be contested at the Gilmore's Garden Rink this evening, for gold medals. Among the entries for the latter race are Messrs. Gurney, J. S. Barney, G. D. Phillips, and J. W. Smith.

The bark Isaac W. Oliver, which arrived from Havre yesterday, experienced very heavy westerly gales since Dec. 12. On Jan. 2, during a terrific gale, a number of sails were lost and split, and some damage was caused by a tremendous sea which struck the vessel on the port side.

George Hinnber, a coal peddler, aged 45, who with his wife and four children lived at No. 412 Pearl-street, committed suicide yesterday by hanging himself to the rafters in his stable. No. 5 Oak-street. Despondency resulting from poverty and sickness in his family prompted him to the act.

The funeral services over the remains of Neil Lamont, who had been for the last 12 years the passenger agent of the Anchor Line in this City, and who died, after a short illness, on Wednesday last, were held at his late residence, No. 38 First-place, yesterday afternoon. The interment took place at Green-Wood Cemetery.

The annual festival of the Lord School was held yesterday afternoon. The exercises were varied and interesting. The friends of the school gathered in large numbers. Among those present were Hon. Hooper C. Van Vorst, George De Forest Lord, J. P. Giraud Foster, John C. Cruiks, D. S. Eggleston, W. Bayard Cutting, C. L. Brace, and others.

The trunk lines are again cutting on Eastbound way and through rates for freight. Free offerings were made on the Produce Exchange yesterday from Chicago to the seaboard at 25 cents per 100 pounds, and from the same city to Liverpool by way of Baltimore at 53 cents. Merchants say that the only reason they do not get still lower rates is the lack of sufficient rolling stock to move the goods.

On a charge of false pretenses, preferred by John M. Peters, manager of a trade journal, Thomas B. Lussey, of New-Brighton, Staten Island, an advertising agent, was yesterday held, in $500 bail to answer, by Justice Smith, in the Tombs Police Court. The complainant alleged that Lussey induced him a bogus advertisement, and that he demanded as his commission $8 33, which sum Mr. Peters did not pay, as he learned in time that the advertisement in question was unauthorized.

At about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon an explosion occurred in a shed on East Eighteenth-street, between Second and Third avenues. It was occupied as a stable and wagon shelter by Mr. Gray, a grocer at Third-avenue and Eighteenth-street. There was a wagon and horse in it at the time, the wagon being completely demolished. The horse escaped with a few bruises about his legs. The shock was sufficient to jar doors and windows for more than a block around. The cause of the explosion is unknown.

A lecture upon the results of the various expeditions sent to the Arctic regions to search for relics of Sir John Franklin and the men who perished with him was delivered by Mr. G. Melville Brown, last evening, in Chickering Hall. Its purpose was to obtain money for the purchase of supplies to be sent out in the steamer Pandora, now under the command of Lieut. Frederick Schwatka, of the United States Army, and Capt. Barry, of the schooner Esther. It was this fact alone that induced such a hundred ladies and gentleman to sit for more than an hour listening to the lecture, which was poorly written and badly delivered.

The ladies of the New-York Flower Mission, in response to an appeal for pictures to be sent to a United States post hospital in Montana, have received packages from Mrs. C. H. Anderson, Miss Holland, Miss Cook, Mrs. Billings, Mrs. Barbour, Mrs. J. A. C. Gray, Mrs. Higginson, Mrs. Bingham, Harlem, A. Patterson, and seven friends whose names were not given. A package containing 10 large engravings and another with several large chromos, from Bishop's art rooms, were especially acceptable. The Mission is endeavoring to supply the frontier post hospitals in Montana and Washington Territories with pictures, and contributions for this purpose are desired.

BROOKLYN.

Patrick Riley threw his wife, Mary, out of the second-story window of No. 35 Dean-street on the 8th of September last. The following day she died from the injuries received by the fall. Riley was indicted for murder in the second degree, but the District Attorney accepted a plea of manslaughter. Judge Moore sentenced Riley, yesterday, to seven years in the Penitentiary.

A quantity of sewer-gas found its way yesterday into the rooms assigned to the Assessors in the new Municipal Building, and the atmosphere became so offensive that the clerks were oblized to leave the apartments. It was discovered by some of the employés that the plumbing work and ventilation are defective.

Mary Myers was tried yesterday in the Court of Sessions on a charge of setting fire to the residence of Mr. Joseph Thayer, No. 137 St. James-place, where she was employed as a domestic. The indictment was admitted by the defense, but it was proved that a number of other persons had equal access with the prisoner to the place where the fire originated. Pending a new trial the girl was admitted to bail.

A number of burglaries have recently occurred in the village of Parkville, and in the town of Flatbush, Long Island. Su

The New-York Times.

VOL. XXVIII.....NO. 8541. NEW-YORK, SUNDAY, JANUARY 26, 1879.—TRIPLE SHEET. PRICE FIVE CENTS.

RUSSIA PLAGUE-STRICKEN.

THE DISEASE ADVANCING TOWARD THE NORTH AND EAST.

THE EPIDEMIC INTRODUCED BY COSSACK SOLDIERS—ITS SPREAD DUE TO GOVERNMENT NEGLECT—DIFFERENT OPINIONS AS TO ITS CHARACTER—MORE EXPERIENCED DOCTORS WANTED.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—The British Medical Journal publishes the following: "Russian and German medical journals state that the east of Europe is in a state of great alarm at the progress of what they allege to be the plague, which is rapidly making its way upward toward the north and east of Russia from the Caspian Sea, along the course of the Volga. According to an article, dated Jan. 16, published in the Wiener Medicinische Wochenschrift, No. 3, it has reached Nijnii-novgorod. As far as regards the origin of the disease, it is now ascertained that it was imported by two regiments of Cossacks who had lately returned from the war in Turkey, and, in spite of strict orders to disinfect everything, probably hid a part of their booty, which, without doubt, contained the germs of the infection. When the disease first showed itself it was rather neglected, and looked upon merely as a variety of typhus fever, and it was not until the mortality began to assume alarming dimensions that the local authorities began to feel it to be their duty to do something toward arresting its further progress. Accordingly a strict quarantine was enforced, but the inhabitants of Astrakhan, seized with a panic, had begun to fly in different directions, scattering on their way germs of the disease which advanced to the north over the provinces of Samara and Saratoff and reached Zaritsyn. This last-named place ought especially to have been protected, being a very important trading town on the Volga, connected by rail with almost the whole of Russia, and through it with the rest of Europe. Having once passed that place, the plague went on spreading till it reached Nijnii-novgorod, which is but a few hours distant from Moscow, the centre of Russia."

"It is a curious fact that some of the Russian papers, among others the Vratchebnyya Vedomosti, (Medical News,) persistently deny the existence of the disease, and simply treat it as an outbreak of malignant typhus, while the St. Petersburger Wochenschrift and other papers openly speak of it as the plague. The number for Dec. 28, (Jan. 9,) of the Vratchebnyya Vedomosti contains telegrams from the Governors of the infected provinces, (Astrakan and Saratoff,) to the Minister of the Interior, which report the present state of affairs as most hopeful. The malady has decreased and there are very few new patients. A most energetic quarantine is enforced. The infected towns and villages are divided into districts, which are not allowed to communicate with each other, &c. In some places it is stated that only 5 to 10 persons have died within a week. The symptoms are described as being a headache accompanied by fever and swelling of the glands."

The Wiener Medicinische Wochenschrift, No. 3, draws a most terrible picture of the present state of things in Russia. Whatever the disease may be, whether merely exanthematic typhoid fever, or a febris recurrens, or really the plague, it is certain it would never have assumed those terrible dimensions if the Government had not treated it at first with unpardonable neglect. It is almost too late now to attempt to stop it, especially as the Russian nation itself has very vague ideas regarding sanitary arrangements, and the misery caused by the last bad famine has greatly undermined the forces of the population, rendering it unfit to resist the infection. Another very important thing is a want of experienced medical men in Russia. About one-third of the Russian doctors died either during the war or from typhoid fever which followed it, and a large number of young students have been summoned from hospitals and medical schools to take their places. The Wiener Medicinische Wochenschrift insists on the importance, in the interest of the whole of Europe, of providing Russia with doctors and helping her to keep down and restrain her powerful enemy. Both Dr. Zoleikaw and Prof. Bothlin have declared the disease to be really the plague in its worst form. They have drawn this conclusion from the extraordinary mortality (90 per cent.,) the rapid spreading of the disease, and the very few cases of recovery, if any, which have come under their notice. The St. Petersburger Medicinische Wochenschrift of Dec. 30, (Jan. 11,) merely gives a short notice of the disease, stating that although the Government persists in calling it epidemic it can no longer be doubted from the tenor of its communication to the official papers that it is the plague.

VIENNA, Jan. 25.—In the lower house today, Prince Auersperg said that, according to the Government's advices, there prevailed in six villages on the Volga River, and on islands in the river, an epidemic, which was generally considered to be the plague, though not officially described as such. The Russian Government, by its precautions, had succeeded in confining the disease to certain limits. The reported outbreak of the disease at Zaritsyn was unfounded, and the statement that it had appeared at Nijni-Novgorod was also said to be incorrect. It had not passed beyond the quarantine cordon which the Russian Government, for greater safety, had established around Zaritsyn. Within the cordon the epidemic was becoming less virulent. Prince Auersperg detailed the Austro-Hungarian precautions, and added that at present extreme measures do not seem justifiable.

ENGLISH BUSINESS PROSPECTS.

DEPRESSION CAUSED BY SEVERE WEATHER—PRICES UNSETTLED — SPECULATION IN AMERICAN RAILWAY STOCKS.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—A very moderate amount of business was transacted in the Mincing-lane markets this week. Navigation on the Continent is partially closed by the severe frost, which must have some effect upon the export demand, besides further depressing the various branches of industry. The prices of imported produce remain unsettled. Sugar is rather lower, especially floating cargoes of Java. Coffee is steady, although irregular in price. The first Dutch sale this year is arranged for Jan. 29, and it will contain a smaller supply than the two previous sales. Rice is quiet, but new Burmah, for Spring shipment, is held for the last rates. Tea is inactive, with rather large public sales. The better classes of Congou are the most depressed. Indian was flat, and the supply has been partly withdrawn. There was more demand for black and white pepper at the current low prices.

The Economist says: "Bank bills are quoted at 2⅜ per cent. discount, and trade bills at 3 to 3½ per cent. On the Stock Exchange the week's fluctuations were irregular. Money was abundant. Good investments have risen. The American railway department has been the scene of considerable speculative excitement in response to a rise in New-York. On the other hand, Russian, Turkish, and Egyptian Governments, and British railways have been greatly depressed, the latter in consequence of the damage to traffic, of continued severe weather, and trade depression. Gas property continues in favor. United States 5 per cents have fallen as the rapid progress with the redemption of 6 per cents brings their term nearer to an end."

Business on the Stock Exchange is exceedingly flat, on rumors of further financial difficulties. The same rumors were circulated yesterday. In connection therewith this morning's Standard, in its financial article, said: "We are in position to state that the rumor of the absorption of the Metropolitan Bank (limited) by another London establishment is totally unfounded. Such an arrangement, we believe, was under consideration some months ago, but the negotiations fell through."

News from South Africa, published in this afternoon's edition of the Standard, just at the close of business, to the effect that Cetywayo, the Zulu King, refuses all the British demands, added to the panic.

The Times, in its financial article this morning, says: "Germany sold, and Russia bought £100,000 in silver yesterday at 51 pence an ounce. The market closed rather unsettled. There did not seem to be any more buyers at that price."

Silver is quoted to-day at 50⅞ pence an ounce.

SUBJECTS OF INTEREST ABROAD.

SEVERE WEATHER THROUGHOUT EUROPE—THE WAR IN NATAL—SPAIN DEMANDING REPARATION FROM SAN DOMINGO—FRENCH GENERALS RETIRED.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—The weather in Great Britain has been severe throughout the week, and continues so, consequently the applications for relief for the distressed poor have greatly increased. In Paris the street traffic is almost suspended by the snow. Reports from Brittany and other French Provinces represent that heavy snow-falls are interrupting telegraphic and railway communication. The Times announces that much of its Eastern news is delayed by interruptions of the wires between Paris and Vienna. A telegram from Fredericks-haven says that four light-ships have abandoned their stations on account of the ice. The Belgian Pilotage Office announces that the navigation of the river Scheldt is dangerous, and the office will only grant pilots if masters of vessels will assume all the responsibility.

A special dispatch to this afternoon's Standard from Natal, under date of Jan. 3, by way of Madeira, says: "Cetywayo, the Zulu King, refuses all the British demands. He has assembled 8,000 men on the border. Gen. Chelmsford and staff will leave Cape Town to-day for the front. The British troops will advance during the present week. All the necessary preparations are completed. British reinforcements have arrived." Another special dispatch printed in the same paper, from Maritsberg, Jan. 6, says: "A Gazette Extraordinary, published today, announces that the High Commissioner has placed all matters connected with Zulu affairs in the hands of Gen. Chelmsford, but that he gives Cetywayo until Jan. 11 to make full and unconditional submission."

It is stated that Señor Castelar will deliver a course of lectures before the Oxford University next Summer on Spanish literature.

The first volume of Frederick the Great's correspondence, published under the auspices of the Berlin Academy of Sciences, was issued yesterday, Frederick's birthday anniversary.

A dispatch to the Post from St. Petersburg says that 40 students are still under arrest at Chorkoff, and the university will remain closed until Feb. 13.

Catholic priests elected to curés in Switzerland are now permitted to make the declaration prohibited under Pope Pius IX., accepting appointments on the conditions prescribed in the law of 1874 on the organization of religion.

MADRID, Jan. 25.—The Government has ordered a man-of-war to be dispatched to Puerto Plata, San Domingo, to demand reparation for the insult offered to the Spanish flag by authorities of San Domingo, in aiding insurgent Generals, who had taken refuge on board a Spanish steamer, and shooting them.

PARIS, Jan. 25.—The Republique Francaise states that Gens. Bourbaki, Bataille, Renson, and De Larigne, commanding respectively the Fourteenth, Fifth, Sixteenth, and Twelfth Army Corps, have been placed on the retired list.

THE TROUBLES IN THE EAST.

YAKOOB KHAN'S ADHERENTS DESERTING HIM—THE RUSSIAN AND TURKISH TREATY OF PEACE—AN UNEASY MINISTRY.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—A Calcutta dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Company says that a dispatch from Jallalabad, dated Jan. 23, states that Yakoob Khan had seized Fort Fizen, belonging to the Bababakakhel Ghilzais, taking the chief's prisoners, in consequence of which the Ghilzais have commenced hostilities against Yakoob Khan. The Kohistanis and Gebhais have also deserted Yakoob Khan.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 25.—The Russian and Turkish Governments have agreed to the clause of the definitive treaty of peace, stipulating that the Russians shall evacuate Turkey within 25 days of the signature of the treaty. Other details as to the wording of the document are still under discussion.

VIENNA, Jan. 25.—In the lower house of the Reichsrath to-day, during the debate on the Berlin treaty, Minister Unger, defending the constitutionality of the conduct of the Ministers, created a sensation by saying they longed for the moment when they could be relieved.

EWING ON POLITICAL PARTIES.

HE THINKS THAT THE NATIONAL PARTY IS GATHERING STRENGTH—THE CURRENCY QUESTION IN THE NEXT PRESIDENTIAL CONTEST.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—In an interview with J. Brisbin Walker, editor of the Republic, a greenback journal published here every Sunday, Gen. Ewing, of Ohio, presents his views upon the future of political parties in relation to the currency question. He has no apprehension about the growth of the sentiment against the constitutionality of legal-tender paper money in the Democratic Party. Upon this subject he said: "It would be fatal to the party to attempt to outlaw the greenback. It is entrenched in the affections of the people, and its constitutionality having been settled by the Supreme Court, neither party dare openly assail it. Now that the indirect attempt of the Republican Party to destroy it by the Resumption law has failed, the greenback will live long after you and I are done with politics."

Speaking of the National Party, he said: "It showed great strength in the last election, casting about a million of votes and holding the balance of power in 16 of the Northern States. It has risen out of the tremendous injustice done the people by the finance legislation of the Republican Party. The opinion and purpose it represents are not dying out, but growing wider and deeper. The masses of the Democratic Party everywhere are in hearty accord with the Nationals on their two great ideas—the unlimited coinage of the old silver dollar and the substitution of legal tenders for bank-notes. These masses, Democratic and National, I have no doubt will come together, and I believe it will be done by the National Democracy in 1880 putting those two propositions in our national platform, and nominating a man for President who really stands on that platform. The Whig Party in 1852 was thoroughly identified with the opposition to slavery extension and to the harsh and odious Fugitive Slave law, but its extremely conservative leaders, instead of making a platform to represent the masses, and thus absorbing the third party, adopted the same platform with the Democrats, declaring the slavery question settled. The result was the death of the Whig Party and the rise of the Republican Party on its ruins. The Democracy is too wise, I think, to commit a like blunder in 1880."

Gen. Ewing believes that the Republican candidate for President in 1880 will be either Blaine, John Sherman, or Grant. He doesn't think the Grant movement has much strength. He said he did not want the Democratic nomination for Governor of Ohio, and would rather be a member of Congress than Governor of that State. Senator Thurman having declined to be a candidate, he does not think the nomination will be tendered to any one who does not seek it. Either Garfield, Sherman, or Foster would make a strong candidate on the Republican side, and he thinks one of those gentlemen will be nominated.

RUMORS OF SENATOR CHRISTIANCY'S RESIGNATION.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 25.—Advices from Lansing to-day state it is rumored there and believed by prominent members of the Legislature that Senator Christiancy will surely resign his seat in the United States Senate and accept the mission to Peru, in which contingency there is hardly a doubt of the election of ex-Senator Chandler to fill the vacancy.

DEATH OF A PROMINENT LAKE CAPTAIN.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 25.—P. B. Locke, of the firm of Locke, Austin & Sparks, a well-known lake Captain, died here to-day at the age of 48 years.

WARREN COUNTY FRAUDS.

HEAVY SENTENCES IMPOSED UPON THE CONSPIRATORS.

CHIEF-JUSTICE BEASLEY'S SHARP REBUKE TO THE CRIMINALS—SENTENCES IMPOSED VARYING FROM SIX MONTHS TO FOUR YEARS OF IMPRISONMENT—THE CORRUPT OFFICERS SENT TO STATE PRISON.

BELVIDERE, N. J., Jan. 25.—It was very soon after daybreak this morning when sleighs from the country commenced arriving in this town, and by 9 o'clock they had gathered in such numbers that not only were the stables of the hotels completely filled with the teams, but every private stable was also appropriated, and then the later arrivals were compelled to remain out in the streets. It early became apparent that the Court-house could not hold an eighth of the number of persons who had come long distances to hear the sentences to be passed upon the 10 convicted officers found guilty of conspiracy and forgery in their treatment of the county funds. Many were relatives, friends, and neighbors of the prisoners. By 9 o'clock the Sheriff shut the doors of the Court-house, as every inch of standing-room was occupied, and after that time only those entitled to the privilege were admitted. Outside the building a crowd of several hundred persons assembled and waited patiently for the news, which friends in the court-room had agreed to transmit to them from the windows.

The train bringing Chief-Justice Beasley from Trenton was delayed, and it was not until 11:30 A. M. that the Judge took his seat. He at once ordered Mattison, Strader, and Silker, the three prisoners in the jail, to be brought up, and they were placed in the jury-box with six of the others who had been out on bail, while Cummins, the ex-Collector, occupied a seat among the lawyers. Prosecutor Harris then moved for sentence upon the 10, when Counselor Shipman made a motion for a new trial for McDermott, the convicted officer of Phillipsburg, on the grounds that certain testimony in his previous trial was illegal, and that new evidence had been secured in his favor. The Chief-Justice refused to grant the motion, saying that the objections were purely technical. Counselors Shipman and Robeson then presented voluminous affidavits on behalf of the convicted men, as well as petitions for a light sentence upon laywer Givens and ex-Collector Teel, and made earnest appeals for mercy in behalf of all the prisoners. The Chief-Justice took the papers, and withdrew into a private room with Lay Judges Kern and Bualing for consultation. They were absent half an hour, and the time was one of feverish expectation for the prisoners, their friends, and, indeed, for all present. It had been rumored that the Lay Judges were somewhat in favor of keeping the sentences down to as light a point as possible, and that perhaps two or three of the prisoners would escape with a heavy fine, but those who knew the Chief-Justice prophesied that even with the intervention, or at the request of, the Lay Judges, he would stand out for severe punishment, and all that could be accomplished would be the reduction of the time of imprisonment in the State Prison. When, therefore, the Judges again took their seats, silence prevailed, and the murmurings of the crowd without the building alone broke the stillness.

The first prisoner sentenced was Cummins, and the old man rose up from his seat when his name was called, and stood facing the Chief-Justice. His eyes were red with weeping, his head bent forward on his breast, and his whole appearance was most pitiable. Addressing him, the Chief-Justice reviewed his crimes, and there was a plainly-perceptible tremor in his voice as he said in the course of his remarks the Chief-Justice said: "You have been convicted, after a long and careful investigation, on two indictments for conspiracy. The series of crimes which you and your associates have perpetrated stands unequaled in this State, and, I may say, in all the States of this country. Such occurrences as these have taken place at times in the crowded cities, where men, tired on by the hot haste of speculation, are placed in office, but they have not done so, and they have learned a stern lesson which I hope will do them good. It will teach the tax-payers that it will not do to allow one set of knaves to propose another set of knaves for office. You and your associates made a crime your business. You met secretly, laid your plans to defraud the county, and in looking over the case I cannot find, as I wish I could, any mitigating circumstances. The judgment of this Court is that you, Simeon Cummins, are sentenced to hard labor in the State Prison for two years upon the first indictment, upon which you have been found guilty, and stand committed until such time as you pay, and upon the second indictment a like sentence of two years, but both sentences shall commence at the same time, so that your term of imprisonment shall be two years in all."

The next man sentenced was Edwin E. Bulgin, the go-between of Cummins and the conspirators, to whom the Chief-Justice said that his case differed from the others, inasmuch as he was not an officer, and, therefore, the two counts of conspiracy proved against him, the sentence would be 18 months in the State Prison.

Edmund Teel, the ex-Collector, found guilty of forgery and conspiracy, was next directed to stand up, which he did in a feeble manner, while Rev. Mr. Townsend, Pastor of the Presbyterian church at Phillipsburg, of which Teel was an elder, stood beside him to catch him, if, as was expected, he should fall. To Teel the Chief-Justice was equally stern as to the others, and, after directing him to take to himself the same words of condemnation which he had addressed to Cummins, sentenced him to two years in the State Prison for the forgery and one for the conspiracy, both sentences to begin at the same time. Teel bore the sentence unflinchingly, but at its close leaned on the back of Counselor Townsend and whispered a few words in his ear. The frames of both men shook with suppressed emotion as they thus stood together, and then Teel took his seat, while the Judge proceeded with the others.

John S. Strader, the ex-Director of the board, found guilty on one charge of forgery and three of conspiracy, next was sentenced to two years in the State Prison for the first offense and a like term for each of the other three, but all to commence at the same time.

Dr. Mattison, the ex-clerk of the board, under four convictions of forgery, was next sentenced, and received four years in the State Prison for each offense, but all to commence at the same time.

Dr. H. M. Cox, member of the Finance Committee and a physician in excellent practice, was sentenced to 18 months in State Prison for each of the three charges of conspiracy proved against him, but all to commence at the same time.

John N. Givens, the attorney to the Board of Freeholders, came next, and to him the Chief-Justice again spoke severely. He said: "This is the first time since I have been on the bench that I have been called upon to pronounce sentence upon a member of the Bar convicted of crime, and the duty is a most painful one. You have had a fair and impartial trial, and the proof against you is clear. It is my duty to give notice to you that on the first day of the next term of the Supreme Court I shall move to have your name stricken from the rolls of practicing counselors, as you are no longer worthy to remain in the ranks of an honorable profession. The sentence of the court is that you be confined at hard labor in the State Prison for 18 months on each of the two counts of conspiracy proved against you, both sentences to commence at the same time." This sentence was almost entirely unexpected by Givens, whose friends had presented to the court a petition for a light sentence, signed by nearly every member of the Bar of the county, and it was thought that he would escape with a heavy fine. In this hope a brother of Givens was present to carry proposed to the court the sentenced man bit his lip until the blood came when he heard the judgment of the court, and more pity was felt for him, perhaps, than for any of the others, as he had been a leading citizen of Belvidere.

Jesse King, the ex-member of the Finance Committee, who pleaded nox vult to the charge of conspiring with Teel and others to defraud the county out of $25,000, was sentenced to the State Prison for one year, and he received unconcernedly to the bench as he received his sentence. He is a man of large frame, with a flowing black beard, and he seemed to take his sentence as quietly as if it were only a few days of confinement in the County Jail.

John B. Silker, the contractor to the board, who had been convicted on two charges of conspiracy, was the last of the county co-partners sentenced, and completed the nine as the convicted. As he was not an office-holder, the Chief-Justice was more lenient with him than with the others, and he escaped with a fine of $500 and imprisonment in the County Jail for six months.

Charles McDermott, the Phillipsburg officer, who was the only person convicted during the trials of the present week, was next sentenced. For the two charges of conspiring upon which he was found guilty, he was sent to the State Prison for one year, and then the court adjourned for three weeks, as the Chief-Justice was compelled to attend the Mercer courts in the meantime. Slowly, and as if loth to relinquish spot while the prisoners were there, the crowd was driven out of the court-room, while the Sheriff and his constables closed around the sentenced men and, when the way was clear, conducted them down to the cells beneath the court-room. Friends crowded up to them before they were taken away and talked to say a few words to cheer them. The prisoners will remain in the County Jail a few days, and then will be taken to the State Prison at Trenton. Each of them will have to pay the heavy costs incurred on their trials before they can leave the State Prison, and to the families of most of them the expense will be more than they can afford or perhaps obtain. The sentences are generally concurred in here, although there are many who think lighter punishments in some of the cases would have been sufficient. Several indicted men yet remain to be tried.

CONGRESSIONAL BILLS AND PLANS.

TWO REPORTS TO BE MADE REGARDING THE INDIAN TRANSFER—AN OMISSION IN THE PENSION ARREARS BILL.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—The joint committee to which was referred the question of transferring the Indian Bureau to the care of the War Department had a formal vote on that proposition to-day, resulting in a tie. All the Democratic members of the committee voted for, and all the Republicans against, the transfer. It was decided that two reports, representing the views of both sides, should be presented to Congress. This action practically settles the transfer question during the present session of Congress, as it is not probable that the reports will be called up for consideration in either branch.

The Pension Arrears bill having been approved to-day by the President, it is safe to predict that no proposition to reduce the revenue will be passed this session. The bill approved to-day makes no provision for the payment of claims which may be awarded under it, and until a specific appropriation is made by Congress such claims cannot be paid. An effort will doubtless be made in the House by the friends of the bill to correct this omission.

The House Committee on Reform in the Civil Service this morning authorized Judge Durham to report to the House for passage, without amendment, his bill deciding the compensation of District Attorneys. The bill gives a fixed salary in lieu of all fees and allowances, except mileage at 5 cents a mile when compelled to leave their place of abode. The salaries fixed are: For Maine, New-Hampshire, and Vermont, $2,000 each; Massachusetts, $5,000, with two assistants at $2,000 each; Rhode Island, $2,500; New-York, Eastern District, $3,000, with one assistant at $1,500; Northern District, $5,000, with two assistants at $1,500 each; Southern District, $10,000, with three assistants at $3,000 each, and three at $1,500 each; New-Jersey, $3,000, with one assistant at $1,200; Pennsylvania, Eastern District, $5,000, with one assistant at $2,000; Western District, $4,000, with one assistant at $2,500; Maryland, $5,000, with one assistant at $1,500; District of Columbia, $5,000.

A special meeting of the Senate Finance Committee was called for this afternoon, with a view to taking action on the House bill amendatory of the Internal Revenue laws. The committee decided to report against a reduction of the tax on cigars.

RENO'S CONDUCT DEFENDED.

CAPT. MOYLAN THINKS THAT RENO DID THE BEST HE COULD—NO INDICATIONS OF COWARDICE ON HIS PART.

CHICAGO, Jan. 25.—Capt. Moylan, who is one of the most entertaining of the witnesses thus far examined in the Reno case, was again on the stand to-day. He was asked whether the command of Reno could have been so formed when the attack was first made as to protect itself. He did not think it could have been so disposed as to hold the position or protect itself under the circumstances. The object of getting out of the timber was, in his opinion, to save the command. The witness believed that in view of the uncertainty regarding support the retreat was less injurious than it would have been to remain in the timber, for he did not believe the command could have remained there 30 minutes longer without losing many more men than it did in the course pursued; he also thought that if the Indians had followed up the troops and closed in upon them on the hill the command could not have held out against them until relief came, for its ammunition would have given out; he did not know how many men were killed at the river crossing, and did not think the crossing was covered by an organized body of men to protect the rest in getting over. It was about an hour after Reno got into position on the hill that the witness heard firing in the direction of what afterward proved to be Custer's battlefield. The firing was faint, and Capt. McDougall, whose attention was called to it, said he supposed it was Custer fighting at the end of the village, down the bottoms. As to Reno's conduct in the bottom, the witness said at times Major Reno rode at the head of the column; at other times at the centre, and again at the rear. In all the orders which he gave to witness, he manifested as much self-possession as any man would under the circumstances, and he saw nothing in Major Reno's conduct indicative of cowardice. In his opinion, had the command remained in the timber it would have been annihilated.

NOTES FROM THE NATIONAL CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25, 1879.

The President has recognized Peter Kartchevski as Consul-General of Russia at New-York.

The third installment of the Mexican indemnity will be paid on Jan. 31, the day it is due. This will make $900,000 received on account of awards to American citizens. The question submitted to the State Department concerning the Weil and La Abra awards is still under consideration. They involve $1,500,000. The Mexican Government has submitted a large mass of documents to show that the awards in these cases were procured by fraud.

The latest dispatch received by the Department of State from the United States Consul at Puerto Cabello, Venezuela, is dated Jan. 17, in which the Consul says that the Government authorities had a man-of-war at Puerto Cabello with which and the fort they were bombarding the revolutionists in that city. The State Department learns from unofficial sources that the Venezuelan Government are striving to reinstate ex-President Blanco in power, are gaining strength throughout the country.

The recent letter of Secretary Sherman, addressed to the Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, is as follows: "It is reported in the Congressional Record of the 10th inst. that there has been referred to your committee a petition of A. T. Stewart & Co., of New-York, remonstrating against action of this department in what are commonly known as the kid-glove cases, and asking for an investigation by Congress. I have the honor to convey to this request, made by these gentlemen, and hope that the investigation will be made at as early a day as possible, as similar cases are now pending." The committee having considered the above request, decided that it would not have time to investigate the subject at this session.

STILL SEARCHING FOR CHEYENNES.

FORT ROBINSON, Neb., Jan. 25.—Private Sprowl, ambulance driver, started to drive to the old jeamp, one mile distant, this afternoon, and to-night he was found lying in the road with his skull fractured. It is not known whether the wound was caused by a gun-shot or by falling from the ambulance. His condition is critical, and the wound cannot be examined to-night. On Wednesday night a trumpeter arrived from the old camp and reported that he had been fired at by a party concealed in a ravine. It is believed they were either Indians or bad white men in the bluffs. Companies A, B, D, F, I, and M of the Fifth Cavalry, under Capt. Ferris, arrived here to-day, and will leave here in the morning for the Sand Hills, where Little Wolf and a band of 200 Cheyennes are reported to be. Companies A, F, E, and I, of the Third Cavalry, will leave here for their respective stations early next week, thus leaving only two companies at this post.

DOUBTING THE NEWS FROM SITTING BULL.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—The only information received at the War Department in regard to Sitting Bull is from rumors, who represent that his camp is four miles long and his people composed of many different tribes. The department, being disposed to doubt the reports, has taken measures to procure accurate information on the subject.

GENERAL TELEGRAPH NEWS

AN ENGINEER ASLEEP.

TWO FREIGHT TRAINS IN COLLISION ON THE PENNSYLVANIA ROAD — A FIREMAN KILLED AND SUPERINTENDENT WRIGHT'S SON FATALLY INJURED.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 25.—A fatal collision took place at 6:30 this morning, on the New-York Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, at Tullytown, Penn., six miles from this city. The cause of the collision is unknown, although it is alleged that the engineer of the colliding train, Frank Farrell, was asleep at the time. This, however, he denies. Extra freight train No. 618 had arrived at Tullytown Station at 6:20 A. M., and was taking water when through freight train No. 623 ran into it. The rear car of the standing train was broken into splinters, and the locomotive and three cars of the other train were also demolished. Farrell, the engineer, jumped from the locomotive, at the same time calling to the fireman, David James, to jump also. He escaped without injury, but James in jumping fell beneath the wheels and had his left leg and chest crushed and both arms cut off. He died, after suffering intense agony, at 9:30 o'clock. The conductor of the train, Byron Wright, a son of the Superintendent of that section of the road, who lives at Tullytown, seeing that a collision must take place, ran to the brake between the third and fourth cars, and was applying it when the collision occurred. He was crushed between the cars, his right leg was broken above the knee, and he was thrown into a field a distance of about 25 feet. His leg was amputated, and he died in less than an hour. Trains were delayed for a long time, and the débris was not cleared from the west-bound track until nearly 10 o'clock. Coroner Groomes, of Bristol, was summoned, and will hold an inquest upon the body of James, who lived in Philadelphia and leaves a wife and two children.

A RELIGIOUS CONTROVERSY.

EXCITEMENT CAUSED BY A LECTURE BY BISHOP KEANE.

PETERSBURG, Va., Jan. 25.—A recent lecture by Bishop Keane, of the Diocese of Richmond, delivered in this city, has given rise to much feeling between the Catholics and Protestants of the community. The Bishop's subject was, "The Church and Human Nature," and the address was delivered before an audience composed in large measure of Protestants, including a number of the leading clergymen of the several denominations. It is claimed by some that the principles and motives of the Reformation were traduced and the Reformers themselves misrepresented, and Dr. Witherspoon, of the Presbyterian Church, characterized the address as a "clever sell on the community." This drew forth a card from Bishop Keane, intended to vindicate himself from what he terms an unjust aspersion, and in which he advances the Protestant, even, as honestly avowing that he meant to give no offense, and that he only gave unquestionable deductions drawn from unquestionable historical facts. Dr. McDonald, of the Baptist Church, had already been heard from in a quasi reply to the Bishop, and to-morrow Dr. Witherspoon, of the Presbyterian, and Mr. Garland, of the Methodist, Church, will deliver special sermons presenting the Protestant view on important doctrines as opposed to the Catholic faith. On Tuesday the Catholic priest is to lecture on "How He Tried to Become a Protestant and Could Not." There is much feeling in religious circles, but it has not displayed bitterness as yet.

J. D. WALKER SENATOR FROM ARKANSAS.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 25.—A joint convention of the Legislature to-day elected J. D. Walker United States Senator by a vote of 68 against 47 for Robert W. Johnson, his chief competitor, and 5 scattering. Pending the ballot, Representative Davidson stated that, before voting, he demanded the promised explanation from Representative Halifield, of Clay County. Mr. Halifield had a statement prepared, which he read, to the effect that he had been offered $500 to vote for Mr. Johnson. Representative Barnett said he felt authorized to say that the statement was false. Mr. Mitchell demanded the name of the person who offered the bribe. Representative Fishback moved a dissolution of the convention and an investigation by the Senate, Duffie, of Jefferson, decided that the motion could not be entertained. Representative Furbush, colored, proposed that the members should scatter their ballots so as to prevent temporarily an election, and a roll-call proceeded and resulted as above stated. Mr. Halifield's statement had apparently no effect on the actual ballot, save that Representative Washburne asked leave to abstain from voting, which was granted. No reflections were cast upon Mr. Johnson personally.

THE WRECKS ON THE JERSEY COAST.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Jan. 25.—The heavy surf on our coast for the last few days has been disastrous to the hopes of the wreckers who were at work on the stranded vessels which came ashore during the last storm. The bark, Italia, at Deal Beach, has been stripped of everything that could be carried away, and now lies a complete wreck, the waves dashing over her all the time. The British schooner, Cuba, which went ashore below Barnegat Light the same night as the Italia, has got away from the wreckers and moved some distance: all hopes of saving the vessel have been given up, and the wreckers have stripped her of everything above deck, and are waiting for favorable weather, hoping to get at the cargo of her sound to small books, and land it on the beach. The ice inside Sandy Hook and the Horse-shoe has been very heavy. All communication with the New-Jersey Southern Railroad has been cut off for several days, but to-day, as the weather being warmer and a southern breeze blowing, much ice has floated off from the Horse-shoe, and gone out to sea.

A FEUD BETWEEN WHITES AND BLACKS.

MERIDIAN, Miss., Jan. 25.—A fatal shooting affray occurred yesterday in Wayne County, Miss. A misunderstanding about the possession of some land had arisen between three negroes—brothers—Riley, Thomas, and Denis Alexander, and three white men, also brothers, Presley, Thomas, and Walter Gamblin. Both parties were prepared with weapons. Yesterday the negroes lay in wait for the Gamblins, near Mud Creek, on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, and fired upon them, wounding Presley Gamblin and fatally injuring Thomas Gamblin, who has since died. The Gamblins returned the fire, killing Riley and Thomas Alexander on the spot, while Denis escaped. Sheriff Cole, being telegraphed for, went to the scene last evening.

BREAKING UP ILLICIT DISTILLING.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—The Commissioner of Internal Revenue to-day received the following telegrams from Raleigh, N. C., from Collector F. J. Young: "Revenue Agent Kellogg and Deputy Collector Farrell just returned from Chatham. Captured Shaffner's illicit distillery. Thirteen beer stands, 1,000 gallons beer, 20 gallons singlings, &c., destroyed. Still saved."

The following dispatch was received from Revenue Agent G. W. Atkinson, at Lynchburg, Va.: "Deputy Collector Austin has returned from a raid along the Virginia and West Virginia line. He captured five distilleries, and made several arrests. The West Virginia party owns the distilleries when the two parties separated. In McDowell County, West Va., our officers were fired into from the brush, and two of them narrowly escaped."

THE NEWFOUNDLAND GOVERNMENT.

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia, Jan. 25.—The following changes are to take place in the personnel of the Newfoundland Government as a result of the late election: Mr. Warren, defeated in Banaroste, takes a seat in the Council and becomes Financial Secretary; I. O. Fraser receives the portfolio of Public Works; Michael Knight will be Chief Clerk in the Department of Public Works; Alexander McNeally will be Speaker of the new House, while the ex-Speaker takes a seat on the Executive Committee. Messrs. Charles R. Ayre and Edwin Duder are to be appointed Legislative Councilors. Hon. J. J. Rogerson remains at the head of the Treasury Department. The House will meet on the 6th of February.

POISONED HER HUSBAND.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Jan. 25.—A special dispatch says Jennie Manuel, colored woman, of Terre Haute, Ind., was arrested yesterday, proof having been obtained that her husband, Ishmael Manuel, a teacher in the colored school, who died two weeks ago, came to his death by poison administered by Jennie. It is charged that she gave him morphine in a cup of coffee. Her intimacy with a negro barber of Charleston, Ill., led to the crime.

BREAKING JAIL IN FLORIDA.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 25.—Wright and Johns, two of the convicted members of the Brevard County Canvassing Board, made their escape to-night from the County Jail at this place, where they were temporarily confined.

SUTRO TUNNEL PLANS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 25.—Adolph Sutro says there is no truth in the report that an offer has been made to allow the Comstock mines to complete the sub-drain now being made in the tunnel, and take their pay for the work out of the royalty to become due to the Tunnel Company when they begin raising ore. He also states that the purported interview published in an Eastern paper about continuing the tunnel through Mount Davidson, in search of gold-bearing quartz, is entirely erroneous. No such interview was ever held. He says he does not intend to allow the mines to use the tunnel for drainage until all the leading Comstock companies come to a fair understanding with him.

SOUTHERN ELECTION METHODS.

THE GENERAL USE OF TISSUE TICKETS IN SOUTH CAROLINA—LOUISIANA DEMOCRATS ONLY WISHED TO PRESERVE ORDER.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Jan. 25.—The Teller committee to-day took additional Republican testimony, showing the voting of tissue tickets wrapped up in large tickets at various precincts in Richland County.

Gen. Johnson Hagood, State Controller-General, described the meetings held at Sumter on Oct. 12, testifying that both races were excited, and that the whites expected to be attacked by the negroes. The Republican and Democratic meetings were held separately, and neither interfered with the other. The blocking of the street by the colored people threatened to lead to trouble at one time, and the alarm bell was rung; but order was restored with little difficulty, and no further disturbance took place.

White and colored Democrats from Sumter County next testified. They asserted that there were from 1,500 to 2,000 colored Democrats in the county, and hundreds of them were seen to vote the Democratic ticket. Two of the witnesses testified to being cursed, jeered at, and threatened by the colored Republicans because they were Democrats, one of them being, on that account, obliged to leave his church. W. J. Whipper, a colored Republican, described the turbulent conduct of the Democrats, and the demand for a division of time in Hampton County.

Three Republicans from Colleton County testified to intimidation and the use of tissue ballots in that county. In one large ticket there were 59 tissues. This testimony was flatly contradicted by the Democratic County Chairman, who swore to the thoroughness and peacefulness of the Democratic canvass, which with the accession of prominent Republicans after the Republican nominations were made, gave the Democrats the county by a decisive majority.

NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 25.—The taking of testimony for the Teller committee before Commissioner Lane was continued to-day. J. P. Haitman, U. F. Brassels, G. Moses, William M. Levy, and others of Natchitoches, testified, having been called by the Democrats. They generally contradict the statements made by the Republican witnesses as to intimidation, showing that they apprehended violence threatened by the negroes, and that their action was for the purpose of preserving peace. Many negroes voted the Democratic ticket.

THE SUGAR TRADE DISTURBED.

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 25.—

ling the 20 per cent. salary reduction was settled. He did not explain, however, why he had voted no so often before the salary matter was before the board at all. The rest of the board have steadily voted to retire the worn-out men, but under the law the President's negative makes the law practically a nullity. There are now in the City between 275 and 300 Police posts vacant because the old veterans of the force are unable to walk around their beats. These vacancies cannot be filled until the old men are retired, for the law limits the number of patrolmen to 2,260. Commissioner Smith's negative to the motion causes the City to pay $1,200 a year to a large number of worthless men, one-half more than if they were retired with pensions, and posts are now left vacant that could otherwise be filled with first-class material. The President's excuse is not considered satisfactory by his fellow-members of the board, and unpleasant feelings naturally follow.

Still another cause of trouble in the Police Board is its action in placing Commissioner Erhardt on the Street-cleaning Committee on Friday evening, and his refusal to serve. It is stated that when his appointment was made known to the Commissioner he promptly accepted it, it having been his first appointment on that committee in over three years. For several months Mr. Erhardt has never voted for the payment of any bill of the Street-cleaning Committee, although voting to pass the payrolls of the men employed, and it is reported, it is said, that a position on the committee was never before given him. Be that as it may, Commissioner Erhardt accepted the appointment on Friday last, and immediately offered a resolution in substance as follows:

Resolved, That any member of the Street-cleaning Committee may, with good cause, suspend any employe of the Street-cleaning Department for inefficiency or dishonesty, the same to be reported at the next meeting of the board, with his evidence, for their action.

Commissioner Wheeler was absent. Commissioners Smith and Nichols promptly voted against the resolution, which was, therefore, lost, and then Mr. Erhardt declined to serve upon the committee.

The board is also said to be considerably exercised over another resolution which Commissioner Erhardt has been offering nearly every meeting for months past, and which has been voted down every time. It provides that each mover of a resolution shall have his name attached to it, the object being to make the mover responsible in case any legal trouble should arise because of its passage, and also to have the record of each member of the board correct on the minutes.

THE WEATHER.

SYNOPSIS AND INDICATIONS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26—1 A. M.—Severe gales prevail on the Middle and East Atlantic coasts, with colder, generally clear weather, except light snow in Northern New-England. Generally clear weather has prevailed in the Southern States, with slight changes in temperature and barometer, and light, variable winds. The barometer has risen rapidly in the lake region, with lower temperature, brisk and high northerly winds, and generally clear weather, except light snow near Lake Ontario. The winds have shifted to easterly and southerly in the North-west, with falling barometer, partly cloudy weather, and slight fall in temperature. An area of decidedly low barometer is central near Halifax, and that of highest barometer is central near Lake Huron. Light rains have prevailed on the Pacific coast from San Diego to Portland. The Lower Mississippi has risen slightly; the Tennessee and Cumberland have fallen.

INDICATIONS.

For New-England, lower temperature, clear or partly cloudy weather, except in the northern portions, light snow, rising barometer, northerly to north-westerly winds, shifting to easterly and southeasterly during Sunday night.

For the Middle States, rising barometer, clear or partly cloudy weather, slight fall, followed by slowly rising temperature, and northerly winds, shifting to easterly and south-easterly by Sunday night.

For the South Atlantic States, cooler, partly cloudy weather, north-east to south-east winds, stationary or slowly rising barometer.

For the Gulf States, Tennessee, and the Ohio Valley, easterly to southerly winds, and partly cloudy weather, followed during the day by rain, lower temperature, rising temperature, and possibly local rains west of the lower Mississippi.

For the lake region, partly cloudy weather, and, in the northern portions, light snow, with winds shifting to easterly and southerly, falling barometer, and by Sunday night, slight rise in temperature.

For the Upper Mississippi and Lower Missouri Valleys, warmer south-east to south-west winds, falling barometer and partly cloudy weather, with light snow in Minnesota.

For the North and Central Pacific coast regions, generally cloudy weather and light rains.

For the South Pacific coast regions light rains in the northern portion and partly cloudy weather.

The Mississippi will rise at stations below St. Louis.

Cautionary off-shore signals continue at Smithville, Wilmington, Macon, Cape Lookout, Cape Hatteras, Kitty Hawk, Cape Henry, Norfolk, Baltimore, Lewes, Cape May, Atlantic City, Barnegat, Sandy Hook, New-York, New-Haven, New-London, Newport, Wood's Hole, Boston and Section No. 8, Portland and Section No. 7, and Eastport.

IN THIS CITY.

The following record shows the changes in the temperature for the past 24 hours, in comparison with the corresponding date of last year, as indicated by the thermometer at Hudnut's pharmacy:

	1878.	1879.		1878.	1879.
3 A. M.	31°	31°	3:30 P. M.	46°	40°
6 A. M.	30°	30°	6 P. M.	45°	35°
9 A. M.	32°	34°	9 P. M.	42°	36°
12 M.	37°	40°	12 P. M.	39°	37°

Average temperature yesterday..... 36°
Average temperature for corresponding date last year..... 37½°

	1878.	1879.
Weekly average.....	35 4-7	38

THE MUTUAL LIFE'S NEW PLAN.

A CONDEMNATORY LETTER TO THE NEW-ENGLAND POLICY-HOLDERS.

The following letter, condemning the new plan of rebates adopted by the Mutual Life Insurance Company, has been addressed to the New-England policy-holders:

GENTLEMEN: At a meeting of the Trustees, held on the 15th inst., Hon. Alexander H. Rice was appointed Chairman of a committee consisting of Messrs. S. D. Babcock, William E. Dodge, George S. Coe, Martin Bates, William A. Haines, and Frederick H. Cossitt, to consider the objections of the protesting policy-holders to the recently adopted practice of the company in giving 30 per cent. rebate to new policy-holders, in addition to the agents' commissions and other expenses before paid, the committee to report to the full board at their meeting in February. There can be no doubt that all fair-minded men, after giving the subject careful consideration, will decide that the new method for soliciting business is wrong, and will work great injury to the interests of all old policy-holders, and to life insurance in general. Three of the most prominent actuaries in the United States have recently given this opinion. We think an increase in the membership of your company desirable on the conditions named, and under all the circumstances we do not, think an increase desirable under any conditions. Your company is already far larger than is necessary to secure a uniform mortality experience, and any augmentation would be likely to make too it unwieldly for proper management by your Trustees. Even if your membership should diminish somewhat, the assets will probably soon exceed $100,000,000." All the Attorney-Generals of the New-England States, also Prof. Irving P. Haynes, of Boston, ex-Secretary Benjamin H. Bristow, formerly Solicitor-General of the United States, Hon. B. F. Thurston, and other eminent lawyers, have given their opinion that the plan is illegal, and that the policies now being issued are contracts void in law.

In the light of these facts, Gov. Rice, as Chairman of the committee, is called upon to decide a question of vast importance to the New-England policy-holders, whose especial interests he was elected as Trustee to represent. The company has arrived at an important crisis in its history, and it is eminently proper that at this time policy-holders should give an emphatic and unequivocal expression of their views. Three meetings, composed of the most prominent and largest policy-holders of Rhode Island, were recently held in Providence. At two of these Hon. George H. Andrews, one of the New-York Trustees, and Judge Fullerton, of Brooklyn, the special counsel of the company, were present, and spoke at length in explanation and defense of the rebate device and in laudation of the management. The whole matter was discussed by friends and opponents in all its bearings, and the result at the third meeting was an almost unanimous condemnation of the scheme. As representative men, Gov. Rice has the facts clearly laid before him, and understands the true sentiment of the New-England policy-holders, he will respect their views, and make such recommendation to the board as will justify the confidence we all have in his sound judgment and sincerity. Very respectfully, JAMES B. MYER.

BOSTON, Jan. 24, 1879.

BERDAN'S SHARP-SHOOTERS IN RUSSIA.

During the late war between Russia and Turkey a corps of sharp-shooters was organized from the old corps of "Berdan's Sharp-shooters," which performed such valuable service during the civil war in this country. Letters received yesterday by friends of the corps state that during the passage of the Balkans Jack Katch, of Galveston, Texas, was invested with the cross of St. Stanislaus by Gen. Skobeloff. Other members of the corps received decorations for their bravery, among them being William Dwyer, of Boston, and John and William Taylor, late of the Ninety-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers. Detective Charles Hagan, of the First Precinct, has received information that the corps will leave Russia for home next July.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 25.—Mrs. Elizabeth Hancock, the mother of Major-Gen. Hancock, died at Norristown yesterday, aged 78 years.

THE OUTLOOK AT ALBANY.

WORK BEFORE THE COMMITTEES.

THE COMMITTEE ON CITIES WITH PLENTY OF MATTER—ECONOMY TO BE SOUGHT UNDER SOME DIFFICULTIES — ADVOCATES AND OPPONENTS OF PROPOSED INSURANCE LEGISLATION.

ALBANY, Jan. 24.—The index of bills introduced thus far in the session of the Legislature indicates that the two houses are to have the usual abundance of matter for consideration. The Committee on Affairs of Cities is intrusted with a batch which will keep it busy for a week, and in addition to measures affecting assessments, the legal liability of the Mayor, the accommodations for passengers in street-cars, and a variety of other subjects, it is likely to find that another important duty will rest upon it. This is the oft-imposed one of curtailing the expenditures for salaries in the City of New-York. There has been some talk about this matter, and at present these resolutions, offered respectively by Mr. Brooks, Mr. Varnum, and Mr. Hayes, lie on the table, where they were thrown down because they could not be placed together, and there was no disposition to agree on either one.

The pioneer of the economists was Mr. Brooks, who singled out the Court of General Sessions as the most vulnerable object that met his glance in looking over the field. Mr. Varnum desired to embrace the entire judiciary in his resolution, and Mr. Hayes spread his resolution over the entire City Government. At least he affected to do so, and it may be that he really intended to make his resolution comprehensive. But when the subject is brought up again there will probably be some one ready to show that he fails to attack the employes of the City who receive the smaller salaries, which should bear their share of curtailment with the rest. As his resolution now reads it seems that in omitting to touch the salaries of $1,200 and less, salaries aggregating about $4,000,000 will remain as they are, while other salaries, that escape attack by the peculiar phraseology of the resolution, will aggregate about $1,500,000 more, leaving only half the entire amount paid out available for modification.

The Cities Committee has not as yet touched a bill. It should have met on Thursday, but a dispute arose about the appointment of the clerk to the committee, who was distasteful to Mr. Hayes, and the Assembly has been agitated by the report that the Chairman would resign his place at the head of the committee unless a different clerk were appointed. Speaker Alvord considered Mr. Farrel, whom he had selected, as a proper man for the place, and he has probably kept matters quiet by good-naturedly refusing to remove him, for Mr. Hayes has become resigned instead of resigning, and the committee will hold its first meeting on Tuesday.

There are indications that when the committee does meet it will be more anxious to get possession of the salaries resolution than it has been hitherto. The reason for this desire, as expressed by the Chairman, is not distinctly understood. The House has got the impression that the committee will make haste slowly in reaching a conclusion, and there is danger that, if unreasonable delay occurs, there may be a mumble in the new Assembly Chamber. There is a large body of Republicans disposed to favor economical measures, and they will have the support of all the Democrats except the Tammany representatives from New-York. On the side of the economists there are several men who are effective speakers. Mr. Skinner, who keeps the word "retrench" constantly in mind, has a jealous eye upon useless clerkships, and sinecures of all sorts, and he does not hesitate to strike at attempts to appoint new placemen. Mr. Sloan, Mr. Hepburn, Mr. Varnum, Mr. Fish, and Mr. Baker, of Monroe, have also outspoken, supporting each other effectively on all motions looking toward reduction of expenses. Mr. Strahan and Mr. Hayes have their own ideas about the matter, and, while they both say they wish to have salaries cut down, they pull away from the members first mentioned. Mr. Hepburn wishes to attack the high salaries by departments. Mr. Strahan would attack all the departments at once. The difference of opinion may have given rise to the fear that in attempting too much the work will be wasted and nothing accomplished. This fear certainly animates some of the members, and it will no doubt influence their action in voting upon propositions to enlarge the purpose of inquiry asked for by the Cities Committee.

The Insurance Committee has had its first meeting, but the members did nothing more than make acquaintance. Next week it will take up the bill for the abolition of the Insurance Department. Mr. Skinner, the introducer of the measure, will appear before the committee to state his reasons for asking for the transfer of this department to the Controller's department. Gen. Sharpe, the Chairman of the committee, has declared that there shall be no trifling with the bill. He has already begun a study of the laws under which the department is conducted, and will be well informed before the report of the committee is made. Among the insurance men here in Albany the bill is regarded with unconcealed feelings of dislike. They really fear that it will pass the Assembly. Remembering the record of the Senate, they somewhat nervously rest upon the vote for Superintendent Smyth as a sheet-anchor of safety. Their trust may prove to be a mistaken one.

COMFORTS AND DISCOMFORTS OF THE NEW CAPITOL.

ITS ADVANTAGES OVER THE OLD BUILDING—INCREASED COST OF KEEPING THE NEW EDIFICE IN ORDER—THE ASSEMBLY ACOUSTICS.

ALBANY, Jan. 25.—One hears a great deal of criticism, good, bad, and indifferent, about the new Capitol. Probably no other building, except the Capitol at Washington, has afforded so much food for talk since Government buildings began to be erected in this country. Admiration of the new Capitol, it must be admitted, is not expressed so loudly or by so many persons, as disapproval of it. This might easily be the case, and yet be no prejudice to the beauty, usefulness, and permanence of the edifice. The questioners of the beauty of the structure are sometimes not qualified by education or by observation to form a just conception of its merit in this regard. Those who complain that it will not be useful; that the old Capitol, with detached State buildings, plain as to interior, but cozy and ample in space, was every way to be preferred, are frequently totally unacquainted with the present accommodations of the departments, and have not very clear notions about what provision is to be made for the departments in the new building. A good deal of the gossip is idle. One occasionally hears doubts expressed as to whether the partly occupied building will ever be completed. Three acres of ground are covered, and the vast structure that stands upon it is more than two-thirds finished. It does not seem likely that many Legislatures will allow the uncovered walls to remain as they are, and they certainly will not be pulled down. There are many inquiries made about what the final cost will be. Lieut.-Gov. Dorsheimer, one of the Capitol Commissioners, says that he has been assured that it can be finished, according to the designs of Eidlitz and Richardson, without changing the style of decoration, for about $4,000,000. For $2,500,000 everything except the dome and the broad stone approaches—terraces of steps leading up from the park at the top of the hill—can be perfected. The remainder of the whole sum deemed necessary would be spent in raising the dome and stairways. Should this sum be granted by the Legislature, and the Capitol finished, there seems good reason for believing that the Governor was not far from right in declaring that it would be a very expensive building, as compared with the old Capitol. Still, it was not at all probable that the old Capitol would have answered for the purpose for which a Capitol was needed. It was no large enough; it was not comfortable; it was not healthful; the departments were, as they now are, inconveniently situated apart from it. To get more room, better ventilation, and to bring the branches of the Government conveniently together, it was necessary to expend money, and it depends altogether upon the people of the State to say whether they will have the Capitol not only spacious and convenient, but elegant at the same time. If the estimates submitted to Lieut.-Gov. Dorsheimer have been reasonably made, the finished building will have cost less to the tax-payers than the New-York County Court-house, which they will certainly get more to admire in the Albany building than they did in the Court-house, even with Kelly's extension. There are not a few, and Gov. Robinson is among the number of these persons, who consider the expense of $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 for the erection of a building ridiculously small, and the fresco upon that $200,000 will be dear at the price.

It is easy to see that the new Capitol will cost a great deal of money for the keeping. The visitor to the building, on entering the Washington-avenue lobby, finds three or four smartly dressed policemen, in blue uniforms, with silver buttons and cords. There are now 35 of these officers on duty. They are employed by the Capitol Commissioners, and do duty only in the Capitol. The necessity for this body of officers is not clearly apparent, for there is nothing that can easily be carried away by thieves, and the doorkeepers of the Senate and Assembly are abundantly numerous to protect those bodies from intruders. The mere cost of heating the building, and of running elevators will be large. I was informed that the consumption of coal per day to heat the rooms now occupied is from 5 to 10 tons. The cost will probably be not more than twice as great to heat the whole building, but, as only one-third of it is in use, there is room for fear that it may be more. A great expense must necessarily be incurred for gas to light the building. Lights must be kept burning night and day in the lower halls, and, perhaps, in the inner rooms on the ground floor. There are a dozen or more stately, commanding standard gas-lamps, carrying 15 or 20 burners. When they are all alight the effect is charming, but it suggests enormous gas-bills. The rooms set apart for the Governor, belted with gorgeous shades of color and gold, and ceiled with arches of blue marked with golden lines, will eventually be used by Attorney-General Schoonmaker, who has no prejudice against the new building on account of its magnificence, says that the new apartments will be neither so convenient nor so comfortable as the less pretentious offices now occupied by the Law Department in the State Hall. If the Governor has to go for a reason, in the oaken chamber intended for the Court of Appeals, it seems useless to indulge in any repetition of the complaints about its inconvenience. Members of the Senate have no more difficulty in being heard than they did in the chamber in the old Capitol. Their library is a gem, and is very convenient besides. The room of the Lieutenant-Governor, which will one day be the room of the Court of Appeals Judges, is a superb one. The cloak-rooms are good enough for the time, and the Post Office and committee rooms are sufficiently easy of access.

In the Assembly Chamber one looks at the arrangements with a thought about their convenience or inconvenience, reflecting that they are made for permanence. Many of the arrangements have been made with haste, and by persons who were not acquainted with the Assembly business. The desks are handsome, solid, heavy pieces of furniture, chestnut mahogany—with chairs to match. But the desks have no racks for files of bills, and the drawers are smaller than those in the plainer desks in the old Capitol. The necessity for providing sockets for inkstands was overlooked, and ridiculous and cheap make-shifts—fragile castiron inkstands—have been screwed to the tops of the desks. It is as yet too soon to decide whether the acoustics are good or bad. It does not do to compare the new building with the old in this respect. The new chamber has been tried, and opinions differ as to the results. Clergymen who have been accustomed to have spoken from the desk in prayer, with carefully modulated, but not loud, voices, have been heard with great distinctness. Mr. Husted, who speaks with rather more effort than he formerly did, can be heard distinctly, but would speak to better purpose if he did not speed so loudly. The general impression has been that the only difficulty in the way of hearing and being heard is the confusion constantly pervading the Assembly, except when a prominent member is on the floor, or an interesting discussion is in progress. The chamber must be studied, the effect of the voice at a certain pitch noted, and individuals will enable any speaker to adapt himself to the room so as to be heard everywhere within its walls without difficulty. The Speaker's room and the offices of the Clerk are very conveniently situated, and are ample in space. Their fittings remain to be completed under the Clerk's direction, and will no doubt be added with good judgment and business. The cloak-room for members is beyond the lobby, around a corner to the left of the grand staircase. Members here laughed not a little because the builders of the Capitol, in constructing these closets, were so cramped for room in the immense edifice that they felt constrained to give but one closet to a member, who was provided with duplicate keys. The closets number from 1 to 64, while there are 128 members. The Post Office and document closet are in a small room, one being separated from the other by an oak partition which hides more than half the range of letter-boxes, and reduces the approach to the postmaster to a narrow passage-way, which is inconveniently thronged after each session of the Assembly. The lack of familiarity with the business of the Assembly is shown in the construction of the drawers and closets of the Clerk's desk. These are all very neatly made, and ornamented with bronze fixtures, but they are not at all adapted to the needs of the Clerk or his assistants.

TRYING TO DEFRAUD HIS CREDITORS.

BOSTON, Jan. 25.—Detectives this afternoon arrested Albert C. Andrews and James W. Colling on charges of conspiracy to defraud merchants out of property to the value of $31,760. Andrews is thought to be the principal in the transaction, and it is said that Colling is his accomplice, although the latter asserts that he was employed by Andrews as clerk. Colling has been in business in this city many years. He has done an extensive trade in liquors and cigars, and had gained the confidence of the community by paying cash for goods. Finally, he secured a large credit, and converted his stock at once into ready money, which he secreted, and then failed. It is thought that a further examination of the books will disclose a very much larger amount concealed than is given above.

GOV. BROWNLOW'S IRE GOBBITY.

[From the Knoxville (Tenn.) Chronicle, Jan. 24.

In his stump-speech to the republicanists of Tennessee, miscalled a Message to the Legislature, Gov. Marks sees fit to inject an unfounded attack upon the late Gov. Brownlow, who at the time of his death was our associate editor and proprietor of the Chronicle. The following is the paragraph referred to: "It appears that the Governor, who was clothed with the power to decide when the law was complied with, delegated his power to issue bonds, and that many of them were signed and issued by one of his subordinates in the City of New-York." The statement is false, and if the Governor did not, he ought to be known it. We are informed that not a single bond was signed and issued in his name. On account of paralysis, which disabled him from writing for several years before his death, Gov. Brownlow had a Secretary, H. H. Thomas, who signed his name to all bonds and other papers, just as Gov. William Allen, of Ohio, did for the same reason, and just as other Governors have done. On one occasion his Secretary went to New-York to receive bonds from the National Bank-note Company, who had the contract for engraving the bonds. Not wishing to return to Nashville immediately, and the bonds being needed, he signed 200 of them with the Governor's name, in the presence of the State Treasurer, and sent them to Nashville by express to the Secretary of State's office, where they were countersigned and sealed, passed to the Controller, who signed the coupons, and then issued them to the railroad company entitled to them. This is all the foundation there is for this story of the Governor.

CAMPANA IN COURT.

From the New-Haven Palladium, Jan. 25.

Napoleon Campana went to Waterbury after his walk with O'Leary, bought a house, and furnished it luxuriously. There he lived with his new wife and his three dogs, enjoying the comforts of home, and writing challenges to the New-York papers. Thursday evening his wife went to the Chief of Police, said Napoleon had choked her, and wanted him arrested. Campana was arrested, but he gave bonds in $100. His wife returned to her father's house, taking her new wardrobe, and, as Napoleon says, $100 of his money. The trial was postponed yesterday. In court he showed a big roll of bills and said that he was in the hands of men who had hired him for a year, and he couldn't walk anywhere without their permission. He considered Waterbury the best place on earth. All he would say about the trouble with his wife was that two women came to his house and he didn't want them there. He said no more to her than his dead mother in her grave. The judge advised him to sell his furniture and pocket the money. After this, his wife put in an appearance.

UNFIT BUILDING STONE.

A telegram from Austin, Texas, to the Galveston News, dated 6th inst., says: "The thermometer at 7 this morning marked 18°, and the white chalky limestone quarried for the superstructure of the Federal Court-house and Post Office Building, piled up about the building, was found to be cracked from the freeze, showing that the material is too soft and porous for the purpose intended. Col. Sedwick, the Government architect superintending the construction of the building, has from the first objected to that class of stone, declaring it unfit for public buildings, but the Washington bureau have, it seems, uniformly disregarded his protests and representations, and contracted for the use of an inferior, light, and unsafe material. The stone used in the Galveston Cotton Exchange is of the same quality. It is thought by architects that the State House, also built of a soft limestone, is rotting away, and that it may come down any time upon a body of Legislature or during a session."

WITNESSES WHO RECANTED.

MR. KERR EXPLAINS THEIR MOTIVES.

WEBER AND MADDOX RIDICULATE THE RETURNING BOARD WITNESSES—ST. MARTIN'S OPINION OF GIBSON—LIQUOR THE CAUSE OF HIS PERJURY—THE CIPHER TELEGRAMS TO BE TAKEN UP ON SUNDAY.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—The witness St. Martin was again before the Potter committee this morning, and the room in which the investigation is being conducted was densely crowded throughout the day's proceedings. Mr. Cox resumed his cross-examination of yesterday, speaking first in regard to three indictments which the witness had admitted against him. Upon this point the latter said that in two of the cases he was not even arrested, and in the third he gave himself up to the Sheriff and was released on bail, but the Grand Jury found nothing against him.

Mr. Cox—Then you have not been under indictment at all? A.—No, Sir; but I did not understand it exactly.

THE SHERMAN LETTER.

Q.—In your affidavit there is a statement with regard to Weber's interview with you in May last, prior to his departure for Washington. Please state the circumstances of that interview. A.—Well, I was in the habit of going to Weber's house every day, and one day while I was there he received a letter from Mrs. Janks; he read that letter, and then handed it to me; I read it, and says he, "Mrs. Jenks is a —— fool, I know nothing of such a document;" if there was such a document in existence he knew nothing about it.

Q.—What was the document? A.—The Sherman letter.

Q.—What did he say about it? A.—Well, he left Donaldsonville and said he was coming here to see about that letter, and asked me if I would testify that I witnessed the destruction of it; if Sherman would not provide for him he would go on the other side, he said; I refused his offer.

Q.—Did you ever see any such paper or witness the destruction of it? A.—No, Sir; a few days after that he wrote a letter to Mr. Morris, of New-Orleans, to show that he did not know anything about it; he had made inquiries about it, but could find nothing about it.

Q.—State distinctly how much board bill, &c., was paid you while you acted as Sergeant-at-Arms to the committee, and by whom. A.—Mr. Maddox and Mr. Carter paid me; Mr. Carter gave me some $4 or $5 in silver, and Mr. Maddox paid the board bill and took a receipt for it.

Q.—In your conversation with Mr. Maddox in Washington what did he say with regard to testifying to your affidavit? A.—Well, once when I called at his room he told me he had the affidavit of Mr. Carter and Mr. Gibson, and his own, which he would bring against me; he read his own affidavit and told me that it I would write him the letter he asked me about that he would withdraw everything, and nothing should be published against me.

MR. GIBSON'S "FALLING OUT" WITH MR. TILDEN.

Q.—In regard to the conversation with Weber, and the dispatches that were sent, look at this paper. A.—This is a copy of a letter written by Mr. Weber to me on the 21st November, 1878.

Mr. Hiscock—Where is the original? A.—Mr. Weber has it; I have two or three witnesses who have seen the original; I was advised to make a copy of it; it was copied by a man named Jeanbois; he used to do writing for Mr. Ackles.

Q.—Did you keep the original? A.—No, I sent it back; I had it copied on the advice of Gov. Hahn.

Mr. Cox asked that this letter be put upon the record, as it had distinct reference to his (Cox's) and sent them to Nashville by express to the Secretary of State's office, where they were countersigned and sealed, passed to the Controller, who signed the coupons, and then issued them to the railroad company entitled to them. This is all the foundation there is for this story of the Governor.

CAMPANA IN COURT.

From the New-Haven Palladium, Jan. 25.

Napoleon Campana went to Waterbury after his walk with O'Leary, bought a house, and furnished it luxuriously. There he lived with his new wife and his three dogs, enjoying the comforts of home, and writing challenges to the New-York papers. Thursday evening his wife went to the Chief of Police, said Napoleon had choked her, and wanted him arrested. Campana was arrested, but he gave bonds in $100. His wife returned to her father's house, taking her new wardrobe, and, as Napoleon says, $100 of his money. The trial was postponed yesterday. In court he showed a big roll of bills and said that he was in the hands of men who had hired him for a year, and he couldn't walk anywhere without their permission. He considered Waterbury the best place on earth. All he would say about the trouble with his wife was that two women came to his house and he didn't want them there. He said no more to her than his dead mother in her grave. The judge advised him to sell his furniture and pocket the money. After this, his wife put in an appearance.

UNFIT BUILDING STONE.

A telegram from Austin, Texas, to the Galveston News, dated 6th inst., says: "The thermometer at 7 this morning marked 18°, and the white chalky limestone quarried for the superstructure of the Federal Court-house and Post Office Building, piled up about the building, was found to be cracked from the freeze, showing that the material is too soft and porous for the purpose intended. Col. Sedwick, the Government architect superintending the construction of the building, has from the first objected to that class of stone, declaring it unfit for public buildings, but the Washington bureau have, it seems, uniformly disregarded his protests and representations, and contracted for the use of an inferior, light, and unsafe material. The stone used in the Galveston Cotton Exchange is of the same quality. It is thought by architects that the State House, also built of a soft limestone, is rotting away, and that it may come down any time upon a body of Legislature or during a session."

Q.—You did not write any letter to Mr. Gibson from Maddox or Carter did you? A.—I do not think I did.

Q.—Had you any letters from any of them? A.—I had some orders from Maddox, I think, but there was nothing in them, only a few words.

The telegrams to which Mr. Weber referred in his testimony were:

NEW-ORLEANS, Oct. 31.

A. M. Gibson, Washington:

Can W. come settled at once, and I will see he makes such a statement as you want. This matter must not compromise me. S. H. ST. MARTIN.

Witness—I did not write it, but I signed it.

Q.—And you got this answer:

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.

To S. H. St. Martin, New-Orleans:

I want no statement from Weber. If I did, I would want him, even if he was for sale, which I have no reason to believe.

A.—Yes.

Q.—Then you sent those telegrams, didn't you?

A.—Weber wrote that, too, Sir, and I signed it.

NEW-ORLEANS, Nov. 1.

Gibson, Washington:

W. is not for sale, but those statements you will force him to make about you and others.

Witness—I sent that, but I did not write it.

Q.—You are not a good penman? A.—No, Sir; but he never wrote any of those telegrams for me; they all refer to his case.

Q.—Was it in this statement Weber would be forced to make? A.—Weber was going to recant about that.

Q.—Did you get this answer?

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1, 1878.

You are wasting your money and graphing threats to me. I am not buying statements or silence of clerk-mailers. A. M. GIBSON.

A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Then did you telegraph after that? A.—Yes, Sir; there was a telegram after that; that is the one I did not produce.

Q.—Is this it?

NEW-ORLEANS, Nov.

A. M. Gibson:

You are a liar, a thief, and a scoundrel. Maddox and Carter are no better. I propose to lodge you in the Penitentiary, where you belong.

A.—Yes, Sir, and Maddox was not offended at me; he knew all about it, and when he saw me afterward he asked me to his room and we took a drink together.

The Chairman—Now, Mr. St. Martin, here are five telegrams between you and Mr. Gibson about this business that you don't include with your affidavit.

The Witness—Well, some of them Gibson had at home and I would not include them.

Q.—Tell me when Weber said with regard to the Sherman letter. A.—He said there was some money to be made out of that letter, and that he would go to Washington and get employment; he told me he was a bare-faced lie because I would not have gone through this trouble if I was going back on it.

Mr. Cox—One question I omitted. Mr. St. Martin, in regard to this conversation with Mr. Weber with reference to his testimony, did he make any written statements or put any written statements in your hands? A.—I had a letter that told me everything; it was signed by him; I had that letter a good while, until he asked me to return it to him.

Mr. Cox—State the substance of this letter. A.—It stated how he arrived in Washington, with whom he had dealings, what he got, and what promises were made to him; that was the substance of the letter; he gave the names of the men and everything.

The Chairman—Who was this somebody who gave him the $1,000? A.—He said it came from Mr. Carter or Mr. Maddox; he got that in Washington.

The Chairman—Quite enough about it? A.—Well, I am sure he will say so.

WITNESSES WHO WERE NOT EXAMINED.

Q.—Before you went to Donaldsonville, didn't you have any conversation with Mr. Stenger except with regard to the money you wanted to pay your expenses in serving the subpœnas? A.—Well, I don't believe I did.

The Chairman went on to ask the witness a number of questions relative to the subpœnas that he returned, "not found," calling over the names, and stating the particular details relative to each. The witness admitted he did not look for the persons named at all.

The Chairman—There does not appear to have been returned by you a single subpœna issued by Gov. Cox or Mr. Reed. A.—I did not know they were issued by Mr. Cox or Mr. Reed, but from information I received those names had been furnished to the committee by those gentlemen.

Q.—Who gave you that information? A.—Mr. Weber.

Mr. McMahon—Who furnished the names of those who were to testify? A.—If I am not mistaken the names were furnished by Maddox.

Q.—Maddox furnished the names of witnesses who would go back on their former testimony? A.—Yes, Sir, and Weber knew every man that had given testimony before the Returning Board. I don't know every one who would go back on his testimony; on my trip to Bayou Sara I had those four witnesses up stairs, and when Weber got on the boat he went right up stairs, and stayed with them until we got to Port Orleans when they were taken off the boat by the detectives, and were never out of our sight until they testified. Maddox supplied the names and Weber told me each witness who would testify right.

HOW THE WITNESSES WERE MANAGED.

Mr. Cox—Mr. St. Martin, in describing those interviews between you and Weber when do you mean by saying that Mr. Maddox was right there? A.—I mean that while this business was going on Maddox was in Weber's room or Weber was in his, or the latter took place in Carter's room; they were generally together, and if you took notice you would see that a witness never walked into the committee-room unless he was followed by Weber, and we took up our positions so that we could stare the witness straight in the face.

Mr. Reed—Was that part of the arrangement? A.—Yes; and the only witness that did not come out all right was Mr. Dula; Gov. Cox had me removed from the room to talk to him.

The Chairman—Then you promised Duncan that if he would give the testimony you wished he might go back home. Had he been driven away? A.—Yes, he left.

Q.—Do you know that he had stated before the Returning Board the fact of his having been driven away? A.—I do not believe he did; he had to get out at night and keep out for all that.

Q.—With regard to Stevens, was he driven away? A.—Weber told me that they all left St. James at the same time.

Q.—Was Stewart was examined before the Returning Board and never said he was a fugitive.

Mr. Reed—It might be the witness was a fugitive in consequence of his evidence before the Returning Board.

The Witness—Oh, I have something about that business; I never saw you wants each witness, she call us you and say you will have to move, and then you have to move.

Q.—How many of the witnesses did go home?

A.—Two of them went back, Armstead and Dalton, and I think Duncan went home; Duncan went on a trip and did not stay more than a day; Armstead staid there until they drove him away again.

Mr. Cox—You stated that you had a conversation with Weber in regard to his testimony, did he make any written statements or put any written statements in your hands? A.—I had a letter that told me everything; it was signed by him; I had that letter a good while, until he asked me to return it to him.

Mr. Cox—State the substance of this letter. A.—It stated how he arrived in Washington, with whom he had dealings, what he got, and what promises were made to him; that was the substance of the letter, he gave the names of the men and everything.

The Chairman—Who was this somebody who gave him the $1,000? A.—He said it came from Mr. Carter or Mr. Maddox; he got that in Washington.

The Chairman—Quite enough about it? A.—Well, I am sure he will say so.

WITNESSES WHO WERE NOT EXAMINED.

Q.—Before you went to Donaldsonville, didn't you have any conversation with Mr. Stenger except with regard to the money you wanted to pay your expenses in serving the subpœnas? A.—Well, I don't believe I did.

The Chairman went on to ask the witness a number of questions relative to the subpœnas that he returned, "not found," calling over the names, and stating the particular details relative to each. The witness admitted he did not look for the persons named at all.

The Chairman—There does not appear to have been returned by you a single subpœna issued by Gov. Cox or Mr. Reed. A.—I did not know they were issued by Mr. Cox or Mr. Reed, but from information I received those names had been furnished to the committee by those gentlemen.

Q.—Who gave you that information? A.—Mr. Weber.

Mr. McMahon—Who furnished the names of those who were to testify? A.—If I am not mistaken the names were furnished by Maddox.

Q.—Maddox furnished the names of witnesses who would go back on their former testimony? A.—Yes, Sir, and Weber knew every man that had given testimony before the Returning Board. I don't know every one who would go back on his testimony; on my trip to Bayou Sara I had those four witnesses up stairs, and when Weber got on the boat he went right up stairs, and stayed with them until we got to Port Orleans when they were taken off the boat by the detectives, and were never out of our sight until they testified. Maddox supplied the names and Weber told me each witness who would testify right.

HOW THE WITNESSES WERE MANAGED.

Mr. Cox—Mr. St. Martin, in describing those interviews between you and Weber when do you mean by saying that Mr. Maddox was right there? A.—I mean that while this business was going on Maddox was in Weber's room or Weber was in his, or the latter took place in Carter's room; they were generally together, and if you took notice you would see that a witness never walked into the committee-room unless he was followed by Weber, and we took up our positions so that we could stare the witness straight in the face.

Mr. Reed—Was that part of the arrangement? A.—Yes; and the only witness that did not come out all right was Mr. Dula; Gov. Cox had me removed from the room to talk to him.

The Chairman—Then you promised Duncan that if he would give the testimony you wished he might go back home. Had he been driven away? A.—Yes, he left.

Q.—Do you know that he had stated before the Returning Board the fact of his having been driven away? A.—I do not believe he did; he had to get out at night and keep out for all that.

Q.—With regard to Stevens, was he driven away? A.—Weber told me that they all left St. James at the same time.

Q.—Was Stewart was examined before the Returning Board and never said he was a fugitive.

Mr. Reed—It might be the witness was a fugitive in consequence of his evidence before the Returning Board.

The Witness—Oh, I have something about that business; I never saw you wants each witness, she call us you and say you will have to move, and then you have to move.

Q.—How many of the witnesses did go home?

A.—Two of them went back, Armstead and Dalton, and I think Duncan went home; Duncan went on a trip and did not stay more than a day; Armstead staid there until they drove him away again.

Mr. Cox—You stated that you had a conversation with Weber in regard to his testimony, did he make any written statements or put any written statements in your hands? A.—I had a letter that told me everything; it was signed by him; I had that letter a good while, until he asked me to return it to him.

Mr. Cox—State the substance of this letter. A.—It stated how he arrived in Washington, with whom he had dealings, what he got, and what promises were made to him; that was the substance of the letter, he gave the names of the men and everything.

The Chairman—Who was this somebody who gave him the $1,000? A.—He said it came from Mr. Carter or Mr. Maddox; he got that in Washington.

The Chairman—Quite enough about it? A.—Well, I am sure he will say so.

WITNESSES WHO WERE NOT EXAMINED.

Q.—Before you went to Donaldsonville, didn't you have any conversation with Mr. Stenger except with regard to the money you wanted to pay your expenses in serving the subpœnas? A.—Well, I don't believe I did.

The Chairman went on to ask the witness a number of questions relative to the subpœnas that he returned, "not found," calling over the names, and stating the particular details relative to each. The witness admitted he did not look for the persons named at all.

The Chairman—There does not appear to have been returned

CURRENT LITERATURE.

A FARM-HOUSE DIRGE.

I.

"I thought you would come this morning, ma'am. Yes, Edith at last has gone;
To-morrow's a week, aye, just as the sun right into her window shone,
Went with the night, the Vicar says, where endeth never the day;
But she's left a darkness behind her here I wish she had taken away.
She is no longer with us, but we seem to be always with her.
In the lonely bed where we laid her last, and can't get her to speak or stir.

II.

"Yes, I'm at work; 'tis time I was. I should have begun before:
But this is the room where she lav so still, ere they carried her past the door.
I thought I never could let her go where it seems so lonely of nights;
But now I am scrubbing and dusting down, and setting the place to rights.
All I have kept are the flowers there, the last that stood by her bed.
I suppose I must throw them away. She looked much fairer when she was dead.

III.

"Thank you, for thinking of her so much. Kind thought is the truest friend.
I wish you had seen how pleased she was with the peaches you used to send.
She tired of them too ere the end, so she did with all we tried;
But she liked to look at them all the same, so we set them down by her side.
Their bloom and the flush upon her cheek were alike, I used to say;
Both were so smooth, and soft, and round, and both have faded away.

IV.

"I never could tell you how kind, too, were the ladies up at the hall;
Every noon, or fair or wet, one of them used to call.
Worry and work seems ours, but yours pleasant and easy days,
And when all goes smooth, the rich and poor have different lives and ways.
Sorrow and death bring men more close, 'tis joy that puts us apart;
'Tis a comfort to think, though we're severed so, we're all of us one at heart.

V.

"She never wished to be smart and rich, as so many in these days do,
Nor cared to go in on market-days to stare at the gay and new.
She liked to remain at home and pluck the white violets down in the wood;
She said to her sisters before she died, "'Tis so easy to be good.'
She must have found it so, I think, and that was the reason why
God deemed it needless to leave her here, so took her up to the sky.

VI.

"The Vicar says that he knows she is there, and surely she ought to be;
But though I repeat the words, 'tis hard to believe what one does not see.
They did not want me to go the grave, but I could not have kept away.
And whatever I do I can only see a coffin and churchyard clay.
Yes, I know it's wrong to keep lingering there, and wicked and weak to fret;
And that's why I'm hard at work again, for it helps one to forget.

VII.

"The young ones don't seem to take to work as their mothers and fathers did.
We never were asked if we liked or no, but had to obey when bid.
There's Bessie won't swill the dairy now, nor Richard call home the cows,
And all of them cry, "How can you, mother?' when I talk to the sows.
Edith would drudge, for always Death the hearth of the helpfulest robs.
But she was so pretty I could not bear to set her on dirty jobs!

VIII.

"I don't know how it'll be with them when sorrow and loss are theirs,
For it isn't likely that they'll escape their pack of worrits and cares.
They say it's an age of progress this, and a sight of things improves,
But sickness, and age, and bereavement seem to work in the same old grooves.
Fine they may grow, and that, but Death as liefer takes the moth as the grub.
When their dear ones die, I suspect they'll wish they'd a floor of their own to scrub.

—Austin Dobson, Contemporary Review.

PROUD PEARL'S CAPRICE.

CHAPTER I.

IN THE BALL-ROOM.

The blaze of countless wax-lights, the scented air of sweet flowers and their rival perfumes, the hum of many voices, the fluttering of gauze and silks, the gliding of hundreds of feet, some shod in lacquer and others in daintiest satin; the sparkle of innumerable gems, the more bewildering sparkling of human eyes, the important whispers of sweet lips, the laughter of light hearts — perhaps the heaviest ones laugh the loudest, who can tell!— and above all this is the moving spirit of the giddily-gay scene — music!— Strauss' dance music, bewildering strains, played with so wonderful a power that they seem to force even the most lethargic of men and the most affected of women on to their feet, eager to join the whirling, festive throng.

The ball is given by Madame la Comtesse de Monteferrata, and celebrates the twenty-fifth birthday of Victor, her only son, the pride and joy of his widowed mother. Madame is an Englishwoman, who has grand relations and great personal wealth. In her young, enthusiastic girlhood she married a noble Spaniard, moved by the eloquence of his melting eyes, his graceful dancing, and, above all, by that charming fashion he had of 'seronading her before the windows of the British Embassy in Madrid. Oh! those wonderful moonlit nights when she leaned from her balcony and rewarded him with a rose she had worn, and which he pressed so ardently to his lips. But all that happened many years ago; it would have been forgotten now, but those are just the episodes of life that women do not forget. It is over a score of years since the "nobil señor" has been gathered to his ancestors, but Madame la Comtesse has by no means forgotten his dark eyes and bright smile even now. After her husband's death the Countess returned to England to live among her own people, and devoted her days and all her thoughts to her two children. Victor—fair-haired, blue-eyed—is essentially an English-looking lad, the very son of his mother, while Inez seems the gentle counterpart of the handsome dark señor, her father.

"What a charming assembly you have here to-night, Madame la Comtesse! It gladdens even the eyes of an old soldier, who goes to-morrow to look on very different scenes." So says, with a profound bow of greeting, a venerable-looking Frenchman, one every inch a soldier, from his keen black eyes and heavy white mustache, down to the extra polish on his square-toed boots.

"Are things really looking so serious with you, General?" asks the Countess with sympathy.

"Serious, Madame? Heavens! but we shall have war—absolute hand-to-hand war, and they shall learn to tremble in Berlin when they know us better. We will teach them. Ah! there goes my noble young friend Victor. Would he were in my regiment. Of such stuff are heroes made."

"Pray, General, do not let him hear you."

"Not for worlds, Madame, if it should cause you a moment's anxiety."

"Young men are so enterprising, so enthusiastic," says the fond mother; "they are always eager to rush into danger, and any novelty attracts them. I should not like Victor to be led away by wild emulation in this cause, which to me, I must confess the fact, appears a veritable chimera."

"On that point we will not argue, Madame, and as to Monsieur Victor, the mother's fears are surely uncalled for," says the General, dryly. "The young man seems far too much engrossed at present to give heed to the remarks of any outsider. Well, I don't wonder! his companion is very lovely. Who is she?"

"Oh! a little nobody—my daughter's companion. An orphan we have partly adopted: I knew her poor mother well. She is rather pretty, as you say; and dear Victor is so considerate, and thinks it is his duty to dance with all, as far as possible. Remember he is host to-night."

"And a host in himself, Lady Monteferrata," says an influential Englishman, coming up at the moment: on which these three immediately plunge into the great war question again, which as this time is beginning to agitate Europe, and threatens soon to convulse the Continent.

Meanwhile Victor and "the little nobody" have a subject of more vital import to themselves to discuss than general questions concerning empires and dynasties.

"Come into the conservatory, Pearl. I must talk to you away from this maddening, noisy crowd," and as he speaks Victor draws her little hand close within his arm. She leaves it passively, and walks on silently by his side, through a long, dimly-lighted corridor, which leads to the furthest entrance of the great glass-house.

CHAPTER II.

IN THE CONSERVATORY.

The conservatory is very large—it is built along one entire side of the house. It contains magnificent plants of tropical growth. Huge palms and graceful ferns form a verdant and shading screen. Entering at the last door, Victor feels secure from the prying eyes of visitors. He places Pearl in a low rustic seat, and stands before her in silent contemplation.

"I thought you wished to talk to me, Monsieur le Comte?" she says presently, and as she speaks she lifts her clear gray eyes steadily to his.

"Has it ever happened that I do not want to talk to you? Oh! why have you so utterly withdrawn yourself from me of late, Pearl? I scarcely ever see you at all, and never alone. You avoid me as though you hate me—you, Pearl—who are my very life! How I have longed, hoped, prayed for to-night! I could scarcely await its coming. But I thank God I have had my reward. I have held you in my arms, and we have danced together; you, the loveliest of women, and I, the happiest, the very happiest, of men." He pauses for a moment. She is no longer looking up at him, and sits motionless.

He catches her hand and presses it fervently; she meets his eyes again, and a faint smile comes to her lips. In truth, she is a very lovely woman. Her hair is of that wonderful chestnut color in the waves of which golden light seems to play at hide-and-seek; her clear gray eyes are shadowed by dark lashes, the firm chin is cleft by a delicious dimple, and it was for the tinting of her wondrous skin that her romantic mother called her "Pearl."

"Dearest," says Victor, with renewed tenderness, "do my eyes betray me? does my voice move you? does my heart speak to yours of its passionate adoration? Pearl—you Pearl beyond price, I have done your bidding, I have waited in silence for a whole year! To-day I have attained my majority. I am my own master, I know no will but my own, and I get possession of a fortune that even you might deign to accept. And all this—will—fortune—absolute command of myself and all that ever may be mine, I lay at your feet. Will you bless me? Pearl, will you be my wife?" As he speaks his passion overpowers him. He says no further words, but throws himself a suppliant upon the ground at her feet.

She is strangely quiet, and hesitates a long minute before she answers him. Of all her charms perhaps the greatest is Pearl's voice. In its low musical tones she now speaks to her lover, and he hears her to the end; but as he listens he is thrilled by a measureless pleasure and by a measureless pain. He himself scarcely knows which emotion is keenest.

"Monsieur le Comte," she says, "believe me I value truly the great honor you are doing me, and more still the true love which, as you now have proved, lives in your heart for me. Pearl learned it well ere this. You have indeed bravely kept your word. For a whole long year you have been silent on this subject, on which just twelve months ago you first spoke to me. And now you come to repeat your question, and not having changed your mind expect an answer. You are rich, handsome, noble. You can hold up your head with the highest in the land, and you come to me who have nothing—am nobody—a poor dependant, living on your mother's charity, befriended by your gentle sister—you come to me, and ask me to be your wife! Oh! if only you were poor! If we might work and live together! If you were an artist like my poor dead father, who struggled so hard—and to whom a wife was as a right hand—a help and a blessing!—how I could glory in helping you, in watching you rise, as rise you surely would, ay, and assert yourself, your own true noble self, among men. I am very proud, Victor! Is that a fault? Think how proud I should be of you, and of your success! Now you have no need to work, no desire to distinguish yourself. Your father's title and your mother's wealth make you an object of admiration and envy to your little world. Such a little world after all! Your whole life has been one of indulgence, flattery has surrounded you. There has never been need for you to lift your little finger, or to endeavor to be useful to yourself or others. I like you much, Victor, but I can never marry you. I am no fitting wife for the Comte de Monteferrata. I must look up to my life's lord with veneration, and he must have won something for himself and by his own merits, something no money can buy. Then I could sit at his feet in absolute content, admire, worship, and obey my hero!" She rises and with a gentle movement withdraws the hem of her dress, on which he is kneeling. He has scarcely realized all she has said, but he feels she is going, going from him, who, alas! has no laurel crown to lay at the feet of this proud, ambitious, lovely, lovable woman. He also starts up now and seizes her arms almost roughly.

"You mean to leave me, Pearl—is this to be our farewell?"

"It is best to part at once, as it must be for all time. I cannot marry the Comte de Monteferrata."

"Because to his mother and his father alone he owes his position?" he cries.

"You have said!" she answers quietly.

"There is no other shadow dividing us? There is not graven in that deep heart of yours the picture, tho thought even, of any other man?"

"Great heaven, no!"

"If I—for you—unaided—alone—can win honor and renown—prove myself a man among men, fight my way upward if I can—thus win distinction for you, will you deem me worthy? Will you then be my wife?"

"I will."

"You promise faithfully, on your honor?"

"I swear it" ... she pauses for a moment, then flings her arms about his neck and looks into his eyes. "I swear it, Victor, by the love that in my heart of hearts I gave to you, even before you asked it." And she lifts her head and seals her bond with a kiss upon his lips.

CHAPTER III.

IN THE COUNTESS' BOUDOIR.

There is terrible trouble and confusion in the house of Madame la Comtesse the morning after the ball. Victor has gone. He has fled from his house in the early dawn, and has left only a few lines addressed to his mother. The note runs thus: "Mother, forgive me. I dared not speak to you before I left, for you would have bid me stay! Pray do not seek me; it is my earnest wish not to be found, and I shall take every precaution against discovery. My resolve is to quit the life of luxury and idleness I have hitherto led. I feel that my better self is getting ignobly lost. I must work—must learn to assert myself. Thus and thus only can I honor the woman who has promised (when such success is achieved) to be my wife. I have long loved Pearl Turquand, and all my hopes of happiness centre in her. When I am gone, dear mother, love for me, and pray for both you and of Inez—dear gentle sister Ines. You have both reason to be proud of my Pearl. For she will give you cause to be proud of your son, and it is she who has raised the spirit of emulation within me; and I mean to prove myself worthy of the love of the three best women in the world, whom I leave under this roof to-night."

Roused to unknown fury by the passion of motherly love and despair, by wild anger against Pearl, and wilder fears for her first-born, Madame la Comtesse summons "Miss Turquand." You have lived with my daughter and been her constant companion, Pearl," says the Comtesse, striving hard to speak calmly, considerately. "I believe, I hope I have never failed in my duty toward you, the pleasant duty of a hostess toward an honored guest. Is that so?"

Gravely sweet Pearl bows her head. Her heart is heavy within her, and her cheeks, her very lips, are pale; but her voice does not tremble as she replies:

"No lady could have treated a trusted friend with more uniform courtesy and kindness, Madame, than you have invariably shown to me. Believe me, I am deeply grateful."

Her humble tone, her downcast looks, exasperate the Comtesse, and arouse a feeling of burning anger in her maternal bosom. Her usually pale face flushes hotly as she cries: "And do you dare to speak to me of trust and gratitude, wretched, miserable girl—you, who have broken my heart? You, who have stolen my beautiful boy from me? You, who have crept with your sly looks and your sly words into his lower nature and made yourself mistress there? That is the empire you have obtained. Truly a cause for pride! Do not dare to answer me! I thought I could bring myself to speak quietly to you—to you. But nature will assert herself—the mother's nature—and you shall be punished. I will punish you, and you shall suffer—if you can suffer. To think that I, his most unhappy mother, should stand here to be defied by you—you pale-faced girl—by you, who have robbed me of my son, my joy, my pride. Where has he gone? Where have you bid him go? You know his secret—he has trusted it to you, for you have driven him away, while I, his mother, am left desolate, in utter ignorance of what has become of my son. Oh! it is hard—too hard."

"Indeed, Madamé, I know nothing, truly nothing. Your son honored me too much. He sought to make me his wife, and I, intensely proud of him, for him, besought him to distinguish himself, to win a name to—"

"Enough! cruel, cruel girl. Perhaps you cannot realize the awful thing you have done. You have ruined my peace of mind; you have robbed me of my joy, my hope and pride, for you have sent him to his death!"

"God forbid!" cried the girl, and a gleam of terror dilated her eyes.

"Pearl, you must have some pity, some feeling for me. Oh! tell me where he has gone! Let me go after him, kneel to him, pray him to come back, even as I now implore you. I implore you! If you have given him your promise to keep his intentions secret, break that promise, break it for his mother's sake. Pearl, let us go together to pray him come back." Her haughty spirit was quelled, and the wretched mother, forgetful of all but her love and her fears for her boy, actually knelt a suppliant at the feet of trembling Pearl.

"I give you my true word I know nothing, absolutely nothing, of your son's movements," says Pearl in utter consternation. "We parted last night without his saying one word to me beyond his expressed intention of earning distinction for himself. He vowed he would win a name apart from his title, and prove his manhood among men. Those were his words! How he has gone, or where, I cannot tell you, for I do not know."

"Then you defy me and refuse me, is that so?" cries the Comtesse, fiercely.

"Indeed, Madame, I do neither."

"Shall I tell you who has driven him? He had been talking to you during that lengthened absence from the ball-room. He was pale and flurried on his return. I saw it. Ah me, how little I guessed the truth! Then he entered into an animated discussion with my old friend the General, who left immediately after. Victor conveyed to me the General's parting words, and told me that the valiant old soldier intended starting for Paris at day break. Thither, no doubt, in some ignoble disguise, Victor has followed also."

"Ignoble? impossible," says Pearl, raising her head for the first time during this painful interview. "Do you really believe this, Madame?"

"I am convinced of it," says the Comtesse, "and this is your doing. Now, I think it will scarcely be necessary for me to point out to you, after what has occurred, that my roof can shelter you no longer, Pearl Turquand. I hope, I pray, I shall never have to look upon your face again."

"I will leave you this day, Madame."

"Yes, go, now, at once, it is the least you can do."

Pearl makes an attempt to touch the Comtesse's hand, which is hastily withdrawn. Then poor Pearl, with bent head and tear-filled eyes, make her way to the door. On the threshold Inez meets her.

"You will not leave me, Pearl? You will not forsake me also? Victor loves you! I love you both, dearly. Let us wait for him together. Be my sister still, as you have ever been, and when Victor returns he will draw the loving tie between us closer still." So speaks Inez, and laying her hands lovingly on the shoulders of Pearl seeks to detain her.

"Inez, my daughter," cries the Comtesse, "I have bidden the false girl go. Do not attempt to detain her. She and I can breathe the same air no longer." With a stifled cry the Comtesse sinks back in her chair, half closing her eyes. Inez flies to her mother in tender compassion. Pearl goes from the room, and a little time after from the house.

CHAPTER IV.

BEFORE PARIS.

It is midnight. Such a night! The ground frozen hard as iron, every sound, every movement, reverberating with a metal clang through the cold stillness. The sky has been showing a brooding, ominous blackness for hours past. If only that threatening snow would begin to fall! Any change must be for the better; any downcoming, any drops, be they of hail or snow, must bring less cruel bitterness into that cutting, biting air.

Outside the walls of Paris the brave "Garde Nationale" is on the watch. Here and there camp-fires are crackling and blazing, and attracting as closely as possible to their welcome warmth such of the men as dare leave their appointed beat. Those soldiers who have been on outpost duty for the last twelve hours, keeping incessant and wearisome watch, have now stretched themselves wearily enough on the bosom of mother earth. She is a cold, unnatural mother to-night, and gives but scant welcome to her overwrought children.

To a stranger there is something appalling in the great boom of the iron messengers that send startling reminders of their hideous power through the silent night. But to those watchers without the gates, the horrid sounds have become familiar by perpetual repetition, and Monts Valérien and Bicêtre may send forth their deadly minute messages of massacre unheeded.

* * * * * * *

Neither the boom of the guns nor the heavy breathing of his wearied companions, who are asleep in the cold, lying without tent or other shelter, appear to disturb the meditations of a young sentinel, who steadily continues to step to and fro on his limited beat. His heavy gray coat is closely buttoned up to the chin, his small kepi is pressed well down over his forehead, but his fair hair, curly in spite of its close clipping, peeps out underneath. No head-gear could possibly hide or disguise the straight outline of profile, or the clear gaze of those blue eyes, which had been to that young soldier's mother the most welcome and beautiful sight in the world—the sight for which she is now longing and praying—how wearily!

It was thus Pearl's lover had determined to "distinguish" himself. Here, he believed, was a chance of winning, unknown, and without the influence of high-born relations, that laurel crown which he had resolved to earn, to take home and lay at the feet of the proud woman whom he loved! To-morrow will be his first chance. To-morrow he goes into action, to-morrow he will strike his first blow. Fired by Pearl's ambitious words, and by the answering throb in his own breast, he will rush into the thick of the battle—dare greatest danger joyfully, likely thus to secure greatest success—and all for the sake of Pearl—proud Pearl! Oh! she shall have cause to be proud of him yet! He holds her plighted word, and she with her own sweet lips has told him how she loved him—long ago—and she gave him her promise, and sealed it too with a kiss!—a soft, lingering, intoxicating, bewildering kiss.

* * * * * * *

Even now his heart beats wildly at the delicious recollection, and the remembrance sends the blood tingling hotly through every vein. Present cold, privation, most uncongenial companionship, are all forgotten for the time being, and Victor in imagination is once again in that shady, fragrant home, the great fern screen in the conservatory. Close to his heart he holds the one woman he adores beyond her kind, he feels her kisses—Pearl's kisses—for whose caprice he has now proved himself willing to risk his very life. And fervently he prays, "God bless and keep my darling, and let me come home to her victorious!"

And in her chamber, far away over the sea, his mother on her knees is also praying. "God bless and keep my darling, and let him come back to me soon and safe."

She little guesses, poor mother, where her curly-haired darling is at that moment; still less does she dream of the spirit of joyful enterprise with which he intends to rush into the heat of battle to-morrow—risking his precious life, to do honor, or, rather, to satisfy the ambition of the woman he loves.

CHAPTER V.

AFTER THE BATTLE.

The heat of the fray is over. Under D'Aurelle des Paladines an important sally was made, and so fierce an attack on the Prussians that it not only temporarily disconcerted their leaders, but spread alarm among the beleaguering troops. Night is creeping on, apparently willing to do her gentle share toward shrouding in darkness the horrid sights that the garish sun and the crisply, glittering snow have made too awfully apparent during the past ten hours.

For the time being truce is proclaimed—after a fashion. The great forts have not ceased sending out their greeting of destruction, nor is there any relaxation in the preparation for further raids on the morrow. But that wild combat to which Victor had looked forward with such a spirit of ambitious enterprise has ceased. It has ended with the light of day, and how sad a day has it been for some of the brave and best! Victor had rushed wildly into the thickest of the melée, he had steeled his heart with the bright thought of Pearl's steady gray eyes, and wished for nothing so much as the chance of proving himself undaunted. The ambitious intention was genuine and grand, but the carrying it out rash and reckless, and its results by no means such as the young hero had hoped for—nay, reckoned on. In lieu of the first step toward promotion, his career has received a fatal blow at the very outset: for he now lies sick to death, faint, and almost unconscious, with a deep home-thrust from a vengeful sabre in his breast.

* * * * * * *

At last the heavy rumble of the cross-protected ambulance smites on the ears of the wounded, who lie so wearily listening—listening. So they have lain for hours in the enforced lethargy of agonizing pain, numbed, crushed, unable to move—dying of cold, or maddened to fever, and suffering from its accompanying parching thirst.

Poor Victor is beyond the hearing of any promise of relief, when suddenly there comes upon him the feeling of a horrible wrench, as strong arms lift him. Then he feels himself cruelly jolted, every bruised muscle shaken, every nerve in his body terribly strained. Finally he loses consciousness as to feeling ill or well; in a deathlike trance he lies, oblivious of all surroundings. Such a swoon, truly, is the greatest boon mother nature can bestow on worn-out, suffering humanity.

CHAPTER VI.

IN THE WARD.

How grateful is the hush, the absolute repose, that comes to those weary soldiers, when at last they find themselves laid at rest, in the neat beds provided for them by kindly Samaritans in the temporary hospital for the wounded and the dying. Gentle women watch over the helpless ones with unremitting patience and care; with hushed voice and quiet tread they go from one couch to another, offering comfort for the body and solace to the mind of the wounded and the dying.

Victor lies at rest in one of the softest beds of the ward, set apart for dangerous patients, that is, for those whose lives are at stake. And this ward is established within the precincts of an ancient royal residence, and on its floor dainty satin slippers and handsome buckled shoes have danced many a stately minuet. That deadly sickness is on poor Victor still, but he is no longer faint, though he lies absolutely motionless. He now hears and heeds the various sounds about him, even as with weary eyes he notes those who pass to and fro, and sees vaguely the outlines of other sufferers as they lie stretched on their beds of pain, to the right and left of him, and away against the further windows.

Thus Victor watches listlessly enough, with half-closed lids, and presently remarks, leaning over the bed opposite to his, the graceful outline of a woman's form, that in spite of the strange Sister of Mercy garb seems to him—homelike—familiar. He looks at the nurse with growing interest. If she would but turn her head. With growing attention he opens his eyes fully now. Oh that he could really see that face. Set on such shoulders it surely must be fair! Could he raise his head just a little? He tries to do so, but, alas! the mere attempt has made him groan in a sudden spasm of agony. His cry of pain at once attracts the nurse; she turns swiftly and runs to his side. Their eyes meet, and into his comes a look of tenderness and of intense longing as he sees the love of his life once again and whispers "Pearl."

But her outstretched hands fall by her side helpless, as she stifles the shriek that she can scarce repress.

What faint color there was in her fair face leaves it now, and she looks as ghastly as he who lies before her, her hero, her betrothed, the true love of her proud young heart.

Oh! how low has that pride laid him!

With all the strength that is in her, and it is great, she conquers her trembling, overwhelming agitation, and sinks quietly on to her knees by Victor's side. She takes his weak hand in hers, and covers it with passionate kisses; she prays with all fervor to the Father in heaven to spare the life of this bravest and best-loved of his creatures. Then comes a sudden thought that prompts her to quick action. Immediate help! Victor needs the best care and instant attention. Good advice she can procure for him, and this shall be done instantly!

So Pearl goes swiftly to seek the doctor in whom she has most faith, and who has already proved himself a kin'd and patient friend to all who suffer, and to her who tends them. The doctor comes. He has seen Victor before, and knows well that his is a hopeless case. The kindly doctor meets the eyes of the young nurse with a wistful sadness that says more than words. This nurse has always shown an earnest devotion to the good cause, and has been unremitting in her care and attention to all the sufferers. But now there is more than ordinary anxiety in the poor girl's manner as she learns the fate of the handsome young soldier lying sick unto death before her. It is a keen feeling of personal agony that blanches poor Pearl's face, and sends that look of desperate entreaty into her eyes.

* * * * * * *

"Oh! save him, save him, doctor, for his poor mother's sake!" she cries with uplifted hands, while tears course freely over her cheeks.

"Is it really too late? Cannot you send for her, my poor mother, my dear mother!" asks Victor feebly.

There is no answer. And the invalid fully understands the import of this ominous silence.

"Ah!" he presently says, with a long-drawn sigh. "Then it is too late, all too late, I feel it now. Kiss me, my beautiful love. I wished to live for you, and now I am dying—dying for you!"

"My glorious hero!" cries Pearl, the ring of passionate despair trembling in her sweet voice. "do not say it, do not think it. Live, Victor! you must live, you shall live, for your mother's sake, for poor Inez, for your own heartbroken, miserable Pearl."

"Ay, and I will," he cries, and with a superhuman effort raises himself and lifts the arm that is not maimed and puts it up to her neck. With a sudden revulsion from agony to hope, she folds him close to her warm throbbing bosom, and kisses his hair, his brow, his lips passionately, as though she would fill him with the vigorous current of her warm life's blood.

"My darling," she cries, "Oh! say it again! You will live, live to forgive me, to bless your poor mother, live to be mine—mine."

"I will live to bless you, my beautiful Pearl, but as to forgiving you, sweetheart, what can there be to forgive? I have loved you, I love you now, and shall—and shall—"

The words come slowly, brokenly. His life's blood and breath are both failing him.

"Pearl," he whispers, "my darling, kiss me." Then, more faintly still, "My proud love—my beautiful love—and shall—forever."

* * * * * * *

His hand holds hers closely, and his head falls heavily on her bosom.

Pearl's pride, her hero, and her hope in life—are dead.—Temple Bar.

HUNGARIANS AND ROUMANIANS.—The Hungarians, as all who have traveled on the Danube know, are dandies in their own fashion. They delight in clean shirts, richly embroidered in red and black, in cotton drawers or trousers, edged with lace and crochet-work, such as our English ladies affect upon their clothes, and in magnificent Hessian boots, which are brushed to brightness at least once a week. The male Roumanian, on the other hand, is dirty and careless in his attire. A filthy sheepskin jacket, swarming with fleas, is his chief garment; short trousers, of leather or the coarsest cloth, and the everlasting conical woolen cap, together with some minor articles, among which the pistol or knife stuck in the waist-belt must not be forgotten, completing his attire. But when we turn from the men to the women, we find that the comparison is reversed. Nothing can well be more wretched than the dress of the Hungarian women on the banks of the lower Danube. At Mohacs, for example, one saw them marching down to the river to get water, clad in a pair of their husband's enormous boots, a short petticoat, scarcely reaching to the knees, and a sheepskin jacket that also was evidently the property of their better half. Again, at the frontier station, just before entering Roumania, my sensibilities were somewhat shocked at seeing a girl of 17 busily engaged in sweeping the veranda, clad in nothing but a linen under-garment of very moderate dimensions, and this in spite of the fact that at least a dozen soldiers were lounging about close to her. In Hungary, in short, while the man is well dressed, his wife or daughter is clad like a savage. In Roumania, on the other hand, the dress of the women is decidly better than that of the men, and offers a most favorable contrast to that worn by their Hungarian sisters. In fact, after crossing the frontier, I saw no dresses which were not at least decent and sufficient, according to the Western standard, which is more than can be said of my experiences in some parts of Hungary.—The Fortnightly Review.

A PROPHECY OF THACKERAY.—A short time ago Leighton was giving a dinner at the Arts Club in honor of his elevation to the Presidency. Millais was present, and when it came to the toasts, his name was coupled with Painting. In returning thanks he said: "I remember the time, I was quite a young man, when William Makepeace Thackeray came to call upon me. He asked me to dinner, and when I came read to me a chapter of 'Esmond' which he was writing. Two years afterward I went to Italy, and on my return he met me in the Garrick Club and said these words: 'Millais, my boy, you must look to your laurels; I have met in Italy a most accomplished young dog; mark my words, one day he will be President of the Royal Academy.' 'I, you may imagine, at that time was not very much pleased with Thackeray's observation. I had never heard of Frederick Leighton, and in my youthful aspirations thought that I myself might one day be President. Since that time I have made the acquaintance I had not then, and I fancy I can see before me now that well-known face of Thackeray's; and his eyes through his old spectacles seem to twinkle with humor as he says: 'Millais, my boy, I told you so!' I bow before Thackeray judgment, and acknowledge the truth and justice of events, and the great humorist's power of observation."—The University Magazine.

DR. ARBUTHNOT.—In the circle of Pope's friends the name of Arbuthnot holds a distinguished place. With the exception of Swift, there was not one of the Queen Anne men who had such strength of intellect, such readiness of wit, such varied information; and in classical learning he was probably Swift's superior. He was certainly superior to Swift, and to Pope also, in the great moral qualities which make a man beloved not only by a few close friends, but by all with whom he comes in contact. Arbuthnot, like Othello, was of a free and open nature. He had the fine impulses and generous emotions of Goldsmith, combined with the manliness and practical sagacity of Dr. Johnson. And Johnson recognized in this celebrated physician a kindred spirit. "I think Dr. Arbuthnot," he said, "the first man among the wits of the age. He was the most universal genius, being an excellent physician, a man of deep learning, and a man of much humor." A similar estimate was formed by the brilliant men with whom Arbuthnot was intimate; and they seemed to have been as much impressed with the generosity of his nature as with the breadth and brightness of his intellect. "His imagination," said Lord Chesterfield, "was almost inexhaustible, and his knowledge at every one's service; charity, benevolence, and a love of mankind appeared unaffectedly in all he said and did." Swift declared that Arbuthnot had every quality and virtue that can make a man amiable or useful; and, when he died, the Dean couples his name with that of Gay, and alludes to the loss of both with unusually tender feeling: "The deaths of Mr. Gay and the Doctor have been terrible wounds near my heart." Pope, too, who was with Arbuthnot on his death-bed, writes of him always with affection, and has done his best, as Swift did also, to immortalize his friend in verse. Pleasant are the allusions of Pope in the prologue to the "Satires" to the friend who had prolonged his life. In the verses addressed by Pope to Gay, Arbuthnot's company is said to drive sorrow from the heart, "as all disease his medicines dispatie;" and Swift's lamentation, when—

> "Removed from kind Arbuthnot's aid,
> Who knows his art but not his trade,
> Preferring his regard for me
> Before his credit or his fee"— paints the character of the man in a few happy strokes.—The Cornhill Magazine.

THE SENORITA.—Even if a Spanish woman is not pretty, which, when young, is seldom the case, she carries a charm with her which never fails to assert itself. Her figure is rounded and graceful—she has, unfortunately, a tendency in after-years to grow stout—and her bearing such that no other race of women I know of can pretend to. The little arched foot treads the ground lightly but proudly, and her step and carriage are the very poetry of motion. The robe, which has generally a sweeping train, is worn somewhat clingingly, showing the contour of the form, but not impeding free action in every movement. A gauzy mantilla, falling artistically from the admirably-arranged, luxuriant tresses, is the simple head-dress, with perhaps the addition of a rose or camellia, planted just where one would expect it. She carries a dangerous, and often killing, weapon, which in other hands but hers loses its power—the fan. How it opens and shuts with a dexterous yet careless turn of the ivory wrist; how it taps the pink tips of the dimpled fingers, to give emphasis to some arch expression; how in the sunglare it is spread out gracefully as a shield against the rays; how, when desirous of addressing, unnoticed, a gallant, and stabbing him with a glance of the lustrous eyes, it is made to act as a screen; how, by an almost imperceptible movement, it beckons an expectant but irresolute admirer; how it imprisons silently on some too presuming caballero, by being posed lightly over the speaker's lips: how it indicates impatience in its quick fluttering; and how it is sometimes so manipulated that its softly-cadenced breath fans both the wielder and the supremely happy lover. Yes, the Spanish woman is by no means deficient of the elementary powers of fascination, and if once she wishes to descend from the realms of artificial complimentary speech, and to speak naturally, she is perfectly charming. She has a fashion of saying what she thinks—in this she differs from the lords of her race—and of calling a spade a spade. She is bright, and even sparkling in her badinage, which, however, seldom rises above triviality; and if one would not break the momentary attractive spell, one should never attempt to change the superficial character of the conversation.—All the Year Round.

THE RECITATIVE—ITS DECLINE.—The disregard of the recitative or declamation for which Italy was at one time so famous, was the first indication of the decay of melodramatic poetry, because in it the imitation, which is the end of dramatic art, depends more upon the poetry than the music. In order to give weight and effect to the language, the actor should carefully observe all the rules prescribed by declamation as to noting the sense of the words, dwelling on the poetical rhythm, giving all the inflections and changes of voice which the music is only intended to sustain, that the action may be in keeping with the rest of the drama. Formerly, recitative was looked upon as the basis of the opera, and it was the customs of many of the melodramatic writers who succeeded Metastasio to have their operas declaimed before sending them to the musical composer, that they might mark in the manuscript the various impressions which the poetry was intended to convey. Gluck, who exercised for a short time an important influence over the Italian opera, thought the recitative so important that lest it should be marred by a careless, hurried rendering, he would often sustain it with a subdued violin accompaniment. But toward the middle of the eighteenth century the poets, neglecting the recitative, turned their attention exclusively to the lyrical strophes which were the motives for the airs in their dramas. In this they were eagerly seconded by the musical composers as likely to afford a wider scope for the refinements of their art. Absorbed in these intricacies, they soon lost sight of the necessity of making the music express the meaning of the words.—Macmillan's Magazine.

THE TAME ROBIN.—Robin is a very amusing and cherry little fellow, singing about the house on snowy days, looking as jolly as possible; a very Mark Tapley of a bird; and when Spring advances all his good nature will return. When Henny's domestic duties keep her at home Robin shows himself a most devoted husband; he carries her plentiful supplies of oat-cake crumbs, butter, bits of candle, and other delicacies of the same kind. And when he has to cater for the little ones as well, he is really to be pitied; so busy is he that he neglects his toilet nearly altogether, and we have to be satisfied with burried scraps of song. He gets quite fearless in his anxiety for his family, and will join us at breakfast and help himself to buttered toast without the slightest hesitation or invitation. It is no use to break off a piece for Robin; his way is to hop on the plate and peck off for himself what he considers the dainty bit. He is known him to come in five times during breakfast. At night, a window is left open that he may come in for crumbs when he pleases. Should all the windows be shut, Robin has a very pretty Open Sesame; he sits on the window-sill and sings loudly. Nobody can resist that appeal, as he knows from experience. And when he wishes to get out, he has a very effectual way of managing that point too, by fluttering about from room to room, uttering a little frightened "Chick, chick!" And as we know the cat often lies in wait for him, some one rushes to the rescue at once.—Chambers's Journal.

RUSSIAN LITERATURE AND THE LATE WAR.—One visible way in which the war affected Russian literature, which showed, too, the interest taken in the war, was the impulse given to the newspaper press, while the circulation of the literary reviews and journals fell off. The Annals of the Fatherland, the organ of the radical doctrinaire school, tried for two years to ignore and to deny the deep interest which the Russian people took in the events of the East, and barely alluded to the war, but devoted its whole strength to the study of social problems and the internal condition of the country. At last one of its trusted contributors, Mr. Engelhardt, in his "Village Letters," showed by convincing testimony the feeling of the peasants even in remote provinces, their readiness to bear sacrifices and make contributions for the sake of the country and the cause, and, above all, the interest which they took in the events of the day. Newspapers have penetrated during the last two years into social strata throughout the country where before they were almost or entirely unknown. Even the Franco-German war of 1870 had a similar effect on newspaper circulation, but an effect then confined almost entirely to the large towns. Whether the literary periodicals will regain their prestige when public feeling shall have calmed down, or whether literary habits will change and lead to more frequent independent publications, is an interesting question.—The Athenæum.

HAMLET—MR. IRVING'S READINGS.—In the text of the play Mr. Irving has indulged in what seems to us a needless love of emendation in various slight alterations, for all of which some authority is to be found. An instance of this is to be found in act I., scene 2, where "whilst they bestil'd almost to jelly with the act of fear" is given instead of distilled. The more usual reading is as graphic and natural as a thing can well be, and the alteration appears to us to be singularly far from being wise or advisable. The association of a jelly—a tremulous substance—with the act of fear is perfectly easy; not so its conjunction with the word bestil'd. To bestil is, according to Richardson, "to tranquilize, to calm;" and to bestil to a jelly is to tranquilize to shakiness, which is plainly absurd. Again, in Act II. scene 2, Mr. Irving reads: "For if the sun breed maggots in a dead dog, being a good kissing carrion," for god, which we like no better than the previous alteration. We had a strong impression, which we are glad to find is not borne out by the published edition, that in the last act Mr. Irving, in the line, "The cat will mew, the dog will have his day," changed day to bay—an alteration about as valuable as that of "The child is father to the man" to "The man is father to the child." One other point, which is not new, strikes us as not completely satisfactory. In Mr. Irving's version Hamlet's speech to the King before he kills him runs thus:

> "Here, thou incestuous murderous damned Dane,
> Drink off this potion.
> Follow my mother." [Stabs the King.]

In the original text, Hamlet stabs the King at the words, "Then venom to thy work," and the masses, and to give a clear reason for moderation, and define its true limits. The interests at stake are so vital to the welfare of the human race that the physician cannot stand neutral: he must take sides against the frightful evils of the immoderate use of alcoholic fluids. What heart can be indifferent to the private message from the anxious wife to the physician: "The cares of business are driving my husband to find a solace from his exhaustion in brandy; pray help me to save him from the worst fate that can befal him—that of becoming a drunkard." Again, the careworn face of a manly husband, coming into the consult-ng-room not many days since: "Can you help me to persuade my wife that all this wine and brandy she is taking is not necessary for her strength?" To such entreaties the physician cannot refuse hearty co-operation. Then his chief help or argument lies in the direction of extra food, clearly to explain that milk or beef-tea, taken two or three hours after meals, sustains the energies of the human body in a better and more permanent way than brandy or wine. To explain also that the habits of food and drink wh ch the parents indulge in are transmitted to children. Many a parent would give up the use of alcoholic fluids, no matter how engrossing, to save the child from becoming a drunkard.—The Contemporary Review.

LIFE IN LOVING.

Catulli Seges Osculationis.

Ah, let life be very life, my Lesbia—life in loving;
They may babble as they will, the grim and gray;
For their myriad censures of our light love and roving
Just one farthing sterling is the price to pay.

Ah! earth's suns may set, in surety of returning;
But for us, life's little light once being set,
Falls the night, whereafter rises never gleam of morning,
Comes the sleep hath known nor pause nor waking yet.

Therefore give me kisses; first a thousand, then a hundred,
Then another thousand, and a hundred more;
Then again—again—again. It were well our reckoning blundered;
None must tell the tale of kisses that Love's prodigals can pour.

—Macmillan's Magazine.

FELIX MOSCHELES.

In Mrs. Lucy White Lillie's account of "Moscheles and Mendelssohn," published in the December number of Harper's Magazine, she speaks of the son of the former as an interesting lad, but gives, in a foot-note, only the scant fact that he has since grown into an artist of distinction. It was my pleasure this last season, while in London, to see him in his own house, surrounded by his lares and penates, as well as his works of art, to talk with him in a friendly way, and to learn somewhat of the master-spirit beneath the quiet exterior. If, in choosing his boy's name, Moscheles père took thought of its significance, as well as of bestowing the one dear to them all as borne by their friend and companion, Mendelssohn, he certainly was fortunate, for Mr. Moscheles illustrates that meaning thoroughly, while he may also lay claim to genius, though carried out in a different vein from that of his illustrious god-father.

He is a man in the prime of life, who not only has won a place in the artistic world by his own efforts, but holds that position by better work exhibited each year. In figure he is short and slight, a small head with a broad brow, shaded by very dark, heavy hair. His eyes are dark, but grow lighter, and seem to dilate as he talks and becomes interested in his subject; his nose is aquiline, his mouth well cut, though rather sensitive at the corners. He wears a mustache as dark in color as his hair. His hands are slender, brown, and muscular, with a touch of nervous force about the fingers, that keeps them in constant motion. In manner he is very quiet and retiring, speaking but little, and never about himself or his work unless compelled, and then in a simple, straightforward way most agreeable. His greatest success lies in portrait-painting, and certainly with the rarest gift of catching and reproducing all the little subtle lights and shades that go to make up one's face—all the finer tricks, so to speak, of hands or hair or gesture, as well as the exact counterpart of form and feature. In the exhibitions of the past season his two in the Grosvenor Gallery were ideals; those in the Royal Academy a portrait of his wife. In both galleries they were hung "on the line," and that in itself is a sufficient proof of merit. His home is known throughout London as the Studio, Sloane-street, Cadogan-square. It is a very quaint little place, built right in the centre of Cadogan Gardens, surrounded by trees, and approached by lawns of green grass. The house is arranged somewhat like those in the South, all on one étage; it was by promising this to the authorities that he was able to obtain his lease, as no building must be visible from the thoroughfares. As it has been put up by piecemeal and as the spirit moved him. It is full of queer angles, unexpected windings, and unlooked-for corners and crevices.

We entered at once from the house door, usually standing open, into a small, dark-paneled room, having one side of glass heavily curtained, through which a blaze of scarlet geraniums feasted one's eyes. Everything in this room was old, from a large gold and blue enameled inlaid desk, that once graced some old Dutch castle, to the slender three-legged tables and consoles, which looked far too fragile to hold anything less delicate than Sèvres or royal Dresden. Here came to us charming old Mme. Moscheles, the dear friend and loving counsellor, the adopted young mother of Mendelssohn. His letters to her are full of love and sentiment, strength and tenderness, and, indeed, she looks one who could at any time give strong sweet counsel to those in trouble, sorrow, or distress. Like her son, she is slight and small, and, like him, possesses the same nervous, well-modeled hands, only hers are very white, and the slender fingers are freighted with handsome old rings. Her face is exceedingly fine in outline and delicate in coloring; her dark eyes are still as bright and earnest and beautiful as long years ago, when she was the centre of such beings as Thalberg, Ernst, Joachim, and Mendelssohn, while they speak encouragement and love to her own boy Felix as they then did to her husband-lover and the friend of his heart; and the wonderful white hair, fine, soft, and very long, as it falls in loose waves about her face and under the cap of priceless Venice point, is not the least attractive feature about this truly grand dame.

After a cup of tea and a little chat, we passed by other rooms all filled with rarities, through heavy velvet portières into the studio proper. It is a very large and handsomely-proportioned apartment, with a grooved ceiling and black oak rafters; almost the entire north side is of glass, thus giving a fine, free light, easily tempered by sliding shades. The walls are hung with bits of rare-colored silks, brocades, and satins from Spain, China, and Japan, interspersed with old Dutch faience and armor of centuries ago. At the east end of the room, on a raised dais, far above one's head, is a life-sized figure, well carved and painted, of the Virgin Mary. Long ago it belonged to an old Spanish cathedral. Fancy how strange it must seem here; her proper place is in the beautiful south, amid the devotion of a passionate-h-arted people; not in the cold north, in a London studio. Opposite the window is a large oak fire-place and mantel, extending from the rafters to the floor; the inner recess of this is so deep that it has been finished with cushioned seats and many curious little shelves. Upon these, scattered promiscuously, were scraps from the pottery; a doll's head, a bit of lace, hanging at a diminutive tin bucket, while a small dust-brush and a child's garden hat kept amicable company near by. Observing my smile, Mr. Moscheles told me, with a note of deep tenderness in his voice, that this was his baby's favorite play-house. Here she would busy herself all day long while he worked at his easel. Is there not a ring of poetry in this—the quaint, dark walls, the shimmering silks, the work scattered about, finished, partly commenced, but just sketched in, the silent artist and the pretty sunny-haired child in the mantel recess, talking her lisping babble to her toys, while the flames from the hickory logs kiss her sweet face and little head?

The work upon which Mr. Moscheles was then engaged was a portrait of his mother, so like her that one fairly turned to the living model in surprise. A lovely picture of the fascinating Nita Gaëtano, as an Italian peasant, was most charming, while a Japanese boat scene was odd and pleasing, and very cleverly done. In speaking to Mr. Moscheles about his work, he expressed a strong desire to exhibit some of it in America, but was deterred therefrom by the high rates of duties and commissions. I wonder very much that among all our art-dealers no one has as yet brought to this country any of his paintings, for the name of Felix Moscheles takes high rank in artistic circles in London, and what pleases there is usually brought out here.

Strange sights, strange scenes, must that silent figure high above one's head have witnessed in this studio. For it is here those delightful artistic parties were given, during the Summer season, over which all London raved and struggled to obtain admittance. Here in the warm July evenings gathered Alma-Tadema, Boughton and his little fair-haired wife, Whistler, Burne-Jones, Morris, Rossetti, Swinburne, with Henschal, Nita Gaëtano, Anna Mehlig, Herr Francke, George Eliot, Henry Irving, and the free-thinking, generous-hearted Princess Louise. Here art, politics, ethics, woman's rights and woman's wrongs, free thought, war, peace, and music, were discussed with the buttons off the foils.

All the women appeared in thoroughly artistic or pre-Raphaelite costumes; narrow trailing satin gowns, close Queen Anne caps, long mittens, and low high-heeled shoes in brilliant colors, or in tunics guiltless of sleeves, braided heavily in gold and silver, girded in with jeweled ropes, almost as fabulous as Lothair's gift to Lady Corrisande, and sandals whose heavy ribbons are crossed and tied over seemingly unstockinged feet. They sit about and make themselves into old pictures; then, presently some one plays on a spinet, or sings some little love song of a hundred years ago—"A Maiden Fair," or "The Bailiff's Daughter,"—and a most splendid posset is served in long-stemmed Venetian glasses, and spice-bun is passed on old china, the brilliant-hued bee testifying to its age and authenticity.

So imbued does one become with this old-time atmosphere that one fully expects to be handed into a waiting sedan-chair with its attendant link-boy, and it is quite a shock to one's sensibilities to find instead a comfortable brougham, and an irreproachable John Thomas to attend one.

From the past to the present is but a step after all, but I question if it is not more desirable to take that step in Felix Moscheles' softly-lighted studio of a Summer's evening than it would be to do so in reality.

A. DE G. S.

THE JUDGMENT OF MUSICIANS.—It is peculiarly noticeable that musicians among themselves say very little, as a rule, about the feelings that music calls up in them; they talk about the music itself, and such talk is rarely of a nature to be interesting to an outsider. I remember once listening to an impassioned performance of Schumann's overture to "Manfred" in company with a musician. The only thing he said after the performance was: "How much more effect Schumann has drawn from his horns here by using the open notes than he often does by writing chromatic passages for them!" This was a technical point. As for rhapsodizing about the spiritual essence of the music, my friend very wisely let that alone. I doubt whether, if Shakespeare were alive to-day, even he could write a good poem about the "Manfred" overture. About Music (with a capital M) it is indeed possible to speak and write in the poetic vein; but about this or that piece of music poetry can utter only dreariness or nonsense. It is both curious and instructive to note how Hector Berlioz, a man who felt music with almost frightful intensity, and whose excitement while listening to some compositions approached the pitch of frenzy—to note how Berlioz, in his series of essays on Beethoven's symphonies, rarely rises above the consideration of technical details. In judging music, the amateur has only his feelings to guide him. The musician is, at least while listening to a piece of music for the first time, very much in the same case. Yet, from his superior special culture, he has a few and perfect trustworthy guides; beauties and imperfections strike his ear at once, and are felt by him instinctively, which it would take much study for the amateur to perceive. And by superior culture I do not mean merely superior special knowledge, but that well-digested knowledge and experience which go to form fine artistic fibre in an organization of naturally æsthetic proclivities. Real genius and original power can be more or less clearly recognized by every one. But I think that the true position which genius holds among the other qualities that go to make up what we call an artist has been very generally—I will not say overrated—but misunderstood. We often observe a seeming tendency in artists to speak slightingly of that heaven-sent power by virtue of which he who possesses it can at will gain ascendency over the souls of men. A man of wholesomely generous nature reverences that which can work strongly upon his feelings. The apparent inaptitude for this kind of enjoyment that so often strikes us in musicians may be explained by the fact that the musical laity—deceive themselves as they may—are far more prone to yield to the influence of the composer's or performer's own personality, as it is revealed to them through the medium of tones, than they are to listen to the music as an entity in itself. The musician is timid about thus surrendering himself, unless the strong individuality of the composer or performer is revealed to him through a perfect medium. As has been said before, his feelings are a much surer guide to him than are those of the amateur, and one's quantity of genius does not command them without a silent protest on his part so long as he is not assured of its fine quality. It is a mistake to think that a high degree of culture blunts the sensibilities; on the contrary, it sharpens them. The musician, studying a Bach cantata in the quiet and solitude of his own room, knows an ecstacy of which the amateur has no conception. It is the very intensity of his feelings that makes him careful how he exposes them to any but the finest and best influences; his soul is a pipe, the stops of which must not be fingered by vulgar hands. Robert Schumann once said, "I should box the ears of any pupil who wrote such harmony as the first few measures of the overture to 'Tannhäuser;' and yet the thing haunts me with a strange pertinacity in spite of myself." Most people would call this obstinacy, illiberality, or what not that is bad. But it was the protest of the refined Schumann against a power, the genuineness of which he recognized, but of which the quality seemed to him to be open to suspicion.—W. F. Althorp in Atlantic Monthly.

WHAT IS RUSSIA?—Who and what is Russia? Not the name of a complex and multiform society of intricate configuration, such as is our own; but a vast mass, comparatively inorganic, still nationally young and simple in its forms of life. We may regard Russia, for the present purpose, as including three elements, three forces only. First, the Emperor; secondly, the people; thirdly, the official, aristocratic, and military class, which last may be said to make up there what, both there and here, passes under the name of "Society." Of these three factors, distinct estimates have to be formed. The present Emperor of Russia has, during a reign now approaching a quarter of a century, given ample evidence of a just and philanthropic mind. No greater triumph of peaceful legislation is anywhere recorded than the emancipation of the Russian serfs, which he has effected. It is true that he gave to England assurances about Khiva, which he has been unable to fulfill. But the military measures taken against the Khan apparently had in view the real necessities of peace and order in that region, from which plunder and kidnapping had to be expelled. There is little in their accompaniments, either of profit or of power, which would warrant the imputation of an unworthy motive. It is more just to ascribe the Emperor's original promise of entire abstention to an honorable anxiety for the friendship of England, and as an over-sanguine expectation, than to denounce as an act of bad faith a resort to force which has every appearance of reason and justice. In the great matter of the war with Turkey, I avow my belief that the Emperor was prompted by motives of humanity, which drew additional force from the special sympathies of race and of religion. Justice seems to require a similar admission in regard to the Russian people. They are a peaceful and submissive race, whose courage in the field is that of a determined and uncalculating obedience. Domestic in their habits, rural in their pursuits, and fighting the battle of ordinary life under hard conditions, they are little open to the evil influences of what is here termed Jingoism; the conscription has for them no charms; and war summons them to little else than privation, wounds, disease, and death. Probably few as little to gain by it. Whatever hitches the Russian people have been moved, during the last three years, by a thrill of genuine emotion on behalf of their enslaved and suffering brethren, rather than by "Russian interests," or appeals to pride, or the lust of territorial aggrandizement. That which reason bids us to conclude as to the people, we must also suppose at least as to individuals in the class which I have described as the third great moving force of the Russian Empire. Of this type was Col. Kirieff, who met and indeed courted a hero's death in the Servian war of 1876. But the general character and tendencies of the body are another matter. The spirit of aggression has a natural home in the oligarchic, diplomatic, and military class, whose personal and specific leanings it as strongly favors as it counteracts the interests of the people. We have seen too plainly what, though with many honorable exceptions, are the tendencies and leanings of the corresponding classes even among ourselves, where their sentiments are modified, and their action limited, by free public discussion and by popular institutions. It is not difficult to understand what are the propensities, and what the power of action, military, official, and aristocratic elements of Russian society; what even tzars they may advance, and what use they may be tempted to make of the huge but inorganic forces of the nation, which lie almost helplessly at their disposal. It is not necessary here to dwell upon shades and subdivisions of opinion, or to distinguish Moscow from St. Petersburg. It would not be just to treat even the incorporated influences we are now considering as a mass of unmixed evil. But this class, in regard to the rights of other countries, and the peace of the world, is the dangerous class of Russia; the class that prides itself upon wisdom because it has power; the class that thinks itself cultivated because it has leisure; that includes all those who claim to lead the nation because they have long and often misled it, and to think and act for it, and drag it in the train of their thoughts and acts, because they live upon it. This class, or rather this conglomeration of classes, ever watchful for its aims, ubiquitous yet organized, standing everywhere between the Emperor and the people, and oftentimes too strong for both, is at work day and night to impress its own character upon Russian policy. The Duke of Wellington declined to place confidence in Russia; for, as he said with strong sense and truth, it was not his business to place confidence in foreign Governments. It is our business to judge them fairly, but to watch them closely; and in our present judgments to avail ourselves of all the aid that can be derived from the observation of the past.—Mr. Gladstone, in Nineteenth Century.

THE ENGLISH SOCIETY JOURNAL.—A lady of rank and reputation who has a weakness for a rubber, and who was tempted in an evil hour to be playfully initiated into the mysteries of baccarat, learns that her lord will no longer be responsible for her gambling debts, and that the family diamonds are gone to Mr. Attenborough's. Another fair one, with a foible for private theatricals, figures as the heroine of some rather ambiguous adventure, with allusions that make her identity unmistakable to the initiated. The stories may be true, false, or exaggerated. Let them be false in the main, if there be a shadow of truth in them, denial or explanation only inspires their circulation, so that the victim of the indiscretion is practically helpless. It may be said that offenses against decency and public morals deserve to be exposed, and that society is improved thereby. We cannot assent to that for a moment, and everything, at all events, is in the manner of doing it. We have quite enough of the washing of our linen in the law courts—whose reports, by the way, might often be curtailed, in ordinary consideration for modest readers. At present there are at least half a dozen tolerably widely-read journals of the kind we are describing. Each of them devotes some half-dozen pages to paragraphs which chiefly consist of gossip and scandal. We can conceive the rush and the rivalry among them to get on for a "good thing." There can be no time to verify doubtful facts, for while you are inquiring, a less conscientious contempora y may get the start of you. If you know next to nothing of a possible sensation, it is least makes matters safe. In the meantime the dark hint that may be developed in "our next." You have taken the preliminary step to register your discovery, and though you may be stumbling over a mare's nest, you are secure against an action for libel. Not that an action for libel is always an untried evil. On the contrary, it may be an excellent advertisement, though we have never one; especially should the prosecutor's general antecedents be indifferent, even if he cast you for damages in this particular instance. Sometimes, no doubt, a rascal gets his deserts. And yet, when his secret sins are set before him by half a dozen bitter and lively pens; when he is held up to social reprobation in half a dozen most unlovely aspects, we feel some such pity for him as we should have felt for the wretch who had been flogged through the public streets after passing the morning in the pillory. Naturally, nothing sells these papers better than dying at exalted game. Nothing, however, disappointed, and only in the name affixed to a few of the volumes was any trace of Joseph Addison to be found. The sale extended over five days. On the first four days the books were sold in 856 lots, which realized £456 2s. 9d.; on the last day the medals, jewels, &c., were disposed of for a further sum of £97 2s. 2d.—Temple Bar.

SCOTCH GENTLEWOMEN IN DIFFICULTIES.—Among the trades most suitable for women may be mentioned every form of millinery and dress-making, all the lighter work of linen-drapers' shops, the lighter work of book-sellers' and print shops, certain branches of jewelers' work, house decorators' and china merchants' businesses. Colleges for nurses, schools of cookery, and schools of art-needlework afford resources for women which did not exist 50 years ago. But many more occupations, which used to be considered the peculiar property of women, have somehow slipped out of their hands and passed into those of men who could dig and lift heavy burdens, cross the seas, and be the pioneers of a new civilization. Not only worsted and fancy-work shops, but what are called furnishing shops, glove shops, lace shops, toy shops, bun-houses for the sale of buns, cakes, and smaller confectionery, and the retail trade in tea, were formerly regarded to a large extent as peculiar to the province of women—not unfrequently of poor gentlewomen. Some of the readers of these observations may recall old stories of Scotch ladies of rank—Earls' daughters—who, after the failures of the Darien expedition and the Jacobite rebellions, stoutly maintained themselves and their children by making and selling thread, and by keeping shops of small wares. Other readers, who are admirers of Mrs. Gaskell's writings, will surely think of her gentle Miss Matty the late Rector's elderly daughter, who, on the failure of a bank and its disastrous consequences, set herself to preserve her meek, modest independence by selling tea in Cranford, and, as a parting word the present writer begs to explain that she does not intend by any means to imply that trade asks no distinct qualification and no particular training, only that the qualifications are less rare, the training is not so arduous, and may be acquired later in life—above all, the remuneration to industry and prudence is far more certain. If the younger of the indigent gentlewomen will but revive the good precedent, if they will take heart and cast small prejudices to the winds, their latter end may, indeed, be better than their beginning.—Good Words.

NICHOLAS THE IRON CZAR.—A relation of mine, who was then a student at the St. Petersburg University, had, with a few friends, formed a literary society, in which the works of contemporary political economists, publicists, and philosophers were read and debated. One of the innumerable spies of the secret Police denounced the society as a "secret revolutionary organization," and my relative, as President thereof. The latter was of course arrested, locked up in one of the underground cells of the St. Petersburg fortress, and summarily condemned, by a special military court, to transportation to Siberia for life. All the influence which our family possessed in high quarters was brought to bear on the Czar, but all in vain. At last the mother of the prisoner, meeting the Czar one day during one of his solitary walks in the Summer Garden, threw herself at his feet, averring her son's innocence, and imploring his pardon. The Czar seemed to be profoundly touched. He raised the old lady with the most chivalrous and pitying deference, and promised her to reconsider her son's case, and to have a personal interview with him. Nicholas was true to his word. The very next day the young culprit was brought out of his cell, and, a few moments later, he stood alone before the Emperor. The latter took him by the hand, led him before an image of the Saviour suspended in a corner of the room, and forcing him down on his knees, exclaimed: "Can you swear before the Almighty God that neither you nor your associates had any criminal design against my life? Can you swear that you believe in the holiness and eternity of the Russian autocracy?" As soon as the prisoner had recovered from his unbounded surprise, he answered: "I can swear to your Majesty that neither I nor any of my friends had the remotest design against your safety. As to the autocratic form of government, I cannot conscientiously swear that I believe in its eternity. The history of other countries teaches us that the time must come, even in Russia, when the people itself will take part in its government." The Czar answered not a syllable, embraced the young man with almost paternal tenderness, and drawing a ring from his own finger, gave it to him, saying: "This is a token of respect from your Czar. You have been sincere and truthful to me; and there is nothing I hate so much as a lie." He then approached his writing-table, on which the sentence of the Santa Maria, at the rate of 10 per cent. of the house rents which they pay." When Leo X. opened and paved his Via Leonina, or Di Ripetta, the money was drawn from the same source.—The Athenæum.

CONSOLATION.

When the pale wreath is laid upon the tomb,
Love's last fond homage offered to the dead,
And the bereft, with tears and drooping head,
Bid mute farewell on sadly turning home,
Sister and brother, widowed love and friend,
Review, as in a solemn vision then,
Their dear one's life, its bliss and bitter pain,
Its restless hopes now ever at an end.
The common thought lifts them above despair,
One brief thanksgiving is on every tongue:
That faithful heart shall never more be wrung
With cold unkindness or with aching care.
That generous mind no stern rebuffs shall vex;
That busy brain no problems dire perplex.

—Good Words.

IN SNOW.

O English Mother in the ruddy glow
Hugging your baby closer when outside
You see the silent, soft, and cruel snow
Falling again, and think what ills betide
Unsheltered creatures—your sad thoughts may go
Where War and Winter now two spectral wolves,
Hi ing in the freezing vapor that involves
Those Asian peaks of ice and gulfs below.
Does this young Soldier heed the snow that fills
His mouth and open eyes? or mind, in truth,
To-night, his mother's parting syllables?
His coat is red—but what of that? Keep ruth
For others; this is but an Afghan youth
Shot by the stranger on his native hills.

—Fraser's Magazine.

ADDISON'S DAUGHTER.—Very little is known of Addison's daughter, and that little is known but vaguely. On the one hand, it is reported that she had been heard to say that whatever other people might find to commend in her father's Spectators, she could not admire them. On the other hand, a writer in the Gentleman's Magazine for March, 1797, the year of the lady's death, avers that she "could go on in any part of her fathers works, or repeat the whole, but was incapable of speaking or writing a single sentence." This statement, again, was refuted in a succeeding number of the same magazine: "I have not conversed very frequently with her," writes the later correspondent, "but enough to be convinced that her memory, though good, was not so extraordinary as is represented. I have heard her repeat some of the poetical parts of the Spectator, which she did with considerable accuracy of memory, and great propriety of emphasis. But I do not believe that she could have repeated one prose paper out of all her father's works. She could have given an account of the contents of many. She read them frequently. * * * So far is it from being true that she could not write or speak a single sentence intelligibly, that I am persuaded she could do both as well as the generality of other people. * * * It is by no means true that she was an imbecile, or such a prodigy of memory. Her memory was strong, but not marvelous; her understanding was good, but not particularly great." Miss Addison was born in 1718. In the year after her birth her father died, and at the age of 12 the mother, too, was taken from her. She was educated as a day scholar in Queen's-square, and for some years lived in a house of her own in Burlington-street. But the greater part of her life was passed at Bilton, near Rugby, a pleasant place on the banks of the Avon, which her father had bought in 1711 from the family of Sir William Broughton. The purchase-money, £10,000, a large sum for those days, and one which even the fortunate and careful Addison would probably have found some difficulty in furnishing but for the help of his brother Gulston, who had had, no doubt, a turn at the Pagoda Tree, when he succeeded "Diamond" Pitt as Governor of Fort St. George. On the lady's death her library was removed to London, and sold at Leigh & Sotheby's, in Leicester-square. Considerable excitement attended the sale, from the idea that among the books and papers which formed the collection might be found some interesting memorials of the illustrious man whose property they once had been. Expectation was, however, disappointed, and only in the name affixed to a few of the volumes was any trace of Joseph Addison to be found. The sale extended over five days. On the first four days the books were sold in 856 lots, which realized £456 2s. 9d.; on the last day the medals, jewels, &c., were disposed of for a further sum of £97 2s. 2d.—Temple Bar.

GEORGE HENRY LEWES.—To me personally Lewes was a great philosopher only because I was told so. When he would acquaint me with some newly-found physical phenomenon, as that a frog could act just as well without his brains as with them, I would take it all as gospel, though a gospel in which I had no part myself. When he would dilate on the perspicuity or the inaccuracy of this or the other philosopher—in my presence, though probably for the advantage and delight of some worthier listener—I would be careless as to his subject, though I loved his zeal. But though the philosopher was lost upon me, the humorist was to me a joy forever. Sure no one man told a story as he did. To see him gradually rise from his chair and take his place standing between two or three of us! He must have known, though he never looked as though he knew it, that he was going to act a great part in mixed comedy and satire. Then by degrees he would pile up little incident on incident, the motion of his fingers assisting the peculiar fire of his eye, till in two minutes a point would have been made and the story told with all the finish of a jeweler's finest work. His personal appearance was admirably fitted for such scenes! His velvet coat and his neat slippers, and the rest of his outward garniture looked—as a man's clothes always should look—as though they were there by chance, there of necessity, but not much to be thought of; but they helped to make him a man peculiarly pleasant to the eye in conversation. No one could say that he was handsome. The long bushy hair, and the thin cheeks, and the heavy mustache, joined as they were, alas! almost always to a look of sickness, were not attributes of beauty. But there was a brilliance in his eye, which was not to be tamed by any sickness, by any suffering, which overcame all other feeling on looking at him. I have a portrait of him, a finished photograph, which he gave me some years since, in which it would seem as though his face had blazed up suddenly, as it often would do, in strong indignation against the vapid vauntings of some literary pseudo-celebrity. But the smile would come again, and before the anger of his sarcasm had had half a minute's play, the natural drollery of the man, the full overflowing love of true humor, would overcome him, and the love of the poor satirized sinner for the sake of the wit in him had created. Perhaps it may be felt that in saying these last words almost over the grave of one so well beloved, and one so glorious for high acquirements and high achievements, I might better have abstained from such memorials of the man. I must, however, excuse myself by saying that I have wanted to paint George Lewes as I knew him. Nor will those who think of him solely as a student in philosophy, of one who has devoted his life to research at the cost of lighter joys, understand his full character any better than he who shall imagine that, because he began his literary life with a few novels and a few dramas, he found in those the occupation most congenial to his soul. There was never a man so pleasant as he with whom to sit and talk vague literary gossip over a cup of coffee and a cigar. That he was a great philosopher, a great biographer, a great critic, there is no doubt; and his little life has left behind him here in London no pleasanter companion with whom to while away an hour.—Anthony Trollope, in Fortnightly Review.

THE PONTE SISTO AND SOME OTHER ROMAN BRIDGES.—The bridge carried away by the flood of A. D. 792, and called accordingly fractus ruptus tremulus in the Middle Ages, was rebuilt by Sixtus IV., who laid the first stone on April 29, 1473; it was first crossed by the crowd during the jubilee of 1475, and completed two years later. There is no doubt that the fund toward its reconstruction was supplied by the women of ill-fame, whose head-quarters were at the time in the filthy triangle between the Corso, the Babuino, and the Condotti. The bridge of Santa Maria or Ponte Rotto was rebuilt with the same impure money, as is shown by a codex in the State Archives, inscribed, "Book of the taxation imposed on women of ill-fame for the restoration of the Ponte di court concerning my relative was lying, and with one stroke of the pen—signed the paper! "I pity you from the bottom of my heart," he said; "you are an honest man, and an honest man, true to his convictions, is more dangerous to autocracy than an unprincipled rascal. Therefore I must punish you, though never was this duty more painful to me than now. God bless you, my son, and judge me mercifully if I should appear to be in the wrong."

And, once more embracing his victim, he led him to the door.

This story, every particular of which I have heard from my relative himself, who, at the beginning of the present reign, was pardoned and returned to St. Petersburg, depicts vividly the peculiarities of Nicholas' great but entirely deranged mind. The holiness of his position, as defender of autocracy, became a mania, an idée fixe, for which he would have sacrificed his life as he did those of others, if the occasion of doing so had presented itself. Nicholas may rave been called the "Brutus of autocracy." Like all the Princes of the Romanoff family, he had received but a miserable education. Accustomed from childhood to deal either with fawning courtiers or with severely-disciplined soldiers, he considered a soldier the ideal of a true citizen, implicit obedience the only civic virtue, and a barrack the model of political organization. In his mind a spirit of military discipline was to pervade the whole country. The free will of each citizen was limited by the scope of his private life. In all public matters the "holy power" of the Czar reigned paramount, and not only criticism, but a plain discussion, even a thorough knowledge of such matters on the part of a private citizen, was considered criminal.—The North American Review.

GUNPOWDER.—It has, of late, grown to be an axiom that the larger the gun the larger must be the grains of powder. A large grain of gunpowder burns slow because the fire is some time reaching the centre, and a slow-burning powder is what artillerists require for rifled guns. In a smooth-bore weapon the cannon-ball fits loosely, and may be expelled at a bound; but in rifled cannon the shot, so to speak, moves upon a sort of railway, and it would never do to get the shot into motion too suddenly. An undue strain would be exert d upon th gun, while the velocity of the shot would not be increased. For a rifled gun, therefore, a slow-burning charge is absolutely necessary, and this is to be secured only by reducing the surface to be kindled. In the case of the prismatic powder, the grains, if they may be called by that name, are so closely packed that no fire can get between them, and hence the action of kindling is still further reduced. Not only is the shape and density of powder grains now attracting particular attention, but the percentage of moisture contained in the material has also lately been under study. The amount of water in gunpowder to the minute extent existing in ordinary samples is found to influence combustion in a very marked degree, and nothing but an exhaustive series of trials can give sufficient data for practical application of so important an element in the science of explosives. In the meantime chemists are pointing out yet another source of uncertainty in the combustion of gunpowder, to which, notwithstanding their repeated warnings, little attention has hitherto been given. We mean the composition of the charcoal. According to the manner of preparing this, the method adopted for charring and the material employed, so does the chemical composition of the charcoal differ. Some samples, for instance, prove on analysis to contain 85 per cent. of carbon, while others have 20 per cent. This is scarcely to be expected that gunpowder made from the two kinds will have the same burning qualities, and yet with gunpowder manufacturers charcoal is charcoal, no matter how much its component parts of carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, and ash may differ. It is of little use, therefore, varying particular attention to the physical qualities of gunpowder so long as its chemical composition is almost entirely ignored.—Nature.

DEAN STANLEY AT SALEM.—It was an extraordinary sensation which I experienced, when, two days after landing in America, I found myself assisting at the celebration of the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the town of Salem, in Massachusetts. Around me were guests and speakers who derived their lineage and names from those who had first set foot on what was then a desolate wilderness. On one side was a distinguished Judge, the representative of Endicott, the first Governor, and on the other side the venerable and accomplished descendant of Winthrop, if not the first actual, the first undisputed, Governor of the colony. The office itself was well represented by the honored citizen who in direct succession filled it at that moment. On the right hand and the left were the Saltonstalls, the Bowditches, the Wilders, and the Higginsons, names obscure here, but household words there. Their progenitors were not shadowy phantoms—like the heroes of Ossian's poems—with the stars shining through them, but stout and stalwart yeomen or merchantmen or clergy, like ourselves; each home in the place claimed some connection with one or the other of these ancestral patriarchs; their portraits, their letters, the trees they had planted, the fruit they had reared, the churches they had built, were still among us. It was as if one were sitting at table far back in the opening of English or European history, with the grandsons or great-grandsons of Augustin and Horsa, or Clovis and Pepin. It gave that sense of near proximity to the beginnings of the State which is so marvelously reproduced in Sir Walter Scott's novel of "Ivanhoe," where, with perhaps a too close foreshortening of his picture, he makes us feel that Cedric and Athelstan, Front de Bœuf, and the Templars still breathed the spirit of the Saxon monarchy and of the Norman Conquest.—Dean Stanley in Macmillan's Magazine.

THE FIRST SLAVE CASE IN ENGLAND.—A planter brought to London a slave called James Somerset in 1772, and when he fell ill inhumanly turned him out of doors. Mr. Granville Sharp, a philanthropic barrister, found him in the street, placed him in a hospital, where he recovered his health, and then got him a situation as a servant. Two years after his old master arrested and imprisoned him as a runaway slave. Mr. Sharp brought the case before the Lord Mayor, who ordered Somerset to be set at liberty. But the master seized him violently in presence of the Lord Mayor and Mr. Sharp, on which the latter brought an action against the master for assault. The question of law was finally referred to the 12 judges, in February and May of that year, who decided unanimously that no man can be accounted a slave on English territory. This decision is often quoted, as though the soil of Great Britain made a slave free; but that is a legal fiction. Evidently, it is only when a slave (so called) comes within the reach of an English court that his freedom is declared. At that time the American colonies were beginning their quarrel with Great Britain, but had not renounced allegiance. All the colonies were subject to the common law of England; and if in Virginia as in America, there was a judge as upright and able as Lord Mansfield, and a philanthropist as zealous as Granville Sharp, it would seem that slavery might have been dissolved by a few judicial trials.—Fraser's Magazine.

SNUFFING A CANDLE ON THE STAGE.—Dumaine, as a pirate in "Le Fléau des Mers," was wont to excite the wonder of the spectators by extinguishing a candle with a pistol-shot. The trick was done by placing the light on a table near a small round hole in the "cloth" behind it, through which the prompter blew out the candle as Dumaine discharged the pistol. Actuated by jealousy, or a love of mischief, a fellow-actor one night covered the hole with a gold-beater's skin, and when the pirate fired and the prompter blew the candle flared away in triumph. Dumaine drew another pistol from his belt, but before he could pull the trigger, the malicious joker had torn away the skin, and by blowing through the hole made the candle go out, apparently of its own accord, while Dumaine was mentally abusing the innocent prompter for his pet point not coming off as usual.—Chambers's Journal.

MACAULAY'S DREAM.—Macaulay's head must have been very full of his work when he had the dream of a horror peculiar to his calling. "I have had a dream," (about his younger niece,) he writes to Mr. Ellis, "so vivid that I must tell it. She came to me, with a penitential face, and told me that she had a great sin to confess; that Pepys' "Diary" was all a forgery, and that she had forged it. I was in the greatest dismay. 'What! I have been quoting in reviews, and in my History, a forgery of yours as a book of the highest authority. How shall I ever hold up my head again?' I woke with the fright, poor Alice's supplicating voice still in my ears."—The Saturday Review.

THE PARISIAN FASHIONS.

LATEST ACHIEVEMENTS OF FOREIGN MODISTES.

EXTREME STYLES—EVENING TOILETS—THE "VOILETTE LOUP"—PREVAILING COLORS—FANCY DRESSES FOR CHILDREN.

Skirts mounted in plaits "à la religeuse" are in general use. Sleeves "à la religeuse" are also adopted by many ladies, as they are very comfortable for Winter wear. This shape is especially suitable for wrappers. Plaited nuns' stomachers are worn fastened to the waist. This fashion admirably suits persons who are fond of a plain style of dress. The two extremes are now worn; either very plain articles are resorted to, such as those referred to above, or the most extravagant styles, like large felt hats, with broad brims and feather trimmings, and long paletots of coarse, heavy cloth, buttoned from the neck to the feet. With the choice of these two kinds of dress at their disposal, many ladies return with pleasure to the style first described as more sensible and quite as comfortable. One never tires of the short skirts with "lavendière" draperies, and the basquine, with a vest underneath. The small gray jacket worn with these suits is also very comfortable.

The attention of the fair sex is now largely devoted to planning their evening toilets. These are made of very rich materials and heavily trimmed. The following descriptions will give an idea of the present Parisian fashion in these toilets: First may be named a toilet of satin pekin, in stripes of light red and ivory color, combined with ivory-colored faille. The body of the dress is of pekin, the front forming a Louis XV. waist, which is trimmed with a collar opening in shawl shape. The faille vest closes down the front by means of buttons made of Rhine pebbles. The apron is draped on the sides in three plaits. The middle of the skirt opens over faille flounces, the lower one extending to the back. The back of the dress is cut in princess shape. It is of pekin, and forms long scarfs, the ends of which are cut out in small tongues, the ivory-colored stripe forming the lining of the red stripe. These scarfs are lightly draped over a false faille skirt, with a train trimmed with flounces. The sleeves are of pekin, opening at the elbow and showing small faille ruffles. The lower part of the sleeve is cut out in small tongues like those on the ends of the scarfs. These fall over faille ruffles.

Another toilet is of salmon-colored faille. It consists of a basque waist and a skirt with a long train. The skirt and train are surrounded by three narrow green satin plaited flounces, in different shades. The front of the skirt is almost covered with two white gauze scarfs, closely embroidered in colors, the green predominating. These scarfs are gracefully draped in the back. The waist is cut in the neck in shawl-shape, with a square plastron in front. The latter is covered with small green satin plaitings and ruffles of embroidered gauze, and similar trimming surrounds the plastron and shawl-shaped opening in the neck. The back of the basque, behind the hip, is trimmed with a shell-shaped gauze trimming. From below falls a green satin trimming. Another equ

THE SELLER TO THE BUYER.

HISTORY AND CURIOSITIES OF ADVERTISING.

ITS GROWTH AND DEVELOPMENT FROM THE ANCIENT CRIER TO THE NEWSPAPER ADVERTISEMENT — ANNOUNCEMENTS IN ATHENS, ROME, HERCULANEUM, POMPEII, LONDON, PARIS, AND THE UNITED STATES — JOHN DRYDEN'S GUDGELING AND RICHARD STEELE'S JOKE.

It is an old custom. Doubtless it has existed in some form or other ever since men began to buy and sell. We have positive records that it was practiced more than 3,000 years ago, for the papyrus slips upon which the ancient Thebans advertised their runaway slaves and offered rewards for their recapture have been dug up among the ruins of Thebes. The public crier, herald, was the advertising medium of the Greeks. In this respect the natives of sea-girt Nantucket have sought up with the Athenians of the fourth Olymniad; in all other essentials of civilization they must be relegated to the remote and shadowy time dimly reflected in Hesiod's "Theogeny," which relates the genesis of the gods themselves. The crier of Athens was accompanied by a slave, who, on a soft-toned pipe, gave him the pitch in which his announcements were to be shouted. The fine ears of the Greeks would brook no hoarse bawlings, and correct pitch and accent were exacted of Eupolis, who cried salt in the streets, as rigidly as of Æschines, who declaimed against Cteaiphon in the Assembly. According to Apuleius, Venus was accustomed to offer sweet kisses as a reward to whoever would bring back the fugitive Eros. Herculaneum and Pompeii, overtaken by the volcano's wrath in the full tide of their proud, luxurious, sinful life, and sealed up for 1,800 years, have transmitted to us countless valuable and instructive relics of Roman civilization and society in A. D. 79, and, among others, their advertisements, which, by their number and character, show that the business advantages of the practice were appreciated by tradesmen of those cities. The Romans, borrowing from the Greeks, had on their houses a bulletin-board—a white tablet or piece of wall left white—called an album, upon which were painted announcements of their affairs. In the most frequented parts of the two buried cities the walls were covered with all kinds of business announcements. The passing public is informed that "the Ædile's troop of gladiators will fight on the 31st of May. There will be fights with wild animals, and awnings to keep off the sun. They were shrewd fellows, and understood how to "boil down" their advertisements into the briefest shape. For instance, the mention of the animals and awnings appears thus: "Venatio et vela erunt," or, more curtly yet, "Venat. vela." Proprietors of baths commonly advertised them as more urbico, "in the Roman fashion," and as possessing omnia commoda, "every convenience." The advertisements of houses and shops to let are very curious; but most diverting of all are the innumerable inscriptions, scratched on the walls here and there, giving the opinions of those who had been to the circuses or other exhibitions and wished to commend a favorite or fix some luckless upstart. Martial tells us that Roman book-sellers used to post up the titles of new works in and about their shops. Fancy the shop of Vettius placarded with this interesting announcement: "Ready this day, the 'Æneid,' a work of exceptional merit, by Mr. P. Virgilius Maro, of Mantua;" or that of his rival Carus, with this: "The publication of the 'Elegies' of Sextus Aurelius Propertius is unavoidably delayed through an unforeseen stroke of the copyists. Others have been procured, and the first edition of 20 copies will positively be ready on the 29th inst."

Advertising reached no higher development during the Dark Ages than it had attained in Athens. The crier was the organ of publicity, and his chief function was to proclaim the excellence of the wines sold by the tavern-keepers who employed him; and they were forced to employ him, for as early as 1258 the public criers of France had formed a trade-union, and had persuaded the King to decree that they might cry anybody's wine and collect pay for their services. But an old woman, who undertook to get up a revival by crying the mercies of the Lord and the sweets of the Gospel, was publicly burned. Tavern-keepers' signs had been invented long before, however. The Romans used a bush for a tavern-sign, whence the proverb, "Good wine needs no bush," the old Roman tosspot, like those of to-day, being sure to nose out a good article of Falernian whether it were advertised or not. The custom of hanging up the family arms in front of the houses of the nobility, which in the absence of the family were used as hostelries, gave rise to such tavern names as the "Blue Lion," the "King's Arms," the "White Plume;" and when the Frenchman, making his couch in the open air, says he proposes to sleep à la Belle Etoile, he does not mean, as some Yassar girl might construe it, "under the beautiful stars," but "at the Fine Star Inn." The use of signs and placards made but slow progress against the crier, however, till the invention of printing, when posters, written or printed, came into general favor. No posters from the press of Gutenberg and Faust are extant, but in Earl Spencer's library there is a broadside printed by Caxton's types about 1480, in which the first English printer informs the public that "if it please ony man, spiritnel or temporel, to bye our pyes at two or three comemoracio's of Salisbury's use, emprynted after the form of this present letre, whiche ben wel and truly correct, late hym come to Westmonester into the Almonestrye, at the reed pole, and he shall have them, good and chepe. Supplico stet cedula." These "pyes" were not the fatal mince nor the homely pumpkin, but a set of directions to priests as to Easter observances. Many of the early printers advertised their books on the backs of the volumes themselves, and scholars of eminence were often persuaded to write "puffs" for book-sellers. The following, in "Les Opuscules du Docteur Alwain," printed at Paris in 1518 by Chevalion & Gourmont, is, perhaps, the earliest specimen of the "puff:" "Gratias agami Claudio Chevallon et Ægydio Gourmont, qui pulchris typis et characteribus impressum opus hoc vitabunt prelio." For two centuries the poster continued to be the chief medium of advertising, and it was more commonly written than printed. A notice of this kind was called a Hiquis, because they were modeled after the Latin placards, which always began "Si quis"—"if anybody." The ballman's occupation was not entirely gone, however, and important and official announcements were voiced forth by him down to a comparatively recent day.

The first miscellaneous newspaper advertisements are found in a Dutch black-letter gazette of the time of James I., without name or date. The sheet which gives the news of Nov. 21, 1626, gives notice of the sale at auction of sugar, ivory, pepper, and tobacco, from the carcoes of prize vessels. About that time two newspapers were issued in Amsterdam, one called the Courant from Italy and Germany, and the other, Tidings from Various Quarters. Advertisements were quite numerous in these journals, and in the issue of the Tydingher for June 2, 1635, there is an advertisement of a curious contribution to the Papess Joanna controversy, a book entitled "Papal Sanctimony," by Licentiate Grim, "British preacher and Professor at the University of Wesel," attempting to prove that Pope John VIII. was a woman.

The outbreak of the civil war gave rise to the first attempts at publishing a newspaper in England. Nathaniel Butler, a bookseller and pamphleteer, issued, in 1622, a printed weekly newspaper. The first copy bore date of Aug. 2. It did not thrive, and was even ridiculed by ment of letters. Ben Jonson declared that the information it contained "had come to us by no news by being printed." It was 30 years or more after this unsuccessful venture before the Mercurius Politicus was published. Its early numbers contain few advertisements, but some of them possess more than ordinary interest. In the issue for Dec. 26, 1658, is an advertisement of "that excellent and by all physicians approved, China drink, called by the Chinoeses Teha, by other nations Tay, alias Tee." Tea was brought to England as early as 1635, and was sold at from £6 to £10 per pound. A Turkey merchant named Edwards brought the first bag of coffee to England, and in 1625 his Greek servant, Pasqua Rosee, opened the first coffee-house in London; though a Jew named Jacobs had opened one in Oxford a year or two earlier. One of Rosee's handbill advertisements is preserved in the British Museum. It attributes to the fragrant berry a curative virtue over every ill that flesh inherits. Chocolate came later, and was first advertised in the Public Advertiser of June, 1657. Perhaps the commonest advertisements in the Public Advertiser, the London Gazette, and their contemporaries of the latter half of the seventeenth century were those offering rewards for runaway slaves. West India trading vessels took many negro boys to England, and they were in demand among the wealthy for pages. The Gazetteer of April 18, 1769, announces as for sale "a chestnut gelding, a trim-whiskey, and a well-made, good-tempered black boy."

Sir Robert L'Estrange was the first Englishman who recognized the importance of liberal advertising as a help to business enterprises. But neither the Intelligencer, the News, nor the Mercury, with which he was associated between 1663 and 1668, were successful, though they contained more advertisements than any previous newspaper. John Houghton, an apothecary and dealer in tea, coffee, and chocolate, had better luck with his Collection for the Improvement of Husbandry & Trade, started in 1692. By the following year he had a good patronage. But, instead of allowing his advertisers to speak for themselves, he published their wants in this droll fashion:

"I want a housekeeper surely well accomplished for that purpose. 'Tis to wait on a gentleman.

"I know of valuable estates to be sold.

"I want several apprentices for a valuable tradesman.

"I know of several curious women that would wait on ladies to be housekeeper.

"Now I want a good usher's place in a grammar-school."

Experience doubtless taught Mr. Houghton that unreserved commendation of his promiscuous customers was likely to get him into scrapes, so he qualified some of his notices as follows:

"I know a peruke-maker that pretends to make perukes extraordinarily fashionable, and will sell good pennyworths; I can direct to him."

"If any one wants a wet-nurse, I can help them, as I am informed, to a very good one."

Here is a model book review from his pen:

"With delight I have read over this book, and I think it a very good one."

Some advertisements of more than ordinary interest can be culled from the public prints of the time of the Restoration. In the Mercurius Politicus of March 6, 1660, just two months before Charles II. was proclaimed King of England, John Milton calmly informs the public that, by reason of the printer's haste, "the errata not coming in time, it is desired that the following faults may be amended," citing some typographical errors in his "Ready and Easy Way to Establish a Free Commonwealth." In less than two months the poet was a proscribed fugitive, and his works had been burned by the common hangman. Charles II. was terribly pestered by dog-stealers, and the Mercurius Publicus—for titles were in name altered after the Restoration—contains frequent advertisements for his Majesty's canine property. One of these—perhaps penned by the hand of the monarch himself—breaks out pathetically: "Will they never cease robbing his Majesty? Must he not keep a dog? This dog's place, (though better than some imagine,) is the only place which nobody offers to beg." He kept no end of dogs evidently, as the royal advertisements call for greyhounds, spaniels, mastiffs, &c. Quack medicines were plentifully advertised at this time, and then, as now, the reader was always particularly cautioned to "beware of counterfeits." The London Gazette—which is the only one of these early journals that is still in existence—was first published Aug. 29, 1642, though the series issued by royal authority did not begin till 1665. In that year of dreadful memory its columns bear witness to the fatal work of the great plague of London. In the Domestick Intelligence of Dec. 23, 1679, appears the following paragraph: "Upon the 17th inst. Mr. Dryden, the great poet, was set upon in Rose-street, in Covent Garden, by three persons, who, calling him a rogue, knoct him down and dangerously wounded him, but upon his crying out murther they made their escape; it is conceived that they had their pay beforehand, and designed not to rob him but to execute on him some Feminine, if not Popish, vengeance." The instigation of this assault was ascribed to Rochester and to the Duchess of Portsmouth, both of whom the poet had offended. Several advertisements offering £50 reward for the apprehension of the assailants were published, but fruitlessly. When Dryden died, in 1700, a howling advertisement was published in the Post Boy, May 4, calling for elegies upon the deceased from the pens of "gentlemen of the two famous universities," and in response to this and others of its kind a flood of sarcastic productions in all languages poured into the shop of Henry Playford, whose name was mentioned in the advertisement. The first advertisement of a coming performance at a playhouse is said, by an English authority, to have been published in the Flying Post of July 4, 1700, and it announces the play of "Don Quixote" at the "New Theatre in Lincoln's-Inn-Fields." The larger theatres soon took up the practice, however, and a few years later their announcements regularly appeared. Advertisements in those days were commonly about eight lines long, and cost 1 shilling each insertion.

The Tatler was in the flesh about this time, and its columns occasionally furnish a diverting morsel. Take this, for instance, undoubtedly, from the pen of Richard Steele:

"Any ladies who have any particular stories of their acquaintance which they are willing privately to make public, may send 'em by the penny post to Isaac Bickerstaff, Esq., inclosed to Mr. John Morpheus, near Stationers' Hall."

It is vastly amusing, too, to run the eye over a series of seemingly advertisements in the Tatler during the year 1710, exposing the pretentions of an "upstart in astrology, who has publicly endeavored to persuade the world that he is the late John Partridge who died on the 28th of March." The joke of it was that Partridge was not dead at all and was driven nearly wild by these audacious and premature obituary notices. The growth of advertising was temporarily checked in 1712 by a tax of 12 pence laid upon every advertisement, imposed with other similar measures to raise money for Queen Anne's war with France. This tax was increased at various times, and its highest point was reached in 1822, when the charge was 3 shilling 6 pence. In 1833 the tax was abolished. Advertisements of pugilistic combats between women and of the sale of negro boys were not uncommon during the first half of the eighteenth century in the London papers. Others, of a plainly immoral character—the precursor of the modern "personal," as it appears in certain journals—making assignations or seeking the acquaintance of "the two young ladies who noticed gentlemen on Fleet-street," &c., often appeared during the reigns of the first two Georges. The manners of the court were the manners of the people. The London Daily Post of March 15, 1740, publishes a funny advertisement, beginning "Mary Southall, successor to John Southall, the first and only person that ever found out the nature of bugs, author of a treatise on those nauseous, venomous insects, gives notice that she hath followed the same line of business." Perhaps she held, with that profound thinker, Opizius Francorius, the Emanuel Kant of flea literature, that bed-bugs as well are spiritus familiares fæminarum.

The growth of advertising from this time on was slow but sustained, until the early years of the nineteenth century when the methods of the business had reached their full development, being much what they are at the present day, though, of course, they have won a much wider application. The main lines of development have been the same in France and the United States as in England, and the history of advertising in the London press is its history for the whole world, except, of course, in details. The American mind has shown its originality in this, as in everything else. Droll advertisements abound in this country of unrestrained wit. It was a Pennsylvania grocer who painted on a grave-yard fence, "Use Smith's bottled ale if you would keep out of here." It was an American "statuary" firm who announced that "those who buy long noses of us look with pride and satisfaction on the graves of their friends." It was an Illinois undertaker who wrote to a dying man, "Thinking it not imprudent to call your attention to the inclosed advertisement of my abundant stock of ready-made coffins." And of course it was the American Principal of an academy who thus announced the opening of the Fall term:

DEAR BOYS: Trouble begins Sept. 15.

Alas, it was a Yankee auctioneer who, in advertising a "palace on the right banks of the Hudson," put in something about the "young moon" and an "angel that may be seen each night dressing with golden tip-toes on the green sward," and then added: "N.B.—This angel goes with the place." Even the British press furnishes many singular advertisements—few humorous ones. The réclame, or editorial puff, is common in their columns. It was related of the Figaro, a year or two ago, that it one day contained a model and highly commendatory "puff" of a certain English goods called "homespun," for gentlemen's suits. A few days later, M. De Villemessant, its editor, was seen on the Boulevard clad in a stylish and becoming suit of "homespun."

But the curiosities of advertising is a theme rich in materials. We have culled some of the most interesting from the vast store of them collected and recently published by Mr. Henry Sampson, of London, attempting rather to set forth outlines and striking features than to give a connected history of this vast branch of modern business.

THE GROWTH OF NEW-YORK.

IMPROVEMENT OF LOCALITIES.

BUILDING AND REBUILDING IN THE TRADE —FIRST AND SECOND CLASS DWELLINGS AND TENEMENT-HOUSES — CHURCHES, STORES, SHOPS, AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

From the same tables showing the operations of the Building Department from which were taken the figures presented in a former article, exhibiting the growth and improvement of the City at large, some still more interesting facts may be extracted of the changes made in the several ward divisions of the City during the past 11 years. The enormous growth of the City northward, as shown by the building returns for the Nineteenth, Twenty-second, and Twelfth Wards, which take in the territory on either side of the Park and the neighborhood of Harlem, and the invasion by business structures of what were once the poorest and most densely populated sections of the lower part of the City, are made evident in the tables given below. In the first of them is shown the amount expended for building during the past 11 years in each ward of the City, and in the Westchester district during the years that has been part of the City. The wards are arranged in the order of the magnitude of the same. While the second column shows the number of buildings built, the third gives the average value of each of these. From these figures it will be seen that while the up-town wards show the greatest number of buildings erected, the lower wards show the most costly structures. The last column of the table gives the order of the wards to each other by the average cost of the buildings erected in them. The Third Ward, which stands first in the cost of its buildings, is the last in the number erected. The Twelfth Ward, which is near the head of the list for number, is the last for cost. The Third Ward takes in the lower section of Broadway and its vicinage; the Twelfth is the Harlem end of Third-avenue. The famous old Sixth Ward, the Five Points district, stands sixth on the list for the cost of the buildings, which are replacing the dreadful dens of crime and poverty from which it derived its fame.

TABLE SHOWING THE BUILDING AND REBUILDING FROM 1868 TO 1878, BY WARDS, WITH ESTIMATED COST.

Ward.	Aggregate Estimated Cost.	Number of Buildings.	Average Cost of Buildings.	Order by Cost.
XIX	$104,358,164	6,179	$15,200	12
XXII	98,478,295	3,889	12,800	15
XII	29,104,063	3,601	8,380	22
XXI	18,483,851	722	22,900	3
XVIII	11,274,659	993	23,000	2
XX	10,501,970	951	11,000	18
XVII	7,971,475	596	13,380	14
VIII	7,598,530	292	26,000	7
V	7,346,327	254	29,000	4
I	5,083,530	434	11,700	16
XV	5,011,700	167	30,000	5
XI	4,529,070	412	10,900	19
XVI	4,505,150	426	10,500	20
XIV	4,404,889	231	19,000	10
VI	4,399,035	164	26,800	6
X	4,120,800	350	11,400	17
III	3,393,100	97	35,000	1
IV	3,277,980	97	34,700	3
XIII	3,128,120	211	14,800	13
VII	2,940,795	292	10,000	21
II	2,838,950	81	35,500	2
IX	2,158,911	123	17,500	11
Annexed District for the Years 1874 to 1878, inclusive.
XXIII	$2,264,093	616	3,600	.....
XXIV	354,177	158	2,300	.....

The distribution of first-class dwellings shows the growth of certain sections, formerly unoccupied lands, into resident localities of the best sort. As a rule to which there can be only very few exceptions, every house put up in the five wards first on the list represents an actual addition to a previously existing aggregate. In the lower wards it is probable that the new houses take the place of old and inferior ones.

NUMBER OF FIRST-CLASS DWELLINGS BUILT IN EACH WARD.

Ward.	Number Built.	Ward.	Number Built.
XIX	3,286	I	11
XII	1,733	VII	5
XXII	820	XIV	4
XXI	101	XIII	3
XX	63	VI	3
IX	45	VIII	2
XVIII	33	V	1
XVI	26	X	1
XVII	13

First, Second, Third, Fourth, and Eleventh Wards, none.

Average estimated cost of a first-class dwelling, $16,000.

Total estimated cost of first-class dwellings for the past 11 years, $1,000,000.

It is worth noting where and how many of those small houses fitted for a home for one or two families have been built. It is a very poor showing which the annexed table presents in point of numbers. Such houses are included under the heading of second-class when up the bulk of Philadelphia. Here they are a rare luxury. A small family in moderate circumstances have only the choice in New-York of taking lodgings or rooms in a first-class house, or going to a tenement, disguised under the title of French flat.

NUMBER OF SECOND-CLASS DWELLINGS BUILT IN EACH WARD.

Ward.	Number Built.	Ward.	Number Built.
XII	694	XVIII	9
XIX	378	XIII	8
XXII	299	I	8
XX	62	VII	7
XXI	61	IV	5
IX	30	VI	4
XVI	28	XIV	4
XVII	18	V	2
XI	16	X	1
VIII	13	II	1
XV	10	III	None

Total estimated cost of second-class dwellings for the past 11 years, $6,228,868.

Average estimated cost of a second-class dwelling, $3,500.

In the Westchester district the building of second-class dwellings has been going on since 1874 with some activity, 297 having been erected, at a total estimated cost of $996,825.

It will be seen that the building of tenement-houses has followed very nearly the movement in the direction of the middle and up-town wards. They will, as a rule, occupy the central portions of the wards, and as the streets recede from the Park toward the river the rents rise and fall. Hence the greater size of the houses changes for the worse, until they end in masses of tenements. It might, perhaps, be assumed, from the figures given in the annexed table, that the up-town wards had become the great tenement-house localities; but this is not the case. The Nineteenth and Twenty-second Wards are of great extent; the others are of narrower area, and the figures given in the third column show the number of persons to an inhabited house in each ward of the City. The se figures are taken from the census returns of 1875. It will be noticed that the number of persons to each house in the purely business section of the City, including the Second and Third Wards, corresponds closely to those for the nearly built up area in the upper portion. The most densely-populated part lies between them.

TENEMENT-HOUSES ERECTED IN EACH WARD OF THE CITY DURING THE PAST 11 YEARS.

Ward.	No. Built.	Persons to a House in the Ward.	Ward.	No. Built.	Persons to a House in the Ward.
XIX	1,799	14.02	VII	193	21.36
XXII	1,126	14.31	XVI	171	14.38
XII	767	9.65	XIV	127	23.77
XX	544	18.47	VIII	82	14.82
XXI	395	14.77	V	54	21.34
XVII	498	26.39	VI	57	25.80
X	288	25.02	I	50	20.19
XI	257	25.54	XV	44	11.68
XVIII	191	17.32	Y	24	14.44
XIII	216	22.23	V	5	14.02
IX	195	13.85	II	3	11.24

Total estimated cost of tenement-houses for the past 11 years, $32,142,820.

As connected with the subject of the movement of population, it is worthy of note how many churches and public buildings have been erected. They will be seen to accompany population. The public buildings referred to are public libraries, museums, hospitals, and other charitable institutions, places of amusement, and also engine-houses and Police stations.

NUMBER OF CHURCHES ERECTED.

Ward.	Number Built.	Ward.	Number Built.
XIX	25	XXI	4
XII	20	XVI	4
XXII	19	XVIII	4
XX	10	IX	3
XVII	6	VIII	2

In the Eleventh, Second, Fifth, and Thirteenth Wards, one each. In the Third, First, Tenth, Fifteenth, Fourth, Sixth, Seventh, and Fourteenth, none.

Total estimated cost of churches for the past 11 years, $5,721,609, averaging each.

NUMBER OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS ERECTED.

Ward.	Number Built.	Ward.	Number Built.
XIX	40	XIV	4
XII	27	XVI	4
XXII	17	IX	4
XVIII	13	V	4
XX	9	IV	3
XXI	9	III	2
XVII	5	XV	2
X	5	VI	2

In the Eighth, Eleventh, First, and Seventh Wards, 1 in the Thirteenth and Second, none.

Total estimated cost of public buildings for the past 11 years, $12,786,250.

The table given below is fully as suggestive of the changes going on in this City as any figures given in the report. The average cost of a first-class store is about $40,000. Even in some first-class streets of the City, for instance, the upper part of Broadway, there are stores—and they are not few—which cost very much above the average price. It seems to be only a question of a short time when the whole of the first Ward will be converted into first-class business section. Just as the chief building operations in the second district of the City are in the Nineteenth Ward, all of which cost very much above the average price, it

JAN 1879

INDEX TO CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS.

AMUSEMENTS—Eleventh Page—5th, 6th, and 7th cols.
AUCTION SALES—Eleventh Page—5th col.
BALLS—Eleventh Page—7th col.
BOARDING AND LODGING—Eleventh Page—4th col.
BOARD WANTED—Eleventh Page—4th col.
BUSINESS CHANCES—Eleventh Page—4th col.
BUSINESS NOTICES—Seventh Page—6th col.
CITY HOUSES TO LET—Eleventh Page—2d col.
CITY ITEMS—Seventh Page—6th col.
CITY REAL ESTATE—Eleventh Page—2d col.
COPARTNERSHIP NOTICES—Eighth Page—7th col.
COUNTRY REAL ESTATE—Eleventh Page—2d col.
DANCING—Eleventh Page—7th col.
DEATHS—Seventh Page—6th col.
DIVIDENDS—Eleventh Page—3d col.
DRY GOODS—Eleventh Page—1st and 2d cols.
ELECTIONS—Eleventh Page—3d col.
EUROPEAN—Eleventh Page—5th col.
FINANCIAL—Eleventh Page—3d col.
FURNISHED ROOMS—Eleventh Page—4th col.
FURS—Eleventh Page—1st col.
HAIR-DRESSING—Eleventh Page—7th col.
HELP WANTED—Eighth Page—6th col.
HOUSES & ROOMS WANTED—Eleventh Page—2d col.
ICE-CREAM—Eleventh Page—5th col.
INSTRUCTION—Eighth Page—6th col.
INSURANCE—Eleventh Page—2d col.
LOST AND FOUND—Eighth Page—6th col.
MARRIAGES—Seventh Page—6th col.
MILLINERY—Eleventh Page—1st col.
MISCELLANEOUS—Eleventh Page—5th col.
MUSICAL—Eleventh Page—7th col.
NEW PUBLICATIONS—Seventh Page—7th col.
RAILROADS—Eleventh Page—6th col.
RELIGIOUS NOTICES—Seventh Page—7th col.
REWARDS—Eighth Page—7th col.
ROOMS WANTED—Eleventh Page—4th col.
SHIPPING—Eleventh Page—1st col.
SITUATIONS WANTED—Eighth Page—7th col.
SPECIAL NOTICES—Seventh Page—6th col.
STEAM-BOATS—Eleventh Page—3d col.
STORES, &c., TO LET—Eleventh Page—4th col.
TEACHERS—Eighth Page—6th col.
WATCHES, JEWELRY, &c.—Eleventh Page—4th col.

The New-York Times.

TRIPLE SHEET.

NEW-YORK, SUNDAY, JAN. 26, 1879.

This morning THE DAILY TIMES consists of TWELVE PAGES. Every news-dealer is bound to deliver the paper in its complete form, and any failure to do so should be reported at the publication office.

The Signal Service weather reports indicate for this region to-day clear or partly cloudy weather, a slight fall in temperature, which will then slowly rise, rising barometer, and northerly winds shifting to easterly and southerly to-night.

THE QUANTITY OF MONEY.

It is a matter of history that there is no fallacy so taking and persistent as that which associates the idea of prosperity with the prevalence of high prices and a great abundance of money; accustomed, as everybody is, to regard money as the equivalent of all purchasable things, there are few who ever stop to remember, much less to understand, the distinction between money and wealth, and the fact that no abundance in the aggregate quantity of the former can possibly cause the individual man to have "enough." The plaint that there is not money enough, really means that certain persons have not enough. In repeating the stale assertion that insufficient money in the country is the source of all trouble, and that "contraction" has been throttling industry, few take the trouble to know what the volume of currency is. The country, which has been for five years past in the sobering process, is perhaps not yet quite sober enough to realize how drunk it has been financially, and some enlightenment as to the extent of currency inflation may be of use. The following table shows the volume of circulation at sundry periods before and since 1860, the amounts in the second table—except the last column—being stated in thousands.

Year.	Bank Paper.	Specie.	Total.	Per Capita.
1835..	$121,032,292	$59,845,994	$180,878,286	$12 07
1840..	113,664,443	34,574,829	148,239,272	8 63
1845..	89,608,711	44,241,242	133,849,953	6 66
1850..	131,386,526	45,379,345	176,745,871	7 60
1855..	186,982,223.	53,944,546	240,896,763	8 93
1860..	207,102,477	83,594,537	290,697,014	9 30

National Year.	Bank Paper.	Legal Tenders.	Coin.
1865	$146,138	$132,688	$18,072
1870	299,767	356,000	18,460
1873	347,287	356,000	19,863
1875	354,408	375,771	8,056
1878	319,652	348,743	30,668

Year.	Fractionals.	Total.	Per Capita.
1865	$23,006	$321,904	$17 70
1870	39,878	714,103	18 52
1873	44,799	767,934	19 20
1875	42,129	780,378	18 40
1878	16,150	713,233	16 00

We exclude from the last table several hundred millions of compound-interest and short-term notes, which are improperly treated as currency by those who seek to show contraction. It is true that banking reports before the war were insufficient, and that the figures given cannot be supposed to include all bank issues which obtained some circulation; but this incompleteness of the reports cannot have been very large as late as 1860, and if we add $20,000,000, or about 10 per cent., to the bank paper as an allowance, we have $310,000,000 as the total circulation in that year. The bank circulation alone now exceeds the total which existed then. To this $320,000,000 must be added $346,000,000 legal tenders and $46,000,000 of fractional currency and bank coin, making a total of $713,000,000, besides some $40,000,000 of silver and an indefinite quantity of gold to come, which, according to the Congressional behest, is not to displace any paper. Yet none the less does the inflationist prate that "there is not money enough in the country."

Since 1860 the currency per head has nearly doubled, and the volume has increased 130 per cent., taking $310,000,000 as the volume for that year. In the previous thirty years population increased 145 per cent. and nine States were added to the Union; imports and exports increased respectively 411 and 442 per cent., and the currency increased 178 per cent. In the eighteen years since 1860 population has increased 50 per cent., imports and exports have increased respectively 28 and 85 per cent., and the currency has increased 130 per cent. The contrast may be more clearly shown thus:

Thirty years, 1830–1860. Increase in	From	To	Per cent.
Population	12,866,000	31,443,000	145
Total imports	$70,877,000	$362,166,000	411
Total exports	73,850,000	400,122,000	442
Cotton manufact'rs.	26,000,000	116,000,000	346
Currency	104,000,000	290,700,000	178

Eighteen years, 1860–78. Increase in	From	To	Per cent.
Population	31,443,000	47,000,000	50
Total imports	$362,166,000	$466,872,000	28
Total exports	400,122,000	743,043,000	85
Cotton manufact'rs.	116,000,000	200,000,000	70
Currency	310,000,000	713,000,000	130

It will, of course, be understood that estimates are used here in some cases, for example, for population and value of cotton manufactures in 1878, and for population at quinquennial periods. The figures given as the currency in 1830, $104,000,000, cover what could be ascertained, but is clearly too low; hence the increase stated above, 178 per cent. in 1830–60, is too great, even omitting in the comparison to add the 10 per cent. allowance to the currency in 1860. It is probably true that all the returns of circulation up to the last quarter-century were understated, but this only shows again that the increase in 1830–60 was less than given here. It is proper, also, to say that the volume of currency per capita is of no particular consequence, and that we give it only because it is popularly supposed to be significant; it indicates, however, the same disproportionate increase of currency which the three comparisons indicate. If reasonable allowance is made for the understatement in 1830, the probability is that the per cent. of increase was not widely different in the two periods, although the actual increase was much larger in the latter. As the figures stand, however, the contrast is that in eighteen years past the increase of currency, absolutely, although not relatively, has been greater than in the previous thirty, while the increase, absolutely and relatively, in population, trade, and all forms of growth, has probably been less than in the former period.

This presentation of the case is eloquent, but it is not quite complete. If increase of prices since 1860 is cited as explanation, it is met by the palpable fact that prices of food, of textiles, and manufactured articles, of transportation, and of necessaries generally, are lower than in 1860; indeed, the dollar-prices of many necessaries are really lower than ever before. Moreover, the volume of the average daily exchanges in the Clearing-house here has quadrupled in the last twenty-five years, and their totals for every month represent an amount probably equivalent to a movement of three times the present volume of money, but not more than 4 to 6 per cent. of this was accomplished by actual use of money. The means of communication have grown enormously. Checks, bills of exchange, and telegraphic transfers stand in place of the transfer of money, and the whole system of Clearing-houses and settlement by offset operates to diminish the volume of money required. But, in fact, there has been an enormous increase in that volume, as already shown—an increase largely disproportionate to the material development of the country. This increase is made all the more disproportionate and unnecessary by the increased employment of substitutes for money, and it is not now taken up by swollen prices, for prices are extraordinarily low. The war-distention of prices has disappeared, but that of money has not. How is the inference avoidable that there is really a large engorgement of the circulation still, which is prejudicial to industrial health, and ought to be removed?

CLOSE CONNECTION AT PORTS.

It has been said that a difference of a fraction of a cent in the cost of producing a yard of cloth will determine what country is to supply the markets of the world with the particular fabric which it produces at this small margin of advantage. But we must suppose the presence of that condition so frequently expressed in the phrase, "other things being equal." No doubt, where competition turns entirely on cost of production, the community that produces cheapest will command the market so far as it is able to meet its demands. But other things seldom are equal, and various elements besides cost of production enter into the problems of trade. A powerful factor in determining results is cost of transportation, or the addition to prices occasioned by the carrying and handling necessary to bring commodities from the hands of producers to those of consumers. The business of transportation, which has developed to such enormous proportions within comparatively few years, has been, and is, in a position somewhat anomalous, inasmuch as it may, to an extent, defy the ordinary laws of competition. Each of the great distributing ports of this country, for instance, is connected with the chief source of supply for its commerce by one great controlling line of transportation, managed by the leading spirits of a single corporation. One man, or a small combination of men, has a grasp of tremendous power upon the commerce of a great city. The cost of freightage being a determining element of great force in the competition between our commercial seaports, these men may, by raising or lowering that cost, control the currents of trade as by a gigantic valve whose lever is in their hands. By concerting their plans, they can give direction to commerce almost at will, determining what share each port shall have, guided in their action only by what they can agree upon as most conducive to their own mutual profit. The margin over which they can operate may be sufficient to overcome advantages of position and thwart all efforts not consistent with their plans. If the autocrat of the principal line between New-York and Chicago can make an arrangement for increasing his gains by diverting traffic from its natural course, it is in his power to do so, but in the long run, and in a rude way, his advantage and that of the corporation under his control must conform, in the main, to that of the communities concerned.

An important point in the line of communication between production and consumption is that of transshipment for foreign markets. It is a point at which a considerable item of the general cost of transportation comes in, and where economizing may be most effectually applied. In the sharp competition between our North Atlantic ports for a share in the foreign commerce of the country, much attention is bestowed just at this time upon terminal facilities and the attainment of the closest possible connection between the incoming and outgoing currents. The attempt is made to reduce the break and interruption at the port of transshipment to the lowest terms. Boston, the principal rival of New-York in the business of shipping the vast supplies that come from the West to the markets of Europe, has a favorable situation as to her immediate water front. Her wharves lie along a semi-circle formed by the bay, and her railroads come in from three of the four main points of the compass without natural impediment to prevent freight from being brought to the very water's edge. An expanse of unimproved land just south of the city, belonging to the State, is favorably located for a grand freight entrepot, and a plan is in progress of execution for converting it to this use. It is just now proposed to construct an elevated freight railroad that shall bring to this terminus the lines coming in upon the opposite side of the city, and at the same time pass along the old wharves and their warehouses to gather up the freight from local sources and from the coasting vessels that harbor there. The advantage of this arrangement to the City of Boston, if fully carried out, is sufficiently obvious.

The natural advantages of the port of New-York, both with reference to its location upon the general coast-line and its immediate situation, are too familiar to need any setting forth, but that which gives her the grandest facilities for docks and for the shipment from her own warehouses of outward-bound merchandise becomes an obstacle to close connection between the traffic coming in from the West and that departing from her piers for the other side of the Atlantic. She is separated from the vast continent on that side by a river that is untunneled and unbridged for many miles. Railroads enter upon her territory only from the north, and this fact alone fortifies the advantages possessed by the most powerful transportation line upon which her trade is dependent. The problem of close connection is for her a difficult one, and one that she has hardly touched as yet. The gain to her commerce by the arrangement said to have been made by the Central Road for shipping its freight direct from a station on the North River at Sixty-fifth-street, is, to say the least, very dubious. The purpose seems to be to make through rates from the West to European ports, New-York serving merely as a convenient stopping-place for transferring freight from cars to steamers. Merchandise, instead of being consigned to merchants here and by them sent to Europe, will be sent direct from Chicago to Liverpool and Havre, merely pausing here for transshipment from land to water carriage. It is difficult to see how local trade is to make any more gain by this arrangement than it would if the City were altogether avoided by that much of Western produce on its way to foreign ports. The advantage will accrue, as it is intended to do, wholly to the parties to the arrangement, and to the loss rather than the gain of New-York business men.

Another form of close connection is that obtained by the lading and unlading of steamers at Jersey City, but though the shipping thus effected belongs virtually to the business of New-York, it is at best an awkward arrangement. Not all the out-going cargoes are brought in by the railroads terminating there, while most of those that come in is destined for the warehouses of this City. It is practically a matter of carrying on the shipping process on both sides of a wide river at once. New-York has a start which she is not likely to lose in her accumulation of capital, her established commercial appliances, and her financial agencies, she has facilities unsurpassed for dock accommodations, convenient to the active centres of trade. The public ownership and management of the water-front property ought to be an advantage rather than otherwise. The problem which she has to solve is that of abolishing the other shore of the Hudson River as a stopping-place for traffic, or annihilating for commercial purposes the barrier between the City and the continent whose chief port it is and is destined to be.

POSTAL ABSURDITIES.

An author, residing in a Western city, sent by mail to his friend in New-York a copy of his book, on the fly-leaf of which was written something like this: "Wolfgang Winkelried Brown, with the compliments of Washington Potts." The New-York Post Office clerks descried this nefarious inscription, and "charged up" the book at letter-postage rates. Deducting the 28 cents paid by the sender, there remained $2 25 which was due from Wolfgang Winkelried Brown. A person in Osiris, Ohio, desiring that his favorite weekly paper, published in New-York, should print certain familiar verses, wrote on a postal card a request to that effect, and, to make all sure, pasted the poem on the back of the card. The recipient of this valuable communication, for reasons which will appear further on, was compelled to pay 5 cents postage thereupon. A New-York citizen, having noticed in THE TIMES an editorial article which he thought would interest his friend in Boston, went to a window in the New-York Post-Office and asked for "a newspaper wrapper," for which he paid one cent. Putting this about the copy of THE TIMES, he dropped it into the box. The weight of that copy of the paper happened to be two ounces and one-sixteenth. Being weighed, it was thrown into the waste basket as insufficiently paid, and before the sender left the building it was on the way to the furnace. Subsequently, the expectant Boston man wrote to his New-York friend: "There is a thief in your Post-Office."

In each one of these instances the postal authorities proceeded according to law as expounded by the rulings of the Post Office Department. The statutes of the United States provide that the sender of a book may write on the fly-leaf "Wolfgang Winkelried Brown, from Washington Potts." More than this tends to mischief. Therefore, Mr. Brown paid $2 25 for "the compliments of" Mr. Potts. The gentleman in Osiris might have put his printed poem in an unsealed envelope, which, being sent to the New-York publisher, would have been charged as a printed circular—one cent. The law says that nothing shall be "attached" to a postal card. The poor little verses were pasted on with a thick composition, and the whole thing then weighed more than a half ounce. It was unclassified, the "attached" newspaper clipping being unlawful. Therefore, as unclassified matter, it was chargeable with letter postage. It weighed more than a half ounce, and it required six cents postage. But one cent having been paid for the postal card, only five cents were due. And this was collected. In the case of the newspaper which was confiscated, with its one-cent stamp, the sender only knew that a newspaper wrapper (costing one cent) was a newspaper wrapper. He never dreamed that a Post Office clerk was required to weigh his paper, and, if it was not prepaid at the rate of one cent for every two ounces and fraction thereof, to throw it into the waste basket.

Generally speaking, it is safe to say that the postal service of the country is administered on the theory that the people served must be put to every possible inconvenience. Indeed, this is true of almost every branch of our Government. With War, Navy, Interior, and Law affairs, the people have very little to do. We come immediately in contact with the Post Office and Treasury Departments. Of the last-named branch of the public service, the Customs touch us most nearly. We all travel, sooner or later. And all the Custom-houses on the face of the earth, with all their objectionable features combined, are not so vexatious, frivolous, insolent, and exhaustive of patience and Christian charity as the American Custom-house, wherever found. Next to this comes the American Post Office with its intricate rulings, its cumbrous system, and its wire-drawn classifications. The Post Office people merely administer the laws. The Post Office Department is a court of final appeal, and its rulings are law to all subordinate officials. These rulings are based upon the laws of Congress. And the laws of Congress are the work of men who know as much about the details of Post Office business as a monkey knows about trigonometry. Congress, by its burdensome statutes, seems to be anxious to worry the people who have transactions with the Post Offices. In this endeavor Congress is ably seconded by the Post Office Department with its capricious rulings.

Of these rulings let us give a few examples: There was no classification of mail matter until 1825. On the statutes of years preceding that date all present classifications are made. The type-writer is a modern invention, and matter from that machine is unknown to Post Office law. Next came the papyrograph, and then the electric pen. These machines produce matter which is merely writing by machinery, whether in single copies or duplicate. Confronted with a new problem, the Post Office authorities at Washington flew to the statutes. These were silent on the subject of machine-writing. Therefore, matter produced by the type-writer, papyrograph, or electric pen was "unclassified." As we have seen in the case of the pasted postal card, unclassified mail matter is chargeable with letter postage. The agents of these machines moved upon Washington. Reinforced by Senators and Congressmen, they coerced the department into reversing its decision, and matter produced by the papyrograph and the electric pen was admitted to the mails as third-class matter, the type-writer being "left out in the cold." Then, the pressure being removed, the department again ruled that even this concession would be revoked March 4, 1879. So, unless Congress comes to the rescue, type-writer, papyrograph, and electric pen will produce matter subject to letter rates after March 4. This seems frivolous. In like manner, a printed prices-current, in which "$14 50 per case" was changed to "$14 25 per case," in pencil, in consequence of a change in the tariff, was charged letter rates, under a decision of the Post Office Department to this effect: "A prices-current, partly in writing, is subject to letter rates of postage when sent in the mails." In like manner, also, an architect's plans, drawn with a pen, were charged letter rates, but photographic copies of those plans were charged third-class rates as "photographic proofs, &c." Authors' corrected proofs are third-class matter, but an author having marked on his proof "run up, solid," made his entire package liable to letter postage, under a ruling of the Post Office Department to the effect that "any notations made on corrected proofs by which information is asked or conveyed, or any instructions given in writing, subjects the sheets to letter postage."

Examples like these might be indefinitely multiplied. We have said enough to show the necessity of having the entire postal code modified and simplified by competent men. Congressional lawyers and hair-splitters are not fit for such a work. If the Postmaster-General, and one or two officers of the ability and experience of Postmaster JAMES, of New-York, were to prepare a postal code, one might reasonably expect to receive an intelligent system in place of the present intricate confusion. To see how differently practical post office people do their work, one has only to look at the provisions of the International Postal treaty, drawn up by men versed in postal affairs. Instead of the rubbish in our statutes relating to authors' proofs, &c., that convention provides "Proofs of printing or of music may bear corrections made with the pen, relating exclusively to the text, or to the execution of the work." That is clear enough and is not burdened with verbiage. That convention also says: "Books may bear a manuscript dedication or a complimentary inscription from the author." No nonsense here about "from So-and-so to Thus-and-so." This treaty also says that prices-current, &c., "may have the prices added in writing or by any impression whatever." We do not allow a merchant to change a single figure of his price-list in writing, unless it be a typographical error, under penalty of paying letter postage. When practical common-sense is applied to a revision of our postal laws and regulations, the burdens of the people will be lightened and the revenues of the Government will not be reduced.

BROADWAY.

The revival of the project for a "surface railway" in Broadway brings to mind the changes which that noted thoroughfare has gone through within the memory of a single generation. There is probably not a more widely-known city road in the world than this. Even the street which, two thousand years ago, and probably a thousand years before that, was "called straight," in Damascus, is, at the end of all these centuries, almost unknown in comparison with the way which was called broad only 200 years ago, at one end of a little island, at the other of which might be found the aboriginal savage; and even of the streets of the great capitals of Europe there is not one the name of which is so familiar to all the dwellers within the bounds of civilization. For this the reasons are various. New-York is to the Eastern World the representative city of the Western World, and Broadway has always been its principal street. No city in Europe has a street which for 200 years held such a place indisputably. Moreover, Broadway is, or has been, a peculiar street. It has always been New-York's main thoroughfare for travel, and also for traffic, even of the heaviest kind, and yet until within a comparatively recent period it was the fashionable promenade, and even the fashionable quarter of the principal city of America. Through its roadway, elegant equipages, hackney coaches, omnibuses, express wagons, loaded carts, and huge trucks carrying masts, iron boilers or pillars, or enormous masses of stone, and drawn by six brobdingnagian horses, might have been seen passing in promiscuous succession; while upon the pavement on one side were ladies and their gallants, dressed in the height of fashion, and on the other was the ordinary throng of business and working people; for Broadway had its fashionable and its unfashionable side. No street in any other great capital presents, or has presented, this variety. London, most likely to have it, has it not, nor has had it, even in the times when JOHNSON found in Fleet-street the full tide of human existence. There is, and has always been, more of a separation between the kinds of vehicles and the classes of people to be seen in other great thoroughfares. But the position of Broadway as the midmost street in a City which extended itself from a fixed point, northward, and as the roadway on the highest level, its width, and its generally better and more substantial condition, caused it to be sought by all sorts of wayfarers and of vehicles. Objectionable as this was in some respects, it gave the street its peculiar character, and made it, among other things, the most eagerly-sought avenue of trade that perhaps the world has ever known. When Broadway practically stopped at Union-square, and contained handsome private residences in its upper part and fine retail shops in its lower part, there was probably not a stretch of two miles in any other city in which rents were so high, and in which such high rents could be paid with profit.

For a long time Broadway did not change its character. It merely extended itself, and carried its peculiarities along with it. But there came a time, and it happened to come just before the outbreak of the war of secession, when Broadway underwent a great change—a change which was visible almost month by month, certainly year by year. It ceased to be anything but a street of traffic—of traffic in the proper sense of the word. It was no longer, in any part, a place of residence; no longer a place in which New-York people cared to walk. It had before that time ceased to be a promenade; but now nobody went into it except for business of some sort, to be transacted either in it or at one end of it. During the war all things were changed, and Broadway shared in the peculiar excitements and attractions of the time. But when peace restored the normal condition of things, the great thoroughfare fell suddenly into gloom. It was more than ever deserted by all the elements of its former life and gayety. At morning and evening, and measurably during the day, it was filled with men passing through it, on foot or in vehicles of some sort, to get elsewhere; women appeared in it with comparative rarity, and of its old richness and variety and life nothing remained. Plainly, the Broadway famous in the history of New-York was gone; it had vanished forever.

Broadway proper ends at Union-square. Beyond that point the old post-road to Albany, which tended diagonally over to the river side, was then called Broadway from the place where it issues from the northern end of the square. But characteristic qualities belong to individuals and are inherent; they cannot be transferred with a name, and the so-called Broadway above Union-square is hardly more like the real old Broadway than the so-called South Fifth-avenue below Washington-square is like the real Fifth-avenue above it. The spurious Broadway is merely a street of retail shops, among which are scattered, at rare intervals, a few hotels. It is not a street of promenade, of residence, or of general traffic. It therefore lacks entirely the character of the old Broadway that was deservedly so famous; and as to the remains of that beloved thoroughfare between Union-square and the Battery, they are but the ghost, or rather the corpse, of its former self. Whether a railway from the South Ferry to Union-square would restore business activity to these parts of the street which have of late years been deserted by it is at least a very debatable question. To bring back its charming, and we may almost say its splendid, old variety of interest is, of course, impossible by any such means—by any means. But the supposition that the fine shops and the brisk retail trade in the pseudo Broadway above Union-square is in any way connected with the railway through it, seems to be quite unfounded. The shops are there and are supported because they are in the vicinity of the people who have money to spend at them. Broadway there passes diagonally through the part of the City stretching from Fourth to Seventh avenues, in which there is the greatest number of rich or of well-to-do people of "fashionable" habits of life. Therefore, fine retail shops flourish there; as, for the same reason, in former days they used to do in the real old Broadway below Union-square. To expect to bring back the old condition of things by a street railway seems rather worthy of the great thinker and observer who found it so remarkable that rivers generally flowed by great cities. The truth seems to be that Broadway between Canal-street and Union-square, is now in a transition state. It has become a purely business street; and its upper half is now too low down for the retail trade, and as yet too high up for warehouses. The inevitable restoration of the value of property in the great thoroughfare will come rather with increased prosperity in the country than by any artificial or adventitious means, such as a railway.

WHO IS A PASSENGER?

This question has often been propounded in railway business. Lawyers have shown ingenuity and astuteness in raising it in many cases where it seems to have no business. Often it has an important bearing. For there are rules that a passenger hurt by a collision can recover damages, but an employe or a trespasser on the train cannot; that a company is bound to protect its passengers against violence and injury from other passengers, but not against misconduct of rowdies who force their way on a train; that a passenger is entitled to so much baggage, and the like. All such rules make it often a nice question, Who is a passenger?

A dead-head or a stow-away is not a passenger, and if he is hurt in a collision or train-wreck he gets no damages. But it is not every one riding without paying fare who comes under this rule. The question is not whether the person paid fare, but whether the company had come under an obligation to carry him safely. Take a case of some one who is riding on a pass given him because he was going on the company's business. The stockholders of a company once sent one of their number to make an examination of the road, and the President took him into a special car free of charge, and they ran up the road to see how it looked, and a down-train ran into the special car and smashed the investigating stockholder. He sued for damages, which the company disputed, because he was not paying fare. In another case an inventor of a patent car-coupling was negotiating at Portland with officers of a railroad to adopt it, and they asked him to go up to Montreal and see the Superintendent about it, and gave him a pass. On the way he was hurt by the car running off the track, and the company refused damages because he was riding free. In both these cases the United States Supreme Court held he was a passenger. The company had undertaken for considerations satisfactory to them to carry him, and was bound to carry him safely.

The pop-corn boy's case is like these. He was a Massachusetts boy, who rode back and forth on the Vermont and Massachusetts Railroad to Hoosac Tunnel, on an agreement that he should have the privilege of selling pop-corn on the trains, and should pay $30 a quarter and carry round ice-water for the passengers. Of course, he did not buy tickets. The train went through a bridge, and the pop-corn boy was drowned. The court held that he had all the rights of a passenger to be carried safely, although he did not pay fare. The same sort of a decision was made in California in favor of a bar-keeper on a steam-boat. He traveled back and forth without buying tickets, but paid $200 a month for the privilege of keeping bar and use of the bar-room. The court held this made him a passenger.

A baby may be a passenger. The Great Western Railway in England has the rule that children under 3 years of age go free; children between 3 and 12 must pay half fare. Mrs. AUSTIN, carrying her little child, took a trip, in which the train was wrecked, and the child's leg was broken, and a suit was brought in his behalf. It then appeared that the mother bought a ticket for herself, but did not purchase any for the child. Yet the child was two months more than 3 years old, and ought, by the rule, to have paid half fare. But the ticket-seller and conductor did not ask for any fare, nor inquire how old the child was, and the mother did not make any false statement. The company thought these facts were a good defense; they ought not to be deemed to take any risk as to the child unless his fare was paid. But the court said: Not so. The company undertook to carry the child, and were bound to carry it safely. If they wanted fare, they should have asked for it, or they might see the mother for the fare. The child was not to blame.

Quite a number of the cases of this sort have arisen upon what are know as "drovers' passes." Out West, where droves of cattle, hogs, sheep, or other live stock are sent to market over long railroad routes, it is common for the owner to go or send some one on the train to watch the animals, and water and feed them on the way. This attendant pays no distinct fare. Freight is paid on the animals, and that covers the charge for carrying the man. Very generally these passes contain a stipulation that the traveler assumes all risk of accident, and if he is hurt even by negligence of the persons in charge of the train, he will not demand damages. But the courts have held these drovers' pass persons are passengers. The freight on the live stock is their fare, and the company is bound to use due care. And as to their stipulation, that may protect the company from damages for a mere accident, but not for negligence. The law will not allow companies to agree beforehand that they may be negligent. That would be too much like the Pope's indulgences in LUTHER'S time.

But all these cases are founded upon the idea that the company had somehow or other undertaken to carry the person who was hurt. In cases where he got upon the train by mere mistake, or oversight of the conductor or engineer, he has been held to ride at his own risk, although perhaps he was allowed to ride. How about travelers who are coming to a train or are walking away from it after their ride. In one case the company ran a stage from the heart of the town to the station to bring passengers. This ride was free. Mr. BUFFETT wished to travel by the cars and he took seat in this stage to be carried to the depot. He expected to buy a ticket when he got there, but on the way, by the negligence of the driver, the coach came to grief and he was injured. The company thought their risk did not begin till he had bought his ticket; but the court thought he could recover for the failure to carry him safely by the coach. And the passenger's right to be carried safely continues until he has had fair time and chance to leave the station and grounds of the road at the other end of his journey. If another train carelessly runs over him before he has had time to get across the tracks from his car, or if there are holes and pitfalls in the platforms in which he trips and is hurt, the company cannot refuse to pay damages on the idea that he ceased to be a passenger when he stepped out of the car.

There have been some cases about rowdies and trespassers upon trains. In general, a railroad is bound to carry all persons impartially. But there are exceptions. It has been held that a person who is so drunk as to be annoying and disgusting to other passengers has not the right of a passenger to ride—the conductor may refuse to take him, although he has a ticket. But if the company consents to take him, they are bound to carry him as carefully as they must a sober man. In Nebraska a man sued a company for refusing to take him as a passenger after he had bought a ticket, and the company proved in defense that he was a notorious gambler, and was riding back and forth in search of persons whom he could fleece at cards. The Judge said this was a good defense. A company is not bound to carry one whose ostensible business is to injure the line, one fleeing from justice, one going upon the train to commit assault or theft, or for purposes of gambling, or a person afflicted with a contagious disease by which other passengers would be endangered.

ARTIST AND CRITIC.

Mr. J. A. MCNEILL WHISTLER has not been content with a verdict of his adopted countrymen in the case against Mr. RUSKIN and with his farthing of damages, which he sports as a trophy upon his water-guard. Though he may consider himself vindicated from the atrocious charge of flinging a pot of paint in the public's face and charging two hundred guineas for the compliment, he is not satisfied. He has let fly a bottle of ink in the same direction, though the real object of his aim was those who have dared to criticise his work as an artist, and his exalted imagination seems to have transformed them into the likeness of the target at which MARTIN LUTHER is said to have hurled a similar projectile. But Mr. WHISTLER does not appear to advantage in the plain black and white of English print. Mr. RUSKIN called him a coxcomb in his black and gold and blue and silver nocturnes and arrangements, and would doubtless find a confirmation of his opinion of the man in his essay in literature. And in this field Mr. WHISTLER admits Mr. RUSKIN to be a competent judge. The artist, in resorting to ink, displays a conceit and a straining after smartness which are as far from grace and dignity as his pictures are from loveliness, and he interlards his native language with phrases of French that show him to be a popinjay not likely to reach heights of greatness in any field of mental effort. Here is a sample of his style: "The finesse of the Frenchman, acquired in long loafing and clever café cackle—the glib go and easy assurance of the petit creed, combined with the chic of great habit—the brilliant blague of the ateliers—the aptitude of their argot—the fling of the Figaro, and the knack of short paragraphs, which allow him to print of a picture, 'C'est bien horrible!' and of a subject, 'C'est bien dit!'—these are elements of an ensemble impossible in this island." Again he says: "Mediocrity flattered at acknowledging mediocrity, and mistaking mystification for mastery, enters a fog of dilettantism, and graduating connoisseur, ends its days in a bewilderment of bric-à-brac and Brummagem."

Here is "an old abusing of GOD's patience and the King's English," as Dame Quickly hath it. But the worst of Mr. WHISTLER's incubration is not its manner, but its matter. He attacks the critics of art as a set of pretenders and chatterers about what they know nothing of. He has felt the lash and has no good opinion of him that wields it, which is apt to be the case. Doubtless, a critic that praised WHISTLER might be made an exception, could he be found, but for lack of any such to redeem the general brotherhood, he falls foul of the whole set and declares that they are a nuisance, a wholly unnecessary evil. He makes the assumption that no one but an artist is capable of judging of art. He improves upon Dr. JOHNSON's famous retort, "He that drives fat oxen should himself be fat," and maintains that not only should he be fat, but an ox as well. Otherwise he cannot possibly know what an ox is capable of doing or ought to do, and has no right to lay down requirements for him. Speaking of Mr. RUSKIN having devoted his life to the study of art, he says: "It suffices not, Monsieur. A life passed among pictures makes not a painter—else the policeman in the National Gallery might assert himself." Of course, the analogy is perfect. An intellectual man devoting himself to the study of art in its principles and its production is no way different in his relation to it than the dolt ish officer of the law who exercises his function among pictures, and no more capable of forming and expressing judgment thereon. Again he says: "What greater measure can RUSKIN pass upon himself than that he preaches to young men what he cannot perform. Why, unsatisfied with his conscious power, should he choose to become the type of incompetence by talking forty years of what he has never done?" Let every preacher be confined in his teachings to what he can perform, and there would be a lowering of the standard of the pulpit. And must we needs talk of nothing but our own doings, in order to escape the charge of incompetence? There would be a monotony of egotism in the world's conversation if this were so.

Mr. WHISTLER seems in downright seriousness to maintain that no man but an artist is capable of criticising art, and that the artist has a right to be a law unto himself and to do what he will, and it must be accepted as art on his sole authority and because he has done it. It is a very comfortable doctrine for painters of nocturnes and unintelligible dambs. Elsewhere he would tolerate critics. He admits that men may not be imbeciles outside the range of their own occupation save only in art, where the worker is above and beyond criticism. No matter what atrocities he may commit, whether in ignorance or wantonness, no one has a right to know that his misdeeds are not the works of righteousness, or to condemn them. Shallowness, clumsiness, slovenliness, incompetency, are sacred from animadversion, providing they confine their efforts to disfiguring canvas or distorting comely blocks of marble. A man may not be a builder of houses, and yet he may know when one is badly built, even though the carpenter swear it be perfect. He may never have swung a sledge-hammer, and yet be able to distinguish clumsy work in a blacksmith. By study he may learn the requirements of any trade or profession, and yet never have the practice to give them effect; but he will see when another does it, and know whether it is well done. But in art he can learn nothing without a brush in his hand, and know nothing but what he has himself done. The doctrine is too absurd for anybody but Mr. WHISTLER to discuss it seriously. No one, he says, presumes to criticise the mathematician, the engineer, or the astronomer, unless he is himself an expert. Nay, but may he not be an expert sufficiently to point out mistakes in cipherings without being able to apply complex instruments to the measurement of the heavens? There is a distinction between an understanding of principles of sciences, and a practical application of them in art, which requires the drill of long practice, accuracy of eye and hand, and ability to give expression to the thought that every one can understand when expressed. Art is "based upon laws as rigid and defined as those of the known sciences." Very well, then; is a knowledge of these laws a close monopoly, and is no one capable of understanding the principles of mechanics unless he can build a steam-engine? Reason and common sense are not strong points with Mr. WHISTLER, and he figures to better advantage even in art.

One of the many striking differences between France and this country—the great Eastern and Western Republics, as they may now be styled—is the manner in which leaders to the Government are regarded. The demagogues' cry against bloated bondholders, so common here, is never heard there. Loans to the nation are counted honorable in France, while in many parts of the United States, notoriously in the West, they are mentioned as discreditable, if not rascally. When the French Minister of Finances proposed, not long since, refunding the debt at a lower rate, GAMBETTA, leader of the people, successfully combated the scheme on the ground that they who had proved their patriotism by lending to the Government in its hour of need were entitled to all the interest originally allowed. If any politician or statesman should oppose such a measure here he would be most violently denounced as an emissary of the money power, as a vile plutocrat, as an enemy of the hard-fisted mechanic and horny-handed laborer. The cause of this difference is that the entire body of the French people are in the habit of buying Government securities. Fully half of all the families over there have such investments, for they are within the means of every one. Rentes are to be had, we believe, as low as 100 francs, and it is held so be laudable to be a creditor of the nation. It will be remembered that the French loan of 1872, issued to pay off the indemnity to Germany, was so eagerly sought that the popular subscription amounted to thirteen times its whole amount. A party that would there advocate repudiation, practically, as the Democracy has advocated it here for some years past, would be forced into perpetual retirement. General diffusion of Government securities among our people would have the effect to suppress much of the rank demagogism on financial questions so offensively prevalent, and the proposal to issue 3 per cent. certificates for greenbacks in sums as low as $10 would seem to further this end.

The second installment of "Diplomatic Sketches by an Outsider," the first part of which, treating of the policy of Count BEUST, made quite a sensation in the diplomatic world, is entitled "General Von BULOW and the Danish Question." The title is not so very inviting. From 1852 to 1865 the Danish question succeeded in becoming an intolerable bore, which every European diplomat was glad to get rid of in any way. Nevertheless, the book will probably attract considerable attention, partly because it gives an uncommonly clear and succinct exposition of all the intricacies of

RECORD OF AMUSEMENTS.

MUSICAL.

CHICKERING HALL, SYMPHONY CONCERTS.

The third concert of Mr. Carlberg's series was an interesting event in the musical season, and drew a full house both at the rehearsal of Thursday afternoon and the concert of last evening. It is a gratifying circumstance to note that, notwithstanding all the music to which the public have been invited this Winter, a concert such as Mr. Carlberg presented last night, which depended on its solid merits and was destitute of every "popular feature," should bring together so many persons who listened to it attentively and evidently enjoyed it. The programme was as follows:

Overture, "Ruy Blas," op. 95, (by special request).....Orchestra. Mendelssohn

Concerto for Piano, with Accompaniment of the Orchestra, op. 10, (new).....Ignaz Brüll
1. Allegro Moderato. 2. Andante. 3. Finale Presto.
Mr. Richard Hoffman.

Aria from the opera, "Belmonte e Constanza."..... W. A. Mozart
Mrs. J. K. Barton.

"Waldweben" from the Music Drama, "Siegfried".....Richard Wagner
Orchestra.

Gavotte, arranged for string instruments, and with an intermediate original movement by Ferdinand Dulcken, (first time).....Padre Martini
String Orchestra.

Symphony No. 4, in B flat. Op. 60.....L. v. Beethoven
1. Adagio-Allegro Vivace. 2. Adagio. 3. Alle Vivace. 4. Allo ma non Troppo.
Orchestra.

The orchestral portions of the programme were naturally of the first consideration. Mr. Carlberg has his fame yet to make as a conductor, and although he has started under unusually advantageous circumstances, with a picked band of musicians who have all played for years under the direction of Theodore Thomas, it is asking too much to expect him to step into that experienced leader's position at the start. He is earnest, painstaking, and shows musical intelligence in his conducting, but his reading lacks the repose and finish and confidence in himself which inspire an orchestra. Nervous anxiety on the part of the conductor is certain to be reflected, sooner or later, in some portion of the orchestra, and when there was, (as at both performances under consideration,) a lack of smoothness, it was evident that some of the inspiration and absolute command which we have been accustomed to from the conductor's stand was wanting. The "Ruy Blas" overture was played with vigor and grace, and so with the other two minor orchestral works. Beethoven's Fourth Symphony was not, on the whole, so well given as might have been expected, for the reasons above suggested. In the first movement the violins were not perfectly together in the adagio preceding the allegro vivace. The second movement Mr. Carlberg takes in a tempo which unquestionably mars it of some of its beauties, but the last movements were well played, and the audience were well repaid for their attention to the rendering of this noble work.

A second hearing of the Brüll concerto, by Mr. Richard Hoffman, increased the favor with which it was at first received. It is in nowise a great composition, and Mr. Hoffman would have done better to have given the audience some concerto of acknowledged worth, but he played it with taste and admirable technique, and was so enthusiastically recalled that he was obliged to respond with one of Schumann's novelettes. Brüll, who is a composer of no marked ability, and is known chiefly by an opera he has written, has composed this concerto in elaborate style, the first movement being, indeed, somewhat tedious. When, however, a pianist of Mr. Hoffman's rank selects such a work to play in public it presumably has merits, and if the hearer does not appreciate them at first, he may infer that the fault is with him, and not with Brüll or Mr. Hoffman. Mrs. Barton's contribution to the programme was a very uninteresting aria, notwithstanding the fact that it was composed by Mozart. The lady has an ordinary soprano voice, which she uses very well. She was encored and gave a ballad in which the listening public were urged not to be impatient.

MUSICAL NOTES.

It is announced that Mme. Marie Rôze-Maplson, who has met with her usual success in the West, is to make her reappearance in New-York on the return of the troupe next month, in Marchetti's opera of "Ruy Blas." Mme. Lablache, Signor Campanini, and Signor Galassi will be in the cast.

Mr. Gilmore will give one of his popular concerts at the Grand Opera-house this evening. He will have the assistance of Mr. Levy, with his cornet; Miss Marie Harvey, soprano; Miss Markstein, pianiste; Mr. Makin, baritone; Mr. Mollenhauer, violinist; the Palestrina Italian Choral Society, and the full band of which he is the leader.

The Calumet Club, a prominent club in Chicago, gave a reception to Miss Minnie Hauk last evening. Five hundred guests attended, among them Gens. Sheridan and Whipple, Major Reno, and 30 other Army officers, in full uniform. The clubhouse was illuminated by an electric light, and decorated with flowers. Miss Hauk was enthusiastically received.

Mr. O. B. Boise will give a concert on Thursday evening next, the 30th inst., at Chickering Hall, the programme of which will consist entirely of his own works. There will be a symphony by an orchestra of 50 musicians, a concerto for piano and orchestra, a vocal quartet, and some songs for contralto. Mr. Boise will have, to interpret his music, Mme. Auerbach, Miss Emily Winant, Mr. S. P. Warren, and other well-known artists.

Mr. Strakosch's season of opera at Booth's Theatre was concluded yesterday afternoon with a performance of "Aida," which attracted a full house, and was received with enthusiasm. The cast, as before, included Miss Kellogg, Miss Cary, Mr. Graff, Signor Pantaleoni, Mr. Conly, and Mr. Gottschalk. The audience was more demonstrative than critical, and bestowed their applause with a liberal hand, the principal artists being repeatedly recalled. The performance did not vary in any essential respects from the previous rendering of this opera, which has been heretofore noticed.

The fourth symphony concert under the direction of Dr. Damrosch, with an orchestra of 70 performers, is announced for Saturday evening next at Steinway Hall. The programme is rich in promise, the chief feature being Herr Wilhelmj's appearance. The interest of the musical public of New-York will be excited when it is known that for the first time we may hear Wilhelmj properly accompanied by an orchestra. He is announced to play the allegro of Beethoven's concerto and a chaconne by Bach. The orchestra will give Saint Saëns' Symphony No. 2, Liszt's "Les Préludes," and Mr. Berger will play a solo also.

DRAMATIC.

FIFTH-AVENUE THEATRE.

Mr. Harkins' management of the Fifth-Avenue Theatre was begun last evening by the production of Adolph L'Arronge's comedy, "Dr. Klaus," the English version of which, under the title of "Dr. Clyde," was prepared by Mr. Sidney Rosenfeld. The latter has done his work in a reverential spirit, and, although the scenes of the original play have been transported from Germany to England, none of its essential features have been sacrificed. "Dr. Clyde" must, therefore, be viewed almost wholly as a purely original effort. Its motive is a truthful one, and does not belong to any time or people; we might sum it up in the general reflection that an idle husband is a source of domestic trouble. The husband in this case is a nobleman, Lord Hammond, whose naturally excellent character has been rendered negative and useless by vicious habits acquired from constant contact with a certain kind of life. In striking at one of the lesser evils of society, a dramatist is not less a moralist than the philosopher who goes at once to the root of wickedness; for, although his motive may seem at first view slight enough, it is not the less a fact that the dark and turbulent flood of human misery may flow from a single and almost invisible source. In a worthy motive, therefore, "Dr. Clyde" is not deficient. But, is this motive worthily embodied? Lord Hammond is married to a young lady, the daughter of a tradesman, Mr. Meeker. A mutual friend of the couple is Dr. Clyde, a physician whose usefulness is not always apparent. A coolness between Mr. Meeker and the physician leads Lady Hammond to make inquiries, and she then discovers that her good lord is a mere idler and pleasure-seeker, who has been content to live on the money of others. Out of this state of things are born trouble and unhappiness, until finally the erring husband is brought to his senses—and to his honor, let us add—through an ingenious plot by which he is made to believe that his father-in-law has been ruined. The play ends, of course, fortfully, and the moral is forced home by the reformation of the idle spendthrift. From this brief suggestion of the story it might seem that the domestic misfortunes of Lord and Lady Hammond supplied, as they undoubtedly should supply, the chief interest of the play; but this is by no means the case. After clearly presenting the relations of husband and wife in the first act, the dramatist turns about, as though unable to fully embody his leading idea, and draws the whole attention of the audience during the next three acts to a rather foolish love-affair, in which Dr. Clyde's daughter, Emily, and a young lawyer, Tolbury Simms, are the actors. The fine and natural motive of the play is thus lost amid a succession of scenes, most of which are trivial, some of which are interesting. Of the latter, the one in the second act, when Tolbury makes his first declaration, is delightful, both as regards sentiment and humor. But it must be confessed that the following two acts, although relieved by touches of humor, are tedious and inconsequential. While they are in progress the play apparently stands still. Furthermore, all the characters talk as if they had no other purpose on hand, and a very large body of the dialogue relates in nowise to the movement or to the spirit of the play. These characters are, as a rule, clearly drawn and contrasted, although no one save a German would make of Dr. Clyde the central personage of a comedy; this worthy physician is a pretentious moralist, and his conversation throughout is cold and pedantic. There is also something pedantic about Lady Hammond, who is constantly preaching of "earnest occupation." To make matters worse, the acting was slow and labored, and the really bright portions of the play were given without brilliancy, often without vivacity. Mr. Fisher as Meeker was uneven, although frequently very good. Mr. Hardenbergh appeared at his best as Higgins, the doctor's man, keeping the audience in excellent humor. There was too much low comedy in Mr. Fawcett's Simms, which was otherwise a respectable performance. Mr. G. H. Chaplin, as Dr. Clyde, labored through his part in a most dismal manner. Finally, Mr. Henry Lee made a conventional Lord Hammond. As to the ladies, little can be said in their praise. We need only mention Miss Laura Don and Miss Ellie Wilton, both good actresses, and both, last night, apparently unsuited to their parts. Miss Don in no way identified herself with Lady Hammond, and Miss Wilton, despite her intelligent endeavors, could hardly be expected to embody the charming ingenuousness of a sentimental school-girl like Emily.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

A great-grandson of the celebrated Commodore Paulding will, it is said, shortly make his début at one of our City theatres.

It is definitely announced that Miss Ada Cavendish, who was first to have played at the Park, then at the Fifth-Avenue, will reappear at the Broadway Theatre. Her initial character will be Rosalind.

A visit to the San Francisco Minstrels is always productive of hearty enjoyment. During the present week all the company, including Mr. Sam Devere, will appear in a bright and well-varied entertainment.

Mr. G. B. Bunnell will open the American Museum, at his new building, No. 298 Bowery, near Bleecker-street, to-morrow evening. He will present a variety of curiosities and entertaining features twice each day.

"The Banker's Daughter" is one of the few plays which may be seen several times and always enjoyed. It is a still a strong attraction at the Union-Square Theatre, and it will not be displaced for many weeks to come.

The ball of the "Mulligan Guards" may be witnessed nightly at the Theatre Comique, where the two favorites, Messrs. Harrigan and Hart, appear to crowded audiences. The career of the celebrated Guards has thus far been a highly successful one.

The revival of "The Danites" to-morrow night, at Booth's Theatre, will be an attractive event. Mr. McKee Rankin and Miss Kitty Blanchard will be seen again in their favorite characters, Sandy and Billy Piper. Their engagement is for but two weeks.

The last week of "Cinderella" at the Aquarium is finally announced. The young folks have been greatly entertained by this animated picture of an oft-repeated tale. The programme during the coming week will include, besides the play, many excellent features.

The fascinating little story of "Dot," which is now being represented in dramatic shape at the Park Theatre, will continue the attraction at that house for some time to come. The acting of Mr. Owens and that of Mr. Couldock show a striking and delightful contrast.

At Niblo's Garden Theatre to-morrow evening Mr. Oliver Doud Byron will present for public approval a new historical drama in five acts, entitled "Hero," a play in which love, war, and adventure form the subjects of interest. Mr. Byron will appear in three separate parts.

No change is announced this week at Wallack's. The revival of "Ours" has proved popular, and Robertson's pretty comedy, in which both Mr. Wallack and Mr. Cockian are seen to excellent advantage, will probably keep the boards until Mr. Boucicault's new play is ready for production.

It is almost unnecessary to call attention to "H. M. S. Pinafore," which is meeting with deserved success at the Standard Theatre; for the people have evidently taken that fresh and melodious work to their hearts. Of its kind it has never been surpassed—at least, hardly ever. The piece is now running with complete smoothness.

Mr. George Edgar, the senior manager of the Broadway Theatre, will make his Metropolitan début to-morrow night at that house in the part of King Lear. Mr. Edgar aims high, for Lear is a stupendous character; how he will treat it is a question to be shortly answered. On this interesting occasion Mr. Joseph Wheelock will be the Edgar, and Mrs. Marie Gordon the Cordelia. "Enoch Arden" will be produced at the Wednesday and Saturday matinées.

FOREIGN NOTES.

Mlle. Sarah Bernhardt will visit Nice in the course of the month, to appear in the new theatre at Monte Carlo.

"The Scrap of Paper," Mr. Palgrave Simpson's ingenious version of Sardou's "Les Pattes de Mouche," has been successfully revived at the London Court Theatre.

The new piece now in rehearsal at the Variétés is entitled "Le Grand Casimir." The libretto is by MM. Gondinet, Saint-Albin, and Jules Prével, and the music by M. Lecocq.

Charles Reade's "It's Never Too Late to Mend," just revived at the Princess' Theatre for the first time in 15 years, has brought out some flattering comments in the London press.

The Palais Royal Theatre has in rehearsal a four-act comedy by MM. Meilhac and Halévy, called "Le Mari de la Débutante." The principal lady's part will be taken by Mlle. Jane Hading.

The T'Kint robberies and trial have been put on the stage at the Flemish Theatre in Brussels, the whole proceedings being treated with remarkable boldness. The piece is called "Twenty-three Millions; a Great Swindle in Four Acts."

Patrizio, the magician, is astonishing the inhabitants of Jamaica. He finds a better field there than he did in this City. Two thousand persons were present at one of his performances in Kingston, and hundreds were turned away from the theatre.

"Montjoye" will be succeeded at the Paris Vaudeville by "Ladislas Bolski," a piece taken by M. Meilhac from a novel of Ohnet's. After "Ladislas Bolski" will come a very Parisian comedy by M. Edmond Gondinet, entitled "Les Tapageurs."

A new oratorio, which is said to be of an original and elevated character, has been produced in Paris. The subject of the work is the Biblical narrative of Judith. The author of the poem is M. Paul Collin, and the composer M. Charles Lefèvre, who gained the great prize of Rome in 1870.

Mlle. Emilia Chiomi, who made her début last year at Her Majesty's, has recently had a most signal compliment paid her by the eminent German composer, Richard Wagner. The great master, hearing of the unqualified success of this gifted young lady at many of the German opera-houses, invited her to meet several celebrities of the musical world at his house, in order that they might hear her rendering of various portions of his own operas, he himself accompanying her. Herr Wagner afterward passed the most flattering encomiums on her singing, and prognosticated a great future for her.

THE CONTESTED ARLINGTON ESTATE.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Jan. 25.—The Arlington case was continued in the United States Circuit Court today, before Judge Hughes. The counsel on both sides presented instructions. The plaintiffs rely on the tender of the taxes to the Commissioners by an authorized agent of the owner, and the defendants on the repayment of the property by the United States, and the failure of the owners to make a tender of the taxes in person. The entire day was occupied in discussing the instructions, and, without coming to a decision, the court adjourned until Monday.

BOYTON'S MIDNIGHT TRIP.

FROM THE BATTERY TO STATEN ISLAND.

TRYING THE NEW LIFE-SAVING SUIT—WEARY HOURS IN THE ICE-FIELDS OF THE BAY—STARTLING A GERMAN TAVERN-KEEPER IN THE EARLY MORNING.

Capt. Paul Boyton, the indefatigable marine adventurer, has invented an improvement to his famous life-saving suit, which consists of a thick external facing of rubber, bordering and sheathing the lower part of the jacket, and intended to furnish additional protection to the swimmer in contact with rocks or ice-floes. The sheathing is in the nature of an india-rubber armor, and while somewhat increasing the weight of the suit, is not such as to render it unwieldly or to add materially to the expense. His perilous midnight journey to Staten Island on Friday night was for the purpose of bringing his improvement to the test of a practical experiment, thus deciding upon its utility in the presence of the actual facts. At 11 o'clock on Friday night the blast of a dissonant horn startled the policeman in the vicinity of the Battery from their surreptitious slumbers, and on proceeding to the spot from whence the din appeared to emanate they found a shivering group of men and boys assembled on the pier near Castle Garden, in the midst of which stood a figure enveloped in many thicknesses of india rubber and overcoat. To arrest such an apparition for blowing a horn and making night hideous was manifestly impracticable, at least until it was ascertained that there was something human inside of it; and before this necessary factor in the legal aspect of the case had been arrived at Nan the Newsboy, who is Captain of a life-saving corps and highly respected by the Police, had duly explained that Capt. Paul Boyton was about to take a midnight journey to Stapleton, Staten Island, in his improved swimming suit, accompanied by James Crulman, a member of the corps, similarly incased in rubber. Just as the bells in Trinity steeple struck 12 Capt. Boyton blew his horn, and the two men descended the stone steps of the pier ready for a plunge, the intention being to paddle down to the Narrows with the tide and return at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, which would give the voyagers the advantage of the tide in both directions. The hiss of a rocket was heard and a long serpentine train of light illuminated sufficient illumination to reveal a tiny boat, measuring not more than three feet from stem to stern; but the little vessel was wonderfully fitted up. A lamp, burning petroleum, was securely fastened to the forward deck, and, assisted by a reflector, threw a mellow blaze of light far out to sea, clearly revealing an object 2,000 feet away in the hardy swimmer's track. It had beneath the deck a little cabin of steel, in which a cup of coffee could be heated, and there were securely stowed away in the hold a mariner's compass, a barometer, a box of cigars, some biscuits, a few sky-rockets, and other paraphernalia of a voyage of any length of the main. "Baby Mine" was painted on the bow in pretty gilt letters; but, alas, no precaution could prevent the little craft from going down with the shock of an unfriendly ice-floe that came very near submerging the Captain and his adventurous companion also.

The adventurers met with no serious impediment until they had moved out the open space between the Battery and Bedloe's Island. Off Bedloe they sent up a rocket and lay off for a few seconds to take their bearings and ascertain the source of a grating sound which came from the direction of Long Island Jump in their track. This problem was soon solved. Suddenly they found themselves in the midst of an extensive ice-field, heaped in heavy floes and drifting with foamy, but imperceptible, progress in the general direction of the Narrows. Occasionally, to avoid certain disaster to limb or life, they were compelled to lift themselves over one of these floes, and then drop upon it floe, and walk across it to the open sea beyond. Another peril soon supervened. The current, though slow, was strong, and the two swimmers becoming entangled in a whirling eddy, the little craft that forged ahead of them struck and was instantly disabled, leaving our hero and his companion with no light but that of the uncertain stars, and what rendered the crisis more embarrassing was the presence of dense and impenetrable hazes which always follow a storm, had settled distinctly about them. Objects at the distance of a dozen feet could not be made out distinctly. On examination it appeared that a piece of heavy cake of ice had caught the boat between them and crushed in its tiny ribs, as if it had been but an egg-shell craft. It was a moment to test the nerve of a more experienced swimmer than the Captain's companion, who, by the way, was laughing on to the rubber dress of his principal with one hand and paddling with the other, a position at once perilous and ridiculous. What troubled Capt. Boyton's mind, however, for the rest of the lonesome journey was not the immediate danger of being overwhelmed by the laboring ice-floes, but the perception that the mass in which he found himself entangled was drifting seaward and would probably prevent him from effecting a landing on Staten Island. For three mortal hours, alone in the midst of an ice-field, helpless except for their rubber suits, which bore the beating of the smaller cakes gallantly, they were enabled through them to avoid the larger, the two heroic men tumbled along, now paddling, now turning out of the way of a huge berg, now drifting, until at 4 o'clock in the morning they found themselves in the Narrows, weary, dispirited, exhausted and shivering with the cold. After canvassing the probabilities of success in a council of war, the swimmers finally decided to effect a landing at Stapleton, if possible, by picking their way carefully through the ice and swimming the mass of intervening ice. It took two hours—the silence was only broken by weird crashing, grating and bellowing of the ice about them—to accomplish a journey to the shore, which was near enough to be indistinctly visible when they started. At length, about 6 o'clock, they effected a landing on the open sand near Stapleton, hungry and exhausted.

Staten Island lay like a silent land in the morning twilight, and Capt. Boyton and his companion wandered about for nearly an hour, carrying the disabled tender between them, before they could find a shelter. The lights in a little restaurant kept by a German caught their attention, and they entered without the ceremony of knocking. "Mein Gott!" cried the frightened Teuton, and commenced to shout "Raiber!" at the utmost capacity of his powerful lungs, an alarm this outlandish demonstration with frantic yells for an invisible Police. A little argument convinced him that the two apparitions were not masked burglars, and after a steaming dinner for breakfast, the terrified restaurateur permitted himself to be appeased. The voyagers returned to New-York on the Northfield yesterday morning, and Capt. Boyton went to the Hotel Frascati, in University-place, where he arrived a little before noon, rested for an hour or two, gave audience to the reporters, and went out. He has been invited to make a trip from Kittatinny to Pittsburg on the Allegheny River, and will not probably repeat his swimming exploit in those waters.

SUDDEN CHANGE IN THE WEATHER.

THE WIND AT 50 MILES AN HOUR—ONE MAN INJURED BY A FALLING SHUTTER.

The warm weather which prevailed yesterday vanished very suddenly after nightfall last evening, and a high wind sprang up, which increased to a gale soon after 8 P. M., and for over an hour blew at the rate of 50 miles an hour. The mercury touched 27° at 1 o'clock this morning, having fallen 18° since 6 o'clock P. M. yesterday. The gale gradually decreased in violence until midnight, when it was blowing at the rate of 40 miles an hour, according to the record taken at the Western Union Telegraph Building. There were many small signs, blinds, and old-fashioned chimney-pots blown into the streets, but the cold weather drove nearly everybody indoors, and up to midnight there was only one accident reported at Police Head-quarters. While Mr. Sidney S. Harris, a lawyer, of No. 165 Broadway, was walking along Third-avenue with his wife, he was struck on the head by a window shutter, blown by the gale from the building No. 510 Third-avenue. He fell insensible to the sidewalk, and when picked up was found to be seriously injured. He was taken to his residence, No. 47 Thirty-fifth-street, by the Police. A large shed at One Hundred and Thirtieth-street and Twelfth-avenue, owned and used by William Dunning as a lumber warehouse, was blown down at 10 P. M., causing a loss of $100.

KILLED ON A BOB-SLED.

David Baker, aged 18, was injured while coasting on Croton-avenue, Sing Sing, on Friday evening, so badly that he died in a few minutes afterward. He was on a "bob-sled," and had reached a place of level ground, his sleigh having speent its force of descent, when another sled from another street, converging at that point, ran forcibly against him, striking him in the stomach. He rose and walked a short distance to a hotel, where he fell and soon after expired. Coroner Schirmer was summoned yesterday to hold an inquest.

THE SEAMEN'S RETREAT.

Dr. C. Henry King, Physician in Chief of the Seamen's Retreat at Stapleton, has completed his annual report for 1878. The report shows that 1,034 patients were treated during the year. Three supernumerated sailors were removed from the institution to a permanent home in the Sailors' Snug Harbor at New-Brighton. At the close of the year there were 129 patients remaining in the institution.

THE WHITE PLAINS SHOOTING.

In the case of Joseph Jackson, who was shot and killed at White Plains by William Harris, both colored men, the Coroner's jury rendered a verdict charging the killing upon Harris, who is yet at large and hiding, but it is said, on good authority, that he will present himself for indictment and trial before the February Court of Sessions, or sooner, if he can see a chance of securing bail.

COUNTERFEITER HELD FOR TRIAL.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Jan. 25.—Charles W. Schoener, charged with making and passing counterfeit notes of various denominations on different national banks, principally the First Nationals of Hanover and Tamaqua, was given a hearing to-day before the United States Commissioner. His arrest was in connection with that of Henry C. Cole, Charles Frederick Ulrich, and Jacob Olt, in New-York recently. Charles Frederick Ulrich, the engraver for the gang, was called to the stand and testified to making $50 national bank notes. Schoener was held in default of $5,000 bail.

BLOWN FROM A RAILROAD TRAIN.

DEATH OF A PRINCETON STUDENT IN ATTEMPTING TO GO FROM ONE CAR TO ANOTHER.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 25.—Among the passengers who took the afternoon express train from New-York for Baltimore at Princeton were three students of the college, who intended to spend Sunday with their parents at Wilmington, Del. They occupied a car near the front of the train, and continued in that compartment until the train had reached a point near Linwood, between Chester and Wilmington. At this place one of the young men proposed that they should go back to the next car in the rear, and all three passed up toward the door. The wind was blowing with terrific force at the time, and the student who was leading barely escaped being blown from the cars in his passage across the platforms. As it was, he lost his hat and had to hold on to the brake-wheel for bare life.

Young Vaughan, son of Dr. Vaughan, a prominent physician of Wilmington, Del., was alone behind him. The moment he reached the platform the wind swept with increased fury over the track toward the Delaware. His overcoat was blown open, and he staggered backward as the fierce gusts filled the garment. He attempted to seize the brakes, but failing in the attempt, was hurled with terrible velocity from the cars. His despairing cry as he disappeared in the darkness served as a warning to the student following, who hastily drew back, and gave the alarm. Great consternation for a time prevailed on the train, and a distance of four miles must have been reached before the conductor was apprised of the accident. Several of the passengers urged him to return, but he refused. He proposed as a better and safer plan to run rapidly to Wilmington, and then send a dispatch to Linwood asking that a hand-car be sent out to look for the missing man. This course was adopted, and when the express train reached Perryville the telegraph informed those on board that the body of young Vaughan had been found near where he had been blown from the platform. Owing to the velocity with which the train was going over the level stretch near Linwood, it was surmised that Vaughan's death must have been instantaneous. He was a young man of fine attainments, about 25 years of age.

LOSSES BY FIRE.

The State Lunatic Asylum near St. Joseph, Mo., was discovered to be on fire at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and was totally destroyed. No adequate means had ever been provided to extinguish a fire, and little resistance could be made to the spreading of the flames. The patients, about 250 in number, were safely removed and now occupy the Court-house in this city, where they are being done for their comfort, but they have suffered somewhat from exposure and excitement. The building was erected four years ago at a cost of $180,000. Eighteen months ago there was $100,000 insurance on the property, but it was not appropriation to continue the same, and therefore it is a total loss.

A fire started at midnight Friday night in Lager's Block, in Newark, N. J. This block and the store and dwelling houses adjoining, a loss of about $50,000. The insurance is $40,000. The burned buildings were owned by J. W. Classon, G. H. Miller, the Lager and Lawrence estate, J. L. Wench, Enos Pierson, and Lasor, and George D. Pintz. Five families are rendered homeless, and also lost most of their furniture and wearing apparel. The fire originated in the Association Rooms from a stove-pipe.

On Thursday evening, a dwelling-house on Warburton, near Lamartine-avenue, Yonkers, Westchester County, caught fire from an overheated furnace, and was damaged to the extent of about $3,000. It is owned by James Youmans, and is insured for $5,000 in the Royal Insurance Company, of London, England. The occupant was James Chadwick, whose furniture was damaged to the extent of $3,000.

One section of Armour & Co.'s warehouse, at the Union Stock-yards, in Chicago, was burned early yesterday morning. No provisions were destroyed, and the loss, which is confined to one building, will probably not exceed $10,000.

A fire at Main and Austin streets, Denison, Texas, yesterday, consumed nearly an entire block. The loss is $20,000; insurance small.

WORK IN THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—The Treasury now holds $347,760,950 in United States bonds to secure bank circulation. United States bonds deposited for circulation for the week ending to-day, $7,412,200; United States bonds held for circulation withdrawn during the week ending to-day, $7,918,050; national bank circulation outstanding, currency-notes, $322,760,594; gold notes, $1,468,920. The internal revenue receipts to-day were $331,057 88, and the Customs receipts $233,189 59. The receipts of national bank notes for redemption for the week ending to-day as compared with the corresponding period last year are as follows:

	1878.	1879.
New-York	$1,023,000	$941,000
Boston	2,148,000	1,701,000
Philadelphia	262,000	37,000
Miscellaneous	1,070,000	844,000
Total	$4,503,000	$3,273,000

Receipts to-day, $570,000.

The amount received this week is $300,000 in excess of any week since the order requiring remitting banks to pay expressage went into effect.

The subscriptions to the 4 per cent. loan since yesterday's report have amounted to $14,028,700.

The demand upon the Treasury to-day for silver dollars was for 25,000; for the month, 499,000.

A NEW CHURCH OFFICER.

MONTREAL, Jan. 25.—Rev. Dean Bond was to-day consecrated to the Episcopal Oversight of the Diocese of Montreal, in St. George's Church. The Bishop of Fredericton, who is now the Senior Bishop of Canada, presided, and was assisted by the Bishops of Quebec, Halifax, Ontario, and Algoma. A large number of the clergymen of the diocese took part in the ceremony.

THANKS FOR A GEOLOGICAL SURVEY.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—A joint resolution of thanks to Dr. F. V. Haydan and his assistants has been passed by the Colorado Legislature. The preambls states that "the publications of the reports, views, and maps of this survey form a collection invaluable alike for the advancement of science and the development of the mining and agricultural interests of this state."

MARINE DISASTERS.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—The steamer reported as having been much damaged by collision at Rouen is not the British steamer Hesleden, from New-Orleans, as at first supposed.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 25.—The schooner Send, of Eastport, with herring, came ashore at Nauset last night. She is leaking badly.

SECURITY FOR OLD TENNESSEE BONDS.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 25.—Edward L. Andrews, attorney for the holders of the old series of Tennessee bonds, to-day filed bills against eight railroads upon which they have a lien under the act of 1852. He filed six bills in Memphis and will file more in Knoxville Monday against railroads upon which the old bonds have a lien.

RAILROAD OFFICERS ELECTED.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Jan. 25.—The following have been elected Directors of the Long Branch and Sea-shore Railroad for the ensuing year: J. Gould, R. S. Green, W. S. Sneden, J. S. Coleman, M. S. Coleman, Thomas G. Rigor, G. P. Morosini, T. J. Sheridan, W. E. Conover, B. F. Ram, J. M. Ham, E. S. Conover, and Nehemiah Perry.

ENCOURAGING NATIVE TALENT.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Jan. 25.—The Cincinnati Musical Festival Association announce to-day that they will give a prize of $1,000 for an original composition for orchestra and chorus, to be performed in the festival of next year. The competition is limited to native Americans.

SUICIDE OF AN AGED WIDOW.

COHOESKILL, N. Y., Jan. 25.—Caroline Mann, living two miles from this place, committed suicide by hanging herself in the attic of her house yesterday afternoon. Since the death of her husband, a prominent citizen, a few months ago, she has given evidence of insanity. She was 50 years old.

HELD TO BAIL.

PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 25.—Capt. George Prince, charged with defrauding the Pension Office, had his preliminary examination before Commissioner Clifford to-day. Probable cause was found on eight counts, and he was bound over in the sum of $14,000 to appear at the February term of court in Portland.

A BOSTON AND HAVANA STEAMER LINE.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 25.—The steamer United States sailed from this port for Havana this afternoon with a full cargo and the United States mail. This is an experimental trip, and, if successful, a permanent line will be established.

JUDGE CADWALADER DYING.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 25.—Judge Cadwalader is so low to-night that it is feared he will not live until morning.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 25.—In the case of Harry Guion, stage manager of the Arcade Theatre, charged with keeping a disorderly house and maintaining a nuisance, the jury this morning rendered a verdict of guilty. Sentence was deferred.

THE HANDLERS OF THE CUE.

FIRST WEEK OF THE TOURNAMENT.

REVIEW OF THE NINE CONTESTS, AND THE SCORES OF THE PLAYERS—SPECULATING AS TO THE WINNER.

The first week of the Brunswick and Balke Championship Tournament, which closed on Friday, has fulfilled the prediction that it would develop more brilliant play than had yet been seen in New-York. The five days, during which nine games were played, have been marked by the most brilliant run on record—441 points, by George Slosson, of Chicago; one of the finest combination shots ever made—the great three-cushion "kiss" carom counted by Thomas J. Gallagher, of St. Louis, and the scoring by William Sexton of an average of 40, asserted to be the largest he has made in a 600-point game. Another point peculiar to the tournament has been the attendance of ladies and prominent gentlemen in larger numbers than at any previous tournament held in this City. The ladies have taken quite as much interest in the play as the gentlemen, and have been equally enthusiastic in their applause of brilliant shots. The great topic of discussion in billiard circles in relation to the tournament now is, as a matter of course, the relative chances of the several contestants of winning the trophy and the first prize, but as yet too few games have been played to furnish a criterion upon which any trustworthy prediction could be founded, while at this stage, bearing in mind the uncertainties of the game, even as played by experts, it would be merely a piece of idle guess-work to select the winning "combination." Sporting men, however, are putting out money heavily on both Slosson and Sexton for first place, while the "combinations" on the other players are as numerous and varied as the stars on a Summer evening.

Young Slosson is struggling for the emblem with all the vim and spirit of a fleet-footed stallion, while Sexton is devoting his powers to beat the Chicagoan's great run, and of gaining the largest average on record, while he is struggling at the same time to meet Slosson, should the latter lose a game, and thus bring about a tie. The Western boy has now only to play Jacob Schaefer, and expresses confidence that he can vanquish him as well as the remaining players. He has always beaten Schaefer in the past, but it is possible that the latter may develop in his struggle with him the same brilliant and invincible play than resulted in Sexton's defeat when he crossed cues with Slosson on Wednesday evening last. Should there be a tie between Slosson, Sexton, and Schaefer, there is hardly a doubt that the struggle for supremacy will furnish the finest billiardistic exhibitions ever seen in the country. The only expert who has not yet made a brilliant run is young Heiser, of Boston, who has only afforded glimpses of his powers. This is to be excused, however, as the Bostonian has not become fully accustomed to having a large number of spectators as have witnessed the present tournament. The appended table will show the record of the different players for the week:

Names of Players.	Games Won.	Games Lost.	Best Run.	Best Average.	Total Number of Points Scored.	Total Number of Points Required.	Possible.
G. Slosson	2	0	441	50	1,200	1,200
W. Sexton	1	1	214	40	687	1,200
J. Schaefer	2	1	170	22	6-27	1,200	1,200
A. Garnier	2	2	172	22	9-27	1,016	1,200
M. Daly	2	1	283	50		484	1,800
T. J. Gallagher	1	2	165	17	32-34	1,333	1,800
A. P. Rudolphe	1	2	158	17	5	896	1,200
R. Heiser	0	2	62	5		215	1,200

To-morrow afternoon the second week of the tournament will open with a game between A. P. Rudolphe and Randolph Heiser, and in the evening Albert Garnier and George Slosson will meet.

PEDESTRIANISM IN BROOKLYN.

A double attraction was offered at Mozart Garden, Brooklyn, last evening. Harry Howard was finishing a six days' tramp commenced on Monday last, and C. A. Harriman, who is matched to walk O'Leary, was completing the task of walking 150 miles in 30 hours. Harriman undertook to walk 50 miles in 10 hours on each of the last three days of Howard's walk, and on the same track. Last night his 50 miles were completed in 9:38:31, and on each of the preceding days he made better time. The garden was densely crowded last evening, and a number of New-York sporting men, anxious to see Harriman's performance, were in attendance. He is believed to be the coming man, and even now there are men willing to back him as he can beat O'Leary. Harriman walks in splendid form, and was apparently as fresh at the end as when he commenced. Howard undertook to accomplish 450 miles in six days, but only made 411. That, however, is better time than was made in the last match between O'Leary and Campana, and is second to the best time ever made in this country in a six days' race. Howard ran lightly and vigorously, accompanied by Taylor, the champion 20-mile runner, at frequent intervals during the last 10 miles. There was not a single blister on his feet, and he was otherwise in sound health. The track was a small one, requiring 22 laps to the mile, and both Howard and Harriman were much inconvenienced by amateurs who were allowed to try their speed on the track. It is believed that both gentlemen, Howard, who went off the track at 11:45, after making 65 miles yesterday, could easily accomplish 500 miles in six days.

DISPOSSESSED BY THEIR LANDLORD.

Officer Chiardi, of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, learned last night that Philip Sheridan, his wife Florence, and their four children, ranging from 4 to 13 years of age, had been dispossessed by the landlord of their apartments at No. 289 Avenue C, owing to the dissolute conduct of the parents. They had been put out on the sidewalk, and as the hope the shivering children were exposed to the inclemency of the weather. The officer went to the place indicated and found the children and their parents in the street, surrounded by their household effects. He took charge of the little ones and brought them to the Police Central office, where they were kindly cared for by Matron Webb.

THROWN FROM A WAGON.

While Joseph Manuel, of No. 188 Rivington-street, was driving past the corner of Fourteenth-street and Sixth-avenue in an express wagon yesterday afternoon, the horse was frightened at a passing train of the Metropolitan Elevated Railway and ran away. The wagon collided with a lamp-post, and Manuel and a boy named Isaac Parasis, of No. 227 Seventh-street, who was riding with him, were thrown to the pavement. Manuel was seriously injured on the head, and his companion had his back strained. Frank Finney, of No. 66 West Ninth-street, while crossing the street was knocked down by the runaway horse and severely injured. The horse was brought to a stand-still by an officer of the Ninth Precinct.

THE NORTH SI

THE PRINCIPALITY OF PLAY.

MONACO AND ITS GAMING-TABLES.

CHARMING SCENERY AND A DISREPUTABLE CROWD—THE PRINCE'S FAMILY AND THE OWNER OF THE GAMBLING LEASE—CONSPICUOUS FREQUENTERS OF THE CASINO—BROKEN FORTUNES AND BATTERED REPUTATIONS—THE VENDER OVER ALL.

From an Occasional Correspondent.

MONACO, Wednesday, Jan. 1, 1879.

Residing with my friends at Menton, that charming hospital where most people are ailing, or fancy they are, I came here not to gamble, but to observe the gamblers in the Casino of Monte Carlo. It is situated in a delightful locality, but the scenery is so highly finished that it resembles the accessories in the ballet of "Midsummer Night's Dream"—as if all the mountains, the rocks, the shrubberies, the sea, had been made to order and transported hither to place the most exquisite gems of nature side by side with the most ignoble traits of human character. The gambling itself is less hideous than the class of women of easy virtue who are attracted by the play as the moth by the light, and who, together with the desperate and disreputable men who resort hither in search of good luck, present humanity in its most degenerate aspect, while few of the women make up by beauty what they lack in virtue. Yet among the multitude there are not a few gentlefolk bent on a spree or determined to gamble. The fashionable time is from the end of January till Lent. Then all Paris is seen here, which makes the place interesting for mere lookers-on. The worst period, as far as society is concerned, is in Summer and till about Christmas. During that time many low Italians and questionable men and women of all nations, with a very small sprinkling of invalids and of lovers of the climate, make the Casino resemble a semi-bagnio, a semi-brothel.

The old Prince is blind, which prevents him from seeing the abject sources of his revenue. His wife, an old German Princess, is too devoted to the Church to pay much attention to what is going forward on this wretched earth, and least of all to those profane mines of gold which enable her to propitiate the sacred members of the Society of Jesus. The young Prince is virtually separated from his wife, the daughter of the Duchess of Hamilton, who does not like the society of Monaco, and he spends his time abroad in yachting and hunting. Mme. Blanc, the widow and heir of the owner of the gambling lease, who began life by sweeping the Kursaal at Baden-Baden, has her property managed by a company less scrupulous and generous than was the late M. Blanc. One of the daughters married a Polish Prince; to the other, who declined the honor of a bankrupt Bourbon, her father promised before his death that she must, nevertheless, marry another Prinzchen. What need there is on this planet for the existence of Mme. Blanc I can't tell; but here she is, with an income varying from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 a year, derived from the degradation and ruin of thousands of all nations, and she is so powerfully protected that she and her progeny are likely to last forever. Nor is there any danger here of Internationalists and Socialists. They aim at higher game.

Let me now take you to the Casino and show you some of the lions. Here is Mme. Ratazzi, still a graceful-looking woman, leaning on a croupier and showering down her gold on the table with a languid air, as if to say that she does not care whether she wins or not. Yet after a few days she is gone to Paris to fetch some more money. With her is her daughter, a girl of 7 years, called Isabella, after her godmother, the ex Queen of Spain, born in Rome, and with the most beautiful dark eyes and eyelids imaginable. Mme. Ratazzi's relatives, M. Bonaparte Wyse and Mrs. Ronalds, are just now engaged in a famous lawsuit in Tunis against a Frenchman. The occult social law of gravitation naturally brought Mrs. Ronalds and the kinsmen of the other Mrs. Ratazzi in partnership. Broken-down English officers are generally to be found here with their female accessories. If their money is gone they leave the latter here as a pledge of their returning. They get a few hundred pounds upon an I. O. U. in London, and then hasten back to—lose again.

Lady Susan Hamilton, who married the Duke of Newcastle, was at once divorced from him and then married to a Belgian plebian, said to have been her courier, is here. The proud, high-toned, inflexible Duke was not tender enough for her sentimental yearnings, and, an outcast in English society, she lives here and seems to dote upon the decent but common looking man whom she chose as her husband. That lame, surly-looking Irish Colonel is a broken-down Newmarket man, and his Irish wife, who offends the Queen's English, but is otherwise inoffensive, plays with him day after day at roulette. That intelligent and energetic looking woman, who puts down gold upon almost every number without winning anything, is Mrs. Spencer Cooper, whose husband lost immense fortunes. That tall, giraffe-like English girl with the sparkling deer-like eyes, is Miss Downing, a beautiful creature, but why do her brother and mother allow her to wear diamonds in a place where they are worn only by meretricious women? That most distinguished and gray old looking woman was the Princess W——y, and now is the wife of M. Bassilewski, the nephew of the same Princess Souvaroff who lost millions here. Yonder, surrounded by a gang of Roumanians, Poles, and Russians, is the Prince, whose name, since the ukase of the Grand Duke Constantine, and still boring him to send her money. That old sneaking-looking Englishman or Irishman is "a professor" of the game, who torments people, especially unprotected females, and wants them to purchase his plan of winning, a miserable mouth-catcher who should be arrested, but they are not particular, and even allow admission to those who bring the place into disrepute.

M. De Villemessant, the chief man of the Paris Figaro, has a villa here, and gambles every day at the trente et quarante. His paper patronizes Monaco, naturally enough. They advertise the place in every imaginable manner, and there is a subtle affinity between the spirit of the roulette and that of the Figaro which I will not undertake to analyze. M. De Villemessant is an unassuming-looking old gentleman of perhaps 65, who, whatever his detractors may say of him, is certainly very gentlemanly and dignified in his deportment. Look now at that huge, monstrous-looking ruffian at the roulette who calls himself a Hungarian Baron and member of Parliament. He is unshaven, and has a dirty, desperate, ferocious look. Probably, if he really belongs to the Pesth Parliament, that august body pays him a pension to keep away from it.

Delicious music is to be heard afternoon and evening in the vestibule of the Casino. A reading-room is well stocked with journals. Menton, Nice, and Cannes are near by. The Hotel de Paris is far superior and less expensive than the lofty hotels, and, altogether, Monaco is charming for those who do not play.

THE NEGRO COLONIZATION SCHEME.

From the New-Orleans Times, Jan. 29.

The resolution introduced in the United States Senate last Thursday by Senator Windom, of Minnesota, relative to providing homes in some other State or Territory for those of the colored people of the south who feel that they cannot live peaceably and enjoy their political rights in their present homes has already borne fruit. Whether good or bad fruit, the future alone can determine. As is well known, there are at present in this city several hundreds of colored people from various parishes of the State. Some of these have been honestly driven away by mere threats from their homes for political reasons. The majority of them, however, were summoned here to give testimony before the United States Grand Jury relative to the violences of the Election laws. These people claim that they dare not return to their homes, for the reason, as they allege, that they have no security for either life or property. Under the lead of some of the more prominent of their number, they have drawn a memorial to Congress, in which they set forth their grievances, and basing their request upon the Windom resolution, ask that aid be extended to them by the Government to assist them and all who wish to join them in reaching some Western State or Territory, where they can form a colony and begin life anew. The memorial is quite an interesting document, and besides reciting that they are denied their political rights and driven from their homes, states that a Constitutional Convention has been authorized upon by which body they believe the organic law of the State will be so changed as to deprive them of an equality of rights with the white people. This memorial has been signed by a large number of both men and women, and is still open for signatures. As far as the plan is yet developed, it is proposed to make a contract with the Mississippi Valley Transportation Company to take them and their effects on barges to some point on the Mississippi River, from where they can most readily reach their State of Kansas, their proposed destination. It is said that quite a large number of colored people of this city are interested in this emigration movement. The signers include colored people of Caddo, Natchitoches, Ouachita, Point Coupee, Plaquemines and other parishes. If reports are to be credited, word has been sent to the colored people of a number of the parishes to make no labor contracts for the ensuing year until it is determined what shape this emigration movement will assume.

THE PHILADELPHIA CRICKET DIFFICULTY.

ONE OF THE AUSTRALIAN TEAM SENDS HIS VERSION OF IT FROM HONOLULU TO LONDON.

It will be remembered that during the cricket match in which the Australians took part at Philadelphia, an unfortunate dispute occurred. On the third day the Australians, in consequence of the decisions given by the Philadelphia umpire, left the field. They were afterward induced to return, and the match ended in a draw. In explanation of the course taken by the Australians the following letter from Mr. John Conway is published in the London Standard:

HONOLULU, Nov. 5, 1878.

SIR: In the cricket match played at Philadelphia on Oct. 3, 4, and 5, between the Australian eleven and eleven of Philadelphia, a contretemps occurred, the cause for which I fear has not been fairly explained by either the American players or the press of that great country. A letter received from one of our friends in London shows clearly how sadly the case has been misrepresented in England, and as the Australians highly estimate the good opinion of the British cricket-loving public, I have been induced, at the request of the Australian team, to state their case. Before leaving England for America the Australians were informed by several of the English cricketers who had visited America that the "umpirement" of the game would be very indifferent, and it was stated that in a match played at Philadelphia by Willsher's team 10 years ago, the English Captain had the local umpire removed three times for incompetence and partiality. We therefore did not anticipate a pleasant time of it with the American umpires. A Mr. Brown stood umpire for the Philadelphians. During the first day's play he displayed gross partisanship in actually applauding some of the Philadelphians when they made a good hit off Spofforth or Boyle. When one of the brothers Newhall made a good hit off "the Demon," the umpire could not suppress his enthusiasm. He turned in the direction the ball was travelling, and clapped his hands in the most exultant fashion, not noticing whether the batsmen were running short runs or not. The Australians made no complaint about this somewhat extraordinary conduct. Again, when the Australians were batting, permitted C. Newhall to transgress cricket law by going over the crease sometimes half a foot, and bowl from outside the return crease. Messrs. Boyle, Gregory, and Blacham, while batting, called the erring official's attention to these repeated transgressions without avail. So matters continued until the climax was reached, on the third day. The Philadelphians had made an excellent score (196) in their first inning, and the first essay of our men had produced 150. With a majority of 46 in their favor, the local players began their second inning on the morning of Saturday. The first three wickets of the Philadelphians fell for very few runs. The consternation of the Americans was very marked at so bad a beginning. The next occurrence of note was a catch at point made by C. Bannerman off J. Hargreaves' bat, the ball hitting the bat very hard, and going five feet from the ground into point's hands, who was standing about 15 feet at his right angle with the batsman. The ball was thrown up in the air, it being considered that no appeal was necessary in such a case. The batsman stood at his ground, after much hesitation on the umpire, to the surprise and disgust of the Australians, gave the batsman "not out," though he (the batsman) subsequently admitted having struck the ball. The Australians proceeded with the game, and a few balls after Brown, the umpire, made another extraordinary decision. D. Newhall was batting to the bowling of Allan. The batsman ran out of his ground several feet to hit a ball from Allan, and, missing it, Blackham had it back off in a moment, and long before he could recover himself. The balls were on the ground and the ball in the air before the batsman scrambled back to his crease. The umpire gave the batsman "not out." The Australians were exasperated, and said they were inclined to leave the field rather than continue the game under such an umpire. On being told by D. Newhall they could leave "as soon as they liked," they immediately left, and demanded the removal of the scoring official. As a set-off against the complaints made as to the fitness of their umpire for the post, the Philadelphians, or rather the committee who rule the cricket field from the pavilion, stated that they did not believe in the competence of our umpire, who, by the way, is an old English cricketer with whom our men became acquainted on the voyage across to America. Mr. Freeman, that is the gentleman's name, rather than stand in their way, and wishing to see the game proceed, asked to be allowed to retire, though no objection was urged against him up to the time of the dispute. In order to get rid of Brown, Mr. Gregory asked that both umpires be changed. The Philadelphians then retorted they had every confidence in their umpire, and re used to change him. The Australians then prepared to leave the field, and some of them had changed their clothes, when Mr. Outerbridge, the Secretary, again waited upon them, and told them he would not be answerable for the consequences at the hands of the excited crowd. He suggested a retirement by the back way. At the instance of several English gentlemen who interviewed the Australians, and on my advice, the team put the matter to the vote—"To play or not to play." By a majority of one it was agreed to continue under the same umpires, conditionally upon its being notified that the Australians still adhered to their protest against the unfitness of Brown to act as umpire. The match, as you have no doubt heard, ended in a draw, the Australians having six wickets to fall and 43 runs to make. We do not think the Philadelphians would have scored 30 runs in their second inning had the game been fairly umpired, and but for the delay nothing could have prevented us from being hailed the victors. Rather a novel feature in connection with the affair is the power assumed by the committee. The members of that all-powerful body, captain the team, and, to use an Americanism, "boss" everything in connection with the cricket field. They are elected and can be removed by members, do the polite with the ladies, keep a vigorous eye on the money and the check-takers, and all the time watch every ball that is bowled. Throughout the whole of the game I never removed my eyes from the umpire, the Captain of the other side never once showed himself, and everything that was said or done was by "Our Committee." "Our Committee" thought Mr. Brown was a most competent umpire, and that was, or should have been, enough for the already much-yelled-at Australians. The two principal executive officers of "Our Committee" are lawyers. One Philadelphia lawyer on any committee is enough, but the appalling affect of two on an cricket council can be better imagined than described. The dispute as Philadelphia must have been a perfect Godsend to the American press. The papers teemed with diatribes against us. The same columns which ascribed to us the most gentlemanly and heroic attributes, the champions of the world, &c., sorely taxed the extensive repertoire of "Webster" unabridged for words sufficiently harsh to expose our villainy. Large capitals described how we were "outbatted, out-bowled, and out-fielded," and one journal had the hardihood to state that we were defeated in an innings. Seldom are the documents in one of the daily papers at San Francisco, an English resident there wrote to the paper in question stating that the match had ended in a draw, and that, if anything, it was in favor of the Australians. This letter never appeared, and he walked upon the editor the next day to ascertain the cause, but did not succeed. The ignorance of the writers on the subject of cricket is "splendidly ridiculous," and there is not one of us who did not feel much amused at their frothy upcrings. I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

JOHN CONWAY.

BREATHITT COUNTY, KY.

SOME OF ITS HORRIBLE CRIMES—FAMILY FEUDS AND THE MURDER OF TRAVELERS.

A telegram from Lexington, Ky., to the Cincinnati Enquirer says of the recent discovery of outrages in Breathitt County, that State: "The riot, bloody and fatal as it was, which attracted the attention of the country to Jackson, is but a light affair compared with the murders that have been committed among the hills of that wild country. Timidly the information is given to the officers of the law, and guilty secrets that have been kept for years are told in whispered accents. Not only have these noble mountaineers fought and killed each other, but they have waylaid, robbed, and murdered travelers whose journey led them through the treacherous hills. Major Kinney, the Prosecutor appointed by the State, learns of men who, having lodged at certain cabins at night, disappeared the next day, and were never heard of again. Their friends knew not where to inquire for them. Dead men, buried in Breathitt, tell no tales. The place is so out of the civilization that a life is a mere toy for fugitives of every kind. I heard recently of a young lawyer who, having been indicted by the United States Court, went to Breathitt, where he lived for three years only because as safe as he was in Africa. Bad men could find no safer place in which to perpetrate deeds of wickedness. It is estimated, from facts that have recently been put in the possession of the officers, that 100 murders were committed in Breathitt during the war, and 26 since the war and up to the present time, making a total of 45; while the men who have been badly wounded, either by open fights or at the hands of the assassin, number 36. Horrible as this record is, not one man has been punished for any of these crimes. When the assistance of the troops the following have been arrested and lodged in jail: Jack, Jerry, and Alfred Little, Jason Little, the wife-murderer; Alfred Gaahill, Brack Combs, George Hendon, Wallace McGuire, Jerry McQuinn, and Calhoun Strong. The latter became known in pursuit of Altkuns, though up to this time without them. These parties all took part in the last riot, and are indicted for the murder of Judge Burnett or John Freeman. Jason Little is to be hanged for the killing of his wife, in accordance with the knowledge of how a peddler suddenly disappeared, leaving his wagon behind him. The band of Owen County Rufians and highway robbers, the account of whose deeds, a few years ago, made a black page in the history of crime, were gentle citizens compared with the desperadoes who infest the ravines and hills of Breathitt. The half has not yet been told."

ROYAL FAMILY OF AFGHANISTAN.

PAST AND PRESENT RULERS OF THE TROUBLED COUNTRY.

From the London Times, Dec. 30.

Few ruling families have produced such a series of notable characters as the present dynasty in Kabul, and if we throw back our glance to a slightly more remote period, and include in our retrospect the great and first Duran, Ahmed Khan, of the Sadozye house, it may be said that the Afghan monarchs are entitled to a high place among the hereditary monarchs of the world. It will be of some interest to trace back the history of this house, in order that English readers may the better appreciate what Afghan monarchs have been, and by what example in the past Shere Ali may even now be steering himself on the fray into which he has so wilfully rushed.

Of the Afghan clans the Abdali was the most famous. It had given rulers to Khorasan and to Herat before Nadir Shah overthrew them and their neighbors, the Ghilzies, and when Nadir Shah was murdered it was their chief, Ahmed, who rose to supremacy in Kabul. But there were many branches of the Abdali clan, and of these the Populzye was recognized to be the head. In this branch of the clan the family of Sudo was supreme, in virtue, it would appear, of some special descent, as well as of the claims that arose from their appointment as chiefs of the Populzye clan by the Persian monarchs of the Sufavean dynasty. Their persons were sacred; no punishments could be inflicted on them, except by another Sadozye; and in many other ways they were exempt from the disadvantages that beset ordinary Abdalis. But, although the Sadozyes are spoken of as a separate tribe, they were really only a family of the Populzye clan. Of this family, the most noteworthy were Ahmed Khan, his son Timour, and his grandchildren. Zamaun, Mahmoud, and Shujaul Mulk, all of whom sat at various periods upon the Afghan throne. With the death of Shah Shujaul Mulk, and his son, the family of Sudo may be said to have become, for all practical purposes, extinct. The later history of Afghanistan centres round the younger family of Barukzye. When Ahmed Khan assumed the title of Duppran and made his dynasty the Durani, all the Abdalis, including both Populzye and Barukzye, became Duranis, and the nine subdivisions of which the Abdali clan consisted were merged in that general term. According to the Afghan legend, Barukzye, the second son of Abdal, was the founder of the house of Barukzye; but, however that may be, in the days of Ahmed Khan and his son Timour the chief of the clan was Sarfraz or Poyndah Khan. This chief was prominent among the Sirdars at the court of those Princes, both by right of his power and of his individual ability. But he fell under the displeasure of Zaman, Timour's son and successor, and was murdered by order of that monarch. But although the Sadozye ruler had freed himself from the presence of his too powerful Sirdar, he had only given cause for umbrage to a more dangerous and a far less powerful rebel. This was Fateh Khan, Poyndah's eldest son and heir. For many years he played the part of Warwick in the Afghan State, setting up Shah Mahmoud one month and deposing him the next in favor of his young nephew, Shujs, and at last, after a career of some years of triumph, ending his days as his father had, the victim of an Afghan monarch's suspicion and tyranny. All Fateh Khan's intrigues had been directed to promote his own interests as Vizier and not to strike a blow at the supremacy at the Sadozyes. The charm of that family remained intact and unimpaired until Fateh Khan's murder raised up his figment house in arms for the purpose of exciting revenge. When Dost Mahomed and his numerous brothers broke out in various quarters of the State against the authority of the Sadozye monarch, there is little doubt that their conduct was disapproved by the majority of the Duranis. But the Barukzyes were too strong in their numbers and their unity, and also by reason of the numerous castles that they held and the Afghan monarch so weak without a regular army, that the contest between the rival houses was practically decided when Shah Mulk was a fugitive almost before he had a chance of offering resistance to his opponents. With his flight the second dynasty of the Durani monarchy commenced, although Dost Mahomed did not become defacto sovereign of the country until many years afterward, he and his brothers were supreme in Kabul, Kandahar, and Balkh. In Herat a Sadozye Prince continued to rule for some years longer, but he, too, gave place at last to the irresistible Barukzye.

Dost Mahomed, the youngest of the sons of Poyndah Khan by a Kizzilbash woman, was the most remarkable Amir who has appeared within the present century. During his long career he suffered from every vicissitude of fortune, and proved himself in diversity and in good fortune to be one of those men who are equal to either condition. His life of 70 years may be considered as a romance. He was a ruler and a statesman that Dost Mahomed shone down all competitors. He certainly was no unworthy representative of the dynasty founded in 1747 by Ahmed Khan, and he left to his son Shere Ali a heritage of no mean power and prosperity. Shere Ali himself is no unworthy descendant of so distinguished an ancestry, and whatever doubt we may have expressed on the powers of restraint he possesses over a temper every one admits is vindictive and easily excited, it is impossible to deny him the possession of many noble and rare qualities. Those who saw him at Umballa acknowledge that the man is no ordinary one, and those who have followed the history of his life know that he must be a man of genius. He has coped with all the difficulties of his position in a manner and once more he is master, and even his fortunes were at the lowest ebb he no more deserved than did the Great Frederick after Hochkirchen or Zorndorf. "The hand of Allah," so said the Ameer when fleeing from Kandahar toward Herat, his last place of refuge. Nor has the ability and the genius of the Durani monarchy died out with its present representative. Often have we told in these columns the story of his son's (Yakoob Khan's) valor and skill, and if less has been said of Abdurrahman, the son of Afzul Khan, it was not because his abilities were less eminent, but simply because, so far as we are concerned, he played a minor part. Nor, in estimating the abilities of the family, should we leave out of sight Shere Ali's brothers—all of whom were marked in some way or other as superior to the herd—Afzul, Azim, Ameen, Sheeref, and, above all, Akbar, the heir-presumptive of the days of the old war. And many of the sons of these were scarcely less distinguished than their sires, although it would be ludicrous to mention names that could be but little known to the mass of our readers. What may be maintained with perfect accuracy is, that the present Afghan dynasty is one that is remarkable for its able and capable men, and that its vitality appears to be far from extinct. These are facts which are of actual importance and value in the present crisis, and it is upon a knowledge of them that much of our future policy must be based. Shere Ali has many noble examples among his predecessors to inspire him with the necessary courage to oppose us, but we may also learn from his past to interpret the secret of his strength and of his weakness.

THE MISSOURI GREENBACKERS.

The Missouri Greenback State Committee sends forth a three-column address, in which it says:

We demand: 1. A just income tax to reach the money power now comparatively free from taxes.

2. The preservation of the greenback to pay off the bonds now devouring us with interest.

3. The issue of coin certificates to buy all bullion for coinage.

4. The increase of the greenback circulation to redeem and pay bonds so as to stop the payment of interest, and furnish a sufficient currency for circulation.

5. The equalization of taxation, Federal, State, and municipal, and the abolition of the internal revenue taxes.

6. The reduction of salaries and offices, municipal, State, and Federal.

7. The limitation of patent right royalties, profits, and extentions.

8. The appropriation of postal savings banks throughout the country paying interest to depositors and drawing postal orders.

9. The encouragement of foreign commerce in our own ships.

10. The enlargement of grants for lands to schools by Congress.

11. The prohibition of State banks of issue, and the substitution of greenbacks for national bank notes, and the abolition of bank bonds in the Treasury now securing their circulation.

12. The building and equipping of a railroad to San Francisco on the thirty-second parallel by the United States Government and the general improvement of all navigable rivers. Labor has no claims superior to farmers and mechanics, traders and producers. We are all threatened with the same misery by the money despotism, and must stand or fall together.

13. And we finally demand that the Federal Constitution be amended so as to limit and restrain Congress from granting the public lands to any corporation or association; from making the United States a party to any corporation or association for any purpose; from granting, transferring, pledging, assigning, or in any way conveying for any purpose the public moneys, credit, franchises, powers, or sovereignty of the Government; from creating any corporation except such as may be necessary to carry out and execute the powers of the Government itself, and from issuing any bonds of the United States in the future for any purpose.

THE GREENWICH SEA-SERPENT AGAIN.

From the New-Haven (Conn.) Palladium, Jan. 22.

The Greenwich sea-serpent has been seen again, this time by Capt. Dalton and his two sons, of the sloop Jane Bliss. Capt. Dalton, who is described as a weather-beaten mariner about 50 years of age, with eyes that are keen and truthful, and a face beaming with candor, arrived at Sachem's Head Point bound for New-Haven, on the 24 day of January, when his son descried the serpent close to the vessel and heading toward Captain's Island. Some 10 feet of him was visible, either his head or tail, like that of a snake, being flat on top, and a foot and a half broad. In color it was black, with green spots. The last eye, which was the only one they could see, was as big as a saucer, and much out of his head like a frog's eye. The head was about three feet long, or at least began to taper down about that distance from the nose. The smaller part continued for about 10 feet, and was held up completely out of water. After that it began to swell all at once until it was as large as a barrel. Its length must have been from 30 to 50 feet. Capt. Dalton says he has seen lots of sharks and porpoises and all kinds of sea creatures in his travels over the globe, and knows that this is a snake. So many parties claim to have seen a massive monster off Greenwich in the last year or two that it looks as if the existence might not be a product of the imagination.

NOTES OF FOREIGN NEWS.

PITH OF THE ENGLISH AND CONTINENTAL JOURNALS.

Mr. Charles Sugden, the English actor, has just married, at Paris, the divorced wife of the Earl of Desart.

Mr. Spurgeon has published a sermon a week for 24 years, or 1,450 in all. He recently began his twenty-fifth volume.

A new magazine, it is said, is to appear in London in April under the name of Time and the editorship of Edmund Yates.

A full pardon has been granted by the French Government to 24 Communists in New Caledonia for their services against the insurgents there.

Profs. Darwin and Owens, the well-known English naturalists, have been confirmed by the German Emperor members of the Berlin Academy of Sciences.

Two members of the Liverpool Police force have been arrested for complicity in systematic robberies, which have for some time been carried on about the docks of the city.

A brilliant entertainment was recently given at the Academy of Music for the Blind at Upper Norwood, England. Among the pupils taking part was the blind Prince Alexander of Hesse.

The Presbytery and the Town Council in Edinburgh have both decided that there is no reason why a man should not be allowed to marry his deceased wife's sister, but British law is against it, nevertheless.

The newly-created Humboldt Academy at Berlin was to be opened on the 13th inst. its purpose is to give a sort of university education to persons who have not qualified themselves for entering a regular university.

Among the wills recently proved in London are those of Samuel Phelps, the actor, and George H. Lewes, the well-known writer. The personal estate of the former was sworn under £9,000, and that of the latter under £2,000.

The King of Siam was recently invested with the Grand Cross of the Order of St. Michael and St. George by Sir W. C. F. Robinson, Knight Commander of the Order, in the presence of the British Minister and the officers of the royal palace of Bangkok.

The golden wedding of the Emperor and Empress of Germany will be celebrated on the 11th of June next. They have caused it to be given out that they would prefer not to receive any presents from corporations, societies, or private persons.

The Athenæum announces the death of Dr. William Engelmann, of Leipzig, the learned writer on the history of art, the friend of Chodowiecki, a catalogue of whose prints he produced and published, and the publisher of the new edition of the "Künstler-Lexikon" and other valuable works.

The Crown Prince Rudolf of Austria has just made his appearance as the author of a book. The subject is, "A Hunting Excursion." The Prince, who is now only 20 years of age, takes a great interest in ornithology, and the narrative chiefly turns on his observations respecting the birds of the Danube.

"The wife of one of the most eminent of French financialists," says Truth, "fell in love with a Prince of the French imperial family. The financialist bore his domestic troubles with Christian forbearance, but the lady, taking seriously the proverb of 'like master, like man,' has now run away with the groom."

Prof. De Vericour has died in Cork after a short illness. He had been Professor of Modern Languages at the Queen's College since the opening of that institution, and was well known in the literary world as the translator of several of Guizot's works, among others the "History of Modern European Civilization."

More than 20 persons in and near Versagnes, in Italy, have become insane. One of them is a man, another a girl of 12, and most of the others young women. At certain times of the day they indulge in extravagant, incoherent, and indecent talk, though they had previously been quiet and well behaved. The outbreak is attributed to pictures and sermons on hell.

It is proposed to open on the 5th of February, which will be the tercentenary of the birth of Joost van Vondel, a Vondel exhibition in Amsterdam, to which private collectors in all parts of Europe are requested to lend any original portraits, early editions or manuscripts of the great Dutch poet, or any illustrative objects in the way of prints which they may possess.

Mlle. Geisbert, an actress of the Folies-Dramatiques Theatre in Paris, has brought an action for breach of promise of marriage against M. Legru, a sugar merchant. She claims damages on the ground that she refused several lucrative engagements in consequence of his offer, and the defendant has made a counter-claim of 28,000 francs, which he says is due him from the lady.

Property in Sheffield valued at about $1,000,000 and held by some 60 persons, has been claimed on behalf of a family who assert that they are the real owners. The basis of the claim is that a person having a life interest in 1814 mortgaged it; the mortgage was subsequently foreclosed, and a sale dealt with the estate as if he were the absolute owner instead of proprietor of only a life interest.

In Belfast Gen. Grant was presented by Mr. Gibson, a prominent jeweler, with a cigar-holder of richly-carved bog-oak, on which his monogram was inlaid with fine gold. "This exquisite and most appropriate gift," says the correspondent of the London Standard, "which was delicately carved with interlardings of the national symbols, met the General's fancy, and the grim old warrior beamed acknowledgments."

Baron Gedaliah, the head of a Copenhagen bank, which in 1871 placed 200,000,000 francs of the French loan, has been arrested on a charge of forgery and malversation. His railway speculations were so disastrous that in 1872 he came to America, but afterward resumed business. He was originally a saddler, then a leather merchant, and was made by the Portuguese Government a Baron and Consul-General.

According to the annual official returns there is a very appreciable decrease in the quantity of wine produced in France last year. The figures are: In 1878 a decrease of about 48,700,000 hectolitres compared with 1877, and of 8,093,000 hectolitres compared with the average of the past five years. The falling off is to be attributed to the ravages of the phylloxera, and the reappearance of the oidium.

A German paper says that the repeater rifle, the invention of an Austrian Captain of the name of Kropatchek, is the best military weapon in existence, and hints as to adoption in the German Army in place of the Mauser. Should this change be carried out, observes a German contemporary, the enormous cost of the alteration could not be grudged, even if M. De Bismarck's customs tariff were adopted.

The wife of the celebrated tragedian, Salvini, has lately expired at Florence, in her twenty-fourth year. The couple first met in London. Mme. Salvini was an accomplished linguist, and was in the habit of translating viva voce the newspaper articles in different languages collected by her husband during his travels. A short time before her death she had commenced a translation of one of Schiller's plays for Salvini's repertoire.

The St. Gothard Railway Company's debenture capital amounts to 80,000,000 francs, its share capital to 34,000,000, and the subsidies from Italy, Germany, Switzerland, and certain Swiss railroads and cantons to 115,000,000. Italy's subvention amounts to 55,000,000 francs; that of Germany to 30,000,000; the Swiss Confederation, 4,500,000; the North-eastern and Central Swiss railways, 7,600,000; and 15 Swiss cantons, 16,500,000.

"My friend Mr. Moy Thomas," says the London World, "writing in the Academy, expresses his doubts as to whether Mr. Irving said 'the dog will have his day' or 'his bay.' Unquestionably, Mr. Irving said 'bay.' I noticed it specially, and noticed, too, the thrill of horror which shook the stalwarts because of those grand Shakespearean scholars, Mr. Gilbert Farquhar and Mr. Albert Levy, who, all ears, were sitting together in a private box, and who were naturally shocked at the lamentation."

Mrs. O'Donovan Rossa has been interceding with the British Home Secretary for permission for her husband to return to Ireland. He was released from prison on condition that he kept off British territory for 20 years; but she says his health is now "completely shattered and residence in his native air would tend to prolong his life and assuage his suffering." The Secretary does not admit that as a sufficient reason for granting the coveted permission to return.

A proposal is on foot for a new bank to take the place of the West of England and South Wales District Bank, recently suspended, and to be known as the Bristol and West of England Bank. (limited.) The capital is to be £1,000,000 in 50,000 shares, one-half to be paid up immediately. Under the limited liability arrangement, a regular and searching audit is assured, and dividends cannot exceed 6 per cent. until a reserve fund has been created equal to one-fifth of the paid-up capital.

A French hair-dresser has invented an ingenious plan for the application of the electric light to carriage lamps. A locomotive engine when in motion will, he maintains, under his system generate electricity sufficient to illuminate a railway train. Steam-ships, in like manner, will by their own machinery supply themselves with lights so powerful as to lessen materially the chances of collision even in the Channel fogs. Ordinary carriages drawn by horses can be illuminated by means of electricity supplied by the rotary motion of their wheels. What he view of demonstrating this fact, the inventor has tested it, if he can obtain the requisite permission from the authorities, to try the experiment on the cabs of London.

London Truth tells this: "A marine insurance case came before a distinguished Judge during the recent sittings, the scene of the disaster which led to the litigation being Tub Harbor, Labrador. Lamentable to relate, his lordship was reduced to ignorance of the learned counsel. 'Where is Labrador?' To which that gentleman replied, 'Labrador is the place where Tub Harbor is!' What do the Civil Service Commissioners say to this?"

In the course of a speech at Rochdale, Lord Derby lately advised emigrants to turn their steps to the United States. "London Truth thinks there are several palpable disadvantages in emigrating to the States at present, and Lord Derby would have probably been wiser in his day and generation had he recommended discontented workmen to seek one of our own colonies. If Canada is too cold, and they are afraid of disturbances at the Cape, there are Australia and New Zealand, both affording excellent openings, practically unlimited numbers in almost any line."

The Grand Chancellor of the Legion of Honor has just issued a table of the extinctions by that order during the latter half of 1878. They are: Grand Crosses, 2 military, 1 civil; Grand officers, 4 of the former and 7 of the latter; Commanders, 25 and 10 respectively; officers, 96 and 58; Knights, 548 and 352. In consequence, the number of nominations which can be made in 1879 will be as follows: Grand officers, 2 military, 3 civil; Commanders, 13 and 5; officers, 48 and 29; Knights, 274 and 178. During the same period 658 military medals became extinct, leaving an opportunity of conferring 436.

M. Gambetta lately reappeared at the bar for the first time since 1870. An obscure clerical paper, La France Nouvelle, recently alleged that M. Challemel Lacour, a Senator, had been expelled from a club for cheating at cards. An action for libel was brought by M. Challemel Lacour, and M. Gambetta undertook the case. He addressed the court for half an hour in support of the demand for 10,000 francs damages, and urged that the outrage was the more serious as his client was on the point of representing France at Berne. The public prosecutor joined in demanding a severe penalty, and the court inflicted a fine of 2,000 francs, with the full amount of damages asked for, 10,000 francs.

It has been suggested, says the, Manchester Examiner, that the seventieth year of Mr. Gladstone's life should be signalised by its political admirers by a substantial recognition of his services, and a committee has already been formed to promote the holding of a Gladstone banquet in the Agricultural Hall, London, some time in the early part of this year. Tickets to admit about 5,000 representatives of Liberalism from all parts of the country will be issued. It is also intended to promote a subscription to raise and dedicate a national memorial in the shape of a hospital, or wing of a hospital, or otherwise, to the statesman's name. It is thought that at least £20,000 can be obtained, toward which one gentleman has offered 500 guineas.

An ingenious means of robbery has just come under the notice of the Paris Police. A man dressed like a postman and carrying on his back an apparently heavy burden was passing before a shop when he fell and broke a sheet of plate glass worth at least 500 francs. The proprietor seized him, but he averred that he had no money to pay with. Two passers-by advised the shopkeeper to search him, which was done, and on him was found a bank-note for 1,000 francs. He parted with feigned grief that it belonged to his employer, but the shopkeeper insisted on paying himself out of it, and to that effect gave him 500 francs and sent him away, sobbing bitterly. The note was forged, the advisers were confederates, and the victim not only lost his plate-glass window but paid for the loss into the bargain.

The death of Prof. Karl Wilhelm Böttiger took place at Upsala, on the 24th ult., and deprives contemporary Swedish literature of one of its most prominent figures. He was born in Westeras, on the 15th of May, 1807, entered the University of Upsala in 1825, and took his degree in 1833. In 1845 he became Professor of Modern Literature at Upsala, and succeeded Atterbom in the chair of æsthetics in 1856. In 1847 he was elected to fill the vacant fauteuil of Tegnér in the Swedish Academy, and occupied the next four years in arranging and editing Tegnér's writings. He published a volume of lyrical poems between 1830 and 1869, and some dramatic pieces, among which "May Day in Värend" is the most esteemed.

The death is announced of Sir James Matheson, remarkable as the second largest landed proprietor in the British Isles, and as a man who struggled to the top against difficulties of an unusual kind. He was compelled by family circumstances to accept, at a very early age, a clerkship in Calcutta, and was dismissed by his employers as "too stupid even for trade." At the earnest request of the Baptist missionary, the firm agreed to give him a further trial, and he was sent to Canton, where he made a fortune in China a splendid fortune, and returned to Scotland probably the richest subject in that Kingdom. He purchased the island of Lewes, and resided there in consequence of his offer, and the offer spending, it is said, nearly £250,000 for the benefit of his subjects, who, nevertheless, never took to him.

The production of beet-root sugar in France in the year ended September last was 398,000,000 kilogrammes, (2 1-5 pounds each,) against 244,000,000 kilogrammes in 1876-7, and 482,000,000 kilogrammes in 1875-6. The official statistics show that the manufacture of beet-root sugar is being gradually confined within narrow limits. Before the law of 1837, which put an end to the exemption from duties which indigenous sugars had enjoyed, the cultivation of the beet-root was carried on in 51 departments, with 547 manufactories at work. From that year the number of departments in which the industry was carried on rapidly diminished, till, in 1843, it was reduced to 417 with 415 factories. In 1840 the duty on home-grown sugar was increased, and the number of factories was reduced to 300, spread over 18 or 19 departments. At the present time the industry of beet-growing exists in seventeen departments, containing altogether 501 manufactories.

The following portrait of the Ameer at home appears in an Italian paper. It is taken from a lecture by an English missionary, Mr. Hughes, who speaks from his own experience. The Ameer can neither read nor write. "What is the use of reading or writing," he asks, "when one has hundreds of people to do it for one?" He is, however, well up in history, the result of conversations with learned men, by whom he liked to be surrounded. In public he is frugal and sober, but in private he is a drunkard. He is bellicose, and a thorough warrior; those who saw him at Umballa say he has all the qualities of a good leader and a determined ruler. The people he has reconquered his throne after the civil war,

THE HOUSEHOLD.

THE SEASON FOR TERRAPIN.

The markets are well stocked with edibles of every description, and with a very few exceptions prices remain the same as they were last week. Eggs are higher, fresh from New-Jersey and near-by points selling at 38 cents per dozen, and the best Western and Southern at 35 cents. "Leghorn eggs," as they are called by the dealers, supplied by country poulterers who make it their business to furnish an article that will tickle the palates of New-York epicures, are dearer. They sell at 50 cents per dozen, and of a uniformly large size, and with their clean, white shells and the certainty in the mind of the purchaser that a bad egg is rarely, if ever, found in a dozen, and that they are as good, if not better than any that may be served on country tables, the price asked is not too high. Prices for limed eggs have advanced, but they are lower than fresh. Rabbits and hares were never more plentiful, and at the prices at which they sell poor people may indulge in a rabbit stew, which will cost them no more than a stew made of second quality beef. They may be bought in Washington Market at 25 cents per pair. Partridges are scarce and higher, selling at $1 40 to $1 50 per pair. On and after Feb. 1 their sale is forbidden by the Game laws. Quail are dearer, selling at $1 per dozen, and grouse sell at 85 cents per pair. Prices for wild ducks are about the same, and there are no changes in the rates for poultry, except for young chickens, which are in light supply; good, fat tender ones, for roasting, selling at 12 to 15 cents per pound, and the few that may be found, after diligent search, suitable for broiling, at 75 cents to $1 per pair. Fruits, (with the exception of hothouse strawberries, which are lower, selling at 50 to 75 cents for boxes containing eight,) vegetables, and meats sell at the rates current last Saturday. The season for terrapin, which, when properly stewed or cooked in other approved fashion, makes a dish which is esteemed above all others in Maryland and Virginia, is now at its height. In April the season for it will end, true lovers of terrapin believing that it would be sacrilegious to eat it after that month had made its advent. Little "bull" terrapins were sold by the fishmongers yesterday at 10 cents each; "heifers" (with eggs) at 50 to 75 cents each, and "counters" or "cow" terrapins, large and full of eggs, at $1 to $2. The greater portion of the terrapins with which the markets are supplied come from Egg Harbor and Chesapeake Bay, the best, the "diamond backs," coming from the latter quarter. Shad, from Savannah, larger and better in every respect than any that have been received for some time, are now to be had at 40 cents to 75 cents each, the highest rate being for the fish with roe. Prices for groceries and staples of all kinds are unchanged.

USEFUL FAMILY HINTS.

POTATO SALAD, I.—Six large cold boiled potatoes cut fine, two small heads of lettuce broken in small pieces, half a small onion cut fine, two hard-boiled eggs, one tablespoon capers, Mayonnaise dressing, or a dressing made of French mustard, oil, and vinegar.—CLARA.

POTATO SALAD, II.—Boil one egg very hard, rub the yolk to a pulp; add one raw yolk, one teaspoonful of corn starch or fine flour, one of tarragon or other vinegar, one of sweet-oil, one salt-spoonful of mixed mustard, one of salt, half a salt-spoonful of cayenne and pepper, one tablespoonful of butter; beat thoroughly together to a smooth paste; slice cold potatoes thin, arrange in pyramid or mound shape and pour the mixture over; ornament with slices of boiled eggs, parsley, young celery tops, and sliced lemon—any or all, as you fancy.—After arranging on the dish put on ice to cool—RIDGEWOOD.

SAUCE TARTARE.—One cupful of hickory-nut meats, pounded in a mortar; one cup of sugar, one egg and a half, and two tablespoons of flour; bake on a greased paper: put very little in a place.—AUNT ADDIE.

SAFFRON-COLORED WHEAT BREAD.—Take a pint of actively-boiling water, salted slightly, and add enough find granulated wheat flour to form a thin mush; to this stir in a quart of tepid water, a small piece of butter, two eggs, well beaten, one half teacup of New-Orleans molasses, and one-half cake of compressed yeast dissolved in a little water; thicken it as stiff as it can be stirred with a spoon with cold blast flour, and put each loaf in a separate pan; let it stand until it puffs up nicely, and then bake in a quick oven two hours.—AUNT ADDIE.

APPLE JELLY.—A very nice firm, rich jelly may be made from the parings of apples and the cores. Cover them with water and let them boil until the water has wasted a little and the apple-skins are very soft; then strain them, and add an equal quantity of sugar as there is liquid. A little lemon juice, a few cloves, and some ginger improve the jelly.—AUNT ADDIE.

TO KEEP BEEF-STEAKS.—Have the steaks cut about the usual thickness. Mix together some salt, sugar, and some finely-powdered saltpetre. Lay in earthen jar lay a steak, and sprinkle it with this mixture; put on another, and sprinkle the same as before, and over all turn a plate with a heavy weight on it. This will form a brine of its own, and the meat will keep sweet in this way for a long time. You can take it out to broil in the usual way. This is a very good receipt for people who live away from cities. Do not let it freeze.—AUNT ADDIE.

STAINED BRASS.—Whiting wet with aqua-ammonia will cleanse brass from stains, and is excellent for polishing faucets and door-knobs of brass or silver.

INFORMATION WANTED.

A receipt for stewing rabbits.
How to choose rabbits in the markets.
A receipt for pickling red peppers.

"GO WEST, YOUNG MAN!"

A CHANCE FOR WHOLESALE DRY GOODS DEALERS.

A large dry goods firm, lately turned out of their stores in this City by a destructive fire, have been invited to go West. It seems that the news of their being burned out caught the attention of the wide-awake Mayor of one of our wide-awake Western cities, whereupon he sat down and penned his invitation. Unfortunately, the firm, with an energy which even a Western Mayor might applaud, had taken new stores, ordered new stocks, and had made ready to receive old customers, only one day having passed since the fire. But, as there may be other firms not so entangled in a city where "everything is overdone," the Mayor's letter is made public in the interest of the general good, and of Atchison, Kan., in particular:

MAYOR'S OFFICE,
ATCHISON, KANSAS, Jany 15th 1879.
Messrs ——— New York

Gentlemen
I see by the Dispatches that you have met with a heavy loss by Fire, which will damage your business much for the present, for which I am very sorry, but believing that the "STAR OF Empire is westward," and that you can do better out west here than in New York with much less Capitol engaged, I take pleasure in stateing to you, that we have a splendid opening for a Wholesale Dry Goods House Here, or two of them.

We have now already here exclusive wholesale Houses as follows several Grocirys, also Notions, Drugs, Crockery—Hardware, Leather, and other Houses—and what we need now is one or Two exclusive wholesale Dry Goods, and a Whole sale Hat & cap House

Atchison Kansas, is a live City, 8 Railroads, 74 Trains, arrive and depart daily—with 12000, Energetic and Wide Awake Western People, and is the comercial City of Kansas—it is now permenantly established as a Jobbing town—we have about a Dozen Jobbing Houses here, all a doing well—every one of them is a success—and what we need is one or 2 wholesale Dry Goods Houses—(we have a growing of Retail) and a firm with from $60,000 to $100000 capital can do a Buisness here, that would in 6 months astonish the proprietors—and on behalf of our Citizens here I invite you to come and see for yourself—while your are at present a little so to say out of Buisness—would it not be well to devide a little and Branch out—and part of firm come out to growing and enterprising Kansas—everything in New York City is serious, and here is a growing country, you are badly wanted, and you can do a buisness here with much more ease, and less capitol, come out here to Atchison and see for yourselfes—there is an opening here for a wholesale Dry Goods store, such as are few in the whole Country—and I again invite you on behalf of our citizens to come out and see for yourselves, and hope that you will accept my invitation

If you think you cannot come yourselves—but it is your firm we would like to have to open the wholesale Branch here—send us somebody who will open a store Respectfully &c C. ROHR, Mayor please answer—

TOPICS AT YALE COLLEGE.

From the New-Haven Palladium.

The subjects announced for the Townsend orations at the Law School, in Commencement Week, are the following: 1, "Public Faith;" 2, "Influence of Corporations on American Legislation;" 3, "Gladstone vs. Beaconsfield." The subjects for theses for the Senior Class are these: 1, "American Doctrine as to Precatory Trusts;" 2, "Changes in the law of Evidence in England and the United States during the Present Century;" 3, "The Right of Bona Fide Purchasers and Attaching Creditors in Respect to Personal Property which have been the Subjects of a Continual Sale." The subject for the M. L. theses is "Liens of Material Men, or Vessels of Another State," and that for the D. C. L. thesis, "Influence of 118 Noscl on Modern Laws as to Intestate Succession."

LE JOUR DE L'AN.

HOW THE FIRST OF JANUARY IS OBSERVED IN PARIS.

Paris Correspondence of the London Telegraph.

New Year's Day in Paris has a special physiognomy of its own. It is like no other day in the year; the majority of the shops are shut, but there is abnormal activity in all those which are open. The streets are crowded with people in holiday attire, but instead of sauntering about with that air of predetermined idleness steadily assumed by those who have not, as a rule, much leisure, the crowds one meets to-day are all hurrying about as though their lives depended on their haste, and are for the most part incumbered with bouquets and parcels. Articles de Paris are now mostly purchased at one of the large establishments which of late years have monopolized the trade of small shops, and these enormous houses keep enough vans and horses, one would think, to transport to one-half of the city all that is contained in the other. But all these means of transport are at this moment quite inadequate to the stress put upon them, and countless cabs are traversing the streets filled with packets that bulge out of the open windows. The amount of business done in bon-bons alone is simply marvelous. At one large house on the Boulevards there was such a crowd at the cashier's desk to-day that all who were recognized as regular customers were asked not to pay their bills for several days, as it was impossible to get through the work. At another establishment, which has just been in shop in the new Avenue de l'Opéra, the shutters were yesterday covered with printed bills stating that, the entire stock having been sold out, the doors would not be opened till midday, so as to allow time to replenish the shelves. This is a new advertisement, it was, to say the least, ingenious; but I am told that the place during the last week was crowded enough to account for sales to any amount. So intent is the entire population on paying visits and making presents that there is actually no public for the morning theatrical performances which take place on every other holiday in the year. All these are announced for to-morrow, so that there is no chance of getting any work done for many days to come. But if the aspect of Paris is essentially festive to-day, there is a reverse to the medal. This is one of the very few days in the year in which mendicity is permitted in the street. MM. les Gueux have fully availed themselves of their privilege. At 7 o'clock this morning, before it was light, began the strains of minstrelsy, which all through the day have been heard in alternation with the whining cries for charity, and in the neighborhood of the churches gendarmes had to be stationed to keep some approach to order among the rabble throng. The newspapers which usually appear in the afternoon were brought out this morning, but as they contained literally nothing but a history of the year which is just over, they might as well not have been published at all. The odd thing about this day is that it is the custom to call upon all your friends, and as everybody is engaged in the same pursuit, the consequence is that nobody sees anybody. Thus everybody might just as well stay at home. The custom, universal here, of sending cards by post diminishes to a great extent the corvée to which every resident is subjected, but it is usual to write your name down at the Ministries and Embassies, while the titularies of the post are either paying their respects to the Chief of the State or supporting him in his official receptions. All the interest of these ceremonials died with the Empire, and nothing but the mere observance of etiquette remains. Times are changed indeed since the Emperor's pointed and intentional rudeness to the Austrian Ambassador at a New Year's levee heralded the breaking out of the war undertaken for the liberation of Italy. No political manifestation was planned of to-day, and the ceremony was formal in the extreme. To realize the extent of this formality it is only necessary to state that the Marshal had to go down to Versailles, that being the official seat of Government, this morning, in time to be able to receive the Presidents of the two chambers at 10:30 o'clock; that at 10:45 o'clock he had to be back at the Prefecture to receive the military, civil, and ecclesiastical functionaries who came to offer the Roi Soliel. Although the Senate, the Chamber of Deputies, and the Prefecture at Versailles are not far apart, there cannot have been much time for conversation in the half-hour allotted to these visits. At 2 o'clock the Marshal was back at the Elysée in Paris waiting to receive the members of the Corps Diplomatique; and then began the long procession of dignitaries of State, of deputations from the various religious sects, of the Municipal and District Councilors, and of delegates from the various Ministries, and from every arm of the service. The streets in the neighborhood of the Elysée were kept clear for the mounted Gendarmerie de Paris, but, in spite of a steady down-pour, crowds continued to line the pavement in anticipation of an occasional blissful glimpse of a cocked hat or of a still more lordly coat. Even within the Palace the scene was devoid of all interest, but there, at all events, was no rain.

IRELAND NOT ASHAMED OF US.

IN HONORING GRANT SHE HONORS THE IRISHMEN WHO HAVE MADE AMERICA.

From the Dublin Freeman's Journal, Jan. 3.

The visit of Gen. Grant to Ireland, and the civic honor of which he is to be the object, have attracted very great interest throughout the country, and this for a very obvious and intelligible national reason. Gen. Grant is, no doubt, himself a remarkable man, a soldier of the highest eminence, who having saved the Union by his prowess in the field, when called upon to govern it showed many of the qualities of the statesman. The ceremony of to-day is not, however, for a moment to be regarded as a personal compliment to a distinguished visitor; it is something of a far higher import. If any mere personal compliment to the General were proffered, it would instantly occur to a discussion on certain transactions of his régime to which we have already alluded. We do not discuss these matters because in the proceedings of to-day the personality of Gen. Grant is naught. The people he represents is everything. The honor is paid by the Irish nation, through its most important Free Assembly, to the ex-President of the United States of America, as the representative of that great Republic from the first moment of its existence down to the present the Irish race and the Western Republic have been associated by the closest ties. In her military history by land and sea, from the day that the farmers at Concord Bridge fired that volley which the Irish poet has made immortal down to the day that the surrender of Lee closed the tremendous drama of the civil war, men of Irish birth or blood have always blazed in the front rank of the soldiers and sailors of America. From the day that Sullivan was the best and bravest of all the gallant Lieutenants of Washington down to the day that Fighting Phil Sheridan held the same position in the camp of Grant, a long galaxy of gallant Irish soldiers has adorned the military records of the States; and Barry is only the greatest name among a crowd of daring Irish sailors whose ships, flying the Stars and Stripes, have swept the Western seas. Right loyally have the Irish citizens of the United States answered, on every occasion, the calls made upon them; right well was that loyalty earned by the country, which, when Irishmen at home were denied the freedom of some of the rights, at least gave to them civil and religious liberty, happy homes, and hearty welcomes—every right and franchise of a citizen and a man. To-day is the first day on which the Irish race have an opportunity by a public and official act to pay a tribute of admiration and affection to the Republic, for to-day, for the first time, we see on Irish soil a man who has sat in the seat of Washington and held Jefferson's scepter. It is no foreign State that we do honor to-day. In making the Republic what it is no single racial element has played a greater part than the Irish, and we honor the representative of a land where millions of Irishmen dwell in happiness and peace—of a people of which for all time the Irish element must form one of the greatest and most enduring elements. And most assuredly of the country their brethren have helped, to make we in Ireland have no reason to be ashamed.

HELLER'S APPARATUS.

IT IS RELEASED TO HIS HEIRS AFTER BEING HELD FOR DUES.

From the Philadelphia Times, Jan. 24.

Since Robert Heller died, two months ago, all his traps, machinery, and apparatus have remained in Concert Hall, where he performed up to within 40 hours of his death. Of course, his estate had against it the current claims, including hall rent, hire of stage hands, agents' due, and newspaper bills, amounting to something like $750. According to the will the apparatus was to be destroyed, for, wrote the magician, "I have spent years of toil and much money to bring my tricks to their present state of perfection, and I do not propose why any one should reap the reward of my life of labor." Mr. Heller having passed to the other world, the only security that the proprietor of the hall had for his dues was the apparatus. This was also looked to by other creditors as a property to insure them for their claims against the estate. Various efforts have been made by Miss Haldee Heller to settle these claims, but the Executrix being in England, and, moreover, a person unfamiliar with the pending difficulties, could not effect a settlement. It was generally understood that the prestidigitateur had a great deal of money lying at his banker's, but he had, it appears, been something of a stock speculator in a quiet way, and, after he had been committed to his last resting-place, it was stated that all the money, or nearly all, had gone the way so well known to those who tarry long in the stock mart. Whether this is entirely true or not has never been shown, but the claims in Philadelphia against the estate met no satisfaction at this source, and the claimants were assured that the amount was almost nominal. Meanwhile the apparatus and fixtures remained at Concert Hall, out of whose doors they might not go, said the hall-owner, until the claim was paid. Yesterday Miss Heller came to New-York, bringing with her a lawyer named Gillette, and they tendered a sum of money to Mr. Lombard that was not satisfactory, as it represented but a small percentage of the claim. The matter was referred to Mr. Lombard's attorney, James H. Havirin, and an arrangement was finally arrived at. In a few hours the magician's machinery was on its way out of Philadelphia, and the other creditors were left without recourse.

MILITARY GOSSIP.

NATIONAL GUARD NOTES.

Company A, Fifteenth Battalion, Capt. Peter Alsgood, will drill in fatigue uniform, at its armory, on Mondays, Jan. 27 and Feb. 3.

The members of the disbanded Twenty-eighth Regiment, Brooklyn, are considering a plan of reorganization as a "Schuetzen Corps."

Company E, Thirty-second Regiment, Brooklyn, Capt. Peter Schlig commanding, celebrated its ninth anniversary by a ball at its armory last Monday evening.

Gatling Battery, Brooklyn, will shoot for the Beebe gold badge on Monday, Feb. 10, at the armory range. J. J. Meog was the last winner on the score of 14 out of 20.

The returns of the Second Brigade for the last quarter show a gain of eight within the three months, as follows: Ninth Regiment, 871; Eleventh, 568; Seventy-first, 575; brigade staff, 12; total, 2,026.

The Skidmore Guard, Major Brown commanding, is to have a reception and banquet at the Lexington-Avenue Opera-house on Friday evening next. Elaborate preparations are being made to insure a successful entertainment.

The Drum-Majors' Association, at its recent annual meeting, elected officers for the current year as follows: President, H. D. F. Rholfs; Vice-President, C. W. Hill; Secretary, William Samo; Treasurer, G. W. Brown. The next meeting of the association will take place on March 30.

Separate Troop A, Cavalry, Major Karl Klein commanding, paraded 40 men for dismounted drill, in fatigue uniform, at its armory last Wednesday evening. At a business meeting on the same evening a new fatigue cap was adopted. The troop will have a mounted drill on Wednesday evening next.

Company D, Seventy-first Regiment, has chosen civil officers for the current year as follows: President, Capt. W. C. Clark; Vice-President, Lieut. R. D. McIntock; Recording Secretary, Sergt. W. M. Inglis; Financial Secretary, Sergt. P. H. Halley; Treasurer, Lieut. J. W. Wilson. The company is making preparations for a grand ball at Irving Hall on Wednesday, March 5.

Company F, Twenty-second Regiment, will hold its eighteenth annual reunion at the regimental armory on Tuesday evening next, beginning at 8 o'clock. The affair promises entertainment for a large party. Invitations have been extended to the veterans and honorary members of the company to be present on that occasion.

Gen. J. M. Varian, commanding the Third Brigade, has appointed a general court-martial to meet at the State Arsenal on Monday evening, Feb. 3, for the trial of officers in the brigade who have been detailed as judges at said trial. The officers detailed are: Lieut.-Col. F. A. Schilling, Eighth Regiment, President; Major Joseph Holland, and Capt. Albert L. David, brigade staff.

The funeral of the late Nathan F. Moss, of Company K, Seventh Regiment, took place at the Broadway Tabernacle on Wednesday last. Rev. Dr. W. M. Taylor conducted the services. The company was well represented, and the pall-bearers were Samuel Vanderveer, R. L. Wheeler, Amos Smith, John Dudley, M. Borden, and Daniel Robinson. Interment took place at Westerly, R. I.

The London Volunteer Service Gazette of Jan. 4 contains correspondence between Capt. John Lindsay Stevenson, of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery, Boston, Mass., and Francis Knollys, private secretary of the Prince of Wales, in which the election of his Royal Highness as an honorary member of the "A and H" is announced, together with the reply of the Prince of Wales, accepting the compliment.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Officers of the Sixty-ninth Regiment, Major Edward Duffy presiding, the following resolutions were passed:

Resolved, That we take advantage of this sad opportunity to place on record our high estimate of the character of the late Dr. W. T. Nesbit, and our recognition of his services and bravery while acting with this regiment during the war for the preservation of the Union.

Resolved, That we tender our sincere sympathy to his bereaved family in their great affliction.

Battery K, Artillery, Major A. Hoelzle commanding, had its twelfth annual ball, at Teutonia Assembly Rooms, on Wednesday evening last. There was a large and jolly party present, comprising members of the several troops of cavalry and batteries of artillery of the First and Second Divisions. Major Karl Klein, of Separate Troop A, Cavalry, and 30 guests from the Army Corps of the night there. Private Louis Meitel has been appointed veterinary surgeon of this battery.

At First Division Head-quarters the returns have been received of the election of George H. Bennett as Corporal, Separate Troop B, Cavalry; the appointment as Quartermaster of the Eleventh Regiment of Otto Heinzman; resignation of Charles Goldzier, Commissary of the Eleventh Regiment, and First Lieut. F. Notbohm, Company G, in the same command, and Second Lieut. E. N. Eilers, Engineer Corps, Eighth Regiment. Special orders from General Head-quarters provide for the removal of the disabilities of Capt. Max Ebler, Fifth Regiment.

Capt. H. W. Clarke, of Company I, Fifty-first Regiment, Syracuse, says that his letters recently published in a Syracuse journal were called out by "a one-sided criticism" made by the Brigade Inspector of Rifle Practice upon the standing of the Fifty-first Regiment. He claims that "to the average Inspector of Rifle Practice it makes no difference how well up in drill and discipline an organization may be, if it shows a low 'figure of merit' it is severely criticised and its commander severely condemned." The Captain also considers the "figure of merit at best a meretricious figure."

The Eleventh Regiment Benevolent Society, recently described in THE TIMES, is progressing finely, and Col. Unbekant, its founder, has already collected $2,000 for the object. The Germania Bank is to be the custodian of the money collected, and no draft upon the fund will be honored unless signed by the Disbursing Committee, which is to consist of the Colonel, a Captain, Lieutenant, Sergeant, and private. The committee is to be elected annually, with the exception of the Colonel, who shall always be Chairman. The society solicits subscriptions to the fund from all who are interested in the welfare of the regiment and the object expressed by the society.

Company E, Twenty-second Regiment, has elected non-commissioned officers as follows: Sergt. Robert Abbott, Quartermaster Sergeant; Corp. L. E. Maidhof, Sergeant; also, Private Charles A. Ferguson, Corporal. The Veteran Corps of this command, at its recent annual meeting, chose the following officers for the ensuing year: Gen. Lloyd Aspinwall, Colonel; James A. Otis, Lieutenant-Colonel; E. H. Kent, Major; G. F. Patterson, Jr., Adjutant; J. Crawford, Quartermaster; B. B. Ogden, Paymaster; J. P. Hardine, Chaplain; Captains, D. B. Gilbert, G. H. Barnes, J. H. Palmer, Isaac Smith, H. W. Carey, H. A. Cuppia, C. S. Halstead, H. Drisler, and H. D. Harris. Veterans of the regiment who have not yet joined the corps are requested by the Colonel to do so, addressing the Adjutant at No. 156 Broadway.

Company I, Twelfth Regiment, First Lieut. Charles M. Williams commanding, is under orders to parade in full-dress uniform to-day at noon, at the funeral of its late member, Private Odar Quinn. Private Quinn was a veteran of the Thirty-third Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, and served with Hooker in Wauhatchee and Lookout Mountain, and from thence to Resaca, Cassville, and finally to Atlanta until its capture. He was also one of the troops who marched "to the sea" with Sherman. He was next in the command led by Sherman at the siege of Knoxville in 1864. After the war Mr. Quinn was commissioned Second Lieutenant of Company D, Seventy-ninth Highlanders, and upon the disbandment of that famous command he interested himself in the formation of Company D, Twelfth Regiment, of which Capt. John Munro was until recently Captain. He was faithful in the performance of his duty, genial as a companion, and will be mourned by every member of the company.

Gen. Frederick Vilmar, commanding the Second Brigade, has ordered the Examining Board of his command to meet at the Seventy-first Regiment Armory to-morrow, at, 8 o'clock P. M., for an examination of the qualifications of Lieut.-Col. S. Oscar Ryder, Colonel-elect of the Ninth Regiment. Col. Ryder, being one of the best drill-masters in the State, ought to pass a first-class examination. At a meeting of Company E, Seventh Regiment, last Tuesday evening, the following preamble and resolution was adopted: "Whereas, at an election held at the armory of the Ninth Regiment, Lieut.-Col. Ryder, formerly of this company, was elected Colonel of said command, he is resolved, That we tender to Col. Ryder our congratulations for the honor that has been conferred upon him; that we view with pleasure and pride his re-entry into military life, and trust that the future will be one of brilliancy and success, both for himself and the noble command of which he is now the head."

Col. W. H. Brownell, commanding the Forty-seventh Regiment, Brooklyn, has issued orders directing his command to assemble for drill and instruction as follows: Non-commissioned officers on Thursday, Jan. 30 and Friday, Feb. 7; the entire regiment on Monday, Jan. 27, Wednesday, Feb. 5, and Tuesday, Feb. 11. Companies will drill in guard duties as follows: Companies D and E, to-morrow evening; E and F, Wednesday, Feb. 5; F and G, Tuesday, Feb. 11. Officers of the Day on those occasions will be Capt. George H. Street, to-morrow evening; First Lieut. Henry J. Richardson, Feb. 5, and First Lieut. W. R. Pettigrew, Feb. 11. Officers of the Guard are to be: First Lieuts. Henry N. Meeker, to-morrow; Frank L. Wenzel on Feb. 5, and Charles Smylie on Feb. 11. Capt. George H. Street, of Company E, has been commissioned. Leave of absence for 30 days has been granted to Second Lieut. Frank J. La Count. Announcement is made, in orders, of the death of Private John G. Davis, Company F, and Edward H. Stodder, Company E. Company I is to give a musical and literary entertainment at the Greenpoint armory next Tuesday evening.

At the annual meeting of the Veteran Guards, Twenty-third Regiment, Brooklyn, last Monday evening, officers for the ensuing year were elected, as follows: Capt. M. C. Ogden, Captain and President; Lieut. W. J. Martin, First Lieutenant and Vice-President; Capt. T. J. Stevens, Second Lieutenant and Recording Secretary; Sergt. George S. Jewell, First Sergeant and Financial Secretary; Lieut. E. F. Davenport, Second Sergeant and Treasurer; Lieuts. G. McMillan and R. H. McCormick, Sergeants. In addition to the officers, the Board of Management includes Charles H. Stoddard, John C. Ferry, and John Lapsley. Capt. Charles F. Joy, of Company F in the active regiment, has received a communication from George H. Benton, Secretary of the Athenæum Dramatic Society, announcing that its proposes to give a dramatic entertainment at the Brooklyn Academy of Music on Wednesday, Feb. 19, for the benefit of Company F. The plays represented will be "Villikens and his Dinah," and "How She Loves Him."

The annual report of Inspector-General John B. Woodward, which has just been made to the Adjutant-General, contains many pertinent suggestions. Referring to the reductions in the forces made in the Fall of 1877, he says "they worked exceedingly well." The plan introduced by Gen. Ward, of the First Brigade, of detailing his staff officers to attend all battalion drills in his command occurring during the season, is commended, and would, in the opinion of Gen. Woodward, be a good plan to be followed by every brigade commander. It is suggested, also, that all commissioned General and staff officers should be compelled to provide themselves with regulation uniforms. Many have, however, already complied with the regulations in this respect. Continuing, he says: "It is evident that if complete uniformity in the matter of dress and equipment is secured, a more explicit definition of what is required than that laid down in the regulations is needed." Article 47, he thinks, should be revised, and rendered more explicit. Certain paragraphs prescribe that articles of equipment to which they refer shall be "according to pattern," while "as a matter of fact these 'patterns' have never been provided, and have no existence." It is recommended that "either the articles of equipment should be fully described, or that standard patterns should be provided and placed on exhibition at centres where they can be readily accessible to manufacturers and dealers in military equipments, as well as to inspecting officers." Paragraph 889, General Regulations, should be inserted in the list of insignia, letters for staff tants, Chaplains, Veterinary Surgeons, and aides-de-camp. This insignia should also be worn on shoulder-straps as well as on shoulder-knots and epaulets. The General says he has "been very much embarrassed in mustering musicians in bands, especially in this City and Brooklyn. Investigation has discovered a chronic habit of rotation from organization to organization on the part of many musicians, and the appearance of the same name on several rolls has not been an unusual occurrence. He therefore recommends that sections 8 and 107, Military Code, be amended so as to provide that musicians in bands shall not be included in the annual muster, nor counted in the aggregate strength of the National Guard, and that section 150 be amended so as to leave these musicians off from the musters of field and staff of regiments, &c.

A POPE'S PROPERTY.

SALE OF THE EFFECTS OF THE LATE PIUS IX.

Rome Correspondence of the London Standard.

Three apartments are appropriated to the sale. Anywhere else they would be vast saloons. Measured by the scale of the Vatican, they are ordinary-sized rooms. In the central one, to which visitors are first admitted, is a large quantity of the most intolerably wretched oil-paintings which it was ever my lot to see gathered together in one place. They are all sacred subjects, with the exception of a series of pictures representing the Pope going in procession to assist at high mass in the Sistine Chapel, the Via Sacra, the Colosseum, &c.—and they appear to be copies of copies of copies for the most part. In particular, I observed a version of Raphael's "Madonna della Seggiola," the well-known picture in Florence, which was enough to make the spirit of the great artist—if he haunts the scenes of his earthly triumphs—flee away in horror from those walls he has made glorious with beauty. All these pictures are catalogued and numbered. But I saw no one make the faintest approach to asking the price of any of them. Next door are two magnificent Gobelin pieces of Gobelin tapestry hung on the wall. These are not for sale, but they are very precious just now to the visitor, as affording a rest and relief to the eye, after the exhibition of works of art (!) ranged below them. After a brief period of waiting, Monsignor (who had been detained in consequence of having to wait on his Holiness) appeared, and ushered the assembled company into a second room. The said company was not very numerous, and consisted almost exclusively of ladies, and almost entirely of foreigners. A great many heretic bank notes have had the honor of being exchanged for memorials of Pope Pius IX. during these latter days. His Royal Highness the Crown Prince of Sweden has made one or two handsome purchases, and numerous other Protestants of non-regal rank have done the same. At present the bulk of the most precious objects have been disposed of. There are still, however, some handsome things to be had. The collection is of the most curiously varied sort. Among the articles which recur to my memory, I may take at random several pairs of embroidered slippers, an Indian carved casket, a jar full of rice, some common muslin antimacassars, a diamond cross with gold chain, colored binding for furniture, a set of silver gilt salt-spoons, and some blankets! I have been told beforehand that the articles were priced remarkably low. This I did not find to be quite accurate as regards all the things. But I am inclined to believe that the really precious objects, such as gold and gems, &c., were cheaper in proportion than the commoner ones. There has been some fine old lace to be had, but that is now nearly all gone. I remarked, too, a crimson velvet sexpalary, magnificently embroidered in gold; a pastoral ring, containing an emerald of large size, and several surplices, for one of which 4000 francs was demanded; but the lace which trimmed it was rather ancient and torn. Perhaps some of the most available articles for the general public were a collection of fragments of marble from the various catacombs, polished and inscribed in red letters, as follows: "Fragmentum Lapidis e Cæmeterio Calisti, (or Domitillæ, as the case may be,) Pio IX. Pont. Max. Sacri. Princ. Ann. XXVIII." These are not expensive, and form nice little memorials; but they are nearly all disposed of. One feature of this sale, which particularly distinguished it from any other species of commercial operation I have ever witnessed in Italy was the impossibility of bargaining. The price of each article is plainly marked in a catalogue, which Mgr. Fericoli keeps in his own hands, and from which, when you tell him the number affixed to the object you wish to purchase, he reads out the cost. Thus it is; so many francs, no more and no less; and if your purse be not long enough to afford it, you gracefully retire and hold your tongue—that is all. Altogether, the whole is a curious one, and one not likely to be repeated in the same fashion. To behold a reverend Prelate of Holy Church with his purple silk mantle on his shoulders, measuring by the yard a piece of binding or a pair of old shoes, and receiving your money for the same with a courtly bow, is a spectacle not to be seen every day. And then the surroundings—the magnificence of the spectacle do not detract from its strangeness. Anywhere else in the world it would be still more wonderful. But in Rome we breathe an atmosphere of marvels, and whatever the future may have in store for the Eternal City, she does not at present threaten to become prosaic and commonplace, whether in adversity or prosperity.

HOW OFFENBACH IMPROVISED A SUCCESSFUL OPERA.

From London Truth, Jan. 9.

Offenbach, who has just scored another great success with his new opera comique, "Madame Favart," although in a line slightly different from his former works, is probably the most prolific composer in existence. His abundance of musical ideas is wonderful, and the following instance of it was once given to me by M. Cantin, one of the authors of his present libretto. The maestro had agreed to write the music of an operetta under the title of "l'Apothicaire et le Perruquier." When called upon to fulfill his promise, however, he did not care much to do so, and the young author had to remind him more than once of the treaty between them. Some coldness ensued, and finally matters came to a hot discussion, which took place in Offenbach's study. "Well, Sir, you want your music, do you?" the maestro said at last in a fit of passion. "You shall have it, too, and all at once. Please to sit down there. Here is a newspaper and a cigar for you." He jumped at ruled paper, pen, and ink, and began to write away for an hour or so. Then turning round to his foe: "Here is the music; you can take it away with you and have it played if you like." "You cannot mean it," objected the author, "in the name of your own fame." "I tell you, Sir, you can take it, as you shall have no other." Seeing that he could gain nothing more, the author went away with the manuscript. He took it to some friends, and on examination it was found that there were five or six charming melodies in this musical scribbling—quite enough for a one-act operetta. Offenbach was prevailed upon to revise it, and within a month the work was presented. It proved a complete success.

ANOTHER INCREDIBLE NEVADA STORY.

From the Eureka (Nev.) Leader, Jan. 14.

The fossilized remains of a gigantic prehistoric man have been discovered 200 feet beneath the earth's surface in a cave recently opened in the Kit Carson Mine, near Eureka. The lower limbs, head, and neck were as natural as those of the Cadiz Giant, [!] and in some respects the traces of the human features plainly marked. That they have found the remains of some prehistoric being is beyond question. One of the lower extremities was broken off, and is now on exhibition as Jack Perry's saloon, where it has been examined by numerous people recently, those posted in the anatomy of the human frame pronouncing it a wonderful petrifaction. the minor points all being perfect to admire.

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

SALES AT THE STOCK EXCHANGE—JAN. 25.

FIRST BOARD—10:30 A. M.

Tennessee 6s, old. C. $5,000..bc. 36⅔
5,000..bc. 36⅞
D. of C. 3.65s C. 2,000..... 81⅛
5,000..bc. 81⅛
N. J. C. 1st con.ss 4,000..... 79⅞
8,000..... 79⅝
10,000..... 79⅜
10,000..bs. 79⅛
M. J. C. conv. ss. 6,000..... 79⅝
6,000..... 79
N. J. C. Adjm't. 1,500..... 94
Am. D. L. O. 7s. 10,000..... 60
Am. D. L. Oc. 7s ass. 1,000..... 94½
M. & St. P. 1st, La C. 5,000..... 109⅞
M. & St. P. c. 1st. 14,000..... 73⅜
10,000..bc. 78⅛
C. P. 1st. S. F. 4,000..... 98
4,000..... 98
C. P. 1st. C. & O. Br. 5,000..... 97
K. P. 1st 7s, D. Div. with op. scr. 1,000..... 105⅞
K. P. 6s. J. & D. '96. with coup. cer. 1,000..... 109⅞
M. & St. P. c. 1st. 5,000..... 73⅝
L. & W. B. con.ss. 15,000..a.c. 47⅛
10,000..bc. 47
K. & T. 1st M. 10,000..... 88¼
Iowa Mid Ss. 1st. 1,000..... 90
D. L. & W. 7s. 1907. 3,000..... 107⅞
D. L. & W. 7s. 1907. 10,000..... 107¾
A. & T. H. 2d, pf. 4,000..... 39
M., K. & T. 2d. 30,000..bs 15
H. & St. Jo. Ss. con. 1,000..... 106⅞
D. & R. G. 1st. 10,000..... 91¼
Erie 4th. 8,000..... 106
Ohio & Miss. 2d. 1,000..... 98⅝
Marietta & C. 1st. 5,000..... 86
D. & R. G. '97. 10,000..... 98¼
C. & S. 1st. g'd by Lake Shore. 2,000..... 97½
American Ex. 1,000..... 47½
Canton. 50..... 29
Delaware & Had. 500..... 44¾
Western Union. 100..... 98⅞
Homestake M. Co. 100..... 97
Del. & Hud. 100..... 22¼
200..... 22
200..... 22⅜
520..... 22⅝
700..... 23
Quicksilver. 100..... 14⅞
Quicksilver pf. 100..... 54½
200..... 54⅝
Pacific Mail. 200..s3. 13⅜
400..... 13⅝
250..... 13⅝
N. Y. C. & H. 900..... 115¾
Erie Railway. 800..... 27
2700..... 27⅛
1500..bs3. 27¼
2600..... 27⅜
1000..s3. 27
2000..... 26⅞
2910..... 26⅝
400..... 26⅞
2000..... 26⅝
1600..... 26⅞
300..s3. 26⅜
Erie Railway pf. 100..a20. 48¾
1300..a20. 48⅝
200..... 49
Mich. Central. 100..s3. 84
100..... 84⅜
100..... 84⅝
200..... 85
250..s3. 85
100..... 85⅛
100..... 85⅜
200..... 85⅝
1025..... 85¾
900..... 85⅞
600..... 85⅝
600..... 85⅞
300..... 85⅝
900..bs3. 85⅝
1300..... 86⅜
200..... 86⅝
120..... 87
100..... 86⅜
100..... 86⅝
100..u.c. 86¾
350..... 86⅝
200..... 86¾
Illinois Central. 200..... 86⅞
200..... 86¾
100..s3. 86⅜
300..s3. 86½
400..... 86¾
1000..... 86⅞

SALES FROM 2:30

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THE BAKER OF THURSO.

ROBERT DICK, BAKER, OF THURSO, GEOLOGIST AND BOTANIST. By SAMUEL SMILES, LL. D., author of "Life of a Scotch Naturalist," "Self-Help," "Thrift," &c., &c. With a portrait and numerous illustrations. New-York: HARPER & BROTHERS.

Few of our readers, probably, have ever heard the name of Robert Dick, the humble baker of Thurso, whose obscure but useful life is admirably told by Mr. Smiles in the volume before us. His days were passed in toil and poverty in a little town in the northernmost part of Scotland. Self-educated by constant study of a few well-chosen books, and by the habit of close and intelligent study of nature, he became one of the most profound of geologists and botanists. His collections were acknowledged to be the best and most complete ever gathered by one man, and many eminent scientists were indebted to him for information that made them famous. Yet he died in obscurity and privation. He never received any adequate recognition of his great services in the cause of science, nor any assistance from societies or the Crown, often unworthily bestowed, that would have prolonged his life and enabled him to extend his researches and perfect his knowledge. Yet more than 20 years ago, Sir Roderick Murchison, in a speech before the British Association at Leeds, drew attention to this man and his extraordinary achievements. "In pursuing my researches in the Highlands," said the Baronet on this occasion, "and going beyond Sutherland into Caithness, it was my gratification a second time to meet with a remarkable man in the town of Thurso, named Robert Dick, a baker by trade. I am proud to call him my distinguished friend. When I went to see him he spread out before me a map of Caithness and pointed out its imperfections. Mr. Dick had traveled over the whole county in his leisure hours, and was thoroughly acquainted with its features. He delineated to me, by means of some flour which he spread out on his baking board, not only its geographical features, but certain geological phenomena which he desired to impress upon my attention. Here is a man who is earning his daily bread by his hard work; who is obliged to read and study by night; and yet who is able to instruct the Director-General of the Geographical Society."

Sir Roderick goes on to say that he found himself humiliated by the vastly superior knowledge of botany which this poor baker had attained, and asserts that he might be famous if his work were known to the world at large. "I have mentioned these facts," he concludes, "in order that the audience may deduce a practical application." One would think that the "practical application" should, in this case, have taken the shape of immediate material aid to one capable of such great things in spite of wearing poverty; that the royal bounty should have been invoked to lift him above the necessity of wasting in mere drudgery a life that might have been employed in lofty pursuits. But nothing of the kind was done. The mention of his name by the distinguished Baronet brought Robert Dick nothing but vexation. Curious visitors besieged his shop to stare at the learned baker, as they would have stared at a learned pig, without paying the fee that would have recompensed the showman. Naturalists from all parts of England wrote to him for specimens from his collections, and used them, in many cases, without thanks and without acknowledgment of the source from which they came. For several years he maintained a correspondence with Hugh Miller, and furnished him ungrudgingly with the rarest specimens of fossils to be found in Scotland, and but for him the "Footprints of the Creator," Miller's most admirable work, might never have been written. the principal facts of the greater portion of the geological groundwork of that volume having been made accessible through the labors of the baker of Thurso. The author was not ungrateful. He acknowledged heartily his indebtedness to Dick. Yet the name of this "Hon's provider," as he was sometimes jocularly called, does not appear in Miller's biography, and the magnificent collection of fossils gathered by the poor baker, often at the risk of his life, and given to the prosperous and famous author, and which is now in the Museum of Science and Art, at Edinburgh, bears the name of Miller instead of Dick.

It is well to rescue such a life as this from oblivion. Far better had it been to afford the means to raise that life above poverty and obscurity while there was yet time for higher work, and for the recognition which should be the meed of unselfish and meritorious service in the cause of knowledge. But there is use in the story of such a life. It is not only well to honor the memory of a man who was allowed by his contemporaries to suffer in obscure but honorable poverty, and to go down to the grave without having tasted the sweets of well-merited praise, but it may also be a help to others who, in like circumstances, spend a life of unselfish toil, and who find their reward in the consciousness of duty well performed, "as ever in the Great Taskmaster's eye."

Robert Dick was born in the picturesque village of Tullibody, Scotland, in the month of January, 1811. His father, Thomas Dick, was an officer of excise, an attentive, diligent, and capable man, who eventually rose to one of the highest positions in the service. He sent Robert and his other children to an excellent school, and the lad was learning rapidly when, at an early age, he had the misfortune to lose his mother. Thomas Dick soon married a second time, and then an unhappy life began for Robert. The step-mother was naturally kind, but her own children soon claimed her care and affection, and the offspring of the first wife were neglected and harshly treated. Instead of being sent to college, as his father had designed, Robert was apprenticed for three years and a half to a baker in Tullibody. His work was hard. He rose at 3 in the morning, and drudged in the bake-shop until 7 or 8 and often until 9 in the evening. When strong enough to carry the basket on his head, he was sent about to deliver the bread in the neighboring villages. He was sent to Menstrie, to Lipney on the Ochils, to Blairlogie at the foot of Dunmyat, and further westward to the Bridge of Allan, about six miles from Tullibody. These excursions were a great pleasure to Dick. He had an opportunity for observing nature, which had charms for him in all its moods. When he went up the hills to Lipney, he wandered on his return through Menstrie Glen. He watched the growth of the plants. He knew them individually, one from the other. He began to detect the differences between them, though he then knew little about orders, classes, and genera. When the hazel-nuts were ripe he gathered them and brought loads of them home for the enjoyment of his master's bairns. They all had a great love for the 'prentice Robert.

He was always a great reader, devouring every book he could lay his hands on. Popular works on science were not so common then as they are now, but Robert contrived to borrow some old volumes of the old "Edinburgh Encyclopedia," and these gave him an insight into the scientific departments that engaged his attention. He was chiefly interested in botany. He could now find out for himself the names of the plants, and he even began to make a collection. It could only have been a small one, for his time was principally occupied by labor. Yet, with a thirst for knowledge and a determination to obtain it, a great deal may be accomplished in even the humblest station. As Stone, the son of the Duke of Argyll's gardener, said, "One needs only to know the 26 letters of the alphabet to be able to learn everything else that one wishes."

At length, when he was 17 years old, his time was out, and for three years more he wandered up and down the country as a journeyman baker. His father, meanwhile, had removed to Thurso, in the County of Caithness, the northernmost town in Great Britain. It lies within sight of Orkney, the Ultima Thule of the Romans. There was only one bake-shop in the town, and thither, acting on his father's advice, Robert Dick went in the Summer of 1830, and opened a shop in a pleasant house, to which, in after years, eminent naturalists were attracted by the splendid collections of fossils and plants gathered by him in his wanderings in the hills and quarries and along the sea.

Dick's life at Thurso was one of hard work and poverty. He never prospered sufficiently to enlarge his business or hire assistance. A faithful housekeeper was his only help. An early disappointment in love kept him a bachelor until the end of his life. His fondness for reading increased with years, and the study of nature was a passion with him. After his bread was baked in the morning, he would leave the shop to the care of his housekeeper, and go out upon a search for plants or fossils. Sometimes he would vary his wanderings by making a day's journey over the moors and mountains, returning home at night, after a tramp of 40 or 50 miles, to prepare for the next day's baking. He was always an early riser, seldom leaving his bed later than 4 o'clock, and often starting out upon his expeditions by 3 in the morning.

It was long before the people of Thurso could make out the strange man, who acted as never baker they had known. He made good bread, and his biscuits were the best in the town. But he was sometimes seen coming back from the country bespattered with mud, after a long tramp on the moors in search of specimens. What were they to make of this extraordinary conduct? It could have no connection with baking. When it was at length discovered that he was collecting "bugs," the good people were distracted by the suspicion that he might use them in making bread. They were still more alarmed by his disregard of the Scotch notions of keeping the Sabbath. At first he attended the kirk regularly, returning from his walks early on Sunday morning in order to do so. But one day "he got a sermon from the minister which made his ears tingle." It was upon the awful crime of Sabbath-breaking by wandering about in "pursuit of science, falsely so called." From that time he forsook the kirk, and every Sunday held a solitary service in his own house, reading the Bible, commentaries, and sermons. This behavior seriously interfered with his business. Rival bakers opened shops in Thurso. Their bread was not as good as Dick's, and they were not scrupulous to give full weight in their loaves; but they attended the kirk regularly, and their business prospered, while that of the honest baker fell off.

Robert Dick withdrew more and more within himself. Keeping the even tenor of his way, he still worked diligently at his trade and continued his researches in geology and botany. In course of time his collections attracted the attention of men of science, and his name was occasionally mentioned in the proceedings of learned bodies. He formed an intimate friendship with Hugh Miller, who paid him a visit and made great use of his knowledge and specimens. Some of his discoveries confirmed and some overthrew theories which scientists had constructed "in the depth of their inner consciousness." Had he been able to go out into the world, he might have made for himself a famous name. But he was never in a position to leave Thurso. His daily earnings, gradually decreasing, sufficed only for his daily support. He never had enough money to take him on the shortest journey; and, while his merit was well known to men of influence in the scientific world, no one ever took the pains to secure him a position to which his great knowledge and abilities entitled him, and where they could have been turned to larger account.

In his last days, when sorely stricken with poverty, infirmities, and sickness; when he had been compelled to sell his magnificent collection for a trifling sum in order to save himself from starving to death, his friends tardily bestirred themselves to help him. But it was too late. His eye had grown dim, and his limbs feeble in the long struggle. No single man, unassisted, had ever accomplished more in the work to which Robert Dick had given his life, and at the end he died almost destitute and alone. Then people awoke to their loss. His body was buried at an expense that would have sufficed to keep him comfortable for years, for he was a man of small needs and frugal temperament. And then he was forgotten. Authors, who were largely indebted to his unselfish labors for their own success, suffered his name to fade out of memory, and others reap the rewards which were his due.

In the interesting memoir by Mr. Smiles full justice is done to the life, character, and achievements of this remarkable man. The work deserves to be widely read. It is full of entertaining sketches, drawn partly from Mr. Dick's letters and partly from his journals, and is complete as a record of his honorable though obscure career. The attractive form in which the volume is published, and the number and beauty of its illustrations, increase its claims to a favorable reception by the public.

FRESH TALES.

SIGNOR MONALDINI'S NIECE. "No Name Series. Boston: ROBERTS BROTHERS. 1879.

The "No Name Series" affords a convenient outlet for the writing talents of Americans living abroad who do not care to enter the novelist's field at once over their own names. "Kismet" was a successful novel after this kind, the scenes being laid in Egypt. "Mirage," by the same hand, had to do with Syria and Palestine. The present work, incomparably stronger than any of the preceding novels of the series, plays itself out in Rome and its neighborhood. One hesitates to believe that a very young person could have written "Signor Monaldini's Niece." The general impression is that of work by a woman, but there are turns of thought and description that betray a very masculine side. In these days of literary copartnerships, perhaps two hands have been at work on the novel. Yet the whole is cast in an individual mold, so that if two persons have had a finger in the pie, the final mixing and baking has been done by one.

The beautiful niece of a Signor Monaldini, of Rome, who is part French and part Italian, born in Paris, brought up in a studio, and left at 18 to the kindness of her uncle and aunt, cannot be regarded as a type of either a French girl or an Italian, but unites in herself an ideal of a young girl that includes the American love of freedom, French cleverness, and Italian subtlety and grace. The author insists that she is not subtle, but she is; the difference between her and the uncle lies merely in the want in him of the principle that keeps her from intrigue. Through sympathy with her we are made to think of the restraints put upon European women in Latin countries. The women of the Monaldinis, being neither noble nor enormously rich, cannot take the liberties assumed by the select few at Rome; not being American or English, they cannot allow Camilla the personal freedom of coming and going which she craves. Camilla sees an Eccellenza named Don Philippo, who is not only far above her people socially, but has a wife in an insane asylum. He fills her ideal, and she will receive no offers of marriage, let her uncle say what he will. Monaldini naturally wishes to establish her in life. Don Philippo has also noticed her; the mutual recognition ripens into friendship at the rooms of an eccentric Baroness von Klenze, a rough Bavarian, and becomes a dangerous complication during a villeggiatura at a villa near Tivoli, where the Baroness and Don Philippo take Summer lodgings. The end is tragic up to the last paragraph, when, news having arrived of the death of the insane wife, Camilla comes to life again in the arms of her Don Philippo. The tragic part is by no means the most successful. Don Claudio, a rejected lover, throws Camilla into the water just as Don Philippo is about to pursuade her to stay near him in Rome instead of going to Paris. It is at night, in a sombre corner of the grounds of the villa. Yet even here we see the good sense of the writer in making Don Philippo passive, instead of causing him to spring in after her, or do anything violent. He is an Italian of 40, stoutish, smooth, urbane, and noble. He merely fishes her out of the pond, without doing anything heroic. The discarded lover blows out his brains.

It is not Camilla alone who protests against the outrageous suspicions that follow women who assert their freedom in Rome. Miss Conroy is an Englishwoman, who tries to make her living by teaching. She is the victim, like Camilla, of a marriage for interested motives. The man who loves her is married to a person she hates, just as Don Philippo is the victim of a marriage by family arrangement. When Miss Conroy is almost starving, this man gives her a house and establishment; she falls heir to money in time to save her virtue, but in return for his generosity she becomes his mistress. Camilla is nearly drifted into a similar dilemma, but does not think of yielding, like Miss Conroy, when the catastrophe comes. There is, also, a Mrs. Brandon, friend to Miss Conroy, who exhibits very cleverly the propensity of many women to slander their best friends while pretending to praise them. Her insinuations precipitate Miss Conroy's fall.

The degrading safeguards put about women in Rome are often contrasted with the customs of America and the latter defended, generally indirectly. The Von Klenze is a woman who flies in the face of the world, dines at a café with artists, smokes cigars, and dresses like a fishwife. Miss Conroy pursues her way like a brave, rather cold-blood Englishwoman, until poverty is too much for her. Camilla temporizes and rebels, managing at last to secure her object through the power, one has to think, of her pliable, ingenious Italian temperament. Her Don Philippo is not a man's ideal. One suspects that, womanlike, she is dazzled by his high position as much as charmed by his agreeable exterior. Toward the last she is at her wit's end where to turn. Her uncle has insulted her; the Von Klenze cannot forgive her refusal of Carlisle, a favorite sculptor, and she cannot ask Don Philippo for money. Her dilemma for want of money is like that of Eustacia in Hardy's "Return of the Native."

There are points of resemblance in a general way, not in particulars, between this writer and Hardy. There is a similar wealth of description of nature, which is sometimes pushed too far, until it looks like padding. There is a like weakness in the catastrophe, a like pleasure in relating things that have small relevancy to the plot. While Hardy tends to a redundancy like that of Browning, the author of this book has a slight leaning toward "fine writing." Hardy is a poet, but would probably fail in verse. The writer of "Signor Monaldini's Niece" will probably turn out a better poet than a prose writer. Many passages sound too florid for prose. Yet it is also true that these passages are soon redeemed by some natural transition which brings one back again to the ordinary level. The book fulfills the publisher's demand for a successful novel. It is not short, seldom abrupt, has a love story of the warmest and tenderest, and describes admirably foreign people from the ideal stand-point. Besides all that, it appeals in many ways to people who do not read for the story, but for the texture of a book.

JARL'S DAUGHTER, AND OTHER STORIES. By Mrs. F. H. BURNETT. Philadelphia: T. B. PETERSON & BROTHERS.

Following their early advantage, the Philadelphia publishers of Mrs. Burnett's youthful stories issue three more under paper covers—The Jarl's Daughter, The Man Who Loved Elizabeth, and Wanted—A Young Person. Contributed to Peterson's Magazine, they show the want of retouches from the more practiced hand of the now celebrated writer. Good taste cannot be claimed for them. They are written in the key suited to the readers of Peterson's Magazine and Godey's Lady's Book, but the energy and dash of their author cannot be wholly suppressed. If the reader will make allowance for a modicum of "gush," these three stories will be found interesting. Mrs. Burnett has already shown her talent for holding the reader, although he may be disagreeably aware of the crudeness and bad taste of the accessories. In Jarl's Daughter we have a forerunner of Joan and Liz in That Lass o' Lowrie's, although the chromo effects are rather painful. What strikes one most is an unconscious love for dramatic situations in the writer, which must be appeased at the risk of any number of catastrophes. Mrs. Burnett is so eager to tell her story that she violates probabilities with a coolness that borders on genius; there is no use in protesting; the reader is hurried on. Jarl's Daughter stands on the Welsh sea-shore with as distinct an individuality, though a lurid one withal, as Gudrun, the faithful, on the shore of Normandy. In The Man Who Loved Elizabeth, Mrs. Burnett touches on the back-biting among women in English country places with several good strokes, not of humor, but of power. Some of the old women in Wanted—A Young Person are also remarkable in their way. In spite of the cheap tinsel these characters wear, they have a living, vivid quality about them which will prove exceedingly distasteful to minds intent on harmony, fitness, exactness in a novel, but will reveal a kernel of good to those whose charity is broad enough to cover a multitude of literary sins.

A BLIND LETTER REACHES ITS DESTINATION.

From the Pittsburg (Penn.) Telegraph, Jan. 23.

Another example of the excellent work accomplished by the Post Office Department came to light yesterday. Mr. Ed. Mercer, clerk at the Robinson House, showed a reporter of the Telegraph a letter bearing the following address:

"To Robinson House, Cor. Duquesne Way and Seventh Street. For Margaret F. Cogherty, United States of America."

Here the original address ended, and in one corner of the envelope was written in another handwriting, "Pittsburg, Pa." On the back it was stamped: "Deficiency in address supplied at New-York Post Office." The letter was mailed in Galway, Ireland, Jan. 13; reached New-York on the 19th; was held two days on account of the insufficient address; on the 21st was sent to this city. This is pretty quick work in delivering a letter addressed to somebody in the "United States of America."

THE MINISTER'S LITTLE JOKE.

From the Omaha (Neb.) Republican, Jan. 21.

Our highly-esteemed friend, Rev. A. F. Sherrill, Pastor of the Congregational Church, is not averse to cracking an innocent joke in the presence of his congregation, as he did on Sunday last. In announcing the cantata for the following evening, and the object to which the net proceeds would be applied, he said that he had thought it no more than just that the net proceeds should be appropriated to him, to recompense him for the arduous and extra household duties he had been called upon to perform in the last 60 days. Those who knew how constantly Mrs. Sherrill had applied herself to the successful production of the cantata, and who were furthermore informed that even in a clergyman's family, servants are not always to be depended upon, saw the joke and smiled. Mrs. Sherrill, from her seat in the choir gallery, back of the pulpit, and facing the smiling congregation, could not help hiding her face in her hands in confusion.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

LOUISIANA FINANCES.

THE STATE DEBT IN THE PAST AND AT PRESENT—THE PEOPLE NOT IN FAVOR OF REPUDIATION.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Your strictures upon the administration of the fiscal affairs of Louisiana under the Nicholls Government have been very severe, and I will admit that they would seem to be justified by the statements contained in letters from your Washington correspondent recently published. But I ask the privilege of correcting certain mistakes which your correspondent has no doubt unwittingly made in presenting his contrast between the management of the State's finances by Mr. Kellogg and that of the Nicholls Government—a plausible contrast which accords infinitely more credit to the financial feature of Mr. Kellogg's Administration than it deserves. Your correspondent intimates that the Kellogg Government always faithfully and scrupulously paid at maturity the interest on the State debt, and I know that the impression exists here that up to the 1st of January, 1879, this interest has been regularly and promptly collected since 1874—the year in which the funding of the old debt of the State into new consolidated bonds began. Now, it is not true that all of the coupons have been paid—as the holders of coupons of July, 1874, and July, 1875, well know—and it is very far from true that the interest money has been promptly collected by Mr. Kellogg's tax-gatherers. A large part of the interest paid on consolidated bonds during Mr. Kellogg's Administration was advanced by the Fiscal Agent, and only a small portion of his advances has been refunded by the State.

The Auditor of Louisiana issued on Jan. 1, 1879, (see New-Orleans Democrat—the official journal of the State—of Jan. 5, 1879,) a statement showing the receipts and disbursements of the interest tax fund for the years 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, and 1878. From this statement it appears that the issue of consolidated bonds amounts at present to $11,724,800, upon which the annual interest charge, at 7 per cent., is $820,736. You will find in that statement the following table, showing how much of the interest has been paid by the State, and how much still remains due to the bondholders or the Fiscal Agent on the coupons for the several years since the consolidation of the debt:

	Fund 1874.	Fund 1875.	Fund 1876.
Total interest due on bonded debt, ($11,724,800,) at 7 per cent.....	$820,736 00	$820,736 00	$820,736 00
Total interest paid to date.....	733,569 50	722,054 00	652,890 00
Interest outstanding Jan. 1, 1879.....	$87,166 50	$98,682 00	$167,846 00
	Fund 1877.	Fund 1878.
Total interest due on bonded debt, ($11,724,800,) at 7 per cent.....	$820,736 00	$820,736 00	$4,103,680 00
Total interest paid to date.....	692,755 00	408,807 00	3,210,075 50
Interest outstanding Jan. 1, 1879.....	$127,981 00	$411,929 00	$893,604 50

This statement disposes of the fiction that Mr. Kellogg, through vigor of administration, succeeded better in wringing money out of the overburdened tax-payers of Louisiana than the Nicholls Government has succeeded. The simple truth of the matter is that Louisiana cannot pay 7 per cent. on its present debt. The taxable property of New-Orleans is assessed greatly beyond its market value, and that fact accounts for the difficulty of collecting the full amount of the 5½ mills tax. It is true, on the other hand, that the taxable property of some of the parishes is assessed below its value, but that is not by any means the case in all of the country parishes. Complaints of over-assessment are just as loud in the country as in New-Orleans. Owing to the almost total failure of the sugar crop of 1877, and the disastrous and long-continued existence of yellow fever in 1878, it has been very difficult for the tax-payers of Louisiana to meet their obligations. It must not be supposed that the bondholders are the only sufferers. The deficiency in the general fund is equally as great proportionately as the deficiency in the interest fund. The State officials are compelled to sell their warrants at an enormous sacrifice, and the holders of the warrants must content themselves with the payment of what money there is in the Treasury to the credit of the general fund. The Legislature of Louisiana has just passed a bill providing for the distribution pro rata among the bondholders of what money there is to the credit of the January coupons. It is hoped that the collections will be sufficient to pay nearly, if not quite, one-half of the amount due on these coupons. The balance will be paid out of back taxes, to be collected in the future.

You seem to think that the Constitutional Convention, which has been called to meet in April, will attempt to repudiate the State debt. This is an unjust imputation upon the people of Louisiana. If there are any repudiators in the State, their voices have not been heard in the public councils. The mere fact that the convention will do will be to reduce the rate of interest to 5 or 4 per cent., instead of 7. Is it not better that the State should not only promise to pay, but actually pay, 4 or 5 per cent. than that it should go on merely promising to pay 7 per cent., which it is utterly unable to do?

C.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, Jan. 23, 1879.

ANTI-FIRE CONSTRUCTION.

THE VIEWS OF AN ARCHITECT.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Great fires have their lessons; but who heeds them? Solid blocks of dry goods palaces, attractive in appearance, are found, when tried by fire, to be deceitful traps. On the occurrence of a fire among these buildings, with what unanimity the public charge the disaster upon the owner, builder, architect. Is this charge just? The buildings were as well built, perhaps, as any similar buildings. They had walls and floors adequate to all the requirements of trade, and were quite safe against every contingency except that of fire; and fire is an enemy against which the Fire Department and the insurance companies are required to contend.

Why, then, charge the disaster to the originators of the structure? The owner of such a building knows quite well that it is combustible; but why disturb himself on this account? Is he not insured? If his building burns, it is not his loss, but that of the insurance company. Why should he, in building, be put to extra expense for walls and floors that will prevent conflagration? He is to be supposed possessed of ordinary common sense, and may not be required foolishly to spend money for the benefit of such companies. As to the architect, he makes such plans as the owner needs, while the builder is not to be expected to put in more or better material than he is paid for.

No, the originators of such buildings are not responsible for disaster by fire. This responsibility rests with the insurance companies. Let them not complain of the owner or his agents. It is purely a business matter. It is useless to censure the putting up of thin walls and combustible flooring, so long as the rates of insurance for this kind of building are so low. The companies in their competition for business have reduced the rates to mere nominal figures. It is cheaper to pay the small premiums asked than to pay the cost of stouter walls and more substantial floors. That accounts for the whole trouble.

Let the insurance companies raise their rates on such easily combustible structures to their legitimate figures, placing them so high that owners will be compelled to consider which is the better course, whether to pay these rates or to erect their buildings with improved and approved fire-resisting qualities. Then, and not till then, will the stores of our cities show a better character.

R. G. HATFIELD, Architect.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, Jan. 23, 1879.

THE PATENT LAW.

PROPERTY, THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES, AND ONE FEATURE OF THE BILL.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Having noticed several of your editorials in favor of the pending Patent bill, which has been framed by infringers in their interest, and seeks to abolish the Patent laws by cutting off the penalties for violating them, and takes the control of property in patents from inventors and vests it in any infringer whose interest it is to appropriate it, (see section 2,) I desire to reply.

The question arises, Is the clause of the Constitution that gives the power to Congress to "secure for a limited time to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries" to be respected and enforced by law, or shall there no longer be any protection to the owner of property in ideas? One of the two propositions must be correct—that, if this section is wise, property in ideas belonging exclusively to the author or inventor is as sacred as more tangible real or personal property. There is no middle ground; property of whatever nature must be protected by law, and the rightful owner's right to keep and dispose of it in any market to his own use and benefit is his right or the reverse is true. So long as property in ideas is acknowledged by the Constitution, and that power is carried out by acts of Congress, the grant or protection must be commensurate with the power that gives it, and in all equity and right the grantee must be protected in the enjoyment thereof or the grant annulled. No half-way measures can be made which are in favor of such a grant but opposed to protection therein. That the inventor gives to the world great and lasting benefits which is of great moneyed value is no argument that the law that holds out material prosperity to him to induce him to perfect the same should be trampled on, and produces the result should not protect him in the fruits of his labors.

The Patent Office issues these grants or privileges, and leaves the courts to construe and define them, to the great expense and vexation of all concerned. If the issue of patents was more guarded, and a court or commission of higher authority connected with the office was instituted, where all questions of novelty and infringement might be determined by proceedings had, and the same enforced by the machinery of the officers of the United States courts, much of these troubles might be saved. All patent causes might be tried by proceedings the same as in cases of interferences, and wrongfully-issued patents quashed, and the legality and scope of others determined. Who reads a decree would be universal and binding on all parties, the present mode is slow, expensive, and covers only the districts, and is generally ruinous to any plaintiff who seeks to enforce his rights, even if he secures the decisions in his favor.

AMON BEARLS.

NEWARK, N. J., Monday, Jan. 20, 1879.

A REMEDY FOR SLOW JUSTICE.

WHAT THE MEMBERS OF THE BAR CAN DO FOR THEMSELVES.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your edition of to-day "Lawyer" complains of the "active slowness" of the Court of Common Pleas for this County, and asks, "Is there no remedy for this evil?" The particular evil complained of (which is by no means the only nor the greatest evil which exists in connection with our various courts in this County) is one for which the Judges and lawyers are jointly responsible, and can be remedied. If the members of the Bar will be prompt in having themselves and their cases ready for trial at the earliest day they are reached on the day calendar, and persist in trying them without reference to the fact that this or that particular Judge is holding the term, it will go very far toward proving a remedy for this one specific evil. It is a fact well known to every member of the Bar and well understood by the laity also, that much of the delay and postponement of cases from term to term grows out of the desire of the respective counsel engaged to get his case tried before some one particular Judge and for reasons particular and personal, and those reasons are of a character generally which he would not be willing to express openly and frankly, nor to have the opposing counsel understand or suspect. From this cause alone there is constant manoeuvring and engineering on the part of counsel to get their cases off to a future term, and one at which they know their particular Judge friend is assigned to preside. And to get cases on or off the calendar for particular terms and before particular Judges it is well understood that money is not unfrequently used to influence those having the calendar in charge.

This whole evil is by no means confined to the Court of Common Pleas. It pervades our Supreme Court for the First Judicial District, if possible, to a greater extent than the Common Pleas, and to a far greater extent than it does our Superior Court. The cause for this peculiar action on the part of members of the Bar endeavoring to get their case off before one Judge and on before another, lies in the fact that counsel distrust one Judge and expect him to "strike" them if he can get a chance, and from another they anticipate receiving favors which will give them an advantage which the merits of their case do not entitle them to, and this is as well understood and participated in by suitors as it is by counsel. The reason for all this lies in an almost universal feeling of distrust as to the unswerving integrity and impartiality of our Judges.

For the existence of this feeling of distrust there are two causes principally operating. The first is the localization of the courts and Judges. This is in itself an evil, and one which ought ever to be avoided by every community as far as it possibly can be done. It is an evil peculiarly observable and rank in reference to the City of New-York. In this City and County we have four courts of record—Supreme, Superior, Common Pleas, and Marine—and each and all of them essentially purely local courts, and entirely so as far as the selection of Presiding Justices are concerned between the Judges in each court are gentlemen who, before their election to the bench, had been long engaged in a local practice of law in the City, and had their particular circle of clients, with their ramifying friendships and interests, added to this, their own personal intimates and favorites among the Bar members, and also their antagonists, antagonisms, and dislikes, and, in not seldom instances, hatreds, which are manifested whenever opportunity should offer, (and such opportunity is pretty certain to quickly offer after a lawyer is advanced to the bench,) and superadded to these, his large circle of relatives and personal friends, with all their ramifying branches and far-reaching influences. Is it unnatural that a lawyer going on to the bench surrounded by all these urgent influences should be liable to the suspicion of having his judicial action biased by them from those causes alone? But there is a second reason for this suspicion, and one for which individual Judges themselves are wholly responsible, and that lies in their own judicial action in freely intimating, as they do, whenever opportunity offers, (and such opportunity is pretty certain to quickly offer after a lawyer is advanced to the bench,) and superadded to these, his large circle of relatives and personal friends, with all their ramifying branches and far-reaching influences. Is it unnatural that a lawyer going on to the bench surrounded by all these urgent influences should be liable to the suspicion of having his judicial action biased by them from those causes alone? But there is a second reason for this suspicion, and one for which individual Judges themselves are wholly responsible, and that lies in their own judicial action in freely intimating, as they do, whenever opportunity offers, that their action is dictated by some one of these several influences, and particularly by their likes and dislikes in reference to the respective counsel engaged in the case, and in which instances they have been so and by her officiating priest. This may, from the infirmities of human nature, sometimes occur without the Judge being conscious that such influences have influenced, but instances are not uncommon where it is impossible to exercise that charitable judgment. These evils are, perhaps, inseparable from local courts presided over by a strictly local judiciary, but it is, I believe, generally admitted that there are far less observable in our Superior Court than in the Supreme. However this may be, there is a remedy for all this, so far as it relates to our Supreme Court, and one easy of application and entirely within the power and province of the Legislature to administer. Let the State be constituted into one grand circuit as to its Supreme Court, and the Judges required each to hold his pro rata number of terms in each county of the State, and then in this City have as all times our Judge not a resident of the City holding one of the special terms, and the evils inseparable from a local judiciary will be done away in our Supreme Court at least. Do this, and the two Judges, one from the Superior Court and one from the Common Pleas, now detailed from those courts to duty in our City Supreme Court, can be remitted to their respective courts where their services are greatly needed to aid their now overworked associates upon the bench, and the Common Pleas Court can again have restored to it the services of the very efficient Judge to which lawyer's makes such flattering reference. Do this, and we will then have one of our four courts of record freed of its present local character, and the control of a purely local judiciary.

ANOTHER LAWYER.

NEW-YORK, Monday, Jan. 20, 1879.

THE COMMON PLEAS AGAIN.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The best and only reply I have to make to "Advocate" is that which my register points out, and other practitioners will bear me out. In 1877 I filed a note of issue in the Court of Common Pleas, but the cause has not yet been reached on the day calendar. In March, 1878, I filed another note of issue in the Superior Court. In this instance the case has been reached (last November) and tried. As to the Supreme Court, I have every hope of trying a cause there shortly, the note of issue of which was filed in May last year. I have nothing more to add, and comment is superfluous.

LAWYER.

FINANCIAL STRAITS OF ELIZABETH, N. J.

A LITTLE CITY WHERE MUCH MONEY HAS BEEN WASTED.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Having seen in THE TIMES of the 15th and 16th inst. statements of indebtedness of suburban towns, especially of Elizabeth, N. J., and having read comments thereon and exceptions thereto by the Elizabeth Journal, I herewith give you a few figures substantiating your position, comparing debt and taxation in that town with New-York.

According to a report made by a committee appointed to examine the Controller's books, published in the Elizabeth Journal, Oct. 26, 1878, the indebtedness of the City was $5,932,528 29. To meet this they claim assets amounting to $2,829,-831 28; of the assets, $117,500 consists of bonds in the sinking fund; cash in treasury, $40,465 79, and cash to credit of sinking fund, $21,055 47—making in all, $179,021 26. The balance of about $2,650,000 is in arrears of taxes and unpaid assessments and interest thereon. It is well known that not over 10 per cent. of the unpaid taxes and assessments can be relied on—a very liberal estimate would be $320,000—making all the available assets about $500,000, leaving a debt, in round numbers, of $5,500,000 over and above assets. Policemen, school-teachers, and other creditors have not been paid for three or four months past, and to meet these obligations and interest on the debt the City Council recently ordered bonds to the amount of $450,000 to be issued, but the city officers being unable to sell them the creditors still remain unpaid. Including accrued interest on the debt, these bonds increase it on Jan. 1, 1879, to over $6,000,000. Nearly all this debt bears interest at 7 per cent., making the annual interest $420,000.

The annual expenses of the City Government are $179,000, the State and county tax about $100,000, making an aggregate of $700,000 to be raised by tax annually to pay interest on the city debt, defray city expenses, and pay State and county taxes. The assessed value of taxable property, real and personal, in 1878 was $14,400,000. To raise the necessary amount requires a tax of about 5 per cent., provided the tax is all collected, but experience shows that there is a large deficiency, which is steadily increasing. The deficiency for 1872 was $11,577 92; for 1877, $91,542 75, the latter about 20 per cent. of the whole tax; and for 1878 only about half is collected. Only $216,000 was put in the tax levy of 1878 for interest, which is a little over half the interest on the debt, and leaving a deficiency unprovided for of $200,000. The amount of land in the city limits abandoned by the owners, and which may be considered as confiscated by taxes and assessments is, as stated recently by a member of the City Council, about 3,000 acres, or over one-third of the area in the city. On this property no taxes will hereafter be paid. To allow for loss on this account, and for arrears generally, at least $1,000,000 should be annually levied. Deducting 30 per cent. for uncollectable taxes, a moderate estimate, would leave $700,000, the amount needed as above stated.

The assessed value of taxable property, real and personal, is $14,400,000; the rate of taxation this year is $3 56 per $100, and on that they have thus far collected less than $300,000. To raise the necessary amount requires a tax of 7 per cent. on the valuation, which is more than the average income on property. It is said the valuation is low, but it is well known that in many cases it is nearly double what the property would sell for. On what is known as Dimock Hill, houses are assessed, as they have been for 10 years, at $10,000, which only rent for $30 per month, and cannot be sold for $5,000. And so in many other parts of the town. Some advocate the raising of valuations, but that increases the State and county tax, and thereby adds to the burdens. The population is estimated at 26,000, which makes a debt of over $230 to each person, and the interest is $16 each per year. The debt of the city is really a mortgage of nearly 50 per cent. on the entire real estate of the city, and is more than one-half of what it would sell for. What property is worth, or what is the value of mortgages held by savings banks and insurance companies there, it is easy to determine. The Supreme Court Judge recently refused permission to invest $1,500 belonging to an estate on property in Elizabeth, upon the ground that he did not consider any mortgage there safe. Compare this state of things with New-York, where the debt is decreasing, where the taxes are now $2 55 per $100, and, with proper economy, will soon be reduced to $2 per $100, taken in connection with our rapid transit and freedom from miasma, and it is easy to see why people are leaving suburban towns and coming to this City. The boasted sewerage system of Elizabeth, as Gen. Viele four years ago predicted, instead of being a benefit, is grossly inadequate. The sewers foul the water of Elizabeth Creek, into which they drain; destroy its navigation; are insufficient for drainage purposes, and are the source of miasms which affects a large part of the town. The 20 miles of pavement is over half wooden pavement, which is rapidly decaying, and in many places unfit for public travel; much of it was laid on streets running through fields where there are no buildings, and will not be for 20 years. A more useless expenditure could not be devised. The 79 miles of graded streets and 92 miles of flagged sidewalks are, in many cases, as useless, and, from present appearances, a large part will soon be covered with grass, and numbered among the things of the past.

THE FIDDLING CONGRESSMAN.

HE DESCRIBES HIS REMARKABLE CANVASS IN TENNESSEE LAST FALL.

From the Nashville (Tenn.) American, Jan. 19.

A reporter of the American had a chat last evening with Hon. Robert L. Taylor, now on a visit here from Jonesboro, concerning the lively canvass he had with Major A. H. Pettibone, the "Republican Lion" of the First Congressional District. In response to a question asked by the reporter concerning his canvass, Mr. Taylor remarked that Pettibone was big with the idea that he would crush him at the start. Pettibone really expected to treat him as a sort of clown. Mr. Taylor had taken part with his fiddle in nearly all the concerts and entertainments that had been given in that section of the State, and Pettibone was laboring under the belief that it would require but a short time to wipe such a gay and festive fellow out. But instead of acting the clown for Pettibone at Bristol, where they opened the canvass, he came down on him with solid chunks of facts. Pettibone asserted at the outstart that he would defend every act of the Republican

DRY GOODS.

Ladies' Underwear

Having bought the entire stock of one of the most manufacturers of Ladies' Undergarments at about 50 cents on the dollar, we offer the following, which are the GREATEST BARGAINS EVER SHOWN in these goods:

30 dozen GOOD MUSLIN CHEMISES at 75 cents each.
36 dozen RUFFLED AND FANCY do. at 89 cents.
35 dozen FINE CORD AND OTHER FANCY TRIMMINGS at 50 cents each.
FINER QUALITIES AT EQUALLY LOW PRICES.
100 dozen NIGHT DRESSES, (FULL LENGTH and GOOD MUSLIN,) 75 cents to $2 each.

SPECIAL BARGAINS IN EMBROIDERED SKIRTS.

CAMBRIC RUFFLED, with EMBROIDERED EDGING and 5 fine tucks, at 30 cents each.
EMBROIDERED RUFFLES, 3 inches deep, and 2 clusters of 6 tucks, at 75 cents.
FINER QUALITIES EQUALLY CHEAP.

A LIKE OPPORTUNITY HAS NEVER BEEN OFFERED TO PURCHASE FINE DOMESTIC UNDERGARMENTS AT SUCH A LOW FIGURE.

The balance of our FRENCH HAND-MADE UNDERGARMENTS AT LOWER PRICES THAN EVER.
A JOB LOT OF FRENCH HAND-MADE DRAWERS at 65 cents; WOULD BE CHEAP at $1.
750 FRENCH CORSET COVERS at $1; FORMER PRICE, $1 50.

HAMBURGS.

WE ARE CLOSING OUT

10,000 Yards Remnants

of HAMBURG EDGINGS at a VERY GREAT REDUCTION in prices. They will be found on the middle tables of our 14th-st. store.

Le Boutillier Bros.,

48 East 14th-st. 847 Broadway.

MILLER & GRANT,

CONTEMPLATING MATERIAL CHANGES IN THEIR ESTABLISHMENT, AND DESIRING TO REDUCE STOCK

FOR THAT PURPOSE, OFFER THE FOLLOWING INDUCEMENTS TO CLOSE BUYERS:

HAMBURGS AT ONE-HALF ACTUAL VALUE.
EMBROIDERED, INITIAL, AND COLORED EMBROIDERED HANDKERCHIEFS AT A REDUCTION OF FIFTY PER CENT.
RIBBONS IN ALL COLORS, SHADES, AND WIDTHS, FROM 5c. TO 50c. PER YARD.
REAL LACES AND LACE ARTICLES CORRESPONDINGLY LOW.
FRINGES, GIMPS, HEADINGS, BUTTONS, FANS, AND FANCY GOODS AT REDUCTIONS FROM 25 TO 50 PER CENT.

879 BROADWAY, N. Y.

MILLINERY.

BUNOUT, LATE AUGUSTE PETIT, PARIS has just received from him the most elegant coiffure ever seen: it is light and handsome; every lady must have it to go to a party. This coiffure makes great sensation now in Paris. Cannot be found elsewhere but at my store, No. 27 Union-square, near 16th-st. Also, finest assortment of hair and silk nets, hand-made, specially made for my house, in Paris.

FURS.

FOR SALE—A FINE SEAL-SKIN SACQUE AND cape; cheap. To be seen at No. 84 Marion-st.

SHIPPING.

INMAN LINE ROYAL MAIL STEAMERS.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL
CITY OF MONTREAL.....Thursday, Jan. 30, 11 A. M.
CITY OF BERLIN.....Saturday, Feb. 8, 6:30 A. M.
CITY OF NEW-YORK.....Thursday, Feb. 13, 10:30 A. M.
From Pier No. 37 North River, foot of Charlton-st.
CABIN, $60, $80, and $100, gold. Return tickets on favorable terms. STEERAGE, $25, currency. Drafts at lowest rates. Saloons, state-rooms, smoking, and bath rooms amidships. These steamers do not carry cattle, sheep, or pigs.
Nos. 31 and 33 Broadway, N. Y.
Philadelphia Office, No. 105 South 4th-st.

ANCHOR LINE U. S. MAIL STEAMERS.
NEW-YORK AND GLASGOW.
From Pier No. 20 North River, New-York.
Devonia.....Jan. 25, 7 A. M. Anchoria.....Feb. 8, 6 A. M.
Ethiopia.....Feb. 1, noon. Bolivia.....Feb. 15, noon.
Cabin, $60 to $80. Excursion tickets at reduced rates.
Second Cabin, $40. Steerage, $28.
NEW-YORK TO LONDON DIRECT.
From Pier No. 46 North River, foot of Charles-st.
Castalia.....Jan. 25, 7 A. M. California.....Feb. 1, noon.
Cabins, $55 and $65. Excursion tickets at reduced rates.
HENDERSON BROTHERS, Agents, 7 Bowling Green.

GENERAL TRANSATLANTIC COMPANY
between New-York and Havre.
Company's Pier, (new,) No. 42 North River, foot of Morton-st.
FRANCE, TREDELLE.....Wednesday, Feb. 5, 8:30 P. M.
CANADA, FRAWEIN.....Wednesday, Feb. 19, 2 P. M.
AMERIQUE, DELORD.....Wednesday, March 5, 3 P. M.
Steamers marked thus * do not carry steerage passengers.
Checks drawn on Credit Lyonnais of Paris in amounts to suit.
For freight and passengers apply to
LOUIS DE BEBIAN, Agent, No. 55 Broadway.

SAVANNAH AND FLORIDA.

From Pier No. 43 North River, at 3 P. M.
CITY OF COLUMBUS, Capt. SICKERSON...Wed., Jan. 29
CITY OF SAVANNAH, Capt. MALLORY.....Sat., Feb. 1
Connecting with Central Railroad of Georgia, Atlantic and Gulf Railroad, Georgia and Florida Steamboat Company, and with the new and elegant iron steamer ST. JOHNS.
GEO. YONGE, Agent.
C. D. OWENS, Ocean S. S. Co. and
General Agent A. & G. R. R. Central R. R. of Ga.,
No. 315 Broadway. Nos. 409 Broadway.

FLORIDA RAILROAD AND STEAM-SHIP LINE.
ONLY DIRECT LINE TO FLORIDA.
SAILING EVERY SATURDAY.
LOWEST RATES OF FREIGHT AND PASSAGE.
Steamship SANTALUCIA, SATURDAY, Jan. 25.
And every SATURDAY thereafter.
For Fernandina direct, from Pier No. 12 N. R., at 3 P. M.
Or by Sound steamers to Jacksonville, and thence by rail, landing to all points in Florida, and on Chattahoochie, Appalachicola, and Flint Rivers, and BRUNSWICK, Ga. Insurance ½ per cent. Bills lading signed on pier. For further information, through bills lading, and passage rates, apply to
E. ROBERTS,
No. 177 West-st., up stairs.

UNITED STATES AND BRAZIL MAIL STEAM-SHIP LINE.
FOR ST. THOMAS, PARA, PERNAMBUCO, BAHIA, AND RIO DE JANE IO,
Connecting at St. Thomas with German steamers for Porto Rico and Spanish Main. The new first-class iron steam-ship CITY OF PARA, Capt. CARPENTER, will sail for the above ports on Wednesday, Feb. 5, at 3 P. M.
Positively no freight received on board. Freight must be paid in advance. Freight at low rates taken for the above ports. Freight received at Robert Dock, Brooklyn. Insurance lower than by any other line. Shippers desiring insurance can effect same under our open policy. For freight engagements or passage, having elegant accommodations, apply to C. H. MALLORY & CO., Agents. Office, Pier No. 20 East River.

PACIFIC MAIL STEAM-SHIP COMPANY
Pier foot Canal-st., North River.
For SAN FRANCISCO via ISTHMUS OF PANAMA:
Steam-ship ACAPULCO.....Friday, Jan. 31, noon
Connecting for South and Central America and Mexico.
From San Francisco for Japan and China:
Steam-ship CHINA.....Wednesday, March 5, noon
From SAN FRANCISCO to HONOLULU, NEW-ZEALAND, and AUSTRALIA:
Steam-ship CITY OF NEW-YORK, Monday, Feb. 17, noon
For freights or general information apply to Company's office, on the pier, foot of Canal-st., North River, and for passage at Company's Ticket Office, No. 287 Broadway.

NEW-YORK, HAVANA & MEXICAN MAIL S. S. LINE.
Steamers leave Pier No. 3 North River at 3 P. M.
FOR HAVANA DIRECT AND VERA CRUZ.
Calling at Progreso, Campeche and Frontera.
CITY OF VERA CRUZ.....Saturday, Jan. 25
CITY OF WASHINGTON. (Havana only.) Thurs, Feb. 6
CITY OF MERIDA.....Saturday, Feb. 8
Steamer leaves New-Orleans Jan. 29 and Feb. 19 for Vera Cruz via Matamoros, Tampico, Tuxpan, connecting with steamer for Havana. New-Orleans Agency, 16 Bienville-st.
F. ALEXANDRE & SONS, Nos. 31 and 33 Broadway.

NEW-YORK AND CUBA MAIL S. S. LINE
FOR HAVANA DIRECT.
FROM PIER 17 EAST RIVER AT 3 P. M.
Magnificent accommodations for passengers.
S. S. NIAGARA.....Saturday, Feb. 1
S. S. SARATOGA.....Wednesday, Feb. 12
Tickets issued also for
VERA CRUZ AND WEST INDIA ISLANDS
in connection with French and English S. S. Lines from Havana. JAMES E. WARD & CO., No. 113 Wall-st.

NEW-YORK AND HAVANA
DIRECT MAIL LINE.
These first-class steam-ships sail regularly at 3 P. M. from Pier No. 13 North River, as follows:
Steamer SANTIAGO DE CUBA.....WED., Jan. 29
Steam-ship.....SATURDAY, Feb. 8
Accommodations unsurpassed. For freight or passage apply to WILLIAM P. CLYDE & CO., No. 5 Bowling Green. LAWTON BROS., Agents in Havana.

DRY GOODS.

HOTEL, HOUSEKEEPING, AND FAMILY LINENS.

SPRING IMPORTATION now opening in Sheeting Linens and
4-4 Family Shirtings,
NEW DESIGNS IN PRINTED LINEN SHIRTINGS,
DAMASK TABLE LINENS,
By the YARD and in CLOTHS.
NAPKINS, TRAY DOYLES,
NOVELTIES
In LUNCH, DESSERT, and
FRUIT CLOTHS and NAPKINS.
TOILET COVERS, EMBD. OPEN WORK, and FANCY BORDERED TOWELS.
HUCK, BARNSLEY, and CRASH TOWELINGS, and a general assortment of White Goods,
Blankets, Flannels,
Quilts, Comfortables, &c., &c.

Arnold, Constable & Co.,

Broadway, cor. 19th-st.

FRENCH TRIMMED
HATS AND BONNETS

In GREAT VARIETY, also OUR OWN
DESIGNS and MANUFACTURE.
PRICES LOWER THAN FORMER SEASONS
UNTRIMMED HATS & BONNETS,
ALL SHAPES and SHADES,
FROM 25c. UPWARD.
FRENCH FLOWERS, FEATHERS and
ORNAMENTS, BRIDAL and CREPE VEILS,
MOURNING BONNETS and HATS, &c.

A. T. STEWART & CO.

BROADWAY, 4th AVE., 9th and 10th STS.

ALL-WOOL UNDERWEAR,
BOYD & LIPPITT,
MANUFACTURERS,
Theatrical, gymnasium, and rowing goods, in silk, worsted, and cotton.
NO. 69 THOMAS-ST.

CITY REAL ESTATE.

FOR SALE—THE DESIRABLE FOUR-STORY brown-stone house NO. 10 WEST 32D-ST., full width and depth, with butler's pantry extension and back stairs.
ALSO,
In 41ST-ST., near 5TH AV., a four-story house of full width; also with butler's pantry extension; can be bought for less than $30,000. Apply to
E. H. LUDLOW & CO.,
No. 3 Pine-st. and No. 1,180 Broadway.

FINE MODERN HOUSE, CHOICE LOCATION. No. 1 West 46th-st., (very large corner,) every desirable houses, 4 East 43d, 14 East 45th, 26 East 46th, 8 West 32d, 45 West 51st, 51 West 54th, 17, 21, and 35 East 55th, 18 West 57th, 20 West 58th, 34 East 64th, 2 East 66th, 20 and 30 East 68th sts., $15,000 to $62,000; also on 5th and Madison avs., all sizes and prices. W. P. SEYMOUR, No. 171 Broadway.

BROADWAY, EAST SIDE—43D AND 44TH-Sts., Grand Sts., East End (11th) av., 24th-st.—14 lots at auction, in partition, Feb. 27; Pillow estate. Maps, &c., from WELLESLEY W. GAGE, Plaintiff's Attorney, Mutual Life Building, or RICHARD V. HARNETT, Auctioneer, No. 111 Broadway, basement.

NO. 329 WEST 19TH-ST., NEAR 8TH-AV.—Elegant three-story and basement brick house at auction, at Exchange Sales-room, No. 111 Broadway, Tuesday, Jan. 28, at 12 o'clock, by order of Executor. Maps, &c., from RICHARD V. HARNETT, Auctioneer, No. 111 Broadway, basement.

FOR SALE—AN ASSORTMENT OF HOUSES, best prices, from $4,500 to $15,000. Sixteen 82d, 81st, 80th, and 79th sts. Two beautiful corners, 79th and 80th sts. and 1st-av. desirable as an investment. Call and see them. Office, corner 79th-st. and 1st-av.

ELEGANT NEW BROWN-STONE HOUSES on 54th, 55th, 56th, 57th, 61st, 62d, 63d, 64th, 68th, 69th, and 86th sts., between 5th and Lexington avs., for sale low; $14,000 to $40,000. Apply to ISAAC HONIG, No. 111 Broadway, Rooms G and H, basement.

A BARGAIN.—FOR SALE CHEAP, A FOUR-story brick dwelling, 22x50, 23 rooms, near Tenth and Twenty-third-street Ferries, Greenpoint; price $4,500; terms easy.
D. B. TREADWELL, No. 79 Greenpoint-av.

FOR SALE CHEAP—ONE OR MORE OF THREE small brown-stone houses on 64th-st., between Lexington and 4th avs. GEMS—SEE THEM.
RICHD. HEMMESSY, Owner and Builder, No. 148 East 63d-st.

FOR SALE—THE FIRST-CLASS BROWN-STONE and brick high-stoop Rooms No. 261 East 128th-st., 20x60x100 feet; in perfect order, with all modern improvements for health and comfort; terms easy. 42d-st. E. & H. MEAD, No. 504 Grand-st., New-York.

NO. 210 EAST 18TH-ST., NEAR STUYVESANT PARK.—Well-located, fine, medium-size dwellings; bargains. Permits from V. K. STEVENSON, Jr., offices, 4 Pine, 35 East 17th-st., and 661 5th-av.

THE DESIRABLE PROPERTY, NO. 61 West 14th-st., 75 feet east of 6th-av., building 25x112, suitable for dry goods, furniture, or any business, to lease or sell. Apply on premises.

FOR SALE—ON WEST 57TH-ST., NEAR 5TH-av., an elegant four-story brown-stone house; cabinet finish and all modern improvements. Built expressly for the owner. Apply at No. 160 Fulton-st., Room 10.

HARLEM—RAPID TRANSIT.
House, stores, and floors, to let and for sale.
PORTER & CO., No. 178 East 125th-st.

CITY HOUSES TO LET.

TO LET—FROM FEB. 1—A NUMBER OF NEW three-story brick houses; very choice: all conveniences: must be seen to be appreciated: Nos. 411 to 435 West 51st-st.; rent $1,200. For full particulars apply to JOSEPH GORSE, No. 253 Pearl-st.

HOUSE TO LET, 59 5TH-AV., NEAR 30TH-st., elegantly furnished; possession immediately. A dress S. G., Box No. 231 Times Up-town Office, No. 1,238 Broadway.

A FLAT IN AN APARTMENT HOUSE TO LET; good neighborhood, central location. Apply to HORACE S. ELY, No. 22 Pine-st.

HOUSES & ROOMS WANTED.

SILVER.—AN UNINCUMBERED HOUSE AND furniture in this City will be taken as cash, for an interest in a valuable silver claim in Colfax, with particulars. C. A., Box No. 127 Times Office.

WANTED—SMALL HOUSE, CENTRALLY LOCATED, $50 to $75; owner might retain part. Address SANGUINE, Box No. 289 Times Up-town Office, No. 1,238 Broadway.

WANTED—A HOUSE ON THE EAST SIDE, FURnished; suitable for a few boarders. Address Immediate, Box 255 Times Up-town Office, 1,238 Broadway.

COUNTRY REAL ESTATE.

A HOME FOR ALL (OR EXCELLENT INVESTment.)—The "WESTERN PHILANTHROPIC SOCIETY," endowed with 100,000 acres grazing and arable land, "helps those who help themselves:" donates to pioneers 160 acres of land, furnishes to head stock cattle, (cows,) or 125 head sheep, (ewes,) Land and stock secured by mortgage. Young persons and families of good character may join. Information desired. Membership fees, $500; payable, $5 monthly. Office, No. 206 Broadway, room No. 2; Post Office Box 1,732.

CITY VILLA FOR SALE AT POUGHKEEPSIE.—Two and a half acres; eight trains daily; two blocks to Post Office; 75 feet above Hudson River; 40 miles; mountain air for consumptives; schools, churches handy at hand; has gas, water, and sewer; handsomely finished; cost $15,000, sacrifice; terms to suit; or to exchange for a City residence centrally located. ANDREW J. ROBERTSON, No. 19 West 36th-st. where photograph can be had.

FOR SALE OR TO LET—A COTTAGE AT New-Rochelle, 40 from one-half mile from depot, and near the water, with gas, furniture, and good outbuildings. For particulars inquire of MILLER, 50 West 38th-st.

FOR SALE.—AT NEW-ROCHELLE, A DESIRable place, with four acres of ground, situated on the water. For particulars inquire of MILLER, No. 50 West 38th-st.

INSURANCE.

QUEEN
INSURANCE COMPANY
OF
LIVERPOOL AND LONDON.
Nos. 37 and 39 Wall-st.
Wm. H. Ross, Manager.

FINANCIAL.

UNITED STATES 4 Per Cent. Bonds,

COUPON OR REGISTERED,
And all other issues of Government securities, bought and sold at MARKET RATES, FREE OF COMMISSION, and on hand for immediate delivery.
CALLED 5-20s bought or exchanged for other issues on most favorable terms.

VERMILYE & CO.,

Nos. 16 and 18 Nassau-st., N. Y.

CINCINNATI 7s.

DUE 1906.

FOR SALE BY

GEO. WM. BALLOU & CO.,

No. 8 WALL-ST., NEW-YORK.

No. 72 DEVONSHIRE-ST., BOSTON.

KIMBALL, HOWELL & CO.,

MEMBERS N. Y. STOCK EXCHANGE,
No. 68 Broadway and No. 17 New-st.,
Buy, sell, and carry stocks on margins in lots to suit customers.
5 SHARES, 500 SHARES, OR MORE.

TO DEALERS IN STOCKS.—THE OLD BANKing-house of HOWES & COMPANY, No. 6 Wall-st., New-York, buys and sells, on reasonable margin all the Stocks dealt in at the New-York Stock Exchange. When desired, will use discretion when and what to buy and sell, giving parties the benefit of 25 years' experience. Opportunities for profits constantly occur.

THE TRADERS' NATIONAL BANK, OF BANGOR, ME.—This bank on the 14th inst. voted to go into liquidation, and it is now closing up its affairs. The holders of its notes and other creditors are notified to present the notes and other claims against the bank for payment.
I. TRASK, Cashier.
BANGOR, Me., Jan. 18, 1879.

THE NEVADA BANK OF SAN FRANCISCO.
Capital, $10,000,000, gold. Reserve, $3,500,000, gold.
NEW-YORK AGENCY NO. 63 WALL-ST.
Buys and sells exchange and telegraphic transfers. Issues commercial and travelers' credits.
Executes orders for mining stocks at San Francisco.

INTEREST FOR DEPOSITS.—PERSONS DEsirous of obtaining interest for deposits, and have their balances at all times subject to check or demand, can do so by depositing with the old banking-house of HOWES & COMPANY, No. 6 Wall-st., New-York, which allows interest of 4 per cent.

UNITED STATES NEW FOUR PER CENT. bonds, coupons or registered, of all denominations; also, a choice lot of other first-class investment securities. For sale by EDWARD D. NICOLAY & CO., 43 Pine-st., N. Y.

AT REASONABLE RATES—MONEY ON LIFE and Endowment Insurance Policies; also, the same bought; insurance of all kinds effected with best companies at lowest premiums.
J. J. HABSIOR & CO., No. 165 Broadway; box 1,880.

BROWN BROTHERS & CO.,
NO. 59 WALL-ST.,
ISSUE COMMERCIAL AND TRAVELERS' CREDITS, AVAILABLE IN ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

KOUNTZE BROTHERS, BANKERS, No. 12 Wall-st., New-York, issue Letters of Credit or Circular Notes on the Union Bank of London for the use of travelers in all parts of the world.

TO LOAN FOR FIVE YEARS THE SUM of $10,000 on improved City property at 6 per cent. Apply to HUGH N. CAMP, No. 192 Broadway.

DIVIDENDS.

ADAMS EXPRESS COMPANY, OLD.—DIVIdend to HOLDERS OF CERTIFICATES OF INTEREST.—Supreme Court, County of New-York.—Frederick E. Gilbert et al., plaintiffs, vs. Union Trust Company of New-York, as Receiver, &c., defendants. UNION TRUST COMPANY OF NEW-YORK, as Receiver of the assets which were of the Adams Express Company, old, pursuant to the final judgment and decree herein duly made and entered, and bearing date the 16th day of January, 1879, hereby requires the shareholders in the fund of said Adams Express Company, old, to deliver their certificates, properly indorsed and proved, for payment at the Union Trust Company, Trust Company of New-York, at its office, No. 73 Broadway, in the City of New-York, on or before March 10, 1879.—Dated New-York, Jan. 25, 1879.
UNION TRUST COMPANY OF NEW-YORK, Receiver, &c.
MILLER & PECKHAM, Attorneys for Receiver, No. 29 Wall-st., New-York.

DIVIDEND NOTICE.—THE LOUISVILLE AND Nashville Railroad Company has declared a dividend of One and One-half per Cent., payable on and after the 10th February next. Holders of certificates issued from the New-York Agency will be paid their dividends by the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company. Transfer-books will be closed from the 27th inst. to the 15th February next, both days inclusive.
W. RANNEY, Secretary.
JANUARY 15, 1879.

THE COUPONS MATURING 1ST DAY OF February next on the FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS of the DAKOTA SOUTHERN RAILROAD COMPANY will be paid on and after this date, at the METROPOLITAN NATIONAL BANK,
WALSTON & BROWN & BRO., Fiscal Agents.
NEW-YORK, Jan. 20, 1879.

UNITED STATES EXPRESS COMPANY,
TREASURER'S OFFICE, No. 62 BROADWAY,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 18, 1879.
THE TRANSFER-BOOKS OF THIS COMpany will be closed Feb. 1 at 3 P. M. and reopened Feb. 17, 1879. THEO. F. WOOD, Treasurer.

CORN EXCHANGE BANK, NEW-YORK, Jan. 22, 1879.
THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE DEclared a dividend of FIVE PER CENT., payable to the stockholders on and after Feb. 1, 1879.
The transfer-books will be closed till that date.
By order WILLIAM A. NASH, Cashier.

THE FEBRUARY COUPONS OF THE NEW Estate First Mortgage Bonds guaranteed by the Mercantile Trust Company will be paid at the office of the company, Equitable Building, No. 120 Broadway, on the 1st day of February next.
EDWARD D. MORTGOMERY, Treasurer.

THE NEW-YORK NATIONAL EXCHANGE BANK,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 24, 1879.
THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE THIS day declared a dividend of Four (4) per cent., payable on and after Feb. 1.
C. E. OUTCAULT, Cashier.

ELECTIONS.

MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY,
OFFICE No. 5 BOWLING GREEN,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 14, 1879.
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE annual meeting of the stockholders of the Missouri Pacific Railway Company will be held at the office of the company in St. Louis, Mo., on TUESDAY, the 4th day of March, 1879, at 10 o'clock a. m., for the election of thirteen Directors for the ensuing year, and for the transaction of any other business that may come before the meeting.
The annual meeting of the Board of Directors will be held at the same office on WEDNESDAY, the 5th day of March, 1879, at 10 o'clock A. M.
The transfer-books will be closed on the afternoon of the 1st day of February, and will be reopened on the morning of the 6th day of March, 1879.
C. E. GARRISON, President.
W. ARNOLD, Secretary.

OFFICE OF THE WABASH RAILWAY COMPANY,
TOLEDO, OHIO, Dec. 21, 1878.
NOTICE.—THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE stockholders of the Wabash Railway Company for the election of Directors and the transaction of other business, will be held at the office of the company, at Toledo, Ohio, on WEDNESDAY, the 12th day of February, 1879, at 10 o'clock A. M.
At this meeting will be submitted, as required by law, the execution of a mortgage by this company upon the Hannibal and Naples Railroad, to secure the bonds of this company to be issued in payment for said railroad to the sum of five hundred thousand dollars.
The transfer-books will be closed twenty (20) days prior to said meeting. W. B. CORNELL, Secretary.

OFFICE OF WILLCOX & GIBBS SEWING-MACHINE COMPANY,
No. 658 BROADWAY,
New-York City, Jan. 18, 1879.
THE ANNUAL MEETING OF STOCK holders for the election of Trustees to serve the ensuing year, will be held at the office of the Company on THURSDAY, Jan. 30, at 11:30 A. M. The stock transfer-books will be closed on the 20th inst. at 3 P. M.
By order of the Board. J. FARMLY, Jr., Secretary.

THE ANNUAL ELECTION OF SEVEN TRUStees of the Silver Islet Consolidated Mining and Lands Company will be held at the office of the company, No. 5 Broadway, New-York, on TUESDAY, the 4th day of February next, at 12 o'clock M. Polls will open at 12 o'clock M., and remain open until 1 o'clock P. M.
Transfer-books will be closed from Jan. 21 to Feb. 4, inclusive.
EDWARD LEARNED, President.

OFFICE OF THE MARYLAND COAL COMPANY,
No. 104 Broadway, New-York.
THE ANNUAL MEETING OF STOCKholders for the election of a President and 10 Managers and for such other business as may come before the meeting, will be held at the Company's office, FEB. 4, at 11 A. M. Polls open from 12 M. to 2 P. M. Transfer books will be closed from Jan. 21 to Feb. 4, inclusive.
A. T. HOGG, Secretary.

STEAM-BOATS.

$1 50 TO BOSTON.
VIA THE OLD, RELIABLE
STONINGTON LINE.
CONNECTING WITH ALL LINES EAST.
NOT A TRIP MISSED IN SEVEN CONSECUTIVE DAYS.
The elegant steamers STONINGTON and NARRAGANSETT leave Pier No. 32 North River, foot of Jay-st., at 5:30 P. M. daily, (except Sundays.)
Tickets at principal ticket offices. State-rooms secured at offices of Westcott Express Company and at Nos. 363 and 897 Broadway, and at Metropolitan and Gilsey House Hotel Ticket Offices.
PROVIDENCE LINE, FOR FREIGHT ONLY.
Steamer ELECTRA and GALATEA leave Pier No. 29 North River, (foot of Warren-st.) daily, (except Sundays,) at 4 P. M. for Provid nce direct.
Freight via either line taken at lowest rates.
S. BABCOCK, President.
L. W. FILLETS, G. P. Agent.

FOR BRIDGEPORT AND ALL POINTS ON Housatonic and Naugatuck Railroad. Page 31. Steamer leaves Catharine-slip daily, (Sundays excepted,) at 10 A. M.

FOR NEW-HAVEN, HARTFORD, AND THE NORTH.—Steamer leaves Peck-slip for New-Haven at 5 and 11 P. M., connecting with road.

BOARDING AND LODGING.

THE UP-TOWN OFFICE OF THE TIMES.

The up-town office of THE TIMES is located at No. 1,238 Broadway, south-east corner of 32d-st. Open daily, Sundays included, from 8 A. M. to 8 P. M. Subscriptions received, and copies of THE TIMES for sale.
ADVERTISEMENTS RECEIVED UNTIL 9 P. M.

A SMALL FAMILY OF ADULTS, ABOUT to establish themselves in a pleasant and healthful location, of easy access to the City, would receive a few children, between four and ten years of age, into the family circle; care for, teached, and give them every home comfort; references exchanged. Address S. G., Box No. 154 Times Office.

NOS. 345 AND 347 5TH-AV.—ELEGANT parlors, en suite; bath-room, and closets; private table; third floor front and connecting rooms; superior table; moderate terms.

A SMALL FAMILY OF ADULTS HAVE a handsomely-furnished south parlor, with superior board, a sunny hall room on third floor, with grate. No. 46 West 30th-st.

TWENTY-SECOND-ST., NO. 333 WEST.—Two large handsomely-furnished rooms, en suite or single; house and table very desirable; single rooms; terms moderate.

BOARDING.—AN EXCEEDINGLY FINE AND desirable suite of four rooms on second floor of house No. 194 Madison-av., with unexceptionable private table; terms and house first-class.

NO. 31 WEST 23TH-ST., NEAR MADISON-SQUARE.—Elegantly-furnished suites of rooms, suitable for families or gentlemen; house and table strictly first class.

HARLEM BOARD.—HANDSOMELY-FURnished single and double rooms, for gentlemen, from $6 to $10 per week. No. 166 East 125th-st., few doors west of 3d-av.

IRVING HOUSE, BROADWAY AND 12TH-ST. (AMERICAN PLAN.)—Very central and desirable for permanent guests; transient, $2 to $3 per day.
CHAS. DEPLER, Proprietor.

NO. 7 WEST 30TH-ST.—A SINGLE ROOM TO rent, with board; southern exposure; fire-place and closet; references required.

FIFTH-AV., NO. 81, FIRST DOOR BELOW 16TH-ST.—Handsome front parlor and bedroom, with board; references.

A QUIET, PLEASANT HOME CAN BE obtained, with excellent accommodations, very low; reference. No. 276 West 23d-st.

EXCELLENT 2D FLOOR AND SUNNY ROOMS in small, refined family; very moderate prices. No. 449 West 21st-st.

NO. 34 WEST 38TH-ST.—LARGE ALD HALL room, fourth floor, with board; references given and required.

NO. 66 MADISON-AV.—HANDSOMELY-FURnished suite, with board, at moderate terms for balance of the season.

NO. 2 WEST 39TH-ST.—PLEASANT SUITE of rooms, with first-class board; single rooms for gentlemen; references.

FIFTH-AV., NO. 45, BELOW 14TH-ST.—Well-furnished suite of apartments on parlor floor, with or without private table, on moderate terms.

NO. 13 WEST 10TH-ST.—WITH BOARD, large, handsomely-furnished rooms on second floor; house an table first class.

NO. 36 EAST 20TH-ST.—SUITE OF ROOMS; private bath-room; without board; breakfast served if desired. Also, single rooms.

NICELY-FURNISHED ROOMS, WITH first board; en suite or singly; $5, $14. No. 138 East 29th-st.

FIFTH-AV., NO. 607.—LARGE AND ELEGANT apartments, richly furnished, with or without private table.

FIFTH-AV., NO. 352, CORNER 34TH-ST.—Two handsomely-furnished rooms, third floor, with board; terms moderate.

FINE SUNNY ROOMS; HALL ROOM; 1ST-floor board and accommodations, with private French family; references. No. 23 West 42d-st.

NO. 9 WEST 31ST-ST.—DESIRABLE ROOMS, fourth floor, with or without board; house and location unexceptionable.

NO. 47 WEST 47TH-ST.—A WARM, SUNNY, front room to rent, with board: references.

NO. 48 EAST 21ST-ST.—PLEASANT FIRST or second floor rooms to let, with board.

BOARD WANTED.

A NORTH GERMAN LADY, HIGHLY EDUcated, stranger; wishes a warm, nice room between 14th and 42d sts.; only in a good family, not boarding-house; best references; moderate terms. Address STRANGER, Box No. 227 Times Up-town Office, No. 1,238 Broadway.

BOARD WANTED—FOR A YOUNG LADY IN a Strictly private family. Address, with particulars, S. N. GRISWOLD, New-York Conservatory, No. 5 East 14th-st.

A LECTURE
BY
REV. HENRY WARD BEECHER,
SUBJECT: AMUSEMENTS.
Lexington-Avenue Opera-house, 55th-st., between 3d and Lexington avs., TUESDAY, Feb. 11, 1879, in aid of the NORTH-EASTERN DISPENSARY.
Tickets, $1. Doors open, 7:30. Lecture, 8 o'clock.

COLLEGE OF ELOCUTION AND DRAMATIC ART.—Prof. PHILIP LAWRENCE, No. 8 Union-square.—Eloquent Speaking, graceful Gestures, and impassioned Reading taught in class or private lessons. The "Lawrence Dramatic Company" perform every Tuesday evening in the large hall of the College. Free to all pupils. Rent for amateur theatricals, balls, &c.

E. EBERHARD'S HARMONY CLASSES, at the Grand Conservatory of Music, 21 East 14th-st., 21.

FURNISHED ROOMS.

NO. 17 WEST 24TH-ST., FOURTH HOUSE FROM BROADWAY.—Suites and single rooms for gentlemen, from $3 per week upward. References.

NO. 204 WEST 49TH-ST., BETWEEN 8TH AND BROADWAY AND 7TH AV.—Handsomely-furnished rooms to rent.

NO. 3 WEST 38TH-ST.—ELEGANTLY-FURnished rooms, en suite or singly; single rooms; terms moderate.

NO. 12 EAST 28TH-ST., BETWEEN 5TH AND MADISON AVS.—Furnished rooms for gentlemen; breakfast if desired; references.

A SUITE OF ROOMS TO GENTLEMEN, without board. No. 13 West 29th-st.

ROOMS WANTED.

FURNISHED ROOM FOR LADY, 407TH and 5th sts., 3d and 6th avs. TEACHER. No. 15 East 47th-st.

STORES, &C., TO LET.

PROPOSALS

WILL BE RECEIVED FOR

LEASING FOR A TERM OF YEARS

THE PREMISES ON

BROADWAY, CHAMBERS, & READE STS.,

LATELY OCCUPIED FOR OUR WHOLESALE BUSINESS. APPLICATIONS MAY, if so desired, INCLUDE the

TWO BUILDINGS ADJACENT ON CHAMBERS-ST.,

KNOWN as NOS. 53 and 55, EXTENDING THROUGH to READE-ST.

The BUILDINGS are HEATED THROUGHOUT by STEAM, and PROVIDED with ONE PASSENGER and SIX FREIGHT ELEVATORS, and are in EVERY WAY ADAPTED to SUCH ALTERATIONS and USES as ANY PARTY DESIRING BUSINESS MAY REQUIRE.

The ENGINES, BOILERS, and STEAM APPARATUS are in PERFECT ORDER, and the VAULTS, BESIDES BEING FIRE and BURGLAR PROOF, are SPACIOUS ENOUGH for ANY PURPOSES to which the buildings may be applied.

PROPOSALS will please STATE the USES INTENDED, ALTERATIONS PROPOSED, TERM of YEARS DESIRED, &c., &c. Address

A. T. STEWART & CO.,
BROADWAY, 4TH-AV. AND 9TH-ST.

OFFICES TO LET
IN THE
TIMES BUILDING.
APPLY TO
GEORGE JONES,
TIMES OFFICE.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

A CAPITALIST WANTED WITH $100,000 already money, individually or as partner, general or special, after 5 years' business experience in banking, or similar to dealing in bullion in its intrinsic or conventible nature; purchases, sales, or dealings cash; no credit, no risk; no losses; no capital required for outlay, and exposure necessary; will bear most searching examination, and be closed in 60 days any time, leaving no balances or loans; profits from 15 to 20 per cent. per annum; fullest references given. Address, with real name, SAFETY, Box No. 3,757 Post Office.

B. B. DYER, AUCTIONEER AND GENERAL Agent, 263 Broadway, is desirous of an active, wide-awake business partner, with a moderate capital, under his own control, and who will assume the inside work of the office. As he is ranging for an extensive and varied sale of pastels, and other sales, soon to take place, it is necessary that parties who are making a safe business which is now paying, should apply at once, when an interview all particulars given. Call only from 4 to 5 o'clock P. M.

PARTNER WANTED IN AN OLD-ESTABlished business, with a cash capital of $10,000; business unincumbered and in a fine condition; best references as to character and integrity given and required. Address P. W., Box No. 150 Times Office.

WANTED—A PARTNER WITH $15,000 TO BUY out a rotating partner, and to extend the old established manufacturing business. Address A. B. C., Box No. 121 Times Office.

FOR SALE—A FIRST-CLASS BAKERY AND lunch, with a five-year lease, in one of the best locations in the City. Address OWNER, Box No. 289 Times Up-town Office, No. 1,238 Broadway.

WATCHES, JEWELRY, &C.

MONEY.—DIAMONDS, WATCHES, JEWELRY, Silverware, &c., bought and sold; cash in small advance. GEO. C. ALLEN, No. 1,199 Broadway, near 29th-st.

NO. 1,247 BROADWAY, OVER HERALD Branch.—Ladies' private office. Diamonds, watches, jewelry, &c., bought and sold. Diamonds. No. 1,247 Broadway. LINDO BROS.

AMUSEMENTS.

NEW-YORK CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC.
New-York offices only at
No. 5 EAST 14TH-ST., second door east of 5th-av.
(Incorporated 1864.)
THIS RENOWNED MUSIC SCHOOL AND SCHOOL of Elocution, Oratory and Dramatic Action, Modern Languages, Drawing, and Painting, offers unequaled advantages to pupils, from the first beginner to the finished artist.
A SPECIAL TRAINING course for teachers.
TERMS.—Classes of three pupils.....$10 per quarter
Classes of two pupils.....15 per quarter
STRICTLY PRIVATE LESSONS 50 per quar

PERISTEIN FOUND GUILTY.

ARSON IN THE FIRST DEGREE.

A CLEAR CASE ESTABLISHED AGAINST THE ACCUSED—THE INDICTMENT IN THE CASE STOLEN FROM THE COURT-ROOM—A MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL TO BE MADE.

The trial of Isaac Peristein, the Polish peddler, for setting fire to the densely-crowded tenement-house, No. 11 Ludlow-street, was resumed before Judge Cowing, in the General Sessions Court, yesterday. The evidence elicited during the trial disclosed a state of facts of such atrocity as to send a thrill of horror through the community, and cause law-abiding citizens to tremble for the safety of life and property. The closing scenes in the five days' trial were witnessed by a throng of spectators who not only occupied every inch of standing space in the court-room, but surged away out to the entrances. Judge Gildersleeve occupied a seat beside Judge Cowing during a portion of the day, while District Attorney Phelps, Assistant District Attorneys Russell, Bell, and Lyon, Gen. Foster, Fire-Marshal Sheldon, and a number of prominent lawyers listened with close attention to the arguments of counsel on both sides.

After Judge Cowing had taken his seat, and the jury had been called, Mr. Charles W. Brooke, the prisoner's counsel, opened a pile of law-books and was about to commence his summing-up address to the jury, when Assistant District Attorney Rollins announced that the indictment could not be found. That important document had last been seen in the possession of Deputy Clerk William C. Stewart, who was not present at the opening of the court. A careful search for the missing indictment was made through Mr. Stewart's desk and papers, but the bill could nowhere be found, and a court officer was dispatched to the absent clerk's residence, when it was found that the indictment was not in his possession. After Judge, jury, lawyers, and 500 spectators had been kept waiting half an hour, Assistant District Attorney Rollins, after consulting with Mr. Brooke, suggested that the case proceed without the indictment. Judge Cowing thereupon directed that the case be proceeded with.

Mr. Rollins said that in order to simplify the issues, he would withdraw all the other counts in the indictment except that charging the setting fire of the dwelling-house of Isaac Koeningsberg while Koeningsberg was an inmate, thus abandoning the second and third counts, setting forth the burning of the dwelling-house of Joseph Levy. Mr. Brooke vehemently opposed any such withdrawal, and denied the authority of the court to permit it.

Judge Cowing permitted the withdrawal of the counts mentioned, and counsel for the prisoner took an exception.

Mr. Brooke then commenced his summing-up address to the jury. He condemned the action of the prosecution in having had the prisoner indicted without an examination before a magistrate, and in keeping the evidence in the case from the prisoner and his lawyer. He had to hear the opening of Assistant District Attorney Rollins before he could know what the crime was with which the prisoner stood charged, and what the nature of the testimony to be produced against him. Counsel commented at length on the nature of the evidence produced by the prosecution, contending that it was inconsistent and insufficient, and the identification of the prisoner incomplete. In concluding an address of two hours' duration, Mr. Brooke urged the jury to weigh the evidence on both sides carefully, contending that he had placed before them facts which, if true, established beyond peradventure the innocence of the prisoner.

Assistant District Attorney Rollins, in replying to Mr. Brooke, said that he regarded the case as the most important he had ever presented to a jury, and believing, as he did, that the prisoner had been shown by the evidence to be guilty, he would look upon his conviction as the most important event in the criminal history of the present generation. The importance of such a verdict could not well be overestimated. Many incendiary fires had been committed in the thickly-populated East Side districts of the City before the arrest of the prisoner and the rest of the gang; but it was a notorious fact that since the incarceration of the prisoners not a single arson case had been discovered in that region. He had intended to connect Peristein, beyond all doubt, with several of these fires, but the testimony had been ruled out. There had been no persecution in the case. The prisoner had been accorded the fullest rights under the law. No injustice had been done the accused, and, if he was convicted, his conviction would be a fair and honest one. Mr. Rollins made his great point in attacking the alibi set up by Mr. Brooke. In asking where were a number of men who could have been of service to the prisoner, he asked "Where is Siegel? Where is Lowanstein? Where is Rubinstein?"

"He's dead," replied somebody in the rear of the court-room, and a roar of laughter followed.

"I was at the opera last night," continued Mr. Rollins, "and it struck me that the wearisome monotony of bringing up the witnesses to establish an alibi, one by one, and getting them to swear to the same fact might be avoided. For instance, they could be invited to march together to the witness-stand, and sing their answers in chorus in something like this, style:

"Solo by Mr. Brooke (in his deep, rich baritone)—Where were you on Nov. 10? Chorus—At Isaac Peristein's house.

"Solo—At what hour? Chorus—After 8 o'clock.

"Solo—Where was Isaac Peristein? Chorus—He was there.

"Solo—What was he doing? Chorus—Playing dominoes. [Laughter.]

"Then," said Mr. Rollins, "I should make a feeble effort to cross-examine in a poor tenor, in this wise:

"Solo—Were you all there? Chorus—We were all there.

"Solo—On the 10th of what month were you there? Chorus—We don't know the month.

"Solo—But you are sure you were all there? Chorus—Dead sure."

In concluding an address of two hours' duration, Mr. Rollins said that there never was a case of more importance tried in any criminal court, nor one the result of which was awaited with more interest by the community. If this man was guilty of the atrocious, fiendish crime attributed to him he richly deserved to be punished, and the public had a right to demand that his punishment be prompt and effective. He had taken a deep, an intense interest in prosecuting this case, and had been careful to lay every fact, however simple, before them, satisfied that if the facts, as he had unfolded them, were true, any other verdict than that of arson in the first degree would be a deplorable miscarriage of justice.

Judge Cowing then charged the jury. The case, he said, had occupied five days in trial, and had in its historical details, and the intense interest it had evoked, proved to be one of the most important ever recorded in the annals of crime. It had occupied his thoughts during the week, and must have been uppermost in the minds of the jurors. His Honor instructed the jury at length on the law in relation to arson, charging that if they believed the evidence for the defense, they should acquit the prisoner; while, on the other hand, if they believed the testimony of the witnesses for the prosecution, they would be justified in finding him guilty. If they found that the prisoner had been associated with Bernstein and Freeman in the commission of the crime—that the three were associated together for the common purpose of perpetrating this crime—each should be held equally guilty with the other. If, after carefully reviewing all the evidence and weighing all the circumstances of the case, they had any reasonable doubt of the prisoner's guilt, the prisoner was, of course, entitled to the benefit of that doubt. His Honor then disposed of a number of requests to charge, submitted by Mr. Brooke, and at 5:30 P. M. the jury retired.

At 7:30 they returned into court and rendered a verdict of guilty of arson in the first degree. The prisoner heard the verdict with stolid indifference and betrayed no emotion whatever. At the request of Mr. Brooke, the motion for a new trial was set down for a week from to-morrow. The jury stood 11 to 1 for conviction when they left the jury-box. The only penalty the court is allowed to impose under the law is imprisonment in State Prison for life.

The missing indictment can nowhere be found, and the only inference drawn by the attaches of the court is that it has been stolen by some of the prisoner's friends, in the desperate hope of nullifying the result of the trial. The loss of the document, while it will in no way affect the verdict of the jury, places the prosecuting officers in an embarrassing position. No copy being in existence, the record cannot be made, nor the case completed. If, however, Assistant District Attorney Rollins, who drew up the indictment, can duplicate the document, and certify to its correctness, it can be accepted as a portion of the record, and sentence may be imposed. Mr. John Sparks, the Chief Clerk of the Courts of General Sessions, says that this is the first time in his long experience that an indictment has been lost, a copy of which did not exist. Once, by consent of counsel, a case was tried on a copy of an indictment which had been lost, and after the conviction of Messrs. Gardner and Charlick great consternation was caused by the discovery that the original indictment had been lost. It was subsequently discovered that United States Commissioner Davenport had carried away the document by mistake and left it among his papers.

OOFTY GOOFT'S CRITICAL CONDITION.

There were no new developments in the "Ooffy Gooft" case yesterday. Another attempt was made by the doctors to find the bullet in Ooffy's side, but it was unsuccessful. Fears are now entertained that the wound may prove fatal, and Dr. Quinlan entertains out slight hopes of the injured man's recovery, and believes that fatal blood-poisoning will eventually follow the wound. In this opinion Deputy Coroner Miller concurs.

A COLORED GENERAL COMMITTEE.

A permanent General Committee was organized on Friday evening by delegates from the 13 colored Republican Associations of this City, who met at No. 148 Bleecker-street. A thorough organization of the colored vote was agreed upon, and speeches were made protesting against the repeal of the fourteenth article of the constitution of the Republican General Committee. An election for officers resulted in the choice of William Freeman for President; Philip Backus, Vice-President; Col. James B. Lee, Treasurer; John Dozier, Secretary, and Henry Ford, Assistant Secretary. The appointment of executive and standing committees was postponed until Friday evening next. At a public meeting, to be held on a date not yet determined upon, addresses will be delivered by Senator Bruce, of Mississippi, and Representatives Rainey and Smalls, of South Carolina.

THE MANHATTAN SAVINGS BANK.

WHAT A TRUSTEE SAYS REGARDING THE OFFERS MADE BY CERTAIN LAWYERS.

One of the Trustees of the Manhattan Savings Institution, which was robbed of $3,000,000 in securities, in October last, said to a TIMES reporter yesterday afternoon that the statement which was made to the Finance Committee of the Legislature at Albany, to the effect that overtures had been made to the Trustees for the return of the stolen securities, through lawyers in good standing, was true. These overtures, he said, had come from at least four different lawyers, and he had no reason to suppose that they had any connection with each other. The gentlemen said that the lawyers were all of good standing in the profession, and he presumed that they really did not know who the thieves were; that they had probably never seen them, but assumed to represent only the agents of the robbers. He would not mention any names, nor would he state the amount demanded for the return of the securities. It was, however, he said, a very large sum, much larger than the Trustees felt inclined to pay, and the propositions were not therefore entertained. In fact, he said that the Trustees did not think they had any right to pay out any of the moneys of the bank for any such purpose, although they would no doubt have been willing to have paid a small sum out of their own pockets, and they might have been justified in adding a little more from the funds of the bank, for the sake of having the securities returned at once, without so much delay and trouble as had occurred. All the propositions, he said, came very soon after the robbery had occurred, and before the passage of the law authorizing the reissue of the stolen bonds. As it now turns out, the bank will get all their securities back except about $200,000, and they were of such a character that they can never be of any use to the thieves. They are mostly coupon bonds, and, as a matter of course, the coupons would never be paid. Among those not restored are some $118,000 of City of Yonkers bonds, $48,000 of United States 5-20 called bonds, without coupons, a few Westchester County bonds, and a few City of Brooklyn bonds. Since the law was passed authorizing the reissue of the stolen securities, no propositions for the return of those stolen had been received, and none were now pending.

In regard to the resumption of business by the bank, the Trustee in question said that the day had not been fixed, but that as soon as the reissued bonds were received business would be resumed. The bank had, he said, $3,000,000 in cash now on hand, and when they received the bonds they would have enough to pay every depositor in full and have $400,000 left, not taking into account the $200,000 not reissued. He said that there were brokers advertising their willingness to buy the pass-books of depositors, and to give 80 cents on the dollar for them, and at the same time saying that they did not believe they were worth that much. It was, he said, an outrage.

THE SHOOTING OF OFFICER FURNESS.

INQUIRY AS TO THE SANITY OF WILLIAM PALMER, JR.

The Commissioners appointed by Judge Gildersleeve to inquire into the mental condition of William Palmer, Jr., indicted for the murder of Officer Asa H. Furness, of the Fourteenth Precinct, in the Metropolitan Hotel, met again yesterday in the District Attorney's office. The prisoner was not in attendance. The witnesses examined were Officers Burns and Ryan, comrades of the murdered policeman, Private Detective Keeley, of the Metropolitan Hotel, and a colored waiter named Vaughan. The testimony of all except Detective Keeley was to the effect that Palmer's appearance on the day of the shooting was like that of a man who had been drinking heavily. At the station-house the accused expressed no regrets, whatever for his offense; but at Bellevue Hospital he said he was sorry for what he had done, and hoped the officer would not die. Detective Keeley, however, described the actions and manner of Palmer as those of an insane man. Dr. Ordronaux said he considered it strange that the deceased officer should have been unarmed on the day of the shooting, and expressed surprise, also, that Officers Ryan and Burns, both of whom had their revolvers, did not use them for their own protection or that of Officer Furness. The officers said that under the discipline of the department Police officers were not supposed to use their arms on a lunatic. If they could not disarm and arrest insane persons without resorting to violence, they were supposed to let them go. Besides, Officer Furness had almost captured Palmer when the latter, suddenly diverting the aim of the revolver, which he had then pointed at Ryan, turned on deceased and fired two shots. At the station-house Palmer imagined he had shot two Police officers, and appeared surprised when he found that Ryan had not been shot. He was also under the impression that he had shot Detective Keeley. The opinion of the officers seemed to be that if they were in uniform Palmer would not have attempted to shoot them. The inquiry will be continued on Tuesday next.

TREATING AND DRINKING.

THE BUSINESS MEN'S SOCIETY FOR THE ENCOURAGEMENT OF MODERATION.

The certificate of incorporation of an association to be known by the title of "The Business Men's Society for the Encouragement of Moderation" was approved yesterday by Judge Barrett, in the Supreme Court, Chambers, and was afterward filed in the County Clerk's office. The purposes of the society, as stated in the certificate, are to encourage moderation in the use of alcoholic beverages, to promote a knowledge of science and statistics relative to the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors, to disseminate among the people useful information regarding the principles of moderation and the means of carrying such principles into practical effect. The society intends to prepare and furnish to applicants either of three forms of pledges, to wit: A total abstinence pledge, operative for one year, and renewable thereafter at the will of the pledger; a moderation pledge, binding the person who takes it not to drink during business hours; and finally, a unique engagement meant to prevent the person taking the pledge from partaking of intoxicating liquors at the expense of another person, and from extending an invitation to any other person to drink at his expense. The society is also to exert its influence to induce retail liquor-dealers to provide for teetotalers stimulating and nourishing beverages which contain no alcohol. Still another purpose of the society is to encourage the establishment of places of cheap recreation and amusement where no intoxicating liquors shall be sold. The society will begin operations at once, and its terms of existence are 20 years. The incorporators of the society are Henry W. Baldwin, B. F. Nelswender, H. H. Hadley, Ellwood E. Thorne, and Albert L. Rawson.

COUNTERFEIT COIN.

Early in the present month two men went into Solomon Ostreicher's store, in Cnatham-street, and purchased three cigar molds, paying 45 cents for them. They tendered in payment a gold dollar coin, and received change and left. Afterward it was found that the coin was a counterfeit, and it was marked and laid aside. The men were served by Max Ostreicher, a lad about 16 years old. Yesterday he saw the two men, followed them, and caused their arrest. At the Oak-Street Police Station they were searched, and on the one who passed the bad dollar were found three other similar and spurious coins. The prisoners were sent to the United States Attorney's office, and complaints were entered against them. The man who had the money gave his name as Edward Drolhe, and spoke French, claiming not to understand English. His companion gave the Spanish name of Francisco Bello. The lad says Drolhe spoke very good English when he obtained the cigar-molds. United States Commissioner Shields held them in default of bail for examination.

United States Commissioner Deuel took testimony yesterday in the case of Richard D. Barnes, who is charged with attempting to pass a counterfeit 10-cent coin on a trader named Speecht, of Delancey-street. When arrested, eight of these spurious coins were found on him. His counsel, M. L. Hollister, yesterday raised the novel and ingenious plea, in defense, that these counterfeits are so badly executed that there could not be any intent to deceive in offering them. There can be no question about the bad quality of the work, and the point will be argued on Tuesday next.

A STEAM-SHIP ASHORE.

The light-house keeper at Castle Island reported to the purser of the steam-ship Acapulco, which arrived from Aspinwall yesterday, that the schooner Rescue, of Baltimore, went ashore at Miraporvos Key on Jan. 11, while attempting to beat off the land against a head wind. There were six feet of water in the schooner's hold at the time, and the cargo, which consisted of provisions, was badly damaged, but a portion of it was saved and the crew took it to Fortune Island with them. They then proceeded to Nassau. The key where the vessel went ashore was 20 miles south of Castle Island light. The Rescue was built at Philadelphia, in 1865, registered 91 tons, was owned by J. Henry, and commanded by Capt. Moon. The light-house keeper also reported that a Spanish brig was wrecked at Marignana early in the present month, and that the Captain and crew had gone to Nassau.

CITY AND SUBURBAN NEWS.

NEW-YORK.

The arrests by the Police during the past week numbered 1,012.

The Customs officers seized 107 bundles of smuggled cigarettes in Twelfth-street yesterday.

New-York Lodge, No. 330, F. and A. M., will confer the first degree on Tuesday evening, Jan. 28.

Anne Newell will lecture in Chickering Hall to-morrow evening on "Paris and the French People."

The eighth annual ball of the Bachelor Club will take place to-morrow evening in Ferrero's Assembly Rooms.

The outgoing European steamers from this port carried out yesterday 57,000 letters and 95 bags of newspapers.

The receipts for the sale of postage stamps at the New-York Post Office during the past week amounted to $57,100.

Edward Hanlan, of Toronto, the champion sculler, sails for England by the Inman steam-ship City of Montreal on Thursday next, the 30th inst.

Among the callers on Mayor Cooper yesterday were Thurlow Weed, ex-Controller Green, Speaker Alvord, and Assemblymen Strahan, Hayes, and Grady.

There will be a meeting in Rev. Dr. Bellow's Church this evening in behalf of Indian civilization. Addresses will be delivered by Gen. Armstrong, Rev. Drs. Adams, Bellows, and Washburn.

The City authorities have placed handsome signs, bearing the name "Harry Howard-square," on the corners of the triangular plot of ground bounded by Canal, Walker, and Mulberry streets.

The average daily number of packages sent out from the New-York Post Office under the third-class matter registry system is over 200. It is said that the express companies are beginning to feel the effect of this competition.

There were 219 cases of scarlet fever during the past week, being an increase of 15 over the number reported the previous week. The deaths were 59, being 9 less than the preceding week. The number of cases of diphtheria reported was 54, and deaths 23.

The twenty-sixth anniversary of the Young Men's Christian Association of this City occurs to-morrow evening in Association Hall. The annual report will be read, and addresses will be delivered by Rev. Drs. E. A. Washburn and O. H. Tiffany and George Du Forest Lord, Esq.

Superintendent Walling has received $3,136 88, the proceeds or tickets sold by the Police for the matinée performance at Niblo's Garden in aid of the family of the late Patrolman Furness. There are several precincts to hear from yet, and the total receipts will foot up over $3,500.

John W. Hull, the aged broker, who carried off $30,000 worth of United States bonds, the property of Messrs. Field & James, No. 16 Broadway, was yesterday released on $2,500 bail by Judge Cowing. James Reid, of No. 221 West Twenty-seventh-street, became his bondsman.

There were reported at the Bureau of Vital Statistics during the past week 639 deaths, 493 births, and 128 marriages, showing an increase of 7 deaths and a decrease of 65 births and 17 marriages, as compared with the preceding week. Of the deaths, 102 were from consumption, 86 from pneumonia, and 39 from bronchitis.

Judge Barrett rendered a decision in the suit of John N. Cook against his father, Thomas Cook, and E. M. Jenkins, for the dissolution of the firm of Cook & Jenkins and the appointment of a Receiver to wind up its affairs. Judge Barrett orders the appointment of a Receiver, and grants the plaintiff the right to serve a supplemental complaint.

The steam-ship Gellert, of the Hamburg-American Line, which arrived yesterday, had strong westerly gales and high seas from the 11th inst., when she left Havre, until Thursday last. The locks were closed to the consumable coal, and had to carry any sail. At times the gale would increase into a hurricane. No accidents occurred.

Proceedings have been instituted in the United States Circuit Court, before Judge Blatchford, to compel the Gold and Stock Telegraph Company to pay the royalties claimed under the Simpson patent for gutta-percha electrical insulators, as the Western Union Telegraph Company has recently been compelled to do under the judgment in the Colgate case.

The President of the Produce Exchange has appointed the following delegates to attend the Convention of the New-York State Dairymen's Association and Board of Trade in Utica on the 5th and 6th prox.: A. H. Turner, John Anderson, Thomas Bamber, Alexander Mackenzie, Col. J. Ottman, Joel D. Hunter, J. W. Joyce, George S. Hart, George B. Douglass, Henry C. Howell, and M. Folsom.

A fire occurred at midnight Friday in the apartments of D. Foreman, on the second floor of the tenement-house No. 1,695 First-avenue, causing $200 damage. During the progress of the fire Patrolman John J. Donovan, of the Twenty-third Precinct, was overcome by the dense smoke in the house, and was partially suffocated. He was attended by Dr. Meville, and soon recovered.

William A. Ellis, who was arrested on Thursday by Central Office detectives, in accordance with a dispatch from the authorities of Dallas, Texas, which stated that an indictment had been found against him for swindling the firm of Adams & Leonard, hide merchants, in Dallas, was rearraigned before Justice Smith, yesterday, in the Tombs Police Court, and in the absence of a requisition or more definite instructions was again remanded.

Mrs. Brown, mother of Frank McKenna, who was recently convicted of manslaughter in the third degree, was before Justice Smith yesterday, in the Tombs Police Court, on the complaint of Mrs. Oates, the mother of William B. Wilks, who was shot by McKenna. Mrs. Oates charged that Mrs. Brown insulted her on the street, called her vile names, and otherwise abused her. Justice Smith fined the defendant $10, and held her in $500 bail to keep the peace for six months.

BROOKLYN.

During the past week permits were granted by the Department of Fire and Buildings for the erection of 13 new buildings.

The regular meeting of the Long Island Historical Society takes place on Tuesday evening, at the Second Presbyterian Church, Fulton and Clinton streets. Mr. John E. Russell, of Leicester, Mass., will read a paper upon "The Moorish Antiquities of Spain."

The forty-first annual ball of the Emerald Association, for the benefit of the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum, will be given in the Academy of Music, on Montague-street, on Tuesday night. Before the dancing begins there will be a concert by Gilmore's Band.

On the 9th inst. Miles Clark, a well-known thief, who has served several terms of imprisonment, was discharged from the Penitentiary, where he had just completed a three years' sentence for robbery. On the evening of the same day he was caught in the act of stealing a roll of cloth from a dry goods store in Bridge-street. Clark knocked down one of the clerks who attempted to stop his flight. Yesterday Judge Walsh sentenced Clark to six months in the Penitentiary for petit larceny and six months for assault and battery.

Peter Tarintino, of No. 307 Hamilton-avenue, who cut Onofrio Mattino, one of his employes, on the head, neck, and body with a razor, on Friday night, was committed yesterday by Justice Ferry to await the result of the wounded man's injuries. Tarintino claims that he was first attacked and cut on the hand by Mattino when he charged his assistant with committing a brutal assault on Mrs. Tarintino. Tarintino claims that Mattino pulled a pistol out of his pocket, and that the weapon was discharged during the affray, the bullet entering the body of Mattino.

Michael McDermott, a drunken coal heaver, was arrested by Officer Quinn, of the Fifth Precinct, on Friday night. In the prisoner's pockets were found $1,011 35. It was ascertained on examination that whenever McDermott got drunk—which he did quite frequently—it was his habit to go to the Williamsburg Savings Bank, where he had his money, and annoy the officials of the institution by questions as to the safety of his deposit. McDermott became such a nuisance that the bank people compelled him to take away his money. He has carried the money on his person since he drew it from the bank.

The application of the Brooklyn Steam Transit Company to restrain the City of Brooklyn from interfering with the relators came up before Justice Pratt, in the Supreme Court, yesterday. Mr. Sheldon, formerly Secretary of the company, was called to show the continuous existence of the company from 1873 to the present time. His testimony related chiefly to the different contracts made and the amount of stock subscribed. Col. Snow, the Engineer of the road, was recalled and testified that he ceased work on June 29, 1878. Corporation Counsel De Witt, for the city, asked for a postponement in order to call Mr. Sage, one of the stockholders. David Dudley Field, for the relators, objected. He had heard, he said, that the respondents desired delay in order to procure legislation at Albany to affect the relators. Judge Pratt adjourned the case for one week.

LONG ISLAND.

J. M. Edwards, of Riverhead, was yesterday elected President of the Long Island Masonic Benevolent Association.

The estate of A. T. Stewart paid the Receiver of Taxes of the Town of Hempstead $4,432 70 yesterday, due on the property situated at Garden City.

The tax-payers of the East Setauket and the South Setauket school districts are at variance as to the boundaries of their respective tax districts. Some hundreds of acres of outlands and a few farms are involved in the adverse claims of jurisdiction. A division line is understood to be recorded in the Town Clerk's office, which, however, the Trustees of the East Setauket district insist was never agreed to by them. So the matter is to go before the courts.

The steamer Vindicator, ashore near Fire Island, was abandoned yesterday. Two divers having been working in her continually, only a small part of her cargo remains, and that is in her hold and consists of dry goods.

As the Spring Circuits in New-Mexico commence at Santa Fé on the second Monday in February, Chief-Justice Prince finds it necessary to leave for his post of duty on Friday of next week. He proposes to have a parting reception of his friends at his home in Flushing on Wednesday evening next.

Word has reached Long Island City that the Governor has decided to pardon two criminals from that place named Mallon and McFadden, sent to the State Prison for 10 years in 1876 for highway robbery. They attacked a working man named Hobby on Jackson-avenue, and robbed him of $9, the amount of his week's wages.

NEW-JERSEY.

The trial of Jennie R. Smith, of Jersey City, for the murder of her husband, Richard H. Smith, has been set down for Feb. 4, when it will certainly be commenced.

At the annual Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic at Orange the following officers were elected: Commander, Samuel Hufty; Senior Vice-Commander, Wilson F. Smith, of Elizabeth; Junior Vice-Commander, J. S. Van Alst, Jr., of Jersey City; Council of Administration, J. G. Fisher, Emil Toerrig, George B. Stryker, George Lippart, and William Sulger.

James Loftus, who has been the busiest Justice of the Peace in Paterson for some years, was arraigned in the Passaic County Court of Quarter Sessions yesterday on an indictment containing four counts: First, unlawfully fining George McKeon $10 under the Disorderly act and not paying the money over to the County Collector; second, unlawfully fining George McKeon $5 and not paying it over; third, unlawfully fining George McKeon and John Butler $5; fourth, unlawfully threatening to commit the men named to jail if they did not pay these fines. Loftus pleaded not guilty, and was released on bail until next Wednesday. Another Justice is understood to have been indicted for similarly retaining fines collected, but he claims to have a legitimate defense.

BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER.
is a marvel.
Ask any physician in your own locality about it.
For lameness or weakness of the back, rheumatism, stubborn colds, disease of the kidneys, sciatica, lumbago, female weakness, and all local aches and pains it is the best remedy ever devised or known. BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS was invented in 1873, the object being to reach all local ailments through the pores of the skin by absorption: a combination of powerful vegetable ingredients was added to a purified rubber porous plaster, and the result was a remedy of very remarkable merit, and one which is positively very far superior to ordinary porous plasters, Indiapads, or the so-called cheap electrical appliances.
The proprietors received highest and only awards at both Philadelphia and Paris Expositions.
Sold by all druggists.
Price 25 cents.—Advertisement.

PASSENGERS SAILED.

In steam-ship City of Vera Cruz, for Havana.—Luis Malanco and daughter, A. Adorey, Miss Adorey, Mrs. Albalza, Miss Matilde Arnao, G. Barrone and four friends, G. Benedick, Mr. and Mrs. Blackmore, Mr. Bonivardi, Mr. Bouvet, Mr. Brualt, Mrs. R. Campdes and child, R. Carpedes, G. Farier, Mr. Gerard, Mr. Goldberg, Mr. Grother and lady, J. Guera, Mr. Guerra, E. R. Hamilton, R. E. Kelly, V. Lagos, Mr. and Mrs. Lecuyer, Mrs. A. Loza, Mr. Luberti, Miss A. Macias, Juan Manuel Macias, Mr. Maurice, R. W. Mills, Mrs. Joaquina Mir de Mondosa and six children, R. Ozinard, P. S. Pacheco, Pla, Mrs. E. Picabi, Ralph Polo, Mr. Priore, Mr. and Mrs. E. Pouvert, Mr. and Mrs. T. Rosnate, Mr. and Mrs. Raffino, Mr. Sauzi, Mr. Sawyer, Mrs. Stone, Miss Celia Terry, Miss Tomast, Miss Toutlard, Raimundo Vinals, Mrs. Vandame, M. Weinburgh.

In steam-ship Western Texas, for Jacksonville.—A. Fox, Mrs. Fox, R. H. Marey & Co., W. Gilbert, Mrs. Gilbert, Miss Laura Price, W. H. Anderson, E. L. Brisbane, George H. Pryor, Edward A. Temple, W. A. Hobbs, W. C. Peterson, Frank Lewis, Levi S. Sampson, W. J. Raymond, Mrs. J. Raymond, Mrs. Raymond, W. Daniels, Mrs. Daniels, Leroy Baxter, Mr. Fitzgerald, H. Gaskill, August Verlegor, Mrs. Arnold and child, R. C. Wilson.

In steam-ship City of Macon, for Savannah.—T. W. Strong, L. Zabriskie, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Collins, John Sweeney, C. R. Hardee, Mrs. C. Hollis, Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Locke and two children, Miss J. E. Fellows, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Spooner, Miss E. A. Ely, James Buell, John Munn, W. S. Whitehead, Charles Nolte, W. Brainard, A. G. McCauley, Mr. and Mrs. Connelly.

In steam-ship City of Austin, for Galveston.—J. E. Diaz, Mrs. Diaz and seven children, Max Kowitz, Mrs. E. O. Locke, Mrs. Ole Sorensen, William Brown, Mrs. Margaret Logan and two children, Miss Isabella Bruce, John Ryan.

PASSENGERS ARRIVED.

In steam-ship Gellert, from Hamburg.—J. Kornfeld, Alfred Faber, C. Ophuis, Carl Offermann, Theodore Bergner, Emma Bergner, (nee,) Linda Bergner, Mrs. Otto von Muhlbach, Ernst Thorer, Leonie Gregseler-Heim, Dorothea Enrei, Ulrich Palmedo, Henry Beniens, Maria Beniens, Alexander Zwolgta, Carl Schmidt, Maximilian Aron, Gustav Bens, Hedwig Hausmann, Dr. H. Focking, Mrs. Oliver, A. Seckel, R. De Rolin, Saul Moore, H. Bolinger, Mrs. Lions and John Mitre, Louis Lemoine, H. Arnold, Mrs. W. Gorse.

In steam-ship Acapulco, from Aspinwall.—Mrs. Celestina de Soto, Miss Ana Ueles, Miss Rosa Suazo, Roderico Toledo, Enrique de Soto, Col. F. G. Vaughan, James Boyd, Capt. R. W. Huntington, United States Navy; William Campbell, G. Herrera, Dr. L. T. Kennedy, United States Navy; Mrs. C. M. Birdsall, Capt. Kane.

MINIATURE ALMANAC—THIS DAY.

Sun rises.....7:15 | Sun sets.....5:10 | Moon sets....9:43
HIGH WATER—THIS DAY.

	P. M.	A. M.
Sandy Hook	10:25	10:57
Gov. Island	11:14	11:46
Hell Gate	12:36

MARINE INTELLIGENCE.

NEW-YORK.....SATURDAY, JAN. 25.

CLEARED.

Steam-ships Old Dominion, Walker, Norfolk, &c., Old Dominion Steam-ship Co.; Glaucus, Searse, Boston, H. F. Dimock & Co.; Alliance, Lawson, Philadelphia, James Hand; City of Macon, Kempton, Savannah, Morgan Yongs; City of Austin, Stelzs, Galveston, via Key West, C. H. Mallory & Co.; New-Orleans, Halsey, New-Orleans, Clark & Seaman; Gen. Whitney, Freeman, New-Orleans, Borert & Morgan; Caledonia, Allison, Glasgow, Henderson Bros.; Devonia, Ovenstone, Glasgow, Henderson Bros.; Champion, Lockwood, Charleston, J. W. Quintard & Co.; Benefactor, Jones, Wilmington, N. C., William P. Clyde & Co.; Neckar, Hoffmann, Bremen, via Southampton, Oelrichs & Co.; Franconia, Briggs, Portland, J. F. Ames; City of Vera Cruz Van Sice, Havana, &c., F. Alexander & Sons.

Ships J. R. Wright, Crowell, London, Boyt & Hinckan; Conqueror, Gould, San Francisco, Simonson & Hones; Lake Superior, (Br.,) Stewart, Liverpool William Nelson, Jr.; Dunrobin, (Br.,) Harris, Bremen, Snow & Burgess.

Barks Harmony, (Br.,) Downey, Rockafort, Scammell Bros.; Reindeer, Decker, St. Pierre, H. Trowbridge's Sons; Atlantic, Leafave, Bridgetown, H. Trowbridge's Sons; Trois Freres, (Fr.,) Guiter, Marseilles, James Henry; Due Virginia; (Ital.,) Jacoano; Order, for orders, John C. Seager.

Schrs. Jordan L. Mott, Tobin, Puerto Plata, Maitland, Phelps & Co.; C. P. Shultis, Young, New-Haven, Rockett Bros.; Wm. Lewis, Irvin Lawry, Speer, Boston, Hay & Pressey; S. L. Hazard, Brewster, Georgetown, S. C., &c., E. D. Sturbirt & Co.; Impulse, (Br.,) Marshall, Belize, Lamont & Co.; G. F. Baird, (Br.,) Shedl, St. John, N. B., P. L. Mervin & Son.

ARRIVED.

Steam-ship Daniel Steinman, (Belg.,) De Smet, Antwerp Jan. 3, with mdse. and passengers to Funch, Edye & Co.

Steam-ship Acapulco, Shackford, Aspinwall Jan. 17, with mdse and passengers to Pacific Mail Steam-ship Co.

Steam-ship Alisa, (Sz.,) Hughes, Cape Haytien, Dec. 21, St. Marc 22d, Port au Prince 23d, Savanilla Jan. 10, Carthagena 12th, and Aruinwall 15th, with mdse. and passengers to Pim, Forwod & Co.

Steam-ship Hermod, (Dan.,) Olsen, Cardiff, 24 ds., in ballast to Funch, Edye & Co.

Steam-ship Gellert, (Ger.,) Kahlewein, Hamburg Jan. 8, and Havre 11th, with mdse, and passengers to Kunhardt & Co.

Steam-ship Elphinstone, (Br.,) Beal, Liverpool Dec. 27, with salt to order—vessel to John C. Seager.

Steam-ship Franconia, Bragg, Portland, with mdse. and passengers to J. F. Ames.

Steam-ship Morgan City, Reed, New-Orleans Jan. 18, and S. W. Pass 19th, with mdse. and passengers to Borert & Morgan.

Steam-ship Gulf Stream, Ingram, Charleston Jan. 22, with mdse. and passengers to J. W. Quintard & Co.

Steam-ship Leicester, Mills, Philadelphia, with coal to Reading Railroad Co.

Ship Cockermouth, (of Liverpool,) Parker, Manilla 166 ds., with sugar and hemp to order—vessel to Funch, Edye & Co.

Bark Regina Tolck, Coldrey, Ginnent 75 ds., with sulphur to order—vessel to John Bidwood.

Bark Felicina Ferraro, (Ital.,) Schiaffino, St. Vincent 30 ds., in ballast to Slocovich & Co.

Brig Rapid, (of St. John, N. B.,) Yeotes, St. Bruno 30 ds., with mdse. to order—vessel to Dessert, Struehle & Co.

Brig Ellen H. Munroe, (of Machias,) Moore, Seville 54 ds., with cork, &c., to order—vessel to Simpson, Clapp & Co.

WIND—Sunset, at Sandy Hook, fresh, W.; hazy off shore; at City Island, N. W.; cloudy.

SAILED.

Steam-ships Neckar, for Bremen; Crowa, Downie, and Caledonia, for Glasgow; City of Chester, for Liverpool; City of Vera Cruz, for Vera Cruz; San Salvador, for Truxillo; (City of Austin, for Galveston; New-Orleans and Gen. Whitney, for New-Orleans; Seneca, for Savannah; Champion, for Charleston; Benefactor, for Washington, N. C.; Western Texas, for Jacksonville; Old Dominion, for Richmond; Alliance, for Philadelphia; ships Usha, for Antjer; L. Delap and Raby, for Bremen; Mo Pins Ulva, for London; Alhambra, for Philadelphia; Berks Ocean, for Copenhagen; Countess of Derby, for London; Caro, for Santos; brigs Foldin, for Port Elizabeth; Amelia Thurlow, for Morgan Pill; Pearl, for Port Spain; Stanley, for Barbadoes; Princess Beatrice, for Point-a-Pitre; M. R. Russell, for Havana; Kate McDougal, for ——.

Also, ve Long Island Sound, schrs. Sarah, George Calhoun, and Maud and Bessie, for St. John, N. B.; Ocean Queen, for Grand Manan, N. B.; Bowditt, for Boston; and all schrs. before reported at Hart Island.

SPOKEN.

Jan. 15, lat. 30, lon. 70 50, schr. Jennie Rosalene, hence for Cienfuegos.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
The official examination and report on baking powders, by the Brooklyn Health Board, shows the ROYAL BAKING POWDER to be free from alum or any other injurious substance.
It is a pure grape cream of tartar powder, always uniform and full strength.
It costs a little more per pound, but is cheaper in the end, as it goes further, and never health.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Schr. Mail, Merrill, from Port Johnson for Providence, before reported beached at City Island, to stop leak, has repaired, and proceeded this A. M.

BY CABLE.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—Ship, 16th inst., Granite: 234 inst., Brunen, Capt. Moller; Pauline, Admeta, Magnolia, Capt. Luthsen; William Owen, Kong Sverre, Capt. Eliassen, ladies for New-York; Granville Bale, Tyler; 24th inst., Inverah, for South-west Pass; Linda, Capt.

The New-York Times.

VOL. XXVIII.....NO. 8542. NEW-YORK, MONDAY, JANUARY 27, 1879. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

JAN 1880

THE PANOCHE GRANDE CASE

A NEW WAY FOR SETTLING AN OLD DISPUTE.

A BILL TO BE REPORTED TO CONGRESS AUTHORIZING THE COURT OF CLAIMS TO DECIDE BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES, WILLIAM M'GARRAHAN, AND THE NEW-IDRIA COMPANY—A FAIR PROPOSITION TO ALL CONCERNED.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The Rancho Panoche Grande, for the possession of which William McGarrahan has been contesting for more than 20 years, is likely to come before Congress again in a short time. This valuable tract of land, on which are valuable quicksilver mines, is now, and has been for 20 years, in the full possession of the New-Idria Company. McGarrahan claims ownership under an old Spanish grant, but the New-Idria Company has successfully combatted his claim before Congress and the courts. In the entire controversy, however, the claim of the New-Idria Company to the lands in dispute has never been passed upon, and the company holds the lands and works the mines by the mere right of possession. McGarrahan's claim is against the United States, but the New-Idria Company has managed to stand behind the United States and force the Government to defend its title to property which that company has profitably enjoyed as "squatters." A great deal of scandal has grown out of this controversy, and charges have been made on both sides involving the honesty and integrity of many prominent public men. McGarrahan claims that if the property does not belong to him by right of purchase, it belongs to the United States, and that the New-Idria Company has no valid claim whatever. He is willing to assume that the property belongs to the United States, and to submit his claim, with that of the New-Idria Company, to the courts for adjudication. Propositions of this character have several times been presented to Congress, but the New-Idria Company has always opposed and succeeded in defeating them.

The House Committee on Public Lands has agreed to report a bill based upon the theory that the fee to the property is now in the United States, and authorizing suit to be brought in the Court of Claims, within 90 days, by any person claiming title, either legal or equitable, to the whole or any part of the property by petition in the nature of a bill in equity; and that for the purposes of the suit, the Court of Claims is vested with the powers and jurisdiction exercised by courts of equity, so far as may be necessary to give full relief in any suit which may be instituted. If two or more parties claiming the lands under different rights shall institute separate suits, such suits shall be consolidated and tried together, and the court shall determine the question of title and grant all proper relief as between the respective claimants as well as between each of them and the United States. If, upon the final hearing, the court shall decide in favor of the United States, the court shall order the lands to be placed in the possession of a Receiver, who shall take charge of them until Congress shall by law direct how they shall be disposed of. But if the court shall decide in favor of any claimant, it shall, by proper process, put such claimant into possession. The right of appeal by claimants to the Supreme Court is provided for, and the Attorney-General, in the event the suit is decided against the United States, is directed to prosecute an appeal on behalf of the United States.

The case is a fair proposition and one which the New-Idria Company should be willing to accept. The controversy over the first Spring property was decided in this manner, and that valuable property saved to the Government. The minority of the Senate Committee on Public Lands will report a similar bill to the Senate.

THE TARIFF ON SUGAR.

AN EFFORT TO BE MADE TO-DAY TO ASSIGN A TIME FOR THE CONSIDERATION OF THE WAYS AND MEANS BILL—THE PASSAGE OF THE SUGAR BILL IMPROBABLE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Mr. Robbins, of the Committee on Ways and Means, who has charge of the bill recently adopted by that committee readjusting the duties on sugar, will to-morrow introduce a resolution to suspend the rules, and make the bill a special order for a certain day. It is Mr. Robbins' purpose to name an early day for the consideration of the bill, but the particular day has not been decided upon. He will fix the time for its consideration so as not to antagonize any other measure, and will so frame his resolution as to exclude all other matters of revenue from being tacked to the Sugar bill. The intention is to have the sugar question considered as a distinct and independent proposition. Mr. Robbins feels confident that if he can get his resolution before the House, the necessary two-thirds majority can be obtained to fix a day for the consideration of the bill. This bill was adopted by a majority of the committee. It abolishes all grades below No. 13, Dutch standard, and imposes a duty of 2 41-100 cents per pound on all sugars not above No. 13; above No. 13 and not above No. 16, 2 75-100 cents per pound, and above No. 16, 3 cents.

Secretary Sherman has addressed a letter to Mr. Robbins upon this subject, in which he says that he would prefer to maintain the present classifications and rates of duty, if the use of the polariscope, or some other scientific device, were authorized to determine saccharine strength; but rather than not have a change in the present system of assorting and collecting duties upon sugars, he would recommend the passage of Mr. Robbins' bill. Should the bill be taken up by the House, Mr. Garfield will offer a substitute retaining the present classification and rates of duty and authorizing the use of the polariscope. Under Mr. Garfield's substitute, low-grade sugars testing 92 degrees by the polariscope, are classified as No. 13, Dutch standard, and assessed 2¼ cents per pound. This is the proposition favored by the Treasury Department. Whether Mr. Robbins can secure a two-thirds vote to-morrow to fix a day for the consideration of the bill is very doubtful, as it is opposed by Messrs. Wood, Kelley, Garfield, and Banks, the strongest members of the Committee on Ways and Means, but even should the bill be given a special assignment the near approach of the close of the session makes its final passage extremely doubtful.

CONGRESSIONAL TOPICS.

THE INVESTIGATION OF THE CIPHER TELEGRAMS TO BEGIN THIS WEEK—SENATOR HILL AND GOV. COLQUITT—MR. EDMUNDS' RESOLUTIONS TO BE AGAIN CALLED UP TO-DAY.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The New-York managers of the Western Union Telegraph Company have been subpœnaed to appear before the Potter committee in relation to the cipher telegrams, and it is expected that they will be put upon the stand immediately after St. Martin's testimony is concluded. The telegrams are being photo-lithographed as rapidly as possible, and are then handed over to Prof. Holden, of the Naval Observatory, the inventor of the dictionary system of ciphers, who has been selected by the committee to make the translations. It is expected that the first batch will be ready for the committee on Tuesday. Until the translations are completed, the committee will not consider the proposition to send a sub-committee to New-York to examine Mr. Tilden. It is expected that at least all of this week will be consumed in hearing and considering the translations of Prof. Holden.

The controversy between Senator Hill and Gov. Colquitt, of Georgia, is likely to be transferred to Washington. There are two factions in the Democratic Party in Georgia, a sort of Tammany and an Anti-Tammany party. Senator Gordon is said to represent the former and Ben Hill the latter. Hill's last manifesto to the people of Georgia, in which he arraigns Gov. Colquitt and his party for corrupt practices, brings Gordon to the surface, who says Gov. Colquit did only his duty, and that Ben Hill, as well as nearly every other prominent man in the State, advised him that it was his duty to sign the railroad bonds even before the clerk, Murphy, asked him to do so. He further says that the controversy will not affect the Democratic Party in the State, while Senator Hill holds the opposite. Now that Gordon has taken up the defense of Gov. Colquitt, it is not unlikely that Ben Hill will have something to say in reference to Gordon's connection with the opposition.

An effort will be made to-morrow in the Senate, after the morning hour, to take up the resolutions of Senator Edmunds in relation to the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth amendments to the Constitution. The Democrats will oppose their consideration, because they do not care to be held responsible for the discussion that will follow, and because they believe that a sufficient number of Republicans will vote with them to prevent their consideration. If, however, the resolutions should be taken up, the Democrats propose to debate them at length, holding the Republicans responsible for the delay of regular business that the discussion will naturally cause. Mr. Morgan, of Alabama, who has charge of the Democratic substitute, will follow Mr. Edmunds in the debate. Ben Hill, Whyte, of Maryland, and probably Thurman, will also take part in the discussion. Who will speak on the Republican side, besides Mr. Edmunds, is not known.

Gen. Shields, who was chosen last week by the Missouri Legislature to serve for the unexpired term of the late Senator Bogy in the United States Senate, arrived here to-night, and will to-morrow enter upon the discharge of his duties, relieving Senator Armstrong, who has been serving by appointment of the Governor of Missouri. The term for which Gen. Shields was elected will expire March 4 next.

The action of the House yesterday in considering the Post Office Appropriation bill shows that the reductions proposed by the Committee on Appropriations in the postal service will not be sustained. Upon three important items the House increased the amounts reported by the committee about $400,000. The item for compensation to clerks in Post Offices was increased $85,000; the pay of letter-carriers, $100,000, and transportation on "star" routes, $200,000.

The bill of Mr. Wright, of Pennsylvania, to lend $500 to each settler on the public lands under the Homestead act, will come up to-morrow in the House as unfinished business. The pending motion is to suspend the rules and pass the bill, which requires a two-thirds vote. It is not expected that the motion will receive even a majority vote.

BUTLER'S NEW CAMPAIGN.

AN "ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE" ISSUED BY HIS STATE COMMITTEE—A STRONG EFFORT TO BE MADE TO CAPTURE THE REGULAR DEMOCRATIC ORGANIZATION.

BOSTON, Jan. 26.—The Butler Democratic State Committee have issued an "address to the people," calling for the co-operation of all those voters of the Commonwealth, irrespective of previous party affiliations, who believe "that justice to the people demands of its officers retrenchment and reform, so that the people may be less and better governed, that taxes may be decreased, and the burdens of the State be more equally and justly divided, none of which can be expected for the future from the party in power, judging them by their broken promises of the past." It is also urged that in all those towns and cities where there are now two or more Democratic town or ward committees, "the differences of opinion that created them be harmonized and the committees organized," and that in those towns where there are no Democratic committees, and in those where it has been the custom to appoint town committees at the county conventions, regular calls for caucuses be immediately issued for the purpose of choosing committees. The object of this action is to secure a thorough working organization throughout the State for immediate service, the first work being so to influence the coming town elections as to secure supporters of Butler on the town committees and Boards of Selectmen, who have a good deal of local political power.

At a secret meeting of the Butler State Committee this address was drawn up, and plans were also considered for bringing together the two factions of the party here, with a view of unity of action, not only in the next State struggle, but in the Presidential campaign of 1880. While there were differences of opinion as to the best policy to be pursued, all agreed on this point, that the Butler element represents the main body of the Democratic Party in this State, which was in sympathy with the movement made last Summer and Fall. It was also the general opinion that the terms of union should be dictated by the Butler wing, or representatives of the people, and that if the Abbott wing should not choose to stand by the Butler men, but again attempt to bolt, they should be "fired out of the party." It is stated that one of the first steps toward reconciliation will be a movement toward securing the dissolution of the two State Committees chosen by the two conventions at Worcester in September, to be at once followed by the election of a new committee by the people, whichever faction obtaining a majority in the new committee to have control without further obstruction or opposition.

The Butler leaders express themselves as confident of their strength in the coming fight, and of having the crowd with them, and say they do not mean to be driven from the position they gained in the last election or to be outflanked by the leaders of the Abbott wing. Simultaneously with the publication of the address to the people comes the report that Butler has bought the paper subsidised by him in the last campaign.

A TELL-TALE CHECK-BOOK.

CONNECTICUT LEGISLATORS SAID TO HAVE BEEN BRIBED BY BENJAMIN NOYES, OF NATIONAL CAPITOL LIFE INSURANCE NOTORIETY.

NEW-HAVEN, Jan. 26.—Receiver Russell, of the National Capitol Life Insurance Company, in replevining the property of the company in Washington, came into possession of Benjamin Noyes' check-book. The stubs show that from $30,000 to $35,000 were used for legislative expenses, in influencing the Connecticut Legislature of 1875 to prevent the repeal of the charter of the company asked for by the Insurance Commissioner. The Receiver refuses to make the names public, but it is known that several members of the Legislature of that year received a portion of the money.

A SECRETARY'S SUSPICIOUS ABSENCE.

KEOKUK, Iowa, Jan. 26.—This community is considerably agitated over the prolonged absence from the city of H. G. Boon, Secretary of the Keokuk Gas-light and Coke Company. For several days there have been vague rumors concerning his disappearance, but there is no longer any attempt to conceal the fact that he left the city under a cloud on the 9th inst. He left home ostensibly to visit friends at Savannah, representing that he would be back in a few days. Failing to return, inquiry was made as to his whereabouts, and it was ascertained that after remaining one day at Savannah he went to St. Joseph, and that is the last that has been heard of him. He took with him the key of the company's safe. An examination of his books is now being made.

MRS. COBB PETITIONS FOR A NEW TRIAL.

NORWICH, Jan. 26.—In the Superior Court, yesterday, counsel for Mrs. Cobb presented to Chief-Justice Park a petition for a new trial of Mrs. Cobb. The chief grounds of the petition are alleged error in the charge to the jury, rejection of Floyd H. Crane's evidence for the defense, and admission of Mrs. Cobb's little daughter's testimony against the prisoner. The court holds the petition under advisement.

LOUISIANA UNDER NICHOLS.

HOW POINT COUPEE WAS CARRIED.

EXPERIENCES OF A COLORED REPUBLICAN—ELECTIONEERING AT NIGHT—HOW A REPUBLICAN PARISH WAS CARRIED.

I.

NEW-ORLEANS, Sunday.

My telegraphic dispatches have already stated, in a few words, the results of the investigations of the Teller committee in Louisiana. Three Congressional districts were carried by the Democrats by terrorism and intimidation. There was no constitutional election. It was an organized military campaign. Of course it was successful. When Greek meets black there is no tug of war. The negro in Louisiana dare not fight, cannot fight, and ought not to fight. Unarmed, unorganized, without military discipline, and utterly lacking the fierce instincts that our race has inherited from 2,000 years of struggle with cold and tempest and savage foes, if they invited a conflict with the whites of the South-west, in whom the presence of an enslaved population in overwhelming proportions, and the absence of respected legal power, incident to all frontier communities, have tended to develop the most martial characteristics of our race, the blacks would be swept from the field of battle as swiftly as a wheat-field disappears before the reaper. They are utterly at the mercy of a race that never yet, in any age, has shown mercy to an alien race, excepting in the capacity of master or ruler.

II.

General statements convey no adequate conception of the character of a campaign in States where the blacks are in a numerical majority.

Let me give in the briefest statement possible the story of one negro witness. It related to the Parish of Point Coupée. It has always been a Republican parish:

III.

Randall McGowan is an intelligent colored man. He has been the leader of the blacks in Point Coupée ever since they were enfranchised. He was a refugee in New-Orleans when he gave his testimony. His evidence was corroborated by other witnesses.

Early in the campaign McGowan was notified by the son of the Democratic candidate for the State Legislature, and by others, that if the Republicans attempted to organize, they would be strung up.

On the night of the 14th of August his house was surrounded by a company of about 30 armed men on horseback. He had been sick, and was weak, but got out of the house and hid among the weeds of the garden. The armed men forced his wife to admit them, and they searched the house. He was soon found among the weeds, and instantly knocked down. His assailant was about to shoot him, when a friend knocked up his arm and protested against killing the man in the presence of his wife. When the prostrate black rose and asked what he had done, he was told, with an oath, that he had begun to organise his clubs. The ruffian—as we would call him in the North; the young man of "high character," as he is called in Point Coupée—struck him and knocked him down again.

McGowan begged them to take him away if they meant to hang him, and not to murder him before his wife. A young man—Mr. Lacon—for whom McGowan had worked successfully, seconded his appeal.

IV.

The party took him to the house of Frank Murdock, "the next leading man of the Republican Party." Frank saw them coming, and hid in the cotton-fields.

"They took his wife," said McGowan, "and tied her up by the thumbs a considerable time to make her tell where he was, but she screamed and yelled; so they finally loosed her, but they could not make her tell."

V.

They next went to Levi Wells' house, "and seven or eight men took him and whipped him" savagely, and with oaths.

They told him that they were punishing him for organizing Republican clubs.

"We want you to understand," they said, "that this is a white man's country, and that there isn't a Republican vote going into the ballot-box this year. If there is, we will break your"—not God blessed—"necks."

VI.

The party then went to the house of another colored Republican—Mr. Paley Powers. He had escaped.

"They took his wife and dragged her around the house, and put pot-hooks into the waist of her dress and dragged her around."

But she would not betray her husband.

VII.

Baffled in this attempt, the party next rode to the house of Levi Sherman, a minister.

"They were just coming from church. They had dismissed very late that night, and he saw our crowd coming and broke and ran. They said 'Halt! halt!' He was frightened and ran. They shot him three times, once in his foot and twice in his thigh. Then the women and men and women came out, and instead of going after Levi Sherman they went after those men who were running. They thought they had killed Sherman,

"They paraded around that night. These men were raiding, whipping, and scaring women and men.

"About 2 o'clock in the morning Sherman got up and went to the house of an old man named Abrams. The crowd found him there, and treated him so brutally that no reputable journal can report what they did. They then took out the old man Abram and gave him 200 lashes for denying that Sherman was in his house.

This was the opening of the Autumn campaign in Point Coupée. It ended in rousing up a storekeeper and in having something to drink.

VIII.

McGowan was released on the promise that he would use his influence with the blacks to enroll their names in Democratic clubs and induce them to vote the Democratic ticket. Some of the gang protested against his release; but there were others more friendly, who remembered that his wife could identify them, and preferred to have him influence his political followers—an easy task after the arguments he had heard.

Next day, as the phrase is, "labor was demoralized." "There was not a lick of work done to my knowledge."

McGowan left the neighborhood and applied to the courts for justice. After a time he got up the case before the courts, but, of course, "they had some bull-dozers on the Grand Jury, and it did not find a true bill."

In the interval between these night electioneering visits and the meeting of the Grand Jury, repeated efforts had been made by the ruffians to capture McGowan. When he was at the Claiborne place, a white woman staying there was whipped to compel her to tell where he was. The woman did not know. Yet "they took her out and whipped her pretty near to death."

McGowan was obliged to leave the parish. He was notified by his white friends that there was a settled purpose to kill him, and that men who could not be identified would be brought to do it. After these marauders had visited his house "three times hand-running," he took his friends' advice, left the neighborhood, and after the election went to New-Orleans. He owned 74 acres of land, and left 35 acres of cotton and 20 acres of corn ungathered. He has not dared to return, although he had bought this property and has a wife and children there.

IX.

Early in June, in the same neighborhood, five colored men were taken out and hanged in a group.

McGowan—Mr. Lewis, a white man, said there were five men hanged. I asked him what for, and he said Thomas Williams, a leader in the Fourth Ward, was about to organize his club; that it was about time for us to go into the campaign, and these boys appeared that night. The colored people there held their meetings generally at night. There was a rumor that William B. Archer was shot at; and he said the men that were at that meeting were the men that shot at him, and they said they were going to hunt that section of the country until they found who did shoot at him; and they went round and picked up some men at Legendre's plantation, the only men he had. He took five of these men and gave them up to the crowd, and they took them to Fisher's Landing, about 600 yards from Ellsworth's, and hanged them. They said they did these things so that they might carry the election.

X.

On election day, the Democrats armed, took Republican tickets from the blacks, and compelled them to vote Democratic tickets. Men who refused to vote at all if they could not vote the Republican ticket, were told that if they did not vote the Democratic ticket they would not be allowed to live there.

XI.

"There was a young man there" said McGowan, "named Rufus Miles. A very small man, but he talked very big; and he said before he would vote the Democratic ticket he would die; and he didn't go at all. Laobequi told him if he didn't go and vote one ticket he should die. He did not go at all, and about a week after that they went down there and killed him. I saw him after he was dead."

XII.

Point Coupée had always been a strong Republican parish—giving never less than from 1,500 to 1,800 majority. At the last election the Democratic tickets were elected.

Louisiana is free from Federal interference now. It is under Home Rule now. The political rights of the negro are respected, for if he does not vote the Democratic ticket he is at liberty to leave the parish.

No jury will convict a white man for any offense against a negro in Louisiana if any incident of politics is the origin of the outrage. Time only and the the conflict of material interests and the ruin wrought by the exodus of the blacks from the bull-dozed parishes, a Solid North, and the overthrow of the Bourbons in the South by the reaction sure to come there against them, will cure these evils, and array the reputable classes on the side of law and order. But the Republican Party is dead beyond hope of resurrection in Louisiana and the South-west. It died when Packard fell. J. R.

JUSTICE IN NEW-JERSEY.

THE NEW DISTRICT COURTS AND THE JUSTICES OF THE PEACE—THE LATTER LOBBYING TO REGAIN THEIR FORMER POWER.

TRENTON, Jan. 26.—Ever since the Justices of the Peace in the cities of New-Jersey were denuded of their jurisdiction in civil cases, they have clamorously demanded that it be restored to them. They have organized thoroughly to secure this end, and they are now sanguine of success. The state Constitution provides for their election and fixes their terms of office, but does not prescribe their duties. Originally, they were merely committing magistrates. From acting in a purely inquisitorial character, they rose to the dignity of Judges in criminal matters of small concern. If they had jurisdiction over the liberties of their fellow-beings, why should they not be held capable of arbitrating upon the petty disputes of their neighbors? And so it happened that after a time they acquired civil powers. Their courts recommended themselves to public favor because of the cheapness of the justice dispensed in them, and they were much patronized. But in course of time the Justices became arrogant and corrupt. Instead of acting judicially in the cases brought before them, they were too often nothing else than the agents of suitors. In the cities it was not an unusual thing to see John Smith advertising himself as "Justice of the Peace. Rents and Moneys Collected." This legend translated meant that if anyone took a claim to John Smith for collection, he [Smith] would abuse all his prerogatives as Justice in enforcing the payment. Judgment would be rendered for his client without regard to law or fact. Execution would be levied on property exempt from process, and if no property could be found, a threat of imprisonment, and often imprisonment, was resorted to, to frighten the debtor into settlement. So far, the trouble was entirely for the luckless defendant. The suitor's trouble generally began after the money had been collected. The Justice retained the amount he collected till he got ready to pay; and in more than one instance he has been known never to get ready to pay. In almost every city in the State Justices have been arrested for embezzlement of the moneys collected by them.

The office of Justice in the cities is generally filled by the last run of ward politicians. They are men, in most instances, of no standing, of no respectability, without integrity, and without ability. The injustice of the average Justice was brought to the attention of the Legislature three years ago, and the result of it was the passage of a bill designed to relieve them of their civil jurisdiction, and to confer it upon District Courts, which the bill established. The respectability and capacity of the Judges presiding over these courts was insured by the fact that the Governor was to appoint them, and the Senate to confirm them. Within two months after the passage of the bill, seven courts were established in Jersey City, Hoboken, Paterson, Elizabeth, Trenton, New-Brunswick, and Camden. The Justices went right on, however, in the face of the law, and in contempt of the new courts, in the administration of their civil functions. They tried to excuse themselves by the pretense that they regarded the bill as unconstitutional; and when they were advised that that claim would not hold, they claimed to enjoy at least equal jurisdiction with the District Courts, on the ground that the acts which were the foundation of their authority were not specifically repealed in the new bill. They have made up a case on this issue, for adjudication by the Supreme Court, and that case is now pending before that august body of Judges. Meanwhile, they have gone on, trying civil cases, as though the Supreme Court had already decided in their favor. The business transacted by them is, of course, withdrawn from the District Courts, and it is estimated by those conversant with the facts that two-thirds of the revenue intended by the Legislature to go to the maintenance of the District Courts is thus diverted from its proper channels. Yet the main, and, in fact, the only ground on which the repeal of the District Court act is being urged by the Justices, is that the District Courts are not, as they were designed to be, self-sustaining. The Justices forget a large item which, under the old system, appeared on the debit side of their balance-sheet. It is the cost to the county of appeals to the higher courts from the many iniquitous decisions rendered by them. The Justices have admitted all these facts in private, as to their incompetency and corruption, by securing the introduction of a bill providing for an examination of those wishing to exercise the functions of a Justice of the Peace by the Supreme Court Judges before they receive their commissions, and requiring those commissioned to give heavy bonds for the faithful discharge of their duties. But the advocates of the District Courts say that if either of the repealers of the District Courts should first get through the houses, the bill just referred to will be withdrawn from the files.

It is likely, too, that the District Courts will themselves ask for additional legislation. If the act organizing them is not sufficient to confer exclusive jurisdiction on them, they will ask that its weakness be amended. They will ask, too, for additional fees. Under the act their schedule of allowances is only that which was provided for the Justices, and they think that litigants ought to be willing to pay a little more money for a better quality of justice.

STORM IN NOVA SCOTIA AND NEW-BRUNSWICK.

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia, Jan. 26.—Reports from all parts of this Province, as well as New-Brunswick, show that a terrific gale, with snow, has been raging from the north-east since 10 o'clock Saturday night. Immense drifts are reported from the east and west. The storm has been particularly severe on the north-eastern coast of Cape Breton. At North Sydney the sea made a clean breach across the road leading to the mines, doing considerable damage. The steamer George Shattuck, for whose safety fears were entertained, arrived at St. Pierre to-day. No marine disasters are yet reported.

SEVERAL CHURCHES ROBBED.

VINCENNES, Ind., Jan. 26.—Several churches in this city were robbed last night, the thieves securing plate of considerable value. St. Xavier's Catholic Cathedral lost its valuable ciborium—especially sacred to the congregation as being a present to Bishop Saint Palais while in Rome. St. John's German Catholic Church was entered, but the locks proved burglar-proof. A communion service, valued at $100, was stolen from the Evangelical Lutheran Church. Several other buildings were entered during the night, but without reward. No clue to the thieves has been obtained.

A MAIL-POUCH STOLEN.

WHEELING, West Va., Jan. 26.—A mail-pouch from the East, which contained eight registered letters, was stolen from the mail-crane at Pennsboro', Ritchie County, on Friday morning last. The mail-bag was taken some distance from the place where it was stolen and cut open. The registered letters contained large sums of money. The sack, together with the other letters, were found on Saturday.

THE LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

PHASES OF THE EASTERN PROBLEM.

DEATH OF THE CHIEF OPPONENT OF BRITISH INFLUENCE IN AFGHANISTAN—RUMORED ILLNESS OF THE SULTAN—ENGLAND NEGOTIATING FOR THE PURCHASE OF CYPRUS.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Reuter's dispatch from Calcutta states that Shere Ali's Master of the Horse, the great opponent of British influence, is dead.

The Afghan troops at Kabul have been withdrawn to Sheralf to check desertions.

Reuter's Constantinople dispatch says France has advised the Porte to cede Janina to Greece.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 26.—The evacuation of Spus, in fulfillment of Turkey's engagements to Montenegro, is proceeding quietly.

PARIS, Jan. 26.—Journals here publish reports from Constantinople that the Sultan is ill.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—A dispatch to the Standard from Philippopolis states that the Austrian, English, French, and Turkish members of the Eastern Roumelian Commission have adopted a motion calling the attention of their Cabinets to the obstacles raised by Russia to the financial administration of the Province.

The Post's Berlin correspondent telegraphs that it is announced in diplomatic circles that England intends to purchase Cyprus to avoid complications arising from the nominal continuance of the sovereignty of the Sultan. A million pounds sterling have been offered, which the Sultan will probably accept.

The Times' correspondent at Constantinople says the draft of the definitive treaty with Russia has been sent to the Palace for the Sultan's approval.

A dispatch to the Times from Constantinople says the Greek members of the Frontier Commission have arrived at Anino.

THE RUSSIAN PLAGUE.

ACTION OF THE INTERNATIONAL SANITARY COMMISSION—GERMANY CONTEMPLATING RADICAL MEANS TO PREVENT THE SPREAD OF THE INFECTION.

VIENNA, Jan. 26.—The International Sanitary Commission, which met here to take precautions against the spread of the plague, has concluded its labors for the present. It has decided that the regulations relative to arrivals from Russian ports can, if necessary, be applied to arrivals from ports on the Lower Danube.

Herr Finkelnberg, the German delegate to the International Sanitary Commission, has started for Berlin. The Montags Revue says he declared that should the plague increase Germany will establish a military cordon of 80,000 men on her frontier, and that the order for their mobilization is ready.

BERLIN, Jan. 26.—Upon the return here of Herr Finkelnburg, the German delegate, an influential commission, consisting of representatives of the Imperial Chancellery and the various Imperial and Prussian Departments of State, will meet to receive his report and advise the Government concerning the precautions to be taken.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—In a Berlin dispatch to the Post, it is stated that Russia complains that the Austrian and German measures to prevent the spread of the plague are unnecessary, and threaten materially to cripple Russian commerce.

CURRENT FOREIGN TOPICS.

POLITICAL CHANGES IN FRANCE—RUMORS OF TREASON IN GERMANY.

PARIS, Jan. 26.—Numerous decrees affecting the positions of functionaries were signed yesterday. They include the appointment of M. Herold as Prefect of the Seine, and the replacement of six Procurators-General. The National states that probably six Generals will be removed from their commands.

The snow has almost completely isolated Paris as far as telegraphic communication is concerned, in every direction except west and north.

BERLIN, Jan. 26.—Rumors are current here that some secret information relative to the German Army has been treasonably sold to a foreign Government.

BERNE, Jan. 26.—The Old Catholic Synod of this canton, by a vote of 27 to 17, has condemned the recent amnesty to the Catholic priests of the Bernese Jura as undemocratic and injurious to Christianity. Bishop Herzog voted with the minority.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—The Post's Berlin dispatch says: "It is understood that Prince Bismarck has expressed himself in favor of a transit duty on foreign goods passing through German territory."

The Times' Paris correspondent confirms, on the authority of a Cabinet Minister, the report that M. Teisserenc de Bort tendered his resignation, but withdrew it when he heard that the Governorship of the Bank of France, which he expected, had been otherwise filled.

The United States frigate Constitution sails for home on Tuesday.

Three hundred hands of Horrocks' and Jackson's mills, and of another large firm, at Preston, have agreed to resume work at the full reduction, but will receive advantages which will enable them almost to attain, by extra work, their old wages. Horrocks, Miller & Co., the largest firm in Preston, have given notice of 10 per cent. reduction in spinners', and 7½ per cent. in weavers'.

A Times' Berlin dispatch says a telegram from Rome reports that the Pope has received threatening letters from Socialists, in connection with his recent encyclical letter, and that he intends to call the attention of the powers thereto.

LOSSES BY FIRE.

A destructive fire occurred in St. Stephen, New-Brunswick, yesterday morning. The stores of the following-named persons were destroyed: J. H. McElroy, liquor-dealer; Alexander Johnson, liquor-dealer; S. Pindar, jeweler; Smith & Murray, dry goods dealers; Andrew Dewolf, grocer; J. N. Clarke & Co., dealers in crockery; C. O. Baker & Co., boot and shoe dealers; Miss Canwer, milliner; C. H. Smith, stationer; George W. Sloat, boot and shoe dealer. The loss is estimated at $50,000; the insurance is about $30,000. A heavy gale prevailed during the fire.

City Treasurer William Bruen's residence on Dimock Hill, Elizabeth, N. J., caught fire at midnight last night from the heater. The family escaped, but the house and furniture were destroyed with the exception of the piano, carpets, and parlor mirror. The loss is $12,000, and the insurance $7,500 on the house and $3,000 on the furniture, in the Firemen's Insurance Company, of Newark.

A fire broke out Saturday night in the Tunnell level of Summit Branch Colliery, at Williamstown, Penn. The engine-house, machinery, and about 20 mules were burned. The fire penetrated to the mine and is still burning, but is said to be under control. Between 500 and 600 hands were employed in the colliery. No lives were lost. No estimate of the loss can be given at present.

The store of J. Hazlerigg, at St. Mary's, West Va., was set on fire last Friday night, and together with the entire stock of goods was burned. There was no insurance either on the house or goods.

Nordheimer's Music Hall in Montreal was damaged by fire Saturday night to the extent of $8,000; insured in the Ætna, Imperial, and Canadian offices.

The Sisk House, at Nicholson, Penn., was entirely destroyed by fire last night. Loss, $8,000; insurance, $6,000.

A SEARCH FOR STOLEN PONIES.

CHEYENNE, Wyoming, Jan. 26.—A party of stockmen will leave Sidney, Neb., to-morrow for Ogalalla, and from there will go to Major North's ranch on the Dismal River. Additions will be made to the party on the way. It is expected they will number 75 men. At Major North's the party will be joined by a detachment of soldiers and proceed to the Sand Hill country, south of Snake River, in search of stolen ponies, of which there are believed to be several hundred in the possession of Indians. The party will be supplied with 20 days' rations.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 26.—A dispatch from Silver City, Idaho, reports that a force of cavalry from Camp McDermot is going to the forks of the Owyhee River, to look after a band of Indians, recently escaped from Camp Harney, who have stolen a large number of horses.

DEATH OF JUDGE CADWALADER.

THE CAREER OF A REMARKABLE JURIST ENDED.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 26.—Hon. John Cadwalader, Judge of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, died at his residence on South Fourth-street, near Locust, this morning. He was one of the most remarkable jurists this country has produced, and his legal attainments were famous. The deceased was born in this city in April, 1805, and was nearly 74 years of age. He was a direct descendant and grandson of Gen. John Cadwalader, of Revolutionary fame. In 1854 he was elected to Congress from the Fifth District and served one term. He was a pronounced Democrat in politics. President Buchanan appointed him to the position he held up to the time of his death, in April, 1858. The deceased was one of the counsel for the celebrated United States Bank of Philadelphia in its prosperous days, and was counsel for the Government in the famous "cloth cases," in which a large amount of undervalued cloth was in litigation. At the Bar he was a lawyer of great eminence, a forcible advocate, and a man of great learning. One of his most remarkable faculties was his memory. He could cite an authority, recite an opinion, or name the book and page on which could be found some parallel case to meet the one under argument, without a moment's hesitation. Few lawyers in the country had a more thorough knowledge of maritime law, bankruptcy law, or commercial law, than the deceased. At the time of his death he was engaged in editing the life and letters of the late President Buchanan. This is the same work which the dead President directed in his will should be written by the late William B. Read; but when that gentleman left Philadelphia and took up his residence in New-York the papers in the case were transferred to Judge Cadwalader. During the war for the Union, and although a bitter Democrat, the opinions rendered by Judge Cadwalader were eminently patriotic. At all times his decisions commanded the respect of the Judges of the Supreme Court for the correctness of their legal conclusions. Of late years the deceased has taken no part in politics. The cause of his death was pleurisy and typhoid pneumonia. A Republican will be appointed to the place on the bench made vacant by his death.

A GREAT JEWISH CHARITY.

WORK AND PROGRESS OF THE INDEPENDENT ORDER OF B'NAI B'RITH—REPORT TO THE GENERAL CONVENTION—ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 26.—The third General Convention of the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith met in this city to-day, at St. George's Hall. There were about 250 accredited delegates present. The meeting was called to order by Julius Bien, the President of the order. Josiah Cohen, of Pittsburg, was chosen temporary Chairman, and Alfred T. Jones and Lewis Abraham temporary Secretaries. A Committee on Credentials was appointed. During their absence the delegates were welcomed by Rev. George Jacobs and others. The following officers were elected: President, Simon Wolf, of Washington; Vice-Presidents, E. S. Gouldston, Boston; Nathan Bloom, Louisville; Josiah Cohen, Pittsburg; H. M. Heineman, San Francisco; William Lovenstein, Richmond; Charles Kosminski, Chicago; Max Sax, Nashville. Secretaries, Alfred T. Jones, Philadelphia; Lewis Abraham, Washington; Henry M. Oberndorfer, Milwaukee.

From the report of Mr. Julius Bien, Chairman of the Executive Committee, it appears that since the last convention, which was held in Chicago in 1874, the history of the order has been marked by a steady development of the resources and forces which form its groundwork. A remarkably low degree of mortality has prevailed in the order, whose membership has increased very largely. The general plan of the organization and government of the order, as adopted in the convention held in this City in 1868, has proved to be the best that could have been devised. The representation, however, it is believed, needs reorganization. Up to the convention in 1874, the representation of one delegate from each lodge was considered sufficient. Now, however, it is conceded to be disproportionate. It is recommended that the meetings of the constitutional convention should hereafter be held later in the season on account of the inclemency of the weather at this period of the year. The establishment of "widows' and orphans' endowment funds" by district Grand Lodges at the convention of 1874 has proved a success, but perhaps too much prominence is given to this branch of the order to the detriment of its intellectual and moral aims. An anticipated proposition to revise the ritual is mentioned, and the recommendation is made that there should be no change, as the one class desires its reduction or abolition, while the other wants a more full and complete one. Attention is called to a debt of $11,850, which is due M. Ezekiel, the sculptor, for the production of the statue of "Religious Liberty," unveiled by the order at Philadelphia in 1876, and the convention is requested to appropriate the sum of $3,000, to be paid to the sculptor "on account." It will further devolve upon the convention to make suitable provision for the presentation of the statue to the people of the United States. The committee recommends the preparation of a complete history of the order, none of the earlier records being in existence. The amount of the contributions made by the various lodges in aid of the Roumanian mission was $3,153 32, which the committee forwarded to B. F. Peixotto, United States Consul at Bucharest. The sum was the means of enabling Mr. Peixotto to remain at his post of duty, and his zeal and ability were appreciated by the Government, which has appointed him to the Consulate at Lyons. Requests having been made by the "Alliance Israelite Universelle" for assistance from the order, it is recommended that, in recognition of the great service rendered to humanity by the society, an annual collection be made in every lodge for its benefit at the regular meeting preceding the festival of Purim. The flourishing condition of the B'nai B'rith Orphan Asylum at Cleveland is mentioned as a matter for congratulation. During its 10 years of existence, its receipts have been $415,129 99, and the disbursements, $324,378, leaving a fund of $94,751 90, which is invested in mortgages on real estate. The financial report of the Executive Committee of the order shows the receipts since the last convention of $13,693 73. The expenditures have been $9,005 01, leaving a balance of $4,687 82. The order, with its seven districts, has 305 lodges, containing over 23,000 members, showing an increase since 1874 of 104 lodges, and over 7,000 members. During the same period the sum of $1,007,039 11 has been expended for the support of the sick and needy and widows and orphans.

GRAIN

AT HAVANA IN JANUARY.

FIRST VIEW OF MORRO CASTLE.

BALMY SUMMER SCENES—A GOOD PLACE FOR FORTS—SOMETHING ABOUT CABS AND CUSTOM-HOUSES.

HAVANA, Jan. 2.—Somebody built a castle out of Spain, and here it is—the Morro, at Havana. The castle and the harbor it guards form a picture to whose beauty no pen and few pencils can do justice. Coming upon them, as we did, just as the pale moon and the first red streaks in the eastern sky were vieing with each other in lighting up the dark green hills of Cuba, the scene was the materialization of a poet's dream. For some hours we had seen the rolling country on the north shore of Cuba, covered here and there with little forests of palm trees, and the bright star that is called the Morro Light. It was this little light that guided us safely into the harbor. The Morro Castle stands upon a rock that juts out of the sea 40 or 50 feet, and reaches up the coast till it almost disappears on the horizon. The rock is nearly covered with a black sea-moss, and the fort is so old that many parts of it are in the same condition. No man but an algebraist, with a trunkful of x, y, and zs, could describe the fort's shape. It is a succession and a collection of little square turrets, one by the side of the other, on top of the other, behind and beyond the other. They are all of a thick, yellowish stone, some of them darkened by age. The high stone turret in the foreground is the light-house. The hundred poles over the top of the castle, that we mistake for flag-staffs, turn out to be the tops of ships' masts in the harbor. No flag is flying; only a few guns are to be seen. Two or three sentinels walk slowly up and down the parapets, armed with guns almost as large as themselves. As we approach the Castle the Spanish flag is hoisted to the foremast peak, to show the barbarians inside that we are bound for a Spanish port, namely, Havana. A salute of one gun is fired, a necessary tribute of respect to the morro, and our jolly little Stars and Stripes are hoisted astern. But as we are only a merchantman, the castle pays no attention to us, and slumbers away. On the other side of the channel, opposite the fort, is nothing but a rock.

The startling panorama of the City of Havana breaks upon the view like a theatrical transformation scene; but happy would be the manager who could put such a scene upon his stage. The city has been hidden by the castle. Rounding the castle, the queer old Spanish town is before you. The harbor is full of ships, the streets are full of life, and the sense of owning them his first reminder of what he intends to do at noon. This is fine soil for forts hereabouts. They flourish without watering. Take a stone in your hand, blindfold yourself, turn around three times, throw the stone, and, five to one, you hit a fort. And if the enemy's stone doesn't knock down one or three sentries and a priest, Allah has been good to you. Just back of the Morro is another fort that looks very much like the high stone wall around a country jail, dotted, at intervals, with stone, crosses, and here and there a rusty bell. The use of this second fort is evident. Should the soldiers ever have to desert the Morro they would have something to run into, and, wearing very few clothes, they ought to be good runners. The castle and this second fort occupy nearly the whole of the hill opposite the city, across the harbor. There is one little cottage, southward, that looks to me, coming out from among the icebergs, like a vision of heaven. It is very small and low, and thatched with tiles; two immense, spreading trees, greener than the darkest ocean tint, fanned its roof, and almost hid it from sight. Their foliage so darkened the place, that the man who sat in front of the door, and smoked his cigarette, looked more like another tree than a man. A row of palm-trees, tall and green, stood guard a few yards in front of the cottage. We watched the man, and as the sun came up higher and higher, he moved further and further back, into the shade; and while we watched him a flock of sheep and goats, and a shepherd, with a crook the same down the hill from behind the cottage in single file, the shepherd last. They frisked down to the water's edge, and went in and bathed. Look at this picture, Mr. New-Yorker, as you pull on your ulster: shade, and green leaves, and bathing flocks; date, Jan. 2. To the left of this cottage, still on the hill opposite the city, are more small buildings, the homes of fishermen and boatmen, built of stone, roofed with clay tiles, as indestructible, almost, as the rocks they stand on. Among these little buildings, painted blue in the front and red on the side facing us, is a larger one. It was once the Havana Hospital, but is now used for cheap dwellings. Before the sun is high, the front windows, which are large and frequent, are all open, the shutters have disappeared, and the air has free course through the building. The harbor is full of ships; Spanish men-of-war, English, Spanish, French, and German merchantmen. On a little schooner, tied up in the wharf, float the Stars and Stripes. Did it ever occur to you, Mr. Traveler in Foreign Waters, when you saw the Stars and Stripes dying, to go over to that skipper and shake hands with him, and say, "How are you, old boy? Is and is your home in Bangor, dog ar the masthead to want to say to that skipper, "What are you doing here you old hulk?"

The ship swings around the buoy to which she is fastened, and we look into the city. It would be high treason for any man to see any building but the Custom-house first. If forts are the vegetables down here Custom-houses are the wood. The moment a Havana Custom-house opens its hospitable doors, to every stranger who enters the gates. When a traveler goes ashore with a trunkful of goods, it is said, they take the goods away from him and charge him $2 for the trouble of taking them. If he goes ashore with only a paper collar and a pair of gloves, which, like our Indians, are not taxed, they order out three companies of soldiers to swear at him for his impertinence. And he is lucky if they don't lock him up for his impertinence. Before the ship is fairly made fast the Custom-house officers come aboard. There are about eight of them, some in uniform, some in white duck, some barefoot, and some with hardly any clothes at all to speak of. These men prowl about the ship, and never leave her till she goes out of the harbor again, when they some aboard they begin to look into the corners, and when they are satisfied that the vessel is not filled with goods that are to be smuggled, the hotel runners are allowed to come aboard. Their name is legion, and they chatter as rare a lot of "pigeon English" as can be found in the whole Spanish-main—for the ships do not go up to the wharves in Havana, but anchor out in the stream, and both passengers and freight have to be landed in small boats. Please to consider a dictionary full of epithets hurled with irresistible force at the heads of these barbarians. You may come to Havana with the Spanish language at the end of your tongue, with your money sewed up in an inside vest-pocket, and an unalterable determination to look out for yourself, and still you will be swindled by these boatmen. But there is this satisfaction about it, they are rather gorgeous swindlers. They are dressed, most of them, in a buff linen or duck, that may be washed through at one minute and dry again 10 minutes afterward. They have a gorgeous scarf twisted closely around the waist, a low-cut shirt, generally fine, shapely shoes, swarthy skins, and cheeks toughened with years of service. Their boats, too, are on the magnificent scale. Their names are overpowering. The "Santa Maria," the Santa this, that, and the other, with one or two San Franciscos and Barcelonas, are the average. If there is an old rug around his neighborhood, one of these boatmen gets it, cuts it in two, longitudinally, and covers the two seats in the stern of his boat with the pieces. If he cannot get the rug, he covers the seats with some cheap, highly-colored stuff. Anything for style. The boats are painted red, or blue, or white, or yellow, are kept scrupulously clean, are very strong and heavy, and entirely safe. They all carry sails, and, if the wind is fair, the sails are raised; if there is no wind, or a foul wind, the two boatmen row. Fifteen or twenty of these boats swarm around the ship as soon as she is fastened to the buoy. They beckon and shout to the passengers, but do not underbid each other. The legal fare is 50 cents, although it is only a five-minutes' ride, but the boatmen always demands twice or three times this much, and have to be beaten down. It takes half a day to buy anything in a Spanish country. The seller comes down a little at a time, very reluctantly, you would think, crosses himself, looks as if he was going to cry, talks for half an hour with his hands, feet, and face, and at last sells the article at pretty much your own price, that is, if "your" price is about three times what you would pay for the same article in New-York. Cuban paper currency is valued at 50 cents on the dollar, so the boatman is to be paid $1 for his fare. After 10 o'clock at night the fare is doubled. This Cuban currency is a great nuisance. Although the notes were all printed in New-York, they are the worst-looking notes under the sun. Every note is worn out, and so ragged that it falls to pieces if a breath of wind strikes it. The $5 notes are about the size of one of our Government bonds, and an American capitalist would inadvertently begin to cut off the coupons. They make a mistake in reckoning this stuff by the dollar, they ought sell it by the pound.

Aside from the church-steeples, the most prominent building, from the harbor, is the jail for political and military prisoners, a large yellow building, with a very comfortable look. There is a big derrick on one of the wharves, by the side of the Custom-house, and it is here that the boatman lands you. You then go through a building that is all roof and no sides, half full of boxes and bales, and you are in the Water-street of Havana. In front of you is a row of small buildings, containing little shops and a great many barber shops, with the signs, "Barberia," and the traditional red and white pole. To the left is the San Carlos Hotel, one of the largest in the city, painted pure white, and very cool looking. San Carlos leads on, naturally, to Don Carlos. Capt. Reynolds, of the City of Merida, tells me that when he took Don Carlos and his party up to New-York not long ago they spent the entire time in the smoking-room gambling, women and all. They were so engaged in the changing of the ducats that they could not be induced to stop long enough for their meals, but would remember, at 12 or 1 o'clock in the morning, that they were hungry, and want dinner served at that hour. The ladies of the party were said to be very able cigarette smokers. Then, being in front of the San Carlos Hotel, the cheap cab business comes up. It must be fine, of course, to hire cabs for 50 cents an hour, according to the guide-books. But you don't. If you can find a driver who will carry you by the hour, his legal rate is $1 50, Cuban currency, or 75 cents, silver. But it is a day's work to find a driver who will take you by the hour. They carry you by the "course"—that is, to any place in the city—without a stop, for 40 cents, currency. Each stop makes another course. Under this delightful cheap-cab system a friend and myself found no difficulty in taking in $12 worth of carriages in a small part of one day, and the charge is no more for two than for one. The horses and carriages are curiosities. They would bring good prices in New-York as antiques. When Columbus first came over, some of these carriages must have been in the shops for repairs. They are very small Victorias, ugly, but comfortable. The horses are fearful and wonderful. They are fearful of having to work, and it is wonderful that they don't fall over in the streets. They would, probably, if the streets were wider. If it can be called exaggeration to picture a thing too small, it is no exaggeration to say that these Cuban horses are not more than half the size of our American horses. You can cross the streets without the slightest fear of being run over, for it does not seem possible for one of these little things to run over anything. The drivers whip them up smartly, and make pretty good time, but I, in a ride in cab No. 1,100, and we passed No. 1. This may argue that there are 1,100 cabs, and it may not; but the streets are full of them. There is hardly enough width in the streets to be described. From 12 to 18 feet, including both sidewalks, is about an average width, not including by any means the seven or four broad, handsome streets, with parks in their centre. There is just room for two carriages to pass in the principal business streets; in some of them this is tight squeezing, and in others there is only room for one carriage. In these narrowest of the streets a carriage cannot go in till the street is clear, and the sidewalks are as narrow in proportion as the streets. In some streets, where there is evidently as much business done, though on a smaller scale, as in Nassau-street or William-street, the sidewalk is not more than 20 inches wide—uncomfortable walking for one person—impossible for two people to pass without one stepping into the gutter, and the gutters here always are crowded. The houses, which are nearly all either one or two stories high, stand so squarely up to the edge of the sidewalk that they seem to be trying to rub themselves against you; and they are continually inviting you to look into their open windows, which have almost no sash, and always grated bars, with an inside shutter, sometimes glass sash, and sometimes wood, but always open. This peculiar arrangement gives an insight into the family arrangements in Havana that could be had by a stranger in no Northern city. The people live in public, and nobody in the street pays any attention to them.

The interior arrangement of the front part of a house in Havana is utterly different from that of any establishment in New-York, and, I think, far less comfortable. The floor, in hall and parlor, is always of stone. Sometimes this is very rough, sometimes highly polished. The parlor walls are decorated with several handsome mirrors, and a fine glass chandelier invariably hangs from the middle of the ceiling. In some of the finest rooms the floor is covered with carpet, and over this is a rug, in the centre of the room. But, whether there is a carpet or not, there is always a large rug, about four feet wide, and 8 or 10 feet long, generally of bright colors. This is laid with the end toward the front. Exactly in the middle of the floor, on each side of it, are from three to five chairs, set in line, facing each other, as if the children were about to play church. The chairs must be in an exact line, and must not be disturbed, or they cause you considerable things "all upside down." When the people sit down to talk, they face each other in these chairs. If the "people" are a pair of lovers, I imagine the arrangement is changed.

The sleeping-rooms are by all means the finest part of a Cuban establishment. The bedsteads are all of one kind, the handsome ones of polished brass, the cheaper ones of iron, and very light, airy, and graceful. Four arched pieces form a sort of dome over the whole, which is covered with laces, or some gauzy material, to keep out the insects. A snowy quilt covers the bed, and everything is as white and cool as possible. There are no mattresses on the beds, and, although hard, they are very cool and comfortable. A soft bed in this climate would be much too warm. Leather or woolen straps support the bed, which consists principally of a sort of cotton blanket. Prices are enormous, and a man needs a wagon-load of gold to stay here long. Permanent board at any of the good hotels, however, can be had cheaper than in the good hotels in New-York. Rents are very much the same as in New-York. A house that rates about the same here as one in any of the upper cross-streets of New-York, between Fourth and Sixth avenues, can be had for from $100 to $200 a month, gold, containing five to eight large rooms. It will, very likely, have a shop on each side of it, but that is a common thing here. In riding pretty thoroughly over the city, I saw only three new buildings. The principal one of these, in the principal street, covers a space fully as large as one of our City blocks, is three stories high, and is to be used for stores and dwellings. Separate sections of this, of suitable size for dwellings, are for sale at $40,000 each, gold. The building is of stone, smoothly plastered on the outside, like nearly all the buildings here. Some of the handsome residences occupied by the "Grandees," on the broad street leading to the Governor-General's house are immense—far larger than any private houses in New-York. And the city generally, with the exception of New-York, has much more of a cosmopolitan appearance than our Metropolis. The soldiery, in a great variety of uniforms; the priests, to be run against at all hours, in their sombre costumes; the half-naked negroes, the gayly-dressed ladies, give the city an appearance of gayety that is not to be found in New-York. The Governor-General's house is only ordinary, but has magnificent grounds, with acres of palm trees and some fine statuary. At night the broader streets are crowded with carriages and foot-passengers.

Speaking of the soldiers! They would make fine light artillery. Four feet is about the average height, and a child's collar would make them a belt. Four-feet-six would put a man in the front rank. If postage was not so high here I would send you up two or three for samples. They have very small feet, very neatly clad, small waists, and are small all over. Solomon, in all his glory, was not clad like one of them. Great pains must be taken, and not unsuccessfully, to keep the men from learning to read or write. The whole business had been arranged with a view to civilizing these people, and yet, in the face of these facts, we are compelled to admit that failure is written on every page of the past history of our efforts in this direction. The institution of the "peace policy" in 1868, by President Grant, in the opinion of the undersigned, was a virtual admission that the Indian Bureau was incapable of the proper conduct of Indian affairs, and was compelled, therefore, to delegate much of its authority to other hands. From the slow progress which has been made in civilizing and Christianizing the Indians of our country, to which your committee had their attention called while among them last Fall, in discharge of the duty imposed upon them, it would seem that there is no room to doubt that we should try some method of dealing with this question different from that now in vogue. We regret being compelled to state that the glowing accounts of the rapid strides of the Indians in the ways of civilized life, and their rapid march to the standard of a high civilization, are not borne out by the facts, and those who have not witnessed the real condition of the Indians would be astonished to know the discrepancies between these greatly exaggerated statements and the facts.

"It seems hardly necessary to adduce proof to establish the fact that shameful irregularities and gross frauds have crept into every branch of the service; no one is found who has the hardihood to deny that the history of such frauds is visible on every page of the Indian management for the last score of years. Indeed, so flagrant are these frauds, and so defiant have their perpetrators become, that it appears to be a notorious fact that a Ring exists, composed of contractors, employes of the bureau, and wealthy and influential persons outside, whose object is to swindle and defraud both the Government and the Indians. The opinion entertained by the undersigned is that these frauds will forever exist, even with the most vigilant supervision and scrutiny which can be brought into the management of the Indian Bureau, because we believe the method and system of that department are inadequate to prevent fraud in the hands of keeping accounts with agents to whom large amounts of money and large quantities of goods and other Indian supplies are intrusted, we do not see how it is possible to free the service from fraud and peculation as long as dishonest men may creep into these positions.

"In view, therefore, of the reasons presented, and after a careful consideration of all the circumstances surrounding the question, weighing the reasons for and against as best we can, and not unmindful of the difficulties surrounding the question, we believe that the interest of the Government and the good of the Indian will be best promoted by transferring the management of Indian affairs to the War Department, leaving it discretionary with the Secretary of War to appoint civil agents to those agencies which, in his judgment, the interest of all concerned would be best secured by such an appointment, and officers of the Army where the interest of the service requires it. This conclusion we have reached after a patient and candid investigation of the whole question as far as we have been able to understand it."

The four members in whose behalf this report is framed and by whom it will be signed are Messrs. McCreery, Scales, Hooker, and Boone.

RELIEF BY LOTTERY.

From the London Spectator, Jan. 11.

Scotland has for the moment gone mad. The preposterous and immoral scheme of paying the debts of shareholders in the City of Glasgow Bank through a gigantic lottery has taken hold of men's minds till it is actually to be tried, and on Thursday a "large and influential meeting," with Sir R. M. Napier, of Milliken, in the chair, unanimously resolved, on the motion of Sir James Watson, to carry it out. The concern is to be called the "Bank Aid-Liquidation Scheme," and the managers, 20 gentlemen, are to issue 6,000,000 £1 tickets, which are in all but name lottery tickets. Half the 6,000,000 is to be paid to the liquidators, and half "divided among the unfortunate shareholders in sums varying from £5 to £25,000." The scheme is utterly absurd from a financial point of view, as it proposes that on an average every householder in the United Kingdom will give £1 for about the tenth of a chance of a fortune; but its immorality is even worse. The good folk of Scotland have, apparently, under the pressure of suffering, laid aside not only their right-ousness, but their arithmetic.

BURNING OF A NOBLEMAN'S MANSION

ONE OF THE FINEST SEATS IN YORKSHIRE DESTROYED—MANY ART TREASURES LOST—OTHER CALAMITIES OF THE KIND.

From the London News, Jan. 13.

On Saturday morning, at 5:40, the country seat of Earl Feversham, at Helmsley, near Malton, was discovered to be on fire. Flames were observed by one of the persons employed about the hall to be issuing from a bedroom window in the front of the building, which was a splendid Doric fabric, built from the designs of Van Burgh, and completed in 1718. The building stands on a picturesque eminence, overlooking the River Rye, and surrounded on all sides by woods and valleys of a most striking character. An alarm was immediately given, and the fire appliances connected with the hall were brought to bear upon the part of the building which seemed to be more immediately endangered by the fire. Messengers were immediately dispatched to the neighboring town of Helmsley for assistance, and the fire engine was at once sent to the hall. The fire spread with alarming rapidity along the south front of the building, and in spite of the efforts that were put forth, it grew in volume and strength, and soon the whole of the eastern and western wings of the building, when it became apparent that nothing could be done to save this magnificent structure from complete destruction. The efforts of the saivors were considerably frustrated by the difficulty of obtaining water, and the inflammable nature of the contents of the building. Every endeavor was made to save the more valuable paintings and the curios and objects of virtu with which the palatial rooms were stored, and it is matter of congratulation, in a national as well as local sense, that the more valuable paintings were saved from the general wreck. Among these was the fine painting by Rembrandt of "The Politician." The progress of the flames was exceedingly rapid, and in less than four hours the whole building was enveloped by the destroying element, and by 10 o'clock in the morning nothing was left but the bare walls. The very large and valuable library, which since many years formed a notable feature about the mansion, escaped destruction. The ancient stairs which graced the entrance-hall are reported to have been saved. The family portraits, of Duncombe Park, which was freely thrown open by its noble owner to strangers, will eagerly await further tidings in their anxiety to learn what pictures have been rescued from the destructive flames. The portrait, for instance, of "Garrick as Richard III.," by Hogarth, was known far and wide, and the dining and drawing rooms were rich in specimens from the brush of Hobbema, Guido, Claude, Titian, Leonardo da Vinci, and Rubens. Yorkshire abounds in splendid mansions, and among them Duncombe Park has always held a high place. The view from its terrace is not easily to be surpassed, since it commands the adjacent Town of Helmsley, with its time-honored castle and church, and the tortuous course of the enchanting river which gives its name to Rievaulx, or "Rye Vales," Abbey, lying in the immediate neighborhood. Below stretches the richly cultivated expanse of Helmsley Dale, and on the opposite bank of the Rye grows in succession to be seen which, blending with the distant outlines of the wolds in the East Riding, combine to make the terrace of Duncombe Park so attractive as a sight, and especially in Summer, that, in the opinion of many, Yorkshire has nothing fairer to show.

It is more than 40 years since a foreigner was the first to awaken Englishmen to a consciousness that these islands are without a rival among foreign nations as storehouses of artistic and pictorial gems. Having called attention to the subject in 1837, Dr. Waagen, the Director of the Royal Gallery of Pictures at Berlin, in 1854, published his "Treasures of Art in Great Britain," and the description given by him of many such country seats as Duncombe Park ought not to have attracted so little notice as was bestowed upon them. He has devoted many years to the task of exploration, and the record is the result of his researches seems to have been for him a labor of love. He did not confine himself to pictures and statues, but also investigated the old illuminated manuscripts, the engravings and drawings in which England has long been singularly rich. In his elaborate work, which professes to give an "Account of the chief collections of paintings, sculptures, drawings, and illuminated manuscripts in," he passes reveals to us that the same agent which has just made a ruin of Lord Feversham's house in Yorkshire had already entailed upon England no insignificant loss. After the restoration of Charles II. the palace of Whitehall was fire, "and Raphaels, Leonardos, Giorgiones, Titians, and Holbeins perished miserably in the flames."

INVESTIGATING SUBTERRANEAN PHENOMENA WITH THE MICROPHONE.

From the Galignani's Messenger.

M. D'Abbadie presented to the Academy of Sciences at its last sitting a memoir by M. De Rossi, entitled: "Il Microfono nella Meteorologia Endogena," and accompanied it with the following remarks: In India, a business is carried on by men called spring-seekers, who generally succeed in designating the subterranean place where water may be obtained; they lie down on the ground and found their judgment on their hearing, which becomes extremely acute by practice. A few years ago, on the occasion of an earthquake at Segnora-le-Bigorre, in the Pyrénées, Mr. Maxwell Lyte had the idea of placing on the ground an instrument resembling a gigantic stethoscope and was able to hear the crackings of the terrestrial crust. To M. Rossi was reserved the honor of raising those empirical attempts to the height of a science, by applying the microphone to the exploration of the soil in its hidden depths. The learned founder of the "Bullettino del Vulcanismo Italiano" commenced his researches in his Observatory of Rocca di Papa, near Rome, and was very soon able to distinguish three different sounds which he could connect with the various movements of his seismatic pendulums. He was able afterward to confirm his results in observing the microphone at Vesuvius, and the Solfatara at Pozzuoli, where the movements of the earth's crust are very frequent. Without going any further into the details of that memoir, I must mention the fact that very strong subterranean explosions were heard through the microphone immediately preceding a shock of earthquake. Although M. De Rossi is too prudent to assert the fact, he gives us a glimpse of the possibility of thus predicting approaching earthquakes. However this may be, the second has conferred on science a new means of study which ought to be employed at all meteorological observatories. By establishing facts which have hitherto escaped us, we may perhaps succeed in explaining the causes, still so mysterious, of earthquake

BAD INDIAN MANAGEMENT.

A MINORITY REPORT ON THE PROPOSED TRANSFER.

VIEWS OF FOUR OF THE MEMBERS OF THE INVESTIGATING COMMITTEE—THE FRAUDS THE RESULT OF A BAD SYSTEM—THE INDIAN BUREAU UNABLE TO CORRECT THE EVILS—STRONG ARGUMENTS IN FAVOR OF THE TRANSFER TO THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The report of the four members of the joint committee appointed by the two houses of Congress at its last session who favor the transfer of the management of Indian affairs from the Interior to the War Department, has just been completed by Representative Andrew R. Boone, of Kentucky, and will be submitted to the House at the first opportunity.

The report says that the history of our dealings with the Indians is one not creditable to us, and, not to put it too strongly, is a shame and mortification to all liberal-minded men. Action by Congress, looking to a solution of the problem, cannot, the report urges, be longer deferred. After reviewing the wrongs of the Indians, which are described as being coequal with the existence of the nation, the committeemen declare that the fault lies with the system, and, continuing, say:

"It is well known that in 1848 the Department of the Interior was created by law, and the whole and sole management of Indian affairs was at once turned over to that department, and that the Indian Bureau in that department, and under the supervision of the Secretary of that department, was more particularly charged with the conduct of our Indian system. But to go back a little further into the history of this question, it will be found on investigation that our system of Indian management has always been virtually and in effect the system now in vogue. Even while it was nominally under the War Department, prior to 1849, the system was very much the same as now. We are aware that the general impression is that before that time (1849) a different system prevailed, and that the change in that year to the Interior Department was a radical change in the system. But such is not the case, and while it is true that Superintendents and Agents (being few in number) made their reports to the War Office, it is also true that neither the Secretary of War nor any officer in the War Department had anything to do with the appointment of these officers; nor was the War Office charged with the duty of supervising there or controlling them in any manner up to 1834. Our relations with the Indians commenced as an early period of the Revolutionary war. What was necessary to be done either for defense or conciliation was done, and, being necessary, no inquiry seems to have been made as to the authority under which it was done. This undefined state of things continued for nearly 20 years. While it is true that by the act of 1834, the Secretary of War was given a sort of general superintendence and control over Superintendents and Agents, appointed by the President, and while it is also true that by that act the President was authorized to select military men to discharge the duties of Indian Agents, it is further true that a large majority of the agents selected were taken from civil life, and made the same machinery employed in the conduct of Indian affairs as now; and hence we claim that the Indian management has never been, substantially at least, as it is at the present time.

"Year after year large amounts of money have been expended with a view to civilizing these people, and yet, in the face of these facts, we are compelled to admit that failure is written on every page of the past history of our efforts in this direction. The institution of the 'peace policy' in 1868, by President Grant, in the opinion of the undersigned, was a virtual admission that the Indian Bureau was incapable of the proper conduct of Indian affairs, and was compelled, therefore, to delegate much of its authority to other hands. From the slow progress which has been made in civilizing and Christianizing the Indians of our country, to which your committee had their attention called while among them last Fall, in discharge of the duty imposed upon them, it would seem that there is no room to doubt that we should try some method of dealing with this question different from that now in vogue. We regret being compelled to state that the glowing accounts of the rapid strides of the Indians in the ways of civilized life, and their rapid march to the standard of a high civilization, are not borne out by the facts, and those who have not witnessed the real condition of the Indians would be astonished to know the discrepancies between these greatly exaggerated statements and the facts.

"It seems hardly necessary to adduce proof to establish the fact that shameful irregularities and gross frauds have crept into every branch of the service; no one is found who has the hardihood to deny that the history of such frauds is visible on every page of the Indian management for the last score of years. Indeed, so flagrant are these frauds, and so defiant have their perpetrators become, that it appears to be a notorious fact that a Ring exists, composed of contractors, employes of the bureau, and wealthy and influential persons outside, whose object is to swindle and defraud both the Government and the Indians. The opinion entertained by the undersigned is that these frauds will forever exist, even with the most vigilant supervision and scrutiny which can be brought into the management of the Indian Bureau, because we believe the method and system of that department are inadequate to prevent fraud in the hands of keeping accounts with agents to whom large amounts of money and large quantities of goods and other Indian supplies are intrusted, we do not see how it is possible to free the service from fraud and peculation as long as dishonest men may creep into these positions.

"In view, therefore, of the reasons presented, and after a careful consideration of all the circumstances surrounding the question, weighing the reasons for and against as best we can, and not unmindful of the difficulties surrounding the question, we believe that the interest of the Government and the good of the Indian will be best promoted by transferring the management of Indian affairs to the War Department, leaving it discretionary with the Secretary of War to appoint civil agents to those agencies which, in his judgment, the interest of all concerned would be best secured by such an appointment, and officers of the Army where the interest of the service requires it. This conclusion we have reached after a patient and candid investigation of the whole question as far as we have been able to understand it."

The four members in whose behalf this report is framed and by whom it will be signed are Messrs. McCreery, Scales, Hooker, and Boone.

RELIEF BY LOTTERY.

From the London Spectator, Jan. 11.

Scotland has for the moment gone mad. The preposterous and immoral scheme of paying the debts of shareholders in the City of Glasgow Bank through a gigantic lottery has taken hold of men's minds till it is actually to be tried, and on Thursday a "large and influential meeting," with Sir R. M. Napier, of Milliken, in the chair, unanimously resolved, on the motion of Sir James Watson, to carry it out. The concern is to be called the "Bank Aid-Liquidation Scheme," and the managers, 20 gentlemen, are to issue 6,000,000 £1 tickets, which are in all but name lottery tickets. Half the 6,000,000 is to be paid to the liquidators, and half "divided among the unfortunate shareholders in sums varying from £5 to £25,000." The scheme is utterly absurd from a financial point of view, as it proposes that on an average every householder in the United Kingdom will give £1 for about the tenth of a chance of a fortune; but its immorality is even worse. The good folk of Scotland have, apparently, under the pressure of suffering, laid aside not only their righteousness, but their arithmetic.

BURNING OF A NOBLEMAN'S MANSION

ONE OF THE FINEST SEATS IN YORKSHIRE DESTROYED—MANY ART TREASURES LOST—OTHER CALAMITIES OF THE KIND.

From the London News, Jan. 13.

On Saturday morning, at 5:40, the country seat of Earl Feversham, at Helmsley, near Malton, was discovered to be on fire. Flames were observed by one of the persons employed about the hall to be issuing from a bedroom window in the front of the building, which was a splendid Doric fabric, built from the designs of Van Burgh, and completed in 1718. The building stands on a picturesque eminence, overlooking the River Rye, and surrounded on all sides by woods and valleys of a most striking character. An alarm was immediately given, and the fire appliances connected with the hall were brought to bear upon the part of the building which seemed to be more immediately endangered by the fire. Messengers were immediately dispatched to the neighboring town of Helmsley for assistance, and the fire engine was at once sent to the hall. The fire spread with alarming rapidity along the south front of the building, and in spite of the efforts that were put forth, it grew in volume and strength, and soon the whole of the eastern and western wings of the building, when it became apparent that nothing could be done to save this magnificent structure from complete destruction. The efforts of the saivors were considerably frustrated by the difficulty of obtaining water, and the inflammable nature of the contents of the building. Every endeavor was made to save the more valuable paintings and the curios and objects of virtu with which the palatial rooms were stored, and it is matter of congratulation, in a national as well as local sense, that the more valuable paintings were saved from the general wreck. Among these was the fine painting by Rembrandt of "The Politician." The progress of the flames was exceedingly rapid, and in less than four hours the whole building was enveloped by the destroying element, and by 10 o'clock in the morning nothing was left but the bare walls. The very large and valuable library, which since many years formed a notable feature about the mansion, escaped destruction. The ancient stairs which graced the entrance-hall are reported to have been saved. The family portraits, of Duncombe Park, which was freely thrown open by its noble owner to strangers, will eagerly await further tidings in their anxiety to learn what pictures have been rescued from the destructive flames. The portrait, for instance, of "Garrick as Richard III.," by Hogarth, was known far and wide, and the dining and drawing rooms were rich in specimens from the brush of Hobbema, Guido, Claude, Titian, Leonardo da Vinci, and Rubens. Yorkshire abounds in splendid mansions, and among them Duncombe Park has always held a high place. The view from its terrace is not easily to be surpassed, since it commands the adjacent Town of Helmsley, with its time-honored castle and church, and the tortuous course of the enchanting river which gives its name to Rievaulx, or "Rye Vales," Abbey, lying in the immediate neighborhood. Below stretches the richly cultivated expanse of Helmsley Dale, and on the opposite bank of the Rye grows in succession to be seen which, blending with the distant outlines of the wolds in the East Riding, combine to make the terrace of Duncombe Park so attractive as a sight, and especially in Summer, that, in the opinion of many, Yorkshire has nothing fairer to show.

It is more than 40 years since a foreigner was the first to awaken Englishmen to a consciousness that these islands are without a rival among foreign nations as storehouses of artistic and pictorial gems. Having called attention to the subject in 1837, Dr. Waagen, the Director of the Royal Gallery of Pictures at Berlin, in 1854, published his "Treasures of Art in Great Britain," and the description given by him of many such country seats as Duncombe Park ought not to have attracted so little notice as was bestowed upon them. He has devoted many years to the task of exploration, and the record is the result of his researches seems to have been for him a labor of love. He did not confine himself to pictures and statues, but also investigated the old illuminated manuscripts, the engravings and drawings in which England has long been singularly rich. In his elaborate work, which professes to give an "Account of the chief collections of paintings, sculptures, drawings, and illuminated manuscripts in," Dr. Waagen reveals to us that the same agent which has just made a ruin of Lord Feversham's house in Yorkshire had already entailed upon England no insignificant loss. After the restoration of Charles II. the palace of Whitehall was fire, "and Raphaels, Leonardos, Giorgiones, Titians, and Holbeins perished miserably in the flames."

INVESTIGATING SUBTERRANEAN PHENOMENA WITH THE MICROPHONE.

From the Galignani's Messenger.

M. D'Abbadie presented to the Academy of Sciences at its last sitting a memoir by M. De Rossi, entitled: "Il Microfono nella Meteorologia Endogena," and accompanied it with the following remarks: In India, a business is carried on by men called spring-seekers, who generally succeed in designating the subterranean place where water may be obtained; they lie down on the ground and found their judgment on their hearing, which becomes extremely acute by practice. A few years ago, on the occasion of an earthquake at Segnora-le-Bigorre, in the Pyrénées, Mr. Maxwell Lyte had the idea of placing on the ground an instrument resembling a gigantic stethoscope and was able to hear the crackings of the terrestrial crust. To M. Rossi was reserved the honor of raising those empirical attempts to the height of a science, by applying the microphone to the exploration of the soil in its hidden depths. The learned founder of the "Bullettino del Vulcanismo Italiano" commenced his researches in his Observatory of Rocca di Papa, near Rome, and was very soon able to distinguish three different sounds which he could connect with the various movements of his seismatic pendulums. He was able afterward to confirm his results in observing the microphone at Vesuvius, and the Solfatara at Pozzuoli, where the movements of the earth's crust are very frequent. Without going any further into the details of that memoir, I must mention the fact that very strong subterranean explosions were heard through the microphone immediately preceding a shock of earthquake. Although M. De Rossi is too prudent to assert the fact, he gives us a glimpse of the possibility of thus predicting approaching earthquakes. However this may be, the second has conferred on science a new means of study which ought to be employed at all meteorological observatories. By establishing facts which have hitherto escaped us, we may perhaps succeed in explaining the causes, still so mysterious, of earthquake

FIRE INSURANCE REPORTS.

CONDITION OF LOCAL COMPANIES.

STATEMENTS OF EIGHTEEN MORE CORPORATIONS—THEIR CONDITION ON THE LAST DAY OF 1877 AND 1878.

ALBANY, Jan. 25.—The following are the remainder of the annual reports of the New-York City fire insurance companies, showing their condition on Dec. 31, 1878, as compared with Dec. 31, 1877:

	1877.	1878.
NEW-YORK.
Assets	$431,700 15	$405,344 45
Capital	200,000 00	200,000 00
Liabilities	52,905 40	48,339 34
Net surplus	178,794 75	160,005 11
Income	110,107 01	90,313 83
Expenditures	126,087 63	96,543 26
NIAGARA.
Assets	$1,867,079 00	$1,828,650 00
Capital	500,000 00	500,000 00
Liabilities	418,249 00	374,638 00
Net surplus	448,830 00	455,012 00
Income	615,705 00	532,440 00
Expenditures	580,066 00	526,561 00
NORTH RIVER.
Assets	$490,978 83	$481,667 27
Capital	350,000 00	350,000 00
Liabilities	16,835 71	18,950 07
Net surplus	124,141 12	112,717 20
Income	68,360 49	59,699 89
Expenditures	66,553 93	64,370 36
PACIFIC.
Assets	$706,275 09	$703,553 53
Capital	200,000 00	200,000 00
Liabilities	31,392 17	19,721 58
Net surplus	424,882 92	426,132 03
Income	173,571 97	159,274 19
Expenditures	161,516 03	153,916 11
PARK.
Assets	$335,607 76	$330,732 01
Capital	200,000 00	200,000 00
Liabilities	33,047 26	26,769 73
Net surplus	109,560 51	103,962 28
Income	73,823 01	69,115 99
Expenditures	91,036 97	68,808 20
PEOPLE'S.
Assets	$285,861 79	$283,104 08
Capital	150,000 00	150,000 00
Liabilities	26,978 54	25,899 88
Net surplus	108,888 25	107,204 18
Income	62,126 08	60,661 77
Expenditures	64,954 63	61,508 28
PETER COOPER.
Assets	$373,736 72	$367,752 85
Capital	150,000 00	150,000 00
Liabilities	17,711 00	17,278 70
Net surplus	206,025 72	200,474 27
Income	55,052 64	44,721 43
Expenditures	53,734 07	51,653 68
RELIEF.
Assets	$313,018 08	$310,876 11
Capital	200,000 00	200,000 00
Liabilities	17,263 15	13,660 79
Net surplus	85,754 03	61,306 32
Income	132,749 17	129,334 00
Expenditures	138,148 45	115,843 90
REPUBLIC.
Assets	$407,980 45	$423,840 57
Capital	300,000 00	300,000 00
Liabilities	95,811 71	87,016 09
Net surplus	12,168 74	36,824 57
Income	154,931 79	149,905 86
Expendit

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

ORIGIN, PROGRESS, AND DESTINY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE. By JOHN A. WEISSE, M. D. New-York: J. W. BOUTON. 1879.

It speaks well for a language that a man should set out to prove that others are superior to it, and yet, after mature consideration, come to the conclusion that it is finer, more comprehensive, flexible, and handy than any other in the world. This has been the experience of Dr. John A. Weisse, a German, who has spent the greater portion of his life in the United States, and devoted himself, he says for 30 years, to a special study of the English language. The results of such investigations are embodied in a thick octavo, printed in the good taste usually shown by Bouton. Dr. Weisse dedicates his work to the English-speaking populations in Europe, America, Asia, Africa, and Oceanica, as a token of appreciation of their language. He sets out to lay before the 90,000,000 of speakers of English the real origin and progress of their language, as well as to make them realize the superiority of their idiom over others in regard to the refinement and vigor of its vocabulary, its clearness of diction, simplicity in grammar, and directness in construction. A further purpose is to attack the present system of spelling and introduce the method of orthography now prevalent in German, where every letter is pronounced as it is written. Dr. Weisse has ideas of his own concerning the simplification of uttering, writing, and printing English; he looks forward to the day when other nations, being compelled to recognize its superiority, shall adopt it for their own mode of communication. In relation to this point, we must note the quotation from Dr. K. M. Rapp's "Physiologie der Sprache," used as a motto for the title-page:

"The other nations of Europe may esteem themselves fortunate that the English have not made the discovery of the suitableness of their language for universal adoption."

Dr. Weisse starts with the sixth century of the present era, and gives for that and for each succeeding century a historical sketch, with remarks on the state of the languages from which English derives itself. His plan is more systematic than the carrying out; for he allows himself many discursions. The earlier centuries afford a chance to display his wide reading and curious scholarship. He gives extracts from Anglo-Saxon authors, quotes the fragments of Gothic that remain, and refers occasionally to Celtic works. It is a part of his system to tabulate words under the head of languages or dialects, in order to find the percentage of different tongues going to make up the same piece of writing. He tries in this way to add the force of a mathematical demonstration to his theories. Of course, almost any one of these tables might give rise to questions of the fiercest kind on the part of a skeptical philologist. Words that are credited to Norman might be called Celtic, while of the few given to Celtic, some might be refused admittance by scholars specially equipped in that department of philology. But, putting aside the theories that might arise on such points, a fact of greater importance to the general reader remains: the mere references, historical threads, and quotations make the work singularly instructive and interesting, especially in the first half, where there is far more space given to text than to percentage tables. It is certainly pleasant to learn that we possess in daily vocal use an instrument which Dr. Weisse rates so high; M. Jourdain, who found that he had always spoken prose, will at once recur to the memory. The English idiom, says Dr. Weisse, is the cream and essence of the Ario-Japhetic dialects; it contains the choicest Greco-Latin, Gotho-Germanic, and Celtic elements, and is a happy medium between French and German. More grave than the former, it is less guttural, harsh, and cumbersome than the latter. Grammatically, it is simpler than either, but it is very capricious in its orthoepy and phonography. "Vowels and consonants are so felicitously combined in English that the dwellers of the frigid and torrid zones can articulate and speak it with comparative ease."

Dr. Weisse may be classed as a workman a little to one side of the regular current of historical and philological research. Without attempting to controvert the theories by which he is governed it may be allowed to consider him rather a skirmisher on the edges of the army of science than a regular soldier. His work has not the order and precision, the cumulative force of a philologist of the first rank. But it is full of suggestive thought, and may prove of greater value to persons unacquainted at first hand with original authorities than the more scientific works of men with greater reputations. Where such writers would take a minute knowledge of history for granted, Dr. Weisse supplies a short sketch of the circumstances governing or influencing the land, the person or the event to which allusion has been made. In this way he manages to give the reader, first and last, an astonishing amount of information. And if he is, so to speak, an outsider in science, his book is likewise a treatise to one side of the beaten track, and therefore all the more valuable in affording a view of literature and history from an unusual stand-point. It interests, even when advocating a theory to which the reader may not assent; it pleases from its unconventional tone and basis. Dr. Weisse has a very distinct individuality, it would appear from this work, and gives his own color to many facts presented to us hitherto in quite a different light. There is so much of good embodied in these pages that the book ought to go into successive editions, revised and altered in accordance with new researches. If Dr. Weisse could get philologists to criticise his work radically, and would then bring himself to accept so much of their strictures as mature deliberation should approve of, we might expect a volume that would be a credit to American scholarship. As it stands, the work is not only highly entertaining to persons given to such questions, but valuable to all who care for English. It brings together and collates a vast number of facts which have to be sought in many rare and inaccessible volumes. It affords a singular and suggestive commentary on 12 centuries of what is called Anglo-Saxon civilization.

APPLETON'S JOURNAL.

—For February the bill of fare presented by Appletons' Journal owes more to the Nineteenth Century than to any one other of the English magazines. Lord Houghton's essay, "On Certain Present Phenomena of the Imagination," W. H. Mallock's "Intolerance and Persecution," and W. R. Greg's "Verify Your Compass" are taken from that able periodical. The Revue des Deux Mondes furnishes the concluding half of "The Romance of a Painter," in which Ferdinand Fabre is giving a dramatic sketch of the modern French artist who looks like Michael Angelo—Jean Paul Laurens. Macmillan's Magazine supplies the article by Dean Stanley on "The Historical Aspect of the United States," and the Spectator Harry Guiller's review of Fortuny, Millais, the "Greek" artists of England, Leslie and other painters. In addition to these we find a "Chapter from a New History," by Spencer Walpole, the subject being "English History." This latter is also taken from the foreign reviews. Of original contributions there are three. Appleton Morgan declines to believe that William Shakespeare wrote the plays assigned to him, and gives his reasons under the title, "The Shakespearean Myth." Horace E. Scudder concludes his short story—"A Man May Not Marry His Grandmother"—and John Brougham contributes the following sonnet, under the title, "The Judgment of Midas; A Parallel," from which we must infer that the veteran actor does not share the skepticism of Mr. Appleton Morgan regarding Shakespeare, but assigns his obscurity during his lifetime to the ignorance of mankind of what is best among their surroundings:

"Great names come filtered through the sands of time,
That in their time those very sands obscured;
Immortal Shakespeare, even in his prime,
From the insensate crowd neglect endured;
Vainly he sang his Orphic strain sublime,
'Dumb show and noise' to 'groundlings' dearer were
Than numbers breathing of Olympian air.
Thus the dull Phrygian, when Latona's son
With Pan contended for Euterpe's meed,
Apollo's lute from him no plaudit won;
But the shrill discord of the Satyr's reed,
More consonant by far, he hung upon
With blatant glee, and, when the conflict ceased,
Ignored the god, and crowned the semi-beast."

THE HARPER PERIODICALS.

HARPER'S NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE. Vol. LVI. December, 1877, to May, 1878. Vol. LVII. June to November, 1878. New-York: HARPER & BROTHERS. 1878.

The octavo volumes which contain the greater part of Harper's Magazine for the year 1878 are worthy of note, as embodying two very popular novels by modern English novelwrights. Black's "Macleod of Dare" opens in the February number, and so does Hardy's "Return of the Native." Many have already seen these novels in complete form, but the subscribers to the magazine now possess them in full, sandwiched between a great quantity of amusing and instructive matter. These two novels appeal to different natures, but one or the other is pretty sure to satisfy all but the most captious critics. Black is very fond of movement, and carries his actors around Western islands to London or Paris, to Wales, to Scotland. Hardy is quite as immovable as Black is shifting. He pins the reader down to some one agricultural district of England, describes and talks it over until the landscape down to the smallest particular is learned by heart. He takes up a philosopher's position, whereas Black, if he be philosopher at all, is decidedly of the school peripatetic. The "Return of the Native," as given in Harper's Magazine, has an advantage over the printed volume, published by Henry Holt & Co., in the illustrations. The first one shows the group around the bale-fire, which Grand-fer Cantle is enlivening with his ill-timed and senile witticisms. In the May number we get a picture of the "reddleman," sitting in his van and reading the letter by his lantern. This is a novel which has a distinct mannerism in its method of composition, and indulges in odd twists of plot that may frighten the reader at first, but it is, in fact, one of the best stories that have appeared in Harper's Magazine for a long while. Miss Thackeray's "Da Capo" is also included in these volumes. Bret Harte's name is found on the list of contributors, and, more frequently, those of R. H. Stoddard, Rebecca Harding Davis, J. T. Trowbridge, and Julian Hawthorne. Edward Everett Hale's "Back to Back" is represented, while William L. Alden gives his opinions on "Canoes," and William Blackie his on "Muscular Development." The illustrated articles of travel and adventure are too many to enumerate.

HARPER'S WEEKLY. A JOURNAL OF CIVILIZATION. Vol. XXII. For the year 1878. New-York: HARPER & BROTHERS. 1879.

HARPER'S BAZAR. A REPOSITORY OF FASHION, PLEASURE, AND INSTRUCTION. Vol. XI. New-York: HARPER & BROTHERS. 1879.

The year 1878 was not without its events in every department of public interest, and perhaps it was favored more than most years by occurrences especially appropriate to registration in such a pictorial calendar of the times. Stanley came through Africa by the Congo, and Harper's Weekly was the first to show the spirited illustrations, made for English magazines after designs and photographs by him, of his perilous feats and of the strange sights he met with on the way. The rowing season was well supplied with incidents, especially with the gallant efforts of Americans on English rowing grounds. We have here pictures of the Atalanta's race with the Shoe-wae-cae-mettes on our own waters, and of the victory of the Columbia four at Henley. The Russo-Turkish war furnished the great bulk of illustrations. Of political cartoons there is no stint; this weekly cannot get enough of the work of Thomas Nast in that department. And yet, whether from the fact that our politics have themselves been more dreary and unexciting, or because the caricaturist does not keep to his mark, or possibly from a combination of both reasons, the cartoons are by no means uniformly good. Some are obtuse, others only feebly pointed, while a few are quite below what Harper's Weekly has hitherto led the public to expect. The style of illustration, both as to draughtsmanship and engraving, is greatly improved as a whole, and although Mr. Nast's work always shows the same old artistic faults, the rest contains work of such high quality that the average is more than sustained.

Harper's Bazar indulges more freely in humorous cartoons than the Weekly. Its regular features are still maintained: each number supplies the paper dress-patterns for feminine scissors and the short tales of a sentimental nature for feminine consumption. Children form the staple subject of the larger illustrations, as befits a periodical intended for the sitting-room and nursery. Like the Weekly, a good many English prints find their way into the Bazar, and even Stanley and his travels are not forgot. The thick folio contains the whole of the issue for the year 1878.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

EAST SIDE TRANSIT.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I desire to give you a few memorandums in relation to rapid transit. I have alternated, for about 10 evenings, between boat and elevated road. I have not succeeded in getting to One Hundred and Twenty-ninth-street, from Franklin-square, in less than 50 minutes, and have not been over 68 minutes on the alternate nights. I have gone up by boat (5:57, 6:02, 6:07) 7 minutes—3 different 7's minutes, and 3d minutes, both in favor of boat. I make no remark in regard to the comfort of the two modes of conveyance, as about that there can be no question. This morning being foggy, and no boats leaving, I was obliged to take the elevated. I was sure of getting to One Hundred and Twenty-ninth-street in time to get the benefit of the 5-cents arrangement. On arrival at that station I found no trains sent out from there, but had to foot it down to One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street. I arrived there in due course, and found so great a crowd that it took me 15 minutes to get up the stairs and on the cars. All trains coming up roads were discharging their passengers on the west side of the track, and, of course, only one stairs for outgoing and incoming passengers. How many extra 5 cents the passengers were mulcted of course I cannot say, but I certainly think not less than four train-loads went out from One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street while I was endeavoring to get up. I do not write this for the purpose of appearing in print, but that you may have some more items to show up the mismanagement of this great fraud. I hear of engines constantly breaking down, delays all along the road from different causes, inutility of employes, neglect to warm the cars, and now to-day, when warmed, the escaping steam from leaky joints is really worse than the cold, as it almost produces asphyxia. CHRONIC GROWLER.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, Jan. 23, 1879.

THE REFEREE QUESTION.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

There is, I believe, a bill before the Legislature for the appointment of 20 Referees for this district. The plan is objectionable in this, that 20 Referees would be wholly inadequate to the performance of the current business of references. Why not so amend the law as to require the Clerks of each of the courts to prepare a list, in alphabetical order, of all the practicing lawyers within this County, and then, except in the cases excepted by the rules, and where the parties cannot agree upon a Referee, let the court appoint, beginning with the name at the head of the list. It is no answer to object that some lawyers are, for certain reasons, not suitable persons. Presumptively they are, for they are licensed. If they commit error there is ample remedy against the consequences, and if they inflict willful wrong these is a short mode of redress at the General Term and elsewhere. The Bar generally, I believe, would approve of this plan.

A word as to the Special Sessions bill. I think an innocent man would rather be tried before three justices than before one. It will not do to sacrifice safety to mere economy. NON-CONFUSION.

BROADWAY'S RAILROAD PROJECTS.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The present agitation of the advisability of building a surface railway through Broadway below Fourteenth-street will recall to many of our older citizens the memorable effort made some 25 years ago to charter such a road. How nearly successful it was, and how it failed, may interest some who have never known the almost dramatic incidents of the attempt.

In July, 1852, a petition was presented to the Common Council—then consisting of a Board of Aldermen and a Board of Assistant Aldermen—asking for an ordinance authorizing certain persons to construct a surface railway in Broadway, from South Ferry to Fifty-ninth-street. Among the proposed incorporators were Jacob Sharp, now President of the Twenty-third-Street Line, and Peter "Brains" Sweeny, now in exile. The principal property-owners on Broadway, thinking such a road would almost ruin their property, protested, vowed, and swore. For several months action was delayed, but finally, on the 19th of November, 1852, the Aldermen passed the ordinance, as also did the Assistant Aldermen some days later, and it was then sent to the Mayor for his approval. Twelve days thereafter the Mayor returned it without his approval, setting forth his objections at considerable length.

The Common Council determined to pass the ordinance over the Mayor's veto. To prevent such action Thomas E. Davis and Courtlandt Parker, two tax-payers, in their own names, but for the benefit of all interested, commenced an action in the Superior Court against the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty of the City of New-York, and on the 27th of December obtained from Judge William W. Campbell an injunction restraining the Common Council from passing the ordinance over the veto until the further order of the court. The complaint upon which this injunction was obtained is even now of more than passing interest. It shows that Aldermen in those days were as generous with the people's property as are the City Fathers of to-day. For a mere song they were voting away a franchise that was of untold wealth, character, and standing" were willing to pay handsomely for. There was one offerto pay $1,000,000 in 10 annual payments, and to carry passengers for 3 cents; another was to pay 1 cent to the City for every passenger carried; and still another, to pay $100,000 a year for the privilege. These offers were ignored, and in this light the complainants pertinently averred "that by reason of the corrupt and illegal acts of said defendants, in squandering the public moneys, in farming out and disposing of, in almost every imaginable way, the public property, contracts, rights, privileges, and franchises, the taxes of the City are increasing to an alarming degree." Unfortunately, the same course of affairs has since continued, and New-York, instead of being one of the wealthiest municipalities of the world, is to-day struggling under a load of debt and taxation undreamed of by even the most far-sighted citizens of 1852. Contrast the condition then and now. The realty assessed value in the City for 1852 was about $2,500,000, and adds that "the amount estimated as required for the coming year (1853) amounts to the enormous sum of $3,972,195. The population of the City was then about half that of to-day; the assessed valuation of property about one-fourth as great as at present; while the tax levy now is about eight times as large as then. Comment is unnecessary. William Campbell was then a young man, another instance of the pupil surpassing his teachers.

The then Board of Aldermen, unlike that of today, contained at least one legal luminary—Oscar W. Sturtevant. He evidently had no respect for, and as little fear of, courts and Judges. The injunction had scarcely been served when the board met, and Mr. Sturtevant offered a preamble and resolution. The preamble recited Judge Campbell, "without color of law or justification, assumed the prerogative of directing and controlling the Municipal legislation of the City," and that such unwarrantable interference with the rightful functions of a legislative body, if tolerated without just rebuke, would lead to innumerable ills. The resolutions in substance stated that, injunction or no injunction, the Common Council would assert its right and pass the ordinance, and pass it the Aldermen did by a vote of 13 to 4. The next move was an application for an attachment against the Common Council for contempt in violating the injunction. For the Aldermen appeared Charles O'Conor and David Dudley Field, while John Van Buren, G. C. Bronson, and James W. Gerard appealed to the court to assert the majesty of the law, and to punish those who defied its decrees. Never was that legal acumen could suggest or ingenuity could invent was advanced to shield the board, and as ably met and overthrown. Judges Duer and Bosworth wrote elaborate and interesting opinions, holding that an attachment for the contempt was the legal issue. The Aldermen, in answering the interrogatories filed on the issuance of the attachment, again raised the question of the jurisdiction of the court to issue or continue the injunction "to prevent them from voting in the discharge of their legislative duties." Alderman Wesley Smith alone expressed his regret for his contempt, and apologized to the court. Another interesting point was reached, but the learned Judges brushed aside the legal technicalities, and held that the interrogatories must be answered. The penalty for the contempt was then fixed. Alderman Sturtevant, as the author of the resolutions, was sentenced to be imprisoned in the City Prison for 15 days and to pay a fine of some $350. The other Aldermen were only fined. The Assistant Aldermen who had voted to lay the resolutions on the table were each fined $200. It is not recorded that the City paid their fines. Appeals were taken, but the Court of Appeals affirmed the action of the Superior Court.

The attempt to construct the road failed. Innumerable have been the efforts since made to effect the same result, but as yet not even a "bob-tail" has been able to penetrate Broadway below Fourteenth-street. The charges are that the discharge of bribery and corruption that were then upon the lips of nearly every one, at this late day are better forgotten, but no other effort caused so much scandal and ill-feeling as this one that the changes of 25 years have almost driven out of the recollection of New-Yorkers. D.

VALUATION OF IMPORTS.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Will you kindly permit us to answer through your columns the proposition of the Chamber of Commerce to assess duties, on merchandise on the "home" or "American" valuation? We should have attended the meeting had we thought for one moment that such an idea was seriously considered, and from the manner in which it was introduced, &c., we are satisfied there is a large-sized African in the woodpile.

The Chamber of Commerce proposes "that the importer present to the Collector an accurate descriptive invoice of his goods: 1. The commercial name or classification of the merchandise. 2. The port or country from which the goods are received. 3. The marks and numbers of the cases, with an accurate descriptive list of the contents. 4. The estimated cash valuation at either of the five principal ports of entry, viz., Boston, New-York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and New-Orleans."

We pass the first, second, and third, as of no real moment, and come to the fourth, where the African shows himself. Now, Mr. Editor, we would like to know what is the "home," or "American," value of goods? Is it not what similar goods cost in the manufacture here, and are sold for at wholesale? and would Mr. Schultz assess duty on such value? Why, the strongest Pennsylvania protectionist could not ask any such protection. To illustrate: Take an "Italian cloth" or "farmer's satin," that cost in Bradford 16 cents. The "home" value of such an article is about 30 cents. Now, it is proposed to assess 70 per cent. (about the rate of duty on Italians) on 30 cents instead of on 16 cents! A cotton velvet, costing in England say 20 cents, and the "American" value of which is to 50 cents would have to pay 35 per cent. on 30 cents, instead of 35 per cent. on 20 cents. A silk of 65 francs, or $13, cost in Lyons; the "home" value of which is $1 75, would have to pay 60 per cent. on $1 75, instead of 60 per cent. on $1. We could give you hundreds of such illustrations. Referring to Mr. Schultz's speech before the Chamber of Commerce, in which he said, "Very soon there will only remain the agents of foreign manufacturers to supply our consumers through existing channels," we beg to differ from that view, and would say, if his idea were carried out, we would not have an importer left in business—he would close up every importing house—not alone in New-York, but throughout the United States.

The advantages claimed by the Chamber of Commerce are as follows:

"First—The importer will not be obliged to disclose, as now, the source or conditions on which he obtains his goods."

This is of very little moment. The Treasury regulations guard invoices to a certain extent. There may be one or two isolated cases in which it might be necessary to hide the place from which a merchant obtained his goods, but we are not aware of such cases.

"Second—It places the responsibility of ascertaining dutiable value upon parties who should know."

That responsibility exists at present—and with the same lot of men in the Appraiser's store, how much better off could we be?

"Third—The Appraiser's department, under this system will require the services of experts the most practical and efficient obtainable."

Does not the Appraiser's department to-day require the services of such experts? And if they are not in the Appraiser's store to-day, how does the Chamber of Commerce propose to put them there?

"Fourth—All delay and disputes would cease between the merchants and the Government, since the Government would be furnished with a direct and responsible method of enforcing its penalties."

With the first part of the foregoing we do not for a moment agree. Delays and disputes would increase a hundred-fold. Hardly any two men would agree upon the value of an article. One need only attend as a merchants' appraisment of goods at the Appraisers' store, and hear men who have been in business upward of 20 years give different values upon samples shown, often as wide apart as 20 per cent. With the latter part of No. 4, we think, and no doubt hundreds of importers will agree with us, that the Government are to-day fully furnished with power to enforce its penalties. Apologizing for trespassing on your valuable space, we remain, IMPORTERS.

COMMERCE WITH BRAZIL.

INCREASE OF TRADE OF THE EMPIRE IN THE PRESENT CENTURY.

GROWTH OF TRAFFIC WITH THE UNITED STATES—DISPARITY OF IMPORTS AND EXPORTS—PRODUCTS INVOLVED—COMPARISON WITH OTHER COUNTRIES—VALUABLE STATISTICS.

The great Empire of the Western Continent, occupying nearly one-half of South America, with an area of about 3,288,000 square miles, and a population of over 10,000,000, dates its great prosperity from 1699, when gold was discovered, the yearly product soon reaching $15,000,000. The discovery of diamonds in the early part of the eighteenth century added another prolific source of revenue. But it was ascertained that the soil was of great fertility, yielding the richest articles of tropical produce, coffee and sugar being the staple products. Valuable as are the precious minerals, they have been eclipsed in value by the agricultural productions, as the tables hereinafter presented will show. The yearly product of gold formerly reached $15,000,000; the export to Great Britain and the United States of coffee, sugar, hides, and other Brazilian products, during the last five years, exceeded in annual value an average of $76,000,000. The earliest year in which any official record of the trade between the United States and Brazil appears was in 1801, when the following articles were imported from the coast of Brazil: Coffee, 532 pounds; sugar, 18,756 pounds; and merchandise valued at $9, which paid a duty of 15 per cent. From this time to 1818 the imports had increased to $78,532, and the exports to $1,261,726, and for the last-named year the amount of sugar brought from Brazil to this country was 3,421,149 pounds; coffee, 480,895 pounds, and cocoa, 103,896 pounds. In 1830 the imports had increased to $2,406,765 and exports to $1,841,765, the aggregate for the decade then ending being $18,701,630 for imports and $17,933,140 for exports, and the yearly average, imports, $1,870,165; exports, $1,793,314. In 1840 the imports were $4,912,774, exports $2,404,400; aggregate for the decade, imports, $48,430,198; exports, $22,009,922; yearly average, imports, $4,643,018; exports, $2,200,882. In the year 1840 the amount of coffee imported had risen to 47,412,756 pounds: sugar, 5,413,827 pounds; value of hides, $360,543; though in the items of sugar and hides some previous years show larger figures. The following tables give the imports and exports by fiscal years from 1841 down:

DECADE 1841–1850.

Year.	Imports.	Exports.
1841	$6,281,301	$3,241,970
1842	4,898,469	2,519,708
1843, (nine months.)	3,837,309	1,789,873
1844	6,855,607	2,875,557
1845	6,077,122	2,647,443
1846	7,439,271	2,996,304
1847	7,069,566	2,885,148
1848	7,975,145	3,209,362
1849	8,448,007	2,994,393
1850	9,322,263	2,917,424
Total in 10 years	$68,301,149	$27,780,168
Yearly average	6,830,115	2,778,017

During the above decennial period the imports increased over the preceding one $21,870,961, or 47 per cent. and the exports $5,771,346, or 26 per cent.

DECADE 1851–1860.

Year.	Imports.	Exports.
1851	$11,738,798	$8,350,684
1852	12,136,972	2,903,576
1854	14,085,987	3,598,127
1855	16,21[illegible]	4,119,748
1856	19,282,652	4,681,311
1857	21,460,733	5,398,619
1858	16,920,5[illegible]	5,72[illegible]
1859	22,419,818	5,8[illegible]
1860	21,204,803	6,021,727
Total for 10 years	$169,035,714	$44,553,731
Yearly average	16,903,574	4,455,373

The increase in the value of exports during the above decade was 60 per cent. over those in the preceding one, while the imports advanced over $100,000,000, or 147 per cent. The imports exceeded the exports by $124,482,013.

DECADE 1861–1870.

Year.	Imports.	Exports.
1861	$18,100,456	$4,978,828
1862	12,400,086	3,858,994
1863	10,943,476	4,940,171
1864	14,388,899	6,354,755
1865	9,784,312	6,830,161
1866	8,813,803	6,798,080
1867	19,100,300	5,171,009
1868	2,595,740	5,497,545
1869	24,837,403	5,806,804
1870	25,161,189	5,774,323
Total for 10 years	$175,180,664	$53,726,998
Yearly average	17,513,066	5,372,699

During the above decennial period there was an increase over that immediately preceding of 20 per cent. in the exports and of less than 4 per cent. in the imports. This small increase was occasioned by the civil war in our country during the four fiscal years from 1862 to 1866, during which the imports of coffee, sugar, and hides declined.

EIGHT YEARS, 1871–1878.

Year.	Imports.	Exports.
1871	$30,561,215	$8,013,733
1872	30,122,384	5,912,783
1873	36,340,376	7,197,729
1874	43,888,647	7,702,156
1875	42,027,883	7,742,359
1876	47,446,381	7,901,981
1877	43,498,041	7,581,813
1878	42,068,973	8,686,704
Total for 8 years	$317,043,880	$58,183,650
Yearly average	30,630,485	7,272,956

The average yearly increase in the above octennial period over the decade 1861–70 was as follows: in exports, 35 per cent., and in imports, nearly 127 per cent.

RECAPITULATION—PERIOD OF 58 YEARS.

Period.	Imports.	Exports.	Excess of Imports.
1821–30	$18,701,630	$17,993,140	4 per cent.
1831–40	46,430,188	22,008,822	111
1841–50	68,301,149	27,780,168	145
1851–60	169,035,744	44,553,731	279
1861–70	175,180,664	53,726,998	226
1871–78	317,043,880	58,183,650	445
Total	$794,643,255	$224,186,509	254
Yearly average	13,700,745	3,865,284

The yearly average excess of imports over exports was $9,835,461, or 254 per cent. The gradual increase of this disparity is shown by the above recapitulation, the excess of the imports to Brazil over the exports thereto being only 4 per cent. in the first period, but extending to 446 in the last eight years. The greatest disparity was in the fiscal year 1873, when the imports were $45,446,381, and the exports only $7,346,380—an excess of 518 per cent. The relative condition of our trade with Brazil has slightly improved since that year, the imports for 1878 being $2,477,408 less, and the exports $1,340,424 greater than in 1876, and the excess of imports over exports reduced to 399 per cent.—an improvement not large, but in the right direction, as it exhibits an increased demand for our products.

IMPORTS OF PRINCIPAL ARTICLES.

The following statement shows the quantities of coffee and sugar, and the value of raw hides, imported into the United States from Brazil during each of the 38 years from 1841 to 1878, inclusive:

Fiscal Year.	Coffee, Pounds.	Sugar, Pounds.	Hides, Value.
1841	59,675,722	9,080,986	$320,693
1842	61,248,942	7,923,419	506,454
1843	49,616,686	1,838,429	247,013
1844	45,291,434	2,799,189	------
1845	78,553,616	6,229,053	------
1846	97,635,977	4,932,304	------
1847	94,916,629	27,424,866	359,012
1848	110,927,234	6,687,657	1,066,548
1849	132,581,123	11,121,457	1,165,760
1850	90,319,511	7,033,366	1,587,958
1851	107,578,257	10,100,438	959,048
1852	138,156,506	14,738,093	727,978
1853	153,338,454	28,094,205	888,793
1854	116,784,773	11,118,228	1,306,248
1855	136,306,883	8,578,707	1,274,111
1856	180,243,070	12,598,855	1,430,223
1857	197,224,922	19,429,058	1,338,214
1858	148,918,148	10,863,056	------
1859	193,704,278	23,632,368	1,566,953
1860	256,583,272	30,290,024	1,046,689
1861	248,642,136	10,794,249	653,827
1862	94,478,648	18,012,894	1,006,205
1863	58,970,875	16,882,826	1,049,886
1864	90,297,126	34,522,060	1,006,260
1865	80,529,223	5,974,466	297,546
1866	126,929,289	19,333,859	820,607
1867	147,136,981	7,206,376	1,009,228
1868	199,226,171	10,447,403	1,526,898
1869	205,473,604	33,689,321	1,432,783
1870	183,413,456	24,145,331	2,342,420
1871	267,472,768	14,477,409	1,926,819
1872	194,218,511	28,878,952	1,491,846
1873	206,243,596	55,669,036	1,182,337
1874	196,358,671	36,984,454	1,045,494
1875	229,701,637	70,878,278	1,045,494
1876	262,632,887	40,010,418	735,729
1877	297,806,837	74,227,486	1,130,819
1878	211,654,160	78,076,553	1,288,085
Yearly average for 38 years	5,873,388,275	954,001,180

The amount of wool imported from Brazil, though far less than from the Argentine Republic, is yet considerable. During the 15 years from 1860 to 1875 inclusive the value of wool aggregated $3,378,969, a yearly average of $238,598. The largest quantity imported in any one year was 3,237,097 pounds, in 1870, and the greatest value $445,119 in 1872. Since that year there has been a gradual decline, the value imported in 1878 being only $97,127.

WHAT WE SELL TO BRAZIL.

The value of the aggregate exports in each year are given in the preceding tables; it will be interesting, however, to know the amount of the principal articles which we sell to Brazil. A single product—wheat flour—is not only the greatest in value, but exceeds all others combined. From 1823 to 1848, the amount of wheat flour sent from this country to Brazil rose from 114,222 barrels, valued at $772,147, to 294,816 barrels, valued at $1,922,213, the aggregate for 26 years being 4,797,413 barrels, of the value of $23,019,094, and the yearly average, 184,516 barrels, valued at $1,077,657. Cotton goods have formed an item of regular and not inconsiderable export to Brazil for more than half a century, the value being $242,888 as early as 1826. In addition to the export of wheat flour, the value of cotton goods sent to Brazil during each of the past 30 years is presented in the following table:

Statement showing the exports of wheat flour and cotton goods to Brazil during the 30 fiscal years from 1849 to 1878, inclusive:

Year.	Flour, Barrels.	Value.	Cotton Goods, Value.
1849	814,808	$1,885,203	$493,566
1850	393,484	1,649,696	533,187
1851	369,975	2,021,031	856,417
1852	345,025	1,639,285	722,505
1853	433,843	2,434,187	470,841
1854	315,319	2,417,685	428,848
1855	258,365	2,434,189	622,432
1856	413,937	3,848,406	267,371
1857	1,193,134	5,900,467	510,477
1858	526,120	3,560,755	390,036
1859	491,484	3,527,732	744,036
1860	302,124	3,582,087	651,467
1861	264,612	2,554,207	948,638
1862	373,802	2,473,151	452,925
1863	408,820	3,295,073	68,127
1864	407,975	4,432,223	81,838
1865	366,840	4,448,415	15,829
1866	296,144	3,281,370	58,826
1867	166,353	2,073,720	310,225
1868	247,640	2,837,746	401,208
1869	384,134	3,449,791	809,030
1870	376,217	2,687,395	975,940
1871	455,673	3,497,052	257,296
1872	382,210	3,166,235	259,866
1873	408,648	3,809,185	490,974
1874	531,353	4,577,176	299,704
1875	590,832	4,191,124	436,210
1876	536,180	3,871,143	585,296
1877	442,209	3,781,008	566,631
1878	616,132	4,436,006	523,322
Total in 30 years	12,173,808	$93,708,757	$12,270,583
Yearly average	405,797	3,123,625	425,686
Total in 56 years	16,971,821	$121,727,851
Yearly average	303,059	2,173,711

EXPORTS OF PETROLEUM.

The discovery of mineral oil added a new and important product to the exports from the United States. The quantity sent to Brazil in each year of the last decade was as follows:

Year.	Gallons.	Year.	Gallons.
1868	747,685	1874	2,075,894
1869	2,252,177	1875	1,993,915
1870	1,506,013	1876	2,880,905
1871	1,256,990	1877	3,539,733
1872	1,475,780	1878	3,802,694
1873	1,983,631
Total for 10 years			22,203,384
Yearly average			2,220,336

The value of this product for the past four years averaged $657,106, the largest reaching $900,025, in 1877.

DOMESTIC EXPORTS TO BRAZIL.

The following statement shows the value of exports of domestic merchandise and of specie from the United States to Brazil from 1858 to 1878, inclusive:

Year Ended June 30.	Total Merchandise.	Specie.	Total Domestic Exports.
1858	$4,653,676	$82,158	$4,735,834
1859	5,732,851	190,159	5,923,010
1860	6,740,638	204,597	6,945,235
1861	4,743,202	35,500	4,787,702
1862	3,774,249	10,000	3,784,249
1863	4,734,276	60,000	4,794,276
1864	5,252,387	182,385	5,434,772
1865	6,485,872	47,421	6,533,293
1866	5,598,617	75,896	5,674,513
1867	4,964,308	71,622	5,035,930
1868	5,585,595	59,456	5,645,024
1869	5,778,350	132,208	5,910,558
1870	5,665,098	42,263	5,707,361
1871	5,942,418	2,981	5,945,397
1872	5,862,191	12,729	5,864,920
1873	7,090,987	2,200	7,093,187
1874	7,660,502	2,380	7,662,882
1875	8,093,160	8,000	8,101,160
1876	7,232,218	1,000	7,233,218
1877	7,497,118	1,000	7,498,118
1878	8,610,646		8,610,646

The above table shows, in addition to wheat flour, the value of Indian corn and other breadstuffs; of hams, bacon, lard, butter, cheese, and other provisions; of iron manufactures and of other domestic products, also of specie, which were ex

INDEX TO CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS.

AMUSEMENTS—Seventh Page—6th and 7th cols.
AUCTION SALES—Seventh Page—7th col.
BANKRUPTNOTICES—Seventh Page—6th col.
BOARDING AND LODGING—Seventh Page—5th col.
BUSINESS CHANCES—Sixth Page—6th col.
BUSINESS NOTICES—Fifth Page—7th col.
CITY HOUSES TO LET—Seventh Page—2d col.
CITY ITEMS—Fifth Page—7th col.
CITY REAL ESTATE—Seventh Page—2d col.
COPARTNERSHIP NOTICES—Seventh Page—5th col.
COUNTRY REAL ESTATE—Seventh Page—2d col.
DANCING—Sixth Page—7th col.
DEATHS—Fifth Page—7th col.
DIVIDENDS—Sixth Page—6th col.
DRY GOODS—Sixth Page—7th col.
ELECTIONS—Sixth Page—5th col.
FINANCIAL—Sixth Page—6th col.
FURNISHED ROOMS—Seventh Page—5th col.
HELP WANTED—Sixth Page—7th col.
HORSES, CARRIAGES, &c.—Seventh Page—7th col.
INSTRUCTION—Seventh Page—4th col.
LEGAL NOTICES—Seventh Page—5th col.
MARRIAGES—Fifth Page—7th col.
MEETINGS—Seventh Page—7th col.
MISCELLANEOUS—Sixth Page—7th col.
MUSICAL—Seventh Page—7th col.
NEW PUBLICATIONS—Fifth Page—7th col.
RAILROADS—Seventh Page—3d and 4th cols.
REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION—Seventh Page—2d col.
RELIGIOUS NOTICES—Seventh Page—7th col.
REWARDS—Seventh Page—4th col.
SHIPPING—Seventh Page—2d and 3d cols.
SITUATIONS WANTED—Sixth Page—7th col.
SPECIAL NOTICES—Fifth Page—7th col.
STEAM-BOATS—Seventh Page—4th col.
STORES, &c., TO LET—Seventh Page—2d col.
TEACHERS—Seventh Page—5th col.
WATCHES, JEWELRY, &c.—Sixth Page—6th col.

The New-York Times.

NEW-YORK, MONDAY, JAN. 27, 1879.

AMUSEMENTS THIS EVENING.

BOOTH'S THEATRE.—The Danites.
WALLACK'S THEATRE.—Ours.
UNION-SQUARE.—Banker's Daughter.
PARK THEATRE.—Dot.
FIFTH-AVENUE THEATRE.—Dr. Clyde.
NIBLO'S GARDEN.—Hero.
STANDARD THEATRE.—H. M. S. Pinafore.
THEATRE COMIQUE.—Vaudeville.
BROADWAY THEATRE.—King Lear.
THE AQUARIUM.—Afternoon and Evening.
SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS.—Minstrelsy.
AMERICAN MUSEUM.—Curiosities.
CHICKERING HALL.—Lecture.
GILMORE'S GARDEN.—Skating and Music.
COOPER INSTITUTE.—Billiard Tournament.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

TERMS, POSTAGE PAID.

The Daily Times, per annum, including the Sunday Edition.....$12 00
The Daily Times, per annum, exclusive of the Sunday Edition..... 10 00
The Sunday Edition, per annum..... 2 00
The Semi-Weekly Times, per annum..... 2 50
The Weekly Times, per annum..... 1 00

BRANCH OFFICES OF THE TIMES.

The Times Up-town Office—No. 1,258 Broadway.
Paris Office of The Times—No. 39 Rue de Lafayette.
The Times is on sale in London at No. 449 Strand, W. C., from Henry F. Gillig & Co., and at Mr. Stevens', No. 4 Trafalgar-square.

The Signal Service Bureau report indicates for to-day in this region, increasing cloudiness, followed by rain or snow during the afternoon or night, with increasing south-east to south-west winds, falling barometer, and slowly rising temperature.

Mr. Tom Ewing, who may be fairly regarded as the leader of the movement to unite the Nationals and Democrats on the platform of the former, is by no means inclined to take a gloomy view of the future of his party, or, more properly speaking, his parties. He declares that the next objective points of their campaign have already gained the hearty support of the masses of the Democracy. These are the unlimited coinage of silver and the substitution of legal tenders for national bank notes. Unfortunately, Mr. Ewing is perfectly correct in this opinion, and it will not do to ignore his prophecies. It will be seen that he makes small account of the "conservative" tendencies of the Democratic Party, of which so much has recently been said, and that he hinges his hopes on the fact that under the present law legal tenders are redeemed, but are not canceled. This is the weak point in the whole scheme, and such statements as Ewing's are worthy of attention so long as this point remains uncovered.

An attempt will be made in the House to-day to fix a day for the consideration of the majority report from the Committee on Ways and Means on the sugar duties. This will require a two-thirds vote, as the rules must be suspended, and it is not likely that such a vote can be had against the opposition of Mr. Wood, Chairman, and Messrs. Garfield, Banks, and Kelley, all of whom regard the majority bill with disfavor. The prospect in any case of getting a change in the duties is exceedingly slim. Meanwhile, an interesting incident in the present controversy is the practical suppression of imports of sugar from Demerara to Baltimore, owing to the vigilance and severity of the Customs officials, and the transfer of the trade in good part to Louisiana. The fact is an illustration of the great indirect effects produced by a complicated tariff as difficult of administration as ours is.

Some very remarkable statements are made by the Austrian press in regard to the disease ravaging a portion of the Valley of the Volga, in Russia. While the official and semi-official statements of the Russian papers and the Russian Government declare that the disease is not the plague, and that it is under control, the Vienna journals deny both these assertions. They add that the Russian medical profession is inadequate to the task of coping with the disease, whether plague or epidemic, fully one-third of its members having died from disease contracted during the late war. This fact, with the similar one that the population which the sickness has attacked has been greatly weakened by the withdrawal of its stronger men in the Army, and by the exhaustion which they there suffered, shows how terrible is the price paid by an innocent people for the ambition of autocratic rulers. It would be difficult to discover in any of the political results of the brilliant victories over Turkey an adequate compensation for the many ills which the war has brought on the Russian nation.

Nobody will be surprised to learn that the famous McGarrahan case is before Congress again. On the contrary, it would be surprising if Congress should ever meet without meeting the McGarrahan case at the door. This time the matter comes up in the shape of a bill to allow the Court of Claims to decide whether the United States Government, the New-Idria Company, or William McGarrahan is lawful owner of the Rancho Panoche Grande and the quicksilver mine thereon. Whatever may be the abstract merits of McGarrahan's claim, it is evident that its reference to any court would be a victory for him. At present he has no standing as claimant in the courts. The McGarrahan case has been a maëlstrom of Congressional and judicial reputations. Cautious people give it a wide berth. For this reason, perhaps, the House Committee on Public Lands evince a great deal of courage in agreeing to report a bill to send the whole matter to the Court of Claims.

Mr. Carpenter, United States Senator-elect from Wisconsin, had a very cordial reception in Milwaukee on his return from Madison after the long fight over the Senatorship. He made a speech which was regarded as a sort of confession of political faith, in which he declared that he was a Republican, that he was proud of resumption, and that the National Government owed to the negroes the complete defense of their rights under the constitutional amendments, especially that of suffrage under the fifteenth. The tone of the speech was modest and sober, and calculated to reassure those who had suspected Mr. Carpenter of an intention to return to the Senate as a political Ishmael. But six years in the Senate test a man more thoroughly than 20 minutes on a balcony.

CAUTION AS ESSENTIAL TO CREDIT.

The time for croaking, as Mr. Chittenden phrases it, is happily past, but the need of caution on the part of the powers at Washington was never greater than now. The country, in fact, is like a patient who has emerged from a critical stage of illness, and who, for months to come, must guard carefully against the possibility of a relapse. We have outlived prolonged depression and distrust; the signs of business improvement multiply; confidence slowly manifests itself; the prevalence of a more hopeful spirit will facilitate the removal of remaining hindrances to progress and prosperity. And yet it is certain that confidence is too sensitive to endure the strain which oversanguine methods might produce, and that for a considerable period prudence will be quite as necessary as development.

Financially, the brighter outlook should not make us unmindful of the conditions on which it depends or of the circumstances that forbid general exultation. The apparent absorption of four per cent. bonds has at least had the effect of attracting the attention of European investors to the security. London and Frankfort argue that that may be accepted which Americans themselves are buying on a scale that has few precedents. From this point of view the advance made in refunding is attended with advantages of greater importance than the saving of interest which conversion implies. For the promise of a steady European demand for the bonds, payable in gold, relieves us from the anxiety which would have attended a shipment of gold to meet obligations incurred by the calling in of six per cents held abroad, and, moreover, makes possible further supplies of gold should the contingencies incident to resumption render them desirable. Indeed, the formation of this new European syndicate, and the expressions of satisfaction which it has elicited from the Treasury and from financiers generally, is a curious commentary upon the boastful references to the homeward flow of bonds which emanated from high authorities during the Autumn. They who then hailed with delight the sending back of bonds, as evidence of our growing independence of foreign capital, now welcome the reopening of the foreign market as a pledge of help whose value may be incalculable.

The truth is, that the doctrine of financial independence, as applied to international affairs, is as absurd as the doctrine of commercial isolation which is the logical expression of the protectionist policy. We have not the same need of foreign supplies of money as of foreign customers for surplus products, but the difference is in degree only. Foreign capital has contributed immensely to the development of our railroad system and the growth of our industrial enterprises; and the necessity for it, in connection with the latter object, will be obvious so soon as business activity approaches its normal standard. Besides, no one can believe that our own citizens will retain the four per cents when this standard has been reached. Their present purchases simply illustrate the distrust of other forms of investment; and the revival of confidence and business activity will be followed by the withdrawal of funds now invested at a rate to which careful Englishmen are accustomed but which will not permanently satisfy Americans. In expectation of this state of things, the success of the London syndicate just formed will have special significance. It will be an assurance that foreign capital will be available to facilitate the transfer of money by our people from the four per cents to the more remunerative employment which better times will bring.

This renewal of financial inter-dependence as between a borrowing country, with vast undeveloped resources, and a country whose loanable capital seems likely to be increased by the deterioration of its own trade, suggests the observance of extreme care in regard to everything affecting the varied forms of public credit. The formation of a European syndicate would have been an idle operation had the political influences hostile to resumption been sustained. For the same reason, the continuance of the advantages gained by the acquisition of a foreign market for the four per cents depends upon the ability of the conservative forces throughout the country to withstand the assaults that will yet be made upon the policy which alone made resumption possible. The repression of the silver movement is now doubly necessary. It was required in the interest of resumption; it is indispensable as a means of maintaining faith in the nation's bonds. As the general process of recovery goes on the value of caution will be more widely recognized. The damage occasioned by wild financial projects, having the support of one or another of the parties, will be recognized. Perhaps, party managers will discover that honest tactics are best, judged by expediency. But the friends of sound finance, warned by experience, and understanding the conditions on which business recovery depends, cannot be too vigilant. They must not take anything for granted. They may protest against croaking, but they ought not to forget that, in present circumstances, confidence is exposed to many vicissitudes.

Nor are the agencies to be watched confined to phases of the financial question. The reduction of the funded debt has impressed foreigners and contributed to the success of refunding. Let it be known that Congress is willing to spend eighty or ninety millions upon arrears of pensions, and that the President offers no resistance though the Treasury is unable to sustain the burden, and the country will be discredited by an unwarranted increase of the debt, or by an increase of taxation that would retard industrial recuperation. Every subsidy is objectionable on these grounds, apart from the general considerations adverse to the system. To uphold the public credit and to stimulate business improvement, it is necessary to keep down expenditures, to reduce taxation instead of increasing it, and to withhold loans and guarantees, however powerful the pressure in their behalf. The rule does not admit of exceptions. The Brazilian subsidy job, which the Senate would fasten upon an appropriation bill, is in its nature and tendency as bad as the larger jobs with which the Treasury is threatened.

INTER-STATE EXTRADITION.

The surrender of fugitives from justice is made the subject of timely and thorough discussion in two of the January reviews. In the Princeton Review, Chief-Justice Cooley, of Michigan, takes a general view of the law and practice, while in the American Law Review Mr. I. T. Hoague presents the most exhaustive treatment yet given to the public of the question whether the surrender of a fugitive, in compliance with a requisition, is discretionary with the Governor. The public importance of this subject is forcibly illustrated by the recent refusal of Gov. Rice, of Massachusetts, to deliver up Kimpton on demand of Gov. Hampton, of South Carolina, and the refusal of the Governor of Illinois to comply with the requisition of the Governor of Pennsylvania for the surrender of two persons charged with murder. These and numerous other cases which have arisen show that the construction of the law for the extradition of criminals is still a matter of dispute, and often gives rise to bitter controversies which sometimes may defeat the very object of the law. The Constitution of the United States declares that "a person charged in any State with treason, felony, or other crime, who shall flee from justice and be found in another State, shall, on demand of the executive authority of the State from which he fled, be delivered up to be removed to the State having jurisdiction of the crime." In 1793 an act of Congress was passed prescribing the form and essentials of the requisition papers, and declaring that "it shall be the duty of the executive authority of the State" to which the fugitive has fled to cause his arrest and delivery, in compliance with a requisition made in due form. This provision is retained substantially in the Revised Statutes of the United States, and constitutes the entire Federal legislation on this important subject. The plain object of the makers of this law, as well as the framers of the Constitution, was to bring about a complete comity among the States for the punishment of criminals, and to prevent the evil consequences that would follow if an offender, by simply crossing a State line, could defy the process of the State whose laws he had grossly violated, and escape the just penalty of his crime. The language used to effect this purpose would seem to be tolerably clear. But now, as Chief-Justice Cooley points out, after ninety years' experience under the Constitution, and after a multitude of cases have arisen, nearly every question that could arise under the constitutional provision and the act of Congress is still in dispute, or is treated by the authorities as if it were so, and there is neither uniformity of action among the several State Executives nor harmony of decisions in the courts.

The question which has given rise to the most bitter public controversies in connection with the extradition of fugitives is that of executive discretion in making the surrender. On the one hand, it is claimed that when the requisition is in due form and makes out a prima facie case that the accused has committed a crime in the State making the demand, and has fled beyond its jurisdiction, it becomes the duty of the Governor of the State in which the fugitive is found to comply with the requisition without inquiry into the merits of the case, or questioning the motives of the authorities making the demand. On the other hand, the theory has been advanced, and acted on, that a State is not bound to honor a requisition when the offense charged is not a crime under its own laws, when the requisition is not made in good faith, or when the real purpose of securing the fugitive appears to be different from that set forth in the application papers. These and other matters, it has been claimed, fall within the cognizance of the Governor on whom the demand is made, and, on the whole, compliance with the requisition is entirely discretionary with him. Difference of opinion as to the meaning of the law on this point led to that exciting controversy which followed the refusal of Gov. Seward, of New-York, to comply with the requisition of Gov. Gilmer, of Virginia, for the surrender of persons charged with stealing a slave. The former justified his refusal on the ground that the alleged offense, though criminal under the statutes of Virginia, was not recognized as a crime by the common law, the common consent of civilized nations, or the laws of New-York. A similar controversy subsequently arose between Gov. Seward and the Governor of Georgia, and more recently between Gov. Dennison, of Ohio, and the Governor of Kentucky. The cause of the dispute in these three cases disappeared with the abolition of slavery. But other controversies hardly less bitter have arisen, and are likely to arise, from other causes. The mischievous consequences which may flow from them were strikingly illustrated when the Governor of Virginia, adopting a retaliatory policy, declared that he would honor no more requisitions made by Gov. Seward. It is but natural to suppose that since the Kimpton case Gov. Hampton has a like feeling toward the Governor of Massachusetts, and that Gov. Hartranft will take an inward delight in finding a flaw in a requisition made by Gov. Cullom.

The prevailing opinion now appears to be that the word "crime" in the Constitution and the act of Congress means a crime under the laws of the State making the demand, and hence that a Governor cannot justify his non-compliance with a requisition on the ground that the thing charged is not criminal under the laws of his own State. But the important question still remains whether the requisition, being in the form required by the law, the Executive on whom the demand is made may go behind the papers and inquire into the merits of the case, and for any reason satisfactory to himself refuse to honor the requisition. If so, there is no limit to the scope of his inquiries or the reasons which he may give in justification of his refusal. Indeed, he may raise no questions nor offer any explanation of his action. If his power is discretionary, he may refuse to act from political or personal motives, or from mere caprice. The various views held in different States on this important question make the administration of the law uncertain and deprive it of that uniformity which is highly desirable, and which the makers of the law aimed to secure. The matter is further complicated by legislation in many of the States, defining more or less definitely the powers and duties of the Executive. In some it is made the Governor's duty to obey the requisition when it is presented in due form; in others he is clothed with a quasi judicial power or discretion; and in others rules are prescribed for his guidance. This unsatisfactory condition of things results from the fact that there has been no judicial interpretation of the law binding on the Governors and courts of the several States. Both of the writers who have been referred to reach the conclusion, which is supported by the weight of authority, that it is the duty of a Governor to obey a requisition made out in the proper form. And the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of Kentucky against Gov. Dennison, emphatically declared that this was the true construction of the law. But the same court held that there was no power in the Federal Government to compel the Executive of a State to perform this duty. Moreover, what it said concerning the Executive obligation was in the nature of an obiter dictum, and hence not binding as an authority. Neither of the writers cited point out any satisfactory remedy for the existing evils; but it would seem that the act of Congress might be so amended as to overcome the worst of the difficulties, and afford a law uniform in its operation.

A BROKEN NEW-JERSEY RING.

Last Saturday ten men in Warren County, New-Jersey, were sentenced to pay various fines, and to various terms of imprisonment, for their participation in frauds upon the county. Considering that Jersey justice, of which we hear much, is severe and unrelenting, these sentences seem light in comparison with the crimes of the convicts. To be sure, some of the thieves are sent to prison for two or four years each on several separate indictments. But, by an ingenious evasion of the requirements of law, the sentences begin at the same time, so that the criminal serves but one term. It is likely that the previous good standing of these conspirators may have had a subtle influence in tempering the severity of their punishment. It was thought a great thing in Warren County, New-Jersey, that seventeen public officials, all of the foremost social rank in the community, and some of them prominent in honorable vocations, should be indicted and actually put on trial. The honest simple-hearted folk of Warren County held their breath when these eminent persons were arraigned at the bar as common felons. So much of the proceedings against them was thought a most disgraceful and terrible retribution. And so it came to pass, perhaps, that men who were convicted of malfeasance, conspiracy, and forgery got off with sentences of imprisonment varying from four years in the State Prison to six months in the County Jail.

Warren County, New-Jersey, is made up of small agricultural communities. The people are old-fashioned, conservative, and unversed in the dark ways of city politicians. The county is so strongly Democratic that a nomination by that party is as good as an election. For the past ten or twelve years the management of county affairs has been in the hands of a clique, or ring, the members of which have been able to control the nominations of their party and compass their election and re-election. The Board of Chosen Freeholders, which corresponds to a New-York Board of County Supervisors, has the power to levy taxes, assess rates, vote money, &c. The Warren County Freeholders, aided and abetted by their Director, Clerk, County Collector, Attorney, and some others, combined to steal the public funds. The Collector is authorized by law to borrow money during the Summer and Autumn in anticipation of the taxes collectible in December. Usually, the notes which he gives out are negotiated at a bank, but in Warren County the Collector borrowed of his particular friends, who were paid the highest rates of interest. When these notes are called in and paid they are canceled and filed away as vouchers. Of course, a check is kept on the Collector, and no misuse of the notes, or their avails, could be made without the connivance of some of the Freeholders. This connivance was arranged, and Dr. Mattison, Clerk of the board, with the knowledge of his confederates, erased the cancellations on the notes, changed the names of the original holders to some fictitious names resembling them, reissued them, and the avails of these twice-used notes were divided among the conspirators. Of course, innumerable alterations of records and fraudulent entries were needed to conceal these thefts. But the thieves were apparently equal to any emergency.

Other frauds were easily fabricated when the work of pillage was once begun. Orders on the County Treasury were "doctored" so that $30 would be raised to $300, and $1,000 would be made to read $2,000. The extent of this conspiracy may be estimated when the fact is apparent that nearly thirty persons must have been concerned in it, that it has been in existence ten or twelve years, and that over $100,000 has been stolen in comparatively small sums from the not over-rich Treasury of Warren County. The amount is large when one considers the resources of the rural community from which it was stolen. And the thefts are bold, considering that they were perpetrated upon a collection of small towns and villages, the people of which would naturally be supposed ready to discuss their own and their neighbors' affairs with great freedom. One man, a public-spirited and resolute citizen, Caleb Swayze, of Hope Village, declared that something was wrong when the county expenses, so-called, rose from $25,000 a year to $75,000, and that he would probe this hidden secret if he were elected to the Board of Chosen Freeholders. Though a stanch Republican, he was elected from a strong Democratic district. Swayze made good his promise, and his entry into the board was the signal for the downfall of the thieving ring. Ten have been convicted and sentenced. Others are yet to be tried, and a search for additional frauds is now being prosecuted.

The stolen money does not seem to have been kept by any of the robbers. Some of it was spent in "working" elections, and one highly reputable personage, 60 years of age, was an associate of abandoned women, though he maintained a fair exterior in Warren County. One of these estimable persons was an elder in a church, and, during the trying ordeal of his sentence, he was supported by his Pastor. This man, who was County Collector, was a bank Director, Guardian, Executor, and Trustee of several estates, nearly 60 years old, and once highly respected. Such a fall as his shocks all our ideas of reputability. He is spoken of as the only man who leaves his family well provided for when he goes to prison. The presiding Judge, in his remarks on passing sentence, said that such crimes as these were not uncommon in crowded cities, but that it was appalling to discover them in an agricultural community. It is evident that rural life is not specially favorable to robust development of the virtues. Villagers will lie and cheat and betray their trusts, as well as dwellers in cities. If the people of Warren County, New-Jersey, had not neglected their county affairs, they never would have been so robbed as they have been.

COLLEGE SCHOLARSHIPS.

President Eliot, of Harvard University, has just rendered a valuable service to the cause of liberal education by his efforts to demonstrate whether a well-guarded system of scholarships in American colleges is for the public good. The first scholarship in Harvard College was established in 1852, and so rapidly has the number increased that that there are now 112, of which 107 are available. Thirty-two new scholarships have been founded in the past ten years. The future increase of the number is likely to be as marked, if not more rapid; for scarcely a year passes without additions being made. The annual payments to students from these funds amount to about $25,000, while the aggregate paid from 1852 to 1878, inclusive, reaches $275,634. The money thus distributed is the income of gifts made to the university by liberal men and women, who have wisely thought that they could do much good by putting a college education within the reach of those who would otherwise be without the means of getting it. The scholarships are awarded by the corporation, and, as a rule, to those students who are needy, worthy, and rank high as scholars. About twenty-five students in each class receive every year a scholarship, yielding an income varying from $40 to $250, the average amount being a little less than $250. So completely do these scholarships serve the purpose for which they were intended that, as announced in the latest catalogue, "good scholars of high character but slender means are seldom or never obliged to leave college for want of money."

The wise administration of these trusts has imposed upon the college authorities a responsibility which has become graver year by year with the rapid multiplication of the scholarships. The two chief objects of scholarships are, as President Eliot points out, to contribute, in the first place, to the welfare of the students themselves, by increasing their powers and their capacity for happiness, and, secondly, to the good of the community, by enabling scholars thus trained to repay to the public in services what they received in education. Whether either or both of these ends have been attained is a question on which no attempt has been made till now to throw any light by direct evidence. It has been a matter of speculation whether in any considerable number of cases accepting a scholarship has detracted from the self-respect and independence of the student by putting him in the position of a receiver of charity; or whether the amount and kind of study necessary to gain one has been harmful to the applicant; or whether habits of extravagance and other objectionable tendencies have been encouraged by putting this additional source of income within the reach of students who are in no need of it. On the other hand, whether any material advantage is gained by the public from college scholarships depends upon the services and influence of those who have been educated by their instrumentality. As no record of the lives of these students after graduation has been kept by the college authorities, there has been no satisfactory evidence to show what fruits the scholarship system has borne to the public.

With the view of determining these and other questions, President Eliot recently addressed to every person who had received a scholarship while at Harvard inquiries intended to secure information concerning the training such persons received after leaving college; the employment they have had, the services they have rendered the community as teachers, writers, ministers, lawyers, physicians, or otherwise; the means of influence they now command; what measure of health they have enjoyed; how they have prospered in life; and what influence the scholarships have had upon their careers. Information on these points has been obtained concerning 237 of the 280 persons who received scholarships from 1853 to 1872. Of the 280, 28 are dead, and nothing is known of 8. Of the rest, 87 became lawyers, 63 teachers, 32 ministers, 19 physicians, 6 journalists, 3 librarians, 1 a civil engineer, and 26 engaged in mercantile pursuits. From these occupations it will be seen that the holders of scholarships have chiefly joined the ranks of those who exert great influence in the community. The letters received by President Eliot, in reply to his inquiries, give, as he says, "a very strong impression of the general respectability, usefulness, and worth of the writers as a body." They almost unanimously express a sense of obligation for a great benefit enjoyed, and a belief that the scholarships were good for the writers, and are useful to the college and the public. Contrary conclusions were reached by only five writers, of whom two expressed dissatisfaction with their own post-collegiate careers, one testified that the scholarship system engenders a slavish studying for rank, another found the acceptance of such aid a humiliation, the memory of which is still bitter, and a fifth doubted whether liberal education itself be an advantage, since it opens the eyes to the corruption of society and the nation. Most of the letters show conclusively that the scholarships were a great pecuniary advantage to the recipients, and that without them many of the writers could not have gone through Harvard or any other college. While nearly all of those who received scholarships have shown a deep sense of obligation and responsibility to the college and the public, their testimony is general that the acceptance of the aid did not impair their self-respect or exert any other unfavorable influence upon their characters and lives. They regarded a scholarship as an honorable prize to be won, an incentive to exertion, and a just reward of fidelity—not as an unearned gratuity or charitable donation.

As the first holders of the Harvard scholarships have not yet reached the age of 50 years, while the majority of those who received them are still under 33, it is obviously too soon yet to expect a complete exhibition of the fruits of the system. The oldest scholarship men have many years of useful work before them, while the younger have not reached their prime. But the facts already gathered show unmistakably certain benefits which accrue to individuals, the college, and the public from these endowments; and these benefits are neither hypothetical nor future, but have been already realized in actual lives. The conclusion which President Eliot reaches after a survey of the letters received from those who held scholarships is, that "the record of their honorable and useful lives already shows, although still short and incomplete, that scholarship endowments yield a sure and rich return in services rendered to the public." By endeavoring to collect and preserve the facts concerning the first twenty years of its scholarship administration, Harvard University has taken another important step in the right direction. It is the intention to continue the inquiries at proper intervals, and to secure evidence which in time will afford a basis for sound conclusions on the whole subject. This good example may well be followed by other colleges having like endowments. The field of inquiry may thus be materially enlarged, and statistics more valuable than the experience of one institution can afford may be obtained for throwing light on this important feature of college administration.

A few days since a man died in West Tenth-street, this City, of a malady known as "painters' colic." This disease in reality is a form of chronic poisoning from the absorption of lead through the lungs, the skin, and the saliva, and which too frequently proves fatal in its effects. Well-marked symptoms of this "colic" often show themselves where they might be least expected to occur. Cases are on record in which colic and paralysis have occurred in persons who had done no more than sleep in newly-painted rooms. One medical work mentions a patient, a servant at a public house, in whom lead-poisoning was brought on by frequently handling and cleaning pewter pots. A celebrated physician of Edinburgh had among his patients a retired military officer who, after working at oil-painting for some time in a studio, eight feet square, with a large stove in it, was attacked with what is known as "wrist drop"—the most marked symptom of lead poisoning—and soon after with paralysis in both legs. Paralysis of the neck has been known to follow the use of a hair-dye containing litharge. Meat and vegetables cooked or kept in newly-glazed vessels have actually proved fatal. At Claremont, during the residence there of the ex-royal family of France, 13 out of 38 members of the household suffered so severely from lead-poisoning that the nails of their toes and fingers actually acquired a bluish discoloration. Under the ordinary conditions of life, the chances of lead-poisoning are many and almost ubiquitous. Our houses are painted with lead, our water comes through lead pipes, our food is cooked or kept in glazed vessels, our tea, chocolate, and many other articles of domestic use are wrapped up in lead paper and tin-foil, and tea which has been "steeped" in a Britannia metal tea-pot is often tainted with the poison. Most people know that the effects of lead are extremely variable; but we cannot be too cautious, and certainly prevention is better than cure any time. There are certain obvious precautions which ought to be adopted in every household, and where there is the slightest chance for lead-poisoning, skilled medical advice cannot be called for too soon.

Nevada has, or thinks she has, a scientific mystery, which has caused considerable commotion in and about Mill City. It consists in a perfectly formed petrified hand, which belonged apparently to a boy of 14 or thereabout. The hand is open, and the fingers are slightly bent toward the palm, on which the thumb rests. While the palm, thumb, and fingers are complete, the back of the hand seems to have been crushed or decomposed before petrifying. It was discovered at the sulphur beds near the city by a man shoveling crude sulphur into the refining retort, and is presumed to have been buried in the sulphur bank for ages. The question is, What species of man had this particular hand? Scientists who have examined it say it is not the hand of an Indian, an African, a Caucasian, a Malay, a Mongolian, or of any other recognized race. They think it may lead to important results; perhaps to the revelation of a new order of human beings. For the present, the petrifaction is in a private cabinet, where it has been seen and examined by a great many persons. It is soon to be sent East, we believe, for further and abler investigation. Should it prove anything like what it is thought to be, it would be a ribbon in the cap of Nevada. The relic may have been part of the boy who is father to the man; or of the boy who stood on the burning deck; or of the youth who fired the Ephesian dome; or who could not tell a lie; or who was to fortune and to fame unknown. It may have belonged to the first man, or the last man; or, worse still, to no man at all.

The stock of petroleum in tanks in the oil region of Pennsylvania is estimated at 4,500,000 barrels. But a great deal of it has been so long in tank that a deduction for sediment and evaporation should be made of at least 1,000,000 barrels. Petroleum, or rock-oil, or naphtha, or liquid bitumen, has been so largely obtained in this country within the past 20 years that many persons have come to regard it as an American and native production. It is indigenous, however, to various parts of the globe, and was known to the ancients. Zacynthus, now Zante, one of the Ionian Islands, was one of the localities where it was found, and inasmuch as Herodotus refers to it, the spring must have been flowing for more than 2,000 years; and Dioscorides, who lived in the first century, says that it was used as a substitute for oil in Agrigentum, (Sicily;) so that in burning petroleum we are simply following a habit of remote antiquity. It is found in Japan, Burmah, Persia, on the shores of the Caspian Sea, in Siberia, Italy, and France, as well as here; but the American yield is six or seven times greater than the yield of all the rest of the world combined. Some of the sources of naphtha in the present oil region were known to the aboriginals, but the first borings for it were in 1859. In that year 82,000 barrels—reckoned at 43 gallons each—were obtained; in 1861, 2,000,000 barrels; since when it has, as a rule, increased from year to year. In 1872, the total product of the United States was nearly 7,000,000 barrels, and the export about 3,000,000. The general opinion of geologists that petroleum is generated by decomposition of both vegetable and mineral substances seems to be corroborated by the latest investigations.

While various substantial arguments have been offered for cremation, and while many thoughtful persons advocate it, it has not ceased to be very unpopular in this country; abundance of room, and comparative cheapness of ground for interment, rendering the burning of bodies here a matter of taste instead of a question of economy. In Europe, however, from the cost of funerals and the scarcity of space for graves, cremation is steadily growing into favor. Last year the furnace in Milan consumed 27 corpses, at a cost of 3 lire 5 soldi—about 75 cents each. In some places in Germany cremation has been made optional, and Protestant clergymen have prepared a form of service appropriate thereto. Considerable opposition is still felt toward the classic custom in England; but a cremation society is now building a furnace near London. Switzerland has rendered the burning of corpses legal and Holland has an organization, with ample capital, to which Professors, scholars, artists, and theologians belong. Another reason why cremation is disliked in the United States is the unpleasant notoriety it causes. The public must still remember the columns on columns published in the newspapers about the burning of Baron de Palm, the wife of Benn Pitman, the Cincinnati phonographer, and the interminable idle talk it occasioned. Le Moyne's furnace, at Washington, Penn., where the burning took place, is about to be demolished, it is said, for want of patronage.

The report of the Department of Agriculture for last year, lately published, may be said to be encouraging to farmers and the community at large. The yield of wheat is, very strangely, omitted, owing, doubtless, to the non-receipt of full returns. Corn shows well. Last year 51,000,000 acres were planted, less by 300,000 acres than the year previous; yet the product evinces, probably on account of improved methods of tillage, an increase of 30,000,000 bushels. Barley augmented from 15,000,000 bushels in 1870 to 42,000,000 bushels last year, and of this California alone had 650,000 acres in this grain. Rye is unimportant among American cereals, yielding only about 16,000,000 bushels. The oat crop was the largest the country has ever known. It is pleasant to see that there is a gradual increase in the production of cereals in the South. The need of self-sustainment seems to be more impressed than formerly on that section, and it is likely to be attended with good results. The South is now raising a fair supply of wheat, corn, rye, oats, and barley, instead of devoting nearly all the land, as hitherto, to cotton and tobacco. Potatoes have fallen off—the crop of last year being 124,000,000, against 170,000,000 bushels the year previous, in consequence of drought, extreme heat, and insects. The grape suffered exceedingly from a variety of causes, and the crop was generally unprofitable. Tobacco flourished, and the most productive States report an increase.

An opinion has recently arisen in England, even among his admirers, that Byron mischose his vocation; that, notwithstanding his poetical genius and his fine poetical productions, his great strength lay in prose. Many critical Britons say that it is only within a few years that people have begun to discover that the gloomy and cynical bard was, as he proclaimed himself, really the most unromantic of human beings. While the sentimental young women of a past generation imagined the handsome poet scowling at fortune, and curling his lip in scorn at the hollowness and sordidness of the world, he was laughing in Italy like Momus, and thoroughly enjoying himself, though in a rather coarse fashion. He never discovered until after he had written "Beppo" that he was a humorist, which he proved beyond question in his exceedingly sarcastic, wise, and witty "Don Juan." Removed from his Oriental wrappings and pictorial melancholy in ink, he was a very honest, common-sensible fellow, who particularly hated cant and humbug, including much of the purely literary kind in which he professionally indulged. The eloquence, pathos, wild passion, æsthetic bitterness, and picturesque despair which run through "Harold," "Manfred," "The Corsair," and "The Giaour," were but phases of his composing mind. Toward the close of his striking career, he was developing the best that was in him—humor, wit, and representation of humanity. Had he lived 15 or 20 years longer, he would, it is thought, have wholly relinquished poetry and high-colored fiction for sober fact, and have become, probably, a novelist of the Henry Fielding school.

GENERAL NOTES.

The dividends payable in Boston in February aggregate $2,567,967.

The Des Moines (Iowa) Register shows that the farmers rule Iowa. They rule it well.

Hack fares have come down in Hartford. Passage to or from a train is given for 25 cents.

The State Auditor of Missouri advocates an income tax by the State on all amounts over $2,000.

The Dover (Del.) Sentinel claims that it was Senator Saulsbury who first discovered the "nigger."

San Francisco journals report that President Hayes has determined to visit California as soon as Congress adjourns.

Southern journals charge that Congressman Bragg, of Wisconsin, does not pay due regard to his own party's interests.

The Charleston (S. C.) News pleasantly says that Gen. Bragg, of Wisconsin, made an ass of himself in the House on Wednesday.

Both Houses of the Legislature of Colorado have passed a bill providing penalties for the defacement of natural scenery by advertisements.

The Democratic State Committee of Alabama has voted, after an animated discussion, that it would be unwise and inexpedient to repeal the State registration laws.

The late Mrs. Mary A. Holden, an aged resident of Providence, R. I., whose whole life was distinguished for charitable deeds, bequeathed $6,500 for benevolent objects.

A Boston man, who has tried it, says: "The minuet, as it is presented at Music Hall, isn't so very hard. Any awfully lazy person, who knows the figures of the lancers, can do it."

The Hartford Club gave Gen. Alfred H. Terry a dinner and reception at their rooms last Thursday. Gov. Andrews, Gen. Hawley, Charles Dudley Warner, and other gentlemen being present.

Chairman A. M. Jones, of the Illinois Republican State Committee, has been presented with a silver tea service of a dozen pieces by his political friends in different parts of the State.

A correspondent of the Des Moines Register anxiously inquires if it is true that there is any virtue in hanging up a horse-shoe for good luck. As if there could be any doubt on that subject.

The Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle says that if the Northern Democrats think they can get along by themselves, let them try the experiment. Its article is appropriately entitled "Bragg and Bluster."

Cazenovia Seminary, after an existence of over half a century, is oppressed by a debt of about $42,000, and a meeting of its friends is to be held on Wednesday to see if the debt can be paid or whether the school shall be abandoned.

A Dayton correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette writes that a person who was convicted of fraudulently obtaining pension papers, and sentenced to jail and to pay a fine, is successfully continuing his business as a pension agent in the county jail.

The Republicans elected their candidate for Senator at the special election in the Twenty-third District of Wisconsin, to fill a vacancy caused by death. They also carried it in the Fall, but usually, heretofore, it has been Democratic by a large majority.

A Maine journal makes a little correction, as follows: "We made our correspondent say, 'Steaming stews of bivalves, rum cakes, pies, and toasts too numerous to mention.' He said, 'Steaming stews, and bivalves raw, cakes, pies, and tarts too numerous to mention.'"

There was an exhibition of tableaux in Fond du Lac, Wis., and the small boy was present. A scene was presented—"The Execution of Mary, Queen of Scots"—Mary kneeling, with her head on the block, the executioner standing with uplifted axe poised for the death-blow amid breathless silence. Suddenly, in a loud whisper, the small boy exclaimed: "Pa, why don't he chop?"

The Charleston (S. C.) News of Friday says: "There is no

THE WINTER IN ENGLAND.

FASHION IN LONDON AND BRIGHTON.

SKATING IN THE LONDON PARKS—THE DRIVE AT BRIGHTON-BY-THE-SEA — BEACONSFIELD'S POWER—LABOUCHERE AND WYBROW ROBERTSON.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LONDON, Saturday, Jan. 11, 1879.

The frost has returned. London has brought out its skates again. The most popular sheet of water is the eight or ten acres of ornamental lake in Regent's Park. There were 20,000 upon it yesterday. Last night there was skating by torchlight on the Serpentine. "By electric light," said one of the cockney Arab attendants; "'ere y'ar, Sir; put on yer irons by the heclectric light." His lantern was a farthing candle, but he posed it with as much respect as if Edison himself had made it. They are a curious happy-go-lucky set of men and boys, these nomads of the great city. They can turn their hands to anything, from pitch and toss to manslaughter, from picking and stealing to honesty. One day behind a costermonger's barrow, the next "portering it" at a market, they go through all phases of street life, hawking, "dog-fancying," tending a crossing, and, in Winter, sweeping the ice on pools and lakes, helping skaters on with their skates, letting skates on hire, providing torches, and generally taking possession of the public ponds and levying tolls thereon. They are quite a feature in the parks, at Hampstead, Hendon, and in the suburbs, where King Frost has once more set up his throne. Great blocks of ice are floating up and down the Thames at London Bridge, considerably interfering with the navigation of small craft.

LONDON-BY-THE-SEA.

It is the Brighton Winter season. Lucky Brighton, which contrives to have so many seasons! Luckier still, this city by the sea, which always finds patrons, no matter how dull trade may be, no matter what other city may be steeped to the lips in poverty. There will, I suppose, always be rich people enough to keep Brighton going, and men and women of fashion to make King's road sprightly, and local society gay. Wherever riches and fashion foregather there will art and literature, and the hangers-on of society, also be found. Let us take our place on the steps of a famous hotel on the fashionable drive, facing the sea, and count up the notabilities who are here, and as you will find me mentioning actors and others supposed to be daily and nightly engaged in the exercise of their profession, you will remember that Brighton is only an hour and a quarter's distance from the metropolis. There are many Londoners who live here, scores who go down regularly from Saturday to Monday, and thousands who are continually running up and down. Mr. George Lewis, of legal fame, is here, the solicitor who has just helped Labouchere to lay Wybrow Robertson in the dust. Mr. Lewis is a slim, young-looking man for one who has made so great a name among the lawyers of London. The pretty, foreign-looking lady on his arm is his wife, and the stalwart-looking fellow who is smiling and saluting him with his riding whip is Edmund Yates, who is bestriding a sturdy, old-fashioned English cob. Mr. Yates has gone to live near Lewis, in Portland-place, the noblest residential street in London, shut in from Regent-street by the Langham Hotel, from Regent's Park by an inclosure which Yates should make an effort to have opened to the public and a fountain placed in the centre. A man with a pen in his hand can do a great deal on both sides of the Atlantic. It was John Hollingshead or Andrew Halliday who induced the authorities to light Primrose Hill. If it was Hollingshead, it is in the ordinary course of things that he should be the father of the electric light in London. But to return to this procession of men and women of distinction riding, driving, and walking along King's road, in which Thackeray delighted. Mr. Lionel Lawson, the chief proprietor of the Telegraph, drives past us, beaming with health, his ambition to be one of the richest of England's commoners becoming more and more possible every day. They say he made £1,000,000 in Turks the day the British protectorate was announced. Hold! Here's a sight for Brighton. A spider-wheeled American carriage, with a pair of horses, between hacks and trotters. It is a novelty here, and looks strange among the heavy vehicles of the English. The driver is Mr. Charles Wyndham of Criterion and "Pink Dominos" fame. Let us pull him up and ask whether he is really going to produce "Lemons." "No," he says. "What then!" He laughs and says "Wait and see, mon ami." It is not necessary. We happen to know. The wary and clever Wyndham cannot keep everybody's secret. The new comedy will be Bronson Howard's "Hurricanes." recast, rewritten, and possibly renamed. The adaptor of "Les Fourchambault" is at work on it now. Lord Ronald Gower walks by. He is a sculptor. He bought Filde's first important picture, "Lovers in a Boat on the Thames." Several members of the Opera Comique Company are in the parade. "H. M. S. Pinafore" is taking a rest. Sergeant Ballantyne, who sacrificed a judgeship to Bohemia, strolls leisurely by, and the Duke of Beaufort smokes his cigar and returns some old friend's greeting with a genial smile. Mr. Arthur Cecil, of the Prince of Wales's, (who delighted Wilkie Collins a year or two ago by his extraordinary performance of the doctor in "Miss Gwilt,") passes us on his way to the train, and half a dozen other theatrical artists are on their way back to the fogs and footlights of the metropolis. Last season Brighton was thick with the "salt of the earth." Gen. Grant was here, the Duchess of St. Albans, (she was accompanied by her friend Mrs. Hicks;) Lady Diana Huddlestone, Lady Eastlake, Lord Beaconsfield, Count Beust, Lady Northbrook, Count Schouvaloff, and a host of other "eminences." We are tame this season, or the cold weather keeps the nobility indoors. I have never seen Carlyle at Brighton. He passed me the other day at Chelsea close by his modest-looking house. They tell me he takes exercise three times a day regularly—on foot in the morning and evening, in a carriage in the middle of the day. He looks very old and grizzly. The portrait of him, recently done by Whistler, in black and white, is full of truth and character. The Chelsea people tell me that Carlyle dislikes Americans, he has been so pestered with "lion hunters" from the United States. It was not an American, however, who stopped him the other morning on the embankment near Chelsea Bridge. "Mr. Carlyle, I believe," said the stranger, obstructing the great man. "Yes, Sir," said he. "I want to make your acquaintance, Mr. Carlyle," said the stranger. "I never make acquaintances in the street," answered Carlyle, continuing his walk. The stranger was a Scotchman. The other Scotchman was "too canny for him." Those who profess to know what Mr. Carlyle is doing, say he is not writing his life, nor is Mr. Moncure D. Conway. Froude and Ruskin are Carlyle's principal visitors. He "keeps very little company," as they say in England.

ILLNESS OF THE PREMIER.

The other day Mr. Gladstone was prevented, through a cold and sense of severe indisposition, from presiding at the annual "rent audit" of the Hawarden and Arton estates. The fact was mentioned in the papers and there an end. Mr. Bright had such a bad cold that he had to excuse himself from attending the funeral of a dear friend. Duly recorded in the press and passed. But Lord Beaconsfield gets an attack of the gout and England trembles, one portion of it with the hope that he will die, the greater part with the fear that he may—Mr. Forster, in a moment of excitement at Bradford, half suggesting that it would be a good thing for the country if the Premier's time had come. But Mr. Forster may be excused for a certain amount of anger, seeing that under great pressure his apparent victory over the Bradford caucus is only a "seeming" triumph. He has practically accepted the local arrangement, and "the caucus" (the newest thing from America) is an acknowledged power among English Liberals. Birmingham, I believe, was the first to introduce it here. Bradford has made the most noise about it, because Mr. Forster put his lance in rest and tilted against it. So, likewise, did Don Quixote against the windmills. Over a quarter of a century ago it was believed in well-informed circles that Mr. Disraeli suffered from heart disease and might die at any moment. Lord Lytton, in "My Novel," is supposed to have had this idea in his mind when he drew Audley Egerton as a statesman and orator who never rose to speak in the House of Commons without expecting to fall down dead. If Disraeli did not inspire this sketch, the story of Lytton's hero was fashered upon Disraeli. But Mr. Disraeli has caught the gout with his other aristocratic annexations, and as this is a disease which they say can bear no rivals in the same body, but vanquishes all other ailments and retains possession of the victim itself, the Premier has thus, possibly, been spared to old age and fame. Though he has told us that "the history of heroes is the history of youth," he would, as a young man only, have cut but a sorry figure in its pages. A fop, a juvenile cynic, (which is the worst type of cynic,) a hifalutin orator, the mouthpiece, by and by, of an unsuccessful and impracticable party, he would have gone down to posterity as an eccentric political failure, had not age ripened him and mellowed him and taken the rough edge off him as it does off port wine. He had to wait all his life for the fruition of his hopes, and in the sere and yellow leaf came to him fame, fortune, power. Dying young, he would have been nobody. Living to be old, he will go down to his grave the greatest statesman of modern days. If he went now he would quit the scene in the zenith of his prosperity, in the height of his greatness, the one bright particular star of the political firmament. The momentary fear that he was seriously sick went through the land like a thrill. The reflection that he cannot have many years to live set thousands wondering what we shall do without him. Who will protect India when he is gone? Who will fight foreign diplomatists with their own weapons when he is no more? Who will take up the Czar's gage of battle and fling it in his teeth when he lies cold in his stately tomb? Of course it will be cold and stately, like the man; and yet I have heard he has a heart as tender as most men. You would never think it to look at him. He was a most devoted husband. And now there is a talk of his retiring. He would have done so, it is said, three years ago had it not been for the Eastern question cropping up. But supposing he retired, his successor would have the benefit of his advice. If he died, where would England be? At any rate where would the Conservative Party be? I am not exaggerating the position which Lord Beaconsfield has filled in the public mind during the last few days. What a career the famous diplomatist has had! He is the only Prime Minister who was not educated at a public school. He first became known as a writer of fiction. The son of a Jew, privately educated and connected with the press, to become the head of the aristocratic party of England! A prophet who had predicted it would have been laughed at. He stepped down from a desk in an office, and walked up to the highest post a Britisher can hold. It was a long walk, truly. He was a good many years at it. But when he began to get up the hill he had some singular triumphs by the way. His story does not require to be embellished. It should be told plainly. The narrative is sufficiently romantic in itself. Monte Cristo is nowhere compared with Benjamin Disraeli. After all, the great French hero was only a Bohemian, with a gold mine at his back. The Disraelian Monte Cristo is an Earl, a Duke, or what he will, with a nation at his back, an empire at his feet, an army of heroes at his command, the grandest fleet that ever swam at his bidding. He can make a Bishop with a stroke of his pen. Does he wish to raise a commoner to the peerage, he has but to say him nay! Would he set the armies of the earth on the war path, his ministry would not deny him the pleasure. There is nothing he cannot do except change the weather at will, throw off the gout, and live a year or two beyond the time allotted to him. Let us think at random of a few of the things this wonderful English Jew boy has done since he came to man's estate and held the reins of power. He made his wife a Countess. He created an Irish Dukedom. He nominated the Primate of England. He has made Judges and Lord Chancellors, raised parsons to Bishops, and he was not above stooping down to a clever civil service clerk and raising him to a front rank. He made Smith, the newsdealer, First Lord of the Admiralty. He has chosen two rulers of India and made several Viceroys of Ireland. He sent a Princess to start a royal court for Canada. He means to give Ireland a royal Viceroy. He made the Queen an Empress, himself an Earl, and the Opposition complain that he has done more—turned the constitutional government of England into a personal dictatorship. They do him an injustice there. He is too wise for that. He knows exactly how much the people of England will stand. No man is better acquainted with the character and feelings of the English. Besides, he is a statesman. The difference between Gladstone and Disraeli seems to be that the one is a politician, the other a statesman; the one a sawyer of the multitude, the other a ruler of men. Mark Lemon once said to one of Disraeli's colleagues, "I always felt that he is so very wise." A member of Parliament who knows Lord Beaconsfield intimately said of him something similar: "You always feel that he knows the question you are talking of so much more thoroughly than you do, and that his course is sure to be the best in the end." Only Lord Palmerston, in our time, held such complete control over the House of Commons. No man knows it so thoroughly—its temper, its prejudices, its weaknesses, its strength. Who, but a statesman could ever have reconstructed the Conservative Party and educated it up to the liberal requirements of the age? Who, but a man of consummate administrative skill could have led them, disciplined them? Why did they obey him? Because he never demanded their acquiescence in his plans without explaining them. He never, as his rival did, lost his temper with his party. He studied the men he had to lead. He was patient with them. He was never in a hurry. He could always wait. Not "for a day, a month, a year," as the popular song has it; but for years and years. He made the Conservative Opposition powerful; he has made a Conservative Government supreme. Whenever Lord Beaconsfield rests from his labors, you will see men of all parties and newspapers of every political hue vieing with each other to do honor to his memory.

"HUNTED DOWN."

Wybrow Robertson could no longer stand the attacks of Labouchere and Truth. He brought an action for $25,000 damages. The trial lasted seven days. At the end the jury gave a verdict for Labouchere, and said they found Robertson guilty of dishonesty. Robertson had leave to move for a new trial. He, of course, resigned his appointment at the Aquarium. Yates and the World had been quiet during the trial. Indeed, they had let Robertson alone. The suit over, the World stated that Robertson had been called upon to resign, and was not to be allowed to set foot in the Aquarium again. Poor Robertson, literally hunted down and worried by Labouchere, drags Yates up at Bow-Street for a criminal libel, inasmuch as his resignation was voluntary, and he goes to the Aquarium in a friendly way every day. The case was heard yesterday before the Bow-Street magistrate. Robertson looked ill and excited. Yates went up to him and shook his hand the moment he appeared in court. "Why will you persecute me?" says Robertson, quietly. "My dear fellow, I'm sorry for you," answered Yates, who had been persecuted him, "and I have only said what I believed to be true, and I said nothing until the trial was over." On the whole, Yates has not been unkind to Robertson, who no doubt thought he had secured an opportunity to reopen his case at the bar of public opinion, and score off the World. He did not. George Lewis pinned him to the wall, and brought out the worst features of the old trial. Robertson only gave Lewis a new opportunity to hit him again for his client, Labouchere. The case is reported at the length of several columns in the dailies, whose editors profess to look down upon gossip and scandal. It was only worth a paragraph, seeing how recently the whole story had been told, but the public is delighted to have such men as Yates and Lewis and Labouchere and Ballantyne in court, and the dailies on such occasions like what the public likes. Sergeant Ballantyne used to dye his hair, I was nearly brought up once for contempt of court for suggesting that "the Claimant" did,) but yesterday he appeared in court all white and aged. People hardly knew him. Mr. Robertson was induced by the magistrate to withdraw the summons; and Robertson wishes it to be understood that he denies the dishonesty recorded against him by Truth and a jury, and means to prove his innocence when he gets leave to have a new trial, on which he has important fresh evidence to offer. Meanwhile, his position is a pitiable one, anyhow.

MURDERED AT SEA.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Jan. 26.—The bark Wibona arrived here to-day from Liverpool. Her chief mate was murdered at sea

COMMERS AT THE ARION.

A TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY.

THE SONGS WHICH WERE SUNG AND THE BEER WHICH WAS CONSUMED—PRINCE CARNIVAL IN A MERRY MOOD—A GLASS FOR THE ÆSTHETIC.

Prince Carnival held high wassail at the Arion Club-house, No. 19 St. Mark's-place, last evening. The Prince was personally in his most inimitable humor, having presided at a revel on the previous night, at which some distinguished guests, among them Mr. Schumacher, the German Consul-General; William Steinway, Oswald Ottendorfer, R. Lexow, Emil Hollender, and ex-Gov. Salomon were present, and the new President of the Arion Society, Mr. F. Beringer, who played the part of Prince Carnival last evening, was inaugurated with fitting ceremonial, and the usual consumption of lager beer. The result of the festivities of the preceding night was that the Prince was in his liveliest humor at the annual "commers," which was celebrated last night, and did the honors of the "25 jähriges jubilæum"—or twenty-fifth annual jubilee—with an abandon that elicited peals of laughter. In the first instance, being of somewhat fantastic fancy, the Prince had caused the portico of the club-house to be transformed into a perfect wilderness of ivy and vines, wreathing the columns, overrunning lamps and cornices, and finally festooning the whole front from story to story, by way of producing a corner in amilax for the rest of the season. The only reason the Prince was able to give for this extraordinary outlay, when questioned by his jolly prime ministers, was that "fun evergreens," and smilax and ivy its proper symbols. But this was not all. Within the spacious hall on the second floor, where the revelers were marshaled, the Prince had expended his humor in various curious devices. There were six window curtains upon which were recounted the origin and progress of the Arion Society. On the first, at the left of the hall as his subjects entered, stood a bearded old lady in night-cap, with a baby in her arms. Such was the birth of Arion 25 years ago, and it was noticeable that the features of the old woman bore a curious resemblance to those of the first President of the society. The remaining pictures simply reported various stages of progress. In one, a huge cap, ornamented with sundry bells—the emblem of Arion—appeared descending, without hands, upon a diminutive figure of the old woman depicted upon the first curtain; and upon the last of the six appeared sundry winged heads of members of the society hovering about a huge tankard overflowing with foam. Lastly, at the left, a fool's tribune had been erected, with Arion (the German Neptune) above it riding upon a double-headed fish, preceded by a shield bearing the motto in German, "Honor to whom honor is due." The Prince Carnival himself, with his Prime Ministers, six on either hand, entered at 5 P. M., at the head of a procession, preceded by the master of ceremonies, bearing a fool's cap upon a walking stick, and followed by the jester, who carried an old broom above his head as the emblem of the night. Then long tables branched down from the throne at the rear of the hall. In a cosy nook in one corner was a fountain, or something of that sort, from which fell a perennial spray of an amber-colored liquid.

"And now, my thirsty subjects," said the Prince, gravely, while a murmur of approbation greeted his words, and the band upon his right created an intolerable din, "drink all of ye to the twenty-fifth annual jubilee of the Männer-Gesang-Verein Arion." With these words the Prince and his staff, couple of his Prime Ministers, the Prince lifted a huge stoneware beaker, capable of containing a gallon of lager, to his lips and took a deep draught, and the whole 300 of his subjects did the same. During this ceremony there was a silence which was broken only by the screaming of the violin and the hoarse groans of the violoncello, and when, with an expression of supreme satisfaction, his Royal Highness deposited the beaker upon the desk before him, the faithful 300 clapped their hands and commenced to sing the jubilee celebrating the virtues of Mayerhofer, and Adams, the tenor, and Bergmann, and Damrosch, and other famous musicians:

"Auf, auf, ergreifet den Pokal
Des hohen Tag's bewusst
Dem Jubelknaben allzumal
Ein 'Hoch' aus voller Brust!"

They sang and clapped their hands in concert, and gave three round hurrahs as the name of each musical celebrity was pronounced, and laughed lustily at the mention of the $2 that each had disbursed to the solemn coercion of the genius of Arion. They paused to drink and laugh at each interval between nine stanzas, and laughed and lifted their the glasses as the gas-fixtures vibrated with the loud "Singverein," that ended the poem. The Prince now waved his hand in token of silence, and a gray old man, preceded by the master of ceremonies and followed by the jester, was escorted to the desk, and, having been permitted to cut the beaker to his lips, commenced a recitative in commemoration of the glories of the Arion Society, at the end of each stanza of which they all sang, with foaming glasses in hand:

"Edite, bibite, collegiales!
Post nullis secula postis nulla!"

What followed next—each of the 300 having taken a draught of lager at the termination of each of the 10 stanzas—was a very remarkable satirical composition, reciting the methods of the modern soul-saver, (seelenbesorger,) who complains in doggerel German that his tabernacle stands empty, his sheep have gone astray, his pews are untaken, and Arbuckle's trumpet fails to fill the house. Accordingly, he comes to New-York to search out the missing "the elephant," and the sheep all come back singing an absurd jumble of syllables:

"Schneddereedeng, Schneddereedeng. Schneddereedeng, Deng, deng, deng, deng, deng, deng, deng."

The Prince did not intimate that the application of this highly meritorious story might be, but commanded silence at the end of the twelfth stanza, and when all the glasses were replenished, there came a ballad concerning a Brooklyn firm-man. Meister Kramer, the artist, appeared in the hall just as this was drawing to a conclusion, and, having been escorted thrice round the hall, mounted the tribune and addressed the audience, who all refilled their glasses in token of the sentiment. Meister Kramer, deep to art and its representative. Mr. Kraemer descended, after an exhortation in German to drink and be happy, and the hour for the annual dinner having arrived, the Prince lifted the massive beaker to his lips, took a long draught, congratulated his subjects on their very substantial contribution to the statistics of lager beer for the year 1879, and vacated the throne. The lights went out, and so did the revelers in their fantastic caps.

HEMOGYANINE.

From Galignani's Messenger, Jan. 3.

M. Fredericq has been for a long time occupied at the Zoölogical Laboratory at Roscoff, on the coast of Brittany, in studying the circulating fluid in the cephalopods, and more particularly the cuttlefish. He has discovered that the blood contains a substance new to science, to which he has given the name at the head of this article, formed from two Greek words, signifying blue and blood. The liquid part of the circulating fluid of the pulpi contains a colorless albuminoid substance, forming with oxygen an unstable combination which is of a deep blue color. When placed under a vacuum or in contact with living tissues, or preserved in a closed vessel, it gives off the oxygen and becomes colorless. That substance plays, in the respiration of the cuttle-fish, the same part that the hæmoglobine (the coloring globules of the blood) does in the vertebrate animals. It absorbs oxygen in the bronchial tubes of the pulpi, and then passing into the arterial system of the animal gives up that oxygen to the tissues. The venous blood of the creature is colorless, and the changes are dependent on the respiration. A series of experiments showed that this substance is the only albuminoid matter contained in the blood, for if heated to 154° Fahrenheit it becomes opalescent, and coagulates at 156° Fahrenheit, giving a precipitate of bluish flakes and a perfectly clear and colorless liquid, which undergoes no further change either from heat or alcohol or ether. When the deposit is evaporated at a low temperature, the result is a blue, brilliant substance, having the aspect of gelatine. When burned it gives off a smell of calcined horn and leaves a rich residue of ashes, which is abundant that the merest essay with the blowpipe suffices to produce it. The conclusion M. Fredericq draws is the curious fact that, in these lower animals, copper plays the same part in their circulating fluid that iron does in our bodies. He has not as yet been able to determine the exact proportion of copper, but he is experimenting in that direction.

PECULIAR FEATS OF ENDURANCE.

A somewhat peculiar feat of endurance was commenced at the Fifth Regiment Armory at 12:08 this morning by Edward Belden, of Milwaukee, Wis., and P. L. Van Ness, of this City, for a stake of $1,000. Belden, who is a well-known Western pedestrian, is to walk 2,000 half-miles in 2,000 consecutive 20 minutes, while Van Ness, an equally well-known Eastern pedestrian, is to walk 2,000 half-miles in the same number of consecutive half-hours. Both contestants are slender, light-built men, and each is "nervy" and confident of success. Van Ness is 25 years of age, and Belden 22. Both started at the same time. Belden made the first half-mile in 5:01, and Van Ness covered his half-mile one second sooner. Belden's second, third, and fourth half-miles were made in 5:00, 5:11, and 6:15 respectively, and Van Ness made his second and third half-miles in 4:50 and 6:30, respectively. A large number of sporting men were present at the commencement of the walk. The track is of saw-dust, laid around the regimental drill-hall, and requires 11 laps to the half-mile. Both men are in excellent condition, Belden particularly having taken great care of himself for some time past in anticipation of the match. He is attended by a trainer and two Western physicians. Van Ness is also in charge of a trainer. To complete his task, Van Ness will have to walk 41 days and 22 hours, while Belden, the challenger, is allowed but 27 days and 16 hours to do the same work.

THE TOLLS ON LUMBER.

From the Albany Argus.

Complaints are being made by lumber and timber manufacturers of the State that raw timber, when transported through the Erie Canal to their mills, pays five and a half times more tolls than sawed lumber does. This accounts fully for the falling off of the manufacturing interests in this State, especially at the easterly end of the State, and its diversion to Western mills. At present sawed lumber pays 51 cents per 1,000 feet, while lumber when transported in rafts pays at the rate of $2 83 per 1,000 feet. This large discrimination against the raw material and the manufactured amounts, practically, to a prohibition of the manufacturing interest at this end of the State. We are told that it costs over 100 per cent. more to simply pay the tolls upon 1,000 feet of lumber from Tonawanda to Albany than it does to tow the same in rafts from the Straits of Mackinaw to Tonawanda.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE MAPLESON OPERA COMPANY.

The last performance of the Mapleson opera company in Chicago was given on Saturday evening. The season lasted for two weeks, and the venture was, from a money point of view, the most successful speculation of its sort ever attempted in that city. The aggregate receipts amounted to $37,000. Under the contract with Mr. J. H. Haverly, Col. Mapleson retained 35 per cent. of that amount, from which he paid the expenses of the troupe. The largest audience of the season was attracted by the performance of "I Puritani" last Thursday night. According to the Chicago Tribune, there were exactly 4,300 persons in the house, who represented $7,800 worth of tickets. Five hundred and eighty carriages were "checked" during the evening. Long before the overture began the standing room was all occupied, and, in addition to the money represented by the persons in the house, hundreds of persons bought admission tickets, after being told there was no room, and, failing to gain admission, kept the tickets for other performances. Not only financially, but also from an artistic point of view, the season was the most notable Chicago ever saw. The newspaper articles on the performances contained nothing but the warmest praise. The efforts of Mme. Gerster and Mme. Marie Rôze met speedy recognition; and Miss Hauk's whims did not lessen her popularity to any appreciable extent. The male members of the troupe did not arouse so much enthusiasm at first, which is, perhaps, not to be wondered at, for the Chicago folk are chivalrous. But toward the close of the series of performances Campanini and Galassi began to receive their share of encomium. "I Puritani" had been sung three times in Chicago before last Thursday, with rather notable casts on each occasion. The opera was not fully enjoyed, however, until its last performance. Gerster's "San Virgin vezzosa," Campanini's "A te o cara," and Galassi and Foli's "Suoni la tromba" brought "huzzas" from 4,300 throats. Of the tenor the Tribune remarks:

"Campanini was at his best. The great tenor never sang better here, and, though he used his high voice unsparingly and with utter recklessness, he kept it in such perfect form that he was enabled to sing the Pilgrim song with exquisite delicacy of shading and without any sacrifice of its strength, and at the same time give to the closing measures of the great duo with Elvira a burst of power in his high voice which was fairly electrical."

The company left Chicago yesterday for St. Louis, where they will begin a season of two weeks to-night. Thereafter they will sing one week in Cincinnati and one week in Philadelphia, returning to this City for their second season on the 24th of February.

GILMORE'S SUNDAY EVENING CONCERT.

The Grand Opera-house was well filled last evening, as usual, to hear the concert by Mr. Gilmore's band. There were songs by Miss Marie Harvey and Mr. Makin, and two solos by Mr. Levy, whose lungs have evidently not been affected by the recent changes of temperature. The band were in uniform, and with their leader made a brilliant appearance on the stage, performing, among other pieces, an elaborate descriptive fantasie entitled, "Gilmore's Band's Tour of the Nations." The audience was in an appreciative mood, demanding and receiving a double programme, and getting at least the full value of their tickets of admission.

GENERAL MENTION.

Mr. William Courtney, who was evidently prevented by a cold from doing himself justice when he sang here in oratorio last month, intends to make his appearance shortly in a concert of his own. It was evident that Mr. Courtney is an artist and knows how to sing, and the musical public will be glad to hear him under favorable circumstances.

A concert of extraordinary promise is announced for to-morrow evening at Steinway Hall, with its orchestra which will in the course of the evening be conducted by Messrs. Maretzek, Neuendorff, Carlberg, and Hill. Mme. Di Murska, Mrs. Florence Rice-Knox, Miss Morgan, Messrs. Courtney, Fritsch, S. B. Mills, Franz Rummel, and numerous other artists are announced to appear.

STORIES OF OCEAN GALES.

EUROPEAN STEAMERS WHICH CAME INTO PORT YESTERDAY—A BARK IN DISTRESS.

The Cunard steam-ship Parthia arrived from Liverpool yesterday after a long and stormy voyage. She sailed from Liverpool on Jan. 11, and, after a stormy night in the Channel, touched at Queenstown on the following afternoon. After leaving the latter port nothing but severe westerly gales and head seas were met with, and the steamer's progress was necessarily slow. On the 18th only 146 miles were made; on the 14th, 190; on the 15th, 180; on the 16th, 205, and on the 17th, 150. The 18th was by far the stormiest day of the passage, the wind blowing a hurricane and tremendous seas washing over the decks. At midnight the mercury in the barometer went down to 27.50, and remained there for over five hours. The officers say this was unprecedented, and that the point to which the mercury fell is one half an inch lower than the ordinary barometers made for sea use are capable of indicating. Belden particularly having taken great care of himself for some time past in anticipation of the match. He is attended by a trainer and two Western physicians. Van Ness is also in charge of a trainer. To complete his task, Van Ness will have to walk 41 days and 22 hours, while Belden, the challenger, is allowed but 27 days and 16 hours to do the same work.

THE TOLLS ON LUMBER.

From the Albany Argus.

Complaints are being made by lumber and timber manufacturers of the State that raw timber, when transported through the Erie Canal to their mills, pays five and a half times more tolls than sawed lumber does. This accounts fully for the falling off of the manufacturing interests in this State, especially at the easterly end of the State, and its diversion to Western mills. At present sawed lumber pays 51 cents per 1,000 feet, while lumber when transported in rafts pays at the rate of $2 83 per 1,000 feet. This large discrimination against the raw material and the manufactured amounts, practically, to a prohibition of the manufacturing interest at this end of the State. We are told that it costs over 100 per cent. more to simply pay the tolls upon 1,000 feet of lumber from Tonawanda to Albany than it does to tow the same in rafts from the Straits of Mackinaw to Tonawanda.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE MAPLESON OPERA COMPANY.

The last performance of the Mapleson opera company in Chicago was given on Saturday evening. The season lasted for two weeks, and the venture was, from a money point of view, the most successful speculation of its sort ever attempted in that city. The aggregate receipts amounted to $37,000. Under the contract with Mr. J. H. Haverly, Col. Mapleson retained 35 per cent. of that amount, from which he paid the expenses of the troupe. The largest audience of the season was attracted by the performance of "I Puritani" last Thursday night. According to the Chicago Tribune, there were exactly 4,300 persons in the house, who represented $7,800 worth of tickets. Five hundred and eighty carriages were "checked" during the evening. Long before the overture began the standing room was all occupied, and, in addition to the money represented by the persons in the house, hundreds of persons bought admission tickets, after being told there was no room, and, failing to gain admission, kept the tickets for other performances. Not only financially, but also from an artistic point of view, the season was the most notable Chicago ever saw. The newspaper articles on the performances contained nothing but the warmest praise. The efforts of Mme. Gerster and Mme. Marie Rôze met speedy recognition; and Miss Hauk's whims did not lessen her popularity to any appreciable extent. The male members of the troupe did not arouse so much enthusiasm at first, which is, perhaps, not to be wondered at, for the Chicago folk are chivalrous. But toward the close of the series of performances Campanini and Galassi began to receive their share of encomium. "I Puritani" had been sung three times in Chicago before last Thursday, with rather notable casts on each occasion. The opera was not fully enjoyed, however, until its last performance. Gerster's "San Virgin vezzosa," Campanini's "A te o cara," and Galassi and Foli's "Suoni la tromba" brought "huzzas" from 4,300 throats. Of the tenor the Tribune remarks:

"Campanini was at his best. The great tenor never sang better here, and, though he used his high voice unsparingly and with utter recklessness, he kept it in such perfect form that he was enabled to sing the Pilgrim song with exquisite delicacy of shading and without any sacrifice of its strength, and at the same time give to the closing measures of the great duo with Elvira a burst of power in his high voice which was fairly electrical."

The company left Chicago yesterday for St. Louis, where they will begin a season of two weeks to-night. Thereafter they will sing one week in Cincinnati and one week in Philadelphia, returning to this City for their second season on the 24th of February.

GILMORE'S SUNDAY EVENING CONCERT.

The Grand Opera-house was well filled last evening, as usual, to hear the concert by Mr. Gilmore's band. There were songs by Miss Marie Harvey and Mr. Makin, and two solos by Mr. Levy, whose lungs have evidently not been affected by the recent changes of temperature. The band were in uniform, and with their leader made a brilliant appearance on the stage, performing, among other pieces, an elaborate descriptive fantasie entitled, "Gilmore's Band's Tour of the Nations." The audience was in an appreciative mood, demanding and receiving a double programme, and getting at least the full value of their tickets of admission.

GENERAL MENTION.

Mr. William Courtney, who was evidently prevented by a cold from doing himself justice when he sang here in oratorio last month, intends to make his appearance shortly in a concert of his own. It was evident that Mr. Courtney is an artist and knows how to sing, and the musical public will be glad to hear him under favorable circumstances.

A concert of extraordinary promise is announced for to-morrow evening at Steinway Hall, with its orchestra which will in the course of the evening be conducted by Messrs. Maretzek, Neuendorff, Carlberg, and Hill. Mme. Di Murska, Mrs. Florence Rice-Knox, Miss Morgan, Messrs. Courtney, Fritsch, S. B. Mills, Franz Rummel, and numerous other artists are announced to appear.

STORIES OF OCEAN GALES.

EUROPEAN STEAMERS WHICH CAME INTO PORT YESTERDAY—A BARK IN DISTRESS.

The Cunard steam-ship Parthia arrived from Liverpool yesterday after a long and stormy voyage. She sailed from Liverpool on Jan. 11, and, after a stormy night in the Channel, touched at Queenstown on the following afternoon. After leaving the latter port nothing but severe westerly gales and head seas were met with, and the steamer's progress was necessarily slow. On the 18th only 146 miles were made; on the 14th, 190; on the 15th, 180; on the 16th, 205, and on the 17th, 150. The 18th was by far the stormiest day of the passage, the wind blowing a hurricane and tremendous seas washing over the decks. At midnight the mercury in the barometer went down to 27.50, and remained there for over five hours. The officers say this was unprecedented, and that the point to which the mercury fell is one half an inch lower than the ordinary barometers made for sea use are capable of indicating. The weather then began to moderate somewhat, though it was very severe off the coast on Saturday night.

The steam-ship Weser, of the North German Lloyd Line, which arrived yesterday, and which left Bremen on Jan. 12 and Southampton on the 15th, also encountered a succession of strong westerly gales and high seas. Huge waves washed over her decks, but no accidents occurred. Little or no sail could be carried.

The steam-ship Niagara, which arrived from Havana yesterday, fell in on Friday, in latitude 31° 40' and longitude 79°, with the bark Arathusa, of Belfast, bound from Dublin for Duboy, and flying a signal of distress. She was already 60 days out, and was so short of water that the daily allowance to each man for 20 days had been but one pint. A fresh supply was furnished by the steamer.

DISASTERS TO VESSELS.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 26.—The steam-ship Caadmon, which arrived here to-day from Carthagena, reports that on Jan. 12, in latitude 32° 20', longitude 41° 28', she passed a dismantled brig, no name visible, loaded with coal-oil and full of water, hatches off. She had apparently been abandoned a long time.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The Signal Officer at Chatham, Mass., reports that the Snow Bird, Capt. George Cripps, of St. John, New-Brunswick, from New-York for St. John, 104 tons burden, went ashore on Chatham Beach during a heavy north-west gale, at 2 o'clock this morning. All hands were saved by a boat's crew from Chatham. The vessel's cargo of coal is insured. There is no insurance on the vessel, which is a total wreck.

The Signal Officer at Stonington, Conn., reports that the schooner W. Whitaker, of Centreville, Cape Cod, Mass., ran ashore on Middle Ground Shoal, one mile south of Stonington Harbor, at 2:30 this morning. At daylight a signal of distress was observed, and assistance was sent to her. She will be got off without damage. She is coal-laden, and is from Amboy to Allen's Point.

The Signal Officer at Little Egg Harbor, N. J., reports that the schooner with a broken mast, reported as putting into Little Egg Harbor Inlet, is the Emma, of Patchogue, Long Island, Capt. Gilbert Newton, bound from York River, Virginia, to New-York with oysters. She was disabled off Brigantine Beach, five miles south of Little Egg Harbor Station in a storm last night. Her crew is all safe. The crew of Life-saving Station No. 23 are assisting in repairing her mast.

MORROW, Jan. 26.—The fishing schooner Bonnie Elouise, on her return from a cruise Saturday night, went ashore on Stony Beach during a gale. She was hauled off without material damage and towed to this city.

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia, Jan. 26.—The schooner P. Blake, St. John, for Cardenas, put into Digby, yesterday, leaking badly. She reports that she left St. John on the 19th inst., got to the Gulf Stream, where she sprung a leak and lost part of her deck load.

The brig Maggie, wrecked near Liverpool, Nova Scotia, has been sold for the benefit of underwriters, bringing $200.

CONNECTICUT LAW-MAKING

SOME QUESTIONS TO BE BROUGHT BEFORE THE LEGISLATURE.

SESSIONS OF THE LEGISLATURE—RAILWAY FARES AND FREIGHT CHARGES—EVILS OF TRAMPS AND DOGS—SIMPLIFYING LEGAL PROCEDURE — WOMAN SUFFRAGE — THE DIVORCE LAWS.

HARTFORD, Jan. 25.—It was not to be expected that the Legislature would make much headway in the consideration of regular business until the Senatorial question was determined, and now that the election is over, the beginning of the fourth week of the session next Tuesday will undoubtedly set the committee wheels actively in motion. The present outlook is that the session need not be a protracted one. Its close may be reasonably expected by the middle of March at the longest.

A question already discussed somewhat is that of changing the sessions back to May, when they formerly were held up to the constitutional change two years ago, when January was decided upon, the principal reason urged for the change being the bleakness of Winter in the new Capitol, whose sightly location in Bushnell Park makes it more an object of beauty in Summer, when the lawns of the park are green and the flowers are coming into bloom. Æsthetically considered, the point is a good one, but, practically, the Winter session so far has worked well in securing a full attendance of members, and shortening the work by more constant attention to it. Members go to their homes more generally in pleasant Summer weather, making daily trips on the free-pass favors of the railroads. Probably, if the new Capitol were not in so picturesque a spot, where seasonable contrasts force themselves, the proposition to abandon the present time of meeting, which has already taken the form of a proposed constitutional amendment, would not be seriously considered. As it is, the feeling in favor of a change strongly predominates just now.

Allied to this question is another concerning biennial sessions of the Legislature, which comes over from last year in a proposed amendment to the Constitution, and must have at this session an approval of a two-

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

SALES AT THE STOCK EXCHANGE—JAN. 25.

SALES FROM 2:30 TO 3 P. M.

Chi. Bur. & Q. 7s		Central of N. J
$3,000	117¼	600	40¾
Chi. & Alt. 8s		200	40⅝
3,000	103⅝	200	41
N. J. C. 1st con. 6s		100	40⅞
1,000	79¾	350	41
N. Y. Elev. 1st		200	41⅛
$ 500	106⅞	500	41¼
St. L. & T. 8s		300	41⅜
6,000	49¾	300	41⅝
4,000	49⅞	250	41¾
Un. Pac. 1st		200	41⅞
10,000	107¾	Lake Shore
A. & T. H. 2d, pf		400	72⅞
4,000	85	1000	73
M., K. & T. 2s		2500	73⅛
$9,000	b3 75	1100	73¼
E. & Mo. Jo. 8s		1100	73⅜
1,000	106⅞	1100	73¾
Ohio & Miss. 2d		1500	73⅞
$ 5,000	86	500	74
Marietta & C. 1st		1000	72⅞
5,000	86	700	72⅜
B. & H. K. 7s		1500	72¾
10,000	98¼	3200	b3 73
C. & S. 1st, rd by		300	73⅛
Lake Shore		North-west.
2,000	97½	400	63
American Ex		1000	63½
100	47½	1100	63¾
Canton		2400	63¼
80	39	3600	63⅜
Delaware & Hud		5300	63½
185	44¼	1600	63⅝
500	44⅜	1100	63¾
100	44⅞	700	63⅞
Western Union		600	b3 64
100	99⅞	1100	63⅞
1300	99⅝	200	63¾
Homestake M. Co		2000	63⅞
10	22½	North-west pf
100	22	200	a3 86¾
200	22⅛	600	a3 86¾
200	22⅜	800	b3 86⅞
700	23	2200	86¾
Quicksilver		1000	86¾
100	14½	2100	b3 86
Quicksilver pf		St. L. & S. F. pf
100	34¾	200	a3 86
Pacific Mail		St. L. K. C. & N. pf
300	a3 13⅜	100	43⅞
400	13⅝	300	43¾
950	13⅝	600	43⅞
N. Y. C. & H.		300	44
900	115⅛	300	a3 44⅛
Erie Railway		1300	44¼
500	27	200	44⅜
1900	27¼	200	44½
1500	b3 27⅛	300	44¾
8600	27⅜	600	44¾
2000	a3 27½	100	c 44⅞
3000	26⅞	200	44
9910	28⅜	400	44⅛
1000	28¼	600	43¾
450	27	100	43⅞
1800	26⅞	800	44
500	b3 26⅝	400	44⅛
Erie Railway pf		1100	44¼
100	a2 48¼	400	44¼
1900	a2 0	St. Paul pf
200	49	300	82½
100		200	82¾
2000	87¾	200	82⅞
50	67⅜	500	b3 83
100	68	1310	82¾
100	67¾	200	82⅞
D. C. & I. C		200	82¾
500	b3 16	600	82¾
Michigan Central		400	82¾
100	a3 84½	100	82¾
100	84⅝	100	82¾
100	85¼	100	82⅝
100	85⅛	200	82⅞
1025	85⅜	Del. L. & West
800	85¼	500	b3 83½
800	85⅛	500	83¼
900	85⅜	300	b3 83½
100	85⅝	800	83¾
1000	85⅞	1000	83⅞
1300	a3 86⅛	2800	83⅝
200	86⅞	6100	83¾
1400	86⅝	5500	83¾
1100	86⅞	1100	83⅞
1400	87	100	84¼
1000	a3 86¾	400	84⅛
350	86⅛	887	84
700	86⅞	700	84¼
1000	86⅝	500	84⅜
Illinois Central		1700	84⅝
200	86⅜	1900	84½
900	86⅛	C. C. & I.
300	a3 86⅛	523	46
400	86¼	100	a3 46¾
300	86⅛	100	46
		120	81

MONDAY, Jan. 27—A. M.

The statement of the associated banks issued from the Clearing-house on Saturday last was a very favorable exhibit, showing an increase in all the averages, with the exception of circulation, in which there is a decrease of $150,000. The other changes are an increase of $3,633,800 in legal tenders, of $3,390,600 in deposits, of $1,247,800 in loans, and of $87,100 in specie. The movement for the week results in a gain of $3,873,250 in surplus reserve, and the banks now hold $17,286,000 in excess of legal requirements.

The following shows the condition of the City banks this week, compared with the previous statement and with the statement for the corresponding week last year:

	Jan. 18.	Jan. 25.	Jan. 26, 1878.
Loans	$233,184,400	$234,416,200	$203,404,300
Specie	17,344,600	17,431,700	30,193,800
Le'l t'rs	49,965,800	53,599,600	37,231,200
Dep'ts	211,590,600	214,981,200	207,171,200
Circul'n	19,787,600	19,617,600	19,799,100

And the following the relation between the total reserve and total liabilities of the banks:

Specie	$17,344,600	$17,431,700 Inc. $87,100
Le'l t's	49,965,800	53,599,600 Inc. 3,633,800
R'v'e	$67,310,400	$71,031,300 Inc. $3,720,900
Res. required	52,897,650	53,745,300
Exc's of res've above legal req're'm'ts	14,412,750	17,286,000 Inc. $2,873,250

Money was in abundant supply, and borrowers on call, on pledge of stock collateral, easily supplied their requirements at 2@3 ₱ cent., while the Government treasury deposits found ready accommodation at 1@1½ ₱ cent. In the discount market prime mercantile paper sold at 3½@5 ₱ cent. There seems every reason to believe that the great ease which now characterizes the monetary situation will continue for a considerable period.

The foreign advices reported a strong market at London for American railway securities, all of which showed an improvement on the week's transactions. Erie was most prominent in the upward movement, the common advancing from 23⅜ to 27⅛, and the preferred from 38½ to 46⅞. Illinois Central rose from 83¾ to 86½. New-Jersey Central from 39 to 42, and Reading from 12 to 13½. British Consols were strong early in the week, and made an advance of ¼ ₱ cent., but toward the close they became weak, and the improvement was lost. United States bonds were weak. 10-40s declining 2¼ ₱ cent., new 5s 1 ₱ cent., and 1867s and new 4½s ⅜ ₱ cent. The decline in these securities is, without doubt, due to the announcement of the formation of the syndicate to place the 4 ₱ cent. loan in Europe, which will necessitate the calling in of the other issues sooner than has been anticipated. The Bank of England reduced £500,000 specie for the week ending Wednesday, and £10,000 has since gone in on balance. The proportion of the bank's reserve to liabilities, which last week was 30¾ ₱ cent. is now 31⅛ ₱ cent. The rate of discount at the bank remains unchanged, at 4 ₱ cent. The specie in the Bank of France shows an increase for the week of 10,425,000f.

In the Sterling Exchange market there was an active business, and the dealings were at times attended with much excitement. Early in the week 60-day bills and demand were marked up, and on Wednesday were $4 86½ and $4 89½ respectively. At these rates gold shipments were predicted, but when the fact that a new syndicate had been formed became known, the market for sterling assumed a heavy tone, and rates were reduced to $4 86 and $4 89, at which they nominally closed, with actual transactions at a concession of fully 1 cent. Commercial bills were freely offered, and brought good rates. All fears of gold shipments have for the present been removed and under the operations of the "syndicate" we doubt whether any can or will be made for some time.

The Government bond market was strong for 4½s and 4s, while the rapid redemption of the 5-20s exercised a depressing influence on the other issues, which fell off ½@2⅛ ₱ cent., the 10-40s recording the greatest decline. There is no abatement in the heavy demand for the new 4s, the inquiry emanating from all sections of the country. During the week the Secretary of the Treasury effected a negotiation with a new syndicate for the placing of $10,000,000 of these securities abroad, and it is believed that the greater part of this loan is already absorbed. Railroad bonds displayed strength and buoyancy, with a further advance in most of the issues. New-Jersey Centrals, Chicago and Northwesterns, Denver and Rio Grandes, Rock Islands, St. Pauls, and Ohio and Mississippis were among those most active. State bonds were dull, and without important feature.

The transactions on the Stock Exchange were on a scale of magnitude rarely paralleled in the history of the street. A strong buying movement prevailed throughout, and the occasional reactions in prices which took place under the influence of realizations invariably proved to be merely a prelude to the upward movement. The market seems by common consent to be less subject to the control of cliques than for a long time past, and the strictly commission houses report a large and constantly increasing business. There can be little doubt that during the week large blocks of stocks of all descriptions were taken from the Street by investors who, rightly or wrongly as the event may prove, are imbued with the impression that the conditions of the commercial situation are favorable, and that it is reasonable to expect a still further appreciation in values in the near future. It was notable that the inquiry for stocks was not confined to any particular class of shares, but extended to the entire list, many of the low-priced stocks which have hitherto been neglected being in request at advancing quotations. The advance for the week in the more active stocks ranged from 5 to 10 ₱ cent., the latter in Erie preferred and Michigan Central. Erie was quite prominent in the dealings, and the recent large increase in the traffic of the road, the advantages already derived from the completion of the narrow gauge, and those certain to accrue from the New-England connection justify the belief entertained by the friends of the company that its future will be as prosperous as its past has been checkered. Among the Granger shares North-western was conspicuously strong, but late in the week evidences were afforded indicating that the parties who so successfully manipulated the bull movement in this stock are about to turn their attention to St. Paul. C., C., C. and I. made a sharp advance on heavy purchases prompted by the belief that an early resumption of dividends by the company is assured. The coal stocks were also noticeably strong, and in many well-informed quarters the impression prevails that the negotiations for the renewal of the coal combination, which are known to be in progress, are likely to be successful. The entire market closed buoyant with an upward tendency to prices.

RANGE OF PRICES AND CLOSING QUOTATIONS

—JAN. 25.

	Highest.	Lowest.	Closing—Bid.	Asked.
New-York Central	115⅜	115	115⅜
Canada Southern	51¾	49½	50	51
Erie	27⅜	26⅝	26¾	26⅞
Erie preferred	49	47⅝	45⅝	49
Lake Shore	73⅝	72¾	73	73¼
Wabash	24⅜	23½	23⅞	24
North-western	64	62	63⅜	63⅞
North-western pref	86	85⅞	85¾	86
Rock Island	126	125⅜	125⅝	126
Fort Wayne	105	104½	104⅝	107½
Milwaukee & St. Paul	44⅛	42½	44⅜	44½
Mil. & St. Paul pref	83	81⅞	82⅞	83
Pittsburg	92¼	92¼	92⅜	92½
Del., Lack. & Western	54⅛	53	54¼	54⅜
New-Jersey Central	41⅝	40¼	41	41⅛
Del. & Hudson Canal	44⅞	43⅝	44¼	45
Morris & Essex	84¼	82½	84¼	84½
Michigan Central	87	83⅝	86½	87
Illinois Central	86⅜	84⅝	86⅜	86⅝
Union Pacific	68	67¾	68	67⅞
Cleve., Col., Cin. & Ind.	47	45¾	45⅞	46
Chi., Bur. & Quincy	114⅞	113¾	114⅜	114½
Chicago & Alton	86	85¾	86	86½
Chicago & Alton pref			107	108
C., C. & Ind. Central	5¾	5½	5½	5¾
Han. & St. Joseph	15⅞	14¾	14¾	15
Han. & St. Jo. pref	39	38	38½	39
Ohio & Mississippi	11⅜	10⅝	10⅞	11
Panama			124
Western Union	97	96⅜	96⅞	97
A. & P. Telegraph	37¾	37⅜	36	37
Pacific Mail	13⅜	13¼	13¼	13⅜
Quicksilver	15⅛	14⅞	14	14⅞
Quicksilver pref	35	34	34½	35
Adams Express			106	107
Wells, Fargo & Co	97¼	97	97	97⅛
American Express	47½	47¼	47⅜	48
United States Express			46½	48

COURSE OF MARKET—THE WEEK.

	Highest.	Lowest.	Closing Jan.
U. S. 4½s, 1891, coupon	106⅛	106	106⅛
U. S. 5s, 1881, coupon	107	106⅜	106¼
U. S. 5-20s, 1867, coupon	102⅜	101⅜	102
New-York Central	115½	114¼	115⅜
Rock Island	126	125⅜	125⅝
Pacific Mail	13⅜	12¾	13⅜
Milwaukee and St. Paul	44½	39½	39
Milwaukee & St. Paul pref	83	79	69⅜
Lake Shore	73¾	69⅝	62½
Chicago & North-western	64	56⅜	36⅝
Chic. & North-western pref	86½	82¼	62¾
Western Union	97⅞	96⅞	77⅜
Union Pacific	68	66⅝	68⅜
Del., Lack. & Western	54⅞	49⅜	50¼
New-Jersey Central	42	38⅞	15½
Delaware & Hudson Canal	45¼	41	49½
Morris & Essex	84¼	81	74⅜
Panama	124	122	120
Erie	27⅜	22⅞	9½
Ohio & Mississippi	11⅜	8¾	7⅞
Harlem	142	142	141
Hannibal & St. Joseph	15½	14½	14½
Hannibal & St. Joseph pf	39	37	25¼
Michigan Central	87	78¼	60½
Illinois Central	86¾	81¾	74¼
Wabash	24⅜	21⅝	10⅜

The following are the returns of the foreign commerce of the port of New-York for the week ending Saturday last, and since the beginning of the year, compared with the returns for the corresponding period last year:

Imports of Dry Goods and General Merchandise.

Week ending last Saturday	$6,264,720
Corresponding week last year	4,298,575
Since Jan 1, this year	17,712,435
Corresponding period last year	20,630,535

Exports of Domestic Produce.

Week ending last Tuesday	$5,950,349
Corresponding week last year	5,866,962
Since Jan. 1, this year	14,627,304
Corresponding period last year	17,442,673

Exports of Gold and Silver.

Week ending last Saturday	$37,683
Corresponding week last year	348,730
Since Jan. 1 this year	1,140,293
Corresponding period last year	1,398,109

Receipts for Customs.

Week ending last Saturday	$1,665,628
Corresponding week last year	1,654,462
Since Jan. 1 this year	6,167,603
Corresponding period last year	6,359,133

Gold Interest Paid Out by the Treasury.

Week ending last Saturday	$1,025,014
Corresponding week last year	925,243
Since Jan. 1 this year	8,120,808
Corresponding period last year	9,732,039

The Commercial and Financial Chronicle, in its issue of Saturday last, publishes the following table of railroad earnings:

—Latest Earnings Reported.—

	Week or Mo.	1878.	1877.
At. & Gt. West	November	336,833	377,629
At., Miss. & O	November	175,892	161,338
Bur. & M. R. in N	November	223,703	179,949
Cairo & St. L	December	17,339
Central Pacific	December	1,438,000	1,354,832
Chic., Bur. & Q	November	1,296,082	1,232,118
Chic. & N. W	December	1,018,849	928,747
Clev., Mt. & D	December	29,981	29,600
Dakota Southern	December	23,686	24,307
Denv. & Rio G	November	117,805	80,093
Gal., H. & S. Ant	November	146,406	104,789
Hous. & Texas C	November	208,133	240,090
Mobile & Ohio	November	307,581	259,766
Nas., Ch. & St. L	December	149,552	163,064
Pad. & Elizabeth	December	24,098	30,698
Pad. & Memphis	December	18,186	19,432
Phila. & Erie	November	317,167	353,446
Phila. & Reading	November	1,678,394	1,133,111
St. Paul & S. City	November	57,584	67,445
Selma Valley	November	27,509	13,855
Sioux City & St. P	November	40,017	49,251
Southern Minn	December	55,622	66,976
Union Pacific	December	854,155	795,083
	1879.		1878.
Atch., T. & S. F	2d w'k Jan.	$77,500	$44,687
Bur., C. R. & N	2d w'k Jan.	30,837	42,462
Chic. & Alton	2d w'k Jan.	93,673	82,444
Chic. & East. Ill	1st w'k Jan.	13,790	13,165
Chic. & St. P	2d w'k Jan.	138,000	191,460
C., Mt. V. & D	1st w'k Jan.	5,611	6,343
Dub. & S. City	2d w'k Jan.	17,332	22,611
Grand Trunk	Wk. end. Jan. 11	166,208	168,835
Great West	Wk. end. Jan. 11	59,248	93,114
Han. & St. Jo	2d w'k Jan.	34,012	29,644
Ind., Bl. & W	2d w'k Jan.	23,974	32,352
Int. & Gt. North	2d w'k Jan.	32,269	28,527
Kansas Pacific	2d w'k Jan.	42,167	48,608
Mo., Kan. & Tex	2d w'k Jan.	41,340	60,859
Pac. & Elizabeth	1st w'k Jan.	4,643	5,642
St. L. A. & T. H. brs	2d w'k Jan.	11,010	12,141
St. L. I. M. & S	2d w'k Jan.	75,719	101,498
St. L. K. C. & No	2d w'k Jan.	64,209	70,110
St. L. & S. E. (St. L.)	1st w'k Jan.	10,168	11,981
St. L. & S. E. (Ky.)	1st w'k Jan.	5,267	6,127
St. L. & S. E. (Tenn)	1st w'k Jan.	2,242	2,451
Tol., Peo. & War	2d w'k Jan.	23,499	35,944
Wabash	2d w'k Jan.	70,331	98,226

COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS.

NEW-YORK, Saturday, Jan. 25, 1879.

The receipts of the principal kinds of Produce since our last have been as follows:

Ashes, pkls	21	Hides, bales	106
B. W. Flour, pkls	83	Hops, bales	43
Beans, bush	99	Lead, pigs	175
Bone-wax, pkls	4	Leather, sides	1,500
Bullion, bars	240	Molasses, bbls	1,875
Cotton, bales	3,225	Spirits Turp., bbls	1,299
Cotton-seed-oil, bbls	1,001	Resin, bbls	4,094
Corn-seed-cake, bgs	452	Tar, bbls	140
Copper, cakes	218	Oil, bbls	60
Dried Fruit, pkls	1	Oil-cake, pkls	420
Eggs, pkls	150	Pork, pkls	1,198
Flour, bbls	13,306	Beef, pkls	186
Corn-meal, bbls	297	Cut-meats, pkls	7,792
Corn-meal, bags	397	Lard, pkls	4,035
Wheat, bushels	117,000	Butter, pkls	4,322
Corn, bushels	91,200	Cheese, pkls	2,023
Oats, bushels	20,225	Dressed Hogs, No	1,130
Rye, bushels	1,926	Rice, tcs	599
Malt, bushels	7,850	Sugar, hhds	94
Barley, bushels	24,200	Sugar, pkls	450
Peas, bushels	1,600	Stearine, pkls	113
Oat-meal, bags	200	Tallow, pkls	529
Flax, bales	102	Tin, pkls	4
Grease, pkls	520	Tobacco, pkls	100
Grass-seed, bags	745	Whisky, bbls	690
Hides, No	1,907	Wool, bales	1

COFFEE—Rio moderately sought after at about previous prices; 4,500 bags Rio per Shepherdess, 4,000 bags do. per Tartar, 500 bags per L. C. A., 2,887 bags Santos and 2,648 bags Rio; sale 1,750 bales Cucuta do. per Hippocrates were reported sold or taken from stock. Other kinds in demand at firm rates, with sales of 175 bags Jamaica, 1,550 bags Rio, Laguayra and Java on private terms.

COTTON—Has been quoted steady for early delivery, on the basis of previous quotations, but without much inquiry from any source. Sales were reported for prompt delivery of 554 bales, (of which 493 bales were on last evening,) including 293 bales to shippers, 261 bales to spinners, — bales to speculators, and — baled in transit:...Low Middling quoted at 9 1-16c. @ 9 1-8c.; Strict Low Middling at 9¼c. @9⅜c.; Middling at 9 7-16c. @9 9-16c.; Fair at 11 1-16c. @11 13-16c.....And for forward delivery business has been more freely dealt in on an easier basis as to prices..... Sales have been reported since our last of 11,000 bales, (of which 14,500 bales were on last evening, and 16,600 bales to-day,) with 1,800 bales on the spot, on the basis of Middling, and 9,200 bales to arrive, including, as officially reported, sales on Friday afternoon, for February, 1,500 bales at 9.49c. @9.61c.; March, 5,000 bales at 9.67c. @9.70c.; April, 1,800 bales at 9.80c. @9.87c.; May, 1,900 bales at 10c. @10.03c.; June, 2,300 bales at 10.14c. @10.15c.; July, 2,000 bales at 10.30c., and August, — bales at —, and to-day, for January, 300 bales at 9.42c. @9.45c.; February, 5,600 bales at 9.43c. @9.47c.; March, 3,600 bales at 9.63c. @9.66c.; April, 9,500 bales at 9.80c. @9.83c.; May, 3,400 bales at 9.96c. @9.99c.; June, 800 bales at 10.05c. @10.13c.; July, — bales at — ; August, — bales at — . The closing quotations were: For January, 9.45c. @9.47c.; February, 9.46c. @9.47c.; March, 9.64c. @9.65c.; April, 9.81c. @9.82c.; May, 9.95c. @9.97c.; June, 10.05c. @ 10.10c.; July, 10.17c. @10.18c.; August, 10.37c. @ 10.38c.....Transferable orders were issued to-day at 9.50c., as officially reported.....The averages of Thursday's forward deliveries, as officially reported, were as follows: January, 9.47c.; February, 9.49c.; March, 9.69c.; April, 9.85c.; May, 10.01c.; June, 10.13c.; July, 10.25c.; August, 10.39c.

Closing Prices of Cotton in New-York.

	Uplands.	N. O.	Texas.
Ordinary	7 9-16	7 11-16	7 11-16
Strict Ordinary	8	8¼	8¼
Good Ordinary	8½	8⅝	8⅝
Strict Good Ordinary	8 13-16	8 15-16	8 15-16
Low Middling	9 1-16	9 3-16	9 3-16
Strict Low Middling	9¼	9⅜	9⅜
Middling	9 7-16	9 9-16	9 9-16
Good Middling	9 13-16	9 15-16	9 15-16
Strict Good Middling	10 3-16	10 5-16	10 5-16
Middling Fair	10⅞	11	11
Fair	11 11-16	11 13-16	11 13-16

Stained.

Good Ordinary	7 11-16	Low Middling 8 11-16
Strict Good Ord	8 1-16	Middling 9 1-16

FLOUR AND MEAL—A moderate movement has been reported in most kinds of State and Western Flour at about former quotations. Export demand rather light. Sales have been reported since our last of 13,150 bbls. of all grades.....Included in the reported sales were 2,100 bbls. Low Extras, for shipment, within the range of $3 30@3 40; mainly $3 70@3 95; 950 bbls. City Mill Extras, mostly for the West Indies, at $4 70@5, for about fair to very choice, in new pks., and for English markets, quoted at $3 65@3 80; 2,350 bbls. Minnesota and Wisconsin clear, (these at $3 80@4 75, of which about 1,300 bbls. Superfine, mostly at $3 75@ 4; 1,550 bbls. straight Extras, (these mostly at $4 40 @5;) 800 bbls. Patent, (enteny at from $5 85@7 ; 2,900 bbls. Winter Wheat Extras, (these at $3 75@ $5 50, mainly at $4 30@5 25;) 950 bbls. Minnesota Extras, (these at $5 50@7 25;) 425 bbls. Superfine, (these at $3 15 for inferior to $3 60 for choice, and 400 bbls. Low Extras, or Export, at $3 90@4; 1,050 bbls. No. 2, (these at $2 85@3 for poor to fancy, of which 500 bbls. about choice to family trade and export, at $3 60@3 80;)

THE REAL ESTATE MARKET.

Only two auctions, and they unimportant, were held at the Exchange on Saturday, Jan. 25, as follows:

John T. Boyd, under a foreclosure order, F. G. Salmon, Esq., Referee, sold the three-story brick building, with lot 24 by 80, No. 430 Greenwich-st., west side, 75 feet south of Vestry-st., for $6,000, to W. J. Wilcox & Co.

C. J. Lyon, foreclosure sale, J. W. Van Hoesen, Esq., Referee, sold two one-story brick slaughter-houses, with three lots, each 25 by 98.9, Nos. 512 to 516 West 41st-st., south side, 300 feet west of 9th-av., for $4,907, to Daniel Carr.

The total value of City real estate sold at the Exchange for the week ending Saturday, Jan. 25, was $358,907, as against $255,067, the figures for the previous week.

THIS WEEK'S AUCTIONS.

For the present week, at the Exchange, the following public auctions are announced:

To-day, (Monday,) Jan. 27.

By William Kennelly, foreclosure sale, William Smalatz, Jr., Referee, of the two-story brick dwelling, with lot, 25 by 100, No. 206 Spring-st., south side, west of Sullivan-st.

By Richard V. Harnett, foreclosure sale, Alfred Wagstaff, Esq., Referee, of two lots, each 25 by 100, 10th-av., east side, 54.4 feet north of 74th-st.; also, similar sale, Charles F. MacLean, Esq., Referee, of the four-story brown-stone-front dwelling, with lot 20 by 70, No. 1,317 4th-av., west side, 82.2 feet south of 81st-st; also, similar sale, Louis F. Kerchies, Esq., Referee, of a plot of land, 260 by 225, on 10th-av., east side, block front between 212th and 213th sts.

By John T. Boyd, foreclosure sale, Isaac L. Miller, Esq., Referee, of two lots, each 25 by 100, on Avenue A, west side, 50.10 feet south of 122d-st.

By Scott & Myers, foreclosure sale, James M. Brady, Esq., Referee, of a plot of land 278 by 210 by 146 by —, on Unter-av., east side, adjoining lands of St. John's College, and running through to Bronx River; also, six lots, each 25 by 206, on Union-av., west side, adjoining lands of P. M. Lydig, at Fordham.

By Richard Field, foreclosure sale, Valentine Cook, Jr., Referee, of one lot 26 by 100, on Cortlandt-st., east side, 74 feet north of Milton-st., 23d Ward.

Tuesday, Jan. 28.

By A. H. Muller & Son, Executor's sale of the following described valuable property, belonging to the estate of John H. Power, deceased: One five-story brick store and two two-story brick houses, with lot 23.7 by 100 by 19.6 by 100, No. 61 Pearl-st., north side, running through to (No. 26) Stone-st., east of Broad-st.; one lot 20 by 41.5 by 97.3 by 44, on Catharine-lane, north-west corner of Elm-st., the three-story brick building, two four-story brick buildings, and three-story frame dwelling, with two lots, each 23.7 by 75.2, Nos. 178 and 180 Canal-st., south-east corner of Mott-st.; three four-story brick buildings, with lot of lot of land 50 by — by 53.9 by about 50, Nos. 93, 95, and 97 4th-av., north-east corner of 11th-st., leased May 1, 1866, term 21 years; ground rent, $3,500 per annum; one four-story brick stores, with lease of lots, together in size 50 by 93 by 26.6 by 25 by — by 86, Nos. 99 and 101 4th-av., east side, adjoining above, leased May 1, 1864, term 21 years, ground rent, $700 per annum; one lot, 25 by 98.9 on West 42d-st., south side, 300 feet west of 2d-av., subject to a lease dated April 14, 1866, for a term of 21 years; two-story brick-front house, with cellar and lots, each 25 by 100, on 42d-st., east side, block front between 66th and 67th sts.; twelve lots, each 25 by 200.10, on East 66th-st., north side, 100 feet east of 3d-av., running through to 67th-st.; two lots, each 25 by 100.5, on East 66th-st., north side, adjoining above; six lots, each 25 by 100.5 on West 68th-st., north side, 325 feet east of 9th-av.; three lots, each 25 by 100.5, on West 69th-st., south side, 325 feet east of 9th-av.; one lot, 25 by 100.5 by 75 by 27 — by 62.7, on West 69th-st., south side, adjoining above; seven lots, together in size 172.2 by 135 by 160 by 168.10, on Riverside-av., south side, 225 feet east of 116th-st., four lots, each 25 by 102.2, on West 81st-st., south side, 175 feet west of 11th-av.; one lot, 25.2 by 100, on 12th-av., south-west corner of 94th-st.; a plot of land on 222d-st., north side, 320 feet west of Public-drive, running through to Spuyten Duyvil Creek, and a block of land bounded by Columbia, Halleck, Otsego, and Skowarow sts., Brooklyn.

By P. Dalay, public auction sale of the buildings, with lot 25 by 70.10, Nos. 206 and 206½ East Houston-st., north side, running through to (No. 99) 1st-st.

By Richard V. Harnett, Executor's sale, of the three-story and basement brick house, with lot 21.10 by 92, Nos. 328 West 18th-st., north side, 356.6 feet west of 8th-av.

By John T. Boyd, foreclosure sale, Malcolm Campbell, Esq., Referee, of the three-story brick dwelling, with lot 18.9 by 100.4, No. 113 West 44th-st., south side, 243.9 feet west of 6th-av.

Wednesday, Jan. 29.

By E. H. Ludlow & Co., foreclosure sale, Theodore Arnold, Esq., Referee, of the three-story brick dwelling, with lot 16.8 by 50.4, No. 169 West 48th-st., north side, 50 feet east of 7th-av.

By C. J. Lyon, foreclosure sale, Hamilton Odell, Esq., Referee, of the four-story brick building, with lot 20 by 110, No. 923 3d-av., east side, 85.5 feet east of 55th-st.

Thursday, Jan. 30.

By E. H. Ludlow & Co., Executor's sale, of the three-story brick dwelling, with lot 18.9 by 98.9, No. 13 West 35th-st., north side, 237.6 feet west of 5th-av.

By Louis Mesier, foreclosure sale, John M. Barbour, Esq., Referee, of the five-story brick building, with lot 37.9 by 13.8 by 37.2 by 16, Nos. 118 and 120 Elizabeth-st., east side, 49 feet south of Broome-st.

By E. F. Raymond, foreclosure sale, George A. Halsey, Esq., Referee, of the four-story brown-stone-front building, with lot 27 by 100, No. 733 Broadway, west side, 54 feet north of Waverley-place.

By Howard & Lewis, foreclosure sale, Thomas F. Wentworth, Esq., Referee, of the two three-story brick dwellings, with lots together in size 33.4 by 95.9 by 30.8 by 91, Nos. 212 and 215 East 37th-st., north side, 130 feet east of 3d-av.

Friday, Jan. 31.

By Richard V. Harnett, foreclosure sale, William F. Scott, Esq., Referee, of the five-story brick building, with lot 24.7 by 75, No. 730 1st-av., east side, 74.2 feet north of 41st-st.

Saturday, Feb. 1.

By Louis Mesier, foreclosure sale, John J. Thomasson, Esq., Referee, of the two-story brick dwelling, with lot 13.9 by 74.7, irregular, No. 75 Thompson-st., west side, 112.7 ft. south of Spring-st.

By Howard W. Coates, foreclosure sale, R. B. Gwillim, Esq., Referee, of the five-story brick building, with lot 25 by 100, No. 130 Broome-st., north side, 50 feet west of Pitt-st.

By E. F. Raymond, foreclosure sale, Rufus T. Andrews, Esq., Referee, of the four-story brick building, with lot 16.8 by 98.9, No. 414 West 32d-st., north side, 150 feet west of 9th-av.

By Richard V. Harnett, foreclosure sale, George S. Sedgwick, Esq., Referee, of the four-story brown-stone-front dwelling, with lot 20 by 100.5, No. 230 East 69th-st., south side, 175 feet east of Madison-av.

RECORDED REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

NEW-YORK.

Friday, Jan. 24.

Broadway, s. a. corner of 141st-st., 108.6ᵃˣ 130.8x irregular $1,600

98th-st., s. a., 975 ft. e. of 5th-av., 25x100.11; J. Grant Sinclair, Referee, to George M. Miller, Guardian 1,000

98th-st., s. a., 150 ft. e. of 5th-av., 25x100.11; Same to Same 1,000

98th-st., s. a., 125 ft. e. of 5th-av., 25x100.11; Same to Same 1,000

Avenue St. Nicholas, n. a. corner of 145th-st., 124.11x100; J. Grant Sinclair, Referee, to George M. Miller and another, Executors, &c.

1242d-st., s. s., 248 ft. w. of 3d-av., 20.6 by 100; New-av, by 100.10x245x102; James P. Lowrey, Referee, to James M. Brown 40,500

145th-st., n. s., 513 ft. 5¾ in. e. of 2d-av., 100x Carr to John Smith and wife 1,550

57th-st., n. s., 100 ft. w. of Lexington-av., 75x 100.5; Emmanuel Gillen, wife to the Church of the Holy Spirit ..... nom.

24th-st., No. 347 West, 20x98.9; John Downey and wife to Joseph Corbett 11,500

Ridge-st., No. 38, 21x100; Bradbury C. Chetwood, Referee, to George Cromwell 4,000

140th-st., s. a., 150 ft. w. of 10th-av., 100x 99.11; J. Grant Sinclair, Referee, to Annie C. Willets 2,525

Jerome-av., w. s., 253 ft. s. of third-av., to e. s. of Inwood-av., 75x200; and also w. s. of Inwood-av., 146 ft. n. of Cromwell's Brook, 146x 169x irregular; William F. Scott, Referee, to William Nelson 8,650

Sylvan-av., w. s., 200 ft. n. of Oxford-place, 100x100; Caleb M. Hillman, Referee, to Townsend Poole 1,000

Sylvan-av., w. s., 300 ft. n. of Oxford-place, 75x 100; Same to Same 1,000

Sylvan-av., s. w. corner of Orchard-st., 82.7ᵃˣ 102.11x58.4x100; Same to Same 1,000

Grand-av., s. s., 84.11 ft. s. of Orchard-st., 75x 100; Same to Same 1,000

Grand-av., s. s., 184.1 ft. s. of Orchard-st., 75x 100; Same to Same 1,000

Grand-av., s. s., 209.1 ft. s. of Orchard-st., 100x 100; Same to Same 1,000

West 45th-st., s. s., 52 ft. w. of Wooster-st., 24.4x104.6x irregular; V. L. Cornish to C. D. Holmes 600

57th-st., No. 502 West, 20x55.5; Amelia F. Hammond and another to Frances Hartshorne and others 12,000

26th-st., s. s., 137.6 ft. w. of 9th-av., 25x98.9, and also n. s. 26th-st., 162 ft. w. of 9th-av., 25x98.9; Frances Hartshorne and others to Amelia F. Hammond 30,000

10th-av., s. e. corner 57th-st., 100x130.5; Hugh Hardman to John Hardman and another 5,255

53d-st., s. s., 254.2 ft. w. of 8th-av., 20.10x 100.5; W. S. Coggswell, Referee, to Alexander V. Blaet and another, Executors, &c. 8,500

Division-st., No. 73; Catharine M. Hurley and another, Executrix, &c., to Jacob Miles ..... nom.

Same property; William H. Miles, as Trustee, &c., to Jacob Miles ..... nom.

8th-av., w. s., 115 ft. s. of 17th-st., 22x100; Mary J. Stockton to Matilda Alexander 13,000

Washington-st., No. 745; James S. Radford and wife to Oscar Waring 7,500

1st-av., w. s., 80.5 ft. n. of 120th-st., 25.2ᵃˣ 100; Martin Wines and wife to William G. Wells 4,175

Mulberry-st., w. s., lot No. 485, 22x57.7; Mary A. Neary to Hannah Lynch 12,000

River Drive, s. e. corner of 88th-st., 75x100; Ann M. S. Holland to Juliet H. Vicle 13,500

96th-st., No. 165 East, 25.6 x 9.3x100; Christopher Hamilton and wife to Susan A. Rampf 5,800

Grand-av., w. s., 75.6 ft. s. of Poole Farm, 100x irregular; and also, Grand-av., w. s., 375.6 ft. s. of Poole Farm, 100x irregular; Edward S. Bull to Townsend Poole ..... nom.

Plots Nos. 7, 10, and 29 on a map of the Townsend Poole estate; Theodore M. Squires to John R. Brady ..... nom.

Same property; John R. Brady and wife to [illegible] ..... [illegible]

Plots Nos. 7, 10, and 29 on a map of the Townsend Poole estate; Charles F. Daly and wife to Townsend Poole ..... nom.

LEASES RECORDED.

South-st., Nos. 18, and No. 2 Pelton-st., 7 years; Wil[illegible]rnoon and others, Executors, &c., to [illegible]ovich and Henry Lamberman. $5,714

[illegible] 10 years; Hanford Smith to [illegible] 1,500

MORTGAGES RECORDED.

[illegible] and husband to John Bond; [illegible] of 24-av., 2 years $6,600

[illegible]n S. and husband to the Mu[illegible]rance Company; No. 68 West [illegible]ombs 13,000

Cole[illegible]o. and wife to Margaret A. Cole; s. s. 10[illegible]-av., n. of 159th-st., 1 year 3,600

Cromwell, George, to John Cromwell; s. s. Ridge-st., n. of Stanton-st., 5 years 3,500

Decora, Catharine J., and husband to Mary A. Patterson; Samuel st., 24th Ward, lot No. 362, 3 years 1,400

Gillespie, Edward, to Alexander Milne; s. s. 53d-st., s. of 10th-av., 3 years 8,000

Gilsey, Julius, and wife to Max Danziger; n. s. 58th-st., w. of 3d-av., 1 month 1,000

Glass, John, Jr., to Charles D. Mathews; n. s. 149th-st., w. of 10th-av., 1 month 750

Johnston, Emma J., and husband to Charles Bauer; s. s. 85th-st., w. of Avenue A., 10 days. 4,000

Johnston, Emma J., and husband to Samuel Brown; same property, 3 months 3,000

Johnston, Emeline, and others to William H. Austin; s. s. 115th-st., e. of 2d-av., 3 years.. 5,000

Kelly, John, and others to Joseph Hanlon; No. 17 New Bowery, 1 year 2,000

Mine, Jacob, and wife to the Bowery Savings Bank; No. 73 Division-st., 3 years 8,000

Pecis, Townsend, and wife to Adeline J. Chadwick; property in 24th Ward, 3 years 4,000

Poole, Townsend, and wife to Jane F. Van Rensselaer, Executrix, &c.; same property, 3 years 7,000

Schappert, Philippena, and another, Executrix, &c., to M. Desmnesy; n. e. corner of 2d-av. and 45th-st., 3 years 3,000

Sergeant, Alice P., to Elizabeth K. Ward; s. s. of Troy-st., 24th Ward, 5 years 5,000

Viele, Juliette H., to Ann M. S. Holland; s. e. corner of River Drive and 89th-st., 3 years..... 1,500

ASSIGNMENTS OF MORTGAGES.

American Baptist Home Mission Society to A. B. Chapwell $6,202

Benton, William H. and another, Executors, &c., to William H. Sutton and others 2,000

Same to Same 8,000

Holland, Ann M. S. to Charles A. Davison, Trustee, &c. 1,500

Polk, Katie to Lina Sofsky 4,000

Norton, Ernest, to Lina Sofsky 1,150

Steinmetz, Adam, to Mary M. Rauh 888

Taylor, Edmund B., to Ellen F. Lonergan 2,150

CITY REAL ESTATE.

FOR SALE—THE DESIRABLE FOUR-STORY brown-stone house NO. 19 WEST 32D-ST., full width and depth, with butler's pantry extension and back stairs.

ALSO,

In 413T-ST., near 5TH-AV., a four-story house of full width; also with butler's pantry extension; can be bought for less than $30,000. Apply to

EDWARD W. LOW & CO.,
No. 3 Pine-st. and No. 1,180 Broadway.

FOR SALE—AN ASSORTMENT OF HOUSES, of gold prices, from $3,500 to $15,000. Situate on 52d, 81st, 80th, and 79th sts. Two beautiful corners, 79th and 80th sts. and 1st-av. Desirable as an investment. Call and see them. Office, corner 79th-st. and 1st-av.

THE DESIRABLE PROPERTY, NO. 61 West 14th-st., 75 feet east of 6th-av., building 25x 113, suitable for dry goods, furniture, or any business, to lease or sell. Apply on premises.

FOR SALE—ON WEST 57TH-ST., NEAR 5TH-Av., an elegant four-story brown-stone house; modern finish and all modern improvements. Built expressly for the owner. Apply at No. 160 Fulton-st., Room 10.

BULKHEAD WATER-FRONTS, NEAR CITY, for chemical works, factories, refineries, &c.; also, blocks for dwellings; for sale very low, on easy terms. R. A. YOUNG, Examiner, No. 20 Exchange-place.

HARLEM—RAPID TRANSIT.

Houses, stores, and floors, to let and for sale.
PORTER & CO., No. 178 East 125th-st.

REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION.

ADRIAN H. MULLER, Auctioneer.

ESTATE OF JOHN H. POWERS, DECEASED.

EXECUTOR'S SALE OF VALUABLE IMPROVED AND UNIMPROVED PROPERTY.

ADRIAN H. MULLER & SON will sell at auction on TUESDAY, Jan. 28, at 12 o'clock, at the Exchange Sales-room, No. 111 Broadway, the following described real estate:

FOURTH-AVENUE.—The four-story brick stores, with lease of lots, situate on the north-west corner of 4th-ave. and 11th-st., Nos. 93, 95, 97, 99, and 101 4th-av. The leases are from the Stuyvesant estate.

THIRTY-FOURTH-STREET.—Two brick stores and lot No. 28 Stone and No. 61 Pearl-st., running through from Pearl to Stone-st.

LAND AND MOTT STREETS.—The brick and frame buildings and lots Nos. 178 and 180 Canal-st., corner of Mott-st.

THIRD-AVENUE, SIXTY-SIXTH AND SIXTY-SEVENTH STREETS.—Eight lots, comprising the entire easterly front on 3d-av., between 66th and 67th sts., and 14 lots on 66th-st., and 14 lots on 67th-st., commencing 100 feet west of the 3d-av., street lots and each 20x100 feet, except the two easterly lots on each street, which are 30x100 feet each.

RIVERSIDE.—The lot on the north-west corner of Elm and Catharine-lane.

FORTY-SECOND-STREET.—One lot, south side, 300 feet west of 7th-av., 25x98.9.

SIXTY-EIGHTH AND SIXTY-NINTH STREETS.—Six lots, north side of 68th-st., 325 feet west of 8th av., and four lots, south side of 69th-st., 325 feet west of 9th-av.

RIVERSIDE-AVENUE.—Seven lots on easterly side of Riverside-av., 226 feet north of 116th-st., and opposite Riverside Park.

TWELFTH-AVENUE.—Plot of water lots on 12th-av., between 118th and 118th sts., opposite Riverside Park.

ELEVENTH-AVENUE.—Four lots, south side, between 11th and Riverside-av.

TWELFTH-AVENUE.—One water-lot, north-east corner 94th-st.

STUYVESANT DUYVIL CREEK AND TWO HUNDRED AND TWENTY-SECOND-STREET.—About 19 lots.

BROOKLYN.—Thirty-two lots, comprising the entire block bounded by Columbia, Sigourney, Otsego and Halleck sts.

HUGH CASSIDY, Executor,
HENRIETTA B. POWERS, Executrix.
of JOHN H. POWERS, Deceased.

Book-maps at the office of the auctioneers, No. 7 Pine-st., and of the Executor, No. 11 Pine-st.

CITY HOUSES TO LET.

TO LET OR LEASE.

THE FOUR LOTS, with the BUILDINGS THEREON, situated at the north-east corner of 41st-st. and Park-av., constituting the southerly portion of the

GRAND UNION HOTEL.

Apply to HORACE S. ELY,
No. 22 Pine-st., New-York.

STORES, &C., TO LET.

OFFICES TO LET
IN THE
TIMES BUILDING.
APPLY TO
GEORGE JONES,
TIMES OFFICE.

TO LET—NO. 18 WALKER-ST.—FIVE-STORY modern building; iron front. Can be rented as a whole, or will be divided. Apply to

HORACE S. ELY,
No. 22 Pine-st.

TO LET—THE FOUR SIX (6) STORY BUILDINGS corner Canal and Mulberry sts., fronting on Canal-st., Nos. 206 and 212, suitable for stores or manufactory; will be let separately if desired; well lighted, high ground, and good dry basement. Apply to

JOHN H. MONTEATH, No. 151 Centre-st.

NO. 199 CHURCH-ST. — SECOND, THIRD, and Fourth Lofts to let; very light and desirable. Apply to

HORACE S. ELY,
No. 22 Pine-st.

LOFTS TO RENT—IN THE FINE BUILDINGS, No. 96 Beekman-st., and No. 18 Spruce-st., admirable location for publishing, leather or shoe trade or manufacturing; other lotts. JAMES PRICE, 200 Hudson-st. and 96 Beekman-st.

COUNTRY REAL ESTATE.

NEW HOUSES AT LAUREL HILL, LONG ISLAND.—Retaken for mortgages; $1,250 and $1,-800; about half actual cost.

R. A. YOUNG,
No. 20 Exchange-place.

SHIPPING.

FLORIDA RAILROAD AND STEAM-SHIP LINE.

ONLY DIRECT LINE TO FLORIDA.
SAILING EVERY SATURDAY.
LOWEST RATES OF FREIGHT AND PASSAGE.
Steamer ASHLAND, SATURDAY, Jan. 25.
And every SATURDAY thereafter.

For Fernandina direct, from Pier No. 19 N. R., at 3 P.M.

Only line issuing through tickets and bills lading to all points in Florida, and on Chattahoochie, Appalachicola, and Flint Rivers, and BRUNSWICK, Ga. Insurance ½ per cent. Bills of lading signed at Pier. For further information, through bills lading, and passage rates, apply to

H. B. SOMERS,
No. 177 West-st., up stairs.

UNITED STATES AND BRAZIL MAIL STEAM-SHIP LINE.

FOR ST. THOMAS, PARA, PERNAMBUCO, BAHIA, AND RIO DE JANEIRO.

Connecting at St. Thomas with German steamers for Porto Rico and Spanish Main. The new first-class iron steam-ship CITY OF PARA, Capt. Carruthers, will sail for the above ports on Wednesday, Feb. 5, at 3 P. M.

Positively no freight received after 2d. Freight must be paid in advance. Rates as low as rates taken for the above ports. Freight received at Roberts' Dock, Brooklyn. Insurance lower than by any other line. Shippers desiring insurance can effect same under our open policy. For freight engagements or passage, having elegant accommodations, apply to C. H. MALLORY & CO., Agents. Office, Pier No. 50 East River.

SAVANNAH AND FLORIDA.

From Pier No. 43 North River, at 3 P. M.
CITY OF COLUMBUS, Capt. RICKENSON.....Wed., Jan. 29
CITY OF SAVANNAH, Capt. MALLORY.....Sat., Feb. 1
Connecting with the Central Railroad of Georgia at Jesup and Pearl Railroad, Georgia and Florida Steamboat Company, and with the new and elegant iron steamer ST. JOHNS.

GEO. YONGE, Agent,
Ocean S. S. Co. and
Central R. R. of Ga.,
No. 400 Broadway.

SHIPPING.

GUION LINE.
UNITED STATES MAIL STEAMERS
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.
Leaving Pier 38, N. R., foot of King-st.

MONTANA.....TUESDAY, Jan. 28, 9 A. M.
WISCONSIN.....TUESDAY, Feb. 4, 3 P. M.
WYOMING.....TUESDAY, Feb. 18, 3 P. M.
NEVADA.....TUESDAY, Feb. 25, 7:30 A. M.
MONTANA.....TUESDAY, March 4, 3 P. M.

☞ These steamers are built of iron, in water-tight compartments, and are furnished with every requisite to make the passage across the Atlantic both safe and agreeable, having bath-room, smoking-room, drawing-room, piano, and library; also, experienced surgeon, stewardess, and caterer on each steamer. The state-rooms are all on deck, thus insuring those greatest of all luxuries at sea, perfect ventilation and light.

CABIN PASSAGE, (according to choice-room,) $80, $85, and $75. INTERMEDIATE, $60; STEERAGE, $26.
OFFICES, NO. 29 BROADWAY.
WILLIAMS & GUION.

WHITE STAR LINE.
UNITED STATES AND ROYAL MAIL STEAMERS
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.

NOTICE.—The steamers of this line take the Lane Routes recommended by Lieut. Maury, U. S. N., on both the outward and the homeward passage.

BRITANNIC, Capt. PERRY.....Saturday, Feb. 1, noon.
REPUBLIC, Capt. INMAN.....Thursday, Feb. 6, 3 P. M.
GERMANIC, Capt. ROGERS.....Tuesday, Feb. 18, 12:30 P. M.

From White Star Dock, Pier No. 52 North River.

These steamers are uniform in size and unsurpassed in appointments. The saloon, state-rooms, smoking, and bath rooms are amidships, where the noise and motion are least felt, affording a degree of comfort hitherto unattainable at sea.

Rates—Saloon, $80, $80, and $100, gold; return tickets on favorable terms; steerage, $26.

These steamers carry neither cattle, sheep, nor pigs.

For inspection of plans and other information, apply at the company's office, No. 37 Broadway, New-York, or No. 140 Walnut-st., Phila.
E. J. CORTIS, Agent.

M. VAN BROCKLIN, Superintendent.

CUNARD LINE.
NOTICE.

With the view of diminishing the chances of collision, the steamers of this line take a specified course for all seasons of the year.

On the outward passage from Queenstown to New-York or Boston, crossing the meridian of 50 at 42 latitude, or nothing to the north of 42.

On the homeward passage, crossing the meridian of 50 at 42, or nothing to the north of 43.

FROM NEW-YORK FOR LIVERPOOL OR QUEENSTOWN.
PARTHIA...WED., Jan. 29 ABYSSINIA...WED., Feb. 12
SCOTIA...WED., Feb. 5 BATAVIA...WED., Feb. 19

Cabin passage and return tickets on favorable terms, including a special low rate for the Fall and Winter months.

Steerage tickets to and from all parts of Europe at very low rates. Freight and passage office, No. 4 Bowling Green.
CHAS. G. FRANCKLYN, Agent.

STATE LINE,
TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, DUBLIN, BELFAST, AND LONDONDERRY.

From Pier No. 42 N. R., foot of Canal-st., as follows:
STATE OF INDIANA.....Thursday, Jan. 30
STATE OF VIRGINIA.....Thursday, Feb. 6

First Cabin, $55 to $70, according to accommodations; excursion tickets, $100 to $120. Second Cabin, $40; excursion tickets, $75. Steerage, lowest rates.

AUSTIN, BALDWIN & CO., Agents,
No. 72 Broadway, New-York.

STEERAGE tickets at low rates. Apply at the company's pier, foot of Canal-st., North River.

ANCHOR LINE U. S. MAIL STEAMERS,
NEW-YORK TO GLASGOW.
From Pier No. 20 North River, New-York.

Ethiopia.....Feb. 1, noon. Bolivia.....Feb. 15, noon.
Anchoria.....Feb. 8, 9 A. M. (Circassia.....Feb. 22, 6 A. M.

Cabin passage $60 and upward, according to location. Second Cabin, $40. Steerage, $28.
NEW-YORK TO LONDONDERRY.
From Pier No. 46 North River, foot of Charles-st.

California.....Feb. 1, noon. (Australia.....Feb. 8, 9 A. M.

Cabins, $55 and $65. Excursion tickets at reduced rates. Second Cabin, $40. Steerage, $28.
HENDERSON BROTHERS, Agents, 7 Bowling Green.

NORTH GERMAN LLOYD.
STEAM-SHIP LINE BETWEEN NEW-YORK, SOUTHAMPTON, AND BREMEN.

Company's pier foot of 2d-st., Hoboken.
WESER.....Sat., Feb 15 | ODER.....Sat., Feb. 22
MOSEL.....Sat., Feb 8 | DONAU.....Sat., Feb. 25

RATES OF PASSAGE FROM NEW-YORK TO SOUTHAMPTON, HAVRE, OR BREMEN.

First cabin.....$100
Second cabin.....60
Steerage.....30

Return tickets at reduced rates. Prepaid Steerage certificates, $30. STEERAGE TICKETS TO ALL POINTS IN THE SOUTH OF ENGLAND, $30.
OELRICHS & CO., No. 2 Bowling Green.

INMAN LINE ROYAL MAIL STEAMERS.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.

CITY OF MONTREAL.....Thursday, Jan. 30, 11 A. M.
CITY OF BERLIN.....Saturday, Feb. 8, 6:30 A. M.
CITY OF RICHMOND.....Wednesday, Feb. 19, 6:30 A. M.

From Pier No. 37 North River, foot of Charlton-st.

CABIN, $60, $80, and $100, gold. Return tickets on favorable terms. STEERAGE, $30. Drafts at lowest rates Saloons, state-rooms, smoking and bath rooms amidships. These steamers do not carry cattle, sheep, or pigs.

Nos. 31 and 33 Broadway, N. Y.
Philadelphia Office, No. 105 South 4th-st.

GENERAL TRANSATLANTIC COMPANY
between New-York and Havre.
Company's Pier, (new,) No. 50 North River, foot of Morton-st.

FRANCE, TRUDELLE.....Wednesday, Feb. 5, 3:30 P. M.
CANADA, FRANQUE.....Wednesday, Feb. 19, 3:30 P. M.
LAFAYETTE, PRUDHOMME.....Saturday, March 8, 3 P. M.

Steamers marked thus * do not carry steerage passengers.

Checks drawn out to Cherbourg if desired.

Rates—$80 and upward, according to location.

Excepting between the hours of 5:30 and 7:30 A. M. and 5 and 7 P. M., when the fare is 5 cents.

WM. R. GARRISON, President.

CHARLES DE BEBIAN, Agent, No. 55 Broadway.

IMPERIAL GERMAN MAIL.

Hamburg American Packet Company's line for PLYMOUTH, CHERBOURG, and HAMBURG.
GELLERT...Thurs., Jan. 30 | LESSING...Thurs., Feb. 13
ZIMBRIA...Thurs., Feb. 6 | WISLA...Thurs., Feb. 20

Rates of passage to Plymouth, London, Cherbourg, Hamburg, and all points in England: First Cabin, $100; second cabin, $70; Steerage, $30.

KUNHARDT & CO., C. B. RICHARD & BOAS,
General Agents. General Passenger Agents,
No. 61 Broadway, N. Y. No. 5 Broadway, N. Y.

ROTTERDAM LINE.

Steamers leave Jersey City, near Pavonia Ferry.

W. A. SCHOLTEN.....Saturday, Feb. 1
MAAS.....Saturday, Feb. 15

Cabin, $65-$70. Intermediate, $45-$50. Steerage, $28.
H. GAZAUX, General Agent, No. 27 South William-st.

FUNCH, EDYE & CO., L. W. MORRIS,
Gen. Pass. Agts. for N. W. Agts. 50 B'way. Assign Agt.

NATIONAL LINE—FROM NEW PIER 39 N. R.
FOR LONDON. (Victoria Docks):
Canada, Feb. 1, 11:30 A. M. | Denmark, Wed., Feb. 12, 9 A. M.
FOR LIVERPOOL AND QUEENSTOWN:
Egypt, Sat., Feb. 1, 8:30 A. M. | Erin, Wed., Feb. 5, 8:30 A. M.

Cabin, $50 to $70, currency; steerage, $26. Drafts from £1 upward issued at very low rates. Company's office, 69 and 73 Broadway. E. W. J. HUNER, Manager.

GREAT SOUTHERN
FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE
FOR CHARLESTON, S. C., FLORIDA PORTS,
AND ALL POINTS IN THE SOUTH
AND SOUTH-WEST.
SAILING FROM PIER NO. 27 NORTH RIVER.
WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS.

GULF STREAM.....WEDNESDAY, Jan. 29
CITY OF ATLANTA.....SATURDAY, Feb. 1

BUNDLE FREIGHT AGENCY FOR THE SOUTH.
Insurance to destination, one-half of one per cent.
Goods forwarded free of commission. Passenger tickets and bills of lading issued and signed at the office of

JAMES HUNTER, Agent,
No. 3 Bowling Green.

OFFICES TO LET
IN THE
TIMES BUILDING.
APPLY TO
GEORGE JONES,
TIMES OFFICE.

RAILROADS.

METROPOLITAN ELEVATED RAILWAY.

Open from 5:30 A. M. to 12 P. M.

RECTOR-ST.—Nearest point for Wall-Street Ferry, and connects with cars for South Ferry.
CORTLANDT-ST.—Nearest point for Jersey City and Cammeyahaw Ferries.
PARK-PLACE.—Nearest point for Post Office, City Hall, and Barclay-Street Ferry to Hoboken.
CHAMBERS-ST.—Nearest point for Pavonia and Erie Railway Ferry.
FRANKLIN-ST.
GRAND-ST.—Nearest point for Desbrosses-Street Ferry to Jersey City, and connects with cars for Desbrosses and East Grand-Street Ferries.
BLEECKER-ST.—Connects with cars for East and West.
EIGHTH-ST.—Nearest point for Christopher-Street Ferry to Hoboken, connecting with cars for Christopher and East Tenth Street Ferries.
FOURTEENTH-ST.—Nearest point to Union-square, Wallack's and Lyceum Theatres, Academy of Music, Irving and Tammany Halls, connecting with cars for East Twenty-third and Thirty-fourth Street Ferries.
TWENTY-THIRD-ST.—Nearest point to Booth's, St. James, and Park Theatres, Grand Opera-house, Gilmore's Garden, and Masonic Temple, and Twenty-third-Street Ferry to Jersey City.
THIRTY-THIRD-ST.—Nearest point to Standard, Broadway, and Fifth-Avenue Theatres, Aquarium, and San Francisco Minstrels, connecting with cars for Weehawken Ferry.
FORTY-SECOND-ST.—Connects with New-York Transfer Company's cabs, for Grand Central Depot.
FIFTIETH-ST.
FIFTY-EIGHTH-ST.—Nearest point for Central Park, connecting with cars of Belt Line Railroad.

Rates—Saloon, $60, $80, and $100, gold; return tickets on favorable terms; steerage, $26.

These steamers carry neither cattle, sheep, nor pigs.

For inspection of plans and other information, apply at the company's office, No. 37 Broadway, New-York, or No. 140 Walnut-st., Phila.
E. J. CORTIS, Agent.

M. VAN BROCKLIN, Superintendent.

CUNARD LINE.
NOTICE.

With the view of diminishing the chances of collision, the steamers of this line take a specified course for all seasons of the year.

On the outward passage from Queenstown to New-York or Boston, crossing the meridian of 50 at 42 latitude, or nothing to the north of 42.

On the homeward passage, crossing the meridian of 50 at 42, or nothing to the north of 43.

FROM NEW-YORK FOR LIVERPOOL OR QUEENSTOWN.
PARTHIA...WED., Jan. 29 ABYSSINIA...WED., Feb. 12
SCOTIA...WED., Feb. 5 BATAVIA...WED., Feb. 19

Cabin passage and return tickets on favorable terms, including a special low rate for the Fall and Winter months.

Steerage tickets to and from all parts of Europe at very low rates. Freight and passage office, No. 4 Bowling Green.
CHAS. G. FRANCKLYN, Agent.

STATE LINE,
TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, DUBLIN, BELFAST, AND LONDONDERRY.

From Pier No. 42 N. R., foot of Canal-st., as follows:
STATE OF INDIANA.....Thursday, Jan. 30
STATE OF VIRGINIA.....Thursday, Feb. 6

First Cabin, $55 to $70, according to accommodations; excursion tickets, $100 to $120. Second Cabin, $40; excursion tickets, $75. Steerage, lowest rates.

AUSTIN, BALDWIN & CO., Agents,
No. 72 Broadway, New-York.

STEERAGE tickets at low rates. Apply at the company's pier, foot of Canal-st., North River.

ANCHOR LINE U. S. MAIL STEAMERS,
NEW-YORK TO GLASGOW.
From Pier No. 20 North River, New-York.

Ethiopia.....Feb. 1, noon. Bolivia.....Feb. 15, noon.
Anchoria.....Feb. 8, 9 A. M. (Circassia.....Feb. 22, 6 A. M.

Cabin passage $60 and upward, according to location. Second Cabin, $40. Steerage, $28.
NEW-YORK TO LONDONDERRY.
From Pier No. 46 North River, foot of Charles-st.

California.....Feb. 1, noon. (Australia.....Feb. 8, 9 A. M.

Cabins, $55 and $65. Excursion tickets at reduced rates. Second Cabin, $40. Steerage, $28.
HENDERSON BROTHERS, Agents, 7 Bowling Green.

NORTH GERMAN LLOYD.
STEAM-SHIP LINE BETWEEN NEW-YORK, SOUTHAMPTON, AND BREMEN.

Company's pier foot of 2d-st., Hoboken.
WESER.....Sat., Feb 15 | ODER.....Sat., Feb. 22
MOSEL.....Sat., Feb 8 | DONAU.....Sat., Feb. 25

RATES OF PASSAGE FROM NEW-YORK TO SOUTHAMPTON, HAVRE, OR BREMEN.

First cabin.....$100
Second cabin.....60
Steerage.....30

Return tickets at reduced rates. Prepaid Steerage certificates, $30. STEERAGE TICKETS TO ALL POINTS IN THE SOUTH OF ENGLAND, $30.
OELRICHS & CO., No. 2 Bowling Green.

INMAN LINE ROYAL MAIL STEAMERS.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.

CITY OF MONTREAL.....Thursday, Jan. 30, 11 A. M.
CITY OF BERLIN.....Saturday,

TOUCHING UP THE FARMERS

TALMAGE IN AND OUT OF TOWN.

THIS OBSERVATIONS AND THE CONCLUSIONS HE DRAWS IN REGARD TO THE MORAL CONDITION OF THE NATION—THE CITY AS GOOD AS THE COUNTRY.

Mr. Talmage resumed his series of sermons on the moral condition of the country yesterday to a crowded house. His text was Zachariah i.: 17: "My cities through prosperity shall yet be spread abroad." He said that the city is no worse than the country. The vices of the metropolis are more evident because it contains more people who can be bad if they wish, but on the average the merchant is as good as the farmer. Cheating is no worse in town than out of it; it is only on a larger scale there. The countryman prevaricates about the horse he has to sell; about the size of his measures; about the quality of the peaches in the bottom of the basket, and about the tenderness of his side of beef, to as great an extent as the shop-keeper does about his dry goods or hardware. Villages are in some respects worse than cities, for they copy the vices of the latter in their meanest shape, and, as for gossip, it's heaven is a country village. [Laughter.] There everybody knows a man's business better than he does himself. The grocery store and the blacksmith's shop are the head-quarters of the worst kind of male tittle-tattle, and there are always half a dozen women with their sun-bonnets hanging up convenient, so that at the first item they can fly out and cackle it around. [Laughter.] Cain was the founder of the first city. Cities always take after their founders in morals. It will require centuries for New-York to get over the good influences of its pious founders. Formerly people gathered in cities for protection; now they do so for rapid gain. Cities are not necessarily evil. It is strange that there should be bickerings between our great American cities. Boston is the city of large forehead and great brain; Philadelphia the city of calm and deliberate step; New-York the city with its pocket full of change; St. Louis and Chicago the cities of astonishing rush; Brooklyn, the city that takes its wife and children alone—all are distinguished for various peculiarities, but not one of them can be spared. The speaker pleaded for a higher style of brotherhood between the cities, and then proceeded to note several of the important features in which all agree. They show that this is a world of toil and struggle; that life is full of pretension, and that they are all magnificent fields for Christian work. Commercial life is strewn with temptations. There are shylocks in business—men who, if an honest principle should creep into their souls, it would die from sheer loneliness—and these make it impossible for their competitors to be honest and prosper. The speaker had a friend once who, when about entering the calling of a dealer in books, announced that he intended to be guided by one rule, viz: Not to sell any book over his counter that he would not have read in his family. A few years afterward Mr. Talmage revisited the store and found the shelves filled with the worst kind of literature. On remonstrating, he was told, "I have got over those Puritanical notions; I must do as others do." In a little while that man lost all his property and his intellect, and went into a mad-house. The speaker knew another man—a young drug clerk—who refused to sell blacking on the Lord's Day and was discharged forth. A Christian gentleman who heard of the incident got him a much better position, and he amassed a fortune and became a leading light in politics. All this went to prove that wickedness never prospers and virtue is always rewarded pecuniarily as well as otherwise. It is a great mistake, continued the speaker, to imagine that charity can consecrate unlawful gains, and then he told a friend he was puzzled how to dispose of a large donation made by an immoral man to a missionary society. Finally, it came out that the donor had been cabbling in a swindle of the worst character and thought that all he had to do was to give part of his steal to God, and he would be let off for the remainder. He was wrong. Churches and missionary societies are not shops for the receipt of stolen goods. Should anybody have any such thing, should at once return them to the lawful owners. Should that be impossible, they should heat their furnace seven times hot and and throw the stolen goods in. Another general fact about cities is that in the temptations to them of a political character. Once in a while a man gets imbued with a missionary spirit and goes into politics to reform them. That is laudable, and such a man will come out as good as he went in, despite the newspapers, which generally set to work at once to blacken an aspirant's character, so that he soon becomes lost in admiration at the length of time he has managed to keep out of jail. [Laughter.] Bad literature is another too common feature of cities. Half the books on the shop shelves are of the most pernicious character, and there are men whose sole business it is to distribute this kind of smut. Mr. Talmage concluded from his observations that no man can be safe in a city without the grace of God, and that there are manifold warnings hung up before every temptation if the passer-by will but regard them. Next Sunday he will speak on the points of difference between the great American cities.

THE NEED OF PUBLIC WORSHIP.

A MINISTER'S VIEWS ON AMUSEMENTS—SERMON BY REV. EDMUND GUILBERT.

A large audience gathered in the Church of the Holy Spirit, East Fifty-seventh-street, yesterday morning, to listen to Rev. Edmund Guilbert, the Rector, who preached from Hebrews, x.: 23, 24, 25: "Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering," &c. Mr. Guilbert spoke first of the religious instinct in man, and said that men do not go to church because of custom, nor through a desire to see and to be seen, nor for social reasons, but because of a felt need of God. Many persons who believe in God do not attend any church, however, either because they get no comfort from the service or because their religious sensibilities are dull. One of the disadvantages of many country places is the fact that there is only one church for people to attend, and a country curate meets with great difficulty in trying to preach acceptably to an assemblage of persons of widely different views. Some want the highest kind of a ritual, and some want no ritual. Others want the most perfect musical art in the choir, and others still want congregational singing. In this City there are churches and churches, and a man does perfectly right in looking up one that suits him. But when a man forsakes the House of God, he strikes a great blow at his moral life. He never can cannot lead a moral life, and if one does not pray in public, he will not pray in private. Public prayer is necessary to healthy religious growth. Mr. Guilbert spoke at length upon the weakness never prospers and virtue is always rewarded pecuniarily as well as otherwise. and then touched upon some of the peculiarities of the Church of the Holy Spirit, which he said was a loyal church of an historic community. The doctrines of the Episcopal Church were defended by the preacher, who said that when a person wanted to join that church he was not asked to affirm his belief in the doctrine of election, "which has driven hundreds to despair and made many infidels." Nor was he asked to believe that baptism was only effectual when gallons of water were used. "The quantity of water is of no importance," Mr. Guilbert urged. "Twenty drops are just as good as 20 gallons. Nor do we ask a man if he has had the 'witness of the Spirit'—tokens that he has been singled out for marvelous things. True religion is not a question of modes and feelings, but one of duty."

Mr. Guilbert argued earnestly that the Church should strive to harmonize with a religious life the utmost breadth of culture. Human nature is esthetic and fond of amusements. The Church should not shut her eyes to this fact. It is not the business of religion to shut itself up in a wilderness, as John the Baptist did, but to go out into the world, as Christ did. The speaker dwelt at length upon the subject of amusements, and claimed that the dangerous thing was that have crept into the theatre. concerts, poetry, &c., were the result of the Church having turned its back upon these institutions, and cried out, "Unclean, unclean," until the line between good and evil has been drawn hard and fast, and the bad has grown worse and the good no better. "We cannot get rid of the instinct of amusement in man," said he, "and it is better to sanctify what cannot be destroyed. I am not for going half-way with the world and half-way with God, but we do not do our duty when we stand aloof from these worldly amusements. We do not believe that what is pleasant must be right, but we want to see these institutions elevated through the individual, and not the individual degraded by the institutions. Christianity must do this—a wide, large-hearted religion; not a figment of theology, a sect, or a party, but a life-giving religion."

The society of the Church of the Holy Spirit has been in existence only nine months, but two-thirds of the pews in their beautiful church are already rented and the membership is increasing rapidly. The church has been built 10 years, and was occupied by four unsuccessful societies before becoming the property of its present possessors. Rev. Mr. Guilbert, the Rector, had been Rector of a parish in Tarrytown for 17 years previous to his call to this City, and the present flourishing condition of the church is very largely due to his efforts.

SEQUEL TO AN ACCIDENTNL SHOOTING.

Officer Leeson, of the Fourteenth Precinct, heard a pistol shot in Grand-street early yesterday morning, and, hastening in the direction whence the report came, met Edward Pierce, of No. 23 James-street, who said he had shot himself accidentally in the leg with his own pistol. Officer Leeson brought Pierce, who was hardly able to walk, to the station-house, and, on searching him, found some burglar's tools in his possession. Pierce expressed an unwillingness to make any satisfactory explanation, and, after his wound was attended to, was locked up for the night. Yesterday morning he was taken before Justice Smith, in the Tombs Police Court, and, on the charge of being a "suspicious person," was remanded until this morning.

THE FREE SONS OF ISRAEL.

The annual session of District Grand Lodge No. 1, Independent Order of Free Sons of Israel, was opened at Irving Hall at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. The installation of ex-Presidents as members of the Grand Lodge was proceeded with, and the Grand Master read his annual report and that of the General Committee. The election of grand officers resulted in the choice of Benjamin Blumenthal for Grand Master; Isidor Dreifus, Deputy Grand Master; R. Lehman, Grand Treasurer, and H. S. Goldsmith, Grand Secretary. The order is composed exclusively of Israelites, and extends throughout the United States. Its object is the welfare of the Jewish race. District Grand Lodge No. 1 represents 54 subordinate lodges, with a membership of 6,500, and a capital of $160,000. All the lodges are represented at the present session, which will continue for several days.

THE SHOOTING OF "OOFTY GOOFT."

HIS CRITICAL CONDITION AT THE HOSPITAL—MRS. HOOPER'S HISTORY—A POLICEMAN'S STRANGE CONDUCT.

Augustus Phillips Alden, better known as "Gus" Phillips or "Oofty Gooft," lay in a ward of the New-York Hospital yesterday in a somewhat improved condition, as he had become more calm and less nervous. Dr. Quinlan, the physician who attended him just after the shooting, visited the hospital during the morning and had a long interview with him. Alden expressed great regret that he should have raised his hand against his mistress, but said she was frenzied with pain and excitement at the time. He expected his wound would prove fatal, and said it was very hard that he should have escaped the bullets of the battle-field to die at the hand of a woman. To-day another effort will be made to discover and remove the ball, as its presence in the wound is a constant irritant. If it is not removed Alden's death is more than probable. He steadfastly refuses to see any visitors. On Saturday two ladies called to see him. One of them, a middle-aged lady, said she was his wife, and the other was a young girl about 17, said to be his daughter. Alden sent down word that he would not see them, and they went away greatly disappointed. Before leaving the hospital the elder lady said she had been separated from Alden between two and three years, as his conduct was so bad toward her that her relatives would no longer hear of her putting up with it. But now that his life was in danger, she hoped a reconciliation might be effected, and if so she would take him to her home and nurse him faithfully.

Mrs. Hooper also remains in a ward of the hospital. She is suffering from intense excitement and nervous prostration, but her black eyes are rapidly healing, and the wound in her finger is of little consequence. She now professes great regret for shooting Alden, and says she was "mad" and "out of her head" when she did so. It will be several days before she will be well enough to bear removal to the Tombs. She also refuses to receive any visitors.

Mrs. Hooper was released in October from the Kings County Penitentiary, where she served a term for larceny. Her offense was that she had stolen from the house of Mr. William H. Delaney, of Brooklyn, $2,000 worth of diamonds in the Fall of 1877. She was convicted in September of that year and sentenced to one year's imprisonment. Her good conduct in the Penitentiary shortened her sentence three months. Immediately after her release she went to live with Alden. Dr. Quinlan says he attended Mrs. Hooper for hysteria several times, and was frequently in their rooms. He supposed they were man and wife, and thought them a most loving couple. The Doctor thinks Alden is in a very critical condition, and does not hesitate to say that his being so must be largely attributed to the action of the Police officer who arrested him. He found Alden in the Doctor's office and insisted upon taking the wounded man to once to the Police station. Doctor Quinlan told the officer that Alden was not in a fit condition to be removed without an ambulance, but the officer insisted that Alden could walk the distance very well and threatened that if he would not be compelled to walk several blocks. He fainted five times after entering the station-house and since then has been in a very feverish condition. His father, who resides in this City, has not yet been to see him, although he is constantly in correspondence with his physician.

On Saturday a young man, who gave his name as Stokes, called at the house where Alden had rooms, and represented that he was Alden's agent. He was permitted to pack up the effects in the rooms, but was forbidden to take them away until he could produce the proper authority from Alden. He said the latter owns about $70,000 of property, mainly real estate, in this City.

A MUCH WOUNDED MAN.

Onofarino la Mattino, the Italian barber who was assaulted with a razor by his employer, Pedro Tarintino, at No. 307 Hamilton-avenue, Brooklyn, on Friday evening, still lies in a critical condition at St. Peter's Hospital, in that city. Dr. Conroy, the resident surgeon in charge of the hospital, said yesterday afternoon that there is no immediate danger of Mattino's death, unless the wound which severed the left temporal artery should commence bleeding afresh, but that if the bleeding began death would be likely to ensue in a few minutes. That wound, he said, is the most dangerous of all of those inflicted by the infuriated Tarintino. It extends from the nose across the temple, and down through the ear, severing the lower lobe of the ear and the temporal artery. The next most serious wound is a gash 3 inches long and 4 inches deep across the left hip. Both wrists are also cut to the bone, the tendons of one being severed. There is also a bullet wound in the left hip, near the cut, and another gash across the top of the head, making, in all, six severe wounds. Dr. Conroy says the man may possibly recover, but that if he does he will probably be a cripple for life, as it is more than likely that the cuts on his wrists will prevent his using his hands. The Doctor probed for the bullet with the longest probe in the hospital, but has thus far been unable to find it.

THE FEE-BOOK KEPT SEALED.

County Clerk Gumbleton has reduced to a system the obstructive policy he adopted some time ago to prevent the Bar Association's Committee from investigating the books of his office and, by a measure which he has recently adopted and which is now being carried into practice, seems to consider that the books in question will furnish strong evidence against him. The new system is illustrated by an incident which occurred in the County Clerk's office on Saturday. It seems that a young lawyer named Frederick S. Wait called on Mr. Gumbleton and asked leave to see the fee-book, which the County Clerk is required by law to keep. He was told that he could see the book only on one condition, namely, that he would sign a certificate, the form of which was prepared, and in readiness for use. This certificate sets forth that the person seeking to inspect the book is not in any wise connected with the Bar Association's Committee; that he does not seek the inspection for the purpose of supplying such committee with information; that he will not furnish information to the committee; and, further, that he does not seek the inspection for the purpose of gathering information on which to base charges against the County Clerk. Mr. Wait declined to sign the certificate, and was refused permission to examine the book which, under the law of 1847, is required to be kept open to the inspection of everybody, and is declared to be a public record like the other books of the County Clerk's office.

A MAN DROWNED IN THE BAY.

Thomas Day, Andrew Betts, and James Paul, employed on the dredging-machine at Black Tom—the island of unsavory odors, built off the Communipaw shore, with the sweepings of New-York streets—came to this City on Saturday to purchase supplies. At 11 o'clock at night they hired a small boat at Communipaw, intending to cross to the island. The wind blew a gale, and they were advised that the trip would be a perilous one. Not heeding this, they jumped into the boat and started out. Midway between the island and the shore the boat was upset, and all three were thrown into the water. Paul was not able to swim, and Day and Betts, who could swim, undertook to tow him to the shore. He loosed his hold, probably from exhaustion, and was drowned. Betts reached the island, but had scarcely drawn himself out of the water when he heard his surviving companion calling for aid. He plunged in again, and assisted him to the shore. Day was very much exhausted, and but for the aid of Betts would probably have been drowned. Paul's body was not recovered.

SNEAK THIEVES AT WORK IN BROOKLYN.

A number of thefts by the class known as sneak thieves have occurred recently in Brooklyn. Among those reported yesterday was one at the house of Elijah Cabbie, at No. 244 South Second-street, E. D. Mr. Cabbie, it seems, went home on Saturday evening and hung up in the hallway an overcoat valued at $25, and having $27 in money in one of the pockets. Shortly afterward, some unknown thief happened along, and finding the door open went in, stole the coat and the money, and walked off.

Clothing valued at $50 was stolen from the hallway of the residence of Charles Kennett, No. 360 Sixth-street, South Brooklyn, Saturday night, by a sneak thief who found the door unfastened.

Jewelry and money of the aggregate value of $60 were stolen from the apartments of Martin Meyer, No. 145 Walton-street, Saturday afternoon, during the temporary absence of Miss Meyer, by an unknown thief, who gained admission by means of false keys.

A BURGLARY WHICH DID NOT PAY.

Mrs. Fanny Ralf, of No. 21 Allen-street, was suddenly awakened from her slumbers at 9:30 on Saturday night by the noise made by three young men in forcing open the door leading to her apartments. One of the intruders, named William Carson, with a view of terrifying her into submission, and to prevent her from making any outcry, pointed a pistol at her, at the same time demanding whatever money she had. Mrs. Ralf, however, heedless of the threat, raised an alarm, whereupon Carson and his confederates, William Albro and John Wolf, made a hurried retreat, taking with them three brass candlesticks. The three men were subsequently arrested, and, on being arraigned before Justice Smith, yesterday, in the Tombs Police Court, were held for trial in default of $1,000 bail each.

PROF. DRAPER'S DISCOVERY

OXYGEN IN THE SUN.

SOME NEW PHOTOGRAPHS AND WHAT THEY SHOW—MR. J. NORMAN LOCKYER'S OBJECTIONS MET AND REFUTED—ANOTHER MEMOIR FOR COMPTES RENDUS IN PROGRESS—AMERICAN SCIENCE AND ITS PROSPECTS.

In the rear room on the third floor, the light turned low and the air alive with the hum and whirr of a petroleum engine that drives the immense electric battery essential to his spectroscopic experiments, Prof. Henry Draper may be found almost any night in the week. But the more curious stranger who should manage to effect an entrance into that den without showing his passports would have to exercise an amount of ingenuity which rarely falls to the lot of human kind. The laboratory practically occupies the two rear rooms, both of them having to be so darkened when photographs are being taken that the only visible objects are the electric arc and the gleaming eyes of the Vulcan who is just now forging the ultimate proofs of his important discovery of oxygen in the sun, announced some two years ago, but still doubted by some European critics, among them Mr. J. Norman Lockyer, whose article on the subject will be remembered by all who are au courant with the literature of science. There are some curious anecdotal episodes relative to the controversy between Prof. Draper and Mr. Lockyer, which the friends of the former tell with gusto. When Draper's successful experiment was first announced in Europe, Mr. Lockyer was pretty thoroughly rallied by European newspapers on having left this important discovery to an American. His criticism on the subject was a somewhat curious piece of literary workmanship. In the first instance, he expressed himself skeptical as to the existence of the oxygen bands discovered by Prof. Draper. In another part of the article he alleged that he had taken negatives of the solar spectrum showing these luminous bands at a date anterior to the experiments of his rival, and, lastly, he doubted whether the photographs of the Professor were upon a sufficiently large scale to furnish conclusive evidence of his position. When Lockyer was in this country on the occasion of the last total eclipse of the sun, he was bantered by Prof. Draper's friends respecting his prior photographs of the solar spectrum, and asked why he did not publish them and set the question of priority at rest. His reply was that he lost them one night in the Metropolitan Underground Railway tunnel, (London,) and had never since been able to recover the slightest clue to their whereabouts. Hence the proverb in American scientific circles when a man asserts more than he can prove: "Oh, he's been through the tunnel." He was asked if he thought it quite fair to claim priority upon evidences that could not be produced, and by confounding that infernal tunnel, and holding his pease on the main issue, that he who first publishes a discovery and its proofs is, unless it can be shown that he has had access to the papers of his rival, its true creditor with priority.

Ten or twelve years ago the criticism of a European claimant would have ruined an American's prospects of recognition. But, very fortunately for Prof. Draper, a change has since come over the spirit of the American and the foreign investigator, and it has become a conceded fact, not in England and France only, but in German centres of science even as extensive as the universities of Berlin, that the focl of scientific culture in the United States which are not to be despised. "Germany to-day," observed a distinguished pioneer of American science recently, "fears the physical experimentalists of the United States more than she fears those of any other country, and has long since practically adopted a protective tariff in the department of scientific discovery." But the strain to which the best scientific minds are subjected in the developing race of emulation, (competition it would be styled in any other department of industry,) is such that they either break down in a few years or are driven into sensationalism to maintain their reputation. It is an open secret that when Huxley came to this country it was by medical advice to save the last remnant of an exhausted brain and an impaired intellect, and the Huxley that was 10 or 12 years ago must not be confounded with the decrepit old man who pronounced that feeble series of lectures before New-York audiences, and provoked among those who did not know the facts the question, "How did this man acquire such a reputation?" Perhaps the most amusing feature of that brief campaign, to those who were in the secret at least, was the eagerness with which our theologians put on their polemical armor and rode lances in rest against this unbelied giant of science, who had nothing left but the gigantic skeleton of his former self to sustain the shock, and was here by advice of his physician, to be nursed and humored rather than to be assailed. To elude the obscurity which emulation was sure to bring, Tyndall went into sensationalism, and propounded those theories of straw before the British Association which the biological world has been so long engaged in knocking down. "The cause of this," said the venerable Prof. John W. Draper on one occasion, "is very simple. Science has become one of the principal attractions of the modern university, and has thus a high commercial value in drawing students. The result is that the Professors in the various departments of physics must either be constantly making important additions to the progress of scientific discovery or lose their prestige as educational leaders. It is no longer a question of a few lectures and standard experiments during the session. The demand for new experiments is urgent, and must be met; and no man who has not experienced the tax upon his brain and nervous system of this constant but silent pressure, can possibly understand why the incumbents of the scientific professorships in our colleges break down sometimes so prematurely."

But to return. Annoyed by the skepticism of which Mr. Lockyer is the centre, Prof. Draper has taken a new set of negatives of the solar spectrum on a scale taxing the utmost resources of his instruments, and probably among the largest, if not the very largest, that have ever been taken. Prof. John C. Draper has some very large photographs taken with a Beck one-twentieth immersion lens, upon the testimony of which he expresses views somewhat in consonance with those of Mr. Lockyer. Of course, in order to understand the merits of this dispute thoroughly, it is essential to know something of spectrum analysis and of the methods of the spectroscope; but, happily for popular purposes, the whole issue has been narrowed down to a question of the actual continuity of certain bright bands with each other, and studying negatives the investigator must remember that the bright bands of the spectrum are dark in the negative and vice versa. In examining Prof. Draper's earlier negatives upon which his first statement of the discovery was based—with the assistance of a lens, it is seen that while the bright projecting bands of iron are coincident with dark bands in the body of the spectrum, the bright bands of oxygen are continuous, and continuous with bright bands The new negatives show this coincidence and continuity upon a larger scale than the former ones, but they are scarcely more distinctly marked or more conclusive. The resolving power of the highest lens that can be successfully applied to the study of a negative only serves to bring the coincidence and continuity claimed by Prof. Draper all the more distinctly to the eye, whether applied to the larger or the smaller photographs, and to impress the more irresistibly the conclusion that all attempts to dispute the testimony upon the ground that these points are not clearly made out must inevitably fail of their purpose.

It is, however, a difficult thing to furnish a complete register of a series of spectroscopic observations by means of photographs, although at present there is no other method except that of the commonplace book, and here the personal factor involved is a constant source of inaccuracy and distrust. When the photographs are accompanied with a lucid text descriptive of the experiment, the arrangement of detail, &c., the personal factor is verified by the unerring impersonal; and this is the method that Prof. Draper has adopted in the memoir he is now preparing for the Academy of Science and the Comptes Rendus. At the same time, the experiments showing the rapid shifting of the spectrum when carbon is substituted, together with other verifying data, cannot be expressed on paper and must be witnessed to be fairly weighed.

The Professor expects to finish his memoir in the course of a few weeks, and, in the meantime, denies himself to all visitors except a few intimate friends who are in the biological world and, unfortunately, for the discoverer to guard his laboratory as a miser guards his hoard, in order to protect his work from plagiarism—a sin more common perhaps in science than it is in poetry, as many an overcrowding Professor is painfully aware. The whole expense of an elaborate experiment such as that which determined the presence of oxygen in the sun—not less than $1000 in this instance—may drag, for the time being at least, accrue to the reputation of a mere pretender who has caught the knack of imitating or the trick of putting his speculations into literary form. A specimen of this statement may be observed, as an illustration of the state of the facts in most directions, that there is scarcely a single great improvement in the microscope the ownership of which is not contested by from two to five candidates. The method of making an early publication has partially obviated this difficulty as respects discovery in the domain of natural history and histology. But the more acute and extended experimentation of the physical sciences, involving long periods of time, frequent repetition and multiplicity of detail, such a remedy cannot be successfully applied to. This is particularly true in the literature of the spectroscope—the most unreliable of all instruments in incompetent hands, and the most exact, perhaps, when wielded by a master. There is another point worth noting here, and that is that nearly observational scientific work has fallen into disrepute. Not only is experiment essential to discovery, but it is the essential factor in the verification of discovery. The mere observation and classification of data derived from the general resources of instruments of precision are no longer the potent elements that they once were in constructing or verifying a theory. The firmness with which men like Prof. Bond and Prof. Henry Draper in this country, Prof. Helmholtz in Germany, M. Pasteur and M. Davaine in France, have grasped this fact, the first two in experimental physics and physical astronomy, Hemholtz in the physiology of muscle, and the last two in the physiology of minute structures, has been the principal factor in these brilliant contributions to the literature of discovery that have rewarded their efforts in their widely-separated fields; and the men who were either too old, too dull, or too deficient in intellectual supplement to accept the new situations have necessarily been distanced and left to growl and carp at the phenomenal success of their rivals. "To level a mountain may make the valley a little higher, but cannot make a mountain of it," runs an Irish proverb, which those who amuse themselves with trying to pull down the mountains may as well remember. To apply the point, in the manipulation of an instrument so new as the spectroscope in its perfected form, and as to which the departments of investigation as yet unoccupied are so large, there is ample verge for discovery without destroying from the well-earned reputations of previous discoverers. It remains yet, indeed, to verify the theory of spectrum analysis itself; for the doctrine of the molecular constitution of bodies, although an inference from many observed facts, is still as far from direct optical demonstration as when first propounded. What spectrum analysis rests upon for its verifying power consists in certain constant facts, such as that the spectrum of a body, when relieved of all impurities, is constantly the same under the same conditions of temperature; that every known element has its own identifiable spectrum, and that the proportions of a compound may be proximately determined by spectrum analysis. There is, consequently, a wide margin for differences of opinion as to the interpretation of given series of facts, unless, as Prof. Draper observes, the observations are taken under strictly-guarded experimental conditions, no instrument being less general in its application, or more special in its results. Fortunately for the discoverer of oxygen in the sun, the points essential to the popular settlement of the question lie, in the main, within the limits of purely photographic testimony, and rest upon a point very readily comprehended, not only by experts, but by persons of average scientific attainments. It is not claimed that the new photographs now in progress are more specific to the scientific eye than the earlier ones. They simply meet and dispose of an objection that ought never to have been raised, namely, that his former negatives were not upon a scale sufficiently large, and that larger ones might, possibly would, show the coincidence of the bright bands to be unreal and illusory.

A PLEA FOR THE RED MAN.

DISCUSSION OF THE INDIAN QUESTION—MEETING AT DR. BELLOWS' CHURCH.

A very large congregation assembled last evening at Rev. Dr. Bellows' church to listen to the remarks of several speakers on the subject of "Civilizing the Indian." The first speaker was Mr. Rogers, who gave an account of an interesting religious ceremony, held in a large tent, at which a number of Indians were present. In the course of the service, the red men seemed much impressed, granting out their satisfaction when pleased with certain portions of the ceremony, and bowing to the ground at its conclusion. Mr. Rogers then introduced Gen. Armstrong, of the Hampton School, who gave an interesting sketch of the progress made at that institution of a number of Indian pupils of both sexes. They are, he said, exceedingly apt, faithful, willing, and energetic. At mechanics and the sciences, they have shown wonderful proficiency, and the speaker had seen instances where Indian boys had constructed complicated machinery, with little help beyond their own ingenuity. What the Indian needs, he thought, was not so much the knowledge that is to be derived from reading and spelling books, as the training which will enable him to approach more nearly to the ways and customs of civilization. This can be accomplished, if the Indians can receive such an education as the schools as will enable them to return to their own people and disseminate the knowledge thus received.

Col. Pratt was next introduced, and in a few brief remarks reiterated Gen. Armstrong's opinions. He concluded by introducing to the congregation an Indian, who, he said, would tell some of his experiences in receiving an education. The Indian boy then arose, under the same conditions of embarrassment, but in the meantime said nothing. After a long pause he muttered a few unintelligible remarks and again relapsed into silence. This continued for so long a time that Dr. Bellows finally arose and suggested that "our friend" should sit down for the present and address the audience when the spirit moved. Col. Pratt then announced that the Indian had never before seen a large a number of people together, and further that it was customary with his race to wait a long time before speaking. There was a death-like silence for the space of from four to four minutes, at the expiration of which time the Indian turned around slowly and resumed his seat.

Dr. Adams thought it necessary for the civilization of the Indian tribes to place school-houses and churches upon their land, in order that they might become practically acquainted with the working of these institutions. If a quarter of the amount already expended by the Government in the extermination of the red man had been devoted to his education, we should not, he said, hear so many stories of border trouble and bloodshed. Dr. Bellows thought that the policy of extermination was a useless and impracticable one. For centuries the Jews were harassed and oppressed by the Christians, and with what result? To-day they were a most powerful race in the world of finance and statesmanship. So, he thought, it would be with the Indians. When pursued with the sword fand bayonet a malignant devil was raised up in the breast of every red man in the land. He must be approached in a different way. He must be taught not to look, as he does now, upon labor as something degrading. And labor, too, was something that civilized nations, as well as Indians, should regard differently. "If, for instance," said Dr. Bellows, "our wives and daughters were to do a certain amount of work each day, it would undoubtedly improve their health, and might do no harm to their tempers either." At the conclusion of Dr. Bellows' remarks, which were frequently applauded, a collection was taken up for the benefit of the Indians at the Hampton Institute.

GUTTENBERG'S MASKED BURGLARS.

THE SINGULAR OCCURRENCE WHICH MR. AND MRS. RYAN RELATE — POLICEMEN IN DOUBT ABOUT IT.

The usually quiet village of Guttenberg, Hudson County, N. J., was the scene of an alleged masked burglary yesterday morning. The story is told by Mr. and Mrs. John J. Ryan. Mr. Ryan is the proprietor of a grocery store on Herman-avenue. He closed his store as usual on Saturday night, and retired to his apartments over the store. Shortly afterward he and his wife went to bed. Before retiring Mrs. Ryan placed a chair against the bedroom door. About 3 o'clock, as she judges, she was awakened by a noise as if the door had been opened, and the chair pushed away. Thinking it was the cat she paid no attention to it, but she had scarcely fallen into a doze again before the oldest of her three children, all of whom slepts in a crib beside the bed, whispered to her that there was a man in the room, and that he had said to her, "Now, my dear, Lizzie; papa is here." Mrs. Ryan looked, for the first time, realized that there were burglars in the room. She reached over and awoke her husband, but without speaking to him. She then looked carefully about the room, and saw three men. All of them wore masks or cloths over their faces. One had a white cloth, the other two red cloths. The men did not speak to or molest either her or her husband, but they finally approached the bed and took from beneath it a box containing $60 in specie. They also ransacked her husband's clothing, which hung upon a chair. After removing what money there was in the pockets, they went down stairs. She thinks they had confederates in the store, as she heard voices down stairs. She arose after the men had departed and went down into the store. There she found that a chest of tea, seven demijohns of liquor, and some tobacco had been taken. One of the window shutters had been forced and the blinds removed, but the robbers had not been able to effect an entrance in that way, and had finally cut the sash from a window in the cellar and so gained admittance to the store. Mr. Ryan told the same story that his wife did. Only a portion of the money said to have been stolen belonged to Ryan, and the Police are of the opinion that no robbery was committed.

A PIANIST ACCUSED OF A GRAVE CRIME.

A prominent pianist, residing in Newark, N. J., and of very respectable family, found a poor and friendless boy, named Henri Grosspeter, in New-York on Thanksgiving last, and sheltered and tried to procure permanent employment for him. The boy, who is a Bohemian by birth, finding himself unable to obtain a steady situation, asked the pianist last week for $2 to pay his fare to Philadelphia, and when the pianist refused, on the ground that he could not spare any more money, the lad turned upon him and threatened "to fix him," using, it is alleged, very abusive and profane languages. The threat was carried out on Saturday, when the boy went before Justice Paulin and swore to an affidavit containing a very grave and unusual charge, the penalty for which is very heavy. On this accusation the pianist was arrested and was confined in the Essex County Jail, where the accuser was also detained to secure his attendance as a witness. The accused last night told a TIMES reporter the circumstances of the case, and declared it to be a trumped-up charge, made for the purpose of extorting black-mail. Grossepeter admitted that he did not make the charge until after the pianist's refusal to give him the money demanded. He said he had done nothing to prevent the acts alleged to have been committed. The accused has engaged prominent counsel, and expects to procure his own release on bail to-day by means of a habeas corpus writ.

ARRIVALS AT THE HOTELS.

Edward Hanlan, of Toronto, is at the Fifth-Avenue Hotel.

Ex-Senator R. A. Parmenter, of Troy, is at the Park-Avenue Hotel.

J. F. Joy, President of the Detroit, Lansing and Northern Railway Company, and Thomas Swinyard, of Toronto, are at the Windsor Hotel.

Señor Don Felipe Mandes Vigo, Spanish Minister at Washington, and Count Brunetti and Count Morella, of the Spanish Legation, are at the Albemarle Hotel.

CITY AND SUBURBAN NEWS.

NEW-YORK.

Not an arrest was made in the First Precinct on Saturday night, and, as a consequence, the list of "drunks" in the Tombs Police Court yesterday morning was lighter than usual.

The brig O. C. Clary, which arrived from St. Pierre late on Saturday, came to anchor on the bar, but the gale was so severe during the night that she lost one of her anchors and 45 fathoms of cable.

The dead body of a newly-born child was found yesterday morning in a box in a truck standing at the corner of Stanton and Lewis streets by Officer Sheridan, of the Tenth Precinct, and was sent to the Morgue.

Elizabeth Wolsey, of No. 306 East Thirty-sixth-street, fell on the sidewalk at Thirty-fifth-street and Park-avenue yesterday and fractured her right leg at the knee. She was removed to Bellevue Hospital.

The New-York Academy of Sciences, Section of Biology, will hold a meeting this evening, at No. 12 West Thirty-first-street, to listen to a paper by Dr. Charles Fayette Taylor, entitled, "Some Practical Studies in Psycho-Biology."

Gottlieb Mitchell, while standing in front of his residence at No. 157 Ludlow-street, at an early hour yesterday morning, was approached by an unknown man, who struck him a violent blow on the head, knocking him down. His assailant immediately ran off.

The second week of the Brunswick and Balke Championship Tournament will open this afternoon at Cooper Institute with a game between A. P. Rudolphe and Randolph Heiser. In the evening George Slosson and Albert Garnier, two of the most graceful and brilliant players, will be pitted against each other. The time of the opening of the afternoon games has been changed from 2:30 o'clock to 2 o'clock. Spotting contests beginning as heretofore at 8 o'clock.

The two French cooks' societies have combined this year to give a single ball, instead of two, as heretofore, and to concentrate their energies in a culinary as well as terpsichorean way on the one entertainment. The Academy of Music and Nilsson Hall have been engaged for Friday, Feb. 4, when the ball is to take place. Both auditoriums are to be illuminated by the electric light, and there will be a profusion of floral and other decorations. Music will be furnished by an orchestra of 100 musicians under the leadership of Max Schwab. As heretofore, the feature of the entertainment will be the exhibition of culinary skill, which this year is expected to be an unusually fine one. The proceeds of the ball are to be devoted to the widows' and orphans' fund of the societies.

BROOKLYN.

Burglars broke into the hardware store kept by Bronson & Brother, No. 823 Myrtle-avenue, Saturday night, and stole cutlery valued at $128 97.

Mrs. Catharine Higgins, who resides at No. 12 Carroll-street, and Margaret Mears, living in the same house, quarreled Saturday night, and during the fight which ensued Mrs. Higgins struck Mrs. Mears on the head with a club, inflicting two severe scalp wounds. Mrs. Mears' injuries were dressed by an ambulance surgeon, and her assailant was arrested and locked up in the Third Precinct Station-house on a charge of felonious assault.

The apartments of Frederick Winters, No. 107 Court-street, were entered by thieves on the night of Dec. 21 last, during his temporary absence, and robbed of clothing and jewelry valued at $50. At a late hour Saturday night, Emil Stahl, a Myrtle-avenue baker, was arrested on suspicion of having committed the robbery. Part of the articles for some of the stolen articles were found in possession of the prisoner when arrested. He will be brought into court this morning.

LONG ISLAND.

Judge Pratt, of Brooklyn, will preside over the Courts of Sessions and Oyer and Terminer for Queens County, to be held at Long Island City to-day. Judge Dykman, who was to have presided, is seriously ill.

The cases of Thomas McGuirk, alias "Pigeon," and James Larkin, who have been in custody since November for a masked burglary committed at the house of a milkman named Perry, in Jamaica, on New-Year's night, 1877, are expected to come before the Court of Oyer and Terminer to-day.

STATEN ISLAND.

The ice-men of Staten Island have harvested a large crop of ice from the ponds and brooks about the island. A number of the brewers have already secured their season's supply. It is many years since the brewers have been able to secure their supply from the island.

The Richmond County Republican General Committee have appointed Messrs. Cameron, Townsend, Bostwick, Good, and Seguine as a committee to solicit the necessary funds to conduct the prosecution in the case of Clarence T. Barrett, who was elected Superintendent of the Poor of the Town of Castleton at the last election, but who has been unable to take his seat, owing to the contest for it by Daniel Dempsey, who claims the office on the ground that he was elected in 1875 for a term of five years.

NEW-JERSEY.

The Freemasons of Jersey City intend leasing Keplar Hall as a Masonic temple. The upper floors will be remodeled and made into lodge-rooms. About $22,000 will be expended by them for that purpose.

A man named Hiram Miller was found lying unconscious in Ninth-street, Jersey City, yesterday morning, almost frozen to death. He was taken to the station-house, where he was attended by Dr. Knouper, and then sent to the hospital.

BADLY FROZEN IN TEXAS.

From the Galveston (Texas) News, Jan. 18.

Yesterday morning two gentlemen from across the bay were interviewed by a reporter, and from them was got an account of the probably fatal freezing of a gentleman by the name of E. L. Cicero. Mr. Cicero was engaged in teaching, and on the 2d day of January left Judge Jackson's place, at Double Bayou, to go to Jackson's ranch, some distance off. He took his departure at 1:30 P. M., and was not heard from until found by two gentlemen four days after, lying on the ground in a frozen but partially rational

The New-York Times.

VOL. XXVIII.....NO. 8543. NEW-YORK, TUESDAY, JANUARY 28, 1879. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

THE NATION'S LEGISLATURE

THE WRANGLING DEMOCRACY.

SENATORS HILL AND MORGAN SPEAK IN OPPOSITION TO ALL WAR CLAIMS—MR. BECK CHARACTERIZES MR. HILL'S EFFORT AS A STUMP-SPEECH—THE FAMILY QUARREL TO BE CONTINUED.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The Senate spent nearly the entire session to-day ostensibly considering the claim of Warren Mitchell, of Kentucky, for cotton captured by the United States during the war, but really in discussing the general question of Southern war claims. The discussion was confined principally to the Democratic side and became almost as much of a family quarrel as was witnessed last week on the occasion of Gen. Bragg's raid. The claim of Mitchell was warmly supported by both the Kentucky Senators and opposed by Ben Hill, of Georgia, and Mr. Morgan, of Alabama. Hill arraigned the policy of considering this class of claims, and declared that he was opposed to all war claims, whether presented by loyal or disloyal claimants. He believed that none of them should ever be considered, much less paid, and he created quite a sensation by saying that the sooner the Southern people were given to understand that these war claims would not be considered by Congress the better it would be for them. They would then go about building up their material interests instead of looking to the Government for pay for their losses. He said he could see no difference in this class of claims, for he had never yet had a definition of loyalty as applied to those who remained South during the war. If respect for the Union and a desire to see it perpetuated was loyalty, he knew of thousands of men in the South who had resisted secession as long as it was possible, and only acquiesced in it from sheer necessity. Referring to himself, he said that never, even in the midst of the struggle, in his heart of hearts did he expect or wish to see this Union dissolved, and he knew thousands in the South whose feelings in this direction were as strong as his own. Mr. Beck, of Kentucky, and others on the Democratic side heard Hill with impatience, and when he had finished Mr. Beck characterized his remarks as a stump-speech, and made a sharp attack upon him. Mr. Morgan, of Alabama, followed Mr. Beck, and in much the same strain as Hill, opposed the claim. It is expected that others will follow their lead to-morrow, for several of the Southern Senators are desirous of putting themselves on record as flatly opposed to all war claims, of whatever character. This is probably done to counteract the effect of the action of their party friends in the House from the Southern States.

MONDAY IN THE HOUSE.

MR. WRIGHT'S UTOPIAN SCHEME VOTED DOWN BY AN OVERWHELMING MAJORITY—A COMMOTION CREATED BY A BILL FOR THE ERECTION OF FEDERAL BUILDINGS IN VARIOUS CITIES.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—No business of importance was transacted in the House to-day. The usual number of bills was introduced under the call of States and referred to the appropriate committees, after which Mr. Wright's bill to lend each settler on the public lands $500 was taken up and rejected by a vote of 212 to 22. Before the vote was taken, the House, being in an indulgent humor, gave unanimous consent to Mr. Wright to explain his bill. His argument, however, had no effect, and it is probable that his bill would have received more votes had he remained silent.

After the vote upon Mr. Wright's bill, Mr. Whitthorne, of Tennessee, was recognized, and moved to suspend the rules and pass a bill to appropriate over $1,000,000 for the erection of public buildings in various cities. The bill provided appropriations for the following-named cities: Augusta, Ga., and Key West, Fla., each $100,000; Lynchburg, Va., and Council Bluffs, Iowa, each $75,000; Oxford, Miss., and Greensboro, N. C., each $50,000; Brooklyn, $250,000; Montgomery, Ala., $150,000; Erie, Penn., $120,000; La Crosse, Wis., $65,000. The reading of the bill created an uproar in the House, and when it was finished a score of members jumped to their feet and demanded to be informed whether provision was made for their respective sections. Mr. Mills said that as no provision was made for erecting buildings in Texas he would move to adjourn. This motion was received with a shout of approval from those whose districts were omitted from Whitthorne's proposed distribution of public money, and notwithstanding the determined efforts of those opposed to adjournment, Mr. Mills' motion was carried on a yea and nay vote. This unexpected adjournment prevented Mr. Robbins from bringing forward his proposition to assign a day for the consideration of the bill of the Committee on Ways and Means to readjust the duties on sugars. The adjournment, however, does not dispose of Mr. Whitthorne's bill, but leaves it as the unfinished business for next Monday after the morning hour.

THE CORBIN-BUTLER CONTEST.

REPORT OF THE MINORITY OF THE SENATE ELECTIONS COMMITTEE—THE DECISION IN FAVOR OF BUTLER HELD TO BE FINAL.

special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—Senators Merrimon, Saulsbury, and Hill, the Democratic members of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, have prepared a minority report in the contested election case of Corbin against Butler, of South Carolina. After stating the issue between the contestants, the report of the minority says:

"On Nov. 20, 1877, a motion was made in the Senate to discharge the Committee on Privileges and Elections from the consideration of the credentials of M. C. Butler, of South Carolina. The reason alleged for this motion was that the facts were all stated in the records furnished by the contestants, that neither of the contestants desired to take any testimony aliunde, and that the question of law could be debated and decided in the Senate as well without as with a report from the committee. On Nov. 29, after elaborate debate, this resolution to discharge the committee was accepted by the Senate, and after the statements made and printed in behalf of Mr. Corbin, and arguments had been made in the Senate on both sides, the Senate on motion to swear in Butler, and on Nov. 30 he was sworn in as the Senator for South Carolina for the term in contest. A vote admitting one contestant to a seat is certainly a vote denying the same seat to another contestant when both contestants are parties to the issue. No motion was made to reconsider this action of the Senate, and no reservation was made looking to any further contest between the claimants. On March 4, 1878, during a subsequent session of Congress, the petition of Corbin, now under consideration, asking the Senate 'to inquire into, hear and determine his right and claim to the same seat in the Senate,' was referred to this committee. In considering this petition the facts which have been presented to the committee are precisely the same which were presented on the former consideration of the case. No new fact has been presented nor offered to be presented, and not an old fact has been withdrawn nor offered to be withdrawn or modified. The arguments now made have been made from the same statements and briefs filed on the former hearing, and not a new question of law has been presented, except the issue of res adjudicata. No charge of fraud has been made against the former election; no allegation that testimony was before excluded which ought to have been admitted, or that testimony was admitting which ought to have been excluded. No request by either party to produce testimony has been denied, and no testimony has been offered and excluded can now be produced. The jurisdiction is the same, the parties are the same, the subject-matter of the petition is the same, the facts are the same, and the questions of law are the same. The petition of Corbin is a mere naked proposition that the Senate, at a subsequent session, shall revote on the identical questions, facts, and issues on which the Senate voted and decided as a former session."

The minority argue that no demand like that contained in the petition of Corbin was ever granted by the Senate nor by any legislative body, and refer to the case of Bright and Fitch in the Thirty-fifth Congress, where a rehearing was asked in a memorial from the Legislature of Indiana. In that case it was held that the judgment first rendered by the Senate was final, and precluded further inquiry into the subject. The report says that if, on the former hearing, Corbin had been denied the privilege of introducing material facts which he offered to produce; if he presented material facts now which were then unknown; if all the facts and questions of law known and presented were not then as fully known and presented, the minority would not undertake to say his petition for a hearing ought not in justice to be gravely heard and considered on the merits. But as Corbin has himself suggested no new facts or questions of law, his petition for another vote cannot be regarded as entitled to consideration. The minority argue that the only real question is whether the lower branch of the Legislature which, it is claimed, elected Corbin, was a legal House or a legal quorum of a House under the Constitution and laws of South Carolina, and proceed to argue that such was not the fact, and that Corbin was not elected by a legal Legislature.

THE NEW REFUNDING LAW.

THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT READY TO CARRY IT INTO EFFECT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The Secretary of the Treasury has issued a circular to holders of United States 6 per cent. 5-20 bonds, in which, after calling attention to the act of Congress just approved, entitled, "An act to facilitate the refunding of the national debt," he says: "Under the provisions of this act the department will exchange the 4 per centum consols of the United States for an equal amount of any outstanding and uncalled 6 per centum 5-20 bonds of the United States. In addition, the department will pay to the holder of the 6 per centum bonds the interest accrued and additional interest for a period of three months; also, a commission, the same as for the sale of bonds under the circular of Jan. 1, 1879, to wit: On an aggregate of $100,000, and not exceeding $1,000,000, between Jan. 25, 1879, and June 30, 1879, one-eighth of 1 per cent; on an aggregate exceeding $1,000,000, and not exceeding $10,000,000, between the same dates, one-quarter of 1 per cent., and on amounts in excess of $10,000,000, an additional commission of one-tenth of 1 per cent. on the excess; and will transmit the bonds to the person entitled thereto free of expense. The accrued interest on the 4 per cents will be charged to date of the exchange." Bonds sent under this circular should be addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C., marked "Loan Division—for Exchange," and 4 per cent. bonds, with a draft for the interest and commissions, will be sent promptly in return. This direct exchange is intended to promote the rapid refunding of the public debt, and to give to holders of bonds every facility that is granted under existing laws in the payment of called bonds. Bonds called on or prior to the date of exchange will not be received under this circular.

The Secretary of the Treasury, in answer to inquiries concerning the amount of 4 per cent. bonds that can be issued for refunding purposes, states that under the Refunding act there was authorized an aggregate amount of $1,500,000,000 bonds to be issued for that purpose; that there has already been issued of 5 per cents $500,000,000, of 4½ per cents $185,000,000, and of 4 per cents $168,200,000; in all $853,200,000, leaving of 4 per cents still to be issued $646,800. Of the bonds at present redeemable there is now outstanding: Consols of 1865, $26,085,550; of 1867, $310,614,000; of 1868, $37,465,300; of 10-40s, $194,566,300—in all, $568,731,150—showing that there are more than enough 4 per cents authorized to take up all the bonds which will be redeemable before 1880.

The subscriptions to the 4 per cent. loan since Saturday's report amounted to $5,128,950.

REBEL WAR CLAIMS.

TEXT OF THE PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT PROHIBITING THEIR PAYMENT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The following is the text of the proposition reported by Mr. Edmunds today from the Senate Judiciary Committee as a substitute for the constitutional amendment on the same subject proposed by the joint resolution which passed the House under a suspension of the rules on the last day of the last session:

ARTICLE XVI. No claim against the United States shall ever hereafter be sustained or allowed by Congress, or any department officer or court of the United States, or money paid by the United States, or from their funds, whether as damages, compensation, or otherwise, for or on account of any property, real, personal, or mixed, taken, used, injured, or destroyed by the United States troops, or by or through any officer, civil or military, or other person acting or professing to act under or by authority of the United States or any law thereof, during the late insurrection, or destroyed from any other cause whatever during the existence of the late insurrection or rebellion against the Government of the United States, unless the owner thereof (and in case of any corporation, its governing authority and management) was, during all the time of such insurrection or rebellion, loyal in fact to the Government of the United States, and did not give aid or comfort or encouragement to the enemy. No pension, bounty, grant, pecuniary indemnity, or pecuniary benefit shall ever be given or provided for by or under the authority of Congress or any State for, or on account of, any military or other service performed, or injury suffered, in hostility to the Government of the United States. No pardon or amnesty, past or future, shall have any effect to take any person, case, or claim out of the purview of this article.

This bill introduced by Senator Ferry, of Michigan, to-day, provides that all able-bodied male citizens between the ages of 18 and 45 years, resident within the respective States and Territories, except such as may be exempt by law, shall constitute the Militia. The Militia are to be divided into two classes—the active to be known as the National or State Guard, as the Legislature of each State may prescribe, and the inactive to be known as the reserve Militia. The bill proposes to appropriate $1,000,000 for the purpose of providing arms, ammunition, and other ordinary and Quartermaster stores for the active Militia.

In the case of W. O. Avery against Benjamin F. Butler, an action to recover $500 paid defendant as counsel, for which plaintiff claims that the defendant rendered no service, the defendant (Gen. Butler) to-day filed his plea with the Clerk of the District Court admitting that he was paid $500 as a retainer. He was delayed from attending Avery's trial by illness, but he had placed in Avery's hands an elaborate brief on the law and facts with direction to hand it to his counsel. In which said brief certain defects in counts of the indictment against Avery were pointed out. He denies that he ever promised to return the amount and says his services were worth a larger sum.

TWO DEFAULTERS IN CINCINNATI.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Jan. 27.—J. H. Dickman, Treasurer of St. Anthony's Catholic Church, is a defaulter to the amount of $6,000, and Jacob Rennecker, Treasurer of the German Catholic Cemetery Association, to the amount of $1,200.

RESUMPTION IN OHIO.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 27.—In the House this afternoon a resolution was offered and laid over for discussion, calling upon the Ohio Congressmen to oppose any measures looking to the repeal of the Resumption act.

ANOTHER CHANCE FOR A MURDERER.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 27.—The Supreme Court has granted a new trial to Louis Guetig, the murderer of Mary McGlen, who was to have been hanged on Jan. 29, with Achey and Merrick.

PITTSTON, Penn., Jan. 27.—John Tierney, of this place, was run over by a freight train on the Lehigh Valley Railroad this afternoon, and instantly killed.

ALBANY, Jan. 27.—Thomas Ward, convicted of outrage in New-York and sentenced to the Penitentiary for 10 years, has been pardoned by the Governor.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 27.—John Ham, an engineer on the Pan Handle Railroad, while at a water-tank near Urbana, Ohio, yesterday, slipped and fell a distance of 20 feet, fracturing his skull.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 27.—Benjamin Krumpelman and Jack Crowley, aged 13 and 14, were drowned in the river at the foot of Russell-street, Covington, Ky., yesterday, by the upsetting of a skiff through collision with a coal barge.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 27.—At the annual meeting of the Providence, Warren and Bristol Railroad Company, held this afternoon, the old Board of Directors was re-elected. Henry A. Whitney, of Boston, was re-elected President.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 27.—John B. Calder, late Cashier of the Grocers' and Producers' Bank, is being tried on a second indictment for embezzling the funds of the bank. A late trial on a similar indictment resulted in a disagreement of the jury.

THE LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

TURKEY'S AND AFGHANISTAN'S TROUBLES.

ENGLAND'S REPORTED NEGOTIATIONS FOR THE PURCHASE OF CYPRUS DENIED—ANOTHER CITY OF AFGHANISTAN OCCUPIED BY THE BRITISH—RUSSIA'S INFLUENCE OVER THE BULGARIANS.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—The Pall Mall Gazette says it understands that the announcement by the Berlin correspondent of the London Post of England's intention to purchase the Island of Cyprus is unfounded.

SOPHIA, Jan. 27.—It is believed that a group of influential Bulgarian Deputies to the Assembly of Notables for the election of a ruler over Bulgaria will propose an adjournment of the election for a Prince, and the prolongation of the Russian military occupation and civil administration for two years, on account of the difficulty of finding Bulgarians competent to exercise the civil administration, and because of the dangers arising from a weak government at the outset.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The Standard's dispatch from Kbelet-i-Ghilzai, Jan. 20, says: "The cavalry occupied this place to-day unopposed. Gen. Stewart, with the whole Second Brigade, will arrive to-morrow."

A dispatch to the Standard, dated Matoond, Sunday, Jan. 26, says Gen. Roberts, previous to his temporarily quitting Khost, assembled the chiefs and warned them that the British would be always near, and would return instantly to quell any disturbance. It would be idle for them to entertain any hope of Russian aid, as Russia was impoverished in men and money.

VIENNA, Jan. 27.—The lower house of the Reichsrath has approved the treaty of Berlin by a vote of 154 to 112.

THE PLAGUE IN RUSSIA.

STRINGENT MEASURES ADOPTED TO CHECK ITS SPREAD—A REPORT THAT THE DISEASE HAS APPEARED IN MOSCOW.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 27.—Official telegrams received on Sunday from the infected districts report that no persons are now ill with the disease at Wetlianka. In the other villages attacked by the plague one death and two new cases are reported. At Tsaritsin a commission has been appointed by the Ministries of the Interior and of Ways and Communication to prevent the spread of the contagion by the roads or railways. A special Public Health Commission has also been appointed. The town of Tsaritsin is surrounded by military pickets, and quarantine has been established on both sides of the River Volga. The Novoe Vremya publishes a report, which lacks confirmation, that the epidemic has appeared in or near Moscow.

VIENNA, Jan 27.—The Austrian Consul at Moscow contradicts a report of the outbreak of the epidemic at Rusa, in the Government of Moscow.

SALVAGE FOR SAVING A FRIGATE.

A CLAIM FOR $7,500 AGAINST THE UNITED STATES SHIP CONSTITUTION.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—In the Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice an action has been brought by the owners of the steamtug Admiral against the United States ship Constitution to recover £1,500 for salvage. The sum of £200 had been tendered to the owners of the tug, but was rejected. The plaintiff asked leave to serve notice of the motion upon the Captain of the Constitution and the United States Consul at Portsmouth. The application was granted, but the Judge stated that he could not allow any order to issue upon the Captain. He would be prepared to hear argument on the question on Wednesday next. In the meantime he would communicate with the Government. Plaintiff's counsel undertook, on his own responsibility, to serve the Captain of the Constitution with the notice of the motion for salvage. The Judge impressed him with the necessity of informing Minister Welch and Lord Salisbury of the proceedings.

FOREIGN FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

THE TROUBLES OF THE METROPOLITAN BANK OF LONDON—AN EGYPTIAN NATIONAL BANK FORMED AT ALEXANDRIA.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—At a meeting to-day of the shareholders of the Metropolitan Bank, with reference to which it was rumored last week that the institution was in process of absorption by another London bank, the Chairman stated that a call for £5 per share was issued on Friday to meet a threatened run, which, in fact, was successfully met. The Chairman declared that the reports of the bank's insolvency were unfounded; the assets would pay every debt and leave a surplus of £100,000. A committee of five shareholders was appointed to consider with the Directors whether the bank should continue or transfer its business to some other concern.

ALEXANDRIA, Jan. 27.—The Egyptian National Bank, with a capital of £4,000,000, has been formed, under the auspices of the Minister of Finance, and Right Hon. Robert Lowe, member of Parliament for London University, has accepted the Chairmanship of the English Board of Directors of the Bank.

CURRENT FOREIGN TOPICS.

A FRUITLESS SEARCH MADE FOR THE PIRATICAL STEAMER—DRAWING OF THE PARIS EXPOSITION LOTTERY—THE BRITISH LABOR TROUBLES.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—The Daily Telegraph says that the British gun-boat Goshawk left Cork on Saturday to seek intelligence concerning the alleged piratical steamer. The Goshawk overhauled many vessels, but learned nothing, and it is believed that the letter of Capt. Adams is a hoax.

The Edinburgh Scotsman publishes the following from its London correspondent: "If I am rightly informed, Cardinal Manning has had an opportunity offered him of explaining personally to Lord Beaconsfield his views respecting the Catholic education difficulty in Ireland. The question will probably be brought forward very prominently next session under the auspices of the Government. The Irish Catholics demand State endowment for the Catholic University.

PARIS, Jan. 27.—The drawing of the Exposition lottery was begun yesterday in the large hall of the Trocadero Palace. A large crowd witnessed the drawing. Yesterday's drawing consisted of the first 300 prizes. No. 1, value $26,000, was won by ticket No. 978,599 of the fourth series; No. 2, value $20,000, by ticket No. 167,257 of the fifth series; No. 3, value $10,000, by ticket No. 75,582 of the eleventh series; No. 4, value $10,000, by ticket No. 24,613 of the first series; No. 5, value $5,000, by ticket No. 927,579 of the ninth series.

BERLIN, Jan. 27.—The National Gazette learns on good authority that the Prussian Ministry has pronounced against the tobacco monopoly and in favor of taxation according to weight, and has charged the Minister of Finance to prepare a bill giving effect to its views.

MADRID, Jan. 27.—It is reported that the Kings of Spain and Portugal, at the approaching meeting at Elvas, will discuss a marriage between the Infanta Maria Della Paz, sister of King Alfonso, and Prince Augustus, of Portugal, brother of King Luis.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—It is estimated that one-seventh of the looms and spindles in Blackburn are stopped, and that from 4,000 to 5,000 operatives are idle and destitute. No public relief fund has been started, because of the diminished means of all classes. Mill-owners say that trade was never worse. Only a few isolated disputes have been settled without a reduction of wages. Masters have been obliged to make reductions, because reductions have been accepted by the employes of several large Preston and Burnley establishments. The colliers' lodges of Sheffield, South Yorkshire, and North Derbyshire have agreed, by a considerable majority, to accept arbitration, and a deputation will meet the masters to arrange terms to-day.

HOW TILDEN AND HENDRICKS MET.

JUDGE PATTERSON'S STORY OF HOW HE WRESTLED WITH THE PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE—THE CONFERENCE AT SARATOGA.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 27.—The story of the Saratoga conference between Tilden and Hendricks is told for the first time by Judge Chambers Patterson, of Terre Haute, who was sent by Hendricks to see Tilden, about the last of June, after the St. Louis Convention. Hendricks had decided that he would not accept a nomination with Tilden, unless the latter would use his influence to secure the repeal of the Resumption act. When Judge Patterson reached Albany, he found that Tilden was at Poughkeepsie, and telegraphed to him. Tilden answered directing him to meet him there, which he did, and they together took the train for Albany. What followed is thus related by Judge Patterson:

"When we got in the sleeping-car I explained my mission to him, and told him that Congress was then in session, and if the House did not pass the repealing bill Mr. Hendricks would be off the ticket. 'Oh,' said Tilden, 'let's say nothing about that; keep the subject in the background, and make the race on reform.' Then he looked under and all around the seat, and said, 'I thought I heard some one. I'm afraid of those reporters. They are ubiquitous, and would creep under a man's house to hear his talk.' I laughed at the old man's fears, and insisted on the point demanded by Mr. Hendricks, but he would concede nothing. He said New-York was essential to success, and New-York wanted resumption. Well, I wrestled with him for a day and that was I was making headway, when I proposed to send for Hendricks, and have him come there. That was Saturday, and I said I could have him there by next Wednesday. Tilden said they had better meet accidentally at Saratoga. I telegraphed Mr. Hendricks to come at once to Saratoga, and he did so, but the result was a disagreement, and Mr. Hendricks left, having told Tilden that he wanted every word and letter of the platform lived up to or he would not be upon it. Tilden took the matter under advisement, and was assured that without Hendricks he would be lost in the West, and perhaps in the South, and then he solicited a second meeting, and it took just long enough to call the roll of the House to have the bill passed, and Hendricks accepted."

FIVE PERSONS MURDERED.

AN INSANE MAN KILLS A MAN, A WOMAN, AND A CHILD—TWO HOMICIDES IN THE WEST.

BELFAST, Me., Jan. 27.—At Montville, about 15 miles from this city, on Saturday evening, John McFarland, a farmer, his wife, and granddaughter were murdered by one Rowell, an insane man. Mrs. McFarland was shot with a gun, and the others had their brains beaten out. The murderer was afterward shot and killed by a neighbor whom he had attacked.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 27.—Mrs. W. C. C. Foster, a widow residing alone, three miles east of this city, was brutally murdered last night by some unknown person, who crushed her skull with a hammer. There is no clue to the murderer.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Jan. 27.—Marshall S. Pritchard, Town Collector of Cherry Valley, was mysteriously murdered here yesterday. His body, with rifled pockets, was found in the outskirts of the city, with a ball in the head from a revolver, which lay beside him, and a deep gash in the temple. Several persons are under suspicion.

FIRE IN THE WILLIAMSTOWN COAL MINE.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 27.—A dispatch received to-day from the Vice-President of the company operating at Williamstown, Penn., says that the fire at the Williamstown Colliery is now well under control, and in the course of another day it will be entirely extinguished. He says none of the slopes are injured, and the damage is confined to the burning of the engines and drum at the top of the slope, and the loss by suffocation of about 20 mules. He claims that the aggregate loss will probably not exceed $20,000. The colliery can be partially operated during the progress of the repairs, which will require two months.

A dispatch from Millerstown, Penn., says the fire at the colliery at Williamstown obtained a fresh headway last night, and continued to burn briskly until morning. This dispatch places the aggregate loss at $50,000 to $60,000. The amount of insurance is unknown.

THE LATE JUDGE HALYBURTON.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 27.—The funeral of the late Judge James D. Halyburton, who died last evening, took place this afternoon, and was attended by members of the Bar in a body, including the Judges of the Supreme Court of Appeals and a large number of leading citizens. Judge Halyburton served as United States Judge for the Eastern District of Virginia from President Tyler's Administration until the beginning of the late war; also, as Judge of this Confederate States Court during the war. He was considered one of Virginia's most distinguished sons. He was 76 years of age.

DEATH FROM A FALL ON THE ICE.

EASTON, Penn., Jan. 27.—E. H. Green, one of the proprietors of Stewart's rolling-mills, at South Easton, fell on the ice near his home on Tuesday last and broke his left arm and injured himself internally, from the effects of which he died this morning. He was at one time President of the Easton Town Council.

ACCUSED OF TRYING TO EVADE THEIR DEBTS.

BOSTON, Jan. 27.—Albert C. Andrews and James W. Coltman were arraigned to-day, charged with conspiring to defraud their creditors, and were each held in $3,000 bail for trial. The defendants demanded an immediate examination, but the Government was not ready to proceed, and a continuance was granted.

THIEVES ADMITTING THEIR GUILT.

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 27.—Charles Woodward and George Lee, alias "Snatchem," thieves, who stole $12,000 worth of jewelry from Max Freund, a traveling jeweler, who had a room in the Palmer House, pleaded guilty this morning in the Criminal Court, and were remanded. Woodward turned State's evidence. The goods have been recovered.

SWINDLING HOTEL PROPRIETORS.

BOSTON, Jan. 27.—Dr. Charles L. Williams, of Washington, D. C., has been arrested here for passing a forged draft for $25 on the Suffolk Bank in this city. He is said to have made a business of swindling hotel proprietors in small places in the South and West.

LOUISIANA SENATORIAL CONTEST.

NEW-ORLEANS, La., Jan. 27.—The Senatorial caucus has agreed to drop the lowest candidate. The fifth ballot stood: Eustis, Kenner, and Jonas 25 each; Manning, 1.

THE PEORIA FREIGHT POOL BROKEN.

CHICAGO, Jan. 27.—The Peoria freight pool, which for three months, since its formation, has had only nominal existence, has been completely broken up by the resignation of Commissioner J. H. Stead, and does not now exist even by name.

BLINDNESS CAUSED BY AN EXPLOSION.

OTTAWA, Jan. 27.—A boy named Hinton, employed in a drug store, made up a prescription in which were quicksilver and nitric acid. In shaking the mixture an explosion occurred, smashing the bottle to atoms and destroying the boy's sight.

THE NEW METROPOLITAN OF CANADA.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Jan. 27.—Bishop Medley, of Fredericton, was elected Metropolitan of Canada, as the House of Bishops, held in the Synod office to-day. There were present the Bishops of Fredericton, Nova Scotia, Ontario, Quebec, Algoma, Niagara, and Montreal.

THE MUCH-ABUSED PARTY.

PITY THE POOR DEMOCRATS.

COMPLAINING BEFORE THE TELLER COMMITTEE OF THE CRUELTY OF THE SOUTH CAROLINA REPUBLICANS.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Jan. 27.—The Teller committee was occupied mainly to-day in hearing Democratic testimony as to the conduct of the canvass and election in Williamsburg and Sumter Counties. State Senator Maurles testified that the Republicans in Williamsburg were lukewarm and divided, and that the character of Swails, the Republican leader, was bad; it was in consequence of Swails' threats that he was given notice that he would be held responsible for any bloodshed or house-burning, and that he had better leave the country.

Circuit Solicitor Hirsch, a Republican until 1877, said that he had investigated, by Gov. Hampton's direction, the different charges made by Swails, and found that the White Oak meeting was not held to advocate Mr. Rainey's election; that Swails was not arrested by the "Red Shirts," and that no threats had been made against Swails, except that he would be held to account for any bloodshed or incendiarism.

Jack Epps, a colored preacher, testified that he abstained from voting at the election, and in consequence was debarred by the colored Republicans from ministering in the Baptist churches he had regularly served.

J. S. Hayward, white, testified that the invitation to Swails to ride into King's Tree with the "Red Shirts" was freely accepted by Swails when he had been assured that no harm would be done to him.

J. B. Chandler, white, testified that armed negroes surrounded the Cedar Swamp Precinct, saying the ballots should not be counted; the ballot-box was sent off on a by-path, while the negroes lay in wait for it in the usual road; it was the intention of the negroes to murder the managers and seize the box.

The first Democratic witness from Richland County was Paul Ludwig, of Columbia, who testified as to the peacefulness of the election. This witness went to Sumter with the cannon on Oct. 12, and testified that only blank cartridges were taken, and that one gun was run up to the Court-house without orders, because a riot was going on.

John Lee, colored, Democrat, had been told by Republicans that he ought to be hanged, and his wife burned: many colored Democrats had been threatened, and their red shirts torn off; others had been pulled from their horses, and their wives advised to save them; there are large numbers of colored Republicans vote the Democratic ticket. Coleman Beattie, colored, Democrat, was told that every colored Democrat ought to be hanged or burned. Andrew Johnson, colored, Democrat, had been threatened, abused, and beaten by colored Republicans on account of his politics, and his children had been beaten and driven from school. James Minus, colored, had been cursed and scorned, and his children hissed at because he was a Democrat: he had been shot in the face and his head was broken. Two other colored Democrats told the same story.

Third Richland County, and Edward Perry, printer, of Charleston, was put on the stand. He swore that he printed 10,000 Republican tissue tickets for E. W. M. Mackey, the Republican candidate for Congress, at the last election.

SITTING BULL'S PLEA FOR MERCY.

HE PROMISES TO FIGHT NO MORE FOREVER—REPORTS THAT HIS BAND HAS CROSSED THE LINE.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 27.—A special to the Pioneer-Press gives news brought by runners from Standing Rock Agency. Messengers from Sitting Bull's camp just arrived at the agency, represent him as anxious to return there, where his tribe once lived, and where the Uncapapas, who are in close tribal relations with his band, still are. These messengers confirm the reports received at Cheyenne Agency of the destitute and hungry condition of Sitting Bull's band, and bring the following message to the Uncapapas: "Once I was strong and brave, and my people had hearts of iron, but now I am poor and weak and my light no more burns. My people are cold and hungry; my women are sick, and my children are freezing. I will do as the Great Father wishes. I will give my guns and my ponies into his hands. My arrows are broken and my war-paint thrown to the winds."

There is nothing in the news brought by these messengers to confirm previous reports of the crossing of the line by Sitting Bull. Otherwise their representations are the previous emissaries to Cheyenne. It is believed here that Sitting Bull will return at once if assured of food and protection.

NEW-JERSEY'S ADMINISTRATION.

THE GOVERNOR GIVES A FEW GOOD POSITIONS TO DEMOCRATS AND MANY MINOR OFFICES TO REPUBLICANS—THE NEW CITY CHARTER BILL.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 27.—The air has been full all the afternoon of rumors that Gov. McClellan had decided to send to the Senate, for confirmation, a batch of Republican nominations. The rumor was only partially verified by the list which Private Secretary Hall handed to the Senate this evening. Very many of the names on it are those of Republicans, but with his eye steadily on the main chance, the Governor has been careful to deal out all the big loaves to Democrats. He did not even follow the rule of nominating Republicans for places about to be vacated by Republicans. He presented the name of a Republican successor to a Democratic incumbent that was scarcely to be expected. But two of the most important nominations made are of Democrats to fill places now filled creditably and acceptably by Republicans. Ludlow McCarter, a Democratic lawyer of Newark, is nominated as the successor, as Law Judge of Essex, of Hon. C. S. Titsworth, a Republican. In this county John H. Stewart, Democrat, is named to succeed Judge Buchanan, a Republican, as Presiding Judge of the Common Pleas. Having thus given away the two places of highest honor to his party friends, he tries to make amends by giving most of the minor and less lucrative places to the Republicans. His nominees for Lay Judges in the several counties are as follows: Gloucester, John Moore; Cape May, J. E. Hughes; Burlington, William Parry; Morris, Freeman Wood; Hudson, A. W. Fry, all of whom are Republicans; Camden, Joseph Homer, Democrat; Salem, Joseph Cook; Cumberland, Alpheus Woodruff; Hunterdon, J. P. Hoffman; Warren, James Somerville, and Bergen, W. S. Banta, whose political tendencies could not be learned this evening. The nominations were all referred in executive session to the Judiciary Committee. The Senate confirmed A. A. Smally as Pilot Commissioner, and James P. Bonnell as Harbormaster.

The Jersey City charter, outlined last week, was under consideration this evening by the House Committee on Municipal Corporations. What would seem to be a fatal defect in one of its vital provisions has been discovered. In order to evade the constitutional prohibitions against the management of the internal affairs of cities by special and local acts, the bill provides that upon the call of any 100 citizens of Jersey City to the State shall, within the two weeks, order an election to take the sense of the people upon accepting or rejecting the terms of the bill. The bill is only designed to be applicable to Jersey City, and it is questionable whether that Democratic city, or a popular vote, will accept the reforms, however much needed, that may be suggested by a Republican Legislature. The more serious objection is that there is no limit as to the frequency of these preliminary elections. The committee will not report the bill, however, before the end of the week. By that time it hopes to have other charters to consider. The Attorney-General was asked last week to submit to the House an opinion as to whether the clause of the Constitution empowering the election of Lay Judges in joint meeting was not as effective as the clause vesting the appointments in the Governor. It would have argued more than Spartan virtue in the Attorney-General if he had decided against the Executive who appoints him. To-night he decided, as might have been expected, that the power is with the Governor.

THE ARLINGTON ESTATE LITIGATION.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Jan. 27.—In the United States Circuit Court to-day, the counsel in the Arlington case continued arguments upon instructions to the jury. The Judge stated that to-morrow he would decide upon two instructions asked for by the plaintiff and one of those asked for by the defendants.

DISASTERS TO VESSELS.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—The British ship Nelson, Capt. Murphy, from Liverpool Jan. 16, for San Francisco, returned to Queenstown Jan. 26, with her steering gear disabled.

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia, Jan. 27.—The steam-ship Quebec, of the Dominion Line, left here during the storm Saturday for Portland. Soon afterward the bowser fouled her propeller, and she drifted on the shoal ground at the upper end of the dock-yard. She got off at high tide without damage, and anchored in the stream.

NEW-BEDFORD, Mass., Jan. 27.—The schooner Ida L., of Centreville, bound from Surinam for Boston, which went ashore on Cuttyhunk last evening, got off, and proceeded to Vineyard Haven for repairs.

THE MAJOR RENO INQUIRY.

MORE TESTIMONY AS TO THE ATTACK BY THE INDIANS UPON RENO'S COMMAND.

CHICAGO, Jan. 27.—Capt. Moylan was again on the stand to-day at the Reno inquiry. He was asked as to whether he remembered a conversation had by him with Lieut. Wallace, in the timber, regarding the strength of the Indians. The witness replied that he remembered of some such conversation, at the end of which, turning to a half-breed scout named Jackson, he asked him if he would take word to Gen. Custer regarding the strength of the Indians. But the scout, motioning with his hand to the Indians circling around the command, said "no man could get through there alive."

George Herendeen, of Bozeman, whose vocation is, as he expressed it, "running the prairie," testified that he was with Reno, and saw no Indians opposing the advance of the troops, and after the command dismounted to deploy, he, with three other scouts, went to the extreme left; and, dismounting, sat down to watch the firing of the troops; there were no Indians to fire at from where he was, and he thought the firing of the troops was rather rapid; he saw no great number of Indians anywhere, except down the bottom; afterward he was present with Reno when the retreat began; the soldiers were much frightened; before the retreat, and while he was in the timber, he heard firing in the direction of Gen. Custer; he thought it was Custer down the river; his impression had been confirmed since. The witness judged that when Reno left the timber, Gen. Custer must have been two miles from his last battle-field; the effective fighting force of the Indians, he thought, was about 3,500; he did not think the Indians could have driven 100 men with 5,000 or 6,000 rounds of ammunition out of the timber where Reno's command was.

Capt. E. S. Payne, of the Fifth Cavalry, testified that he made a measurement, on Aug. 22 last, from the place where Custer was killed to Reno's intrenchment on the hill; the measurement was practically by "chaining," by means of lariats measured and tied together; the line was a practical route, and almost a straight line; this distance was four miles and 160 yards; there were bones of horses and men scattered around where Custer was slain. The testimony bearing upon the distance between Reno's final position on the hill after his retreat and the point where Custer fought is of vital importance, as upon it rests the ability of Reno to hear the conflict and his responsibility in not going to Custer's aid.

BENJAMIN NOYES' CHECK-BOOK.

RECEIVER RUSSELL REFUSES TO CONFIRM THE STATEMENTS ABOUT PAYMENTS TO LEGISLATORS.

NEW-HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 27.—Receiver Talc

of them had existed for a long time, and some were beyond the power of the Collector to correct, it was not fair to impute them all to his fault, or to hold him responsible for them, though he had been longer in office than any of his predecessors for 40 years, having been first appointed Dec. 21, 1871. During the period of his service his compensation amounted to $158,860 36, a detailed statement of which is herewith transmitted. An officer charged with the high duties of Collector of the Port of New-York, and receiving such compensation, ought properly to be held responsible for all abuses that grew up or continued during his term of office, and the existence of such abuses is sufficient, if within his power to correct them, to justify his removal. The President was strongly of opinion when reports of the Jay Commission and other public statements demanded a change in the leading officers in the New-York Custom-house, I prepared to try to execute the reforms proposed with Mr. Arthur in office rather than a stranger. The President acquiesced in this view, but gradually it became evident that neither Mr. Arthur nor Mr. Cornell were in sympathy with the recommendations of the commission, and could and did not enlist their fair exertions. The President became entirely satisfied that it was his duty to make a change in both offices, but the Senate, however, deemed it best not to confirm the nominations of Messrs. Roosevelt and Prince. A brief experience proved that any hope of carrying out any systematic reforms or changes in the mode of conducting business would be abortive while the Collector held his position. The same system, the same persons, the same influences would prevail as before. From the nature of things it was difficult for a Collector long associated with the chief subordinates under him to believe evil of any of them. Mr. Lydecker, the Deputy Collector, was practically Collector. Gen. Arthur did not give that personal attention to the business of the office that would seem to be necessary for the proper discharge of its duties. He did not usually arrive at his office until afternoon. I respectfully call your attention to the report of General Appraiser John F. Meredith and Special Agents M. Bingham and R. H. Hinds, of date of July 17, 1878, a copy of which is herewith transmitted. These officers say, in regard to Collector Arthur: "It came to our notice early in our investigation that the Collector, as a rule, neglected to appear at his office until midday or later. This was claimed by his special deputy, Mr. Lydecker, in explanation (the Collector being absent on leave) that he made up for his late arrivals at his office by remaining after hours. This, however, we do not regard as sufficient answer, even if it be true.

"We were surprised to learn that Collector Arthur, after having been advised of the connection of his special deputy, Mr. Lydecker, with persons defrauding the Government, and after proofs of such official misconduct had been submitted to him, still appeared to repose in Mr. Lydecker the most implicit confidence, and to allow him to practically control the business management of the office."

It would also appear from a special report made by the same officer of the date of June 25, 1878, that Mr. Lydecker, Chief Deputy, had been guilty of certain neglect and indelicate practices. These facts, together with many detailed reports of officers of this department, convinced me, after several months' trial and consideration, that, without any arraignment of the personal character of Collector Arthur and the Naval Officer, the public service demanded a change in the incumbents of these offices. Mr. Cornell held simply a sinecure position, his real duties being discharged by his deputy, and Mr. Burt is now performing the duties both of Naval Officer and those formerly discharged by him as Cashier, the latter office having been discontinued. In the selection of nominees great care was taken to secure those whose long experience and fidelity in public services gave ample assurance for a faithful and constant discharge of their duties.

THE NEW REGIME.

It is manifest that during Gen. Merritt's incumbency as Survey and Collector, which latter position he accepted with reluctance, a general improvement has taken place, and the only evidence from any quarter of dissatisfaction as to the manner in which the affairs of the Custom-house have been conducted arises from those who complain of the strict enforcement of the law. It is respectfully submitted that under the circumstances the restoration of Messrs. Arthur and Cornell would be a serious injury to the public service, involving a loss of public revenue and an increased expenditure. It would establish a constant irritation and struggle between old abuses that existed and reforms that are sought to be accomplished.

It would be unjust to the President and personally embarrassing to me in the discharge of my duties to have the office of Collector of Customs at New-York held by one who will not perform his duties according to the general policy of the department. Gen. Arthur's term of service expires on Dec. 17, 1879, and his restoration would be but temporary, even if the President should not avail himself of his legal power to send another name to the Senate, or to suspend him after the adjournment of the Senate. The very marked success of the administration of Collector Merritt and Naval Officer Burt would seem to entitle them to the recognition of the Senate, and to their confirmation."

COLLECTOR ARTHUR'S DEFENSE.

The following is the reply of Gen. Arthur to the communication addressed to the Senate by the Secretary of the Treasury on the 15th inst.:

NEW-YORK, Jan. 21, 1879.

Hon. Roscoe Conkling, Chairman:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your favor of Jan. 16, transmitting, by consent of the Senate and direction of the Committee on Commerce, a copy of the communication addressed to the Senate by Hon. John Sherman, Secretary of the Treasury, under date of Jan. 15, and purporting to state the reasons of my suspension from the office of Collector of this port. For the opportunity to answer the assertions of this paper I am deeply grateful. I cannot, without a longer delay than would be justifiable, reply as fully as I would like to all of the statements of Mr. Sherman, but I think I shall have no difficulty in satisfying the Senate that it, as is presumably the case, his communication contains all that can be said against my administration of the office of Collector, my suspension was not only directly contrary to all the professions of the Administration, but was a violation of every principle of justice. When an Administration deliberately avows and constantly reiterates that removal from office is to take place only for cause, it is obvious no matter what may be said to the contrary, that a removal must, at least in the estimation of that portion of the public which has faith in the sincerity of the Administration, carry with it a stigma upon the character of the removed officer, and this stigma is not fully removed even if the first notice of intended removal is accompanied—as was the case with me—with an unqualified offer of an important foreign appointment under another department of the Government.

Mr. Sherman, in the opening of his communication, refers to the criticisms made in Congress in the press and in private on the New-York Custom-house. It is notorious that during the nearly seven years I was in office there was much less complaint against the administration of the New-York Custom-house than for many years before. The laws have been greatly criticised, and, to some extent, changed. My administration of them has been rarely complained of. Mr. Sherman alludes greatly in the report of the Jay Commission, and, in his communication to the Senate, implicitly accepts its statements as true. It will be presently seen that in some of his actions he throws entire discredit upon them. It is important, however, that the constitution and methods of the commission upon which so much reliance is placed, should be known. In my letter of Nov. 23, 1877, a copy of which is inclosed, I correctly, as I believe, described these in the following terms:

THE JAY COMMISSION NOT IMPARTIAL.

"There can be no pretense that in the commission as finally constituted, any one represented the officers of the port, or was even unbiased as to the effect of investigation. The commission thus constituted could be safely relied upon to find against the officers of Customs, giving no opportunity for cross-examination and little for rebuttal or explanation, and of course, took a partial and one-sided view. They did not pretend to investigate thoroughly any question, or to seek for evidence on both sides. Not only by public advertisement, but by hundreds of letters, they invited merchants supposed to be aggrieved to present their complaints. A reference to the testimony will show, however, that the prominent and honorable merchants of this port made no complaints against the administration of the laws during the last five years. The members of the commission manifested their disappointment at this, and it apparently did not occur to them that the real explanation was that those whose opinions were entitled to any weight had no complaint to make, but were, on the contrary, anxious, if given an opportunity, to bear testimony in favor of the manner in which the duties of the office were performed. The commission either refused to receive testimony in answer to such complaints as were, in fact, made to them, or when it was forced upon it, wholly disregarded it. Moreover, it did not seem to occur to them that while they were in effect sitting in judgment upon those who for a few years past have administered the Customs service at this port, justice required that they should bear witness to the improvements that had been introduced, improvements which have rendered the service more efficient, more honest, and more economical than at any previous period in the history of the Government. Even taking the testimony as the commission present it, without explanations from those attacked, without opportunity being given to cross-examine the witnesses, or to show the spirit which animated them, I am confident that if you will find time amid your manifold occupations to examine it, you will come to the conclusion that it wholly fails to bear out the sweeping and general allegations of the commission. I trust that if the report shall be submitted to Congress the testimony accompany them."

AS TO IRREGULAR FEES AND GRATUITIES.

Mr. Sherman says that the second report of the Jay Commission shows that it was a common practice among clerks, &c., to receive from importers and brokers irregular fees in the nature of bribes. While the Jay Commission made some general statements which may seem to justify this sweeping assertion, I have no hesitation in saying (though Mr. Sherman has carefully and prudently kept the evidence taken by that commission from publication) that they obtained no evidence which bears out this assertion. Such evidence may exist to some extent, but it is almost impossible to obtain proof of them. The payment of gratuities to entry clerks and some other officers is, as Mr. Sherman says, a matter of general report, but as I pointed out in my letter of May 17, 1877, annexed to the second report of the Jay Commission, both the giver and the receiver are exempt from testifying, and therefore proof is only obtainable by accident, and then it is very difficult to show any wrong intent. Though my letter just referred to shows distinctly that I had endeavored (restored March 3, 1875,) and adding many articles to the free list, and other similar acts. The Collector, however, may be, cannot safeguard the importers, and without importations he cannot collect revenue.

WHY EXPENSES HAVE INCREASED.

As to the expenses, they were increased from year to year because there were improperly, if not illegally, charged to the expense of collecting the revenues large amounts over which I had no control, and which, in strictness, had nothing to do with the current expenses. Thus, in 1875 and 1876 there were expended $250,000 in fitting up the new Appraiser's stores. In 1877 there were charged to the account over $165,000, of interest and rent, on old judgments arising out of matters accruing prior to 1872. In another year there was charged a large amount for fitting up the Naval Office, and for a series of years a large sum for rentals. These are but specimens of many similar items. For four years alone I can point out an aggregate of over $675,000 charged to expenses. It should also be noted that the expenses of the Surveyor's Department, Naval Officer's Department, and all included in the statement of expenses and amounting to several hundred thousand dollars a year, are in no respect under the control of the Collector. These have been largely augmented since 1872 by increased rentals and in other respects. Thus, the rental of the public stores was increased by the department in 1873 from $66,000 to nearly $90,000 per annum. Moreover, under the law duties have been increased by new burdens thrown upon the office by legislation. Thus the inland transportation system, by which goods arriving at this port are transported without payment of duty to a large number of inland cities, imposes a large expenditure here, while it takes largely from the amount of duties received here. So an elaborate system of preparing statistics has grown under the direction of the Treasury Department, and causes an expense of nearly $40,000 a year. None of these are properly chargeable as a part of the expense of collecting the revenue of this port. It should be borne in mind that the Collector can incur no new or increased expense, cannot appoint a single additional subordinate, or change the compensation of any one without the express and special authority of the Secretary of the Treasury. Under these circumstances, the Collector is not fairly held exclusively responsible for any increase of expense.

THE REDUCTION OF THE FORCE.

With reference to the reduction in the force, Mr. Sherman says that the Department ordered a reduction of 12 per cent. was all that was proper the Jay Commission reported in favor of 20 per cent., and that this has been carried out at a large annual saving, and "increasing the efficiency of the service." Upon this subject I refer to the following paragraph of a letter addressed me by the Secretary, Nov. 25, 1877:

"I had myself arranged with your predecessor that before July of the present year there should be made a reduction of about 20 per cent. in the force, to which I believed, even in dull times, retrenchment could go without injuring the efficiency of the system and causing delays to the mercantile community. The result of the reduction in excess of this percentage, made on the advice of the commission, has been that in some branches it has already caused delays that have been ceased, while business has accumulated in others beyond the ability of the force to dispose of."

In a few weeks the delays caused to merchants in a single day by the insufficient force of entry clerks must have cost $5,000, though, to relieve the press to some extent, I temporarily took clerks from other duties, where they were needed, to perform the duties of entry clerks. Upon the question of the adequacy of the force, I may add that no one is yet justified in saying that the present force is sufficient. This port has a docked water-front of about 24 miles. To perfectly watch this front at night so as to prevent smuggling requires a large force, while if only half the necessary force is employed the consequent loss certain loss is not easily detected. Again, the proper carrying out of the law as to goods intended for transportation in bond and for export require many men. That duty is now, with the reduced force, performed at all is owing to the fact that practically almost no protection against frauds. I am informed, though I have not had time to verify the report, that the force has, since my suspension, been much diminished by other removals among the subordinates, temporary and permanent; and that the amount paid for salaries under the Acting Collector's administration during the latter half of 1878 is considerably larger than was paid under my administration during the first half of the year.

THE SECRETARY CAUGHT IN HIS OWN TRAPS.

The Secretary, after enumerating the alleged irregularities in the weigher's department, continues: "By reason of these irregularities the cost of weighing and gauging imported goods at the port of New-York had increased to the enormous sum of $546,524 80 per annum. These evils were known to Collector Arthur, yet he made no attempt, during his term of office, to remedy them." Now, the fact is that the figures given by the Secretary are obviously intended to be those showing the cost for the year 1876. I came into office in December, 1871. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1872, the expenses of these departments were $468,955 13; for the year ending June 30, 1873, $461,187 22; for the year ending June 30, 1874, $447,272 05; for the year ending June 30, 1875, $435,378 96, and for the year ending June 30, 1876, $425 172 76, so that the expenses which the Secretary says "had increased" to the sum of $546,524 80, had, in fact, decreased in every year of my administration, so that they ran down from $468,955 13 in 1872, to the figures given by the year 1876, viz., $546,524 80, or a reduction of nearly $122,000. Mr. Sherman introduces some extracts from the report made by Messrs. Meredith and others, and upon these charges is supposed obtained to justify my suspension. But I was suspended on July 11, and was then informed by the Secretary that my suspension had been decided upon a considerable time previous to that date. Meredith's report is not dated till July 17, six days after my suspension. It would have been at least prudent if Mr. Sherman had paid a little attention to these dates. As to the reference to the special report of Messrs. Meredith and others concerning Deputy Collector Lydecker, the charges are based on occurrences which took place 10 years ago.

COLLECTOR ARTHUR'S BUSINESS HABITS.

Mr. Sherman adopts the statement of Mr. Meredith and his associates that I did not give "that personal attention to the office that the statement would seem to be necessary; that he did not usually arrive at his office until afternoon." I must plead guilty to this charge as far as relates to the hour at which I sometimes reached my office. I can only say that I found it constantly necessary to work at my house, where I could escape interruption in the examination of voluminous papers, and perplexing questions constantly coming before me, but that I always made it a rule to be at my office the day before I left the Custom-house, though that frequently required me to remain there far into the evening. I say confidently, that for many years the duties of the office have not been performed so promptly as I performed them. Every one in or out of the Custom-house, who is familiar with the facts, will confirm this assertion. As my not giving personal attention to my duties, those who have long been connected with the Custom-house inform me that for a great many years no Collector has reserved to himself such personal attention so large a portion of the duties of the office.

To me, and not to the Acting Collector, should, therefore, be ascribed a portion at least of the credit for the saving the Secretary claims by his changes and care. It is obvious that Mr. Sherman was aware of this, for he is careful not to give the period during which the gain he claims was made. He says: "Showing a gain to Nov. 30, 1878," but does not tell from what period, and further on he speaks with studied indefiniteness of a gain in "a period covered." I may add that in referring to the reforms introduced by the Acting Collector recently, no mention is made by members to forget to specify them. Every one that he does refer to was introduced while I was Collector or recommended by me.

Mr. Sherman states that, after the receipt of the report of the Jay Commission, the President was strongly of opinion that the public interest demanded a change in the leading offices in the New-York Custom-house;" but that he [Mr. Sherman] preferred to try to execute the reforms proposed with Mr. Arthur in office rather than a stranger, but, he says, it gradually became evident that I was not in sympathy with the recommendations of the commission, and could and did not obstruct their fair execution. How or in what way I "obstructed the execution of the recommendations of the commission" I am unable to say. As to the recommendations of the commission, I can only say that after I had submitted my own views to the department I carried out promptly and zealously every recommendation of the commission so soon as the Secretary adopted it, whether it met my personal approval or not.

THE REAL MOTIVE.

When communicating to me my suspension, Mr. Sherman expressly informed me that from the outset there had been no wavering in the determination to remove me, but it had been delayed by accidental causes which he mentioned, among which he did not state the one he now impliedly admits, viz.: a desire to avoid the control of the Senate. It is furthermore clear that there could have been no ground of suspension occurring after the adjournment of the Senate, as I was absent on my annual leave of absence from the time of such adjournment until within a week of my suspension. In informing me in July last of my intended suspension, Mr. Sherman distinctly stated that I was not suspended because of any charges, and that I never would hear of any charges from him, but that the suspension was to be made solely because the Administration felt that the Collector should be in sympathy with the Administration with reference to the Custom-house. Mr. Sherman offered to state this to me in writing, but not anticipating the communication just sent to the Senate, I was content with his oral assurance. I am very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. A. ARTHUR.

MR. CORNELL'S REPLY.

The following is Mr. Cornell's reply to Secretary Sherman's letter:

NEW-YORK, Jan. 21, 1879.

Hon. Roscoe Conkling, Chairman:

MY DEAR SIR: Owing to my absence from the City, your favor of the 16th inst. has only just been received. The communication of the Secretary of the Treasury, to which you call my attention, contains no allegation of impropriety or neglect of duty during my service as Naval Officer, nor can any such allegation be truthfully made.

At the time of my suspension the Secretary of the Treasury stated that no fault was found with my official conduct, and that he was not in favor of suspending me, but that the President had determined upon it, contrary to his [the Secretary's] opinion.

The determination to suspend me undoubtedly had its origin in my refusal to surrender my personal and political rights, which will be best understood by reference to a letter which was addressed by me to the President under date of Sept. 8, 1877, a copy of which is inclosed herein. Yours, very respectfully,

ALONZO B. CORNELL.

REAPING THE ICE HARVEST.

AN UNUSUALLY LARGE YIELD FROM THE HUDSON RIVER.

THE GATHERING TO BE FINISHED PROBABLY THIS WEEK—EXPECTATION THAT 3,000,000 TONS WILL BE OBTAINED, OR ENOUGH FOR TWO SEASONS—DETAILS OF THE WORK.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Jan. 27.—The most successful ice harvest ever known on the Hudson River will be completed in a few days. Never before in the history of ice-gathering has such an immense quantity been cut and housed, and never before has there been thicker or a better quality of ice put in. The figures obtained are of the most interesting character, and show to what gigantic proportions the business of cutting and housing ice has attained. Thousands of men and boys, hundreds of horses, and scores of steam-engines have been impressed into the service, and hundreds of thousands of dollars have already been distributed among them. The pay of ice-gatherers has ranged from $1, $1 25, $1 50, to $1 75 a day—prices which have been satisfactory to the persons employed, as it evident from the fact that this Winter there have been no serious strikes. Unless it rains continually between now and Friday or Saturday next, the following enormous quantity of ice will be housed on the Hudson, and over two-thirds of it is already in. The table also gives the number of men, boys, horses, and steam-engines at work:

Name.	Capacity of House.	Workmen.	Horses.
CASTLETON.
G. H. Miller	8,000	48	6
Clark & Wallace	8,000	44	6
Hotaling & Wyatt	18,000	95	10
W. A. Wiman	6,000	38	7
Miller & Chandler	6,000	42	7
Clark & Whitbeck	60,000	240	20
Commonwealth Company	12,000	130	15
Freeman & Co	12,000	90	10
Friendship Company	10,000	64	8
Warren & Wilbur	15,000	66	9
R. English & Co	30,000	140	20
Dittenger	30,000	140	20
Hotaling	28,000	120	20
Peterson	5,000	30	8
R. Mould	15,000	90	18
W. Smith	6,000	35	6
BARREN ISLAND.
Knickerbocker	40,000	190	20
COSTMAN'S.
Knickerbocker	38,000	190	20
SCHODAC.
Knickerbocker	65,000	240	20
NEW-BALTIMORE.
Two houses	40,000	150	16
STUYVESANT.
New-Jersey Company	20,000	142	8
Scott & Co	16,000	120	8
Ridgwood & Manf. Co	26,000	168	10
John J. Burchell	30,000	225	15
H. Van Steinburgh	12,000	100	18
John Wolfer	30,000	225	18
William Beadel	10,000	90	8
Palmer & Bogard	16,000	100	8
Mr. Ray	6,000	85	4
Mr. Terry	1,800	20	5
COXACKIE.
Van Steenburgh	30,000	225	15
John Wolfer	10,000	90	8
Knickerbocker	40,000	230	25
STOCKPORT.
Beuchell	40,000	228	20
ATHENS.
Washington Company	30,000	225	13
Knickerbocker	60,000	230	30
CATSKILL AND VICINITY.
Hart & Van Steenburgh	11,000	80	8
Van Steenburgh	4,000	45	5
Knickerbocker	24,000	200	30
H. Bailey	10,000	90	8
Knickerbocker	48,000	226	30
Washington Company	43,000	225	25
Wendt & Hemp	50,000	225	25
Knickerbocker	18,000	148	15
Unknown	12,000	100	7
OPPOSITE GERMANTOWN.
Knickerbocker	28,000	200	8
National	40,000	220	30
New-Jersey	40,000	230	18
Consumers'	80,000	340	28
RAVESPORT.
Knickerbocker	20,000	197	8
GLASCO.
Cottrell & Co	45,000	236	18
TURKEY POINT.
Knickerbocker	40,000	230	12
BARRYTOWN.
Mutual Benefit	40,000	230	12
Knickerbocker	20,000	201	9
Newark	20,000	170	7
FLATBUSH.
Knickerbocker	50,000	265	18
SHINEBECK.
Knickerbocker	20,000	170	7
WHISKY POINT.
Washington Company	45,000	230	28
BONDOUT CREEK.
Knickerbocker	15,000	135	8
Washington	15,000	135	8
PORT EWEN.
Washington	50,000	255	18
ESOPUS.
Knickerbocker	60,000	263	20
STAATSBURG.
Mutual Benefit	15,000	120	6
Knickerbocker	20,000	225	12
PELL'S DOCK.
Unknown	20,000	205	8
WEST PARK.
Mutual Benefit	50,000	235	18
CLEARWATER QUARRY.
Knickerbocker	30,000	201	9
NEW-PLATZ.
Knickerbocker	30,000	201	9
MARLBOROUGH.
Knickerbocker	22,500	205	8
HAMPTON POINT.
Unknown	15,000	120	6
HIGHLAND LANE.
Knickerbocker	50,000	205	10
LAKE MEHAUGH.
Knickerbocker	40,000	240	15
ROCKLAND LAKE.
Knickerbocker	90,000	450	40
Total	2,061,500	12,084	892

The above showing is certainly wonderful, and what is more, it is proposed by the Knickerbocker Company and many of the other ice-gatherers to stack thousands of tons of ice outside of the full houses. This stacked ice will increase the crop to about 3,000,000 tons, and it will be the first ice carried to New-York, and it is expected that it will last nearly all Summer, so that when Fall arrives all of the houses will still be full, and thus this Winter a two-years' crop will be secured—a thing that has never happened before. The quality of the ice is in every respect first class. It is not only from 10 to 14 inches thick, but it is also clear-water ice. To show how the ice business has increased on the Hudson in six years, it is only necessary to print the following table of comparison, showing the amount housed, number of employes, horses and engines employed:

	Tons.	Workmen.	Horses.	Engines.
1873	1,408,500	7,524	500	42
1878	2,061,500	12,084	892	79

Since the companies have brought steam engines into use with which to work the elevators, instead of horses, each house lifts from the river and stows away 30 cakes of ice a minute, each cake weighing 250 pounds. This is 15,000 cakes a day, and as there are 73 ice-houses on the river, it makes 1,314,000 cakes hoisted out of the river daily. One elevator is capable of pulling in 2,500 tons of ice a day. The above table does not include the quantity of ice housed at Albany, or between Albany and Troy, where the business is also very large. At Albany and in its vicinity about 3,000 men and boys are engaged gathering ice, and last year 200,000 tons were harvested, while this year the crop will amount to over 300,000 tons. Hotaling's houses at Albany contain 12,000 tons, and this harvester has one near the Abbey which holds 40,000 tons, and 260 men and 30 horses and steam power are engaged. Callender's houses at Greenbush hold 52,000 tons, and this owner will stack 40,000 tons besides. John Mullins & Son's houses hold 45,000 tons and will all be filled.

AN ICE COMPANY'S TROUBLES.

NO WATER FOR ITS ENGINES—THE ICE IN FRONT OF ITS HOUSE SEIZED BY A "SQUATTER."

NEWBURG, N. Y., Jan. 27.—The Ridgewood Ice Company, of Brooklyn, of which J. M. Lawrence is President, owns two large ice-houses at Hampton, about seven miles north of this city. Hampton is sometimes designated as South Marlborough. Near the Ridgewood Company's buildings is situated the W. M. Peck estate. Directly in the rear of the ice-houses stands a tenement-house owned by the Peck heirs. The tenement-house is rented by an Irishman named Adam Darrow, in the employ of one R. A. Kerr. Darrow has the control of a large cistern, from which the Ridgewood Company heretofore has fed its engine-boiler. The cistern is replenished from a pond near by. The company has only one boiler. Darrow, on Saturday last, refused to allow the company the privilege of the water in the cistern, and, in consequence, the company's men were forced to suspend operations. Since then, the company has made arrangements with the Irishman for the use of the water, and work has been resumed.

Previous to the difficulty in reference to the water the Ridgewood Company had a more serious trouble. The R. A. Kerr above mentioned, immediately after the river had frozen over, staked out a large ice field, before the company's men had an opportunity to do so, directly in front of the ice-houses. When the ice was six inches thick the Ridgewood Company put a number of men and teams on the ice-field staked out by Kerr to scrape the heavy snow off, preparatory to cutting canals. When the company had finished scraping Kerr ordered its employes not to take a single cake of ice out of his field, as he was bound for a prize in the lottery. Superintendent Lawrence informed him he would receive pay for his field, and then went to Brooklyn. Meanwhile the company's men were busily engaged filling the houses. On Thursday Kerr again stopped operations, and the company's men laylidle and awaited the arrival of the President. Mr. Lawrence, it appears, satisfied Kerr's claims, as work was resumed the following day. The matter is the talk of the vicinity will be that ice companies in future Winters will make it a point to have men ready to stake out fields immediately upon the closing of the river.

A RAILROAD ON BROADWAY.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Will you permit a few remarks in reply to an article in which you allude to a revival of the project for a "surface railroad on Broadway?"

Broadway, below Fourteenth-street, is the natural thoroughfare between the extremities of the City, and is being deserted, mainly because there is no surface railroad. Whether the railroad will bring back the retail trade may be a debatable question, but there can be no question that it will bring other trade, and prevent the trade now there from leaving. It will arrest the depreciation of property. While omnibuses were the only means of conveyance, every one riding north and south was obliged to pass through Broadway, and stores were established to supply the wants of those who came to the street. Broadway formerly offered the best accommodations for travel, but when the cars were compelled to go through the lateral streets, trade was built up along their routes and diverted from Broadway. Cars are quicker, sheaper, more comfortable, easier to get into and out of, and most people will go some distance to a car route rather than ride in an omnibus. It was a mistake on the part of property-owners that a railroad would injure trade. It was demonstrated that they were the popular conveyances. Omnibuses seldom carry more than four passengers during the greater part of the day, while the cars are generally full.

The only serious objection ever urged to a surface railroad was that there would not then be room for the express wagons, loaded carts, and huge trucks needed to go to the docks. Even if this were so—which I do not admit—it would still be to the interest of Broadway property-owners that a railroad should be built, for business is made by the people, and not by the street. A surface railroad has never injured any business street, but has made many available for business. Our firm is leaving the street on account of its inaccessibility to our customers, and we leave it with regret, our senior having been on Broadway since the 1842, longer than any other merchant now living. I have no pecuniary interest in the project, but, nevertheless, hope something will be done to arrest the decay of a street of which every New-Yorker has been proud. I believe the railroad will be a great benefit and sincerely hope it will be built.

GEORGE A. HEARN, Jr.,
of James A. Hearn & Son,
Nos. 773 and 775 Broadway.

SUNDAY, Jan. 26, 1879.

ORVIL GRANT IN PHILADELPHIA.

From the Philadelphia Times, Jan. 27.

A bearded man, in a heavy ulster and an old slouch hat, walked into Lipton's restaurant, at Sixth and Arch streets, yesterday morning, about 10 o'clock, and inquired for a young man connected with the establishment, who had recently been in the restaurant business in New-York. The bearded man said he had just that morning arrived from New-York, and, intending to open a $200,000 restaurant in San Francisco, was on the lookout for an assistant. Parties in New-York had referred him to the young man in question. He was on his way to Washington, where he had business to transact, prior to his departure for San Francisco. He expressed himself pleased with the looks of the young man, and thought he would "do." He talked about immense sums of money he had tied up in various places, and said he had lost hundreds of thousands of dollars in the Chicago fire. He was full of plans for making money in San Francisco. Not only was he going to open a great restaurant, but he had several hundred thousand dollars invested in a Pacific slope tannery, another immense sum in a brewery, and was in partnership with several parties in other enterprises. He had left behind immense sums of money in Washington, and lost large sums of money there. He spoke lightly of his losses, and proposed to make up for them very shortly. He ordered breakfast for himself and friend. He was impatient to get to San Francisco. His partners were waiting for him there. As soon as he got through his business in Washington he would go through to his destination without delay. There would be no end to the money he was going to make. After he got through breakfast he drew out a roll of greenbacks and paid his bill. Then he lighted a cigar and began to smoke vigorously. He was a rather good-looking man of long stature, full beard, and a strong head, a prominent forehead, and rather small, steel-blue eyes. He had removed his ulster, showing a dark undercoat, considerably the worse for wear, and dark trousers the same. A pair of light overshoes were over his boots, and he looked as though he had been walking a good deal in the mud. The hat was rather too small for him, and when he put it on it gave him a queer, jaunty look. There was an air of easy assurance about him and he talked with everybody. It was soon whispered among those who heard him that he was insane. The young man whom he had called to see asked him his name. "Orvil Grant," he replied. "President Grant has a brother of that name," some one said. "Yes," said the stranger, "Ulysses is my brother. He is 13 years older than I am. I'm 44 and he is 57."

A SURGEON SUES THE HOWARDS.

From the New-Orleans Times, Jan. 24.

A suit of rather more than ordinary interest was filed in the Fifth District Court yesterday. The suit is entitled Dr. Samuel Walker against the Howard Association of New-Orleans. The Doctor shows that he is a practicing physician of New-Orleans, and that on or about the 5th day of September he was employed by the Howard Association. He says that he accepted said employment promptly, and went to Greenville under the instructions of the association to attend upon the sick there. He reached Greenville on the 10th of September, and remained there treating the sick until the 16th day of October, when he returned to New-Orleans and made his report to the association. In going to Greenville, the Doctor says, he necessarily abandoned his private practice in this city, and, at the time of his return, of departure, had been remunerative and profitable. He went to the office of the association on his return, and requested to be paid for the services which he had rendered as informed, so he says, that the association owed him nothing, and consequently would pay him nothing. The Doctor says that he then made out his account for $5,000 against the association, and presented the same, but payment of which was refused. He therefore asks judgment for the above-named amount.

CARD FROM MATT. H. CARPENTER.

Hon. Matt. H. Carpenter, Senator-elect from Wisconsin, has addressed a card to the editor of the Milwaukee Sentinel, in which he says: "I have received hundreds of letters of congratulation within the last three days that it is impossible for me to answer. Therefore allow me to say, through your columns, to all my friends, that I thank them for their sympathy and friendship; and it will be my chief ambition to prove myself worthy of such friends. Allow me to add that I believe that there is a wide-spread expectation that I will make war upon Federal office-holders appointed on the recommendation of Senator Howe. I wish to correct this impression at the threshold. Whatever influence over appointments is given to a United States Senator is intended to be exercised for the benefit of the public service and not for his personal advantage. Such influence will depend largely upon the personal relations between the appointing or advising power and the official, but upon the efficiency with which he meets the requirements of the service. No office-holder appointed at the instance of Judge Howe need fear anything from me so long as he discharges the duties of his position to the satisfaction of the people."

WOULDN'T KISS HIS BRIDE BEFORE FOLKS

From the Sacramento (Cal.) Union, Jan. 20.

Justice Alexander was called upon Saturday morning to unite in wedlock, "Mellcan fashion," Ah Yung and To Ying. At the conclusion of the ceremony the Justice suggested that, in order that everything should be done strictly in accordance with the provisions of section 500,090 of the code, it would be incumbent upon the bridegroom to kiss the bride then and there, or get some one else to do so. The bridegroom, who had no idea of taking the Judge's hint as to the "some one else," quietly intimated that he was willing to do all necessary kissing, but he preferred to have the Chinese spectators of the wedding invited out doors first, as they did not consider it the right thing exactly to kiss one's wife before folks. The Celestial spectators took a walk for a minute or two accordingly, and the new-made husband gave his wife a series of such earnest smacks as to lead to the belief that he had been waiting months for a good chance. After the wedding, cake and wine, cigars, &c., were partaken of, the Benedict doing the hospitable in first-class style.

THE SOUTH'S CLAIMS FOR MONEY.

From the Vicksburg (Miss.) Herald, Jan. 24.

As to getting money out of the Treasury, whatever we are justly entitled to we want. We won't quarrel about the claims of so-called Southern loyalists; but we will quarrel with Mr. Bragg and other Northern men of both parties if we do not soon secure some sort of an equalization of national aid. We claim that the North has received an undue share of national aid, and that now it is but justice for some little help to be extended the crippled South. For hundreds of reasons that have been given a hundreds of times, we want help to build a railway across Southern soil to the Pacific. Because it is just and proper we want help to improve the navigation of the Mississippi River and to reclaim the Mississippi Valley. The South asks these things not as a beggar, but because she believes she is entitled to them. If Mr. Bragg and other Northern Democrats are so opposed to these measures of justice as to refuse them with a snub, they must not be astonished if leading Southern men seek them through other party affiliations.

NEW-YORK CITY FINANCES.

THE BOARD OF APPORTIONMENT.

HOW THE EXCISE MONEYS ARE APPROPRIATED—THE MAYOR STILL LOOKING FOR INFORMATION—THE QUESTION OF HEADS OF DEPARTMENTS EXCEEDING THEIR APPROPRIATIONS.

An adjourned meeting of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment was held yesterday, and the important question of heads of departments incurring expenses in excess of their appropriations and in violation of law, which elicited vigorous comments from Mayor Cooper at the previous session, was called up again for discussion. At the appointed hour, all the members of the board were in attendance. They consist of the Mayor, the Controller, Mr. Mott, the President of the Board of Aldermen, and Tax Commissioner Wheeler. The minutes having been approved, Controller Kelly said that in respect to the matters that were before the board at the last meeting relating to appropriations for charitable institutions, he thought that no appropriations should be made at present in view of the fact that there was only about $1,800 in the Treasury that could be used for the purpose.

President Mott inquired when there would be available funds.

Controller Kelly said there was $100,000 in the Treasury obtained from certificates for excise licenses, and the ownership of the money was then in litigation. Until the question was decided the only funds that were available for these charitable institutions were what the Excise Commissioners collect from week to week. It would therefore, he thought, be necessary to wait until some money was paid in by the Commissioners at the close of the month.

Mayor Cooper remarked that the three institutions in whose behalf resolutions were before the board appeared to have a legal claim for a portion of the excise moneys. [The institutions are the Home for Fallen and Friendless Girls, the American Female Guardian Society, and St. Stephen's Home for Children.]

Controller Kelly said that some of the institutions come under the law passed by the Legislature, in 1878, requiring the City to support them out of taxation. They had only appropriated $10,000 for the purpose, and that was the only amount which was available for the present year.

Mayor Cooper observed that the three resolutions before the board were for appropriations of money for the support of persons committed by magistrates and for the Home for Friendless Girls. The funds had been divided in such a manner as to compel the institutions to wait until next month for money. He would like to know, in this connection, the amount which it was compulsory on the board to give out of the excise funds.

Controller Kelly replied that he could not give the exact amount then, but he would furnish the information.

Mayor Cooper said it would appear, then, that such an amount of money had already been distributed among institutions to which the distribution of excise moneys was optional, that there is not in reserve enough to supply those to which the excise moneys are directly appropriated by law, as was the case with the Home for Fallen and Friendless Girls. The matter was then laid over at the suggestion of the Controller.

At this point President Mott said he had a matter he would like to lay before the board, but the Mayor had informed him that he believed they had no jurisdiction over it. It was in regard to the expenditures of money by heads of departments in cases where there were no appropriations. His desire was to protect innocent creditors.

Controller Kelly—There have been no bills paid by the Controller where there was no app

MULBERRY-STREET AFFAIRS

GEN. SMITH AND MR. NICHOLS TALKING.

A MATTER OF COURTESY—ABSENCE OF THE STREET-CLEANING COMMITTEE—SENATOR BLAINE'S OPINION—POLITICIANS AND POLICEMEN.

Gen. Smith, President of the Board of Police, during an interview with a TIMES reporter yesterday, in relation to the difficulties in the board, said that when charges were made specifically against him he would reply to them, and until then he did not desire to rush into print on the subject. In Sunday's TIMES, however, it was charged that he had by his negative vote defeated the proposition for the reinstatement of a number of members of the Police force, and in reply to this charge Gen. Smith said yesterday that he believed the resolutions offered by Mr. Erhardt to retire the men referred to were in direct violation of law, and he therefore voted against them. In regard to the resolution offered by Commissioner Erhardt to invest the members of the Street-cleaning Committee with power to suspend any officer or employe of the bureau for insufficiency or dishonesty, Gen. Smith said that he was not opposed to the adoption of the resolution, but he felt that it was due to Commissioner Wheeler, as a matter of courtesy, that so important a resolution should be laid over until he was present. Commissioner Nichols coincided with him in this view of the matter, and expressed himself in favor of the resolution, but was opposed to its consideration in the absence of Mr. Wheeler. Mr. Erhardt pressed the matter to vote, and it was then moved by Mr. Nichols that the resolution should be laid over. On this motion he (Smith) and Nichols voted "yes," and Mr. Erhardt declining to vote, the motion to lay over was lost. On the question of the adoption of the resolution, Commissioners Erhardt and Nichols voted in the affirmative, but Gen. Smith, Acting Commissioner Erhardt's tactics, declined to vote, and the resolution was defeated. In reference to the charge of Commissioner Erhardt that Mr. Wheeler had made an "inaccurate" statement, Gen. Smith preferred to say nothing in relation thereto, as, no doubt, Mr. Wheeler would reply to that insinuation when he arrived in town.

Commissioner Nichols made a statement similar to that made by Gen. Smith in relation to the resolution offered by Mr. Erhardt to invest the power of the members of the Street-cleaning Committee to suspend employes of the bureau. He said that while he was in favor of the resolution and voted for it, he was opposed to its consideration while Mr. Wheeler was absent.

In an interview with a reporter of the Evening Post, Gen. Smith spoke of a statement that during the late illness of Commissioner Nichols no meeting of the board was held for nearly a fortnight, and that this fact was due to the refusal of the President to meet with his colleagues in Mr. Nichols' absence. He said that Mr. Erhardt had lately declined to vote on any bills which came before the board, and as he (Gen. Smith) held that no resolution could be adopted when only two members of the board voted, he regarded it as useless to hold a meeting when Mr. Nichols could not be present. The correctness of his ruling on this matter of voting had been denied by Commissioner Erhardt, and the question had been referred to the Corporation Counsel, who had not yet given his opinion. Gen. Smith, however, considered that the point purely one of parliamentary law, and being confident that he was right in the matter, he had written a letter submitting the question to Senator Blaine. He had received the following reply:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 15, 1879.

DEAR GENERAL: You submit to me this case: A Board of Commissioners is created by law, consisting of four members. It is provided by law that three members of this board shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. At a meeting where three were present, including the President of the board as one of them, the President brought forward and put to vote a resolution. The yeas and nays were taken, and one member, the President of the board and one of the others present voted in the affirmative; but the third member declined to vote. Thereupon the President declared the resolution not carried. Was his decision right?

Answer—The decision of the President was unquestionably right. The mere personal presence of the third member did not constitute a quorum in the sense which the law evidently intended. In fact, a case involving the same point has very frequently arisen in the House of Representatives, where, on submitting a question to a vote by yeas and nays, less than a quorum voted. A call of the House being then ordered, a quorum answered to their names, and again the question being submitted less than a quorum voted, and this was followed by another call, showing the presence of a quorum, and thus in wearisome repetition for an entire day. That a majority of a quorum voted for the measure counted as nothing, so long as the quorum was not present and voting.

A member merely present and not voting on a viva voce vote is to be treated just as a blank is treated when the vote is by ballot—that is, not counted or registered at all.

In case submitted, therefore, the third Commissioner, by his mere personal presence, without taking part in the proceedings, did not contribute to the formation of a legal quorum any more than if he had been a thousand miles away. G. BLAINE.

There is another cause of quarrel between Mr. Erhardt and his fellow-Commissioners. At one of the meetings of the board Mr. Erhardt read a brief article from a certain newspaper condemning the practice of his colleagues in permitting politicians to sit near them at the meetings, and referring members of the Police force against whom various charges had been preferred. At these trials the politicians interfered in behalf of their friends who were arraigned, and it was said that in some instances only those who had influence were dealt with leniently. The others were mulcted in heavy fines. Mr. Erhardt expressed the hope, at the meeting referred to, that the practice of permitting politicians to be present in behalf of those whom they had appointed on the force when they were accused of violating its rules, would cease. It was urged that the moral effect in the whole department would become demoralized—but his colleagues declined to take action on the subject. A few facts which were given to the writer will show the evil effects of the interference of politicians in behalf of delinquent policemen. In some instances men guilty of the same offenses and assigned to the same station-houses were found guilty, but there was a great difference in the punishment. One man was fined a day's pay, another 10 days' pay. Now, as these sentences are read before all the men in the station-houses, and as they are on their face inexplicable, the men, on hearing them, are thoroughly convinced that if they would evade justice and secure favors they must have a political patron, and they become demoralized. Not long since, a Police Captain followed one of his men while he was in full uniform into a liquor-saloon, where he was engaged in drinking, but he was fined only two days' pay, while officers against whom comparatively trifling charges had been made, were mulcted in 10 days' pay.

A PIGEON SHOW.

Preparations are being made at the New-York Aquarium for the fourth annual exhibition of the National Columbarian Society, which will open on Tuesday, Feb. 4, and continue for four days only. The exhibition, it is intended, shall far surpass all former pigeon shows in this country. The members of the society are nearly all wealthy pigeon fanciers, who will not only exhibit their own finest birds but also invite competition from breeders of fancy pigeons from all parts of the country. Liberal prizes will be offered for the most perfect specimens, and applications may be made at the office of the Secretary, Mr. H. V. Crawford, No. 121 Hudson-street, on or before Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 28. Rare, odd, handsome, and grotesque pigeons from all parts of the world will be exhibited, some very expensive, and valued as high as $1,200, $1,500, and $1,800 per pair. Among the various kinds shown will be pouters, carriers, barbs, short-faced tumblers, turbits, frumpeters, owls, fantails, turbits, jacobins, priests, nuns, magpies, and many others. The birds will be in neat coops, open on all sides, arranged along the avenues of the Aquarium.

ARRIVAL OF OCEAN STEAMERS.

At 9 o'clock on Sunday morning, about 300 miles off Sandy Hook, the steam-ship Britannic, of the White Star Line, which arrived from Liverpool yesterday, passed an Inman steamer bound west. The latter vessel, which was probably the City of Montreal, was then not more than half a mile distant, and signaled that she had lost her rudder but required no assistance. It was thought possible that she might be the City of Chester, which left this port early on Saturday morning last, but the general opinion seems to be that the steamer passed was the City of Montreal. It is thought that she will arrive here some time to-day. The Britannic met with severe gales and very heavy seas during the entire passage. During the last two days the weather was intensely cold, and her decks, rigging, masts, lifeboats, and smoke-stack became covered with ice.

The steam-ship Castalia, of the Anchor Line, which arrived from London yesterday, experienced very severe weather. Strong westerly gales with head seas and fierce squalls of snow and hail were met with. During the last two days of the passage the weather was intensely cold.

The steamer Scotia, of the Wilson Line, which arrived from Hull yesterday, encountered hurricanes on the 10th and 20th. The seas were extremely high and irregular.

PUT OFF THE PLATFORM BY FORCE.

William J. Travers, ticket agent, and J. H. Lewers, gate-keeper, at the Eighth-Street Station of the Metropolitan Elevated Railway, were arraigned before Justice Flammer, in the Jefferson Market Police Court, yesterday, on a charge of assault. The complainant was E. P. Wilder, of No. 203 West Eleventh-street. Mr. Wilder alleged that on the 17th inst. he gave Mr. Travers a $2 bill for a ticket on a down train. After he had got the ticket, Travers discovered that the bill was torn at one corner, and, handing it back, demanded payment or the return of the ticket. Wilder refused to do either, and went toward the train. Travers called Lewers to his assistance, and together compelled Wilder to give up the ticket. He resisted violently, and refused to purchase another ticket, insisting that he had offered a legal tender for the one taken from him. The ticket agent and gate-man both alleged that the rules of the company forbade the reception of mutilated currency. When Wilder refused to give other money for a ticket he was ordered from the platform, and, refusing to go, was put off by force. The hearing was adjourned and the defendants paroled.

THE NATIONAL TRUST COMPANY.

ANOTHER MEETING OF STOCKHOLDERS CALLED FOR.

Mr. William O. McDowell, who got up the recent meeting of stockholders of the defunct National Trust Company, whereat an overwhelming vote of confidence was passed in the Receiver, Mr. William J. Best, has called another meeting of the stockholders of the same company for Feb. 12, in Room No. 11 of the Coal and Iron Exchange. In his call he enumerates the following alleged charges against the Receiver, disavowing, however, as to their truth or falsity:

"First—That the ground on which this company was placed in the hands of the Special Examiner of the Bank Department of the State of New-York, whose report, and the fact of whose examination had wrecked its credit, as its Receiver, was that it was insolvent. This has been proved false; it has paid its debts, and has a large surplus.

"Second—That the Trustees caused illegal loans to be made that the charter did not authorize, and that they have thus made themselves personally responsible to the stockholders for all resulting damages.

"Third—That when Mr. William J. Best, the Special Examiner, had almost completed his investigation, the Trustees, at a meeting of the board, appointed S. S. Constant, J. S. Lowery, and W. T. Allen a committee to interview Mr. Best and report back; that, in place of doing this, they entered into an arrangement, by means of which they, as stockholders, applied to the court for the appointment of Mr. Best as Receiver, and have never reported back to the board.

"Fourth—That the Trustees that took this responsibility, without calling together the stockholders and reporting the exact facts, and if, in the opinion of the Banking Department, the capital was impaired, letting them either assess themselves for the deficiency or cut down their stock, which would have given us at least 75 cents on the dollar in a stock that would have sold at par, rather than the present dreary prospect—that the Trustees who voluntarily took this responsibility should be personally held so it.

"Fifth—That the Receiver has sold at private sale, indirectly, to the Trustees, certain securities, (possibly the same ones on which it is claimed they made illegal loans,) at a loss to the company, on present market value, of over $200,000.

"Sixth—That the expenses of the Receivership have been, or will be, if we do not look after it, excessively large."

The following resolutions are sent out for signature, notice being given in advance that no one will be admitted to the meeting who does not approve them in writing, and return them before the hour of meeting:

Resolved, That a committee of —— stockholders of the National Trust Company of New-York, no one of whom shall have been, at any time, a Trustee of that company, shall be elected at a meeting, to be held in the public meeting-room, No. 11 Coal and Iron Exchange, corner Church and Cortlandt streets, New-York, on Wednesday, Feb. 12, 1879, at 10 A. M., by the parties approving these resolutions on or before that date.

Resolved, That this committee, when elected, shall have full power, both in and out of court, to represent the approving stockholders, and to investigate the affairs of the National Trust Company, both under the management of the Trustees and Receiver, and if they find a state of facts that, in their judgment, will enable them to hold personally liable either or all of the officers or Receiver of said company, to the amount of the loss they, or any of the par value of our stock, they shall have full power to take all necessary proceedings.

THE BONDS OF A LEASED RAILROAD.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company owned a majority of the stock of the Pittsburg, Cincinnati and St. Louis Railroad Company, which had, in 1869, leased the Columbus, Chicago and Indiana Central Road. An agreement was entered into between the three corporations that 30 per cent. of the gross earnings of the leased road should be deposited by the two lessees to guarantee the bonds of the leased road. These bonds were stamped on the back with the statement, "Payment of interest and principal of the entire series of bonds mentioned herein is guaranteed by the Pittsburg, Cincinnati and St. Louis Railway Company and the Pennsylvania Railroad Company." Augustus G. Brown bought three of the bonds, as he says, on the faith of this indorsement. The Pennsylvania Company paid the interest on the bonds until April 1, 1875, when default was made. Brown brought suit, in 1877, in the Supreme Court, to recover from the Pennsylvania Company the amount of the bonds, principal and two years. The company demurred to the complaint on various grounds, among them being these: That the agreement between the Columbus, Chicago and Indiana Central Company and the lessees did not inure to the benefit of its creditors until they have placed themselves in a position to assert the rights of the corporation; that the guarantee is not to them, but to the corporation, and that they are strangers to the contract between the three companies. The plaintiff, however, insisted that the statements in the complaint, if taken as true, show such action on the part of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as subjects it to a liability to the creditors of the Indiana Central; that its action in paying the interest coupons of the bonds of the latter for several years was an assumption of a duty and that the receipt of money for the benefit of the Indiana Central bondholders made the defendant a Trustee for such bondholders. The case came before Judge Donohue, at Special Term, recently, and judgment was given in favor of the Pennsylvania Company. From this judgment Brown appealed to the General Term, where the case was argued yesterday, the decision being reserved. Messrs. Beach & Brown represented the plaintiff, and Hon. Stanley Matthews appeared for the company.

A LETTER-CARRIER'S CRIME.

John Flood, an auxiliary letter-carrier, appointed in August, 1877, was arrested in the Post Office on Sunday evening on a charge of purloining letters from the mails. The prisoner is a man of about 27 years of age, resides at No. 84 Hudson-street, and has a wife and two children. On Sunday night he had been out on a collection trip, and brought his letters to the office. He was seen by certain of the Post Office clerks, who were watching him, to take a number of letters and put them in his coat pocket. Superintendent Richards sent for Special Agent Sharretts and Police Officer Blackwood, and had Flood taken into custody. Flood has been suspected for some weeks, and was seen acting suspiciously on Saturday night, but it was thought best not to subject him to arrest until unquestionable proof of his guilt could be obtained. His plan of operations was to purloin letters from bundles in the boxes of other carriers, so as to divert suspicion from himself if complaints should be made as to the non-delivery of letters. The watch was kept upon him for two months since, but he fell sick shortly afterward, and only came back to duty about a week since. When arrested 21 unopened letters were found on him, 20 of them being addressed to H. L. Pinch, a jewelry-ticket dealer, and one to the Iron Age, a trade journal. Flood was taken before United States Commissioner Shields and waived examination. He was committed to await the action of the Grand Jury in default of $5,000 bail. Found in his pockets $42, which he admitted having taken from letters on Saturday and Sunday. His salary was only $400 a year.

MORE DELAY FOR THE COUNTY CLERK.

A stay of proceedings in the case of J. Adrianes Bush against County Clerk Gumbleton, pending the appeal of the defendant from the writ of peremptory mandamus issued by Judge Barrett, was finally granted yesterday by Judge Donohue, in the Supreme Court, Circuit, Part I. In his decision Judge Donohue says: "A full consideration of the case, after carefully going over all the facts, shows me no reason to change the conclusion reached in the opinion on the former motion. It is to be regretted that apparently strong feeling on both sides should have become a part of the case; but that does not change the rule that should govern the result here. Good faith is pledged by counsel of good standing in taking the appeal here, and no ground is shown to prejudice the relator's rights by the delay. To make the appeal of any use, as stated in the former opinion, a stay is necessary, and should be granted. There is no reason, in the ordinary course of events, why the questions sought to be disposed of should not be finally disposed of by the court of last resort within the next 90 days. No instance has been cited where, on a similar application, a stay has been refused. Motion granted."

KILLED BY A LOCOMOTIVE.

A milkman living at Dutch Kills, named Robert Denman, attempted to cross the track of the Flushing and North Shore Railroad, at Thompson-avenue, Long Island City, in front of the train due at the Point at 6:30 yesterday morning. The horse got safely over, but the locomotive struck the wagon, tearing it to splinters, and scattering the milk-cans in all directions, and mangled Denman in a fearful manner, so that he must have died instantly. He was thrown several feet, and portions of the wagon were carried some distance on the cow-catcher. Coroner Darrah took charge of the body, impaneled a jury, and will hold an inquest on Monday.

ON TRIAL FOR CONSPIRACY.

In the Passaic County (N. J.) Court of Quarter Sessions yesterday, Arthur Greenwood and his associates, Meeker and Horne, were placed on trial for conspiracy to induce Henry Lewis, of Passaic, to sell liquor on Sunday. The case will, doubtless, be given to the jury to-day. The Passaic city authorities offered a reward of $50 for every conviction of a violation of the Liquor laws, and Greenwood caused the arrest and conviction of about 30 saloon-keepers. It is alleged that he resorted to trickery to induce them to sell, and hence the indictments. Alvin Webb, a well-known Justice of the Peace, of Passaic, was indicted for not sending to the Grand Jury the taxed bills of costs in criminal cases pending before him. He pleaded not guilty. He says he used to send up the bills, but they were mislaid, and then he made up his mind to send them only to the County Clerk after the Grand Jury got through.

JACOB OTT, PLATE-PRINTER.

A SECRET SERVICE OFFICER'S STORY—THE MAN WHO "MADE THOUSANDS" OF COUNTERFEITS.

Jacob Ott, the lithograph plate-printer, who is charged with having printed the spurious bank notes for the counterfeiters, Ulrich and Cole, was arraigned for examination yesterday before United States Commissioner Deuel. Assistant United States Attorney Fiero conducted the case for the Government, and ex-Judge Dittenhoefer defended the prisoner. Capt. Curtis, Mr. Gilkinson, and other Secret Service officers were present during the examination. M. G. Bowers, a detective in the Secret Service, testified that he made the prisoner's acquaintance Nov. 13, 1878, at No. 9 Spring-street, a drinking saloon, and made it his business to have talks with him on that and subsequent occasions; Bowers gave an assumed name and claimed to have been a yellow fever refugee, which led to conversations about the South-west; Ott said he had worked in St. Louis and Cincinnati at his trade as a printer. On Nov. 16, while conversing, Bowers displayed a $100 and a $50 national bank note, and Ott remarked that he could make such notes, and had made them. Bowers explained his possession of the money by saying he had just been paid off. They were national bank notes, but he could not now remember what banks they were issued from. Continuing his conversation with Ott, Bowers said, "If you can make them, we can make a good deal of money together," and Ott replied that he had made thousands of them. On the 19th of November they had another talk about the matter, and they finally arranged to go to Philadelphia together. After partaking of a lunch at the Revere House, in this City, Ott said: "You saw in the newspapers about there being so many counterfeit $50 bills in Germany, and so many emigrants being swindled by them?" Bowers replied that he had seen the statements, and Ott rejoined: "I printed them all; me and my brother at Philadelphia, and we also made some $5 pieces. One night we burned up about 5,000 pieces, as the man that we worked for [supposed to be Cole] became scared, and came in and said the detectives were after us, so we burned them up to get rid of them. I also printed the $10 and the plates of the $50 and $5 bills, or could get them.

They went to Philadelphia a short time since, and on the way there Bowers told Ott that if he would get the plates they could make money easily, and Ott agreed to get them. After reaching Philadelphia they went out one evening toward Germantown Junction, near the Baltimore pike, and on the way out Ott said that Harry Cole was the man he worked for, and that Cole's wife, Effie, was the smartest woman he had ever met in his business. From the general drift of conversation Bowers was led to believe that the brother to whom Ott referred was Ulrich. When they had got out on the road Ott said to Bowers, "I am afraid there will be some curious trouble with his [Ott's] wife, growing out of this business, because, whenever she wanted money to buy things, and Ott said he hadn't any to spare, she would always say, 'Well, I will borrowingly that she was going into the city to "give the whole thing away" to the Government officers unless Ott gave her the money. Ott said he knew of course he would have to give her the money. Ott finally pointed out to Bowers a house which he said belonged to the President of the Centennial Commission, and said that, from one corner of the lot, counting 75 trees as a distance, and a straight line through the cupola of the house, was a place where the plates were hidden; that they buried them there at night always, and never kept them in the house over night for fear of a raid by detectives. Bowers was to arrive in Philadelphia on a certain evening and meet Ott at a designated spot, and then they would go to the place Ott had indicated, but did not succeed, it being quite dark. Ott then arranged that they should come again and search for them the next evening, but in the conversation with a man unknown to witness, and who controlled Ott, and when Bowers again met him he declined to say or do anything further about it.

Ex-Judge Dittenhoefer cross-examined the witness, prefacing it by saying that on its face the statement was very weak as evidence, as the men appeared to have been drinking strong drink, and the witness could not even remember the name of the bank whose notes had been the bills shown to him by Ott, and which, as he claimed, Ott had said he had counterfeited. He directed his questions mainly toward these points, and Bowers admitted that he could not remember the name of the bank, but he did not claim that Ott had said that he had counterfeited notes on that particular bank, but referred generally to national bank issues. Ott had been drinking some, and the had drank more he would very likely have told more. Bowers denied that either was drunk, but said that Ott was rather talkative.

The examination will be resumed on Thursday morning.

SOME ELECTION IRREGULARITIES.

HOW MEN DREW PAY FOR THREE CLASSES OF SERVICE AT ONE TIME.

Col. George Bliss has recently sent to United States Attorney Woodford a letter making charges against a number of officers as to abuses and irregularities in connection with the appointment of Special Deputy United States Marshals during the late election. The letter, by implication, assails the method employed by United States Marshal Payn in making appointments. It also charges that persons holding positions in the Custom-house were appointed Special Deputy Marshals, and in some instances as Inspectors of Election, under the City Bureau of Elections, thus in effect filling three positions at the same time, and drawing pay for each. This charge points to the Hon. Timothy Keefe, a letter-carrier, and John M. Hamilton, a clerk in the general office, as two involved in the charges. Mr. James issued special orders on this question prior to the election, and he says that if the charges are sustained he will at once dismiss the guilty parties.

As to the charges that friends of Marshal Payn, residing in Columbia County, had been appointed and had received pay as special deputies, Chief Marshal Kennedy, in the absence of Marshal Payn, denies it and says that every deputy was obliged to make oath that he was a qualified voter of this City.

A GANG OF BURGLARS.

The reported robbery by masked burglars at Guttenberg on Sunday morning proves, on investigation, to have been perpetrated in precisely the manner related by Mr. Ryan and his wife. Ryan yesterday informed the Police that his wife thought she recognized in one of the masked robbers a man named Bowman, of exceedingly bad reputation, and who, with a gang with whom he associates, has a rendezvous at a place called the Gate-house. Yesterday morning Captain Dunn sent for Mrs. Ryan and several villagers made a descent on the place. When the officer rapped for admission, James Bowman, the man whom Mrs. Ryan thought the recognized, John Shepard, or Sheppy, and Lewis Lawless, leaped from a rear window and escaped, not, however, until several ineffectual shots had been exchanged between the partisans. Upon searching the premises all the property stolen from Ryan's house and store, excepting a portion of the money, was found concealed in the house. There was also a quantity of other property found, which was identified as having been stolen from other houses in the vicinity. It is now thought that the Bowman gang may have been the masked robbers who committed the robbery at Fairview some months ago, and for which several New-York burglars were recently sent to the New-Jersey State Prison. Fairview is only a short distance from Guttenberg.

RECORD OF MARINE DISASTERS.

The Direction of the Bureau Veritas has published the following statistics of marine disasters, reported during the month of November, 1878, concerning all flags: Sailing vessels reported lost—77 English, 42 American, 19 French, 14 Italian, 14 Norwegian, 10 German, 7 Danish, 6 Austrian, 5 Russian, 4 Dutch, 2 Swedish, 1 Spanish, 1 Portuguese, 1 Turkish, 19 of which the nationality is unknown; total, 221. In this number are included 6 vessels reported "missing." Steamers reported lost—4 American, 4 English, 3 German, 1 Belgian, 1 Dutch, 1 Japanese; total, 14. In this number are included 5 steamers reporting "missing."

JOHN I. DAVENPORT IN CONTEMPT.

Eben Miller sued United States Commissioner John I. Davenport some time ago, in the Marine Court, and obtained a judgment for $805. Being unable to find any property to levy upon, Miller procured an order of the court for the examination of the defendant on supplementary proceedings. Davenport did not appear for examination, and was yesterday adjudged by Judge Sheridan guilty of contempt of court. An attachment against the property of the delinquent was issued, bail in the case being fixed at $1,000.

FORTY-FIFTH CONGRESS.

THIRD SESSION—Jan. 27.

SUMMARY.

Among the bills introduced in the Senate was one for the erection of a Federal building in Brooklyn. Mr. Sargent called up his bill for the abolition of the volunteer navy, and it was passed. Hon. James Shields, the new Senator from Missouri, was sworn in, and took his seat in the Senate. Mr. Edmunds reported a substitute for the House joint resolution proposing a constitutional amendment prohibiting the payment of Southern war claims. The bill to pay Warren Mitchell $128,692 22 for cotton captured by United States troops at Savannah, was then taken up. Mr. Hill, of Georgia, opposed the bill and war claims generally, while Mr. Beck, of Kentucky, spoke in favor of the bill. Without taking action, the Senate went into executive session. When the doors were reopened a message was received from the House transmitting the testimony in regard to Senator Matthews and the Electoral count. The Senate then adjourned.

Under the call of States for bills in the House, several new measures were introduced. Mr. Wright's bill to lend $500 each to persons taking advantage of the Homestead act was then taken up, and Mr. Wright explained its provisions. Mr. Cox also advocated the bill. Mr. Wright became very angry because Mr. Townsend, of New-York objected to further debate on the bill. A vote was taken, and the measure was rejected, only 22 affirmative votes being cast. The remainder of the proceedings were unimportant.

SENATE.

NEW BILLS.

The following bills were introduced and referred:

By Mr. FERRY, of Michigan—To reorganize and discipline the Militia of the United States. Referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CONKLING, of New-York—To provide for the erection of a public building at Brooklyn, N. Y., for use as a Post Office and United States court, and for the accommodation of United States internal revenue officers, and for other Government purposes. Referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. The bill is the same as that introduced in the House on Dec. 13, 1877, by Mr. Bliss. It appropriates $400,000 to purchase the site and commence work on the building, and limits the cost of the structure to $500,000.

ABOLITION OF THE VOLUNTEER NAVY.

Mr. SARGENT, of California, called up the bill reported by him from the Committee on Naval Affairs on Thursday last to abolish the Volunteer Navy of the United States, and it was passed.

THE NEW SENATOR FROM MISSOURI.

Hon. James Shields, the new Senator from Missouri, having entered the Chamber, was escorted to the Vice-President's desk by his colleague, Mr. Cockrell, and the oath of office was administered to him by Vice-President Wheeler.

PROHIBITION OF WAR CLAIMS.

Mr. EDMUNDS, of Vermont, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported with an amendment, in the nature of a substitute, the House joint resolution, proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, prohibiting the payment of claims of disloyal persons for property injured or destroyed in the late war of the rebellion. Placed on the calendar.

WARREN MITCHELL'S CLAIM.

Mr. MCCREERY, of Kentucky, moved to take up the bill to pay Warren Mitchell $128,692 22, the proceeds of cotton belonging to him, captured by the United States troops at Savannah.

Messrs. HILL, KENNAN, SAULSBURY, and COCKRELL said they would vote to take up the bill and dispose of it, though they would not vote for its passage.

The motion of Mr. McCreery was agreed to—yeas 30, nays 18.

A long discussion took place. Finally, Mr. Eaton moved to postpone the bill indefinitely postponed. Rejected—yeas 21, nays 23.

Mr. HILL, in opposing the bill, said he would vote against it because it was a war claim. He was opposed to the payment of all war claims, and would vote even from all of disloyal persons. He might probably except a few religious and educational institutions whose property was destroyed. To pay these war claims would bankrupt the Government; and as we could not pay for it, it would be an unjust combination to undertake to pay some. Senators on the Republican side said Warren Mitchell was disloyal and should not be paid, while Senators on the Democratic side said he was loyal and should be paid. What was meant by the word "loyalty?" Did it mean a man devoted to the States under the Constitution? It was an easy matter for a man in Maine or New-York to say that he was loyal, but during the war, but farther down, where the sun is warmer, it required courage for a man to say he was devoted to the Union. There were many men who fought secession until they became convinced that secession was they submitted to the death of a father or a son. When secession came the only thing they could do was to go with their people. This question of loyalty had not received a proper definition. He knew of thousands of men in the South who would at any time during the war have terminated it upon a basis of honest reunion. He believed the greatest possible calamity which could happen to this country would be to assume the exercising the powers of a conqueror over another. The maimed Southern soldier would never ask Congress for a pension. His widow and orphan would never ask for it. They accepted their losses as the penalty for failure, as brave men should do. The sooner the people of the South were taught to repair their losses by work, by frugality and industry, the better it would be for them and the country. Let the Warren Mitchells go. Let the Senate desire to avoid such losses in future they must avoid war.

Mr. BECK, of Kentucky, in reply, defended the claim of Mitchell, and had read the Crittenden resolutions, adopted in July, 1861, to show that the war was not waged for conquest, but to preserve the Union. He knew that there were many fraudulent claims. There were men here now making affidavit to the loyalty of men whom they had aided Union citizens had denied during the war for disloyalty, and they made the affidavits now simply because they were to get a share of the claim.

Mr. JONES, of Florida, then took the floor, but yielded to Mr. HAMLIN, of Maine, who moved that the Senate go into executive session.

Several Senators—Then the Mitchell bill loses its place as unfinished business.

The motion for an executive session was rejected by a string vote—yeas 17, nays 23.

Mr. EDMUNDS moved to postpone the pending and all prior orders and take up the resolutions submitted by him, declaring the validity of the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth amendments to the Constitution.

Mr. CONKLING said if the Senate should go into executive session now the Mitchell bill would come up to-morrow as unfinished business. A good many Senators who voted against the executive session did so because they thought the executive session would cause this bill to lose its place, which was not the case. He therefore renewed the motion for an executive session.

EXECUTIVE BUSINESS.

The motion was agreed to without a division, and the Senate, at 3:30 P. M., proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

At 5:45 the doors were reopened.

THE MATTHEWS EVIDENCE.

A message was received from the House of Representatives in answer to the request of the Senate transmitting the testimony taken before a committee of that body, in regard to Hon. Stanley Matthews, a Senator from Ohio. It was not laid before the Senate by the Vice-President to-day.

The Senate, at 5:50 P. M., adjourned until to-morrow.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS.

Under the call of States the following bills were introduced and referred:

By Mr. MONEY, of Mississippi, (by request)—For the purchase of additional buildings and grounds for the accommodation of the United States Congress.

By Mr. ATKINS, of Tennessee—Repealing the duty on cotton.

By Mr. FERN, of Idaho—Proposing an amendment to the Constitution providing that the term of the judges of the Supreme and inferior courts of the United States shall be limited to 12 years, and that the offices of those now on the bench who have served 12 years shall be vacated.

MR. WRIGHT'S LAND BILL.

The regular order was the motion to consider the bill introduced by Mr. Wright, of Pennsylvania, for the lending of $500 by the Government to any person desiring to take advantage of the provisions of the Homestead act.

Mr. WRIGHT asked to have 30 minutes to explain the bill.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New-York, objected.

Mr. WRIGHT moved to suspend the rules and take the bill up for consideration for 30 minutes. This motion being granted, he proceeded to explain the bill. It was not a forced loan as some gentlemen supposed. It provided for that class of people who were not worth $300. He was told that his idea was utopian, but he only followed the example set 100 years ago by Benjamin Franklin in Pennsylvania. There were millions of starving men in the country who should either be given employment or land. He would vote for large appropriations, not that he cared so much for what object as to give employment to those starving men. Although he was opposed to subsidies, yet he would vote for the Texas Pacific Railroad bill. If the working man was not given fair play, before five years he would get fair play, and Congress would not have power to stop him.

Mr. COX, of New-York, argued briefly that the bill was as constitutional as the Homestead law, and he was in favor of considering it. He said

JAN 28 1879

INDEX TO CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS.

AMUSEMENTS—Seventh Page—6th and 7th cols.
AUCTION SALES—Seventh Page—7th col.
BANKRUPT NOTICES—Seventh Page—5th col.
BOARDING AND LODGING—Seventh Page—5th col.
BUSINESS CHANCES—Seventh Page—5th col.
BUSINESS NOTICES—Fifth Page—7th col.
CITY HOUSES TO LET—Seventh Page—1st col.
CITY ITEMS—Fifth Page—6th col.
CITY REAL ESTATE—Seventh Page—1st col.
COPARTNERSHIP NOTICES—Sixth Page—5th col.
COUNTRY REAL ESTATE—Seventh Page—1st col.
DANCING—Seventh Page—6th col.
DEATHS—Fifth Page—7th col.
DIVIDENDS—Seventh Page—4th col.
DRY GOODS—Sixth Page—5th col.
ELECTIONS—Seventh Page—4th col.
FINANCIAL—Seventh Page—3d and 4th cols.
FRENCH ADVERTISEMENTS—Sixth Page—7th col.
FURNISHED ROOMS—Seventh Page—5th col.
HELP WANTED—Sixth Page—7th col.
HORSES, CARRIAGES, &c.—Sixth Page—5th col.
INSTRUCTION—Sixth Page—5th col.
INTELLIGENCE OFFICES—Sixth Page—7th col.
LECTURES—Seventh Page—6th col.
LEGAL NOTICES—Sixth Page—7th col.
MARRIAGES—Fifth Page—7th col.
MEETINGS—Seventh Page—7th col.
MISCELLANEOUS—Sixth Page—5th col.
MUSICAL—Seventh Page—7th col.
NEW PUBLICATIONS—Fifth Page—7th col.
PUBLIC NOTICES—Seventh Page—7th col.
RAILROADS—Seventh Page—6th col.
REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION—Seventh Page—1st col.
RELIGIOUS NOTICES—Seventh Page—7th col.
REWARDS—Sixth Page—5th col.
SHIPPING—Seventh Page—2d and 3d cols.
SITUATIONS WANTED—Sixth Page—6th & 7th cols.
SPECIAL NOTICES—Fifth Page—7th col.
STEAM-BOATS—Seventh Page—7th col.
STORES, &c., TO LET—Seventh Page—2d col.
TEACHERS—Sixth Page—5th col.
WATCHES, JEWELRY, &c.—Sixth Page—7th col.

The New-York Times.

NEW-YORK, TUESDAY, JAN. 28, 1879.

AMUSEMENTS THIS EVENING.

FIFTH-AVENUE THEATRE.—Dr. Clyde.
BOOTH'S THEATRE.—The Danites.
WALLACK'S THEATRE.—Ours.
UNION-SQUARE.—Banker's Daughter.
LYCEUM THEATRE.—H. M. S. Pinafore.
PARK THEATRE.—Dot.
NIBLO'S GARDEN.—Hero.
STANDARD THEATRE.—H. M. S. Pinafore.
THEATRE COMIQUE.—Vaudeville.
BROADWAY THEATRE.—King Lear.
THE AQUARIUM.—Afternoon and Evening.
SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS.—Minstrelsy.
AMERICAN MUSEUM.—Curiosities.
CHICKERING HALL.—Lecture.
GILMORE'S GARDEN.—Skating and Music.
COOPER INSTITUTE.—Billiard Tournament.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

TERMS, POSTAGE PAID.

THE DAILY TIMES, per annum, including the Sunday Edition.....$12 00
THE DAILY TIMES, per annum, exclusive of the Sunday Edition..... 10 00
The Sunday Edition, per annum..... 2 00
THE SEMI-WEEKLY TIMES, per annum..... 2 50
THE WEEKLY TIMES, per annum..... 1 00

BRANCH OFFICES OF THE TIMES.

THE TIMES Up-town Office—No. 1,258 Broadway.
Paris Office of THE TIMES—No. 39 Rue de Lafayette.
THE TIMES is on sale in London at No. 449 Strand, W. C., from Henry F. Gillig & Co., and at Mr. Stevens', No. 4 Trafalgar-square.

☞ Advertisements for THE WEEKLY TIMES must be handed in before 6 o'clock this evening.

The Signal Service Bureau report indicates for to-day in this region, generally cloudy weather and rain, with southerly to westerly winds, falling barometer, followed by rising barometer, and slight fall in temperature.

Estimates differ somewhat widely as to how much money the Arrears of Pensions bill will take from the Treasury. At the meeting of the Cabinet which, with characteristic firmness, decided that the bill ought not to become a law, and that the President should sign it, from eighteen to twenty-three millions seemed to be the range of guesses. Other and equally authoritative conjectures place the amount at from thirty-three to eighty millions. Common sense would have suggested that an approximately correct determination of this question should have been reached before the bill was passed or signed, but common sense is not a strong point at either end of Pennsylvania-avenue. It is reported that there is now some talk of amending the bill into comparative harmlessness by causing the pensions to date from the date of actual disability, instead of from the time of discharge. But the prospect for such an amendment is not bright. The whole business is a curious instance of the "happy-go-lucky" style in which the revenues of the United States—in other words, the contributions of the tax-payers—are treated. The responsibility is so beautifully distributed that no one feels his share of it. The most distinct impression regarding financial matters is received by the men who pay the taxes, and even this is greatly dissipated by the indirect manner in which they are levied.

In view of the pressure for indiscriminate expenditure of which the Pension law is a result, the reissue of legal tenders directed by the law of May last, is a matter of grave and not very remote concern. As distinctly acknowledged by the Secretary of the Treasury, there is in the existing law a source of serious danger, which is now avoided only by the fact that there is no present means of getting the greenbacks out of the Treasury. But this barrier will be soon broken down by such bills as that which has just become a law and which is only one of a class. With even $30,000,000 to pay out, the present smooth working of resumption would be very quickly interfered with. A project has been entertained by some gentlemen, prominent in financial circles, to test the constitutionality of the law for the reissue of the legal tenders. It is known to be the opinion of eminent authorities that the Supreme Court must condemn the law. It would be an excellent thing for the country, a strong guaranty of stability in our financial system, and a powerful check on the recklessness of the Treasury-raiders, if the law could be disposed of in this manner before any pretext for its application could be forced upon the Government. We should be glad to hear that the plan was being energetically carried forward.

Our readers will receive from Collector ARTHUR'S reply to Secretary SHERMAN'S charges a good deal of light as to the sincerity and efficiency with which the Administration is "reforming" the civil service. A more complete, and at the same time temperate and careful, exposure of inconsistency, frivolity, want of common sense, and, it is not too much to add, malice, in the assertions of a public officer has never been made. No action was taken on the confirmation of Mr. MERRITT, though that gentleman's successor in the Naval Office, Mr. GRAHAM, was confirmed. Mr. HOAR, with remarkable indiscretion, called on the Democratic Senators to sustain the President's nominations, because nothing could be said against them. The argument is misdirected, as well as far from well-founded. The affirmative proposition in reality before the Senate is not that Mr. MERRITT is fit for the place and should be confirmed, but that Mr. ARTHUR is unfit, and should be removed. This proposition has not been allowed to go uncontradicted, and it is the one which the Senate must decide. Mr. HAYES' own avowal that officers should be secure in their tenure so long as their character remained untarnished and the performance of their duties satisfactory is pertinent to the discussion. Mr. SHERMAN recognizes this, and will make a rejoinder to Mr. ARTHUR.

Considering the frequency and completeness with which the wicked falsehood has been set at rest by Democratic conventions and Democratic candidates—Mr. TILDEN, for instance—the assertion that the Southern war claims constitute a formidable danger to the Treasury still gives the representatives of the party a great deal of trouble. Mr. HILL, of Georgia, revived it in the Senate yesterday in connection with the Warren Mitchell claim. He opposed this and all similar claims with great vehemence, and declared that the sooner they were finally dismissed from consideration the better for the South. He regarded the condition of loyalty attached to the payment of the claims as illusory and incapable of practical enforcement, and Mr. MORGAN, of Alabama, took similar ground. Mr. BECK, of Kentucky, freely admitted that many of the claims were fraudulent, but bitterly attacked Senator HILL for making a "stump speech." The interesting feature in the discussion is that it is carried on from both sides by Democrats, and betrays the wholesome fear which some of their leaders feel of an aroused public sentiment on this question.

Mr. STRAHAN has lost no time in bringing in his bill for the reduction of the Municipal salary list. It is drawn so as to avoid at once the Governor's objection to signing a general law applicable only to New-York City, and the constitutional prohibition against the passage of a local bill "increasing or decreasing fees, percentage, or allowance of public officers, during the term for which said officers are elected or appointed." It proposes to intrust to the heads of departments the power to fix the salaries of their subordinates, while requiring the Board of Apportionment to appropriate for salaries a sum 20 per cent. less than that appropriated in 1877. Its most obvious defects are, the failure to provide for an immediate revision of the estimates of this year, its concession to the heads of departments of the power to fix their own salaries, and the exceedingly cumbrous phraseology in which its provisions are expressed. Mr. LANGBEIN has introduced a bill which deals with little more than one-fourth of the City salary-list, exempting the remaining three-fourths from all interference. Now that the subject is fairly before the Committee on Cities, it is to be hoped that a simple, comprehensive, and practical bill, on the basis of the reduction proposed by Mr. STRAHAN, will be reported without unnecessary delay.

A VITAL QUESTION IN CITY GOVERNMENT.

With a sagacity and promptitude which are full of promise for his future usefulness, Mayor COOPER has assailed the most insidious and dangerous of the many abuses of our local Government. The question at issue between the Mayor and Controller is the fundamental one of who shall hold the purse-strings of the Treasury. In delegating to the Board of Apportionment the power to fix the annual amount of the tax levy, the Legislature conferred on the local authorities of New-York the most essential function of self-government. Inasmuch as that power is hampered by the legislative prohibition to interfere with at least three-fourths of the salaries paid to City employes, the delegation of self-governing powers was decidedly partial. The chief question affecting the City with which the present Legislature has to deal is how to make the power of the local authorities over the disbursement of public money more complete.

It was clearly not the intention of the Legislature that heads of departments who have the supervision of the work for which public money is appropriated should have the power to exceed, at their pleasure, the sums annually set apart for their use. In fact, the Charter of 1873 contains very distinct prohibitions against any such abuse of authority. Nevertheless, such a practice has been winked at ever since the law was passed. Controller GREEN strenuously resisted the practice during his term of office, but, after the election of Mayor WICKHAM at least, he usually found himself on the Board of Apportionment, in a minority of one. During Controller KELLY'S administration, the evil has been steadily growing. His very lame attempts to justify the practice of covering up illegal expenditures by the transfer of "balances" and the allowance of appropriations to satisfy judgments show how thoroughly incapable is Mr. KELLY of understanding the first principles of responsible and faithful administration. He instanced, yesterday, the case of the Sheriff, who asked an appropriation of $40,000 for his annual allowance from the City, but to whom, "from motives of economy," only $30,000 was granted. The Sheriff goes on, nevertheless, spending at the rate of $40,000 a year, exhausts his legal appropriation in nine months, and brings suit against the City for the alleged $10,000 of liabilities incurred during the remaining three months. According to Mr. KELLY and the Corporation Counsel, the City has no defense against such an action, and the $10,000 nominally saved at the beginning of one year reappears as an addition to the item for judgments in the tax levy of the next.

The batch of judgments of which we print the details to-day is largely made up of claims incurred by a disregard of the law prohibiting departments from exceeding their appropriations. The list has another peculiarity which is equally suggestive of loose methods of administration. In November last attention was called, in these columns, to the allegation that it was the practice of the Corporation Counsel to accommodate Mr. KELLY by compelling successful suitors against the City to defer pressing their unsatisfied judgments, under the threat of making an appeal if they did so. Inspection of the list in question reveals the fact that judgments filed as long ago as last February are now, for the first time, presented for payment. The allowance for judgments made in the tax levy of 1878 was $300,000. It would appear, on the theory that there was no personal or political favoritism in satisfying claimants, to have been exhausted during the first eight weeks of the year. The appropriation for judgments and for "payment of claims adjusted pursuant to law" in the tax levy of 1879 is $450,000, and one of the first demands on Mayor COOPER is a requisition to sign warrants covering $250,000 of that amount. Were Mr. KELLY the treasurer of a financial corporation, this kind of management would be called dishonest. It was by the manipulation of "adjusted claims" that his predecessor, CONNOLLY, facilitated the first important operations of the Ring thieves. Mayor COOPER is justly suspicious of a mass of claims which come to him with a double stamp of illegality, as belonging in the first place to the financial year which has closed, and in the next, as originating, to a great extent, from the practice of departments incurring liabilities in excess of their appropriations.

Alderman MOTT'S concern for "innocent creditors" is, in this connection, somewhat misplaced. No contractor or merchant who has dealings with the City need have any difficulty in ascertaining whether the appropriation out of which he ought to be paid has been exhausted or not. If he takes the risk without inquiry, it is certainly not the business of those who are intrusted with the guardianship of the Treasury to help him to recover his money. Examination of the names of the persons to whom these judgment claims have, in many cases, been assigned would reveal the existence of a traffic in the deferred obligations of the City from which certain persons must derive quite a considerable revenue. City judgments have been cashed at a liberal "shave," like the notes of over-speculative traders, and the creditor, "innocent" or not, is likely, when he can, to leave a margin over and above his usual profits for such a contingency. The entire system is a standing encouragement to extravagance and jobbery, and is the entering wedge for a renewal of unchecked corruption. To have exceeded the legal appropriations for his department ought to subject an executive officer to removal; the power to sanction such an abuse of authority ought to be taken away from the Board of Apportionment. Were public opinion sufficiently exacting and well-informed to hold public officers to a strict account, Controller KELLY'S attempt to justify so obvious a swindle on the public would subject him to lasting disgrace. There will be neither honesty nor economy in Municipal administration while there is nowhere any direct responsibility for making the appropriations of a given year the measure of its expenditures. Mayor COOPER can do the tax-payers no better service than by resolutely upholding such a rule. The Legislature can make no more needed contribution to Municipal reform than by affixing some well-defended penalties to any breach of the existing law on that subject, and by making that law sufficiently comprehensive to stop the practice of transferring "balances" from one appropriation to conceal the deficiency created in another.

THE PACIFIC RAILROADS.

Yesterday's decision of the United States Supreme Court substantially harmonizes law with common sense in the construction put upon the term "net earnings" as applied to the Pacific Railroads. The case decided was an appeal of the Union Pacific from the Court of Claims, but the points involved pertain equally to the Central Pacific. One related to the date at which the road should be held to be completed,—that being the date at which certain specified obligations to the Government came into operation. On this point the judgment is in favor of the Government. The other related to the amount available as net earnings, on which, under a provision of the original acts, five per cent. is payable to the Treasury from the period of completion,—now declared to be November, 1869.

On the part of the Government, it has been contended that net receipts are so much of the gross receipts as remain after defraying the running expenses of the road and its maintenance in proper condition. The companies have insisted that to these disbursements on account of current management should be added the total amount of interest payable on the various forms of bonded and floating indebtedness. The position assumed by the Government is sustained by the general practice of railroad companies, and—as we recently showed—by the Union Pacific itself in statements prepared for circulation among its shareholders. The position of the companies, on the other hand, is simply one feature of their plan for enhancing the speculative value of their properties at the expense of the American people. "Squeeze all that can be squeezed out of the roads for the benefit of the stock and leave the Treasury to whistle for its money,"—has been the maxim of the companies from the beginning; and this struggle respecting the percentage has been one of the illustrations. It is now ended. The Supreme Court decides adversely to the companies, subject to one qualification growing out of the preference generously accorded by the Government to the holders of the first mortgage bond. Having yielded priority to this security, the Government, according to the present decision, must allow the sum payable as interest on it to be deducted from the earnings as part of the expenditure preceding the net result. The reason for the exception thus made may be found in the equities of the case, rather than among its more obvious considerations.

Aside from the point thus finally settled against the companies, the decision has an important bearing on the controversy connected with the working of the Thurman bill, enacted last session. Indeed, it affirms in advance the tenableness of the construction put by that measure upon the phrase "net earnings," as the basis of the 25 per cent. contribution to the sinking fund. Of course, the companies, in pursuance of the policy which leads them always to prefer litigation to the recognition of just claims, will impugn the constitutionality of the law. They have little faith in the result of their appeal, as may be inferred from the attempt to smuggle through Congress a bill reopening the question at issue, but while a chance of escape remains, they will resist the demand of the fund on which alone the Government can rely for the repayment of its advances. The contest will be all the fiercer because of the ground covered by yesterday's decision. As long as the companies were enabled to manipulate their accounts to suit their own convenience, net earnings were an equivocal security. The court, sustaining the principle laid down in the Thurman act, brings the matter within well-defined boundaries.

Practically, however, the efficacy of the judgment will be partial or complete, as the recently-organized Bureau of Railroad Accounts may be enabled to discharge its duties. The reluctant submission of the Union Pacific to the authority of the bureau, and the insolent disregard of its requirements by the Central Pacific, are indicative of the dread inspired by the prospect of an investigation. But, desirable before, it is now essential. Enough is known with regard to both companies to render intelligible their aversion to scrutiny. The Union Pacific has, for stock-jobbing purposes, devoted to dividends money that should have been applied to the improvement of the road. It has expended on outside operations sums that should have been paid to the Government. The Central Pacific has pursued the same course more recklessly; and a thorough overhauling of its accounts will doubtless bring to light the agencies and objects which have made it odious wherever its influence is felt. We repose little confidence in Pacific Railroad Commissioners: they become the creatures of the companies they should hold in check. But an independent audit, if accompanied with a publication in detail of the accounts audited, would show how little forbearance the management of the two companies is entitled to, and how necessary is the enforcement of the laws enacted for the protection of the Treasury and the public.

It is useless to disguise the fact that the stubborn wrong-doing of the companies, their resistance to just demands, and their corrupt attempts to control legislation, all tend to justify more extreme measures than would otherwise be approved. The forfeiture of a franchise is a proceeding not to be hastily advised; however carefully carried out, it must entail hardship upon parties unconnected with the acts that form its justification. Messrs. GOULD and HUNTINGTON, however, mistake the public temper if they imagine that they can go on indefinitely defying the Government, depriving it of its lawful dues, violating the law in the matter of discrimination as to rates and traffic, and sacrificing general interests to personal ends. The stern reckoning they put off will come at last.

THE PROPOSED SWEDISH EXCISE LAW.

Mr. OGDEN, member from Brooklyn, has laid before the committees of both houses of the Legislature an amendment to the Excise law which attracts much attention from all parties. It is what is called the "Swedish Excise law." Sweden, as is well known, was for a number of years terribly afflicted with intemperance. The evil reached so great an extreme that a strong religious and abstinence "revival" arose, and the population were at length raised up from their low condition into temperate habits. The question then came up as to the best Excise law, and the plan was finally adopted, which has worked admirably in that country, of selling licenses at public auction, the licenses themselves being limited in number for each locality. The theory on which this rests is, that the legislators cannot, with a due regard to the rights of all, entirely forbid the sale of alcoholic stimulants; but they may reasonably check and limit it, and it is certainly one of the most legitimate objects of taxation. By a sale, the licenses under competition are brought up near their market value, the State receives a larger income, and each dealer is interested in exposing any dealer who has not paid his license fee. The business is limited; it falls into fewer hands, and becomes more respectable, and temptation is diminished. The money received under this system has been so considerable in Sweden that two parks are said to have been constructed in different localities from license fees, and intemperance has been much diminished.

The bill before the New-York Legislature amending our Excise law permits the Boards of Excise to limit the number of licenses in any given locality, but does not allow the proportion to exceed one to every 500 of the population, the present proportion, in many villages, being one to every 100. The sales of the licenses are to be at public auction, after due notice, to the highest bidder, provided he be a proper person in other respects. The time of the sale is to be between the 10th and 31st March, and one-fourth of the amount bid is to be paid in cash before the last day of April. Nothing in this law, however, shall prevent the majority of voters in a given locality from establishing "local prohibition." A new and, it seems to us, excellent provision of this law is, that after a man has purchased a license he must record, in a public manner, the place where he proposes to sell liquors, and then if at any time before the 15th April the owners of at least half of the property situated within two hundred feet of the place remonstrate against granting the license, no license shall be issued. The advantages of such a law to the public are very obvious. Each city or village receives a portion of the profit which has hitherto accrued to the liquor-dealer, and enjoys the benefits of a heavy tax on the best possible object for it—a deleterious luxury. We can easily imagine how large an income would come to this city from such a sale, and what a relief it would bring to our overburdened tax-payers.

It becomes also the interest of the liquor-dealers to observe the law, and to report any who violate it. The drinking-places being limited, can be more easily watched and controlled by the Police, and, as all licenses are sold at one time, and expire at the same time, the public can know precisely what is being done, and guard their own interests. A liquor-seller does not then become necessarily a tool of the politicians; he is not favored with a license for political reasons, but buys it in the open market, and, as he must have some means, the probability is that he will be, other things being equal, a more decent person, and keep a more orderly establishment, than one appointed for political and personal reasons.

This amendment, too, gives "local option" in its best shape; every city or village can authorize few licenses, or many, or none at all; at the same time, they cannot go beyond the proportion fixed. Moreover, the residents of a given locality, who may dread the nuisance of a rum-shop near them, can easily prevent its establishment. The plan relieves the public Treasury in these hard times; it may make the business of liquor-selling more decent; it puts it under proper control; it is fair to the liquor interest and fair to the public; it provides the best form of "local option." We trust that Mr. OGDEN'S bill will have thorough consideration by the committees of both houses, and that the existing complicated and conflicting laws may be amended by some such simple and practical measure.

BUTLER'S NEW CAMPAIGN.

B. F. BUTLER, if he runs again as candidate for Governor of Massachusetts, must overcome a plurality of 30,000 votes cast against him at the late election. Therefore he is taking time by the forelock. The returns of the election are scarcely canvassed, and his successful competitor inaugurated, before BUTLER opens his new campaign. Like Gen. POPE, in a certain memorable military movement, his headquarters are in the saddle. There is a certain audacity about the recent action of the Butler State Committee which must rouse the admiration of all impartial observers. But we regret to perceive in the tone of many anti-Butler newspapers in Massachusetts a certain disgust and impatience which remind us of the querulousness of a man who has been frequently called up during the night to drive a bull out of the front yard. Our Massachusetts friends do not seem to have that fine sense of the ludicrous which we should expect to find in a highly-cultured community. There is a suggestion of sardonic rage which almost borders on profanity in the remark of some of the anti-Butler papers that they are glad to know thus early where to find BUTLER. But nobody believes that these newspapers are amused to learn that Mr. BUTLER is formally in the field as candidate for Governor in 1879.

It is wearisome business. But it must all be gone over again. To us who stand outside and view Massachusetts with a certain degree of perspective, the ill-concealed annoyance of the highly respectable citizens of that State appears unreasonable. There is a romantic unexpectedness about BUTLER'S campaigns which amuses dispassionate observers, although the purest and best of the old Bay State angrily exclaim, "It may be fun to you, but it is death to us." This year, the campaign opens with a split in the Democratic Party. As the attentive reader is aware, when BUTLER captured the Democratic Convention at Worcester, he claimed to have captured with it the Democratic machine. The State Central Committee then appointed representatives itself to be the Democratic State Central Committee, and although it is locally known as BUTLER'S Committee, its acts and utterances have been carefully invested with everything that could stamp them with Democratic regularity. Mr. AVERY and his colleagues left Worcester in great dudgeon and held in Faneuil Hall, Boston, the regular Democratic convention at which Mr. ABBOTT was nominated. It must be admitted that the Abbott Democratic Party have the prestige of regularity. But the Butlerites have the advantage of superior numbers.

The Butler address, just issued from the "Head-quarters Democratic State Central Committee, Boston," invites the co-operation of all voters of the Commonwealth, "irrespective of previous party affiliation," for the purpose of effecting "retrenchment and reform." It is particularly desired that in all those towns and cities in which two or more Democratic local committees exist, the committees shall be united, and "the differences of opinion which created them should be harmonized." To this end, caucuses are to be held, and "the regular" local Democratic committees should be chosen. It should be borne in mind that the Massachusetts town elections occur in the Spring, and that the astute statesman of Essex proposes to enter the field then. If Butler men are chosen on town committees and Boards of Selectmen, a great gain will be made. Relying on the numerical strength of his party, BUTLER is said to be willing to leave to the Democratic voters of Massachusetts the duty of choosing a new State Central Committee. It is not likely that the Abbott, or "regular" wing would consent to any such arrangement.

BUTLER'S managers know very well that the Greenback craze which gave his raid so much animation last year will not be the same element of strength next Fall. It will be a purely personal contest in which Mr. BUTLER will then find himself engaged. The substantial old Democrats who control the Faneuil Hall organization are not the men to surrender everything to a man whom they loathe and deride as an unprincipled adventurer. Nevertheless, the Butler men carry themselves very loftily. At their convocation in Boston, last Saturday it was agreed that if the Abbott men should refuse to accept the platform to be prepared by the Butler Democrats, they should be "fired-out of the party." This is high language for a party which possesses the semblance of a political machine by virtue of a political burglary. But, if bombast and great swelling words will accomplish anything, the Butlerites will overmatch their adversaries in the long run. BUTLER has already made his opening moves. He is as original and audacious as ever, and his unexpectedly early appearance in the field indicates the fertility of his resources. The unfolding of the plans of the anti-Butler wing of the Democracy will be awaited with curiosity by those who find entertainment in the game of politics.

The historic old frigate Constitution has become involved in a legal complication which may revive in some patriotic breast the memories of a certain sea-fight in which the original frigate figured. The owner of the steam-tug which pulled the ship off the shoal on which she had grounded has undertaken legal proceedings to recover the sum of $7,500 salvage. The man was offered $1,000 by Capt. BADGER, of the Constitution, but he has gone to law about the case, and, disregarding the advice of the Admiralty Court, has served notice on the Captain. The Admiralty Judge is said to have advised that the United States Minister and the British Secretary for Foreign Affairs be notified of the proceedings. It has been held in British courts that a claim for salvage of a foreign ship-of-war cannot be entertained. Says the decision: "This is not because compensation ought not to be made, but on account of the immunity of the foreign war-ship from attachment in the waters of a nation which has permitted her to enter." It is assumed that the Government to which the vessel belongs will, on proper application, bestow a due reward.

THE UNION PACIFIC CASES.

DECISIONS RENDERED BY THE UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT IN FAVOR OF THE GOVERNMENT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The following decisions were rendered by the United States Supreme Court to-day:

No. 736—The Union Pacific Railroad Company, appellant, vs. The United States.—This was a suit brought by the Union Pacific Railroad Company in the Court of Claims to recover from the United States, under the acts of Congress of July 2, 1864, and March 3, 1871, one-half of the compensation due for the transportation of mails, troops, supplies, and munitions of war, amounting in the aggregate to $800,000. As a defense to this suit, the Government set up a counter-claim, under the sixth section of the act of July 1, 1862, to 5 per cent. of the net earnings of said road from the date of its completion, Nov. 6, 1869, to Nov. 6, 1874, amounting to $1,400,000. This claim the Union Pacific Company resisted, on the ground that its road was not completed in 1869, as alleged by the Government, but in 1874, and that the interest upon its indebtedness, as well as its running expenses, should be deducted from its gross receipts in computing the net earnings upon which the United States was entitled to receive a per centage. A trial in the Court of Claims resulted in a victory for the Government, that court holding the road was completed in 1869, and that the Government was entitled to receive the difference between half compensation, which it admitted was due to the railroad company, and the full amount of its counter-claim. From that decree the Union Pacific Company appealed. The questions presented to this court for decision are: First, when was the Union Pacific Railroad completed? Second, what should be included in the words "net earnings?" And, third, how and under what conditions are payments to be made? This court, in a long and carefully-prepared opinion, delivered by Justice Bradley, holds as follows:

First—That, although in one sense of the word a railroad is never completed, or never in such a way as to make further improvement or greater perfection impossible, there is no reason why the word "completed" should be construed to mean one thing in the fourth and fifth sections of the act of 1862 and another thing in the sixth section. If the road was completed in such a sense as to entitle the company to receive land grants and subsidy bonds from the Government, it was also completed in such a sense as to entitle the Government to demand and receive 5 per cent. of its net earnings. This conclusion is, in the opinion of the court, so obvious that it needs no argument. The findings of fact in the court below show that the company, through its President, made affidavits to the completion of both of the several sections of its road and its whole line prior to Nov. 6, 1869, and that upon the strength of these representations, and of reports made by Commissioners appointed to examine the road, it was accepted by the President, and subsidy bonds and patents for land grants upon the whole road issued to the company. The latter is thus estopped by its own action from pleading incompletion. A stronger case of estoppel could hardly be presented.

Second—What should be included in the net earnings? The court holds, in reply to this question, that the earnings of the road should include all sums receivable by the company from the Government for services rendered, but not the income or profits derived from its lands; that in computation of net earnings there should be deducted from this gross sum the necessary expenses of operation and all expenditures for ordinary improvement and repairs, but not expenditures arising out of the company's land department, nor interest upon its bonded indebtedness. The latter, the court holds, is not properly chargeable against receipts in computing net earnings. While thus deciding against the company on this point the court is clearly of opinion:

Third—That the net earnings thus computed are to be applied first to payment of the annual interest upon its first mortgage bonds, and not to the payment of the 5 per cent. claimed by the Government. The court holds this to be the legitimate effect of the Government's waiver of its own priority. Interest accruing on the first mortgage bonds is as rightly payable out of the net earnings as is the 5 per cent. due the Government. The net earnings are the fund out of which both are to be paid; but if the fund is adequate only to the payment of one, the interest on the first mortgage bonds has precedence; otherwise, the whole Government debt might be paid, to the exclusion of the first mortgage, which is admitted to have priority. Such a result would be manifestly absurd. The Government, however, may claim that if there is not a sufficient surplus of net earnings in one year to pay 5 per cent. due for that year, it may be carried over to a succeeding year and taken out of the surplus thereof. This position the court holds to be untenable. The statute makes the application an annual one. If the year produces not earnings sufficient for the purpose the Government gets its 5 per cent.; otherwise it does not, and there the account ends. It was never intended that it should be carried over from one year to another.

In conclusion, the court, after directing some modifications in the decree in the Court of Claims, sums up its decision of the principal question in controversy as follows: "If with these modifications, it should be found that the net earnings in any one year were not more than sufficient to pay interest on the first mortgage bonds accruing in said year, then the company will not be decreed to pay any portion of said 5 per cent. of net earnings for that year; but, if the net earnings were more than sufficient to pay such interest, the excess only will be subject, as far as it will go, to the payment of said 5 per cent.; but the company will not be decreed to pay any more than said excess. The decree of the Court of Claims is reversed, with instructions to enter a decree conforming thereto."

Justice STRONG read a dissenting opinion for himself and Justice HARLAN.

No. 703—United States, plaintiff in error, against Central Pacific Railroad Company.—In error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of California.—Inasmuch as this case involves the same questions as the case of the Union Pacific, already decided, the court does not consider it necessary to repeat its opinion. It reverses the judgment of the Circuit Court, with directions to grant a new trial and to be governed by the opinion in the case above referred to. Opinion by Justice Bradley; Justices Strong and Harlan dissenting.

No. 416—United States, plaintiff in error, vs. Kansas Pacific Railroad Company.—In error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Kansas. Judgment reversed for reasons given in decision of Union Pacific case, and cause remanded for new trial. Opinion by Justice Bradley.

COURT OF APPEALS.

ALBANY, Jan. 27.—In the Court of Appeals to-day the following business was transacted: No. 38—Francis O. Hagan, respondent, vs. Sidney Dillon and others, appellants; argued by Alexander Thain for appellants and submitted for respondent. No. 35—William S. Varplanck, Receiver, &c., appellant, vs. Lorenzo Van Buren and another, respondents; argued by William W. Badger for appellant and H. H. Hustis for respondents. No. 36—The People ex rel. James S. Kahan, appellant, vs. the Board of Police Commissioners of New-York City; submitted. No. 18—Catharine Atkins, appellant, vs. Silas Saxton, Sheriff, &c., respondent; argued by D. M. Dewitt for appellant and A. Schoonmaker, Jr., for respondent. No. 45—The town of Willsborough, respondent, vs. The New-York and Canada Railroad Company et al., appellants; argued by D. M. Grover for appellants, and Samuel Hand for respondents. No. 46—The town of Essex, respondent, vs. the New-York and Canada Railroad Company; argued by D. M. Grover for appellant, and Samuel Hand for respondent.

The following are the calendars for to-morrow: Motion Calendar—Nos. 354, 355, 340, 341, 349, 350, 353, 358, 359, and 360. Day Calendar—Nos. 34, 7, 10, 58, 20, 12, 11, and 72.

ATTACKING A DEAD CLERGYMAN.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Jan. 27.—To-day, in the Supreme Court, before Judge Martin, a case of unusual interest was disposed of. Bridget Gibson sued the Administrators of the estate of the Rev. Thomas Keating for $10,000, for the care and support of a child of which, she claimed, Keating, who was a Catholic clergyman at Hudson, N. Y., was the father. The court dismissed the case on the ground that she was not a competent witness. Hon. J. Thomas Shriggs, of Utica, conducted the case for the defendant, ex-Congressman Smith for the plaintiff.

ELECTION JUDGES CONVICTED.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 27.—In the United States Circuit Court, Judge Bond presiding, the jury this morning rendered a verdict of guilty against Justice J. Gader and Walter Tusker, Judges of Election at the late Congressional election in the Fourteenth Ward. They were found guilty of hindering the United States Supervisor in the discharge of his duties by refusing to admit a special Deputy United States Marshal to the polling-room, and with stuffing the ballot-box. They were remanded for sentence.

MINERS DEMANDING THEIR WAGES.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 27.—The miners in the employ of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company have sent to President Gowen an address, adopted at a meeting of the delegates representing the colliery employes, miners, and laborers of Schuylkill County, held at Pottsville on Jan. 14. They demand the payment of their wages in lawful money of the United States, and threaten that if such payment is not made on or before Feb. 16 they will refuse to work thereafter.

THE POLITICAL TELEGRAMS.

MR. POTTER'S NEW INVESTIGATION BEGUN.

SEVERAL OFFICERS OF THE WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY EXAMINED — A TRUNKFUL OF DISPATCHES BURNED BY ORDER OF PRESIDENT GREEN—AN UNSUCCESSFUL EFFORT TO PERVERT THE MEANING OF REPUBLICAN DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The Potter Committee to-day began the investigation of the cipher dispatches. The first witness called was Mr. Clarence Carey, attorney of the Western Union Telegraph Company, New-York City. He testified that certain dispatches were placed in his charge when it was proposed to issue subpœnas for their production before an investigating committee in Washington, the purpose of placing the dispatches in his possession being to avoid, if possible, their delivery for public inspection. It was thought that a subpœna would not be issued to him owing to his position; he was finally, however, directed by the Executive Committee to deliver the messages to Capt. Whitney, the Washington manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company; after doing this his custody of the dispatches ended; the instructions with regard to picking out the dispatches were to take all that were of a political character; the collection, when first made, being for the sole purpose of getting them out of the way of a subpœna.

Mr. Floyd Grant, who supervised the selection of the dispatches, was the next witness. He explained how he proceeded in the selection; he came to Washington, and in order to comply with certain subpœnas issued upon Capt. Whitney he opened the trunk which contained the dispatches collected by him in New-York, and selected those called for by the subpœna of the Morrison committee; the rest were replaced in the trunk.

By the Chairman—What was the number remaining? Did you keep any schedule of them? A.—The number, exclusive of those required by the Morrison committee, was 29,275.

By Mr. McMahon—Mr. Floyd testified that the telegrams were about evenly divided as regards party; a number were sent by J. Chandler from the Fifth-Avenue Hotel; there were some signed "Havemeyer," some "Hooper," and others "Noyes;" he thought Mr. Chandler's messages went to Florida; others went to New-Orleans and Oregon; he thought that of the 29,000 dispatches 300 were in cipher.

Capt. Leonard Whitney, manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company in Washington, in compliance with a request by Mr. Foster, produced a schedule showing more than 300 dispatches delivered to the Morrison committee. He thought Mr. Morrison returned the dispatches, but did not recollect the time. Other schedules were produced, showing that various dispatches which he was called upon to submit were delivered to the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections. These were delivered in two different packages. The dispatches when returned to Capt. Whitney were in the trunk mentioned.

By Mr. Hunton—Witness said when the trunk was returned to him the schedules previously prepared were not verified by the contents of the trunk, and it was immediately shipped to New-York by order of the President, Gen. Green. He had never heard that any of the dispatches were missing from the trunk.

By Mr. McMahon—Mr. Whitney said that Mr. Van Horne gave a verbal order to his (Whitney's) office to collect all political dispatches from the files and forward them to New-York; no conversation as to the cause of this unusual procedure occurred between witness and Mr. Van Horne, however.

Prof. Edward S. Holden, of the Naval Observatory, was then sworn to translate without divulging in any way the "cipher dispatches," which were handed to the committee by Gen. Butler.

TESTIMONY OF JAMES O. GREEN.

Mr. James O. Green said he was chief clerk of the Western Union Telegraph Company on railway relations and free service; also private secretary of confidential clerk to his father, the present President; in a letter just received his father referred to the fact of having handed over the key of a trunk containing dispatches to him, directing that the contents should be destroyed; this was in May of last year; he took the dispatches into the basement of the Western Union building and cast them into the furnace in bundles.

The Chairman—Was there a struggle? A.—Yes, and I took a poker and saw that they were properly consumed.

Q.—There was no chance of any of them escaping by the chimney? A.—No, Sir; every one was burned; I could not say whether all the telegrams were returned in the trun of the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, and asked by the Chairman if he received a package of telegrams from Bullock and handed the same to William E. Chandler. Witness admitted having received a bundle of papers (he could not say what the contents were) from Bullock, and having handed it intact to Gen. Brady, of the Post Office Department.

The Chairman handed Mr. Evans a letter purporting to be a copy of a letter received by him from Mr. Bullock, which mentioned the package as the one Evans had given William E. Chandler at the request of Mr. Bullock. Witness denied giving Chandler the package, and said he did not know William E. Chandler personally. The letter, in conclusion, stated that Senator Wadleigh would inform him [Evans] where Mr. Chandler could be found. [Laughter.]

After some further interrogatories, in which it was developed that Mr. Evans had not spoken to Gen. Brady on the subject since delivering the package, and had heard no more about it, a recess was taken until 3 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

On the reassembling of the committee Mr. Grant was recalled and testified that, on the order of Mr. Cary, he made another search for the dispatches between Tyner and Chandler, and found some of them; there were seven or eight altogether; one was a telegram from Tyner about making two appointments in the Interior Department at salaries of $2,500 each, and asking Mr. Chandler to do this and have the money deposited in some national bank so that it might be drawn in Indianapolis by the Republican Committee; the telegrams also contained the names of the persons to be appointed; he could not remember what those names were, but he believed one was Martin.

Mr. Reed—It was not St. Martin was it?

The Chairman—No. He has not received his appointment yet, as far as I know.

Mr. Reed—He had one from the sub-committee.

Mr. McMahon—Yes. They discharged him for promotion.

Gen. Butler—Oh, he does not pay money; he receives.

TWELVE PACKAGES OF MOLASSES CANDY.

At this point the clerk of the committee brought in a clumsily-wrapped newspaper package, and handed it to the Chairman, upon whom all eyes were immediately turned. Blushingly he rose to explain. "Gentlemen," he said. "I ordered from Mrs. What's-her-name in the lobby, 12 copies of the Tribune special about the cipher dispatches, but it seems there has been some mistake, and she has sent 12 packages of molasses candy." [Laughter.]

Mr. Reed—Either is sweet enough for this committee.

Mr. Hiscock—It is very evident she appreciated what you wanted or needed. [Laughter.]

THE PROCEEDINGS RESUMED.

The examination of Grant was then resumed, and further details were given by him of telegrams which passed between Messrs. Chandler and Tyner. He also testified with regard to a telegram from Fenton to Tyner, as to prospects in Indiana.

Mr. Green, at this point, explained that he had forgotten one circumstance in connection with these telegrams. The number was incomplete, and at the suggestion of Grant, the manager at Indianapolis was ordered to send on the rest.

By the Chairman—You stated that you had forgotten names until you heard the last witness mention them. You do not confound the name of Zach Chandler with William E. Chandler do you? [Laughter.] A.—No, Sir.

Gen. Butler (to Grant)—I want to understand something more about this. Tyner telegraphed to Chandler, Secretary of the Interior, to appoint somebody in his department? A.—Yes, Sir; two appointments at $2,500 each.

Q.—For those appointments a certain sum of money would be paid, and Tyner wished to have such sum deposited in the bank so it could be drawn in Indiana? A.—I said that exactly.

By Mr. Reed—Depositing it to some in the bank? A.—Chandler; he was to deposit the money, and make the appointments, too; probably the same day or the day after. Chandler interrupted that he had deposited money as requested.

Mr. Cary being recalled, said he would like to make a statement that he knew nothing of any consequences with regard to these telegrams, and to make an objection that witness did not waive privileged knowledge that came to him as attorney for the Western Union Telegraph Company.

Mr. Butler—Answer this question and then make an objection. Mr. Cary—Objected by Mr. Grant that he received a schedule from you. From whom did you receive that schedule? A.—I plead my privilege on that question.

Mr. Butler argued that as he did not desire to ask the contents of this paper, but simply put the question for the purpose of tracing it, witness was bound to answer.

The Chairman concurred in this opinion, and witness then replied that he had not the remotest recollection from whom he got the schedule, or that he ever had it.

Mr. Butler—Then why did you object? A.—Because I knew something further about it—behind that.

Mr. Butler—Tell us what it is.

Witness claimed his privilege, and discussion followed on the point between him and Mr. Butler, and the latter read the law on that point.

Mr. Hitchcock—It seems to me that Cary's objection is entirely proper in declining to answer this question, as it is not within the scope of our investigation.

Mr. Butler—Oh, you have me there. I do not hold that.

A long discussion took place on the question at issue, at the close of which it was determined to take a vote as to whether the witness should be called upon to answer or not, when all the members present voted in the affirmative, with the exception of the Chairman.

Mr. Hiscock—Now, I wish you had put the other question as to whether the question which is asked the witness is pertinent to the inquiry.

A vote was taken, and it was decided that the examination should proceed.

Witness then replied—I am unable to recollect what he told me; it is my impression and belief that he brought them telegrams, or copies of them, and read them out to me, remarking that it was an extraordinary case; I am unable to separate in my mind my remembrances of what is in them from what I have since seen; many telegrams to-day I never saw the telegrams; to the best of my belief they related to some dirty piece of work in regard to the sale of offices for some political ends.

Mr. Butler—Nothing you can recard to-day has refreshed your memory so that you can say an untruthful account has been given of the telegrams given by other witnesses?

Mr. Hiscock—I object to this question, and ask that it be ruled out. It is like putting six witnesses on the stand to testify that they did not see the man steal the pork.

A vote was taken, and Messrs. Hiscock, Reed, and the Chairman voted against the question.

Witness answered that the testimony he had heard was supplementary to his recollection, and went beyond it; he did not think the dispatches were cipher dispatches, strictly defined.

The Chairman stated that he had received a letter from Mr. Brady to the effect that he would appear before the committee to-morrow morning.

Mr. Butler—Suppose Mr. Fowler testified that he got those dispatches from Mr. Brady in a newspaper bundle. You would not want Brady.

The Chairman—He might testify entirely different, and then I shall want him.

The committee then adjourned until 11 o'clock to-morrow morning.

A STATEMENT BY MR. TYNER.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The following is given by Mr. Tyner as an authentic statement of the facts from which the witnesses before the Potter committee to-day got their impressions as to sales of offices for political contributions: "Notwithstanding the defeat of the Republican State ticket in Indiana in October, 1876, it was thought that, with an active canvass and a full Republican vote, the State might be carried for Hayes in November. The State Committee requested financial aid from the National Committee in New-York, and Mr. Z. Chandler, Chairman, agreed to furnish from $50 to $100 for each county in the State, or from $5,000 to $10,000, to aid in getting out a full vote, if Mr. Tyner, then about to visit Indiana, should telegraph that there was a reasonable prospect of success, and that the money was needed. Just as the latter was leaving for the train it was arranged between him and Mr. Chandler, that money should not be mentioned in the telegrams, but that Mr. Tyner should speak of the appointment of one Indian Agent, instead of saying $5,000. He did telegraph that two Indian Agencies were wanted, and subsequently telegraphed Mr. Chandler to deposit in the Hanover National Bank, of New-York, subject to draft the sum representing the appointment of two Indian Agents, or, in other words, $10,000, which Mr. Chandler so deposited. The telegrams between John W. Foster and Mr. Tyner were prior to the October election, and related to raising money to legitimate methods in the Indiana State campaign. None of these related to appointments to officers of any kind whatever, as stated by the telegraph office to-day. The telegrams happened to be withdrawn from the telegraph company because Mr. Orton, before any subpœnas had been issued by Congress, volunteered to return them to Mr. Tyner, who desired them because they were liable to misconstruction if repeated from memory after destruction. Mr. Tyner has them in his possession, and will produce them before the committee.

A MULE THAT CAN COUNT.

From the Salt Lake (Utah) Herald, Jan. 22.

There is a mule, driven on one of the First South-street cars, apparently a little more sensible than others. It is generally on the morning shift, and has to make five round trips before the team is changed. Every day, as soon as the mule comes on the fifth return trip from the upper end of the line, it begins to whinny a half a block before reaching Second East-street, and if the change team does not happen to be waiting, and the driver has to run to the back corner and return before changing, it will stretch out its neck and whinny again, louder than before, about the same distance ere it reaches the place. How that mule keeps track of the fifth trip is more than Gunn has found out.

FEEDING WATER-FOWL IN ILLINOIS.

From the Quincy Whig, Jan. 25.

A movement has been started among the sportsmen of Quincy looking to the increase of water-fowl and other game in this vicinity. The purpose is to plant a large quantity of wild rice and buckwheat on the rivers and lakes in and near Quincy and throughout the Mississippi Valley, upon which ducks and geese can feed. It is expected that large flocks of these will be attracted by this means, while at present they are compelled to go elsewhere on account of the absence of feeding ground on Quincy waters. The wild rice will be gathered during the Summer in Wisconsin, and sown during the Fall. The expense attending it must be provided for by individual means.

DECIDING CITY SALARIES.

TWO BILLS SUBMITTED TO THE ASSEMBLY.

MR. STRAHAN'S BILL MENTIONS NO AMOUNTS, BUT LEAVES SALARIES SUBJECT TO ACTION OF HEADS OF DEPARTMENTS—MR. LANGBEIN'S PROPOSITION, GIVING THE AMOUNT OF EVERY SALARY.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 27.—Two bills for reducing salaries in the City of New-York were introduced in the Assembly to-night. One came from Mr. Strahan, and this was drawn particularly with reference to the position taken by Gov. Robinson in refusing to sign a general bill applicable only to New-York. The bill now introduced is a local bill, but does not touch any man's salary. It amends that section of the present charter, conferring upon heads of departments power to appoint employes and to decide upon their number, their fees, and salaries, provided they do not increase the sum appropriated by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment. It also limits the amount to be appropriated for salaries to 80 per cent. of the amount paid in 1877. This contemplates an aggregate reduction in salaries of $2,000,000. This bill is as follows:

SECTION 1. The twenty-eighth section of chapter 325 of the Laws of 1873, commonly known as the Charter of the City of New-York, is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

SEC. 28.—The heads of all departments, except as otherwise specifically provided by law, shall have power to appoint and remove all chiefs of bureaus, except the Chamberlain, deputies, assistants, clerks, officers, employes, and subordinates in their respective departments. But no regular clerk or head of a bureau shall be removed until he has been informed of the cause of the proposed removal, and has been allowed an opportunity of making an explanation, and in every case of removal a statement showing the true grounds and reason thereof shall be filed and entered upon the records of the department or board. The official designation, the duties, and the number of persons employed in or upon any branch of the public service in the City of New-York, except as otherwise specifically provided by law, as well as the salaries of all such persons, whether now fixed by law or otherwise, shall be such as shall be designated by the heads of the several departments with which such persons may respectively be connected. Provided, however, that the aggregate expenses thereof shall not exceed the total amount duly appropriated to the respective departments for such purposes. For the purposes of limiting such expense to the amount so appropriated the head or heads of any department at any time within 30 days after such appropriation shall have been made, may, by a written declaration, which shall be published in the City Record, setting forth the reasons therefor, now abolish any office established by or under such department, transfer the duties of one bureau, in whole or in part, to another bureau or office in such department, reduce the salary of any person employed in such department, and discharge any such person from the public service. Provided, however, that the right thus conferred for the purpose aforesaid shall be exercised not more than once after each appointment by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment. In each and every annual estimate and appropriation hereafter to be made, the Board of Estimate and Apportionment shall appropriate for the salaries and compensation of persons to be employed, or payable out of moneys raised or to be raised by taxation in the City of New-York, such amount as shall seem proper to the said board. Provided, that the gross amount appropriated for salaries and compensation shall not in any one year exceed 80 per centum of the gross amount paid for such salaries and compensation in the year 1877 and provided further, that the said board shall appropriate to and for each department, for the purposes aforesaid, a gross sum only, which gross sum shall be apportioned among and between the persons connected with the service of such department by the head or heads thereof exclusively, and thenceforth the salaries and compensation of such persons shall be, and shall be paid, according to such apportionment and decision of such head or heads of departments, pursuant to the provisions of this section.

SEC. 2. The Board of Estimate and Apportionment shall fix and may reduce any and all salaries or compensation payable out of moneys raised or to be raised by tax for City purposes to any person connected with the service of said city, but not connected with any department, and nor with any court, nor with the Board of Education, but the said Board of Estimate and Apportionment shall not increase any such salary which now exceeds $5,000.

SEC. 3. For the purposes of this act the several courts, departments, boards, bureaus, or offices of the State or County Government situated in said City, and supported in whole or in part by moneys raised or to be raised therein by tax shall, as to the salaries or compensation payable from such moneys, be subject to the exercise of all the powers and authority conferred by the first section of this act upon the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, in like manner and to the same extent as though they were departments of the City Government. And the officer or officers at the head or in charge of any such court, department, board, bureau, or office shall, with reference to such court, department, board, bureau, or office, and the persons connected therewith, possess and exercise, for the purposes in the manner and to the extent in said first section specified, all the powers therein conferred upon the heads of departments of the City Government; provided, that any Judge or Justice, whose salary is by the Constitution prohibited from being diminished during his term of office may continue to be paid and receive his salary to which he is now legally entitled or which may be legally fixed at the beginning of such term, for the purposes of this section and in the exercise of the powers herein conferred. The Board of Police Justices, as to the Police Courts in said City, the 10 Civil Justices, acting as a board, as to the District Courts in said City, and the Judges of each of the other courts in said City, acting in each instances as a board, as to their several courts, shall be considered and shall act as the officers at the head or in charge of such courts respectively. Provided, that this section shall be construed and enforced only so far as is consistent with all the constitutional privileges possessed by said courts or either of them.

SEC. 4. Nothing in this act contained is intended, nor shall it be construed to create or confer any manner or right of removal from office of any officer elected by the people or any head of a department, nor to affect any existing right of appointment to office.

SEC. 5. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed, and every provision of law fixing the rate or amount of salaries or compensation payable out of any moneys raised by tax in the City of New-York is hereby repealed. Provided, that such repeal shall not take effect with reference to any particular salary until the time and date on which the same shall be altered in pursuance of the provisions of this act, and until such alterations shall become operative in law, every salary now fixed by law shall continue to be paid at the legal rate thereof.

SEC. 6. This act shall take effect immediately, except as is otherwise hereinbefore provided.

Mr. Langbein's bill upon the same subject provides for salaries as in the following abstract:

To the Mayor, $10,000; to the Controller, $10,000; to the District Attorney, $10,000, and to each Assistant District Attorney, $6,000; to the Counsel to the Corporation, $10,000; to the Commissioner of Public Works, $9,000; to the President of the Board of Police, $5,000, and to each Commissioner of Police, $4,500; to the President of the Department of Public Parks, $5,000; to each Commissioner of Public Parks, $3,000; to the President of the Fire Department, $5,000, and to each Fire Commissioner, $4,000; to the President of the Department of Public Charities and Correction, $5,000, and to each Commissioner of Public Charities and Correction Commissioner, $3,000; to the President of the Health Department, $4,000; and to each Commissioner of that department, $3,000; to the President of the Board of Aldermen, $3,000, and to each member of the board, $2,000; to the President of the Department of Taxes and Assessments, $5,000, and to each Commissioner of the same, $3,000; to the President of the Department of Docks, $4,000, and to each Commissioner of the Department of Docks, $2,500; to the superintendent of the Department of Buildings, $4,000; to the Chamberlain, $6,000, and an allowance of $6,000 for the salaries of his clerks; to the Justices of the Police courts, each $5,000; to the Justices of the District Civil Courts, each $5,000 each, and to the Clerks and Assistant Clerks, each $2,500; to the Justices of the Marine Courts each $6,000, and to the Clerks of the Marine Court, $3,000; to the Justices of the Supreme Court, $4,000 each, and $6,000 each to the Justices of the Superior Court, the Court of Common Pleas, and the Surrogate, who shall hereafter be elected or appointed, $10,000 each; to the Recorder, the City Judge, and the Judges of the Court of General Sessions, $6,000 each; to the Corporation Attorney, $4,000; to the Public Administrator, $3,500, from legal fees collected by him, and paid into the Treasury, provided the same shall amount to that sum, not more than the amount of such fees collected, if less than the sum of $3,500; to the Commissioner of Jurors $5,000, and for clerk hire a sum not exceeding the sum of $5,000, making $10,000 in all which shall be paid from legal fees and fines collected by him, hereby required to be paid into the Treasury, provided the same shall amount to that sum, but not more than the amount of such fines and fees collected and paid into the Treasury if less than said sum of $10,000; to the President of the College of the City of New-York, $6,000, and no amount shall be allowed for houserent; to the Clerk of the Court of Special Sessions, $3,000; to the Commissioners of the new County Court-house $2,000 each, from the date of their qualification to perform the duties of their office; to the attorney for the collection of personal taxes, $4,000, which office shall be appointed and removed at the pleasure of the Mayor, for cause.

SEC. 7. The annual salary or compensation for the services of all officers not provided for in the bill shall be fixed by a concurrent vote of the Mayor, Controller, Commissioner of the Department of Public Works, and the President of the Department of Taxes and Assessments, who shall be a board to fix such salaries, but they shall not reduce or change the compensation now paid to any policeman, fireman, or school-teacher. This board shall meet within 10 days after the passage of this act, and afterward on the second Tuesday in January in each year, at the office of the Mayor, and then any citizen may attend and present his views in relation to the subject under consideration. All officers receiving salaries are prohibited from receiving in addition fees or commissions, and all such fees and commissions are directed to be paid into the City Treasury, as also all fees for licenses, weekly, under oath that they are all received. The provisions of this act do not apply to any of the present unexpired terms of the judicial officers named in the Constitution of the State, nor to other officers whose salaries cannot be reduced under the Constitution, but shall apply to all officers hereafter elected or appointed.

STATE INSURANCE SUPERVISION.

ASSEMBLYMAN KNOWLES SEIZES AN OPPORTUNITY AND PRAISES THE DEPARTMENT AND THE SUPERINTENDENT.

ALBANY, Jan. 27.—Charles R. Knowles, an insurance agent in this city, member of the Assembly from the Second Albany District, and second on the Insurance Committee of the lower house, seized an opportunity to-night, when Mr. Sloan moved the Governor's Message for consideration in the Committee of the Whole, to read an address, which had evidently been prepared for the benefit of the Insurance Department and its Superintendent. Speaker Alvord had called Mr. Fish to the chair, and Mr. Knowles, on rising, drew his printed address from his pocket and proceeded to declaim it. He speaks well, and commanded the attention of the House, but he also provoked a great deal of criticism from men who were disgusted that he should take the method he had chosen of reiterating the fulsome praise of the department that had already been sufficiently advertised by the Superintendent himself.

Taking up that part of the Governor's Message that denounced the Insurance Department, he endeavored to show that the Controllers, from 1828 to 1859, had urged a system of supervision, though it did not appear that any of them did more than recommend better supervision, while none of them asked for an Insurance Department. Having given a statement of the growth of the insurance business prior to the establishment of the department, and compared it with the figures representing the increase of business since 1859, he argued that the necessity for insurance supervision was greater than it had been before during the last 10 years. He asserted the department had "so wisely and honestly" exercised its supervisory powers that, aside from the Chicago and Boston disasters, the policy-holders of this State had not suffered the loss of a single dollar by the failure of a single fire insurance company organized here and having the certificate of our Insurance Department. He challenged the whole round world to show a parallel to this in the history of the insurance business. The loss in property in Chicago and Boston as well as in this State he put at $9,961,762, instead of $32,927,000, as the Governor said he was informed the loss had been within seven years. He then read the Insurance Superintendent's letter to insurance companies, which has already been well advertised, and made a point of the fact that the capital of companies in favor of supervision was $32,528,892, with $23,363,797 of surplus, while that of those opposed to supervision represented $1,930,000 capital, and $3,567,561 assets.

Mr. Knowles then produced what he called the "seductive prospectus" of the Widows' and Orphans' Benefit Life Insurance Company, with the Governor's name on the list of Trustees, and pointed out a paragraph containing an allusion to the fact that the company was "incorporated under the wise and rigorous Insurance laws of the State of New-York." He then desired to know whether it would weaken the value of the Governor's testimony if it were known that after issuing 5,447 policies, covering $15,050,492 of insurance, the company, the capital of which was, for some reason, impaired to the extent of nearly 40 per cent., or whether it would show any less the need of State supervision to know that the Directors, instead of making good the impairment, had sold their stock for 120 per cent. He intimated that this arrangement was made with an outlaw in the insurance business, conducted through gentlemen associated in the board with the Superintendent, while the officer in other board, of which the Governor was a Trustee, and that this agent, besides a share of the handsome profit of 120 per cent. for 50, secured $20,000 for his services as the negotiator. Mr. Knowles closed by asking if it would weaken the argument for vigilant supervision to know that immediately afterward the wrecker proceeded to his native district, while the Directors secured 120 for stock which they reported worth only 60, and that all that remained for the insured persons was a beggarly $2,600, in the hands of the Receiver, and $114,000 in the department, which no wrecker could reach.

Mr. Grady rose to say that hereafter a number of members would undoubtedly speak in support of the Governor's position, and Mr. Skinner spoke to the same effect. He did not blame Mr. Knowles, however, to express his surprise that the member who had spoken in defense of the Insurance Department had seized an opportunity to do so, when a bill touching the very matter was under consideration by the Insurance Committee, of which Mr. Knowles was a member. He gave notice that Mr. Fish would have something to say on the matter, and that he also desired to speak upon it. On motion the committee reported progress and asked leave to sit again.

THE PROPOSED APPORTIONMENT.

BILL PREPARED BY THE MAJORITY OF THE SENATE COMMITTEE—THE DISTRIBUTION OF SENATORS AND ASSEMBLYMEN.

ALBANY, Jan. 27.—The majority of the Senate Committee on Apportionment presented to the Senate yesterday, through Mr. Harris, the following bill:

SENATE DISTRICTS.

First—Queens and Suffolk Counties.

Second—The First, Second, Fifth, Sixth, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, and Twelfth Wards of Brooklyn, and the Towns of Flatbush, Flatlands, Gravesend, New-Lots and Newtown, Kings County.

Third—The present Third, Fourth, Seventh, Eleventh, Twentieth, Twenty-first, Twenty-second, Twenty-third, Twenty-fourth, and Twenty-fifth Wards of Brooklyn.

Fourth—The Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth, Seventeenth, Eighteenth, and Nineteenth Wards of Brooklyn.

Fifth—Richmond County and the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, and Eighth Wards of New-York, and so much of the present Ninth Ward as lies between Houston, Hancock, Columbia, Lewis, Stanton streets, the Sixth-avenue, Cornelia, Bleecker, and Leroy-streets and the North & Hudson River; and so much of the present Fifteenth Ward as lies between Sixth-avenue, Carmine, Bleecker, Hancock, Houston, Broadway, and West Fourth-street.

Sixth—The present and Thirteenth Wards of New-York; so much of the present Tenth as lies between the Bowery, Division, and Canal streets, and all of the Eleventh Ward, save what lies between East Thirteenth and East Fourteenth streets, Avenue B and the East River.

Seventh—The present Fourteenth Ward, all of the Tenth Ward, except what lies within the Bowery, Division, and Canal streets, all of the present Seventeenth Ward, save so much as lies between East Thirteenth and East Fourteenth streets, Avenue B, and Third-avenue, and between Third-avenue, East Fourteenth-street, Fourth-avenue, and the Bowery, and so much of the present Fifteenth Ward as lies between the Bowery, East Fourth-street, Broadway, and East Houston-street.

Eighth—The Sixteenth Ward of New-York, so much of the present Ninth Ward as lies between the Hudson River, Leroy, Bleecker, and Cornelia streets, Sixth-avenue, and West Fourteenth-street; so much of the present Fifteenth Ward as lies between West Fourth-street, East Fourth-street Bowery, Fourth-avenue, West Fourteenth-street and Sixth-avenue; so much of the present Seventeenth Ward as lies between West Fourteenth-street, West Fourteenth-street, Sixth-avenue, West Twenty-sixth-street, East Twenty-sixth-street and Third-avenue; and so much of the present Twenty-first Ward as lies between East Twenty-sixth-street, Sixth-avenue, West Fortieth-street, East Fortieth-street, and Third-avenue.

Ninth—The present Twelfth Ward, all of the present Eighteenth Ward, so much of the present Seventeenth Ward as lies between Third-avenue, East Fourteenth-street, Avenue B, and East Thirteenth-street; so much of the present Eleventh Ward as lies between Avenue B, East Fourteenth-street, the East River, and East Thirteenth-street; so much of the present Eighteenth Ward as lies between East Fourteenth-street, Third-avenue, East Twenty-sixth-street, and the East River; so much of the Twenty-first Ward as lies between East Twenty-sixth-street, Third-avenue, East Fortieth-street, and the East River; and so much of the present Nineteenth Ward as lies between East Fortieth-street, West Fortieth-street, Sixth-avenue, and West Seventy-fourth-street; so much of the Central Park as would lie easterly of a line drawn in continuation of Sixth-avenue, between Fifty-ninth and Seventy-fourth streets, West Seventy-fourth-street, East Seventy-fourth-street, and the East River.

Tenth—The present Twelfth, Twenty-third, and Twenty-fourth Wards, so much of the present Nineteenth as lies above East Fortieth-street, and West Seventy-fourth-street, so much of the present Twenty-second Ward as lies above West Fifty-third-street.

Twelfth—The Counties of Westchester and Putnam.

Thirteenth—The Counties of Orange, Rockland, and Sullivan.

Fourteenth—The Counties of Ulster, Schoharie, and Greene.

Fifteenth—The Counties of Dutchess and Columbia.

Sixteenth—The Counties of Rensselaer and Washington.

Seventeenth—The County of Albany.

Eighteenth—The Counties of Saratoga, Fulton, Hamilton, Montgomery, and Schenectady.

Nineteenth—The Counties of Clinton, Essex, and Warren.

Twentieth—The Counties of St. Lawrence and Franklin.

Twenty-first—The Counties of Delaware, Broome, and Chenango.

Twenty-second—The Counties of Oneida and Lewis.

Twenty-third—The Counties of Oswego and Jefferson.

Twenty-fourth—The Counties of Onondaga and Cortland.

Twenty-fifth—The Counties of Madison, Otsego, and Herkimer.

Twenty-sixth—The Counties of Cayuga, Seneca, Tompkins, and Tioga.

Twenty-seventh—The Counties of Chemung, Steuben, and Allegany.

Twenty-eighth—The Counties of Wayne, Ontario, Schuyler, and Yates.

Twenty-ninth—The Counties of Monroe and Orleans.

Thirtieth—The Counties of Wyoming, Genesee, Livingston, and Niagara.

Thirty-first—The Counties of Cattaraugus and Chautauqua.

ASSEMBLY APPORTIONMENT.

The members of Assembly are apportioned as follows:

Albany	4	Onondago	3
Allegany	1	Ontario	1
Broome	1	Orange	3
Cattaraugus	1	Orleans	1
Cayuga	2	Oswego	2
Chautauqua	2	Otsego	1
Chemung	1	Putnam	1
Chenango	1	Queens	2
Clinton	1	Rensselaer	3
Columbia	2	Richmond	1
Cortland	1	Rockland	1
Delaware	2	St. Lawrence	3
Dutchess	2	Saratoga	2
Erie	5	Schenectady	1
Essex	1	Schoharie	1
Franklin	1	Schuyler	1
Fulton and Hamilton	1	Seneca	1
Genesee	1	Steuben	2
Greene	1	Suffolk	2
Herkimer	1	Sullivan	1
Jefferson	2	Tioga	1
Kings	12	Tompkins	2
Lewis	1	Ulster	3
Livingston	1	Warren	1
Madison	2	Washington	2
Monroe	4	Wayne	2
Montgomery	1	Westchester	3
New-York	23	Wyoming	1
Niagara	1	Yates	1
Oneida	3

OBITUARY.

HENRY R. LINDERMAN.

Dr. Henry R. Linderman, Director of the United States Mint, died in Washington yesterday afternoon. He was born in Lehman Township, Pike County, Penn., Dec. 26, 1825. His father, Dr. John Linderman, practiced medicine in the Valley of the Delaware for nearly 50 years. His mother was a sister of Hon. Richard Broadhead, a Representative in Congress from 1843 to 1849, and a United States Senator from 1851 to 1857. After receiving an academic education, Dr. Linderman studied medicine with his father, and completed his course at the Medical Department of the University of New-York. Dr. John Torrey, late Assayer of the Assay Office in New-York City, being at that time one of the principal Professors at that institution. He began the practice of his profession with his father in 1845, and continued the practice in Pike and neighboring counties until 1853, when he was appointed chief clerk in the office of the Director of the Mint at Philadelphia, in which position he continued for 12 years, when he resigned to engage in private business. He was appointed Director of the Mint in 1867, and held that office for two years. On account of his great experience and thorough knowledge of such subjects he was appointed by Secretary Boutwell to examine the Mints on the Pacific coast and adjust some intricate bullion questions. He made many valuable reports to the Treasury Department upon various subjects connected with the Mint service. In 1869–70 he was associated with Controller Knox, the Deputy Controller of the Currency, in the preparation of the Coinage act of 1863, which was a codification of all the Mint and Coinage laws of the United States, with important amendments, and established the Mints and Assay Offices of the United States as a bureau of the Treasury Department, at Washington. When this act took effect, on April 1, 1873, he was appointed by President Grant as Director of the Mint, and organized the Mint Bureau in the Treasury Department, and since that time has had the general supervision of all the mints and Assay Offices in the United States. His reports as Director of the Mint are exceedingly valuable documents. The one for 1877, contained an elaborate and able argument in favor of the gold standard. He is the author of a volume on "Money and Legal Tender," published in June, 1877, which has received the highest praise from the leading financiers of every country of this country but of England and other foreign countries.

Dr. Linderman was socially a genial and kind-hearted gentleman and accustomed to the practice of a liberal hospitality. He was generous to his favorites not only among his associates, but with the laborers and workmen employed and co-operating with him in the important work under his charge. Having himself been thoroughly skilled and disciplined in the details of mint operations, he secured full confidence in the soundness of his official suggestions and instructions. His friendships were well placed and constant. He had hosts of friends who believed of him nothing but good. His generosity was not purpose, his integrity of character, commanded the highest respect and esteem and the undoubting confidence of those whose good fortune it was to know him well.

MR. CHARLES WALL.

Mr. Charles Wall, senior member of the firm of William Wall's Sons, of Brooklyn, Eastern District, and No. 113 Wall-street, this City, proprietors of the largest ropewalk in the United States, died between 9 and 10 o'clock, on Sunday night, at his residence, No. 43 Park-avenue, Brooklyn. He was born in the latter aity on May 14, 1830, and was consequently in his forty-ninth year. His father, William Wall, was Mayor of Williamsburg before that city was incorporated with Brooklyn. When a young man he entered the employment of Williams & Hinman, ship-chandlers, the senior member of which subsequently became a member of the well-known shipping firm of Williams & Guion. He subsequently went into business with his father, and succeeded him. He was a member of the Chamber of Commerce and the Maritime Exchange, and was an officer in various insurance and other corporations. He was also a large stockholder in the Ferry Company of the Fulton Ferry, and the flags of these boats were at half mast yesterday on account of his death. His funeral took place on Monday, and has been confined to his house since the 1st inst.

OBITUARY NOTES.

Leon de la Cova, the Venezuelan Consul at Philadelphia, died Sunday after a short illness.

Escrial Sammis, one of the oldest inhabitants of Long Island, died at Babylon Sunday night. He was 91 years of age.

Rev. M. J. Michelbacher, a prominent Jewish Rabbi for the past 30 years in Richmond, Va., is dead. He was 69 years of age.

Cornelis S. Danforth, mother of Judge P. S. and Gen. G. E. Danforth, died Sunday evening at Middleburg, Schoharie County, in the eighty-third year of her age. The funeral will take place at 2 P. M. on Wednesday.

THE SALARIES OF THE POLICE.

A meeting of members of the Police force was held in Military Hall last night to discuss the question of the proposed reduction of Police salaries and to take action in regard thereto. Each Police precinct was represented by two delegates. Roundsman Wiggins, of the Twenty-ninth Precinct, presided. The Chairman appointed Capt. McCullagh, of the Seventeenth Precinct; Roundsman Marvin, of the Twenty-eighth Precinct; Officer Malone, of the Tenth Precinct; Patrolman Frank Lober, of the Twenty-first Precinct, and Patrolman Christian Popde, of the Thirty-fifth Precinct, a committee to draft a resolution on the subject, and, after a brief session, they reported the following:

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to prepare and to present to the honorable Board of Police Commissioners a petition requesting their permission for the members of the Police force to contribute such an amount of money as may be found necessary to employ counsel to have the merits of the case in relation to Police salaries properly and speedily presented to the courts for adjudication.

The resolution was unanimously adopted, and the same committee which drafted the resolution was directed to present the same to the Police Board. The meeting then adjourned.

ANGORA GOATS A FAILURE.

From the San Francisco Alta, Jan. 20.

The animals have a healthy look; the fleece is beautiful and very prepossessing in appearance, the best qualities of wool command a good price, the pelts make beautiful robes and rugs, the meat of the kids is a delicacy, the tanned skins are good material for gloves; but the breeding of the Angora goat for its fleece is a failure in California, where it has now been tried 20 years, as in Kentucky and Georgia for 30 years, and in France for half a century. In five years after the first Merino sheep had been brought to California for wool-growing purposes, the first importer had made a fortune, and wool had become a prominent article of exportation. In 20 years the Angora goat wool has not been able to obtain a mention in the ordinary annual summaries of exports. The men who have goats for sale at high prices tell about shipments of Angora wool, but the records of the commercial newspapers know nothing of them, and the large shippers of wool and the annual wool circulars take no account of them. So far as we are able to learn no herd of goats in this State yields enough wool to pay the interest on their cost and the expense of keeping them; and every person prominent as the owner of them looks for his main profits not to his wool-clip, but to the purchases of his bucks by ignorant and deceived customers. The production of Angora wool may ultimately be a success in California; hitherto it has been a complete failure as a source of profit to those who made the venture. It is reported that there are 50,000 high grade goats in the State.

THE PARK DEPARTMENT.

The Park department has asked the Board of Apportionment for an appropriation of $5,000 to pay for plans and surveys for a suspension bridge over the Harlem River from a point within one mile north of the High Bridge. The board has also been asked by the Corporation Counsel to appropriate $2,500 to defray the expenses of the investigation in regard to the conduct of Justice Flaherty. No action has yet been taken on these applications.

MRS. NEWELL'S LECTURE.

Mrs. Anna Newell lectured on "Paris and the French People" before an audience of about 150 persons, last evening, at Chickering Hall. In the latter part of her lecture she drew a recessie picture of Parisian home life.

NO CLERK YET.

The Board of Police Justices met last evening, but again failed to elect a Clerk, none of the candidates having received a majority of the votes cast.

SETH GREEN ON POACHERS.

A MERRY MEETING OF SPORTSMEN.

ANNUAL GATHERING OF THE NEW-YORK ASSOCIATION FOR THE PROTECTION OF FISH AND GAME—A LETTER FROM ROCHESTER.

The annual meeting of the New-York Association for the Protection of Fish and Game was held in Martinelli's, No. 35 East Fourteenth-street, last evening. There was a full attendance, Hon. Robert B. Roosevelt presiding. The resignation of Mr. John E. Roosevelt, the son of the President, as a member was received with much astonishment, until the old gentleman explained that the young one was about to be married, whereupon the matter was made much fun of. It was moved that it lay over for three years, to give him time to repent, but others considered six months sufficient, and the latter period prevailed. The following characteristic letter from Seth Green was read amid great laughter:

ROCHESTER, Jan. 25, 1879.

MR. PRESIDENT: I regret that I cannot be with you at your annual meeting on the 27th. I have read with great satisfaction all your proceedings to enforce the Game laws, and you have done your work well. But you are not the only association that has been at work. 50 nets have been destroyed in Monroe County, and many arrests have been made, and there are now some parties in the Penitentiary paying the penalty of breaking the game laws. We had no money in the Treasury, but there are 30 gentlemen who will put their names to an agreement that they would back our game constable, and they told him to go ahead, and he has made it red-hot for all the violators of the law. But the Game law wants to be taken out of the Supervisors' hands. We presented a bill before our Board of Supervisors this Winter, and a member who had a poacher Hving in his town went against our bill for fear of losing the poacher vote. I have talked with some of the members, and they told me that they would like to see the bill passed, but a vote for it would be equivalent to staying at home next election. But I need not tell you what you know yourselves, for you have as bad a set of poachers about New-York as there is in any country, and some of the worst are parties who own fish ponds, and profess to be fish propagators. They take fish the year round, and sell them when the season opens. Dogs are good watchers. I have seven at our State ponds, and I do not believe I have ever had a fish stolen. I will tell you how I protect the creek. Flags and weeds grow along the banks of the stream, and when night-fishing season comes I have my men scatter gas-tar, diluted with turpentine, among the flags and weeds. It is very effective. I will relate an instance and show how it works. A few years ago a certain man was in the habit of stealing on the creek a few times during the night-fishing season and would not stop. He was sued, and fined $50 and $6 costs, and to keep him from going to jail and his family from suffering I paid the fine. But still he would come on; so I took the law in my own hands and prepared a bottle of the above mentioned mixture, put it into my boat, and floated down stream, and threw it with a lasso all over the flags and weeds. That night he came. The flags were as high as his head. It

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

SALES AT THE STOCK EXCHANGE—JAN. 27.

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—10:15 A. M.

U. S. 5s C. '81.	U. S. 4s R. 1907.	U. S. 4s C. 1907.
$10,000.....106⅜	$110,000.....100	$15,000.....100
10,000.....106⅛	U. S. 6-20 C. '67.	40,000.....100
10,000.....106¼	500.....101⅛

FIRST BOARD—10:30 A. M.

La. 7s con.	Erie 2d.	S. L. & S. F. 2d, cl. b.
$10,000.....64¼	4,000.....110½	2,000.....34⅝
10,000.....64⅝	N. Y. Ma. 1st.	2,000.....25
D. & C. 3.65s C.	50,000.....108	T. P. & W. 1st, W. D.
1,000.....82	Ohio & Miss. 2d.	P. C. R.
5,000.....106⅛	10,000.....86	1,000.....101⅛
C., R. I. & P. 8s.	Cen. Pac. gold.	Amer. Ex. Bank.
1917 C.	6,000.....107⅜	100.....103
1,000.....111	Pacific of Mo. 1st.	Canada Southern.
N. J. C. 1st. con 8s.	1,000.....102	100.....129
1,000.....80⅛	Gt. W. 2d, ex sp.	Erie Railway.
9,000.....80½	10,000.....86⅛	1900 b.o. s3. 26⅜
N. Y. C. conv. 6s.	E. P. 1st 7s, D. D.	1150.....26¾
2,000.....79½	with coup. cer.	L. S. & M. S.
N. Y. C. Adjm't.	1,000.....80	300.....b.c. 73⅜
2,000.....b.c. 95	2,000.....b.c. 80½	500.....b.c. 73⅝
2,000.....94⅜	8,000.....80¾	Chi. & N. W.
N. J. C. Income.	C., C. & I. C. 1st.	2300.....b.c. 65
5,000.....94	3,000.....100½	3000.....65¼
L. & W. B. con. ss.	S. L. K. C. & N. R. E.	C., C., C. & I.
5,000.....45½	7s '95.	24.....45¼
M. & St. P. 8s. 1st.	17,000.....99½	Central of N. J.
1,000.....125	Bell. & So. Ill. 1st.	100.....b.c. 42½
M. & St. P. c. & r. f.	5,000.....105	Chi. & R. I.
7,000.....103½	Pittsburg, 1st, s. fg.	100.....b.c. 127
10,000.....103½	10,000.....99	C., M. & St. P.
Mil. & St. P. L. & M.	T. & W. 2d, ex cp.	300.....b.c. 46
1,000.....105¾	10,000.....b.c. 74	300.....45⅝
M. & St. P. L. & D.	18,000.....b.c. 86¾	300.....b.c. 45⅝
2,000.....104½	5,000.....86⅞	C., M. & St. P. pf.
M. & St. P. L. & D. s.	5,000.....86¾	25.....b.c. 84
15,000.....101⅛	T. & W. con. com.	Wabash.
M. & E. 1st con.	ex coupon.	300.....b.c. 24¼
3,000.....93	10,000.....74⅜	300.....b3. 24⅜
Mor. & Ess. 7s.	10,000.....74⅝	100.....24¼
1,000.....b.c. 105	10,000.....75	Del. L. & W. West.
M. & St. Jo. 8s. con.	L. & Nash. 2d.	500.....b.c. 84⅜
5,000.....107	10,000.....b.c. 96¾	3000.....b.c. 84⅝
3,000.....107¾	N. O. & St. L. 1st.	8400.....85⅛
D. & R. G. 1st.	1,000.....99	6300.....85¼
6,000.....91⅛	10,000.....93¾	1900.....85⅜
30,000.....91¼	N. W. C. C. G.	2000.....b.c. 85⅝
5,000.....91¼	3,000 b.c. s. 108⅛	6400.....85⅝
11,000.....91⅜	A. & T. H. 1st.	1000.....85⅝
5,000.....91⅜	1,000.....111	Wabash.
Un. Pac. 1st.	C. & N. W. 1st.	100.....24⅜
5,000.....107⅜	1,000.....111⅞	300.....24⅝
12,000.....107⅝		1500.....24¾

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—2:30 P. M.

U. S. 10-40 R.	U. S. 5-20 R. '67.
$15,000.....104⅜	$50,000.b.c.101⅛

SECOND BOARD—1 P. M.

La. 7s, con.	K. P. 6s, J. & D. '96.	L. S. & M. S.
$14,000.....63	with coup. on.	1000.....b.c. 74
B. C. 6s, non-fd.	35,000.....106	700.....74⅛
7,000.....1¼	K. P. 1st 7s, D. Div.	1700.....74¼
N. J. C. Adjm't.	with cp. ow.	1800.....74⅜
8,000.....94½	10,000.....80¾	1000.....74½
20,000.....94⅝	B. C. R. & N. 1st.	100.....b.c. 87½
M. & O. conv. ss.	6,000.....b.s. 71	100.....87¾
1,000.....84	1000.....b.s. 2d. pf.	100 p. c. d.
L. & W. B. con.	1,000.....93	20.....99⅝
2,000.....84	3,000.....82	400.....b.c. 98
L. & N. B. con.	Chi. & Alton.	Central of N. J.
20,000.....45	10,000.....117	1000.....b.c. 42⅜
M. & St. P. 8s. 1st.	Can. Pac. gold.	125.....42⅞
10,000.....b.60. 107½	10,000.....107½	100.....43
M. & St. P. 1st, L. & D. s.	T. & W. 1st. S. L. D.	100.....43⅛
2,000.....101⅞	x mat. coupon.	100.....43¼
2,000.....98⅛	2,000.....95¾	300.....43⅜
M. & St. P. con. s. f.	2,000.....95¾	300.....43⅝
5,000.....98⅛	T. & W. 2d, x. cp.	Wabash.
C., C. & I. 1st.	12,000.....86¾	100.....b.c. 24⅛
10,000.....114⅜	L. & Nash. 2d.	100.....24⅜
10,000.....114½	12,000.....86¾	C., M. & St. P.
D. L. & W. 7s. 1907.	L. & Nash. 2d.	200.....b.c. 46¾
7,000.....104⅞	10,000.....87¼	100.....b.s. 46⅞
Mex. 6s, 1st.	K. & D. M. 1st.	C., M. & St. P. pf.
5,000.....98⅜	1,000.....88¼	400.....b.c. 84⅝
M., K. & T. s. a. 7s.	500.....b. 88½	100.....b.c. 84¾
M., K. & T. 2d.	Homestake M. Co.	1500.....b.c. 54⅞
3,000.....15⅜	1000.....b.s. 25	2000.....b.s. 55
5,000.....15⅝	Erie Railway.	Han. & St. Jo. pf.
Can. So. 1st g'd.	1800.....b.c. 26⅞	200.....b.c. 99¾
$5,000.....78⅜	1000.....b.c. 26¾	Central of N. J.
Erie 4th.	2000.....26⅞	1000.....b.c. 42⅜
10,000.....106	Erie Railway pf.	200.....42⅝
N. Y. Elc. 1st.	1,000.....b.s. 49	Canada Southern.
1,000.....106⅛	100.....s20. 48⅝	100.....b.c. 55⅛
Pacific of Mo. 1st.	Michigan Central.	100.....55¼
1,000.....108	300.....b.s. 89⅞	Ohio & Miss.
Pacific of Mo. 2d.	100.....b.c. 89⅞	150.....b.c. 10⅝
1,000.....105	C., C. & I.
L. S. 2d con.	100.....b.c. 127
5,000.....b.s. 108⅜	Ohio & Miss.
Southern Pac. 1st.	100.....b.c. 10
1,000.....101⅛	400.....b.c. 127⅜

SALES FROM 2:30 TO 3 P. M.

Tenn. 6s, new ser.	Erie Railway.	Kansas & Texas.
$5,000.....28	1800.....28⅛	100.....6⅜
Louisiana consol.	2000.....28⅜	200.....6
2000.....b.c. 51½	2000.....b.10. 28⅝	Kansas Pacific.
N. J. C. conv. ss.	10.....28⅞	500.....12⅛
3,000.....80¼	1300.....28⅝	500.....12¾
N. J. C. Adjm't.	1000.....28¾	Lake Shore.
15,000.....80¾	2200.....28⅞	100.....46⅜
N. J. C. Adjm't.	3500.....28⅞	1700.....46¾
10,000.....95	Erie Railway pf.	100.....47
N. Y. Elc.	100.....s20. 48¼	200.....47⅛
10,000.....106⅛	100.....48¼	200.....46⅝
5,000.....106⅜	100.....s15. 48¾	400.....46¾
20,000.....106¾	100.....48¾	800.....46⅞
D. & R. G. 1st.	100.....s10. 49	500.....47
20,000.....91⅜	100.....s3. 49	300.....b.s. 47⅛
Jefferson 1st.	300.....49	300.....47⅜
2,000.....90	100.....s3. 49	300.....47⅝
M., K. & T., s. a.	100.....s3. 49⅜	300.....47¾
10,000.....80	100.....s20. 49⅝	100.....47⅞
M., K. & T. 2d.	100.....s20. 49	100.....48
50,000.....15	Michigan Central.	300.....48⅛
10,000.....15⅛	300.....b.c. 89⅜	Mo., Kan. & Texas.
N. W. C. C. G.	1800.....89¼	200.....9⅜
10,000.....106⅞	2400.....90	St. Paul pf.
10,000.....106⅞	100.....90	600.....84⅛
D., L. & W. 1st.	100.....90¼	600.....84⅜
10,000.....71⅛	200.....90⅜	600.....84⅝
10,000.....71¾	100.....90½	3000.....84⅞
Ohio & Miss. 2d.	Lake Shore.	8400.....85⅛
5,000.....88⅛	1810.....74⅛	6300.....85¼
Can. So. 1st g'd.	1900.....74⅜	1900.....85⅜
20,000.....78⅜	700.....74⅝	8400.....85⅝
L. S. con. 2d coup.	200.....74¾	6300.....85¾
1,000.....108½	1200.....74⅞	1900.....85⅞
L. S. reg. 2d.	2000.....b.s. 74⅞	8400.....85⅞
3,000.....108½	4800.....74⅞	1000.....85⅞
Ket. Eic. 1st.	Chi. Bur. & Q.	Wabash.
1,000.....98⅛	100.....117⅛	100.....24⅜
L. & W. B. con. ss.	200.....117⅜	300.....24⅝
5,000.....45	50.....117	1500.....24⅞
Wells-Fargo Ex.	Fort Wayne.	1000.....25
107.....97½	65.....106¼	100.....b.s. 25
American Ex.	5.....106¾	815.....24⅞
10.....48¼	North-west.	2000.....24⅞
10.....47⅝	6300.....64⅞	300.....24⅞
Delaware & Hud.	6300.....65	Han. & St. Jo.
200.....44⅝	1400.....b.s. 65¼	100.....b.c. 15¼
200.....44⅞	1000.....b.s. 65⅜	H. & St. Jo. pf.
100.....44⅝	100.....65⅝	100.....39¾
100.....44¾	1800.....65	100.....39¼
200.....44⅜	100.....65	100.....39
North-west pf.	C., C. & I. C.
100.....45	1900.....87⅛	200.....5⅝
100.....b.c. 135	1900.....87¼	St. L. K. C. & N. R.
1420.....87⅞	300.....87⅞	300.....37¼
2600.....b.s. 87⅞	100.....b.s. 37⅜	100.....37⅝
100.....88	2700.....88¼	300.....37⅞
2600.....b.s. 88¼	St. L., K. C. & N.	100.....38
100.....46¼	100.....46¼	1010.....9
100.....46⅜	100.....46⅝	Morris & Essex.
74.....46⅝	2000.....47	200.....85¼
2000.....47	200.....47¼	200.....85¾
200.....47⅛	400.....47⅜	200.....86
400.....47⅝	200.....47⅝	200.....86¼
Rock Island.	100.....127½	1700.....86
100.....128	1000.....128	200.....86¼
100.....128¼	100.....b.c. 127⅞	New-Jersey So.
100.....127⅝	10.....127⅝	400.....128
Ohio & Miss.	200.....11	Canada Southern.
200.....10	400.....10⅜	100.....10⅝
100.....10⅛	400.....10⅞	100.....10⅝
N. Y. C. & H.	100.....10⅞	100.....10⅝
100.....116⅛	Central of N. J.	100.....10⅝
200.....115⅞	1200.....43⅛	100.....10⅝
100.....115⅝	300.....43⅜	700.....10⅝
100.....115⅜	300.....43⅝	100.....10⅝
100.....115⅛	300.....43¾	100.....10⅝
107.....116	700.....43⅞	100.....10⅝
Illinois Central.	300.....43⅞	200.....10⅝
100.....b.c. 87⅛	300.....43⅞	200.....10⅝
200.....87¼	300.....43⅞	100.....10⅝
Union Pacific.	St. L. & I. M.	300.....10⅝
100.....b.c. 84⅝	100.....44⅛	100.....10⅝
100.....84¾	A. & T. H.	100.....10⅝
128.....68	200.....43⅞
100.....67	300.....43⅞

SLINING STOCK EXCHANGE SALES—JAN. 27.

(All Prices are in Currency.)

FIRST CALL—11 A. M.

Lacrosse.	Bertha & Edith.	Buckeye.
100.....b.s. .32	100.....b.c. .13	500.....b.c. .12
100.b.c.s. .33	1000.....s.c. .12	500.....b.c. .14
100.....b.s. .32	1000.....s.c. .13	500.....b.c. .15
100.b.c.10. .33	500.....b.c. .13	100.b.c.b30. .16
100.....s3. .32	500.....b.s. .13	500.b.c.b30. .15
100.....b.s. .33	1000.....b.s. .13	500.b.c.b30. .16
Consol. Va.	100.....b.s. .14	100.....b.c. .13
20.....8⅜	100.b.c.b60. .15	100.....b.s. .12
20.....8⅝	100.b.c.b60. .15	Dahlonega.
20.....b30. 8⅜	1000.....b.c. 86⅜	500.....b.c. .21
10.....s. 8	1000.....b.c. 86¾	500.b.c.b30. .21
Dahlonega.	500.b.c.b30. .14	100.....b.c. .21
500.b.c.b30. .16	500.b.c.b30. .14	100.....b.c. .21
1000.....b3. .16	1000.....b.c. .14	100.....b.c. .21
500.b.c.10. .16	200.....s3. .14	Elmer.
Trio.	.70	100.....b.c. .20
100.....50	Buckeye.	200.....b.c. .20
500.....b.c. .12	500.....b.c. .12	100.....b.c. .20
500.....51	500.....b.c. .12	100.....b.c. .20

SECOND CALL—1 P. M.

Bertha & Edith.	Trio.	Lacrosse.
100.....b.c. .13	100.....c. .50	1000 beb25. .32
100.....b.c. .13	100.....b.c. .50	1000 b.c.b25. .33
1000.....b.c. .13	Consol. Va.	500.b.c.b30. .33
1000.b.s.b60. .13	10.....s.b5. 8⅜	500.....s. .32
500.....b.c. .13	20.....s.c. 8	1000.....s.c. .32
500.....b.c. .13	Buckeye.	1000.....s.c. .32
200.....b.c. .13	500.b.c.s3. .13	Gold Placer.
100.....b.c. .13	1000.b.c.s. .12	1000.....b.c. .18
California.	400.b.10. .13
20.....b. 10

THIRD CALL—2:30 P. M.

Buckeye.	Buckeye.	Consol. Va.
100.b.b30. .14	400.....b10. .16	5.....b. 8
100.b.b30. .14	300.....s.c. .16	30.....s. 8
500.b.b30. .14	500.....s.c. .16	Gold Placer.
100.b.c.s. .13	500.....s.c. .16	500.....b.c. .19
100.....b.s. .14	500.....s.c. .16	500.....b.c. .20
100.....b.s. .14	1000.b.c.b30. .14	Lacrosse.
100.b.b30. .14	1000.b.c.b30. .15	100.....b60. .34
100.b.b30. .15	1000.b.c.....14	Trio.
100.b.b30. .16	1000.b.c.....14	100.....b30. .54
500.b.b30. .15	800.b.b60. .15	500.....51
500.b.b30. .16	500.b.b30. .15	500.....51
500.b.b30. .16	500.b.b10. .14	500.....52
500.b.c.b10. .16	500.b.c.b10. .14	500.....52
500.b.c.b10. .16	500.b.b10. .14	1000.....b30. 53
500.b.c.b10. .16	1000.....b10. .15	Dahlonega.
500.b.c.b10. .16	900.....b10. .14	500.....b10. .16
500.b.c.b10. .16	California.	Savage.
500.b.c.b10. .16	20.....b. .97½	100.....s.c. .45
500.b.c.b10. .16	20.....s.c. .97½	Independence.
500.b.c.b10. .16	10.....b. 10	100.b.c.s3. .55
500.b.c.b10. .16	10.....s.c. 10	100.....s.a1. .50
500.b.c.b10. .16	Grand Prize.	Bodie.
100.....b.c. .16	25 h.s.c. .15	10.....s. .8

MONDAY, Jan. 27—P. M.

The transactions on the Stock Exchange to-day were again immense in volume, and the dealings at intervals were attended with great excitement. The purchasing movement both for speculative and investment account commenced and the market responded in an advance ranging from 1 to 3½ ₱ cent. Attempts were occasionally made to depress prices with the view of shaking out weak holders and obtain fresh lines of stock, but the efforts in this direction met with very indifferent success, as each decline invariably brought in strong buyers, whose purchases quickly imparted renewed buoyancy to the market. At the close, in a majority of instances, the quotations current were about the highest of the day. The stocks most conspicuous in the upward movement were Canada Southern, which advanced 5⅜ ₱ cent; Michigan Central, 3¾; St. Paul Common, 3⅜; Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, 2⅜; New-Jersey Central, 2⅜; North-western preferred, 2¼, and Rock Island, St. Paul preferred, and Morris and Essex, 2 ₱ cent. The speculation in the Granger shares was exceedingly active, and North-western and St. Paul recorded a sharp advance on the day's transactions for both the common and preferred stocks. The inquiry for these shares proceeding from Western buyers is stated to be very large. Erie was again quite prominent in the dealings. The course of the stock indicated that the bull clique deem their present following inconveniently large, and are unwilling to see a slight reaction, preparatory to an upward movement. The strength of the coal shares was principally due to reports, which were believed to be well founded, that an advance in the prices of coal was imminent.

The transactions aggregated 407,806 shares, including 74,110 North-western, 68,016 Erie, 54,200 Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, 53,000 Lake Shore, 48,160 St. Paul, 18,075 New-Jersey Central, 14,325 Michigan Central, 9,224 Morris and Essex, 7,140 St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern, 5,500 Western Union, 5,098 Ohio and Mississippi, 4,600 C. C. C. and I., 4,600 Canada Southern, 3,960 Central Pacific, 3,920 Homestake Mining Company, 2,900 Hannibal and St. Joseph, 2,135 Rock Island, 2,050 Delaware and Hudson, 1,960 New-York Central, 1,650 Missouri, Kansas and Texas, 1,520 Pittsburg, 1,450 New-Jersey Southern, 1,400 Kansas Pacific, 1,120 Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, and 1,100 Chicago and Alton.

North-western common advanced from 64¼ to 65⅝, and closed at 65. The preferred opened at 86¾, against 86 at the close on Saturday, and advanced to 88¼, leaving off at the highest point. St. Paul common opened at 45, against 44⅜ at the close on Saturday, rose to 46⅛, receded to 45¼, and finally sold up to 47⅜. The preferred advanced nearly 2 ₱ cent., closing at 85, the highest point of the day. Erie rose from 26¾ to 27⅞, fell off to 25⅜, recovered to 26⅞ and closed at 26½. The preferred opened at 49 and closed at 49½ bid. Lake Shore advanced 1½ ₱ cent., to 74⅝, and finally sold at 74⅞. Canada Southern rose 5⅜ to 56¾, and reacted 2½ ₱ cent. at the close. Michigan Central opened 2⅜ ₱ cent higher, at 88⅞, and after frequent fluctuations, reached 90¼, with the last sale at 89⅞. Delaware, Lackawanna and Western rose from 54¾ to 55, fell off to 54¼, and advanced to 55⅝. New-Jersey Central advanced 2⅜ ₱ cent., to 43⅞, and closed within a fraction of the highest price. Morris and Essex rose 2 ₱ cent., to 86¼. Delaware and Hudson fell off from 45 to 44¼, and recovered to the former figure. Wabash declined from 24⅝ to 23⅝, and rose to 25. Ohio and Mississippi common declined from 11⅛ to 10½, and closed at 10⅞. The preferred dropped from 33 to 31½, and rallied to 31⅞. Union Pacific rose from 68 to 68½, and declined to 67. Kansas Pacific advanced from 11⅜ to 12⅛. St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern from 8¾ to 9. The preferred from 35½ to 37½. Missouri, Kansas and Texas fell off from 6⅜ to 6. Hannibal and St. Joseph rose from 15 to 15¼ for the common, and from 38⅜ to 39⅜ for the preferred. C., C., C. and I. after selling down to 44⅞, advanced steadily to 47⅜. Pacific Mail declined from 23⅜ to 23. Western Union fluctuated between 97⅞ and 98⅞. Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph ranged between 36⅜ and 38⅞. Among investment shares Chicago, Burlington and Quincy advanced 2½ ₱ cent., to 117½; Rock Island 2 ₱ cent., to 128; Chicago and Alton, 1½ ₱ cent., to 87½; Illinois Central 1 ₱ cent., to 87½; New-York Central 2⅛ ₱ cent., to 116, and Pittsburg 5⅜ ₱ cent., to 93.

The Money market was extremely easy, with free offerings to call borrowers at 1½@2½ ₱ cent. The large gain in the bank reserves last week has increased the disposition to lend Money at the best rates obtainable. Prime mercantile paper sold at 3½@5 ₱ cent.

The foreign advices reported the London market for American railway shares strong. Illinois Central advanced 1½ ₱ cent., to 88; Erie preferred 1½, to 49, and do. common ¼, to 27⅜. Pennsylvania sold at 35¼@35½. New-Jersey Central declined ⅛ ₱ cent., to 44⅛, and do. consolidated Firsts ⅜, to 93⅜. United States 4½s advanced ⅛ to 108⅞, and 1867s ⅛ to 103⅜. New 5s declined ⅛, to 107⅛; 10-40s were steady at 107½. Consols were unchanged at 95⅞@96 for both money and the account. Bar Silver declined to 50¾d. ₱ ounce. The weekly statement of the Imperial Bank of Germany shows an increase in specie of 9,023,000 marks. At Paris, Rentes fell off to 114f. 7½c.

The Sterling Exchange market was irregular and rather weak in tone. There was some demand for bills against called bonds arriving from Europe to-day, but the inquiry from this source exercised scarcely any influence on quotations. Commercial bills were in good supply. The nominal rates for bankers' bills were reduced from $4 86 and $4 89 to $4 85½ and $4 88½, with actual business at $4 84½@$4 85 for long, and at $4 87½@$4 87¾ for demand sterling. Cables sold at $4 88¼@$4 88⅜, and commercial at $4 82½@$4 83.

Government bonds were fairly active and prices were a fraction higher for 10-40s, 1867s and 5s, 1881. The subscriptions to the 4 ₱ cent. loan at Washington to-day were $5,100,000. It is expected that the Treasury will to-morrow issue a call for $20,000,000 1867s for redemption. Railroad mortgages were in brisk demand at advancing prices. The improvement ranged from ⅛ to 3½ ₱ cent., the latter in Toledo and Wabash consolidated convertible, ex coupon, which sold up to 75. Do. Seconds rose to 86⅞, and St. Louis Division, ex matured coupon, 95½. St. Paul, I and D. Extension, advanced 101⅞; Ohio, consolidated Sinking Funds, to 103½; do. I. and D. Division, 104½; Denver and Rio Grande Firsts to 91½; New-Jersey Central adjustment to 95; do. consolidated Firsts, assented, to 81; do. convertible assented to 80¾. Morris and Essex 7s of 1871 to 105. Hannibal and St. Joseph convertible to 107¼. Erie Thirds to 110½. Ohio and Mississippi Seconds to 87. Kansas Pacific 7s, Denver Division, with coupon certificates, to 80⅜; do. 6s, J. & D. of 1896, with coupon certificates, to 106; Missouri, Kansas and Texas Seconds to 16 do. consolidated assented to 50½. New-York Elevated Firsts to 106¾. Metropolitan Elevated Firsts to 96¾. C., C. & I. Firsts to 114½, and Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern Firsts to 71¼. Lehigh and Wilkesbarre consolidated assented declined to 45, and C., C. & I. C. Firsts to 60. In State bonds, Louisiana Consols declined from 64¼ to 63. District of Columbia 3.65s rose to 82, and fell off to 81⅜. Tennessee new series sold at 26.

UNITED STATES TREASURY, { NEW-YORK, Jan. 27, 1879.

Receipts	$2,178,173 79
Payments	2,598,623 58
Balances, coin	114,808,614 78
Balances, notes	44,917,405 76
United States notes redeemed	130,420 00
Coin received for United States notes	20,000 00

CLOSING QUOTATIONS—JAN. 27.

	Saturday.	Monday.
United States 4½s, 1891, coup	106⅜	106⅜
United States 5s, 1881, coup	106⅜	106¼
United States 5-20s, 1867, coup	101¾	101¾
Bills on London	$4 84½@$4 85	$4 84½@$4 85
New-York Central	115¼	116
Rock Island	126	128
Pacific Mail	13⅛	13⅝
Milwaukee and St. Paul	44⅜	47⅜
Milwaukee and St. Paul pref	83	85
Lake Shore	73½	74⅜
Chicago and North-western	63⅞	65
Chicago and North-western pref	86	88¼
Western Union	97	97⅞
Union Pacific	67⅜	67
Delaware, Lack. and Western	54⅛	55⅜
New-Jersey Central	41⅜	43⅞
Delaware and Hudson Canal	44⅞	44⅞
Morris and Essex	84¾	86¼
Panama	128	128
Ontario	26⅜	26⅜
Erie, preferred	49	49⅜
Ohio and Mississippi	10⅝	10⅞
Harlem	142	142
Hannibal and St. Joseph	15¼	15¼
Hannibal and St. Joseph preferred	35⅝	39
Michigan Central	88½	89⅞
Illinois Central	86½	87¼
Wabash	24	24⅜
Canada Southern	51	56¼
Iron Mountain	16½	16½
Pittsburg	92⅝	93
C., C. C. and I	46	47⅜
Chicago, Burlington & Quincy	114⅜	117⅜

The extreme range of prices in stocks and the number of shares sold are as follows:

	Highest.	Lowest.	No. of Shares.
New-York Central	116	115¼	1,960
Canada Southern	56⅞	51	4,600
Erie	27⅜	25⅜	64,566
Erie pref	49⅜	48⅞	2,350
Lake Shore	74⅞	73⅜	53,000
Wabash	25	23⅝	18,160
North-western	65⅜	64	39,000
North-western pref	88¼	86⅜	35,110
Rock Island	128	126¼	2,135
Milwaukee & St. Paul	47⅜	44⅜	27,320
Mil. & St. Paul pref	85	83¼	10,238
Pittsburg	93	92⅝	1,520
Del., Lack. & Western	55⅝	54¼	54,200
New-Jersey Central	43⅞	41⅜	18,075
Delaware & Hudson Canal	45	44⅛	2,050
Western Union	98⅛	97⅛	5,500
Pacific Mail	23⅜	23	1,120
Ohio & Mississippi	11⅛	10½	5,098
Ohio & Mississippi pref	33	31½	300
Illinois Central	87⅞	86	1,120
C., C. & Ind. Central	47⅜	44⅞	700
Hannibal & St. Joseph	15¼	15	900
Hannibal & St. Joseph pf.	39¾	38⅜	2,000
Ohio & Mississippi	11⅜	10⅛	4,798
Ohio & Mississippi pref	33	31½	300
Western Union	97⅞	97	5,500
A. & P. Telegraph	38⅞	36⅜	446
Pacific Mail	13⅜	13	575
St. L., K. C. & N	9	8⅞	2,240
St. L., K. C. & N. pref	37¾	36½	4,900
Kansas Pacific	12⅜	11¾	1,400
Homestake Mining Co	26	23¾	3,920
New-Jersey Southern	3¼	3	1,450
Iron Mountain	16½	16½	400
Mo., Kan. & Texas	6¾	6	1,550
Total sales			407,806

The following were the closing quotations of Government bonds:

	Bid.	Asked.
United States currency 6s	120½	121
United States 6s, 1881, registered	106⅝	106⅞
United States 6s, 1881, coupon	106⅝	106⅞
United States 5-20s, 1867, registered	101⅜	101⅞
United States 5-20s, 1867, coupon	101¾	101⅞
United States 5-20s, 1868, registered	102	103
United States 5-20s, 1868, coupon	102⅜	103
United States 10-40s, registered	104½	104⅝
United States 10-40s, coupon	104¾	105
United States 5s, 1881, registered	105	105¼
United States 5s, 1881, coupon	105⅜	105⅝
United States 4½s, 1891, registered	106	106¼
United States 4½s, 1891, coupon	106⅛	106¼
United States 4s, 1907, registered	100	100⅜
United States 4s, 1907, coupon	100	100⅜

The following is the Clearing-house statement to-day:

Exchanges	$107,700,922
Balances	3,524,120

The following were the bids for the various State securities:

Alabama 5s, '83	45	N. Y. 6s, G. C., '87	110
Alabama 5s, '86	45	N. Y. 6s, G. L., '91	120
Alabama 8s, '86	45	N. Y. 6s, G. L., '92	120
Alabama 8s, '88	45	N. C. 6s, C. & I., '83	121
Alabama 8s, '92	20	N. C. 6s, N. C. R. R., '83	67
Alabama 8s, '93	20	N. C. 6s, do. Ap. & Oct.	67
Ark. 6s, F. '99-1900	20	N. C. 6s, do. c. off J. & J.	67
Ark. 7s, L. R. & F. Ss	4	N. C. 6s, do. c. off A. & O.	67
Ark. 7s, M. & L. R.	4	N. C. 6s, F. A. '68-'98-1900	10
Ark. 7s, LITTLE ROCK & N. O.	4	N. C. 6s, F. A. '68-'98	10
Ark. 7s, M. O. & R. R.	4	N. C. 6s, n. bs. 92-'98	9
Ark. 7s, A. C. R. R.	4	N. C. 6s, n. bs., A. & O.	9
Conn. 6s, '83-'84	105	N. C. 6s, Sp. T. el. 1	2¾
Ga. 6s, '79-80-86-1022	104	N. C. 6s, Sp. T. el. 2	2¾
Ga. 7s, n. bs., '86-1082	95	N. C. 6s, Sp. T., el. 3	2
Ga. 7s, ind. 1886-1082	95	Ohio 6s, 1881	104
Ga. 7s, n. bs., 1900	108	Ohio 6s, 1886	106
Illinois W. Loan	101	Rhode Island 6s, C. 1110
Kentucky 6s	101	South Carolina 6s	25
Louisiana 6s	48	S. C. 6s, J. & July	10
Louisiana 6s, n. bs.	48	S. C. 6s, Ap. & Oct.	10
Louisiana 7s, Ex. Ctf.	48	S. C. 6s, F. Ass. '86	10
Louisiana 7s, Pen'y	48	S. C. 6s, L. C. '89, J. & J.	10
Louisiana 6s, L. bs.	48	S. C. 6s, L. C. '89, A. & O.	10
Louisiana 8s, L. bs.	48	S. C. 7s, n. fdd.	10
Louisiana 8s, L. s. fd.	48	S. C. 7s, of 1868	10
La. 7s, C. 1914	63⅞	S. C. 7s, non-fund. bs.	1¼
Mo. 6s, due '82 or '83	102	Tenn. 6s, n. bs., n. ser.	25
Mo. 6s, due '86	104	Tenn. 6s, old	25
Mo. 6s, due '88	104½	Va. 6s, n. bds. '66	25½
Mo. 6s, due '89 or '90	104¾	Va. 6s, n. bds. '67	25½
Mo. 6s, Asylum or Univ.	105	Va. 6s, Consol. bds.	74
Mo. 6s, Pac. R. loan	104¾	Va. 6s, C. 2d series	35
Mo. H. & St. J. due '86	103½	Va. 6s, Def. bonds	6

THE REAL ESTATE MARKET.

The following business was transacted at the Exchange yesterday, Monday, Jan. 27:

William Kennelly, foreclosure sale, William Sinclair, Jr., Referee, sold the two-story brick dwelling, with lot 25 by 100, No. 206 Spring-st., south side, west of Sullivan-st., for $8,000, to Broadway Savings Institution, plaintiff.

Richard V. Harnett, foreclosure sale, Alfred Wagstaff, Esq., Referee, sold two lots, each 25 by 100, on 106th-av., east side, 54.4 feet north of 74th-st., for $5,000, to Charles S. and John S. Watkins, as Executors and plaintiffs.

John T. Boyd, foreclosure sale, Isaac L. Miller, Esq., Referee, sold two lots, each 25 by 100, on Avenue A, west side, 50.10 feet south of 122d-st., for $3,200, to Nicholas Espenscheid, plaintiff.

Scott & Myers, foreclosure sale, James M. Brady, Esq., Referee, sold a plot of land, 278 by 210 by 148 by 200, on Union-av., east side, adjoining lands of St. John's College, and running through to Bronx River; also, six lots, each 25 by 200, on Union-av., west side, adjoining lands of P. M. Lydig, at Fordham, for $1,500, to William F. Woodcock, plaintiff.

Richard Field, foreclosure sale, Valentine Cook, Jr., Referee, sold a two-story frame house, with lot 26 by 100, on Cleveland-av., east side, 74 feet north of Milton-st., 23d Ward, for $1,882, to Robert Simpson.

The remaining sales were adjourned as follows: Sale by Richard V. Harnett of a plot of land on 106th-st., between 212th and 213d sts., to Feb. 10; also, the house, with lot, No. 1,317 4th-av., south of 86th-st., nine dis.

RECORDED REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

NEW-YORK.

Saturday, Jan. 25.

82d-st., s. s., 50 ft. e. of Madison-av., 10x100.5; Edward Brady to Willett Brown $4,000
Thompson-st., Nos. 28½ and 30, 38.4x100.5; Jennet Curry to Benjamin Hutchinson 11,750
124th-st., n. s., 75 ft. w. of 1st-av., 25x100.11; Benjamin Hutchinson to Jennet Curry 9,000
124th-st., n. s., 94 ft. w. of 1st-av., 19.9x100.11; same to same 8,000
110th-st., e. s., between 1st and 2d avs.; Alfred Colvill to Eucenia Furson 200
42d-st., n. s., 618 ft. e. of 9th-av., 16x98.5; Elisabeth R. Styles and husband to Frances Page ..... nom.
Avenue B, s. w. corner of 18th-st., 20x60; Charles E. Millbank and others, Executors, to Thomas Cunningham 9,250
169th-st., n. s., 350 ft. e. of Courtlandt-av., 25x100; John Bender and wife to John Gasse 619
74th-st., n. s., 125 ft. e. of 11th-av., 175x75.6; irregular; Thomas J. O'Reilly and wife to Ramon Martinez Hernandez ..... nom.
Same property; Ramon Martinez Hernandez to Ramon Martinez Hernandez ..... nom.
2d-av., n. w. corner of 52d-st., 25.5x70; John F. Bell and wife to John A. Hall 20,000
Avenue B, s. w. corner of 18th-st., 20x60; A. Johnes, Referee, to Charles E. Millbanks, and others, Executors 7,000
Morning-side-av., n. w. corner of 120th-st., 100x138.4; Patrick Callaghan to William J. Demorest 13,000
11th-av., s. e. corner of 54th-st., 20x72; John Hof-fich and wife to Emil Gabler 200
81st-st., 75 ft. e. of 1st-av., 100x102.2; John H. Deane and wife to Julius Gilsey 11,000
22d-st., s. s., 236.6 ft. e. of 1st-av., 23.9x94; John Rogan, Jr., and wife to William O'Brien 500
97th-st., n. s., 295 ft. w. of 10th-av., 50x98.9; William M. Kingsland, Executor, to George L. Kingsland, Executor 8,000
Lexington-av., s. e. corner of 44th-st., 14.4x85; Ira E. Doying and wife to Catharine M. Torrey ..... nom.
4th-av., n. w. corner of 111th-st., 154x100.11; Sarah E. Cornish, Executrix, to Edwin Dobbs ..... nom.

LEASES RECORDED.

Rivington-st., No. 101; Fredericka E. Roke, Administratrix, to John E. Beckmann, 8 years $770
12th-st., East, No. 138; Edward S. Mayer to Samuel W. Davis, 21 years 136
Mercer-st., No. 804; Timothy Brennan to John Maguire, 5 years 800
Sixth-av., No. 82, rear of; Andrew Milligan to Lemuel W. Davis, 21 years 80
Spring-st., No. 124; Wyllie Blackstone to John C. Frank, 3 years 1,100

MORTGAGES RECORDED.

Bertrand, Jacob, and wife to Marie F. Finken, guardian, &c.; w. s. 9th-av., s. of 40th-st., 3 years $3,000
Brogan, Eliza, to William H. Austin; s. s. Downing-st., Nos. 5 and 6, 3 years 5,500
Davies, H. R., and wife to Annie McFeat; s. s. 114th-st., w. of 4th-av., 1 year 1,000
Davis, L. W., to Margaret D. Stelle; No. 132 East 12th-st., 5 years 1,000
Forster, George W., and wife to H. W. Foster; s. s. 9th-av., w. of 170th-st., 1 year 4,500
Gilsey, Julius, and wife to Samuel S. Constant; n. s. 81st-st., w. of 1st-av., 3 months 9,000
Goldman, Augusta L., and husband to Morris and Louis Josephthal; s. s. 51st-st., e. of 8th-av., 5 years 6,000
Goldman, Auraura L., to Rosalie Gluteman; same property, 2 years 2,500
Laufersweiler, Franz, to Clara B. Sutton and others, Executors, &c.; Nos. 617 and 619 West 27th-st., 10 years 2,166
Laufersweiler, Franz, to George L. Kingsland and others, Executors, &c.; same property, 10 years 2,167
Laufersweiler, Franz, to William M. Kingsland, as Executor, &c.; same property, 10 years 2,167
Hutchinson, Benjamin, to Jennet Curry; Nos. 29½ and 30 Thompson-st., 1 year 7,750
New-York Presbyterian Church to the Presbytery of New-York; s. and n. lots, s. s. of 69th-st., demand 8,000
Noble, William, and wife to Emma Gilson; s. s. 85th-st., w. of 4th-av., and n. s. 83d-st., 5 years 24,000
Noble, William, and wife to John Taylor; s. s. 86th-st., corner of 4th-av., 5 years 12,000
Pirson, Janette, to the Citizens' Savings Bank; No. 122 Pearl-st. and No. 36 Water-st., 5 years. 20,000
Welch, Thomas, and wife to Thomas A. Emmet, Wyckoff; s. s. 121st-st., w. of 2d-av., 1 year 3,000

ASSIGNMENTS OF MORTGAGE.

Ball, George, to Isaac T. Meyer $6,210
Housman, James A., to Helen Weed 4,010

CITY REAL ESTATE.

FOR SALE—AN ASSORTMENT OF HOUSES, at gold prices, from $3,500 to $15,000. Situate on 82d, 81st, 80th, and 79th sts. Two beautiful corners, 79th and 80th sts. and 1st-av; desirable as an investment. Call and see them. Office, corner 79th-st. and 1st-av.

FOR SALE—IN 68TH-ST., COMMENCING 225 feet east of 5th-av., five houses, varying in size from 18 to 22 feet front; three of these houses have dining-room extensions 16x26 feet; this location is one of the best in this City. Inquire of ANTHONY MOWBRAY on the premises.

FOR SALE—HANDSOME FOUR-STORY BROWN-stone dwelling, fronting on Stuyvesant (westerly) Park; a bargain to a prompt purchaser. Permits and information of O. G. BENNET, No. 111 Broadway, Room B.

FOR SALE—ON WEST 57TH-ST., NEAR 8TH-av., an elegant four-story brown-stone house; cabinet finish and all modern improvements. Built expressly for the owner. Apply at No. 160 Fulton-st., Room 10.

NO. 210 EAST 16TH-ST., NEAR STUYVESANT PARK.—Well located, fine, medium-size dwelling; basement, parlor floor, &c. STEVENSON, Jr., office, 4 Pine, 35 East 17th-st., and 661 5th-av.

HARLEM—RAPID TRANSIT.

Houses, stores, and floors, to let and for sale.
PORTER & CO., No. 173 East 125th-st.

REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION.

ADRIAN H. MULLER, Auctioneer.

ESTATE OF JOHN H. POWERS, DECEASED.

EXECUTOR'S SALE OF VALUABLE IMPROVED AND UNIMPROVED PROPERTY.

ADRIAN H. MULLER & SON will sell at auction on TUESDAY, Jan. 28, at 12 o'clock, at the Exchange Sales-room, No. 111 Broadway, the following described real estate:

FOURTH-AVENUE.—The four-story brick stores, with lease of lots, situate on the north-east corner of 4th-av. and 11th-st., Nos. 93, 95, 97, 99, and 101 4th-av. The leases are up in May next.

SIXTH AND FIRST STREETS.—The brick stores and lot No. 26 Stone and No. 61 Pearl-st., running through from Pearl to Stone-st.

CANAL AND MOTT STREETS.—The brick and frame buildings and lots Nos. 178 and 180 Canal-st., corner of Mott-st.

THIRD-AVENUE, SIXTY-SIXTH AND SIXTY-SEVENTH STREETS.—Eight lots, comprising the entire easterly front on 3d-av., between 66th and 67th sts., and 14 lots on 66th-st., and 14 lots on 67th-st., commencing 100 feet east of the 3d-av.; street lots are each 25x100 feet, except the two easterly lots on each street, which are 30x100 feet each.

ELM-STREET.—The lot on the north-west corner of Elm and Catharine-lane.

FORTY-SECOND-STREET.—One lot, south side, 300 feet west of 7th-av., 25x98.9.

SIXTY-EIGHTH AND SIXTY-NINTH STREETS.—Six lots, north side of 68th-st., 323 feet west of 8th-av., and four lots, south side of 69th-st., 375 feet west of 8th-av.

RIVERSIDE-AVENUE.—Seven lots on easterly side of Riverside-av., 228 feet north of 116th-st., and opposite Riverside Park.

TWELFTH-AVENUE.—Plot of water lots on 12th-av., between 118th and 119th sts., opposite Riverside Park.

EIGHTY-FIFTH-STREET.—One lot, south side, between 11th and Riverside avs.

TWENTY-A-VENUE.—One water-lot, north-east corner 94th-st.

SOUTHER DUTCH, CREEK AND TWO HUNDRED AND TWENTY-SECOND-STREET.—About 19 lots.

BROOKLYN.—Thirty-two lots, comprising the entire block bounded by Columbia, Sigourney, Otsego and Hallock sts.

HUGH CASSIDY, Executor,
HENRIETTA R. POWERS, Executrix.

Book-maps at the office of the auctioneers, No. 7 Pine-st., and of the Executor, No. 11 Pine-st.

CITY HOUSES TO LET.

TO LET OR LEASE.

THE FOUR LOTS, with the BUILDINGS THEREON, situated at the north-east corner of 41st-st. and Park-av., constituting the southerly portion of the

GRAND UNION HOTEL.

Apply to HORACE S. ELY,
No. 22 Pine-st., New-York.

AT A MODERATE RENT.—PARLOR FLAT; all the conveniences; 178 East 42d-st. (Stuyvesant Square.)
L. J. CARPENTER,
No. 26 3d-av., Bible House.

COUNTRY REAL ESTATE.

A RARE CHANCE FOR INVESTMENT IN a farm property of 50 acres, 30 miles from this city, on the high banks of the Hudson, situated about 18 miles, or 35 minutes, from the City Hall; part of an old family estate; is capable of being rise very great; for sale at a great bargain. HOMER MORGAN, No. 2 Pine-st.

WILL EXCHANGE VALUABLE DWELLING property in Rutherford, N. J., for house in New-York City. CLARK & SMITH, No. 11 Pine-st.

STORES, &C. TO LET.

OFFICES TO LET
IN THE
TIMES BUILDING.
APPLY TO
GEORGE JONES,
TIMES OFFICE.

BORNEL BUILDING.
Nos. 113, 115, 117, and 119 Broadway.
OFFICES TO LET.

This building is new and first-class in all its appointments; perfect ventilation; light on all sides, and large rooms, 21 feet square, in centre.

Four passenger elevators, and all the conveniences appertaining to a building of its class.

It is strictly

FIRE-PROOF.

The rooms are so arranged that they can be rented singly or in suites, and are particularly adapted for lawyers and exhumination agents.

Large corner office on first floor.

ALSO,

Fine large suites on second floor, suitable for a Life Insurance Company.

Plans can be seen at our office, No. 3 Pine-st.
E. H. LUDLOW & CO.

TO LET—NO. 18 WALKER-ST.—FIVE-STORY modern building; iron front. Can be rented as a whole, or will be divided. Apply to

HORACE S. ELY,
No. 22 Pine-st.

NO. 199 CHURCH-ST. — SECOND, THIRD, and Fourth Lofts to let; very light; desirable. Apply to HORACE S. ELY,
No. 22 Pine-st.

SHIPPING.

GUION LINE.
UNITED STATES MAIL STEAMERS
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.
Leaving Pier 38, N. R., foot of Kingsland.
MONTANA.....TUESDAY, Jan. 28, 9 A. M.
WISCONSIN.....TUESDAY, Feb. 4, 2 P. M.
WYOMING.....TUESDAY, Feb. 18, 9 P. M.
NEVADA.....TUESDAY, Feb. 25, 7:30 A. M.
MONTANA.....TUESDAY, March 4, 2 P. M.

These steamers are built of iron, in water-tight compartments, and are furnished with every requisite to make the passage across the Atlantic both safe and agreeable, having bath-rooms, smoking-room, drawing-room, piano, and library; also, experienced surgeon, stewardess, and caterer on each steamer. The state-rooms are all on deck, thus insuring those greatest of all luxuries as a perfect ventilation and light.

CABIN PASSAGE, (according to state-room,) $55, $65, and $75. INTERMEDIATE, $40; STEERAGE, $26.
OFFICES, No. 29 BROADWAY.
WILLIAMS & GUION.

WHITE STAR LINE.
UNITED STATES AND ROYAL MAIL STEAMERS
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.

NOTICE—The steamers of this line take the Lane Routes recommended by Maury, U. S. N., on both the outward and the homeward passages.

BRITANNIC, Capt. Brock.....Saturday, Feb. 1, noon.
REPUBLIC, Capt. Irving.....Thursday, Feb. 6, 8 A. M.
GERMANIC, Capt. Ezekiel.....Saturday, Feb. 15, 12:30 P. M.
From White Star Dock, Pier No. 52 North River.

These steamers are uniform in size and unsurpassed in appointments. The saloons, state-rooms, smoking, and bath rooms are amidships, where the noise and motion are least felt, affording a degree of comfort hitherto unattainable at sea.

Rates—Saloon, $80, $80, and $100, gold; return tickets on favorable terms; steerage, $28.

These steamers carry neither cattle, sheep, nor pigs.

For inspection of plans and other information, apply at the company's office, No. 37 Broadway, New-York, or No. 140 Walnut-st., Phila. B. J. CORTIS, Agent.

CUNARD LINE.

NOTICE.

With the view of diminishing the chances of collision, the steamers of this line take a specified course for all parts of the ocean.

On the outward passage from Queenstown to New-York or Boston, crossing the meridian of 50 at 43 latitude, or nothing to the north of 43.

On the homeward passage, crossing the meridian of 50 at 42, or nothing to the north of 43.

FROM NEW-YORK FOR LIVERPOOL OR QUEENSTOWN.
PARTHIA.....WED., Jan. 29 | ABYSSINIA, WED., Feb 12
SCYTHIA.....WED., Feb. 5 | BATAVIA.....WED., Feb. 19

Cabin passage and return tickets on favorable terms, including a special low rate for the Fall and Winter months.

Steerage tickets to and from all parts of Europe at very low rates. Freight and passage office, No. 4 Bowling Green. CHAS. G. FRANCKLYN, Agent.

PASSENGERS PER STEAM-SHIP PARTHIA embark from the Cunard Wharf, foot of Grand-st., Jersey City, at 9 A. M., on Jan. 29, 1879.

CHAS. G. FRANCKLYN,
No. 4 Bowling Green, New-York.

STATE LINE,

TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, DUBLIN, BELFAST, AND LONDONDERRY.

From Pier No. 42 N. R., foot of Canal-st., as follows:
STATE OF INDIANA.....Thursday, Jan. 30
STATE OF VIRGINIA.....Thursday, Feb. 6

First Cabin, $55 to $70, according to accommodations; excursion tickets, $100 to $120. Second Cabin, $40; excursion tickets, $75. Steerage at lowest rates.

AUSTIN, BALDWIN & CO., Agents,
No. 72 Broadway, New-York.

STEERAGE tickets at No. 45 Broadway, and as the company's pier, foot of Canal-st., North River.

ANCHOR LINE U. S. MAIL STEAMERS,
NEW-YORK AND GLASGOW.
From Pier No. 20 North River, New-York.
Ethiopia.....Feb. 1, noon. | Bolivia.....Feb. 15, noon.
Anchoria.....Feb. 8, 3 A. M. | Circassia.....Feb. 22, 8 A. M.
Cabins, $60 to $80. Excursion tickets at reduced rates.
Second Cabin, $40. Steerage, $28.
NEW-YORK TO LONDON DIRECT.
From Pier No. 46 North River, foot of Charles-st.
California.....Feb. 1, noon. | Australia.....Feb. 8, 6 A. M.
Cabins, $55 and $65. Excursion tickets at reduced rates.
HENDERSON BROTHERS, Agents, 7 Bowling Green.

NORTH GERMAN LLOYD.
STEAM-SHIP LINE BETWEEN NEW-YORK, SOUTHAMPTON, AND BREMEN.
Company's pier foot of 24-st., Hoboken.
WESER.....Sat. Feb. 1 | SPREE.....Sat. Feb. 15
MOSEL.....Sat., Feb. 8 | DONAU.....Sat., Feb. 22
RATES OF PASSAGE FROM NEW-YORK TO SOUTHAMPTON, HAVRE, OR BREMEN.
First cabin.....$100
Second cabin.....60
Steerage.....30
Return tickets at reduced rates. Prepaid Steerage certificates, $30. STEERAGE TICKETS TO ALL POINTS IN THE SOUTH OF ENGLAND, $30.
OELRICHS & CO., No. 2 Bowling Green.

INMAN LINE ROYAL MAIL STEAMERS.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.
CITY OF MONTREAL.....Thursday, Jan. 30, 11 A. M.
CITY OF BERLIN.....Saturday, Feb. 8, 6:30 A. M.
CITY OF NEW-YORK.....Thursday, Feb. 13, 10:30 A. M.
From Pier No. 37 North River, foot of Charlton-st.

CABIN, $80, $80, and $100, gold. Return tickets on favorable terms. EXCURSION TICKETS at reduced rates. Saloons, state-rooms, smoking and bath rooms amidships. These steamers do not carry cattle, sheep, or pigs.

Nos. 31 and 33 Broadway, N. Y.
Philadelphia Office, No. 103 South 4th-st.

GENERAL TRANSATLANTIC COMPANY
between New-York and Havre.
Company's Pier, (new,) No. 42 North River, foot of Morris-st.

FRANCE, TROUBLE.....Wednesday, Feb. 5, 9:30 P. M.
CANADA, PARROT.....Wednesday, Feb. 19, 4 P. M.
AMERIQUE, VERLINDE.....Saturday, March 1, 3 P. M.
Steamers marked thus " do not carry steerage passengers.

Checks drawn on Credit Lyonnais of Paris in amounts to suit.

For freight and passengers apply to
LOUIS DE BEBIAN, Agent, No. 55 Broadway.

IMPERIAL GERMAN MAIL.
Hamburg American Packet Company's Line for PLYMOUTH, CHERBOURG, and HAMBURG.
GELLERT.Thurs., Jan. 30 | LESSING.Thurs., Feb. 13
CIMBRIA.....Thurs. Feb. 6 | WIELAND.Thurs., Feb. 20
Rates of passage to Plymouth, London, Cherbourg, Hamburg, and all points in England: First Cabin, $100; second cabin, $60; Steerage, $30.
KUNHARDT & CO., C. R. MICHARD & BOAS,
General Agents. General Passenger Agents,
No. 61 Broadway, N. Y. No. 61 Broadway, N. Y.

THE RED STAR LINE FOR ANTWERP
Carrying the Belgian and United States mails. Sailing every 12 days from Philadelphia and New-York.
SWITZERLAND sails Saturday, Feb. 8, 7 A. M.
For rates of passage and other information apply to PETER WRIGHT & SONS, General Agents, No. 307 Walnut-st., Phila., and No. 52 Broadway, New-York.
JNO. McDONALD, Agt., No. 8 Battery-place.

ROTTERDAM LINE.
Steamers leave Jersey City, near Paronia Ferry.
W. A. SCHOLTEN.....Saturday, Feb. 1
MAAS.....Wednesday, Feb. 12

Cabin, $65-$70. Intermediate, $45-$50. Steerage, $23.
H. GAZAUX, General Agent, No. 27 South William-st.
FUNCH, EDYE & CO., L. W. MOSER,
27 So. Wm.-st. Freight Agent. 50 B'way, Gen. Passage Agt.

GREAT SOUTHERN

FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE
FOR CHARLESTON, S. C., FLORIDA PORTS,
AND ALL POINTS IN THE SOUTH AND SOUTH-WEST.
SAILING FROM PIER NO. 40 NORTH RIVER,
WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS at 3 P. M.
GULF STREAM.....WEDNESDAY, Jan. 29
CITY OF ATLANTA.....SATURDAY, Feb. 1

SUPERIOR PASSENGER ACCOMMODATIONS. Insurance to destination, one-half of one per cent. Goods forwarded free of commission. Passenger tickets and bills of lading issued and signed at the office of

JAMES W. QUINTARD & CO., Agents,
Office on the Pier,
Or W. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green.
Or BENTLEY D. HASELL, General Agent,
Great Southern Freight Line, 317 Broadway.

PALMETTO FREIGHT LINE.
VIA STEAM-SHIP TO CHARLESTON, S. C., and the SAVANNAH AND CHARLESTON RAILROAD, to all points in the South and South-west.
Freight rates and insurance at lowest figures.
Bills of lading signed at Pier No. 27 North River.
CHAS. D. OWENS, General Agent
Palmetto Line,
No. 315 Broadway.

NEW-YORK AND CUBA MAIL S. S. LINE
FOR HAVANA DIRECT.
FROM PIER 17 EAST RIVER AT 3 P. M.
Magnificent accommodations for cabin passengers.
S. S. NIAGARA.....Saturday, Feb. 1
S. S. SARATOGA.....Wednesday, Feb. 12
Tickets issued also for
VERA CRUZ AND WEST INDIA ISLANDS
in connection with French and English S. S. Lines from Havana. JAMES E. WARD & CO., No. 113 Wall-st.

NEW-YORK, SAVANNA & MEXICAN MAIL S. S. LINE
Sailing from Pier No. 4 North River at 3 P. M.
FOR HAVANA DIRECT AND VERA CRUZ.
Calling at Progreso, Campeache, and Frontera.
CITY OF WASHINGTON, (Havana only.).Thurs. Feb. 6
CITY OF MERIDA, (Vera Cruz only).....Saturday, Feb. 8
CITY OF NEW-YORK.....Wednesday, Feb. 19
Steamer leaves New-Orleans Jan. 29 and Feb. 19 for Vera Cruz via Havana. Connecting at Vera Cruz with steamer for Havana, New-York, Progreso, and Campeache.
E. MALLARD & SONS, No. 31 and 33 Broadway.

SHIPPING.

UNITED STATES AND BRAZIL MAIL STEAM-SHIP LINE.
FOR ST. THOMAS, PARA, PERNAMBUCO, BAHIA, AND RIO DE JANEIRO,
Connecting at St. Thomas with German steamers for Porto Rico and Spanish Main. The new first-class iron steam-ship CITY OF PARA, Capt. CARPENTER, will sail for the above ports on Wednesday, Feb. 5, at 3 P. M.

Positively no freight received after Jan. 24. Freight must be paid in advance. Freight or low rates taken for the above ports. Freight received at Brokers' Dock, Brooklyn. Insurance lower than by any other line. Shippers desiring insurance can effect same under our open policy. For freight engagements or passage, having elegant accommodations, apply to C. H. MALLORY & CO., Agents. Office, Pier No. 20 East River.

FLORIDA RAILROAD AND STEAM-SHIP LINE.
ONLY DIRECT LINE TO FLORIDA.
SAILING EVERY SATURDAY.
LOWEST RATES OF FREIGHT AND PASSAGE.
Steamer ASHLAND, SATURDAY, Feb. 1,
And every SATURDAY thereafter.
For Fernandina direct, from Pier No. 12 N. R., at 3 P. M.

Only line having through tickets and bills lading to all points in Florida, and on Chattahoochie, Appalachicola, and Flint Rivers, and BRUNSWICK, Ga. Insurance ¼ per cent. Bills lading signed at Pier. For further information, through bills lading, and passage rates, apply to E. ROBERTS,
No. 177 West-st., up stairs.

SAVANNAH AND FLORIDA.

From Pier No. 43 North River, at 3 P. M.
CITY OF COLUMBUS, Capt. NICKERSON.....Wed., Jan. 29
CITY OF SAVANNAH, Capt. MALLORY.....Sat., Feb. 1,
Connecting with the Central Railroad of Georgia, Atlantic and Gulf Railroad, Georgia and Florida Steamboat Company, and with the new and elegant iron steamer ST. JOHNS.

GEO. YONGE, Agent,
Ocean S. S. Co. and
General Agent for G. R. R.
No. 316 Broadway. No. 409 Broadway.

PACIFIC MAIL STEAM-SHIP COMPANY.
Pier foot Canal-st., North River.
For SAN FRANCISCO via ISTHMUS OF PANAMA:
Steam-ship COLORADO.....Friday, Jan. 31, noon
Connecting for CENTRAL AMERICAN and MEXICAN ports.
From San Francisco for Japan and China:
Steam-ship ORIENTAL.....Wednesday, March 5, noon
From SAN FRANCISCO to HONOLULU, NEW-ZEALAND, and AUSTRALIA:
Steam-ship CITY OF NEW-YORK, Monday, Feb. 17, noon
For freight or passage, information apply to Company's office, on the pier, foot of Canal-st., North River, and for passage at Company's Ticket Office, No. 257 Broadway.

NEW-YORK AND HAVANA
DIRECT MAIL LINE.
These first-class steam-ships sail regularly at 3 P. M. from Pier No. 13 North River, as follows:
Steamer SANTIAGO DE CUBA.....WED., Jan. 29
Steam-ship.....SATURDAY, Feb. 8
Accommodations unsurpassed. For freight or passage apply to WILLIAM P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green. LAWTON BROS., Agents in Havana.

FINANCIAL.

OFFICE OF THE ATLANTIC MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY, NEW-YORK, Jan. 22, 1879.

THE TRUSTEES HAVE ORDERED TO be charter of the company, submit the following statement of its affairs on the 31st December, 1878:

The net marine premiums of this company for the year ending with December 31, 1878, were.....$4,009,309 47
Premiums on which no policies have been issued upon life risks, nor upon fire disconnected with marine risks.....1,848,697 36
Premiums marked off from 1st January, 1878, to 31st December, 1878.....$4,186,024 92
Losses paid during the same period.....$3,012,784 45
Returns of premiums and expenses.....$859,960 58
The company has the following assets, viz.:
United States and State of New-York stock, City, bank, and other stocks.....$10,086,758 00
Loans secured by stocks and otherwise.....704,200 00
Real estate and claims due the company estimated at.....
Premium notes and bills receivable.....619,034 80
Cash in bank.....1,529,259 74
381,210 92
Total amount of assets.....$13,320,463 16

Six per cent. interest on the outstanding certificates of profits will be paid to the holders thereof, or their legal representatives, on and after Tuesday, the 4th of February next.

The outstanding certificates of the issue of 1875 will be redeemed and paid to the holders thereof, or their legal representatives, at this office, on and after 4th of February next, from which date all interest thereon will cease. The certificates to be produced at the time of payment and cancelled.

A dividend of Thirty per cent. is declared on the net earned premiums of the company for the year ending 31st December, 1878, for which certificates will be issued on and after Tuesday, the 6th of May next.

By order of the Board, J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

TRUSTEES:

J. D. JONES,
CHARLES DENNIS,
W. H. H. MOORE,
JOHN D. HEWITT,
CHARLES H. RUSSELL,
JAMES LOW,
DAVID LANE,
GORDON W. BURNHAM,
FRANCIS SKIDDY,
WM. STURGIS BIGELOW,
ADOLPH LEMOYNE,
JOSIAH O. LOW,
WILLIAM E. DODGE,
ROYAL PHELPS,
THOMAS F. YOUNGS,
C. A. HAND,
JOHN D. REWLETT,
WILLIAM H. WEBB,
CHARLES P. BURDETT,
GORDON GRANT,
EDMUND W. CORLIES,
JOHN HOLDITT,
ALEXANDER V. BLAKE,
ROBT. B. MINTURN,
CHARLES H. MARSHALL,
GEORGE W. LANE,
ROBERT L. STUART,
JAMES G. DE FOREST,
FREDERICK H. CHINCHEY,
CHARLES D. LEVERICH,
WILLIAM BRYCE,
WILLIAM H. KEMP,
PETER V. KING,
THOS. R. CODDINGTON,
HORACE K. THURBER,
A. A. RAVEN,
WILLIAM DEGROOT,
HENRY A. HURLBUT,
JOHN N. FIELD.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice-President.
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice-President.
A. A. RAVEN, Third Vice-President.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE NATIONAL BROADWAY BANK, at New-York, in the State of New-York, at the close of business Jan. 1, 1879:

RESOURCES.

Loans and discounts	$3,260,928 91
Overdrafts	462 24
United States bonds to secure circulation	1,000,000 00
United States bonds on hand	390,000 00
Other stocks, bonds and mortgages	124,724 68
Due from other national banks	428,448 72
Due from State banks and bankers	2,389 12
Real estate, furniture, and fixtures	367,134 86
Premiums paid	36,000 00
Checks and other cash items	61,908 75
Exchanges for Clearing-house	371,381 37
Bills of other banks	39,204 00
Fractional currency (including nickels)	186 34
Specie (including gold Treasury certificates)	53,314 00
Legal-tender notes	521,876 00
United States certificates of deposit for legal tenders	515,000 00
Redemption fund with United States Treasurer (5 per cent. of circulation)	43,100 00
Total	$7,110,508 80

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$1,000,000 00
Surplus fund	1,000,000 00
Undivided profits	110,336 23
National bank notes outstanding	897,600 00
State bank notes outstanding	7,029 00
Dividends unpaid	$552 00
Fifty-eighth dividend, payable Jan. 2, 1879	30,000 00
Individual deposits subject to check	3,858,091 97
Demand certificates of deposit	10,188 26
Certified checks	56,766 64
Cashier's checks outstanding	126,877 49
Due to other national banks	340,876 49
Due to State banks and bankers	48,691 68
Total	$7,110,508 80

STATE OF NEW-YORK, COUNTY OF NEW-YORK, ss.:

I, John L. Everit, Cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

J. L. EVERITT, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 27th day of January, 1879. S. E. BOSTWICK,
Notary Public, New-York County.

Correct—Attest:
CHARLES BURKHALTER,
R. PALMER,
H. HOAGLAND,
Directors.

THE FARMERS' LOAN AND TRUST COMPANY.
NO. 26 EXCHANGE-PLACE, NEW-YORK.
CHARTERED 1822. CAPITAL, $1,000,000.

TRANSFER AGENTS AND REGISTRARS OF STOCK.
LEGAL DEPOSITORY FOR MONEY.

Capital and surplus invested in Government securities.

PARTIES DEPOSITING MONEY WITH THIS INSTITUTION will receive INTEREST from date of deposit, and may make and withdraw the same at pleasure.

EXECUTORS, TRUSTEES, AND OTHERS, will be accorded every attention.

This company is authorized to act in every position of trust.

R. G. SOLSTON, President.
G. F. TALMAN, Vice-President.
R. C. BOYD, Second Vice-President.
G. P. FITCH, Secretary.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

MOSES TAYLOR, G. F. TALMAN,
J. J. ASTOR, SAMUEL SLOAN,
ISAAC BELL, EDWD. MINTURN,
R. G. SOLSTON.

HENRY CLEWS & CO., BANKERS, No. 18 New-st., N. Y., members of the N. Y. Stock, Gold, and Government Bond Exchanges.—Securities (in fractional or large quantities) bought and sold on commission; also carried on loans as required on 5 per cent. margin; advances made on approved collateral at market rate; deposits received subject to check at sight; 4 per cent. interest allowed on all daily balances; orders executed at the San Francisco and London Stock Exchanges.

ALL SPECULATIVE ACCOUNTS DECLINED.

J. HARMANUS FISHER,
(Member of Baltimore Stock Exchange for past 24 years.)
BANKER AND STOCK BROKER,
Post Office Box No. 93. Baltimore, Md.
Solicits correspondence and orders. Refers, by permission to Messrs. Hallgarten & Co., Messrs. G. T. Bonner & Co., John B. Manning, Esq.

ATCHISON AND PIKE'S PEAK RAILROAD Bonds and Stock. (New Central Branch Union Pacific.)
Chicago and Canada Southern Railroad Bonds.
Toledo Valley Railroad Bonds.
Boonhester and State Line Railroad Bonds.
Grand River Valley Railroad Bonds and Stock.
Cairo and Fulton Railroad Bonds, all issues.
Wanted by W. A. UTLEY, No. 31 Pine-st., New-York.

THE TRADERS' NATIONAL BANK OF LAWRENCE, MASS., having voted to go into liquidation, and it is now closing up its affairs. The holders of its notes and other creditors are notified to present the notes and other claims against the bank for payment.
E. TRASK, Cashier.
Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 16, 1879.

BROWN BROTHERS & CO.,
NO. 59 WALL-ST.,
ISSUE COMMERCIAL AND TRAVELERS' CREDITS, AVAILABLE IN ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

FINANCIAL.

UNITED STATES
4 Per Cent. Bonds,
COUPON OR REGISTERED,

and all other issues of Government securities, bought and sold at MARKET RATES, FREE OF COMMISSION, and on hand for immediate delivery.

CALLED 5-20s bought or exchanged for other issues on most favorable terms.

VERMILYE & CO.,
Nos. 16 and 18 Nassau-st., N. Y.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT APPLICATION has been made to the Finance Department of the City of New-York for the issue to the MANHATTAN SAVINGS INSTITUTION of duplicate certificates for

No. 724—New-York Central Park Fund Stock for.....$22,700
Nos. 1 to 10 inclusive—New-York City improvement 7 per cent. stock for $20,000 each, making.....200,000
No. 192—New-York City revenue bond for.....200,000
Nos. 1 and 2—New-York County accumulated 7 per cent. debt, due 1887, for $1,000 each, making.....2,000
No. 1—New-York County accumulated 7 per cent. debt, due in 1887, for.....50,000
No. 28—New-York County Court-house 6 per cent. stock, No. 2, for.....35,000
No. 24—New-York County Court-house 6 per cent. stock, No. 2, for.....5,000
No. 32—New-York County Court-house 6 per cent. stock, No. 2, for.....10,000
No. 33—New-York County Court-house 6 per cent. stock, No. 2, for.....47,000
No. 38—New-York County Court-house 6 per cent. stock, No. 2, for.....95,000
No. 40—New-York County Court-house 6 per cent. stock, No. 2, for.....10,000

in place of those which were stolen on the 27th day of October, 1878.

All persons having objections to the issue thereof are required to present the same in writing to me at the Controller's Office, in the City of New-York, on or before the 7th day of February, 1879.

New-York, Controller's Office, Jan. 27, 1879.
JOHN KELLY, Controller.

SINKING FUND NOTICE.
CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE AND ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY, No. 68 WILLIAM-ST.,
New-York, Dec. 24, 1878.

Notice is hereby given that the following bonds of this company of $1,000 each, known as Consolidated Sinking Fund Bonds, have been designated by lot to be paid at par and accrued interest on presentation at this office, according to the provisions of the Deed of Trust, securing the same. The numbers are as follows:

47	1,559	2,411	3,424	4,472	5,090	6,880
93	1,577	2,497	3,427	4,667	6,921	6,976
97	1,795	2,566	3,443	4,951	6,955	6,996
137	1,860	2,638	3,566	5,219	6,312	7,001
422	1,938	2,654	3,602	5,399	6,320	7,014
522	2,036	2

THE BEAST OF REVELATION.

TROUBLE AMONG BAPTIST PREACHERS.

REV. DR. FULTON SUSPENDED BY THE NEW-YORK CONFERENCE—THE CHARGE OF DISLOYALTY AGAINST DR. SAMSON—AN UNREAD ADDRESS.

The ministers of the New-York Conference of the Baptist Church held their usual Monday morning meeting yesterday in the basement of the Oliver-Street Church. Rev. Dr. Yerkes acted as Moderator, with Rev. D. C. Potter as clerk. There was a large attendance of ministers as well as of others, as it was expected that the contest between Dr. Justin D. Fulton and the Conference would be renewed. After an opening prayer, the clerk proceeded to read the minutes of the previous meeting, but, when he read that "on motion, Rev. Dr. Fulton was kindly requested to withdraw the obnoxious expressions which he had made regarding Dr. Samson," he was interrupted by Dr. Fulton, who asked to have the exact words he had used, and which were complained of, spread upon the minutes. Messrs. Gessler and Halsey Knapp objected to this, contending that it was too late to add anything to the record of the proceedings of the former meeting. Dr. Swan said he had made the motion, and that the word "obnoxious" had not been used by him. The clerk said he had taken down Dr. Swan's motion at the time, and was positive that the word had been used. Dr. Burroughs said the word really used was "offensive," and, by general agreement, that word was substituted, but later on Dr. Swan remembered that he never even used that word. Dr. Fulton then asked permission to read the exact words he had used. A brother asked whether they would contain the same offensive remarks which the Conference had complained of. Dr. Fulton said they decidedly would. He then read the sentences complained of, in which he had replied to some remarks made by Dr. Samson concerning the Beast of Revelation, and had insinuated that Dr. Samson was disloyal to the cause of freedom during the late war.

Dr. Holme objected to spreading such offensive words on the record, but was replied to by several who thought they must be so placed in justice to Dr. Fulton. That gentleman thanked the Conference for this right, and then proceeded to read a long paper which he had prepared on the subject. He commenced by saying that he made the statement carefully and after much thought, and that he considered it a wise one. He was then interrupted by the clerk, who urged that the minutes had been adopted and could no longer be discussed. The Moderator ruled that the minutes were still open to amendment, and the clerk took his seat amid much laughter. Dr. Hitchcock thought the best way was for Dr. Fulton to withdraw his remarks, and then to wipe out of the minutes all reference to them, while Dr. Burroughs thought that the best thing to do was to move to lay all the motions on the table. This he did, and it was carried, amid much applause, by a vote of 34 to 15. Dr. Fulton then attempted to commence reading his address, when the Moderator asked if it was the pleasure of the Conference to hear him.

Dr. Fulton—I don't care whether they want to hear me or not. It is the right of every member to discuss the last minutes and debate on them.

Moderator—But the brother has already spoken several times.

Dr. Fulton—Yes, and he proposes to speak just once more.

Some discussion followed, and drew from a brother the remark that the meeting was turning into a bear garden, and that order must be maintained. Dr. Fulton was then recognized, and wanted to know why the clerk had not done his duty in taking the remarks and motions in writing. Rev. Mr. Lawson stood up for the clerk, when Dr. Fulton replied that he cared nothing about it for himself, and if the Conference chose to go before the world with incorrect records, they could do so for all he cared. Dr. Thomas pronounced the whole matter a most extraordinary one. It was certainly remarkable, he said, that the man who made the offensive statement should come to this meeting, boast that he did so after much care and thought, and that his stand was a wise one. He has made all this trouble, continued the speaker; he talks more than all the rest, indulges in self-glorification, consumes the valuable time of the Conference, and it was certainly time for that institution to dissolve. Several loud "amens" resounded from different parts of the room, and there was much applause.

Mr. Halsey Knapp said he did not want to stay another day in the Conference, if the remarks of Dr. Fulton were placed on the minutes.

A brother suggested that the minutes should be laid over for some time, until the difference between brothers Fulton and Samson could be settled, but he was taken to task by Dr. Burroughs, who denied that the difficulty was between those gentlemen, and said it was rather between Dr. Fulton and the Conference. It was a momentous and most important one, and should be settled at once. [Loud applause.] Dr. Fulton then wanted to know why the Moderator did not put the question before the Conference.

Moderator—I have not yet had an opportunity to do so.

Dr. Fulton—Yes, you had plenty of it, but not the disposition.

The Moderator then put the question, which was on Dr. Fulton's appeal to the Conference against the decision of the Moderator that he was not in order in claiming to have the floor, and the Chair was overruled by a vote of 26 to 16. Dr. Fulton thereupon again commenced to read, when Dr. Holme interrupted, saying he understood that the offensive remarks which Dr. Fulton was now about to repeat were simply from the Doctor's memory. Dr. Fulton said he'd like to know how Dr. Holme came to understand any such thing, for he had already said that he had the words in writing before he first delivered them. Dr. Fulton began to read again, but several brethren objected to a public repetition of the obnoxious words. The Moderator said there appeared to be as many opinions on this matter as there were about the Beast of Revelation. Dr. Burroughs said the Conference was asked to embalm on the records the insulting words against Dr. Samson. But the words presented were not those originally used. They had been carefully dressed and covered up, and were now offered as a sugar-coated pill. The speaker was here called to order by a brother, who charged him with using personalities in speaking of Dr. Fulton.

Dr. Fulton (excitedly)—His statements are false! They are false!

Dr. Burroughs—Well, I will withdraw my remarks; will he—pointing to Dr. Fulton and shouting at the top of his voice—do as much.

A heated discussion followed as to the precise words used by Dr. Fulton, on the preceding Monday, and he was finally allowed to repeat to the clerk the words complained of, which were as follows:

"This surrender to Rome could not be explained, save on the supposition that a conversation which prevented a man, occupying a prominent pulpit at the national capital through all the years of the war, from ever opening his mouth to say one word in favor of liberty, now enables him to read an essay which ignored the teachings and the truth of Revelation, described the Beast of Prophecy as a principle, an influence, an anything opposed to right, the marks of which beast might be in themselves, or in any one."

These words were taken down and read by the clerk, whereupon Dr. Thomas asked whether the minutes of the former meeting showed that the offensive remarks had been withdrawn. The clerk said, "No." Dr. Thomas added that he was more amazed than ever that a man could come there, utter insulting remarks, occupy two hours of valuable time in self-glorification, and then claim that his words were wise and well considered. The speaker was then called to order by the Moderator for using offensive personalities. Dr. Hoyt then moved for the appointment of a committee of three by the Moderator, which should be placed in charge of the whole matter and should report the result of their inquiries to the Conference. Rev. Mr. Gessler moved, as a substitute, that "Brother Fulton be suspended from membership in this Conference until such time as he shall comply with the resolution of Jan. 20." He would be ready, he said, to welcome Dr. Fulton back with outstretched arms as soon as the brother would take back his offensive words. The speaker read from Cushing's "Manual" the parliamentary usages in such matters, and said that, if a mere body of Congressmen have sufficient respect for themselves to expel from their body an offending member, surely this Conference of the ministers of Jesus Christ should have sufficient self-respect to do as much. Dr. Fulton jumped up quickly and said it was a pity that Mr. Gessler had moved his substitute, since it would place Dr. Samson on trial and bring on the turmoil, weariness of the whole matter. At these remarks, loud cries of "Don't reassail Dr. Samson, he is not on trial," came from all parts of the room. "He will be on trial," replied Dr. Fulton. Dr. Thomas protested against the renewal of such personalities, and the Moderator ruled Dr. Fulton again out of order.

Dr. Fulton said: "I am in order, and I won't submit to such ruling. We ought to have a Moderator here." That officer became very red in the face, and said he was in the chair, and would preserve order, but it was hard to do so when there were raging beasts to control.

A Brother—I object to those remarks of the chair. There is only one Dr. Fulton here, and when the Moderator speaks of beast in the plural he includes us. [Loud laughter.]

Dr. Fulton said it was a big world, and that if they turned him out it would be a bad thing. Dr. Burroughs moved to adjourn, but nearly every one in the room shouted "No, no!" Dr. Fulton said, "Fair play, boys; fair play belongs to the Baptist Church. It would have been better to have left this matter to a committee." A good deal of discussion followed, and several brothers tried to speak at one time. At last there came a lull, and Dr. Fulton earnestly pleaded for "just five minutes" of patient hearing. This being apparently granted, he commenced reading again, but was at once interrupted by a general uproar. Dr. Fulton asked: "Can a man be suspended from this Conference for making a statement in debate without being allowed to explain his reasons for so doing or proving its truth?" and he was answered by "Yes, yes," from all quarters. "Then, in God's name," said the Doctor, "where is your sense of fairness and right? It is essential that I bring to your minds the existence of a two great despotisms. One is the South, which has slavery for its corner-stone, and the other the Roman Church, which controls this great city." More uproar ensued, and Dr. Fulton said there was evidently a company of men in the meeting who were determined he should not be heard. Applause and hisses followed this remark, whereupon a brother moved that Dr. Fulton be allowed 15 minutes' speech, and not to be disturbed unless by the Moderator. This being agreed to, Dr. Fulton made another attempt in justification, and began by saying that a Baptist minister was about to be suspended from his Conference for daring to make a comparison between the despotisms of slavery and Rome. The Moderator at once called him to order, whereupon Dr. Fulton said that under such restrictions he could not speak. Taking up his overcoat and hat, he walked quietly down the aisle, saying, "I thank you for all you have ever done for me. I leave you now, and may God bless you all." Several answered "Good-bye," a few said "Don't go, Fulton," while three ministers arose and followed him out.

After he had left Dr. Miller walked up near the Moderator's desk and said he wished to make a few remarks in justification of Dr. Samson. He would brand the statement, as given in the public prints, for he would not say that it was given in this conference. Here he was told that as Dr. Fulton could not be heard, as against Dr. Samson, he could not be heard, nor his friends be heard, and so Dr. Miller sat down. Remarks were then made on the resolution to suspend Dr. Fulton, a few being in favor of the more politic proposal of referring the matter to a committee. But the words of Dr. Halsey Knapp were so strongly opposed to Dr. Fulton that they depleted the ranks of his friends, and when Dr. Thomas followed in a statement that it would be the kindest deed ever done to Dr. Fulton to suspend him until he could be brought to a sense of his error, the applause was almost general, and the question of suspension was put and carried by a vote of 52 to 12. The meeting then arose in some disorder, but Rev. A. W. Bourn, of Newark, N. J., spoke loudly, asking why these Conferences were not dismissed with prayer. He had been pained, he said, to see that this was frequently forgotten. This hint being taken, prayer was offered, and the Conference adjourned.

ORGANIZING AGAINST TAMMANY.

ENROLLMENT OF DEMOCRATS OPPOSED TO KELLY—THE DATES FOR PRIMARIES FIXED.

The enrollment of members of "the Democratic Organization of the City and County of New-York" was begun yesterday evening in all the Assembly districts and the Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth Wards. The persons enrolled are, according to the language of the call, "in favor of the free and independent action of the people, and are opposed to the control of any secret society or irresponsible power." The Joint Committee of Twenty-seven appointed some time ago by the Irving Hall, the City, and the County Democracy supervise the enrollment. This committee has appointed three "Commissioners of Enrollment" in each of the 21 Assembly districts, and three in the Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth Wards. These Commissioners examine into the eligibility of the persons who desire to be enrolled, and certify to the correctness of the lists of enrollment. Vacancies in the office of Commissioner are to be filled by Messrs. Emanuel B. Hart, Maurice J. Power, and Robert B. Nooney, who form a special committee for the purpose. The enrollment will be proceeded with on the evenings of the 30th inst., and the 3d, 6th, 10th, and 13th of February, between the hours of 7 and 9 o'clock P. M. On Feb. 20, between 7 and 10 o'clock P. M., primary elections will be held in all parts of the City, at which only persons duly enrolled will be allowed to vote. At these elections three Commissioners of Enrollment will be chosen, as well as 1,129 members of a General Committee for the City and County. The organization of the General Committee will take place at Irving Hall on March 1, at 8 P. M., and the district committees will organize on March 4, at the same hour. About 2,000 persons were enrolled last evening. Previous to the last election, the Irving Hall Democracy, according to their reports, enrolled 22,000 persons, and it is expected that the three Anti-Tammany organizations combined will this year enroll a much larger number.

THE BROOKLYN ALDERMEN.

A NUMBER OF VETOES BY THE MAYOR—HE LECTURES THE COMMON COUNCIL.

At the meeting of the Brooklyn Board of Aldermen yesterday a batch of vetoes from the Mayor was read and placed on file. The first may be said to be political in its nature. It dealt with a resolution, passed by the Common Council at its last meeting, which provided for the appointment of a committee to investigate the Board of City Works, and also to make inquiry in relation to the construction of the Third-avenue sewer, upon which many thousands of dollars were squandered. The Mayor calls attention to the fact that the charges of miscarriage, made by himself against two of the Commissioners of the Board of City Works—Messrs. Flaherty and Bennett—have been investigated by the Grand Jury and indictments found against the accused. He more than hints that the Common Council has been actuated to shield the officers named from the consequences of the acts alleged against them, and openly charges that attacks, which he designates as "mean and cowardly," were made on him by the mover of the resolution to appoint investigating committees. The veto is in the nature of a stump speech, the purport of which is to show that Mayor Howell is a great reformer, and that there are a number of wicked politicians in Brooklyn who are opposing him because of his reform tendencies. The Mayor says that one investigation at a time is enough, and that he will oppose all other so-called investigations at present, until that one is disposed of, believing that they have been started merely to direct attention from the charges brought by him against the City Works Commissioners. As to the Third-avenue sewer fraud, and the pension swindle, the Mayor thinks that "what happened eight or ten years ago is of comparatively little concern to us compared with the obligations which rest upon us to remedy the past and to leave no vicious precedents as evil legacies for the future." The Mayor also vetoed a resolution passed by the board appointing C. D. Ehinehart a Republican Clerk in Justice Fisher's courts, in place of John Chaffee, the present incumbent, who is a Democrat. Mayor Howell returned without approval resolutions providing for the painting and numbering of the lamps at a cost of $2,100.

THE VANDERBILT LITIGATION.

AN EFFORT TO GET A STRUCK JURY IN THE $1,000,000 SUIT—THE WILL CONTEST.

Cornelius J. Vanderbilt's suit against his brother, William H. Vanderbilt, to recover $1,000,000, alleged by the plaintiff to be due him on an agreement for not contesting the will of his father, was upon the day calendar of Part II. of the Supreme Court, Circuit, yesterday, but was not called for trial. On Friday last Messrs. Henry L. Clinton, and Joseph H. Choate, counsel for the defendant, obtained from Chief-Justice Davis an order directing the plaintiff to show cause next Monday why a special or struck jury should not be drawn in the case and granting a stay of proceedings in the meantime. On the following day the plaintiff's counsel applied to Chief-Justice Davis to have the stay vacated. In his decision, rendered yesterday, the Chief-Justice says, among other things, he is satisfied that the case is a proper one for a struck jury, not solely because it involves the large sum of $1,000,000, but because "the action is complicated with other controversies involving vastly larger sums and questions of far greater interest." Among such controversies is the contest before the Surrogate in which the plaintiff is said to be an active participant; the action by the plaintiff to recover $7,000,000 from the defendant for fraudulently procuring the execution of their father's will, and the partition suit of Mrs. La Bau. Besides this, the controversies between the parties have excited great public interest, and have been much discussed in the newspapers. "It is not unreasonable," says the Chief-Justice, "to suppose that prejudice may exist rendering it difficult to secure an unbiased jury from the ordinary panels. Under such circumstances it is not unreasonable, I think, to allow an opportunity to either party to submit to the court the question whether the case be not one proper for a special jury." He therefore denied the application to vacate the stay.

Two attorneys protested, in turn, to Judge Landon, in Supreme Court, Circuit, Part II., yesterday morning, against the advancement on the calendar of the Vanderbilt suit, which, they said, had been given an improper preference over their causes. Scott Lord, one of Cornelius J. Vanderbilt's counsel, protested against any change being made in the calendar. He said he had been served with a stay of proceedings, granted by Chief-Justice Davis, in General Term. This stay had been issued on the theory that the cause was so important that it should be tried before a struck jury. Such a jury, Mr. Lord thought, was unnecessary, and he considered the stay of no value because it had not been granted at Circuit. He asked for an order directing the defendant to show cause why the stay should not be vacated, and such order was granted, and was made returnable this afternoon.

The Vanderbilt will case was argued all day, before Surrogate Calvin, on a motion by the contestants for the removal of William H. Vanderbilt and others from the position as Executors had under the will. In oppositions preliminary objections were made—first, that the Surrogate had no power in such proceedings to remove Executors, and further that the statements by the contestants, even if true, did not make out a case of irregularity or fraud, nor show that the interests of the estate or of the legatees were jeopardized. The Surrogate reserved his decision on these objections.

MRS. SIEFKE ACQUITTED.

Mrs. Caroline C. Siefke, the wife of a baker residing in Sixth-avenue, near Amity-street, was on trial yesterday, in the Brooklyn Court of Sessions, on a charge of attempting to poison her brother, John P. Bopke, of No. 62 Rose-street, Brooklyn, E. D. The facts of the case have been already published. The jury acquitted the accused without leaving their seats.

BRILLIANT BILLIARD PLAY.

SLOSSON MAKES THE LARGEST RECORDED AVERAGE.

HIS WONDERFUL GAME WITH ALBERT GARNIER—THE LATTER'S MARVELOUS CAROMS—HEISER WINS HIS FIRST VICTORY, DEFEATING RUDOLPHE.

The second week of the Brunswick and Balke Championship Tournament opened yesterday with two contests, the evening game being probably the most brilliant ever played in New-York. The contestants were Albert Garnier and George Slosson, and in the struggle brilliancy was pitted against the science of the game, and was overmatched. In the afternoon Randolph Heiser, the Boston boy player, vanquished A. P. Rudolphe, the French expert, after a long but very exciting struggle. The game in its opening stages was not remarkable for anything but the large number of "goose-eggs" gathered by each player, and the runs thereafter, although played neatly, did not net anything considerable. Heiser being in bad luck, while Rudolphe seemingly played more of an exhibition than a "string" game. Heiser, in his twenty-first inning, gathered the balls on the rail, and began to play with great skill and delicacy. On the ninety-sixth shot, which was a difficult one, he was "kissed off," and retired amid great cheering, having increased his score to 177, over 50 points ahead of Rudolphe's. This he followed with 24 very neatly played caroms in his next inning, increasing his score to 201, to which he still later on added 63. Rudolphe responded with 28 prettily-played shots, and, as was evident, came to the conclusion that the Boston lad could not be defeated as easily as he had at first supposed. In his thirty-sixth inning, Heiser gathered the balls and began a pretty series of "nurse" caroms on the bottom rail. The balls crossed to the right side rail, and began to click with unfailing regularity to the clock-work tapping of the lad's cue. Onward they went slowly, until just as they neared the top cushion they had chimed 100, and the hall echoed with applause. The obedient ivories, a moment later, reached and crossed the top rail, when, on the one hundred and thirty-second shot, they "froze." Fourteen shots brought them back in position on the left side rail, but again they "broke," and after completing a splendid run of 158 caroms the player left the table, with a score of 481 to his adversary's 215. A series of small runs on both sides followed, Rudolphe creeping up gradually by brilliant play toward Heiser's score, while the lad was having another run of bad luck. A turn came at last, and Heiser, after playing six successful shots, missed

The New-York Times.

VOL. XXVIII.....NO. 8544. NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 29, 1879. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

JAN 29 1879

ANOTHER ROW IN FRANCE.

THREATENED RESIGNATION OF PRESIDENT MACMAHON.

THE PRESIDENT REFUSES TO MAKE CHANGES IN THE GREAT MILITARY COMMANDS AND QUITS THE COUNCIL CHAMBER—THE POSITION OF THE MINISTRY—PURIFICATION OF THE FINANCE DEPARTMENT—AMNESTY MEASURES.

PARIS, Jan. 28.—The Soir (newspaper) publishes the following: "At this morning's Cabinet council President MacMahon signed the decree making changes in the magistracy, but when the question was raised of changes in the great military commands he said he could not assent to such resolutions, and must decline to disorganize the Army. He would leave the responsibility for such steps to others. With these words the Marshal quitted the hall of the council." This statement has everywhere produced the greatest excitement.

The groups of the Left appear determined to impeach the Ministry of the 16th of May. If they do, the Dufaure Cabinet will resign.

A conference of the Presidents and influential members of the bureaux of the majority in the Senate and Chamber of Deputies was held to-night. The Ministers, who were present, confirmed the report that President MacMahon had refused to sign the decree relative to the great military commands. The conference replied to the Ministers that the majority did not wish to overthrow President MacMahon, but would accept his resignation if he offered it; and pressed the Ministers to renew their representations to him in favor of signing the decree. The conference expressed the opinion that in the event of his persisting in his refusal the Ministers should explain the situation to the Chambers and tender their resignations.

M. Léon Say, Minister of Finance, has begun the political purification of the Finance Department. Five Treasurers-General have been superannuated, four placed on the unattached list, and two dismissed.

Baron de Bourgoing, an unseated member of the Chamber of Deputies, will refuse to stand for re-election. In an address to his constituents he says: "When the Republic has shown itself to be what it has always been, violent, anarchical, and, above all, incapable; when it shall have proved its inability to secure to the country tranquillity at home and peace abroad, you will find me again at my post of combat." Baron de Bourgoing was formerly connected with the Empress Eugenie.

VERSAILLES, Jan. 28.—In the Senate to-day Victor Hugo presented a proposition for full amnesty to Communists. Louis Blanc, in the Chamber of Deputies, presented an identical proposition, which, after some discussion, was declared urgent and referred to a committee, together with M. Lepere's proposition and two others upon Communists in contumaciam.

In the lobbies this afternoon rumors were already current of President MacMahon's intended resignation, but they were considered exaggerated.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—A dispatch to the Standard from Paris says that, in the event of President MacMahon's resignation, M. Gambetta will favor the candidacy of Gen. Chanzy or Admiral Pothuan for the Presidency.

The Times' Paris correspondent telegraphs that the forthcoming motion for the impeachment of the Ministry of the 16th of May is the work of Gambetta, who, after the late vote of confidence, said he was preparing plenty of surprises for the Cabinet. If the motion is passed, as it is certain to be in the present state of parties, both the Cabinet and President MacMahon will resign. The private residence of the Marshal has been in readiness for occupation since Monday. The correspondent believes the Cabinet might obtain a majority on this question if it accepted two or three members of the pure Left as colleagues, and adds that a reconstruction of the Cabinet is the only means of avoiding a disruption of the Executive and a general panic. Gambetta since Monday. Grévy to replace MacMahon, but it is doubtful whether Grévy would be an accomplice in the intrigue. This correspondent's information concerning the newer complication relative to the military commands is apparently not so late as that about the Ministers and the conference already cabled. He believes a compromise is probable.

PLAGUE-STRICKEN RUSSIA.

THE CONTAGION APPEARS IN A VILLAGE NEAR WETLIANKA—SANITARY PRECAUTIONS IN RUSSIA, ITALY, AND GERMANY.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 28.—The Golos states that the plague has made its appearance at a hamlet 34 miles from Wetlianka. Considerable alarm has been caused in Moscow by the news leaking out that a number of recruits for the Imperial Guard arrived in that city on the 13th of January from the infected district. The recruits were met by doctors, were disinfected and isolated, their clothing was burned, and it is believed that the danger of infection from them is over.

A letter published in the Russian Gazette states that the annual trade fair is shortly to be held at Simbirsk, where about 5,000,000 rubles usually change hands. If the quarantine continues, goods arriving from South Russia will be stopped, and the fair cannot be held, which will cause great loss to the inhabitants. Baron Korf, the Mayor of St. Petersburg, has made arrangements for the adoption of sanitary precautions in the event of the epidemic reaching the capital.

ROME, Jan. 28.—In the Senate to-day, Premier Depretis, replying to Signor Scarelli, said the Government had ordered a stringent quarantine against vessels from the Black Sea. That measure would suffice for the present, but if further steps were necessary they would be adopted.

BERLIN, Jan. 28.—The commission to deliberate upon protective measures against the plague has resolved to ask the Government to send a Commissioner to Russia, and recommends the same measures as the Vienna Conference recommended against the importation of Russian goods. Herr Finkelnburg told the commission that according to official data the plague has not spread beyond the originally infected districts. Moreover, the Russian authorities have begun to isolate those localities by a double cordon of military.

The Federal Council met to-day to discuss measures against the plague.

There is no truth in the statement printed in German newspapers that Russia has issued a diplomatic note denying the dangerous nature of the epidemic.

THE IRISH UNIVERSITY QUESTION.

RUMORS OF AN UNDERSTANDING BETWEEN THE ENGLISH GOVERNMENT AND THE CATHOLIC CHURCH.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The Manchester Guardian's London correspondent says: "It is understood that the five Cabinet meetings held within the past few days were chiefly devoted to the preparation of the programme for the coming session of Parliament, and that the chief work related to the Irish University question.

There is no doubt that negotiations have passed between the Government and the heads of the Catholic Church upon that subject. Mr. Isaac Butt, member of Parliament for Limerick, has been the medium of communication. Outside of official circles a strong impression prevails that an understanding has been arrived at, and that the proposed legislation is to be based upon the lines of the Intermediate Education bill of last year, the money to be provided out of the balance of the Irish Church fund. My own information does not go so far. Up to the present time the exchange of views between the Government and the heads of the Catholic hierarchy has led to no arrangement, and the prospect for a settlement is not so favorable as was very recently deemed likely. The Times has an editorial article summarising the pros and cons regarding the establishment of a Catholic University, which seems to be a feeler intended to elicit expressions of public opinion. The Times itself draws no conclusion, or, as it says, 'has no wish to prejudge the question of a Catholic University for Ireland.'"

THE EASTERN COMPLICATIONS.

A FRESH DISPUTE ABOUT THE ROUMANIAN FRONTIER—YAKOOB KHAN'S TROUBLES IN KABUL.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 28.—Russia, having protested against the delimitation of the frontier between Silistria and Mangalia, refuses to cede the line regulated by the Commission. Roumania has addressed a circular to the powers in regard to the matter.

Mukhtar Pasha and the Greek Frontier Commissioners have held their first conference at Prevesa.

Zuddi Effendi, Minister of Finance, has been dismissed from his office because of his failure to withdraw the paper currency, and Kiani Pasha has been appointed his successor.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Reuter's dispatch from Calcutta says the Ghilzais continue their hostilities against Yakoob Khan, who has no authority outside of Kabul. Desertions of his troops continue.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—The Standard's correspondent at Khost telegraphs that Whali Mahomed, a half-brother of Shere Ali, is en route to Hazarapir, where he will surrender to Gen. Roberts. He decided on this step because, having been summoned to Kabul, he feared he was about to be put to death for his recent defeat.

CURRENT TOPICS ABROAD.

GREAT DISTRESS AMONG THE WORKING CLASSES IN ENGLAND—A NEW AFRICAN EXPEDITION — THE GUELPH FUND—FAMINE IN UPPER EGYPT.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Seven thousand miners are idle in the County of Durham. The distress there has not been equaled since the great strike in 1844.

Mount Zion Convent, in Waterford, Ireland, has been burned. The fire was the work of an incendiary.

It is stated that the steamer Albion has been chartered to take Henry M. Stanley and party to Zanzibar for another exploring expedition in Africa.

A Berlin dispatch to the Pall Mall Gazette says: "Prussia is said to be preparing a measure for the Diet providing for the permanent retention of the Guelph fund by Prussia, on the ground of its forfeiture. The opinion of jurists on the question of the Brunswick succession is that the Duke of Cumberland's claims cannot be legally set aside, and in case of his death or renunciation, the Diet designates the Duke of Cambridge to the succession, and then the dynasty of Wurtemberg."

A Paris dispatch to the Times states that the rebellious natives of Bolor, in Guinea, have defeated the Portuguese troops. A private telegram states that the Portuguese loss is 300 men, including 50 Europeans, and two officers. The Governor of Guinea has been superseded. A corvette, with 200 men, has been dispatched from Lisbon.

HAMBURG, Jan. 28.—The supplementary inquiry into the loss of the steamer Pommerania has closed. The Imperial Commissioner proposed that the Maritime Court should declare the Captain and officers free from blame, but expressed an opinion against leaving empty coal-bunkers open. Judgment was deferred.

CAIRO, Jan. 28.—News has reached here of a serious famine in Upper Egypt. Two parties of Englishmen have been sent from here with relief.

SHEFFIELD, Jan. 28.—The South Yorkshire and North Derbyshire coal-owners, at a meeting to-day, received a deputation from the Miners's Union, who presented a resolution agreeing to arbitration. After much discussion it was resolved that both parties should complete their respective cases for arbitration on Feb. 28. The notices which expired to-day were withdrawn.

BERLIN, Jan. 28.—An imperial decree has been issued summoning the German Parliament to meet on the 12th of February.

MADRID, Jan. 28.—The Maritime Tribunal of Cadiz has declared the the English bark Santarita, which was seized at sea with 14,393 kilos of tobacco on board, is a fair prize.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—The Standard's Berlin correspondent says the opposition to protection is rapidly increasing in numbers and power.

DEMOCRATIC SENATORS IN CAUCUS.

AN INTERESTING DISCUSSION ON THE PROPOSED WAR CLAIM AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The Democratic Senators held a caucus this morning to consider the joint resolution passed by the House last June proposing an amendment to the Constitution prohibiting the payment of claims of disloyal persons for property injured or destroyed during the rebellion. This joint resolution was reported to the Senate with an amendment in the form of a substitute, prohibiting the payment of claims for property taken, used, or destroyed during the rebellion owned by disloyal persons. An additional paragraph was added by the Senate committee in the following words: "No pension, bounty, grant, pecuniary indemnity, or pecuniary benefit, shall ever be given or provided for, by or under the authority of Congress or any State, for or on account of any military or other service performed, or injury suffered, in hostility to the Government of the United States. No pardon or amnesty, past or future, shall have any effect to take any person, case, or claim, out of the purview of this article." Quite an interesting discusion took place upon the question presented by this proposed amendment. The Northern Senators expressed decided opposition to it. They held that its presentation implied that the Democrats, who are about to assume control of the legislative department of the Government, could not be trusted to decide upon claims that might be presented to Congress. They argued that such a proposition came at this time with bad grace from the Republicans, who have been voting money in payment of war claims for 12 years past, and who never thought of amending the Constitution in this particular until their power in Congress was about to depart. They were opposed to every character of war claims, and had persistently voted against their payment, but they would not permit the Republicans to force them to say that the Democratic Party could not be as fully trusted as the Republicans had been upon all matters of legislation. If such an amendment was to be passed, they thought it could be done with more propriety and effect at the next session of Congress, when the Democrats would have the responsibility for all legislation, and could obtain the credit for adopting a measure of this kind. Some of the Southern Senators said they had no objection to the adoption of such an amendment to the Constitution, but would defer to their Northern colleagues as to the propriety and policy of passing upon it at this session. No action was taken, and the further consideration of the matter was postponed until next Tuesday.

Before adjourning a brief discussion occurred upon Senator Thurman's proposition to consider the New-York appointments in executive session, but no conclusion was reached. The proposition was not received with much favor.

ICE-GORGES AT ST. LOUIS.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 28.—More ice floated down from the gorge above the bridge this afternoon, and at one time the whole mass, from bank to bank and nearly a mile in length, moved, and there were indications that it would break, but it lodged against the bridge piers, and now remains there. The gorge at and below Arsenal Island remains solid, and is not likely to move immediately. Two barges, laden with salt for this city, sank on Sunday night about 30 miles below here.

About 8 o'clock to-night the ice above the bridge started again, and came down in great masses. Striking the bridge piers, it was broken into comparatively small pieces, and floated through the harbor without doing any damage so far as now known.

THE REPLY OF GEN. ARTHUR

ITS EFFECT IN WASHINGTON.

SUPPORTERS OF THE ADMINISTRATION NOT QUITE SO CONFIDENT AS THEY WERE—NO ACTION YET IN THE SENATE IN REGARD TO THE NOMINATIONS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The answer to the charges of Secretary Sherman sent to the Senate by Collector Arthur, of New-York, and which was printed to-day, has attracted a great deal of attention here. It is universally commented on as one of the strongest documents of the kind which has ever been submitted to Congress, and it is understood that certain members of the Administration are not nearly as confident of being able to secure the confirmation of Acting Collector Merritt as they were a few days ago. They still persist in the contest, however, and to sustain his position Secretary Sherman has revived a number of old and exploded allegations in regard to the official conduct of Special Deputy Collector Lydecker, and presented them to the Senate as additional reasons why Collector Arthur, who is charged with having been fully aware of the "corrupt practices" of his Chief Deputy, and who, nevertheless, continued him in office, should not be sustained. It is known that Mr. Lydecker has already fully and satisfactorily answered the charges referred to, and it is believed that he will be able to do so again.

There was no executive session of the Senate to-day, and, consequently, no further consideration of the Custom-house cases. Senator Conkling and a number of the leading men of both parties are still anxious to have the whole question discussed in open Senate, but there is little prospect that such action will be taken. It is now believed that Messrs. Hoar, Dawes, Burnside, Saunders, and Matthews are the only Republicans who will vote for the confirmation of Merritt. On the other hand, it is believed that at least 10 Democrats will vote in favor of his rejection. No matter what may be the outcome of the contest, the President and Secretary Sherman are still determined that under no circumstances shall Gen. Arthur again perform the duties of Collector. They hold that under the law, Mr. Merritt's rejection will not reinstate Gen. Arthur. In this view of the case it is known they are sustained by Secretary Evarts.

ASKING MERRITT'S CONFIRMATION.

MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATURE ASKED TO SIGN A PETITION IN FAVOR OF THE PRESENT CUSTOM-HOUSE OFFICERS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 28.—A. B. Hepburn was circulating to-day the following petition in the Legislature for signatures:

To the Honorable the Senate of the United States:

The undersigned, members of the Legislature of the State of New-York, respectfully ask, in the interest of harmony in the Republican Party, that the nominations now pending before your honorable body for Collector, Surveyor, and Naval Officer of the Port of New-York be confirmed.

Mr. Hepburn went about this afternoon in search of members to sign the petition. He said early in the evening that he would make the list known to-night, if it were completed. Gen. Palmer, who is here, reports that it was not completed, as Mr. Hepburn was indisposed, and had gone home to rest. As he had just changed lodgings, he could not be found. The list has been signed by between 40 and 50 members, including, besides Hepburn, Skinner, Wadsworth, Youngs, Chase, and others, and, it is said, four Senators. Speaker Alvord, reported as having signed the petition, said to-night that when Gen. Merritt was here a few days ago and the subject was mentioned, he admitted that the Speaker could not be expected to sign, and that he would not be asked to do so. While there was no man in the State for whom he had a higher personal regard than Gen. Merritt, it would scarcely be consistent for him to sign such a petition as that in circulation for his confirmation. As it was, the petition had not been presented to him, and it was almost unnecessary to add he had not signed it.

Mr. Sloan has not signed it. Mr. Hepburn says that he had been under the impression that Mr. Sloan would sign the petition when offered, but that for reasons of his own he had declined to add his name to the list.

THE CHINESE IMMIGRATION BILL.

IT IS PASSED BY THE HOUSE UNDER GAG LAW —EFFORTS TO CORRECT ITS DEFECTS HOWLED DOWN BY THE DEMOCRATS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The House to-day passed the bill to restrict the immigration of Chinese to the United States. The Democrats attempted to manage the bill so as to make partisan capital, and with this view cut off general discussion and opportunity for amendment by ordering the previous question and farming out the hour allowed for debate among themselves. They allowed Mr. Townsend, of New-York, a little time, because they knew he was opposed to the bill, but would give no Republican a chance to reply to the false charges made by Mr. Luttrell and others touching the attitude of the Republican Party upon this question. The bill makes it unlawful for the master of any vessel to take on board at any port within the Chinese Empire or other foreign port any number exceeding 15 Chinese passengers with the intent to bring such passengers to the United States. For each passenger brought to the United States in excess of 15 the offending master is liable to a fine of $100 and six months' imprisonment. The Republicans pointed out that under the language of the bill an Embassy from China like that now here, which consists of 40 persons, would be excluded, and that a vessel manned by a Chinese crew, would also be prevented from entering an American port. It was also pointed out that under the bill, if an American or other vessel bound to the United States were to rescue shipwrecked Chinese mariners they could not be landed on our shores. But the Democrats persistently howled down all attempts to perfect the bill in the particulars named. A proposed amendment to give the Chinese Government six months' notice of the purpose on the part of the United States to abrogate the Burlingame treaty was also refused. It is not likely that the bill will be passed by the Senate in this form.

CONGRESSIONAL TOPICS.

WARREN MITCHELL'S WAR CLAIM VOTED DOWN IN THE SENATE—MR. EDMUNDS' RESOLUTIONS TO BE DISCUSSED TO-DAY.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The Senate spent the greater portion of to-day upon the war claim of Warren Mitchell, of Kentucky. Mr. Jones, of Florida, and Mr. Voorhees, of Indiana, spoke for, and Mr. McMillan, of Minnesota, against, it. There was little interest in the debate except the pertinent inquiries made by Mr. Morgan, of Alabama, and others, who opposed the measure. Quite a lobby was on the outside urging the passage of the bill. The bill only received 17 votes. During the debate upon this bill several of the Democratic Senators have put themselves unequivocally upon record as opposed to war claims of every character, and the meagre vote this measure received is taken as a fair expression of the Senate upon war claims generally.

Before the adjournment to-day Senator Edmunds succeeded in getting before the Senate his resolutions in relation to the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth amendments to the Constitution, and they will come up to-morrow after the expiration of the morning hour. Some of the Democrats endeavored to defeat the motion to take up the resolution, and for this purpose Senator Gordon interposed a motion to adjourn. Several Democratic Senators voted with the Republicans against adjournment and supported Mr. Edmunds' motion to take up the resolutions. The discussion will be opened to-morrow by Senator Edmunds, who will be followed by Mr. Morgan, of Alabama, in support of the substitute presented by him a few days ago in obedience to the instructions of the Democratic caucus.

A large delegation of Philadelphians interested in the improvement of the Delaware and Schuylkill Rivers arrived here this evening, and will appear before the House Committee on Commerce to-morrow morning, for the purpose of urging an appropriation for the improvement of those streams. The delegation is composed of the joint Committee on Navigation of the Councils of Philadelphia, committees of the Commercial and Maritime Exchanges, the Port-wardens, and a number of leading citizens. Gov. Hoyt and Mayor Stokley, of Philadelphia, are with the delegation, and Gov. Hoyt to-night held an informal reception, which was largely attended by the Pennsylvanians in the city, Speaker Randall and all the Pennsylvania delegates in Congress being present. Gen. McComb and Col. Ludlow, who are in charge of the improvements of the Delaware and Schuylkill Rivers, are also with the delegation. To-morrow morning the party will appear before the House Committee on Commerce, and after the conference with the committee a portion of the delegation propose to call upon the President in relation to the appointment of William M. McMichael, of Philadelphia, to the judgeship made vacant by the death of Judge Cadwallader. It is understood that the entire Pennsylvania delegation have agreed to unite in recommending Col. McMichael.

WITNESSES IN FAVOR OF RENO.

AN OFFICER AND A SCOUT WHO SAW NOTHING COWARDLY IN RENO'S CONDUCT.

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—When the Reno inquiry opened this morning, Frederick Whittaker, Reno's accuser, sent in a list of questions which he desired to have put to the witness then on the stand. The court decided that Whittaker's request to appear as prosecutor or assistant prosecuter would not be allowed, and that the Recorder should decide as to the reception of the questions. His decision was that they should be read. The witness [Herendeen, the scout] was asked if he observed any evidence of fear on the part of Reno on either of the days of battle. The witness could say nothing against his conduct, except that on the retreat he started before his men; he had always thought that the command was stampeded by the Indians firing a volley into the timber.

Lieut. Hair was recalled, and much testimony was elicited bearing on the movement of Capt. Weir, while officer, it has been said, on his own hook, and, long ago, charged the recall of his company to Reno's cowardice. Returning from the pack train, he was directed to tell Weir to open up communication with Custer, and that Reno would join them soon. The order was executed, and Weir set out. The command followed, but the attack upon Weir by the Indians showed Reno that it would be necessary to return to the original position. On his return to the house Rowell was also dead. Rowell was undoubtedly insane at the time of committing the deed. He had been considered so occasionally for several years, but was quiet and considered harmless. He was a large and powerful man, and very dangerous when deranged. At the Coroner's inquest to-day the verdict was that McFarland and his wife came to their death by the hands of George Rowell, and that Raynes killed Rowell in self-defense.

THE DEAD MINT DIRECTOR.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The funeral of the late Dr. H. R. Linderman, Director of the Mint, will take place on Thursday. Services will be held at his late residence in this city on Thursday morning at 11 o'clock, after which the remains will be taken by special car to Bethlehem, and services will be held at the house of his brother, Dr. G. P. Linderman, on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. At a meeting of the principal officers of the Treasury Department to-day, resolutions of respect to the memory of their late associate were passed.

IN MEMORY OF JUDGE CADWALADER.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 28.—A meeting of the members of the Philadelphia bar was held at noon to-day to take action regarding the death of the late Judge Cadwalader, of the United States District Court. The court-room was very heavily draped in mourning, and during the meeting was crowded in every part. Addresses were made by prominent members of the Bar, and resolutions in memory of the deceased Justice were adopted.

KANSAS VOTING FOR A SENATOR.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 28.—A special dispatch from Topeka, Kan., says the vote to-day in the Senate for United States Senator resulted as follows: Ingalls, 13; Simpson, 7; Anthony, 6; Phillips, 4; scattering, 7. The vote in the House was as follows: Ingalls, 47; Anthony, 20; Simpson, 10; Phillips, 7; Horton, 1; Pomeroy, 2; Campbell, 3; Mitchell, (Greenbacker,) 17; Goodin, (Democrat,) 20.

VIRGINIA'S DEBT CONFERENCE.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 28.—The General Assembly decided to-day that the conference with creditors of the State, which will take place on Jan. 30, shall be conducted by the Committees on Finance of both houses acting conjointly, with authority to arrange the details of the conference and to sit during the sessions of their respective bodies.

NO SENATOR YET FROM LOUISIANA.

NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 28.—In the Senatorial caucus the eighth ballot to-day resulted as follows: Eustis, 27; Kenner, 23; Jonas, 36; scattering, 5. Several new candidates were placed in nomination.

LOUISIANA'S BANKRUPTCY.

WHAT SENATOR KELLOGG KNOWS ABOUT THE STATE DEBT.

INACCURATE STATEMENTS CORRECTED—THE FINANCIAL ADMINISTRATION OF KELLOGG'S GOVERNMENT AND WHAT WAS ACCOMPLISHED — INADEQUATE ASSESSMENTS THROUGHOUT THE STATE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—In an interview had with Senator Kellogg regarding the failure of the Democratic Government of Louisiana to pay the interest on the State debt, and the prospect that a portion of the debt itself will be repudiated, he said that the communication to the editor signed "C," which appeared in THE TIMES of the 26th inst., professing to reply to statements made in these dispatches regarding the administration of fiscal affairs in Louisiana under the Nicholls Government, was inaccurate in nearly all its essential statements. The writer said: "A large part of the interest paid on consolidated bonds during Mr. Kellogg's Administration was advanced by the Fiscal Agent, and only a small portion of his advances has been returned by the State." This Gov. Kellogg pronounces to be untrue. The Fiscal Agent at no time during his Administration was called upon to make any considerable advance to the interest fund. The credit of the Government was such that if any advances were required they were promptly made and as promptly repaid, and when the Kellogg Government went out of office there was a considerable balance in the Fiscal Agent's hands to the credit of the interest fund. J. H. Oglesby, President of the Louisiana National Bank, at New-Orleans, was the Fiscal Agent, and Messrs. Winslow, Lanier & Co. were his New-York agents. These gentlemen are referred to to confirm this assertion. The writer further said that "it is not true that all of the coupons have been paid by the Kellogg Government, as the holders of coupons of July, 1874, and July, 1875, well know." Here again, he misrepresents facts. All interest coupons which were presented for payment on bonds funded by the Kellogg Government were paid. The unpaid coupons of 1874 and 1875 referred to are the back interest due on the bonds which have been funded since by Nicholls. Of the existing State debt of $11,700,000 in round numbers, $9,318,000 were funded under Gov. Kellogg, and all interest coupons on that amount were paid when presented at maturity. The back coupons now unpaid belong to that of the $2,382,000 of bonds issued by Nicholls since Kellogg went out of office. Each of the new consolidated bonds authorized by the Funding law has interest coupons attached dating back to the passage of that law—January, 1874—and, consequently, when any old bonds are funded in the new consols there are coupons of back interest as well as of current interest which are to be paid in future.

The statements regarding the rate of assessments in the State, and the inability of the people to pay 7 per cent. interest on a bonded debt of less than $12,000,000 are equally untrustworthy. For instance, the value of all the household furniture, jewelry, &c., in the whole State, outside of New-Orleans, by the assessment of last year, placed at $19,000, and this amount is located in only 10 parishes, leaving 47 parishes without a dollar's worth of personal property. The real estate, &c., of the city of New-Orleans, is assessed at $100,000,000 and all the rest of the State, with its rich cotton, sugar, and rice lands, is valued at only $55,000,000. Much less than one-forth of the value of the crops annually produced. The thriving towns of Shreveport, Baton Rouge, Monroe, Opelousas, and a half dozen others of equal importance, are returned as not having a single corporation doing business in their midst, and without one dollar of capital stock. The total assessments of the country parishes have been lowered $6,000,000 this year. These are a few of the facts disclosed by the last report of Nicholls' State Auditor, and effectually dispose of the assumption that the people of Louisiana, as a whole, are fairly assessed, and that the taxes are properly collected.

DEPOSITORS GROWING ANXIOUS.

TROY, N. Y., Jan. 28.—Many depositors have closed their accounts with the Troy Savings Bank. The cause of uneasiness is that a majority of the Directors of the suspended Merchants' and Mechanics' Bank were Trustees of the savings bank. They have all resigned except Daniel Robinson, who, although not a Director of the suspended bank, is believed to have had much to do with its misfortunes. In two days $150.000 has been drawn out of the savings bank. The deposits amount to $4,250.000. The Bank Trustees are glad they say, that depositors are withdrawing money, because they are not able to invest it at remunerative rates. The Bank Superintendent recently caused an examination of its affairs, and reports it able to stand any run. D. Thomas Vail, President of the Merchants' and Mechanics' Bank, will be tried next week on an indictment for perjury, if he shall be able to leave his house, which is doubtful.

KENTUCKY MINERS EXCITED.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 28.—Advices from Ashland, Ky., state that the prolonged strike of the Norton Iron Works miners terminated yesterday by the miners resuming work. A large number of turbulent miners gathered at the works threatening trouble, declaring that the men resuming violated the rules of the union, which required concessions from the mine-owners. Following this excitement came a strike among the employes at the Princess Furnace Mines, a few miles distant, the miners demanding an advance of 5 cents a ton. By this movement several hundred men have been thrown out of employment. Great excitement prevails.

ANOTHER VANDERBILT ROAD.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Jan. 28.—The election for Directors of the Rochester and State Line Railroad was held to-day, and resulted in the choice of the following: William H. Vanderbilt, Cornelius Vanderbilt, William K. Vanderbilt, Augustus Schell, Samuel F. Barger, Edwin D. Worcester, James Tillinghast, George H. Burrows, Oliver Allen, Donald McNaughton, Edward Harris, D. D. S. Brown, and Allen D. Scott. A majority of the stock is owned by William H. Vanderbilt, and his stock was voted on at this election. This road is now run in close connection with the New-York Central, and the alliance is strengthened by this election.

NOYES' LEGISLATIVE EXPENSES.

NEW-HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 28.—The statements concerning the contents of Benjamin Noyes' check-book, now in Receiver Russell's hands, and said to show that $30,000 were used by Noyes for "legislative expenses," in 1875, to prevent the repeal of the charter of Noyes' insurance company, have called forth a public letter from Charles Durand, Speaker of the House of that session, who demands the publication of the names in the book at once.

REV. MR. HAYDEN'S TRIAL DELAYED.

NEW-HAVEN, Conn., Jan 28.—The trial of Rev. H. H. Hayden for the murder of Mary E. Stannard, of Madison, which had been set down for Feb. 10, has been postponed until April, mainly because of the election of State Attorney Platt as United States Senator. He had made a careful study of the case, but his resignation will take him out of it, and make necessary other arrangements.

A HANGING DELAYED.

DEADWOOD, Dakota, Jan. 28.—The Territorial Supreme Court having granted a writ of error in the case of M. L. Cook, who was sentenced at the last term of the District Court to be hanged here to-day, the execution was delayed pending the decision of the Supreme Court, which will be rendered at the next session.

A HEAVY GALE IN DEADWOOD.

DEADWOOD, Dakota, Jan. 27.—A heavy gale prevailed on Sunday, doing much damage in Deadwood Gulch, unroofing houses, uprooting trees, and blowing down fences.

NINETY-FIVE PER CENT. CALLED FOR.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Jan. 28.—The Directors of the First National Bank have made a call on the stockholders for 95 per cent. on each share, to make up all deficiencies and contingencies consequent on the previous mismanagement, to be paid within 20 days. The Directors say that if the call is not responded to they fear the bank will have to go into the hands of a Receiver, which would probably use up all the stock and require assessments to satisfy the depositors. The stockholders are called to meet next Saturday to consult and decide whether the bank is to be wound up by a Receiver or the assessment met. Cashier Leake, whose altered mismanagement brought disaster on the institution, has resigned.

FORTY MILLIONS AT STAKE.

THE WOODBURY PATENT CASE DECIDED AGAINST THE PLAINTIFFS—CLOSE OF THIRTY YEARS OF DIFFICULTIES AND LITIGATION.

BOSTON, Jan. 28.—Judge Lowell, in the United States Circuit Court, to-day, rendered a decision in the celebrated Woodbury patent case, which has been in litigation for more than 30 years. The decision was adverse to the plaintiffs, the Judge refusing to sustain the patent on the ground of lack of originality, and the bill was dismissed, with costs. Had the patent been sustained, it would have covered nearly all the planing machines in use in the United States, and its value would have been nearly $40,000,000, of which $10,000,000 is for royalties claimed to have accrued since its issue. It is probable that exception will be taken to the decision of this court, and the case reargued before the Supreme Court at Washington.

The patent in suit, No. 138,462, was issued to Joseph P. Woodbury, April 29, 1873, 25 years after it was first applied for, and 27 years after the invention was completed. The history of this grant is remarkable. It is for an improvement in planing-machines, by which flat bars are placed before and behind the cutters to keep the stock firm during the operation, instead of the rollers which were used by Woodworth, the inventor of this class of machines. This change, though slight, has proved to be of great value, and is now in general use. The inventor made application June 3, 1848, and appointed an attorney, but did not give him the usual authority. The power was so worded as not to enable him to withdraw the application. Feb. 20, 1849, and nothing further was done until October, 1852, when the attorney withdrew the application and received back $20, of which Woodbury had no notice. In February, 1854, Woodbury instructed Mr. Cooper, a patent solicitor of Boston, to call up and prosecute the rejected application. There was a misunderstanding as to the invention referred to, and it was only in September, 1854, that Mr. Cooper learned exactly how the case stood. The law limitation prevented any further action on the matter until Congress revised the Patent laws in 1870, when a patent was finally obtained, April 29, 1873. The court decided that the invention of Woodbury had been anticipated by a machine built by one Anson, at Norwich, Conn., three years before, the patent having been applied for in 1844. There was no doubt that the Anson machine had bars instead of rollers. It has been running ever since, and was produced in court. Upon the points of objection taken by the plaintiff to the Anson machine, the court decided that the bed of that machine was sufficiently solid to assure the purpose of Woodbury's bed, which was to resist firmly, like the anvil, the blows of the cutter, and that the bars which Anson made, instead of rollers, had a yielding pressure. The patent of which Anson asked for had nothing to do with the bars, and there is no reason to suppose that he understood that there was any such advantage in bars over rollers as Woodbury saw and made known. He was not concerned with the particular matter of a yielding pressure bar, but the Judge decided that if he made it to yield he made the thing which Woodbury is, by a very proper, and, indeed, necessary, fiction of the patent law, presumed to have knowledge of, and therefore when Woodbury pointed out the great advantage of this arrangement, he was merely applying an old machine to a more extensive use. The Judge concluded: "I believe him to have been an original and meritorious inventor, but of a change which was not difficult to make or invent, and of which, as it turns out, he was not the first inventor."

These claims, to Infringement were instituted nearly three years ago, and they are defended by an association of persons using the machines or representing users. The patentee is dead, and the plaintiffs are a corporation to whom he had assigned his patent. Counsel for the patentees were the following: Ex-Commissioners Burke and Fisher, Messrs. Greenough, Stoughton, Dodge, Munn, Duncan, and Drew, of Washington; Stoughton, Cozzens, and Dickerson, of New-York; Giles, Woodbury, Edson, Curtis, Copper, and Whittier, of Boston; Strout and Clifford, of Portland. For the defendants Benjamin F. Thurston, D. Hall Rice, and Charles E. Pratt.

ARRESTED FOR STEALING A MAIL POUCH.

WHEELING, West Va., Jan. 28.—Buck Dixon and Jerome Dawson were arrested at Pennsboro West Va., last night, by Government Detective Shallcross for stealing a mail pouch from the crane at that place last week. Boyce, who was arrested next day after the mail pouch was stolen, has made a full confession. Dawson was in the Post Office while the mail was being made up, and saw registered letters put in the pouch, which was put on the crane, and finding out that the train was late planned to rob the pouch. They secured about $50. All three are in jail at Clarksburg.

INVESTIGATING THE BLODGETT CHARGES.

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—The sub-committee of the House Judiciary Committee, to investigate the charges against Judge Henry W. Blodgett, of the United States District Court, arrived here this morning and spent the day in determining upon the details of the methods of procedure. The committee consists of Representatives Knott, Culberson, and Lapham.

During the afternoon a secret session was held, and a resolution was adopted that charges should be heard in open session, and that Judge Blodgett might be represented by counsel who might cross-examine witnesses and present his side of the case.

SHOT IN A STREET FIGHT.

PETERSBURG, Va., Jan. 28.—A fight occurred to-night in Sycamore-street between Robert A. Orr and W. G. Staubley, during which the latter was shot in the leg and foot with a pistol by the former. The difficulty was caused by a card published this morning by Staubley, charging Orr with having perjured himself as a witness in a recent case in which Staubley was defendant. Both men were promptly arrested and bailed for examination to-morrow. Staubley's wounds are slight.

THE CREDITORS OF MEMPHIS.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 28.—A bill was filed in the United States Court this afternoon by John W. Garrett & Sons and other holders of Memphis bonds. The object of the bill is to secure the appointment of a Receiver for the city in conformity with a law passed by the Tennessee Legislature in 1877, and to provide for the payment of the debts of the city out of its assets, and thus thwart the scheme of a repeal of the city charter now threatened by legislative action.

A PASTOR SUES HIS FLOCK.

LONG BRANCH, Jan. 28.—At Freehold, to-day, the case of Charles S. Hageman, D. D., against the Second Reformed (Dutch) Church, of Freehold, which has been before the Monmouth County Court for several days, was decided, the jury giving the clergyman a verdict for over $1,200, the amount of his salary from the time his pulpit was declared vacant by his congregation until he resigned. This case has been before the Classis for a long time, and has caused much excitement in and about Freehold.

DESTROYING ILLICIT STILLS.

WHEELING, West Va., Jan. 28.—A dispatch from Charlestown, West Va., to the Intelligencer says that Deputy Collector Morris and his party returned to-day. They destroyed six stills, 2,000 gallons of mash, 50 gallons of whisky, and other material. A party had a fight with the moonshiners in McDowell County. One moonshiner was shot and one of the raiding party wounded.

BRIDGE DESTROYED BY ICE.

WHEELING, West Va., Jan. 28.—The Baltimore and Ohio Railway bridge across Wheeling Creek, in this city, was cut down and entirely destroyed by running ice at 8 A. M. to-day. The loss is $3,000. The last car of a train loaded with school children had just passed off the bridge as it went down.

*KENTUCKY'S

reporters, members of Congress, witnesses, and people admitted by the courtesy of the committee. The only business which was considered in secret session was in reference to the calling of certain witnesses and it was decided that to-morrow Judge Southard and Mr. Tyner should be called to the stand.

MR. CHANDLER'S EXAMINATION RESUMED.

Mr. Chandler, being again called upon to testify, said that he was unable to say from whom he got the permission to look through the cipher dispatches while they were in the committee-room. It might have been Senator Morton or Senator Mitchell; he did not know that there was any arrangment at that time that the dispatches were not to be made public, but he assumed it; he knew there was an arrangement by which other committees investigating the Presidential election matter should have free access to the telegrams.

The Chairman—Was there not an arrangement between the two political parties that the cipher dispatches should not be gone into? A.—I do not know whether there was such an arrangement or not; I know that about the time I first declined to testify with regard to them, without the leave of my client, that shortly after, when I had obtained leave and was ready to testify, I discovered that there was no desire to proceed with the inquiry on the part of the Democratic members, and I also understood that the Republicans were willing to let the investigation of the dispatches remain where it was; I was desirous that the fullest investigation should be made; I did not like to drop the subject when Mr. Chandler's and Mr. Tilden's bankbooks were about to be called for; I understood it was stopped by the representatives of Mr. Tilden.

Mr. McMahon—I was mistaken in that.

Upon being asked from what he drew this inference, the witness replied that he learned that Senator Carpenter, representing, as he understood, Mr. Tilden, and Senator Morton had suggested that it would be a good plan to have a private investigation that was then approaching a culmination; Mr. Carpenter might or might not have had authority from the Democrats to offer that suggestion; he had never heard that Senator Morton had made a formal proposition to that effect.

Mr. McMahon—How did you come to go to the committee-room to look for those dispatches?

The witness replied that he had heard from Gov. Stearns that some telegraphic stamps had testified that, while listening to the wires, they had overheard messages relating to money or troops passing between Stearns and Chandler. He [witness] was confident there were no such dispatches, and he wanted to verify his opinion; he made a search, but failed to find any.

On being asked how he came to know that the cipher dispatches were in the hands of Gen. Brady, the witness said that Mr. Eugene Hale informed him, because he [witness] had made such bitter complaints from the Spring of 1877 up to that time with regard to the stopping of the investigation of these dispatches; he was bitter because the dispatches which he had sent had been printed, while the bonanza, which he was sure could be discovered if the private dispatches had not been destroyed or lost; he understood that after the session of Congress closed the cipher dispatches had been returned to the Western Union Telegraph Company, and destroyed [laughter]; Mr. Hale knew nothing whatever of any abstraction of telegrams from the time they went into the committee-room to the time I learned that Mr. Bullock had obtained those which you are now investigating; there was no reason why any of those dispatches had been abstracted or taken away.

Gen. Butler, witness said, had nothing whatever to do with furnishing copies of originals to the Tribune that he had seen in the newspaper of. "I first furnished them 12 or 15 Florida copies," he said, "which they returned to me; I afterward forwarded to them all the remaining Florida copies; subsequently they returned, by way of Mr. Hiscock, all the remaining copies of telegrams; these did not include the second bundle of telegrams; that was sent by Mr. Brady himself."

Mr. McMahon—Which did you not formally offer the dispatches to the committee? A.—I liked Gen. Butler better than any other member of the committee; [laughter;] he was the only member that I could find who was willing to investigate in Wormley conference, and I thought, therefore, that he was the best men to investigate the cipher dispatches.

Gen. Butler observed that he afterward laid the dispatches before the committee, but that some of the members seemed desirous of taking them up.

Mr. McMahon (to witness)—Why did you turn them over to Gen. Butler without notifying him? A.—He was not in his office at the time; I never told him afterward that I had turned them over; I suspected it, though; I thought if I laid them in the hands of—if you will allow me to say it—the most responsible member of the committee, my duty was at an end; I informed Mr. Hiscock that I had left them with Mr. Butler.

Mr. Hiscock—I stood next in Mr. Chandler's estimation, it seems.

Mr. McMahon (to witness)—Why was it necessary for you to leave them there so mysteriously, and never mention the fact to Mr. Butler? A.—I never said that there was the slightest necessity.

Q.—The General Stated Frankly during the last two weeks that he did not know, and had no suspicion, where they came from.

Gen. Butler—I said last week that I did not know where they came from.

Witness—I should like to have the General sworn if he is going to answer. [Laughter.]

Mr. McMahon repeated his question to the witness that he does not remember that his statement was materially different from that given above, beyond that, for the amusement of the Democrats, he desired the documents to be brought to public view in an artistic manner. [Laughter.] He had no fears; he simply suspected that I placed them on his table," he said at last, "but I have never said so to him, and he never said so to me; if I had seen that Gen. Butler's reputation was likely to be compromised by the possession of these dispatches, I should have promptly informed the world that I placed them there."

In reply to Mr. Hiscock, witness testified that when he went to Tallahassee he received from Zach. Chandler a check on the Continental Bank of Philadelphia for $2,000; he paid that to Mr. Morgan, the Chairman of the Florida Campaign Committee, and it was used by that gentleman to secure evidence for the Canvassing Board; witness also received $2,000 from Chandler and a few thousand dollars in some other ways, about $9,000 in all; $7,000 was paid by him to Gen. Morson, and by the latter disbursed; the other $2,000, witness himself disbursed in counsel fees and some minor bills and legitimate expenses; he had already said that the work of preparing testimony for the Canvassing Board was protracted and laborious; they took the testimony of 1,000 witnesses probably, and the case was thoroughly prepared—as well as any legal case that he ever had the honor of taking charge of—and got up very cheaply; for instance, the Jefferson County case was finished their case with reference to Jefferson County, and put in 300 or 400 affidavits; upon this the Republican Party sent a special train down to Jefferson County and brought up 150 witnesses, took their testimony on Sunday morning, and had them before the Canvassing Board on Monday. He gave this as an instance of how the money was expended.

Mr. Butler—Did not you hear from various sources open declarations that I had received these telegrams? A.—You yourself spoke to me of the fact that you had them, talked about getting them deciphered, and said you knew it could be done, but it would cost some money.

Mr. McMahon—And yet in all those conversations he never asked whether it was you who left them on his desk or not? A.—I knew who left them there, and I suspected that he suspected that I had.

Mr. Butler—As you said nothing about it I thought I had better say nothing about it, for if you had wished me to know you would have told me.

The Witness—We perfectly understood each other, General.

MR. EVANS RECALLED.

Mr. Evans was at this point recalled, and asked if he had found the original letter from Mr. Bullock, a copy of which was read before the committee yesterday. Mr. Evans replied that he had, and he wished to know who wrote the copy.

The Chairman—I will tell you who wrote my copy.

Mr. Evans—I don't want to know that; I want to know who copied my letter.

The Chairman explained how he came by it. Several weeks ago a man called upon him and said he had seen a letter which showed where the missing dispatches were, and that he could procure a copy of it. The man left his address, and went away with a request from Mr. Potter to secure the copy. Mr. Potter lost the address, and the man did not come back, but one day the former met him on the street, and asked for the latter, and the man handed it to him. Mr. Potter could not tell the man's name.

Mr. Chandler—Is there not as much mystery about that as about the dispatches being placed on Gen. Butler's table?

Mr. Evans—I want to know his name. That letter I am confident was copied at my desk. I will give a new suit of clothes to anybody who will give me his name. [Laughter.]

The committee then adjourned until to-morrow at 11 o'clock.

SOUTH CAROLINA OUTRAGES.

REPUBLICANS, COLORED AND WHITE, TESTIFYING TO DEMOCRATIC LAWLESSNESS—ATTEMPTS TO IMPEACH THEIR STATEMENTS.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Jan. 28.—Before the Teller committee to-day, William Riley, colored, Republican, from Barnwell, testified that the night before the election he was taken from his house by a band of white men and colored men, tied to a tree, and severely beaten because he was a Republican.

Carolina Hopkins, colored, Republican, from the same county, testified that he was surrounded at the polls by white and colored Democrats, and all the Republican tickets were taken from him; the colored Democrats were worse than the white ones, and some of them told him he ought to be hanged or drummed out of the country.

Frederick Nox, a colored Republican, from the same county, testified that the Democrats prevented him from holding precinct meetings to organize his party; that he was assaulted by Democrats at the meeting at Blackville on Oct. 11, who insisted on a division of time, and that a colored Democrat fired at Congressman Smalls, who was also prevented from leaving the place that night.

On the other side, Thomas H. Moses, a colored Democrat, testified that a majority of the colored people in the strongest colored sections of the county were Democrats.

J. B. Steedman, a white Democrat, testified that there was no disturbance at the Blackville meeting; that Congressman Smalls consented to the division of time, and that on election day everybody voted freely.

L. J. Islar, Mayor of Blackville, confirmed this testimony, and testified that the Republicans approved the Democratic ticket, with the exception of two candidates for the Legislature.

J. Bellinger, a colored Democrat, testified that William Riley was of notoriously bad reputation; he would not believe him on oath; if beaten at all, he was beaten for a brutal crime with which he was charged; at the poll in Hampton County, where the witness was on election day, most of the colored people voted the Democratic ticket.

Sandy Keitt, a colored Republican and Deputy Marshal, testified that Republicans were delayed in voting at Orangeburg, that he saw a Democrat stuff Democratic tickets into the box, and that he was arrested for insisting on entering the polling-room to witness the count. After the election he had been assaulted and was afraid to go back home. Hundreds of colored men had been turned off by their employers because they did not vote the Democratic ticket.

E. A. Webster, white Republican, testified that two Republican meetings were broken up by the Democrats, and that at the election the Republicans were more united than ever before.

Two colored Supervisors testified to an excess of tickets in the boxes, and to the soldiliy of the colored vote.

B. Byas, colored, testified to the threats of colored Republicans against colored Democrats. One Democrat, he said, was severely beaten for distributing red shirts.

Testimony was then taken as to the alleged opening of the polls at improper hours, the obstruction of colored voting, and the stuffing of these tickets at Mount Pleasant, in Charleston County, and as to the absence of a poll at Edisto Island.

W. L. Daggett, white Democrat, testified that he had printed different kinds of Democratic tickets for the election, including some thousand tissue tickets.

The committee will probably close the investigation to-morrow.

AN OLD WILL CASE IN COURT.

Benaiah Strong, who died at New-Rochelle, Westchester County, in 1860, left an estate (including the family homestead) valued at somthing over $50,000, to be divided equally among his four children, Edward, Albert, Eliza, and Hannah Strong. Edward was appointed Executor under the will. He settled in full with the guardian of Eliza. Albert was settled with also, and he gave a release to Edward. To Hannah the Executor gave his note, payable in 12 months, for $5,000, and also conveyed to her the family homestead, and she in turn signed a release from further claims upon the estate and the Executor. Before the time became due, the Executor failed, and did not pay the note. On March 31, 1875, a decree was filed of the accounting, and Edward Strong was discharged as Executor. Hannah Strong recently appeared in the Surrogate Coffin's court at White Plains, with a petition asking to have the accounting of the Executor reopened on the ground that a fraud had been perpetrated upon her in the matter, inasmuch as the Executor, at the time he gave her his note for $5,000 and obtained from her a release, represented that he was solvent, which, it is contended, he was not. On the part of the Executor, it is denied that he made any such representations in regard to his solvency. On the contrary, it was shown that the counsel for the Executor wrote to Justice Dykman, then acting as counsel for Hannah Strong, to the effect that, unless she accepted what was offered her in settlement, she would in all probability get much less. Surrogate Coffin has denied the motion to reopen the accounting in the case, on the ground that, in order to do so, the application should have been made sooner, or upon the discovery of the alleged fraud. Surrogate Coffin further holds that section 1,290 of the new Code of Civil Procedure provides that no motion be made to set aside a judgment after a lapse of two years, does not apply to Surrogate's Courts. Counsel for Executor, ex-Gov Hoffman and L. D. Fredericks; for the motion, P. L. McClellan and N. H. Pemberton.

IMPORTANT SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

The announcement that the real estate belonging to the estate of John H. Power, deceased, would be sold at public auction in the Exchange sales-rooms yesterday drew a very large attendance of capitalists. The property advertised consisted of about 130 parcels, scattered all over this City, and including a block of ground in Brooklyn, but only a small proportion was disposed of. The reason given by the actioneer was that the object of the sale on the part of the Executors was to realize a certain sum in cash, and having unexpectedly obtained before the sale had continued for an hour, it was stopped. The general impression, however, was that they were not satisfied with the prices bid. The bidding for the down-town property was not brisk, but there was a warm competition for the up-town lots. The following were sold: One five-story brick store and two two-story brick houses, with lot 22.7 by 100 by 19.6 by 100, No. 61 Pearl-street, north side, running through to Stone-street, (No. 24), and of Broad-street, to C. Marié, for $10,700. The three-story brick building, two four-story brick buildings, and three-story frame dwelling, with two lots, each 23.7 by 75.5, Nos. 178 and 180 Chatham-street, southeast corner of Mott-street, to Henry Stone, for $28,100. Two lots on the north-east corner of Sixty-sixth-street and Third-avenue, 25 by 100 each, to William Laimbeer, for $5,000 each. Two lots adjoining, to the same purchaser, for $5,000 each. Two lots on the south-east corner of Sixty-seventh-street and Third-avenue, to L. Lewishon, for $7,050 each. Two lots adjoining on Sixty-seventh-street, to S. Meyers, for $5,000 each. Four lots on the north side of Sixty-sixth-street, east of Third-avenue, to J. H. Wendell, for $1,775 each. Four lots adjoining, to the same purchaser, for $1,825 each. Four lots adjoining, to A. T. White, for $1,875 each. Two lots adjoining, to the same purchaser, for $2,000 each. Two lots on the south side of Sixty-seventh-street, east of Third-avenue, to L. Friedman, for $2,200 each. The sale realized $113,400.

THE O'CONNELL GUARD IN PRISON.

The house No. 60 Roosevelt-street for some time past has had no occupant, with the exception of a barber, who rents the first floor. About a week ago the agent of the property was notified that the basement had been broken into, and that the place was in a dismantled condition. On Monday night, about 10 o'clock, Detective Keirns, of the Fourth Precinct, who had been instructed to keep a watch on the place, heard the discordant strains of a feeble accordeon issuing from the basement, and by means of the flickering light which illuminated the dingy apartments, saw a crowd of small boys within, busily engaged in making preparations for a "ball," to which they had invited their lady friends. The urchins who had taken possession of the premises were "The O'Connell Guard," a branch of the Detective Keirns and other officers visited the place and arrested Daniel O'Connell, of No. 28 Madison-street, Captain; Jeremiah Dailey and Eugene Sullivan, First and Second Lieutenants of the O'Connell Guard, and 10 other smaller boys, who composed the rank and file. The furniture in the basement consisted of a small stove, a dry goods case, which served as a table, and some empty tea-chests. The prisoners having been locked up at the Eight, were arraigned before Justice Otterbourg yesterday in the Tombs Police Court. As the agent for the premises is absent from the City, Justice Otterborng had no alternative but to discharge the O'Connell Guard, assuring them, however, that if they ever came before him again on a similar complaint he would send them to prison.

PERSONATING A DETECTIVE.

On the 19th ult., William Savage sold a diamond ring to Louis Deslurey, proprietor of a restaurant at No. 37 Clinton-place. The following evening Savage visited Mr. Deslurey with a man who represented himself as "Detective James E. Smith," of Police Head-quarters. The latter said he had arrested Savage, who was a notorious thief, for stealing the ring, and wished possession of the gem, to be used as evidence against the accused. Deslurey, believing these representations, intrusted the ring to "Detective Smith," who promised to deposit it with the Property Clerk until after the conviction of Savage. Mr. Deslurey's eyes were subsequently opened, and he discovered that Smith was a swindler. Both Savage and Smith were arrested and indicted for false pretenses. Savage pleaded guilty, and was sent to State Prison for three years. Smith, who stood trial, was convicted by Assistant District Attorney Lyon, and Judge Gildersleeve yesterday sentenced him to three years in State Prison.

THE KILLING OF WILLIAM PEASE.

In the Court of General Sessions before Judge Cowing yesterday, an Italian rag-picker, named Francesco de Jeane, was placed on trial for murder in the second degree. On Nov. 22 William Pease entered the apartment of his wife Elizabeth, who had separated from him, and was living with Dominis Theodore and a number of other Italians at No. 10 York-street. Pease wanted his wife to consent to a divorce, but she refused, and a quarrel was imminent. De Jeane, seeing Pease, as he supposed, about to strike his wife, grappled with him, and a deadly struggle ensued, in the course of which De Jeane, as alleged, drew a dirk and stabbed Pease twice, inflicting wounds which proved fatal. Assistant District Attorney Eollins, who conducted the prosecution, produced a number of witnesses who testified to the stabbing. The prisoner denied the charge, and said that the stabbing had been done by Dominic Theodore. The case will be continued to-day.

"RED" LEARY AGAIN IN COURT.

John, alias "Red," Leary, the alleged Northhampton Bank robber, whose proposed extradition to Massachusetts for trial on an indictment for that offense has been so strenuously contested during the past two months, was brought before Judge Blatchford, in the United States Circuit Court, yesterday, on a new writ of habeas corpus asking for his discharge. Messrs. Sullivan and Mitchell obtained the writ a few days since, and have also received, from the Massachusetts authorities, a certified copy of the papers on which the Governor of that State applied to the Governor of New-York for the surrender of the prisoner. Judge Blatchford decided that as a matter of courtesy to the Supreme Court of this State, before whom Red Leary's case is now pending on appeal, he would take no action under the writ for the present, nor until the appeal has been decided upon, and accordingly adjourned the hearing on the present motion until April 7.

THE TAMMANY INJUNCTION.

INTERESTING ARGUMENT IN COURT.

JOHN KELLY'S PARTISANS RELYING ON A TECHNICALITY—THE EQUITIES INVOKED BY HIS ANTAGONISTS — DECISION RESERVED BY THE COURT.

The argument upon the motion to continue the injunction against the Tammany Society obtained by Hubert O. Thompson, was resumed before Judge Barrett, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday. The court-room was, as on Monday, crowded with politicians. Mr. Vanderpoel began his argument for the society. After claiming that the present action is merely another attempt on the part of the minority to overthrow the majority and gain control of the society, he said the counsel for the plaintiff displayed a great deal of assurance in entering court and asking for an injunction. If the rights of the plaintiff and the by-laws of the society had really been violated, as claimed, the remedy of the plaintiff did not lie in an injunction; and as a matter of fact, it appeared from decisions in many similar cases that he was not entitled to an injunction. Mr. Vanderpoel ventured to say that the courts have never intertered for the purpose of controlling an election, or the exercise of the franchise of a corporation, but have invariably turned the parties over to the remedy of quo warranto proceedings. He then argued that if the by-laws of a society are complied with, no fraud is practiced upon any of its members. In case a by-law of a society says that notice of a meeting of the society shall be given in one newspaper, or in two or three newspapers, if that by-law is literally complied with, no fraud is practiced upon a member who does not happen to see the publication. All the notice has been given him that the society has agreed to give and he has agreed to ask. In the present case Mr. Thompson claimed that no notice had been given to him individually. The fact was that no such notice was required to be given him, and even if the Secretary of the Tammany Society had promised to give such individual notice—which alleged promise he denies—such a promise and the violation of it would not bind the society or have any influence upon its action. If the plaintiff was entitled to a personal notice, and because he did not get it was entitled to the setting aside of the action of the meeting he would have attended, a thousand other members might recover on a similar notice, and, lacking it, might also cry fraud with reference to any meeting, and begin actions similar to that of the plaintiff. Mr. Vanderpoel argued that the Secretary had done his whole duty in the premises. He had obeyed the by-law directing him to publish the notice of meeting in a newspaper, and, even if he had intended to prevent giving notice to the plaintiff, his action in selecting the Mercantile Journal was justified under the circumstances, and could not properly be questioned.

Ex-Judge John K. Porter followed in an argument on behalf of the plaintiff. He commented upon the remarks of Mr. Vanderpoel to show that their real meaning was that the thousand or more members of the Tammany Society could be deprived of the sacred right of voting at its meetings through a fraud by the Secretary, and that this fraud would not be a fraud in the legal meaning of the term, because the Secretary followed a by-law in its literal sense and without regard to its intention. In this way, therefore, the Secretary of the society could publish a notice of a meeting in the Missionary Herald, and, having thus literally complied with the by-law, could have certain persons only present at the meeting, and proceed as he and they should choose. This was obviously opposed to right and reason. The meaning of the by-law directing the Secretary, as to notices to members, must be interpreted in accordance with common law. Its purpose was to allow all members to receive notice of meetings, and when it spoke of a newspaper, it did not mean a journal that does not publish the current news of the day. "But," said Judge Porter, "counsel for the defendant, Secretary Sherwood observed the by-law there can be no fraud," Your Honor was startled at so extraordinary a proposition, and put the question, Do I understand you to contend that even though the by-law directed it published in this paper, with a view of preventing notice to members, that it would be a fraudulent notice—that you still say it was a valid notice because it is not in conflict with the by-law? and he said, yes; I take that ground boldly.

The Court—If the Secretary had met the plaintiff in the street, and told him there was not to be a meeting, what then?

Mr. Vanderpoel—That meeting would be valid, even if he had met every member in the street, and told them there was no meeting to be held that night. I stand by the by-law, and he was not responsible for it, and I stand by it now.

Judge Porter next argued that the 147 men elected at the meeting of the Tammany Society on Dec. 31 were chosen in a meeting at which the plaintiffs were defrauded, except at the pleasure of the Secretary; and that, as the Tammany Society is a corporation, any stockholder is entitled to an injunction to prevent the alienation of the corporate property by the majority, and the issuing of these tickets as a defense of a poll at Edisto Island.

W. L. Daggett, white Democrat, testified that he had printed different kinds of Democratic tickets for the election, including some thousand tissue tickets.

The committee will probably close the investigation to-morrow.

AN OLD WILL CASE IN COURT.

Benaiah Strong, who died at New-Rochelle, Westchester County, in 1860, left an estate (including the family homestead) valued at somthing over $50,000, to be divided equally among his four children, Edward, Albert, Eliza, and Hannah Strong. Edward was appointed Executor under the will. He settled in full with the guardian of Eliza. Albert was settled with also, and he gave a release to Edward. To Hannah the Executor gave his note, payable in 12 months, for $5,000, and also conveyed to her the family homestead, and she in turn signed a release from further claims upon the estate and the Executor. Before the time became due, the Executor failed, and did not pay the note. On March 31, 1875, a decree was filed of the accounting, and Edward Strong was discharged as Executor. Hannah Strong recently appeared in the Surrogate Coffin's court at White Plains, with a petition asking to have the accounting of the Executor reopened on the ground that a fraud had been perpetrated upon her in the matter, inasmuch as the Executor, at the time he gave her his note for $5,000 and obtained from her a release, represented that he was solvent, which, it is contended, he was not. On the part of the Executor, it is denied that he made any such representations in regard to his solvency. On the contrary, it was shown that the counsel for the Executor wrote to Justice Dykman, then acting as counsel for Hannah Strong, to the effect that, unless she accepted what was offered her in settlement, she would in all probability get much less. Surrogate Coffin has denied the motion to reopen the accounting in the case, on the ground that, in order to do so, the application should have been made sooner, or upon the discovery of the alleged fraud. Surrogate Coffin further holds that section 1,290 of the new Code of Civil Procedure provides that no motion be made to set aside a judgment after a lapse of two years, does not apply to Surrogate's Courts. Counsel for Executor, ex-Gov Hoffman and L. D. Fredericks; for the motion, P. L. McClellan and N. H. Pemberton.

IMPORTANT SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

The announcement that the real estate belonging to the estate of John H. Power, deceased, would be sold at public auction in the Exchange sales-rooms yesterday drew a very large attendance of capitalists. The property advertised consisted of about 130 parcels, scattered all over this City, and including a block of ground in Brooklyn, but only a small proportion was disposed of. The reason given by the actioneer was that the object of the sale on the part of the Executors was to realize a certain sum in cash, and having unexpectedly obtained before the sale had continued for an hour, it was stopped. The general impression, however, was that they were not satisfied with the prices bid. The bidding for the down-town property was not brisk, but there was a warm competition for the up-town lots. The following were sold: One five-story brick store and two two-story brick houses, with lot 22.7 by 100 by 19.6 by 100, No. 61 Pearl-street, north side, running through to Stone-street, (No. 24), and of Broad-street, to C. Marié, for $10,700. The three-story brick building, two four-story brick buildings, and three-story frame dwelling, with two lots, each 23.7 by 75.5, Nos. 178 and 180 Chatham-street, southeast corner of Mott-street, to Henry Stone, for $28,100. Two lots on the north-east corner of Sixty-sixth-street and Third-avenue, 25 by 100 each, to William Laimbeer, for $5,000 each. Two lots adjoining, to the same purchaser, for $5,000 each. Two lots on the south-east corner of Sixty-seventh-street and Third-avenue, to L. Lewishon, for $7,050 each. Two lots adjoining on Sixty-seventh-street, to S. Meyers, for $5,000 each. Four lots on the north side of Sixty-sixth-street, east of Third-avenue, to J. H. Wendell, for $1,775 each. Four lots adjoining, to the same purchaser, for $1,825 each. Four lots adjoining, to A. T. White, for $1,875 each. Two lots adjoining, to the same purchaser, for $2,000 each. Two lots on the south side of Sixty-seventh-street, east of Third-avenue, to L. Friedman, for $2,200 each. The sale realized $113,400.

THE O'CONNELL GUARD IN PRISON.

The house No. 60 Roosevelt-street for some time past has had no occupant, with the exception of a barber, who rents the first floor. About a week ago the agent of the property was notified that the basement had been broken into, and that the place was in a dismantled condition. On Monday night, about 10 o'clock, Detective Keirns, of the Fourth Precinct, who had been instructed to keep a watch on the place, heard the discordant strains of a feeble accordeon issuing from the basement, and by means of the flickering light which illuminated the dingy apartments, saw a crowd of small boys within, busily engaged in making preparations for a "ball," to which they had invited their lady friends. The urchins who had taken possession of the premises were "The O'Connell Guard," a branch of the Detective Keirns and other officers visited the place and arrested Daniel O'Connell, of No. 28 Madison-street, Captain; Jeremiah Dailey and Eugene Sullivan, First and Second Lieutenants of the O'Connell Guard, and 10 other smaller boys, who composed the rank and file. The furniture in the basement consisted of a small stove, a dry goods case, which served as a table, and some empty tea-chests. The prisoners having been locked up at the Eight, were arraigned before Justice Otterbourg yesterday in the Tombs Police Court. As the agent for the premises is absent from the City, Justice Otterborng had no alternative but to discharge the O'Connell Guard, assuring them, however, that if they ever came before him again on a similar complaint he would send them to prison.

PERSONATING A DETECTIVE.

On the 19th ult., William Savage sold a diamond ring to Louis Deslurey, proprietor of a restaurant at No. 37 Clinton-place. The following evening Savage visited Mr. Deslurey with a man who represented himself as "Detective James E. Smith," of Police Head-quarters. The latter said he had arrested Savage, who was a notorious thief, for stealing the ring, and wished possession of the gem, to be used as evidence against the accused. Deslurey, believing these representations, intrusted the ring to "Detective Smith," who promised to deposit it with the Property Clerk until after the conviction of Savage. Mr. Deslurey's eyes were subsequently opened, and he discovered that Smith was a swindler. Both Savage and Smith were arrested and indicted for false pretenses. Savage pleaded guilty, and was sent to State Prison for three years. Smith, who stood trial, was convicted by Assistant District Attorney Lyon, and Judge Gildersleeve yesterday sentenced him to three years in State Prison.

THE KILLING OF WILLIAM PEASE.

In the Court of General Sessions before Judge Cowing yesterday, an Italian rag-picker, named Francesco de Jeane, was placed on trial for murder in the second degree. On Nov. 22 William Pease entered the apartment of his wife Elizabeth, who had separated from him, and was living with Dominis Theodore and a number of other Italians at No. 10 York-street. Pease wanted his wife to consent to a divorce, but she refused, and a quarrel was imminent. De Jeane, seeing Pease, as he supposed, about to strike his wife, grappled with him, and a deadly struggle ensued, in the course of which De Jeane, as alleged, drew a dirk and stabbed Pease twice, inflicting wounds which proved fatal. Assistant District Attorney Eollins, who conducted the prosecution, produced a number of witnesses who testified to the stabbing. The prisoner denied the charge, and said that the stabbing had been done by Dominic Theodore. The case will be continued to-day.

"RED" LEARY AGAIN IN COURT.

John, alias "Red," Leary, the alleged Northhampton Bank robber, whose proposed extradition to Massachusetts for trial on an indictment for that offense has been so strenuously contested during the past two months, was brought before Judge Blatchford, in the United States Circuit Court, yesterday, on a new writ of habeas corpus asking for his discharge. Messrs. Sullivan and Mitchell obtained the writ a few days since, and have also received, from the Massachusetts authorities, a certified copy of the papers on which the Governor of that State applied to the Governor of New-York for the surrender of the prisoner. Judge Blatchford decided that as a matter of courtesy to the Supreme Court of this State, before whom Red Leary's case is now pending on appeal, he would take no action under the writ for the present, nor until the appeal has been decided upon, and accordingly adjourned the hearing on the present motion until April 7.

TRAVEL DELAYED BY FOG.

An extremely heavy fog settled down on the waters in this vicinity shortly before daybreak yesterday morning and remained until noon, causing considerable delay to those who were oblized to travel by ferry-boat. The Harlem boats only made their down trips, creeping close to the pier-heads, and made no attemps to return until the fog had lifted. All the ferry-boats were delayed more or less, it having been necessary for them to proceed very cautiously. The Roosevelt-street boats stopped running for about an hour, but the other lines continued to run, although in some cases the boats remained in their slips until those from the opposite sides had arrived. Long lines of carts and trucks were constantly waiting at the ferry entrances on the Brooklyn side. The Brooklyn Annex boats cautiously felt their way around the Battery, and their trips were consequently very slow. The fog was not as dense on the North as on the East River, and the delay on the former was much less. Two ferry-boats, one of the Catharine-street line, and the other of the Roosevelt, and one of the Harlem boats, came together just outside of the Catharine-slip on the New-York side, but sustained no injuries. No accidents on the rivers or Bay have been reported.

PAPAL POWER AS A GOVERNMENT.

LEO THE GREAT AND HIS TIMES—A LECTURE BY DR. JOHN LORD.

There was a large audience at Chickering Hall yesterday morning to hear Dr. John Lord's lecture on "Leo the Great," the founder of the Papal power as a government, or régime, or institution, rather than as a religion. He was not, said the lecturer, a great theologian like Augustine, or orator like Chrysostom, but a great Bishop like Ambrose, and even greater as a statesman than he was as a Bishop. It was his sublime ambition to make the Church the guardian of spiritual principles. With him it was an inspiration of genius to give to her a theocratic character—to make the Bishop of Rome the spiritual head of Christendom. When Rome was the mighty capital of the world, her prestige enabled the Bishop of the city to maintain a sort of primacy or precedence over all other Bishops. Cyprian and other Bishops yielded this. The Bishop was a great personage, whether he was a man of great ability or not, because he presided over the world's metropolis. But with the waning power of Rome, sacked by barbarians and reduced to insignificance as a temporal power, it was necessary for the Bishop to substantiate some new claim, if he would enjoy his old preeminence. Leo I. was the man for this crisis. He was born of noble parents, and was intensely Roman in all his aspirations. His marked ability singled him out as the only man who could give dignity to the Roman See when the Empire was crumbling away. So he was chosen by the clergy and the people of Rome, on the death of Sixtus, A. D. 440, to succeed to the vacant dignity.

Without dwelling on his memorable administration as Bishop—healing dissension and protecting the faith, as a Bishop should—I allude chiefly to the new claim he put forward, which made him more powerful than any of his predecessors, and also made him a power especially needed in his miserable age, when all central authority was subverted, and anarchy and barbarism were covering Europe with a funereal gloom. Innocent had maintained, 40 years before, that the primacy of his see was derived from St. Peter, to whom Christ was supposed to have delegated unlimited spiritual power as the chief of the Apostles. Leo saw the force of this jus divinum principle in his circumstances, and adopted it as the corner-stone of the Papal fabric. The Protestants are indignant in view of such an assumption, unsupported by the authority of Scripture and the reason of the world, that St. Peter, rather than Christ, is the rock on which the Church is founded. But it was most opportune, considering the state of society at the time. And, that nothing might be wanted to cement the power which had been assumed, the Emperor Valentinian confirmed it by an edict. It is not probable that Leo aimed to subjugate the mind of the world, but merely to concentrate a central power which should awe barbarians and conserve the peace of the world, and encourage those ideas which make life as it is in civilization. All of these were means to an end, that end being the possession of power. Nor was such a government an autocratic régime, hostile to the spread of orthodox truth. Leo did all he could to establish it as the religion of the West. The lamp of piety could burn as well with a Pope and a hierarchy as without them, provided this hierarchy did not obscure the truths which are defended. Governments are slow to change and pass away, but not the elemental truths of the Christian religion. Government is one thing and religion is another. The dogmas subsequently ingrafted on Christianity were not the work of Leo; they were corruptions which subsequent Popes encouraged to build up their power, or increase their revenues. These, in due time, were exposed by Luther.

As for the Government of which Leo laid, in an important sense, the foundation, all candid historians agree that it proved beneficent in the Middle Ages. The Popes did not make the Dark Ages. They were the result of ages of war, political disunion, poverty, ignorance, license, and superstition. The Papal Government was useful in governing people amid these evils. People must be governed, and Rome Papacy was adapted to barbarous times—to keep Kings from war, to encourage learning, and promote law and order. It may have worked on fears; all sacerdotal governments do this, all your sacerdotal men make use of the fear-strategems of God. But it was adapted to people who can only be influenced through fear, and the terrible weapon of excommunication, which the Popes wielded with no much effect, had reference to these beliefs. The force of it was illustrated by the Papal Government. When all men believed in hell as taught by St. Augustine, and especially in an ignorant age, the Papal clergy were all powerful. But better rule by ecclesiastical sentences than by the sword, or when the people are debased. The cardinal error in judging the polity of the Roman Church is that the Papal Government is answerable for the ignorance and degradation of the Middle Ages. It was not. The whole influence of that Government was to elevate the poor people crushed by feudal lords. It was feudal barons more than the Catholic clergy who kept Europe in ignorance. This ignorance was so deep that it could not be removed in a day. But when the Bible and science and learning had lifted the shadows of ignorance, then the Papal despotism was weakened. Then came the Reformation.

The next lecture, on Friday, will be a new lecture on "Thomas Becket, and his Fight."

MUST THE HOUSE BE TORN DOWN?

A singular case occupied the attention of Vice-Chancellor Van Fleet, at Newark yesterday. Eight years ago William Lyon commenced the erection of a building at No. 2 Elm-street. William H. Stanford, a druggist, who owned a building standing upon the adjoining lot, objected that the foundations of Mr. Lyon's building ran so near to his that his light and passage-way would be interfered with. He accordingly brought the matter before the Court of Chancery, and an injunction was granted restraining Mr. Lyon from erecting his building in the manner contemplated. Subsequently the injunction was dissolved, on the ground that a court of equity could not properly take cognizance of the matter until judgment should be obtained in a court of law. Mr. Stanford at once instituted proceedings at law to effect his purpose. The suit was decided in his favor. Mr. Lyon appealed and judgment was affirmed. In the meantime, Mr. Lyon had gone on and completed his building. Yesterday, armed with his judgment, Mr. Stanford appealed to the Court of Chancery in order to compel Mr. Lyon to take down his building. To this Mr. Lyon interposes the objection that he does not own the property, that it belongs to his wife, and that no judgment obtained against him can apply to or affect property owned by his wife. Testimony was taken yesterday, and the case will be argued to-day: Jacob Vanatta and Ludlow McCarter for petitioner; Thomas N. McCarter for respondent.

WHAT A PARTY OF PILGRIMS ATE.

The Inman steam-ship City of Brussels left this port April 21, 1877, carrying a party of Roman Catholics, who were on a pilgrimage to the City of Rome. When the vessel was out only 30 hours her shaft was broken. The Captain decided, however, to continue the passage under sail, and it took 28 days for her to reach port on the other side of the Atlantic. Before she had completed the passage the pilgrims and other passengers ate 5,405 pounds of beef and mutton belonging to the firm of Sherman & Gillette, of this City, in addition to the provisions supplied by the steam-ship company. This meat was part of a cargo of 229,730 pounds of fresh beef and 9,730 pounds of mutton being exported by the firm in a refrigerator built by themselves in the hold of the steam-ship. The refrigerator was supplied with ice for only 20 days, and, as the ice gave out at the end of that period, the meat spoiled before the journey was over, and was thrown overboard. The Inman Company offered payment at the rate of 14 cents per pound for the meat eaten by the passengers, but this offer was rejected by Sherman & Gillette, who began suit for the value of the entire shipment, which is stated at $30,487, with interest on that sum from May, 1877. The trial of the case was begun yesterday before Judge Landon and a jury, in the Supreme Court. The defense to the action is that the contract was not one of ordinary character for the carriage of freight, but was a special contract for the lease of a part of the vessel, to be fitted up as the lessee chose to fit it up, and that the company is not therefore responsible for the damage done. The case is still on.

A SUIT AGAINST JUDGE GOEPP.

In the course of the trial of the suit of John Culty against William Harrington, before Judge Goepp, in the Marine Court, the defendant put in an answer to the complaint containing two distinct defenses. Judge Goepp, deeming the defenses incompatible, declared that Harrington was guilty of perjury, and ordered him to be committed to await criminal prosecution. He gave bail, however, and thus avoided actual imprisonment. Harrington has now begun suit in the Supreme Court for damages against Judge Goepp and ex-Justice Quinn, who was counsel for Culty in the Marine Court suit, and the case came before Judge Lawrence, at Special Term, yesterday, on a demurrer by the defendant. Mr. W. T. B. Milliken, counsel for Judge Goepp, argued that the latter's action against Harrington was judicial and could not be questioned. John E. Devlin, for ex-Justice Quinn, said the latter had been the mere instrument of the Marine Court in the proceedings complained of, and that the action against him, therefore, could not be maintained. Ex-Judge Curtis argued that the Marine Court was not a court of record, had no authority in proceedings such as those taken against Harrington, and that, therefore, Judge Goepp and ex-Justice Qu

ON THE PARISIAN BOARDS.

ANOTHER OF JULES VERNE'S STORIES ON THE STAGE.

THE SEARCH FOR CAPT. GRANT AND HIS CREW--A CLUMSY CONDOR AND A DISAPPOINTING WHALE, BUT VERY CREDITABLE WAVES--A NEW FANTASTIC MUSICAL PIECE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Wednesday, Jan. 15, 1879.

Of the literary merits of the new piece at the Porte St. Martin I can dispose very summarily by saying that it has none. It belongs to the category of scientific plays, in which amusement is supposed to be blended with instruction, and, as an adaptation of one of M. Jules Verne's most amusing conceptions, will furnish another argument to those who maintain that the art of the dramatist and the art of the novel-writer require different kinds of talent. The limits of the stage and the resources of its accessories, in spite of their immense modern development, necessarily exclude many episodes; but the most striking have been chosen, so as to condense, as coherently as possible, a three-volume novel into five acts and seventeen scenes, lasting over five hours in their representation, of which the very least that can be said is that the audience gets the worth of its money. How far the plot or the story is known in the United States I am ignorant, and, therefore, in my doubt, will venture upon a sketch of its canvas before proceeding to tell how the details are filled in. In the "Tour du Monde en 80 Jours," the question was whether Mr. Phileas Fogg would or would not win his bet; here we are interested in the interpretations given to an almost illegible piece of writing contained in a bottle which the crew of Lord Glenarvon's yacht have found in the belly of a shark captured off the coast of Scotland. There were three versions of this document, each in a different language, that in French being the least injured by time and salt water, yet all vague and unsatisfactory as to longitude, although the latitude of 37° 11' was clearly indicated. But Lord Glenarvon is not only a philanthropist, but also an amateur of cryptograms, and forthwith begins to study out the meaning of:

"7 Juin, 1862.—Trois mats Britannia—Glasgow —sombré—gonie—austral—à terre—deux matelots— Capitaine Gr——abor—contin—pr—cruel—Indigène—ce document—longitude— 37° 11' de latitude.—Portez leur secours—sinon perdus."

Which, with the aid of the shipping list and the records of the Admiralty, he constructs into:

"Le 7 Juin, 1862.—Le trois mats Britannia de Glasgow a sombré sur les côtes de la Patagonie dans l'hémisphère austral. Le capitaine Grant et deux matelots et le Capitaine Grant vont tenter d'aborder le continent où ils seront prisonniers de cruels Indiens. Ils ont fait un document qui indique la longitude et 37° 11' de latitude. Portez leur secours où ils sont perdus."

All of which is ingenious, and shows that the noble Scotchman and his chronicler had read and reflected upon Edgar Poe's wonderful tale of the "Gold Bug." But the riddle is not yet guessed, for just after the Duncan sails there appears a new personage—the funny man of the play—one Paganel, the Corresponding Secretary of the Paris Geographical Society, who, having got on board by mistake, devotes his leisure to solution of the mystery, which so far differs from that of the Milord that Patagonie becomes une longue agonie, and the hémisphère austral les côtes d'Australie. Of course, both are wrong, but their interpretations are the pretext for a voyage in all directions, and for the recital of an infinite variety of strange and startling adventures, terminating with the discovery of the shipwrecked mariner on a desert island in the South Pacific, where the enigma is explained to be that on "the 27th June, 1862, the three-masted ship Britannia, of Glasgow, foundered at sea, 1,500 leagues from Patagonia, in the Austral Hemisphere. Driven upon the coast, two sailors and Capt. Grant landed at Tabor Island, where, being continually sufferers from cruel want, they threw into the sea this document, in 53° longitude, 37° 11' latitude. Come to their assistance, or they are lost." Imagine the stupefaction of the geographer. Agonie again becomes Patagonie; Australia is, as Lord Glenarvon made it, hémisphère austral; contin was meant to be continuellement and not continent, and, instead of indigènes, indi was the beginning of the word indigence. Paganel's vanity is wounded to the quick to find that an Englishman had supplied the missing syllables of a French dispatch better than he, a native, could do it, and he faints with mortification on learning that abor translated by every one as a part of the verb aborder, to reach —was a fragment of Tabor, the name of an island, which appears on the French maps as Maria Theresa.

Clever as all this is in the book, it loses much of its interest on the stage, where everything relating to the comparative study of the documents has been abridged as summarily as is consistent with the intelligence of the plot. So it is with other episodes, among which is the scene where an enormous condor carries off in its talons young Robert Grant, aged 14, and is brought down from an immense height by the providential bullet of a Patagonian sportsman. It was no easy matter to give a lifelike representation of the gigantic bird, flapping its wings and flying up toward the clouds, with a small boy for his supper, and although the science of Vaucanson has been called into requisition, the automaton did not come up to public expectation, which had been prepared for something more natural and less inoffensive than this combination of springs, pasteboard, and feathers. Mme. Lacrisonière, who did the part of the youngster, and did not resemble one, being over 40, and rather fat nor fair, might be altogether suppressed, but as the audiences become more of the vox populi category, the dummy vulture must be changed, even if its place be supplied with a goose painted black, which will be quite satisfactory, if allowed to flutter and die on the stage as he feels the knife of the savage. A little blood always makes a fine moral effect in Paris, where that excellent actor Paul Deshayes obtained his greatest success when he had his thumb nearly bitten off for scratching a lion's toes, and it is seriously under consideration to introduce a rat match into the next representation of "Louis XI," that having been one of the favorite amusements of Cardinal La Balue's amiable master. The scenery all through is very fine, and shows the immense resources of the stage carpenter, who is also gifted with a lively imagination. I did not know that the Cordilleras extended into Chili; but such seems to be the case, and with wild volcanic eruptions, avalanches, land-slides, and other convulsions of nature of that kind, I judge the country to be an uncommonly disagreeable place of residence for people of weak nerves, although the scenic natives do not seem to mind these little incidents, but dance and sing just as merrily as if the whole mountain chain were not caving in, as at the touch of some enchanter's wand, to the accompaniment of an agitated tremolo by the orchestra and much blue-light in the slips. It was not natural, certainly, but perhaps on that very account was all the more applauded, as there were people in the house who still remembered their thrill of emotion when, ever so many years ago, the legendary manager of the Ambigu, M. Billion, represented the earthquake of Mendoza by a roll of drums and a clatter of sheet-iron behind the scenes.

I was disappointed in the whale; it is a pretty good monster as monsters go, and the scene is admirably gotten up by M. Cheret, the painter; in front a wide expanse of blue sea, running down to the footlights; in the background, the faint profile of the Duncan rocking lazily on the waters, with now and then a wave splashing against its bulwarks to complete the illusion, and, by the way, if the spectators were just, they would call out the waves at the end of the act, particularly the third wave on the left, which was remarkably conscientious in its performance, and may be recommended to notice. Still, I was disappointed, and was indignantly rebuked by my neighbors for saying so. The whale appears, he swims with ease, shows his enormous teeth, and lashes his tail ferociously, and he spouts vapor quite naturally for those who have never seen the real creature, but, although built upon the model of the skeleton at the Jardin des Plantes, he did not come up to my idea of whales, and might just as well have been called a hippopotamus or a porpoise. Besides, I had been deceived and was out of humor because the red vapor of his death agony had been suppressed, all on account of the dreadful little boy who does the head, which mischievous wretch had nearly turned up the machine and its occupants over night by playfully turning the Bengal lights in the direction of the tail, in order to damage his colleagues charged with its manipulation. I am glad to say that this vile miscreant has been discharged, but, as the like accident would probably again occur with ninety-nine out of every hundred gamins who might be employed, the manager has elected to keep the fire and stick to water, as being less dangerous to his properties.

Next in importance to the condor and the whale are the white Polar bears, and when I call them white and Polar, I wish it understood that I use a figure of speech to agree with the programme, as they come from the Pyrenees and are black until the barbers cover them with powdered chalk, when, after the first five minutes, they become of a dirty brown. But in a preceding letter I have given the biography of these interesting quadrupeds, which for all they have to do with the action of the piece, might as well have been left out. Yet are they nice animals, and are led about quite docilely by rings through their snouts, and show a disposition to dance, but are sternly checked by their leader, who, in the dress of a Patagonian warrior, also with a ring as large as a soup plate in his nose, wanders disconsolately about the icebergs of Tabor Island, here changed to Balker Island, but for what reason I cannot discover. When this ice-field breaks up, and the "glaciers"—this is their name in the programme—are pulled away, it is a pity that the ropes are not a little less visible. The scene is splendid, with its breadth of ocean lighted up by an aurora borealis as magnificent as any of the enamored poets of the times, and the Châtelet or the Châtelet. The ballet, represented on a plaza of Valparaiso, is pretty, but the costumes, Hispano-American, are scarcely up to what we have been spoiled by at even the minor theatres, and that acrobatic danseuse, Mme. Mariquita, is getting too old to please with her contortions and gymnastics, which are always the same, whether she represent a Malay Bayadere in "Around the World," or a Chinese lady who capers about with her fingers in the air, attended by a host of other plain-headed heathens for the amusement of Capt. Grant's searchers. Apropos of this gentlemen, the Temps has promoted him to the lowest rank of "General," doubtless intending by a delicate compliment to our ex-chief magistrate to show that this name is too illustrious to be given to any but exalted rank.

Take it all in all, the drama, as I suppose it must be called, although it is wanting in dramatic unity and is rather a succession of scarcely connected scenes, is interesting, and if it were not quite so long would be still better. On the first night the curtain did not fall until after 2 A. M., and although a good deal has been cut out since then, there is much more expurgation possible, for which the authors would do well to be guided by the colds in the audience. No criterion is safer and more decisive than this. When the piece drags, when the dialogue is "hitchy," there is a concert of coughs and sneezes and nasal trumpetings which remind you of a hospital for diseases of the respiratory organs, while a dead silence follows the appearance of a comic or of a dramatic situation, and catarrhs are cured as if by some magic panacea. Just a little more scissors for the few passages which still resist these pulmonary explosions, and Messrs. Dennery and Jules Verne may lay any odds that Capt. Grant's children will have no cause to envy the success of the "Tour du Monde." I scarcely know how to classify the new piece as to its Variétés; it is not a farce, nor yet a comedy, or a vaudeville; still less an operetta, although M. Lecocq has lent it a score of charming melodies; it might be called an extravaganza, if this name had not been worn out with those inanities of the British stage, where fast young England splits its gloves in public and badly danced break-down; but the bills term it a pièce en musique, and so, for want of a better appellation, I suppose that this must be accepted. Nor is it much easier to give the analysis of this extraordinary odyssey, which relates the trials, sufferings, and adventures of an ex-Sous-Préfet, who has married a circus rider, and has abandoned home, friends, and position, to become the manager of an itinerant horse-opera. Angelina is lovely, of course, but she is jealous and capricious, and treats her husband to hysterics whenever he appears to be indifferent to her success in the arena, a phenomenon which is noticed at every performance. That she is, withal, sincerely enamored of her liege lord, and turns a deaf ear to her three adorers, a grotesque Clown, a most heteroclite Grand Duke, and the foul traitor, Gobson, the ring-master. To all who have ever patronized the Variétés, I need only name Celine Chaumont as the heroine Dupuis as Le Grand Casimir, Léonce as the Clown, Baron the Grand Duke, and Guyon the villain, to give an idea of the style of the play and the manner of its interpretation. From the beginning to the end it is the most tangled of skeins. Casimir is in difficulties at the circus, as he had been in every society, he is the personification of the "used-up man;" he sees nothing in anything, and has but two serious ends in view—how to spend money the most extravagantly and how to get rid of his wife. But business is slack, the houses are bad, and, although he does not suspect that Gobson has bought up all his debts and is ready to jump on him, scents the approach of settling day, and is at a loss how to face his creditors, until he remembers that a clause of his marriage contract stipulated that the widow should become proprietress of the establishment in the event of his death. From that moment his self-sacrifice is complete. No scene more easily imagined than described, his intended disappearance is confided to Angelina, who rehearses the grief demonstrations wherewith the company and the creditors are to be humbugged, solemnly promises not to follow him in his foreign wanderings, and forthwith proceeds to get ready for true love. Casimir goes to Corfu, where he becomes the guest of the tavern-keeper Galetti, and, perhaps, one of the most amusing absurdities of the piece is the imagination of a custom by which any one having drank by mistake from a lady's glass at table, must marry her or die, unless he be already mated. Bigamy or duels are the alternatives, but he won't acknowledge Angelina, and the 349 poniards of the nephews, cousins, and brothers-in-law of the Corsican father finally wring from him a melancholy consent. So the violins are tuned, and the bells chime merrily, and the marriage guests flock in, when suddenly the blast of trumpets announces the arrival of a circus, and Angelina rides on to the stage mounted upon a trained animal—loaned by that eminent manager, M. Fernando—followed by a cortége of equestrians in all imaginable costumes, among whom Léonce, the Clown, being provided with the most resistive of Lilliputian ponies, convulses the public with his "I make him do whatever I want."

The meeting of husband and wife is inimitably funny; the lady has traced her truant spouse upon the slight clue furnished by a fragment of newspaper announcing that he had taken refuge on an island, so that Lord Glenarvon-like, he has sought shelter on a desert, but also, after the manner of Captain Grant's discoverer, have finally brought her to the right place by a happy accident. She is ready to forgive everything, and accepts Casimir's assurances that he is only Ninetta's groomsman, and so here the danger is, at least momentarily, avoided. But the 349 swords of Damocles of the Galetti family are still a serious consideration for the future, and when the evening comes and the bride demands her groom, poor Casimir is at a loss which way to turn. The inn fills with visitors, Gobson, in the costume of a Persian, the Clown as Sganarelle, and the Grand Duke as a Spaniard, complicate the situation by their arrival. How will the skein be unraveled? Doors opening and closing, the substitution of personages, the passage of the wedding procession, every one of those startling eccentricities which used to be the offspring of Henneqnin's extravagant imagination, are here improved upon, if grand, extravagance can be called improvement. But all comes right in the end. Casimir has been in and out of every room in the inn, always pursued by the weeping Ninetta, who presses to her bosom her bouquet of orange flowers in a glass case, and finally takes refuge in the antechamber, where he is surprised and unmasked, by his Angelina, in presence of the bride. His only excuse that "he was in a draught" when he pronounced the fatal "Yes," is not accepted by the indignant family; the 349 poniards begin to be drawn, and bigamy is about to be punished, when Angelina relents and reveals the fact that she is not his wife after all, as another "responsible party" claims his property. "Tu n'es plus ma femme, je ne t'en aimerai que mieux!" exclaims Casimir, the Galetti sheathe their weapons, everybody embraces everybody else, and the orchestra of the circus breaks into a delirious polka.

No analysis can do justice to the comic originality of the episodes, and, at times, when the incoherency of the action threatens to degenerate into a caricature, some exquisite melody, some gleam of genuine sentiment or sparkling wit, almost equal to the standard of high comedy, saves the situation. "Il le savait bien le perfide," and the ballad of the "Two Pigeons" would not be out of place at the Opera Comique, and though scarcely a thread remains of Mlle. Chaumont's once pretty little voice, she has retained all that charm of style and manner which made her own line has so long kept her at the head of the theatrical profession. "Le Grand Casimir" is, perhaps, the greatest success of the season; not fit for the austere boards of the Rue Richelieu, but emphatically the right piece in the right place, as no one goes to the Variétés in search of a successor to Molière.

FORTY-FIFTH CONGRESS.

THIRD SESSION—Jan. 28.

SUMMARY.

Mr. Davis presented in the Senate a memorial signed by a large number of prominent business and professional men, providing for the establishment of an Industrial Bureau and the collation of full statistics regarding agriculture and labor. The bill for the payment of the claim of Warren Mitchell was taken up as unfinished business, and, after a long discussion, was rejected—yeas, 17; nays, 30. Mr. Edmunds then moved to take up his resolutions affirming the validity of the constitutional amendments, and it was agreed to—yeas, 29; nays, 16; but without debating the resolutions, the Senate adjourned.

The session of the House was mainly occupied by the consideration of the bill restricting Chinese Immigration. Mr. Townsend, of New-York, made a humorous speech in opposition to the measure, and Messrs. Luttrell and Page, of California, and Willis, of Kentucky, argued in favor of its passage. The vote resulted in favor of the bill—yeas, 155; nays, 72. The House then proceeded to consider the Post Office Appropriation bill, and two amendments increasing appropriations were adopted. Without taking final action, the House adjourned.

SENATE.

HOUSE AMENDMENTS AGREED TO.

The House amendment to the Senate bill to amend section 5,407 of the Revised Statutes relating to embezzlement by officers of the United States was agreed to, and the bill was passed. The amendment applies to the title of the bill.

The House amendment to the Senate bill making the 22d of February a legal holiday in the District of Columbia was agreed to, and the bill was passed. The amendment provides that it shall take effect Feb. 22, 1879.

A PROPOSED INDUSTRIAL BUREAU.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois, presented a memorial asking Congress to provide for an Industrial Bureau, whose duty it shall be to obtain and collate accurate statistics of all the country's interests, whether agricultural, mining, manufacturing, carrying, building, or whatever else may employ labor, and classify, condense, and compare production with consumption, and also the number and condition of the employed and unemployed; the facts and statistics obtained to be generally distributed by periodical publication, and embodied in semi-annual reports, with such recommendations as will best conserve the general welfare.

The memorial further asks that in taking the census for 1880, and all that follow, reports be made of every person over 16 years of age, whether he or she is employed or idle, or receiving or drawing wages or salary for the day on which the census is made, and also of persons under 16 years of age who may be employed, and as near as may be the number of days in the next preceding year in which he or she, of any age, has been employed, and the amount of the employment, with the amount of the daily and gross wages received during that period. That, as far as may be, the amount of the production and consumption of all products be ascertained each year, and the manufactured articles and specific quantity, in yards, pounds, bushels, number, or otherwise, by which each particular product is usually measured. As a preliminary step, a special commission be asked for, whose duty it shall be to examine at once into and ascertain to what extent machinery and labor-saving processes have entered into the production and distribution of the great products of labor now consumed by the people, to the displacement of muscle, as a basis to determine what legislation, if any, is required to so regulate the use of muscle and machinery that a demand shall be created for the employment of the muscle now idle, and the building and employment of new machinery until every man and woman in the land who will work shall find a demand for his or her services as a compensation that will yield at least a comfortable subsistence. That such commission be required to press the examination without delay, and make daily reports of the facts obtained, to the end that Congress may at once shape the legislation that is needed to restore the great market of consumption by the people.

In presenting the memorial, Mr. DAVIS called attention to the fact that it was signed by 1,100 business houses, firms, and individuals; some of the highest officers in the country, and a large number of the clergy, as well as by mechanics and laborers.

Mr. HOAR, of Massachusetts, said he thought it proper to say that a bill was in the memorialists prayed for passed the House at the last session of Congress but one, almost by a unanimous vote. It was defeated in the Senate after considerable discussion.

The memorial was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

ANDERSON'S TESTIMONY REGARDING MR. MATTHEWS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a message from the House in answer to the Senate resolution of the 13th inst., transmitting the report and testimony of James E. Anderson in relation to Hon. Stanley Matthews. It was referred to the select committee on that subject, of which Senator Allison is Chairman.

COMPETITION IN TELEGRAPHY.

Mr. MITCHELL, of Oregon, submitted a resolution instructing the Committee on Railroads to inquire into the expediency of authorizing railroad companies operating inter-State railroads to construct and operate lines of telegraph for commercial purposes, and authorizing lines of different railroad companies, with a view of encouraging competition in the telegraphic business of the country, and to report by bill or otherwise. Agreed to.

MILITARY BUSINESS.

Mr. SPENCER, of Alabama, moved that Friday next, after the morning hour, be assigned to the consideration of bills from the Committee on Military Affairs.

Objection was made to the present consideration of the motion by Mr. EDMUNDS, and it was laid over.

THE CALENDAR.

The Senate then proceeded to consider bills on the calendar, and indefinitely postponed that for the relief of Macon, Mo., which proposed to refund to that city $4,178 97, certain internal revenue taxes collected.

Mr. MORRILL, of Vermont, moved to postpone the further consideration of bills on the calendar and take up that to provide for taking the tenth and subsequent censuses. Rejected—yeas 23, nays 27.

WARREN MITCHELL'S CLAIM.

Pending discussion on a bill for the relief of the Richmond Female Institute, the calendar was laid aside, and the Senate resumed consideration of the unfinished business, being the bill to pay Warren Mitchell for cotton taken by the Government at Savannah. It was discussed at length by Messrs. Jones, of Florida; Bruce, of Vermont; McMillan, of Minnesota; Voorhees, of Indiana, and others.

Mr. EATON, of Connecticut, said he had heard it said that $2,000,000,000 worth of Southern claims were to be paid, and he thought the one he would vote against it, so that the people whom he in part represented would know where to find him. There had been hundreds of thousands of dollars paid to good loyal Republicans, and it was about time now to put a stop to it. He had examined these Southern claims, and there were not more than half a dozen that he would vote for, and they involved about $500,000.

After some further discussion, the Senate refused to order the third reading of the bill—yeas 17, nays 30, as follows, [Republicans in Roman, Democrats in italics, Independent in SMALL CAPITALS:]

YEAS—Messrs. Bailey, Beck, Booth, Dorsey, Garland, Gordon, Grover, Harris, Hereford, Jones of Nevada, Lamar, McCreery, Patterson, Shields, Spencer, Voorhees, Withers—17.

NAYS—Messrs. Allison, Anthony, Barnum, Bayard, Blaine, Burnside, Cameron of Pennsylvania, Chaffee, Cockrell, Coke, Conkling, DAVIS of Illinois, Dawes, Eaton, Edmunds, Ferry, Hamlin, Hill, Hoar, Howe, Kernan, McMillan, McPherson, Morgan, Morrill, Oglesby, Ransom, Rollins, Saulsbury, Saunders—30.

Mr. Mitchell, of Oregon, who would have voted in favor of the bill, was paired with Mr. Teller, of Colorado, who would have voted against it. Several other Senators announced that they were paired on political questions.

MR. EDMUNDS' RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. EDMUNDS, of Vermont, moved to take up his resolutions declaring the validity of the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. GORDON, of Georgia, moved to adjourn. Rejected—yeas 18, nays 26. Messrs. Harris, Morgan, Hill, and Kernan, who voted with the Republicans against adjournment.

The motion of Mr. Edmunds to take up the resolutions was then agreed to—yeas 29, nays 16, [Republicans in roman, Democrats in italics, Independent in SMALL CAPITALS,] as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Allison, Anthony, Bayard, Blaine, Booth, Bruce, Burnside, Conkling, Dawes, Dorsey, Edmunds, Ferry, Hamlin, Harris, Hill, Howe, Jones of Nevada, Kellogg, Kernan, McMillan, McPherson, Mitchell, Morgan, Morrill, Oglesby, Patterson, Rollins, Saunders, Spencer—29.

NAYS—Messrs. Barnum, Beck, Cockrell, Coke, DAVIS of Illinois, Eaton, Gordon, Hereford, Lamar, McCreery, Maxey, Saulsbury, Shields, Thurman, Voorhees, Withers—16.

Pairs on political questions were announced as follows: Messrs. Butler, Wallace, Eustis, Garland, Grover, Jones of Florida, McDonald, Monroe, Randolph, Dennis, Sansom, Johnson, Whyte, and Davis of West Virginia, with Messrs. Conger, Cameron of Pennsylvania, Chaffee, Kirk, Teller, Christiancy, Matthews, Ingalls, Paddock, Plumb, Sharon, Sargent, Windom, and Wadleigh.

Mr. EDMUNDS said he did not desire to occupy the floor this evening, and the Senate, at 4:15 P. M., on motion of Mr. MORGAN, adjourned until to-morrow.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THE LEGISLATIVE, EXECUTIVE, AND JUDICIAL BILL.

Mr. ATKINS, of Tennessee, Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, reported the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation bill. Referred to the Committee of the Whole.

THE IMMIGRATION OF CHINESE.

Mr. MILLS, of Texas, asked if the regular order was not the morning hour.

The SPEAKER replied that it was not. The special order was the bill to restrict the immigration of Chinese, and the House proceeded immediately to its consideration. It provides that no master of a vessel owned by any citizen of the United States shall take on board at any foreign port any number of Chinese exceeding 10 with intent to bring them to the United States, under a penalty of $100 for each such passenger in excess of 10, such penalty to become a lien on the vessel.

Mr. CONGER, of Michigan, inquired if opportunity would be given to offer amendments.

Mr. WILLIS, of Kentucky, who had charge of the bill, replied that he was instructed by the Committee on Education and Labor to have the bill passed as reported.

Mr. CONGER moved to consider the bill in Committee of the whole.

The SPEAKER ruled that that was not in order, and the previous question was seconded by a vote of 116 to 32, and the main question ordered.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New-York, disclaimed any intention of speaking for the Republican Party or anybody else. He spoke for himself, as a friend of humanity, when he opposed the bill. He opposed it, because it was a virtual breaking off of social and political relations with one-half of the human race. He had nothing to charge against the Democratic Party for entering into a treaty with China, because that treaty had been negotiated in the good old Democratic days, they were days when the light of heaven sometimes reached the brain of Democrats. [Laughter.] He credited the Democratic Party not only with making that treaty, but with bringing prosperity to the Pacific coast through its adoption, because to-day California owed her position to it. That was before Kearney had come and before Kearney was represented in the national halls. [Laughter.] But it was said that Congress must take unusual grounds for the benefit of laboring men. The laboring men, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Wright] had said yesterday, were starving—200,000,000 of them, he said, were starving—[laughter] —200,000,000. [Laughter.] And, besides, there were in Pennsylvania 5,000 people in the insane asylums from the havings of the times. He would say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that lunacies were sometimes made by hard times, sometimes by unrequited love, sometimes by unsatisfied ambition, and the Pennsylvania lunatics made from such causes did not always stay at home. [Laughter.] The prosperity of 1878 (and it had been the most prosperous year since the dawn of creation) had been, to a great degree, due to the overthrow of the fanaticism of other times. But to-day the cry was "Heathen Chinee." He reminded his friend from Kentucky, [Mr. Willis,] who represented the Louisville district, of the day when the cry was against the Catholic Irish and against the condemned German, and when the streets of Louisville and St. Louis flowed with blood because those men were coming in to take away the labor from the American citizen. Many of the great men of the Democratic Party had been opposed to the Irish and Germans. Erastus Brooks, of the Evening Express, to-day a trusted leader, had been the head of what was called the "American Order," organized to protect the country against the inroads of hordes of Irish and Germans. He [Mr. Townsend] had been in the minority, but, thank God, that minority had beaten, and to-day the prosperity of the country was to a great extent due to the stalwart labor of the Irish and Germans. But there was a new school of philosophers in the country, who went before the Labor Committee and twaddled, and said that the suffering of the laboring classes was occasioned by over-production, and that that tended to impoverish and starve—not the laboring man, as they stated—but the man in the corner grocery, who was supported by his wife and never did a day's work. Those were the men represented by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Wright] yesterday. What work did Kearney perform? What did he do for a living except show his insurrectionary proclivities? It had been said that if the Irish and Germans were admitted into the country liberty would leave. How many Democrats from the North would be in the House to-day except by the permission of St. Patrick. [Laughter.] Thank heavens he had given his permission to him. [Mr. Townsend.] He had stood by St. Patrick in his dark days and St. Patrick had not forgotten him. [Laughter.] About the wickedness of the Chinese. Mr. Townsend read from Matthew xxv, 1 to 13, to show that it would be proper to exclude them. He could tell of a way to get them over. A lady who had a Chinese boy-servant said to him: "John, be a good boy, and learn to love Jesus." "Yes," replied he, "give me a dollar more a week and I will love Jesus." [Loud laughter.] That was the way to bring the Chinaman over to the Christian religion, and it had failed then he [Mr. Townsend] would lose his bet.

Mr. PAGE, of California, was in favor of restricting Chinese immigration, and declared that he had never seen or heard any views that were not in accord with the liberal sentiment and advanced ideas of the Republican Party—the party that had ever been in favor of freedom and free labor. There were on the Pacific coast 150,000 Chinamen, who were, by education, by habits, and by mode of life to become citizens, and the Government should not allow the Pacific coast to be overrun by a people who were considered unfit for citizenship.

Mr. LUTTRELL, of California, repudiated the idea of the popular sentiment on the Chinese question being fairly represented by the Republican Party, and claimed that it was only the Democratic Party which represented that sentiment. The Republican Party of California had inscribed on its banner the motto of the universal brotherhood of man. The Democratic House in the last Congress had passed a resolution calling for the abrogation of the Burlingame treaty, and a Republican President had pocketed it. In 1872, he [Mr. Luttrell] had offered an amendment to prevent the employment of Mongolians in the Navy-Yard or other Navy-yards, and that amendment had been voted against on the Republican side of the House by Messrs. Garfield, Conger, Robertson, Hale, Hoar, and all the rest of them, while every Democrat had voted in favor of it. The old gentleman from New-York [Mr. Townsend] who was so fond of shaking his head at the Democratic side of the House had spoken against Kearney. He [Mr. Luttrell] was not there to defend Kearney. Kearney was capable of defending himself. Kearney represented the great laboring element of the country. The men who assembled on the sand lots and discussed great issues were the sovereigns of the land. They, and not the Heathen Chinee, were the men who had helped to build up California.

Mr. WILLIS, of Kentucky, closed the discussion in a speech in advocacy of the bill. He argued that, under the Constitution, a treaty was not more binding or sacred than a law, and that it was the last expression of the legislative mind, whether in the form of treaty or of law, that controlled, and therefore, this bill became a law, the Burlingame treaty, so far as it conflicted with the provisions of the bill, became null and void. He then proceeded to argue that, as a political question, the bill should be passed, and he dwelt upon the fact that wherever Chinamen had gone in large numbers, (as to Siam, Java, Singapore, and the Australian colonies,) the popular judgment had been almost unanimous against them, and repressive legislation had to be resorted to in order to check the evils of their presence.

The House then proceeded to vote on the bill, and the pending amendments offered on the part of the committee. In the first section the restriction of Chinese passengers on any one vessel to 10 was extended to 15. Various other amendments were offered, but objections were made, and the House then proceeded to vote on the passage of the bill, and it was passed—yeas, 155; nays, 72, as follows—[Republicans in roman; Democrats in italic:]

YEAS—Messrs. Acklen, Aiken, Aldrich, Atkins, Bailey, Baker of Indiana, Baker of New-York, Banning, Bayne, Bebe, Bell, Benedict, Bicknell, Blackburn, Blair, Blue, Blount, Boone, Brentano, Brewer, Bright, Buckner, Cabell, Caldwell of Kentucky, Caldwell of Tennessee, Calkins, Campbell, Chalmers, Cook, Clarke of Kentucky, Clark of Missouri, Cobb, Cole, Covert, Cox of Ohio, Cox of New-York, Crews, Crittenden, Cummings, Davidson, Davis of California, Deering, Dibrell, Dickey, Durham, Eden, Elam, Ellis, Ellsworth, Errett, Evans of Indiana, Evins, Ewing, Felton, Finley, Fort, Foster, Freeman, Garth, Gause, Gibson, Giddings, Glover, Gunter, Hale, Hamilton, Hanna, Harmer, Harrison, Hartzell, Hatcher, Hayes, Hazelton, Hendee, Henkle of New-York, Herbert, Hiscock, Hooker, House, Hubbell, Huston, Ittner, Jones of New-Hampshire, Jones of Alabama, Knight, Knox, Kountz, Landers, Ligon, Lockwood, Luttrell, Mackey, Mutch, Majors, Manning, Martin, Mayham, McMahon, Metcalfe, Mills, Money, Morse, Muldrow, Neal, O'Neill, Page, Patterson, Pendleton, Peddie, Pollard, Potter, Pound, Rea, Reagan, Reilly, Rice of Ohio, Rainey, Robinson of Indiana, Ross, Ryan, Sapp, Scales, Shallenberger, Singleton, Stenons, Smith of Georgia, Southard, Sparks, Steele, Stenger, Throckmorton, Townsend of Ohio, Townshend of Illinois, Turner, Turney, Vance, Van Voorhes, Walker, Ward, White of Indiana, Whitthorne, Wigginton, Williams of Alabama, Williams of Oregon, Willis of Kentucky, Willits, Wilson, Wren, Wright, Yeates, Young—155.

NAYS—Messrs. Bacon, Bagley, Banks, Blabee, Buck, Bragg, Briggs, Brogden, Bundy, Burchard, Burdick, Cain, Candler, Cannon, Cassidy, Chittenden, Clarke of Iowa, Conger, Crapo, Cutts, Danford, Davis of North Carolina, Dunnell, Dwight, Eames, Hardenbergh, Harris of Massachusetts, Harris of Georgia, Hart, Hendee, Hepburn, Humphrey, Hungerford, James, Jones of Ohio, Joyce, Lathrop, McCook, McGowan, Mitchell, Morrison, Morgan, Norcross, Overton, Patterson of New-York, Phelps, Prideaux, Pugh, Robertson, Randolph, Reed, Rice of Massachusetts, Robbins, Robinson of Massachusetts, Sampson, Sexton, Shinkenson, Smalls, Smith of Pennsylvania, Starin, Stephens, Stewart, Strait, Swann, Thompson, Tipton, Townsend of New-York, Waddell, Warner, Watson, Williams of Wisconsin, Williams of Delaware—72.

THE POST OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

The House then, at 2:30 o'clock, went into Committee of the Whole (Mr. COX, of New-York, in the chair) on the Post Office Appropriation bill.

Mr. BAKER, of Indiana, moved to increase the appropriation for the transportation by railroad from $8,715,000 to $9,000,000.

After a short debate, in the course of which Mr. BLOUNT, of Georgia, and Mr. ATKINS, of Tennessee, criticised the administration of the Post Office Department as violating the spirit of the law, and Mr. FOSTER, of Ohio, and Mr. BAKER, of Indiana, defended the action of the department, the amendment was adopted—yeas 89, nays 76.

Mr. CHALMERS, of Mississippi, submitted an amendment increasing the appropriation for transportation on steam-boats from $750,000 to $900,000. Agreed to.

Without taking final action the committee rose.

THE PARIS EXPOSITION.

Mr. DURHAM, of Kentucky, introduced the joint resolution calling on the Secretary of State for a detailed statement of the expenditures made by the Government at the Paris Exposition. Passed.

THE OLD NEW-YORK POST OFFICE BUILDING.

Mr. CHITTENDEN, of New-York, offered a resolution calling upon the Secretary of the Treasury for information as to the use made of the old Post Office property in New-York City, and, if rented, the amount of the rent. Referred.

The session for to-night on the Levee bill was postponed until this day week, and the House then, at 4:30 P. M., adjourned.

NOMINATIONS BY THE PRESIDENT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The President today sent to the Senate the following nominations:

Michael Field, Register of the Land Office at St. Croix Falls, Wis.; Joel F. Nason, Receiver of Public Moneys at the same place; Henry Page, of Arkansas, Agent for the Indians of the South Utes Agency, Colorado; James Stout, of Idaho, Receiver of Public Moneys, Boise City, Idaho.

Postmasters—Paul Strobach, at Montgomery, Ala.; John Clendening, at Fort Smith, Ark.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

VARIOUS SUBJECTS DISCUSSED.

POSTAL ABSURDITIES.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Your valuable editorial in issue of 26th inst. upon "Postal Absurdities" cannot fail to commend itself to every person who has any dealings with the Post Office. Its suggestions for postal reform are most timely, and a bill framed as you suggest is now before Congress awaiting its action. This bill, which was prepared by the Post Office Department after a full and free consultation with Postmaster James, and other leading Postmasters, has also been submitted to the leading publishers and business men of the country, including Boards of Trade of the various cities, Chambers of Commerce, &c., and by them approved, has also been most carefully canvassed by committees of both houses of Congress and reported by them for adoption. This bill, intended to simplify and verify the postal service, protecting the rights both of the people and of the department, is now awaiting action in Congress. At a special session of the House of Representatives, held on Thursday evening last, the only opposition to it came from men representing country districts, whose whole idea of the Post Office is to have their own few letters promptly carried and their local newspapers delivered through the mail free. One of these men, (from Illinois,) although a member of the Post Office Committee of the House, who ought to have known better, put himself on record as saying:

I think that in most respects the postal code is in pretty good shape, and I am not at all clear but what in order to produce greater harmony a door may be opened that will produce greater confusion. The law as it now is, to which I desire to call the attention of the House for a moment, is as clear perhaps as language can make it. And this is the law in force since 1874.—Congressional Record, Jan. 24, page 30.

This law, so clear and sharp and easily understood, is the one under which all the absurdities mentioned in your editorial are perpetuated! If all your readers who are interested in having a decent law passed that will give justice, simplicity, and uniformity in our Postal laws, would write to their member of Congress, calling his attention to it, the work would be done before March 4. H. E. S.

MONDAY, Jan. 27, 1879

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your issue of yesterday I read with immense satisfaction your critical article on "Postal Absurdities," and desire to add one to the list of every-day experiences you relate, and, with your approval, to make a suggestion to the authorities of our Post Office, which, if carried out, would assist us in conforming to the statutes of classification, and would rel

JAN 29 1879

INDEX TO CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS.

AMUSEMENTS—Seventh Page—6th and 7th cols.
AUCTION SALES—Sixth Page—7th col.
BANKRUPTNOTICES—Seventh Page—6th col.
BOARDING AND LODGING—Seventh Page—5th col.
BUSINESS CHANCES—Seventh Page—4th col.
BUSINESS NOTICES—Fifth Page—6th and 7th cols.
CITY HOUSES TO LET—Seventh Page—1st col.
CITY ITEMS—Fifth Page—5th col.
CITY REAL ESTATE—Seventh Page—1st col.
COUNTRY REAL ESTATE—Seventh Page—1st col.
DANCING—Seventh Page—4th col.
DEATHS—Fifth Page—7th col.
DIVIDENDS—Seventh Page—5th col.
DRY GOODS—Sixth Page—6th col.
ELECTIONS—Seventh Page—7th col.
EUROPEAN—Seventh Page—7th col.
FINANCIAL—Seventh Page—4th col.
FINE ARTS—Seventh Page—7th col.
FURNISHED ROOMS—Seventh Page—5th col.
HELP WANTED—Sixth Page—7th col.
HORSES, CARRIAGES, &c.—Sixth Page—7th col.
HOUSES & ROOMS WANTED—Seventh Page—1st col.
ICE-CREAM—Seventh Page—5th col.
INSTRUCTION—Seventh Page—5th col.
INSURANCE—Seventh Page—7th col.
LECTURES—Seventh Page—7th col.
LEGAL NOTICES—Sixth Page—7th col.
MARRIAGES—Fifth Page—7th col.
MEETINGS—Seventh Page—7th col.
MISCELLANEOUS—Seventh Page—3d col.
MUSICAL—Seventh Page—7th col.
NEW PUBLICATIONS—Fifth Page—7th col.
POLITICAL—Fifth Page—7th col.
RAILROADS—Seventh Page—3d col.
REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION—Seventh Page—1st col.
REWARDS—Seventh Page—3d col.
ROOMS WANTED—Seventh Page—5th col.
SHIPPING—Seventh Page—2d and 3d cols.
SITUATIONS WANTED—Sixth Page—6th & 7th cols.
SPECIAL NOTICES—Fifth Page—7th col.
STEAMBOATS—Seventh Page—3d col.
STORES, &c., TO LET—Seventh Page—1st col.
TEACHERS—Seventh Page—5th col.
WATCHES, JEWELRY, &c.—Sixth Page—7th col.

The New-York Times.

NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, JAN. 29, 1879.

AMUSEMENTS THIS EVENING.

FIFTH-AVENUE THEATRE.—Dr. Clyde.
BOOTH'S THEATRE.—The Danites.
WALLACK'S THEATRE.—Ours.
UNION-SQUARE.—Banker's Daughter.
PARK THEATRE.—Dot.
STANDARD THEATRE.—H. M. S. Pinafore.
GILMORE'S GARDEN.—Knights Templar Reception.
BROADWAY THEATRE.—King Lear.
LYCEUM THEATRE.—H. M. S. Pinafore.
NIBLO'S GARDEN.—Hero.
THEATRE COMIQUE.—Vaudeville.
THE AQUARIUM.—Afternoon and Evening.
SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS.—Minstrelsy.
AMERICAN MUSEUM.—Curiosities.
COOPER INSTITUTE.—Billiard Tournament.
STEINWAY HALL.—Concert.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

TERMS, POSTAGE PAID.

The Daily Times, per annum, including the Sunday Edition.....$12 00
The Daily Times, per annum, exclusive of the Sunday Edition..... 10 00
The Sunday Edition, per annum..... 2 00
The Semi-Weekly Times, per annum..... 2 50
The Weekly Times, per annum..... 1 00

BRANCH OFFICES OF THE TIMES.

The Times Up-town Office—No. 1,258 Broadway.
Paris Office of The Times—No. 39 Rue de Lafayette.
The Times is on sale in London at No. 449 Strand, W. C., from Henry F. Gillig & Co., and at Mr. Stevens', No. 6 Trafalgar-square.

The Signal Service Bureau report indicates for to-day in this region, a slight fall in temperature, with north-west winds, shifting to north-east and south-east; rising barometer and partly cloudy weather.

After repeated failures Senator Edmunds has succeeded in getting before the Senate his resolutions regarding the Constitutional power and duty of Congress to protect the purity and integrity of the suffrage in Federal elections. The debate on them will be opened by him to-day, and he will be followed by Senator Morgan, of Alabama, who has charge of the propositions agreed upon by the Democratic caucus. We have already pointed out that so far as the debate proposed by Senator Edmunds relates to the authority of the Constitutional amendments, or to the nature and extent of the power of Congress under them, it is not likely to be specially fruitful or profitable. But there is another branch of the subject which cannot be too thoroughly discussed or too clearly and persistently explained, and that is the power of Congress to regulate the election of Representatives. This power is absolute and unlimited. It is for the States to decide who shall or shall not have the right to vote, where the restrictions are not based on race or previous condition of servitude—and no State will ever again openly seek to make this the basis of restriction; but it is for Congress to say, within its own discretion, how, and under what regulations the right shall be exercised. The more clearly this fact—which is a cardinal one in our system, though only recently recognized in legislation—can be brought out the better.

The publication of Collector Arthur's reply to the charges of Secretary Sherman has naturally enough attracted a great deal of attention in Washington. The thoroughly conclusive way in which every charge was met and disposed of, and the entire absence from the letter of any statements, not sustained by clear and convincing evidence, render it a production almost unique of its kind. In attempting to revamp for use against Gen. Arthur the old charges against Deputy Collector Lydecker, Secretary Sherman will expose himself to a retort more crushing, if possible, than any already administered to him. These charges were fully examined by Secretary Bristow, and dismissed as frivolous. They were again investigated in detail by Secretary Sherman himself, and, as will appear from the files of the Treasury Department of June, 1877, were again dismissed. Mr. Sherman either acted foolishly and hastily in declaring that he found nothing in these charges to interfere with the confirmation of Deputy Collector Lydecker, or he acts with a degree of folly which can only be characterized as childish, in seeking to use them now as weapons of offense against Collector Arthur.

What is known as the Warren Mitchell claim was defeated in the Senate, yesterday, by a very large vote. Only seventeen Senators were willing to place themselves on the record as voting for it. This claim was for indemnity for a lot of cotton, valued at about $130,000, captured by the Government in Kentucky, during the late civil war. It was an example of what is usually described as "Southern war claims." Curiously enough, the debate on the bill to idemnify Mitchell was almost wholly participated in by Democrats. The Republicans took a holiday, and sat back and enjoyed the sharp passages at arms in which several Democratic Senators, North and South, engaged. During the debate, several prominent Democratic Senators unequivocally avowed that they were opposed to all claims of this nature. And the action of the Senate was equally emphatic. Men who have believed that the Republic would eventually be compelled to pay all the losses incurred by those who endeavored to destroy the Union may be reassured by the action of the Senate on this sample claim.

The charges which Commissioner Erhardt reiterates in a letter addressed to the Board of Police should be at once made the subject of investigation. If half of what Mr. Erhardt alleges be true, there ought to be four instead of two vacancies to be filled in the Police Board. The popular impression that Police administration has been mainly distinguished, of late years, by incapacity, wastefulness, and jobbery will be deepened by the charges now formally preferred by Commissioner Erhardt. Whatever be his motives in making his recent attacks upon the public character and private conduct of his fellow-Commissioners, it is evident that a board containing elements so discordant has lost all power of usefulness, while it is equally obvious that nothing but demoralization in the force and a forfeiture of public respect can attend the delay to take such action as the charges demand. Mayor Cooper is not the man to trifle with the subject as his predecessor did, and, in the interests of all concerned, he cannot too soon have the administration of the Police Department probed to the bottom.

The City salary question came up before the Board of Aldermen, yesterday, and was made the occasion for the display of some very cheap sympathy for that rather indefinite entity known as "the working man." It does not appear to have occurred to some of our City Fathers that if laborers in the employ of the City are to be paid 30 per cent. more than laborers employed by contractors and others, the money must come chiefly out of the pockets of the vast majority of working men who will not be benefited by any such a rise of wages. It is consoling, however, to find that the Aldermen appear willing to have their own salaries and those of all the principal City office-holders reduced 25 per cent. President Mott made a manly protest against the demagogism which proposes to conduct City business on principles which would bankrupt a private employer.

SENATOR HILL AS AN EXAMPLE.

Northern Democrats who fell on their knees, begging the South to believe that Gen. Bragg had not expressed their sentiments, probably begin to think that they blundered. Senator Hill's speech must have helped to undeceive them. The staid Boston Post, when it declared that the Democratic Party will make more of Southern votes, of which it is sure, than of Wisconsin votes, which are less certain, let out the secret of the subserviency which the more manly Southerners contemptuously spurn. Assuming that the Southern whites are a unit in support of the various demands upon the Treasury which have been presented in their name, the party at the North—or so much of it as is represented by journals like the Boston Post—is anxious to have it understood that the South, in its arrangements, may reckon upon Northern help. A prompt repudiation of the plucky Bragg is incidental to this desire. How far the threats of Mr. Chalmers have tended to produce the abject tone in which the Northerners pray that they may not be misunderstood by their Southern brethren, is a question not easily determined. Plantation manners involve a good deal of bluster, and the Chalmerses are sufficiently familiar with the composition of the party at the North to know the value of the bullying in which they have indulged. There are exceptions to the rule, however, as by this time they ought to be aware. Mr. Potter shares the obloquy that is heaped on Gen. Bragg; and the reasons that render them obnoxious to the advocates of claims and subsidies are equally available against Speaker Randall. It is evident, in short, that in both sections of the country there are Democrats to whom the current estimate is inapplicable. There are Northern Democrats who are not prepared to submit to the dictation of the jobbers and subsidyists for whom Mr. Chalmers speaks; and there are Southern Democrats who have no sympathy with the programme which their wing of the party, as a whole, has been supposed to sanction.

Glimpses of the feeling expressed by Mr. Hill, in opposition to what are known as Southern claims and Southern projects for emptying the Treasury, have been obtained at different stages of the Texas Pacific business, and as results of efforts to strengthen local interests in behalf of the policy involved. No one who has watched the scheming that is in operation in support of the Texas Pacific can doubt that the declarations in its favor lack genuineness and force, and that the major part of its strength among Southern Representatives, and in the columns of Southern newspapers, is traceable to sinister influences. By the better portion of the South the scheme is condemned as fraudulent. Doubtless, if a full vote could be had, a preponderance of Southern opinion would be found on the side—not of the Texas Pacific, but—of some plan for building a Southern Pacific road with the help of the Government, and of other plans for promoting Southern interests at the nation's cost. Mr. Hill does not deny the prevalence of this opinion. But his speech, coupled with other indications, may be regarded as proof of the existence, in the South, of a force opposed to the politicians who for their own purposes foster the spirit which seeks from the Federal Government direct or indirect compensation for losses occasioned by the war. While the demagogues and jobbers propose to benefit the South by a profuse expenditure of public money, better men deprecate the policy as demoralizing and otherwise injurious. Instead of perpetuating the sectionalism which the impudent mendicancy of Mr. Chalmers implies, they insist that the South shall make common cause with the North in the pursuit of objects tributary to the prosperity of both. We cannot expect Mr. Hill, and the classes who share his views, to accept Republican statements with reference to the means by which these objects may best be secured. But Republicans should not be slow to acknowledge the gain resulting from the advance or unwilling to contribute to the strength of the ground acquired. Anything that tends to break the depressing uniformity of Southern Democratic management, and to introduce into Southern politics independence, and an intelligent conception of national interests and obligations, is a benefit we should appreciate, without scanning its partisan conditions too closely.

It is especially important in view of contingencies that beset the financial question. Mr. Hill calls upon his party to uphold the payment of the public debt in good faith; and the business affinities of the cotton-growing States mark them as natural allies of the North in the contest with inflationists. The dependence would be safer if these States had, in their transactions with their own creditors, evinced a more just regard for honest dealing. But the existence of great laxity in this respect only adds to the significance of Mr. Hill's declaration, and the desirableness of cultivating friendly relations with Southern leaders who dare to set forth financial integrity as a condition of party success. Gov. Wade Hampton does this more explicitly than the Georgia Senator. As reported in a South Carolina journal, he not only denounces the repudiation favored by a majority of his followers, but condemns the assaults upon capitalists which demagogues are in the habit of making, and dwells upon the need of re-established confidence as a means of promoting the Southern welfare. He says truly that the commercial classes of the North are averse to the revival of sectional hate, and he would reciprocate by crushing measures calculated to injure Northern interests and keep alive financial distrust. We should attach greater weight to these utterances had their author more faithfully fulfilled other promises connected with the politics of his State. In his new sphere of duty, however, Wade Hampton will have opportunities of rendering service beyond the influence of local clamor; and in the meantime it is fair to count him among the adherents of sound finance. Trials are impending that will test the sincerity of the Hills and Hamptons of the South, and furnish more specific data for judging of their influence on their party's tactics and position.

CONGRESS AND THE CHINESE.

The fifteen-passenger anti-Chinese bill which passed the House yesterday might be called by various titles which would express its purpose more fully than its present one. It might, for example, be styled a bill to make political capital in California for the next election, which seems to be its leading object, judging from the frank declarations attributed to Mr. Luttrell in the Democratic caucus of Monday evening. Or, it could be called a bill to tickle the ears of the hoodlum groundlings in San Francisco by a safe insult to the Chinese Embassy in Washington. Or, again, it may be regarded as an act for the self-stultification of Congress, since both branches of that body have already passed a resolution looking to the restriction of Chinese immigration by the only courteous and honorable method, namely, that of opening negotiations between the Government of the United States and the Government of China for the modification of the treaty under which that immigration is now authorized and conducted.

The bill which was introduced into the House by Mr. Wren of Nevada, and into the Senate by Mr. Sargent, of California, declares that no master of a vessel shall take on board, at any foreign port or place, in any one voyage, more than fifteen Chinese passengers, with the intent to bring them within the United States, and that no greater number shall be brought within the United States. The violation of this act is made a misdemeanor, which shall be punished by a fine of $100, and may also be punished by imprisonment for six months. The master of any vessel bringing Chinese passengers is required to make and deliver to the Collector, on entry, a separate sworn list of all such passengers, just as he does in regard to the manifest of the cargo, and under like penalties for neglect or refusal. The penalties are made a lien on the vessel, and the act is to take effect from July 1, 1879. The bill as originally sent to the committee limited the number of passengers to ten; as reported, this number was increased to fifteen.

It is palpable, and, indeed, is not denied, that the bill violates the existing treaty with China. The treaty dated July 28, 1868, proclaimed at Washington Feb. 5, 1870, declares that "the United States of America and the Emperor of China cordially recognize the inherent and inalienable right of man to change his home and allegiance, and also the mutual advantage of the free migration and emigration of their citizens and subjects, respectively, from the one country to the other for purposes of curiosity, of trade, or as permanent residents." The same document declares that "Chinese subjects visiting or residing in the United States shall enjoy the same privileges, indemnities, and exemptions, in respect to travel or residence, as may there be enjoyed by the citizens or subjects of the most favored nation." Of course, there can be no question that these solemn compacts are violated by House bill No. 2,423, nor can there be any question that Article VI. of the Constitution prescribes that not only the Constitution, and the laws made in pursuance thereof, but that "treaties made under the authority of the United States shall be the supreme law of the land." The effort of Mr. Willis' committee, in reporting this bill, was not directed at all to denying that it violated the Burlingame treaty, but at showing that a treaty might be lawfully violated by an act of Congress. Now, it is certainly true that emergencies may arise when such legislation would appear to vindicate itself. But setting aside the repeated violations of Indian treaties, violations usually as disgraceful in origin as they have been disastrous in results, Congress never yet has set the precedent of deliberately and intentionally violating, in time of peace, a treaty with a friendly foreign nation, which has not declined to modify or abrogate that treaty in the same way that it was made.

The Anti-Chinese bill is peculiarly discreditable, because there has lately been established in Washington, for the first time in our history, an official resident Chinese Embassy. It was formally greeted by the Government of the United States only a few months since, and one of the official grounds of welcome was the suggestion that it had come to treat on all questions concerning Chinese residents in this country, thus including the very question in regard to which it is now proposed to ignore the presence of the embassy, and to substitute injurious and discriminating action. The bill is thus deprived of any pretense of emergency, requiring the violation of a treaty. Again, this very House Committee on Education and Labor less than a year ago considered precisely the same question, and made, Feb. 25, 1878, an elaborate report, which recommended as the proper legislation on the subject, the passage of a joint resolution, requesting the President to open diplomatic correspondence, "with the view of securing a change or abrogation of all stipulations in existing treaties which permit unlimited immigration of Chinese to the United States." That resolution, creditable to the committee, because providing a courteous and honorable method of treating an international question, approved itself to Congress as being an excellent substitute for a crowd of treaty-violating bills, and, before the adjournment, it was passed by both houses. Presumably, it has been acted upon by the President, and, presumably, the negotiations are now in progress; yet the House committee has already stultified itself, and now Congress is asked to follow its example by favoring a discourteous and discreditable bill, which at once reflects on the action of Congress last Summer and puts the Government in a dishonorable position. It is hardly worth while for the Congress of the United States to sacrifice the good faith and honor of the country to the supposed exigencies of California politics. Even if no loftier considerations avail, Congress may do well to remember that there is no restriction that it can impose on trade or travel from China, whether of burdensome head-money or of a limit in the number of passengers, which China cannot apply, in return, upon American travel and trade to her ports. She may not limit herself in her method of retaliation to the precise form of hostile discrimination that suits us. She may choose some other form of business restriction; and we have enough rivals in commerce with China who would encourage her in such a course.

THE TRUE AND THE FALSE SYSTEM OF APPORTIONMENT.

In the address to the people recently issued by the Democratic members of the Legislature on the subject of a reapportionment of the State, the old and more than once-refuted claim is repeated that the City and County of New-York is entitled to 27 members of Assembly. That this claim, and the reasoning upon which it is founded, are demonstrably false, can be proved by a very slight examination of the requirements of the State Constitution in respect to the matter. The total population of this State, as shown by the census of 1875, upon which the reapportionment should have been and must be made, was 4,698,958; but from this number the Constitution requires that the number of aliens shall be excluded in making the apportionment. Deducting, therefore, the 329,911 aliens in the State, we have a remainder of 4,369,047 upon which to calculate. Taking this number as the dividend, and 128 (the number of members of Assembly) as the divisor, the quotient is a fraction over 34,133, which number, consequently, is the number of people each member should represent. Making a like exclusion of aliens from the total of the population of the City and County of New-York, and dividing the remainder, 905,976, by 34,133, we have a quotient of 26 and something less than one-half over, which the gentlemen referred to have enlarged to 27. But this might possibly be allowed, if the system on which they have made their calculations were correct.

Unfortunately, however, there are two clauses in that section of the Constitution which declares how the apportionment shall be made, and the second of these entirely upsets the theory upon which the gentlemen referred to base their claims. By referring to section 5 of Article III. of that instrument, it will be seen that "the members of Assembly shall be apportioned among the several counties of the State, by the Legislature, as nearly as may be according to the number of their respective inhabitants, excluding aliens. * * * *Every county * * * except the County of Hamilton, shall always be entitled to one member of Assembly.*" By this latter clause, it will be observed, another element other than population is brought into the problem. Each county of the State, no matter what its population may be, is entitled to a member; and the importance of this provision will be understood when it is stated that by virtue of it, no less than twenty-one counties—or, reckoning Fulton and Hamilton as one—twenty counties, of this State will be represented in the next Legislature. Were the apportionment made on the basis of population alone, not one of these counties, each having a less population than 34,133, could send a member of Assembly to Albany.

Since, then, there are both the factors of population and of territorial division to be considered, the apportionment must be made with a regard for both; and the only way in which this can be done is to take from the dividend of the total population of the State the population of the counties which fall below the general ratio, and from the divisor the twenty members of Assembly representing them. In this way we get a new dividend of 3,839,087, a new divisor of 108, and a new ratio of 35,555, which gives the City and County of New-York 25 members, with less than a half fraction over. To show the absurdity of making the apportionment on the basis of population alone, it only needs to consider what the result would be, if with the present numbers of the population it were so centralized that there were three counties in the State with a population equal to that of New-York. In this case we should have, on the basis of 27 members to 905,976 people, 81 members of Assembly representing three counties, leaving 47 members to represent 56 counties, each of which the Constitution declares shall have a member irrespective of population.

Possibly it may be objected that no former apportionments having been made upon any other basis than that of population, the next ought not to be made the occasion for a new departure. But we are not concerned to perpetuate errors which may have been made in the past, and it may be added, that in former apportionments, had the system indicated been adopted, it is not probable that the result would have been different, owing to the diffusion of population; whereas, if the process of centralizing our population in cities proceeds in the future as rapidly as the census shows it to have done in the past ten years, it will not be very long before it must become a physical impossibility, under the existing State Constitution, to make an apportionment on any other than the system of excluding counties which may fall below a general ratio.

THE FRENCH LOTTERY.

The drawing of the great French lottery has begun, but it will take about three weeks to complete it. So the long period of rosy dreams and hopeful calculations will be followed by a brief time of eager anticipation and excitement, to be succeeded by the disappointment of those who draw blanks. The French lottery scheme, as is well known, sprang up as an incident of the Exhibition. Its avowed purpose was to raise funds to bring working men and poor peasants from the rural districts, in order that they might not be deprived of the privilege of gazing upon the trophies of the industrial greatness of France and witness the evidences of the peaceful triumphs of the Republic. The whole thing was in the hands of the Government, and the management of details was intrusted to a "Central Commission," which will doubtless be glad to have it over.

At first it was determined to issue one million tickets at a franc each. Of the $200,000 thus raised, one-half was to be devoted to the philanthropic object above mentioned, and the other half to the purchase of 5,000 objects of art, to be distributed as prizes. The people were in a money-spending mood, and, with the treasurs of the Exhibition before them, not averse to taking the chance of getting some of the many coveted objects at the trifling outlay necessary for lottery tickets. The first issue was so speedily taken up that the number was raised at once to six millions, and public officials of all sorts and grades were instructed to exert themselves in disposing of them. By subsequent steps the issue was carried up to twelve millions, and while the public was engaged in buying the tickets there was naturally no little excitement. Advantage was taken of this by shrewd operators, who bought large quantities of tickets, to "bull the market" as soon as the public sale was completed, and for a time an extravagant premium was asked and obtained. This did not last long, however, and as people began to get sober, and some of them a little disgusted with themselves, lottery tickets descended to about par on the Bourse, and might be privately purchased even at a discount.

Of the 12,000,000 francs derived from the sale of tickets by the Government, 5 per cent. was allowed to the vendors, and the general costs absorbed about as much more. Of the 10,800,000 francs remaining, one-third, or 3,600,000, was applied to the expense of bringing workmen and others to Paris to see the great show, and 7,200,000 was expended in prizes. Besides, some of the exhibitors and tradesmen who had a large stock of articles left on hand at the great palace of industry made contributions for additional prizes. Altogether the number of winning tickets is about 80,000. The grand prize, which was to be drawn first, was valued at 150,000 francs, or about $30,000. Then, there is a series of 2,000 prizes, ranging from 130,000 francs down to 2,000 francs, which are to be drawn before the rest, and will occupy about a week. Each number in each of the twelve series of a million has an equal chance of winning. The smaller prizes will be drawn more rapidly, as for each number that comes out of the wheel a prize will be given for its holder in each of the twelve series. Nominally this is not a money-lottery. The Government made arrangements with tradesmen of one sort and another for works of art, precious wares, jewelry, &c., to be given to the holders of lucky numbers, but at the same time an understanding was entered into that those who preferred cash could have it at the moderate discount of 3 per cent., taking it from the party who was to furnish the prize and not from the Government. This applies only to the grand prizes, but with regard to the others some enterprising trades-people have organized a sort of pawnbroking system for the nonce, and propose to take the prizes which winners do not want at such a discount from the nominal value as may be agreed upon.

There can be little doubt that these agencies will do quite a lively and profitable busines, for persons a long distance from Paris, or even in the metropolis, may draw grand pianos, carriages, sets of furniture, bronzes, and Sèvres ware, who would find ready money much more convenient and useful. No doubt, Dame Fortune will indulge in some amusing freaks in disposing of the miscellaneous merchandise that constitutes the less magnificent prizes. A set of jewelry, or a parlor organ may go to a hob-nailed peasant or a red-armed washerwoman, while a Duchess draws a patent mangle or an improved reaper. Among the prizes are galvanic batteries, which would not be altogether acceptable to a drawing-room belle; a hamper of bottled beer, which an over-rigid temperance person would neither drink nor sell to another; a gross of pots of pomatum, which a plain but dignified republican statesman would scorn; supplies of baby linen and underwear which might get ludicrously misplaced. There are cavalry sabres and gold-laced cocked hats, which might most impertinently turn up in possession of some demure school-mistress, and complete hunting costumes, with top-boots and buckskins, which would alarm rather than gratify the gentle damsel whose heart was set on jewels. It is easy to imagine the varied disappointment of those who draw prizes and those who draw none, and perhaps the disillusion and chagrin may be a sufficient antidote for the false hopes and covetous anticipations which have turned the heads of France for the last six months.

The epidemic which is now devastating Russia is merely one out of a long series of similar catastrophes, recurring at such brief and regular intervals as almost to assume the character of a periodical visitation. In 1866, an outbreak of cholera carried off thousands of victims from St. Petersburg and the coast towns of the Gulf of Finland. In 1869, typhus declared itself in the central districts, and made fearful havoc among the peasantry, whose insufficient food and constant pressure of overwork naturally rendered them an easy prey. In 1871, the cholera returned, sweeping the whole breadth of European Russia, from the Volga to the Dnieper, with a destruction so terrific that many villages were actually depeopled and the bodies of the dead lay festering in the sun for days together from the absolute want of hands to bury them. In 1873, the terrible famine which scourged the Eastern provinces brought pestilence in its train, and the present epidemic threatens to prove equally disastrous with its forerunners. In each and all of these cases the power of the pestilence was fatally augmented by the ignorance and superstition of its victims. Many of the sufferers, in their ingrained fatalism, refused all assistance, saying that if they were fated to die no medicine could avail them. One peasant actually purchased a coffin half-price at the outbreak of the epidemic, and kept it standing for weeks in a corner of his hut, complacently pointing to it as a proof of his shrewdness in closing the bargain "before the demand raised the price." Another, convinced that he must die, begged that he might be buried in one coffin with his wife, who was stricken with the same disease; "for," said he, with a momentary gleam of tenderness on his haggard face, "it would be weary work for us to awake yonder and not be able to find each other." Unhappily, even these fearful visitations have failed to teach their natural lesson, and the time when the laws of health and common sense shall be understood by the Russian peasantry seems as distant as ever.

The bill introduced last week in the Assembly, increasing from $200,000 to $500,000 the sum of money which foreign insurance companies wishing to do business in this State must deposit with the head of our Insurance Department, for the protection of their American policy-holders, is a curious, but at the same time a characteristic, piece of legislation. Of course, if protection to native capital and industry is good in one direction, it is in another, and the blessings to be derived from it should not be confined to any particular class. If American iron, cotton, and woolen manufacturers are to have the trade of the country all to themselves, is there any reason why American underwriters should not be equally favored? The trouble is that the claim is put in at rather a late day, for public sentiment is now setting strongly in the opposite direction. It is not at all likely that those who urge the passage of this measure will present the question in its true light. They will say that this increased amount is needed to prevent innocent policy-holders who have insured their property in English, French, or German companies from suffering a severe loss in case of a large fire. It is not to be denied that a fire of comparatively moderate dimensions might more than use up the $200,000 of American assets of a foreign company, and it might also be urged that a transatlantic company meeting with this misfortune would not be very prompt in sending over here additional funds. But, admitting all this, in what way does the case differ from that of scores of American companies. These foreign organizations are only allowed to do business on the basis of the capital they have in America to meet American losses. If they take too many or too large risks, their reserved fund is increased to such an extent that their capital is impaired, and then they must either make good the deficiency or suspend operations. In this respect they are on precisely the same footing with local institutions; and if more financial strength is needed in one case, it is equally called for in the other. Indeed, if there is any advantage, it is on the side of the foreigner, for, while an American company can by no possibility pay more to its burnt-out policy-holders than the assets that it has here, and upon the strength of which it does business, there is a possibility that an English company may—as has been the case—send over money from the other side. The measure is, moreover, not called for by past experience, and its effect will be detrimental to the interests of owners of property of every kind.

No tradesmen in England show a sounder vitality than publishing houses. Many firms are considerably over a century old, and the recent convulsions among the confraternity were confined to comparative novices. The Longmans have been conspicuous in "the Row" for much more than a century, and several large fortunes have come out of this house. About 12 years since they entirely rebuilt their premises in splendid style, and on entering the new edifice gave a douceur to each employe worthy of their name and fame. Whittaker, Tegg, Simpkin, Marshall, and others have been "in the trade" long beyond the memory of the oldest inhabitant. John Murray is a comparatively new man, his father having started the firm. John the first was a publisher born, and acquired an intimacy with literary men of a kind such as no publisher, perhaps, ever had—at all events in England. This was in a measure due to his fixing his place of business in a street which was the centre of resort in those days for littérateurs who were men of the world and society, as well as men of letters. Byron, Hobhouse, Moore, Campbell, &c., delighted to drop in for a a chat in Albemarle-street, five minutes from Pall Mall; but to get down to "the Row" in "the city," is quite another thing. Murray made much money, but his son, who now probably is once more a wealthy man, sunk a large sum in that venture which has engulfed so many men's money—a newspaper. Mr. Nelson, of "the Row," is reputed one of the wealthiest publishers in London, but much of his money is attributed to successful "outside" ventures in this country. No London house has, on the whole, made so much as the Longmans. Macmillan's is one of the firms which, of late years, has assumed a commanding position.

Hardly any one who has a large acquaintance or who reads the obituary or death notices in the public prints, can fail to have noticed how fatal a disease pneumonia is, especially in this City. It really seems sometimes as if it caused half of all the deaths that occur. Each Winter it appears to grow more dangerous. This season it has been very virulent, owing, probably, to sudden changes and the unusual amount of snow. Pneumonia invariably begins with a cold, to which scarcely anybody attaches any importance, and the cold is neglected until it results in the painful and always alarming disease. "Only a cold!" echoed the renowned Abernethy. "A cold is always to be feared. Colds have killed more men than battles have." There seems to be no way of guarding against pneumonia. One person is as subject as another to it. Rugged constitution, vigorous health, general attention to hygienic laws, have no power to prevent it. Pneumonia slays a giant as quickly as it slays a pygmy; an accomplished athlete as quickly as a puny invalid. One meets this morning a friend flushed with youth—energy. Within three or four days he is dead. Pneumonia has cut him down. Persons who care to live—and the fact that they do live shows that they care to—cannot be too watchful of the beginnings of pneumonia, which is one of the most insidious and formidable foes of human existence.

The current number of the Revue Des Deux Mondes contains a very interesting notice of music in Germany. That superiority which France can claim in the arts of design, Germany, says the writer, unquestionably asserts in the art of music. The love of it extends to all classes and conditions. The meanest towns and villages have their choral and orchestral societies, and at Salzungen, a little town of 4,000 souls in the depths of the Duchy of Saxe Meiningen, you may hear a choir of young children sing in delightful concert the choral works of Bach, Scarlatti, and Mendelssohn. Long before Bismarck had united the various parts of Germany, music had done much to weld them together. One of Germany's special points of operatic superiority lies in the extraordinary wealth of her repertoire. In a period of six months, 25 to 30 different works are played on the stages of Vienna, Dresden, Berlin, and Munich. Thus, in a single week, the Berlin house gave "Freischütz," "La Croix d'Or, (Brull,) "Guillaume Tell," "Le Prophète," Gounod's "Faust," Spohr's "Faust," and "Joseph," (Mehul;) while the Munich house gave "Tannhäuser," "Lohengrin," "Fidelio," "Joseph," and "Manfred." The great contrast between opera management there and elsewhere is that in Germany it is confided to a most accomplished artist, whose choice is uninfluenced by pecuniary motives, instead of to an impresario intent on gain. When a new piece is proposed, it is submitted by the Director-in-Chief to two high musical authorities, each of whom sends in a written opinion concerning it. If they agree, their decision is ratified by the Director. If they disagree, he decides, and if he concludes to accept, the gentleman who has been in favor of the piece is appointed to preside (with the composer) at the rehearsals. The subventions given to the opera-houses are liberal. At Aix-la-Chapelle the city defrays the cost of house and orchestra. At Cassel and Wiesbaden $45,000 are given; Hanover and Brunswick, $60,000; Coburg, Wiemar, Gotha, Darmstadt, and Schwerin the theatres are carried on with the understanding that deficiencies will be provided for by the purse of the reigning Prince. In addition to the house and the orchestra, the opera at Dresden receives $135,000, and Berlin $90,000, with a guarantee against deficiencies. The German Princes usually evince the utmost interest in the matter, and are present, quite en bourgeois, nearly every evening at the opera, which in Germany is a most agreeable resort, and an untold boon to strangers. There is no finery or fuss involved in going to it. Toilets are simple, and adapted to those who can't afford carriages. Young ladies even go alone, a servant attending them to the door, and returning to fetch them when the performance is over. Above all, the entertainment is within the reach of persons of very moderate means.

On the title-page of a pamphlet just published by the Board of Immigration for Minnesota, that State is styled the "Empire State of the New North-west; the commercial, manufacturing, and geographical centre of the continent." The pamphlet is dedicated to laboring and landless men, and to all men, whether possessing moderate means or wealth, who will accept homes in a beautiful and prosperous country; and an especial appeal is made to those persons who are employed in "the overcrowded avocations of the East," who are thus afforded a chance to vent themselves upon the limitless and fertile prairies of the new North-west. Minnesota is indeed almost a new Arcadia, as any one will readily admit who has been within its pleasant borders. The State constitutes a wide-spread domain of unparalleled fertility, which is "elevated, as in a mirage of beauty," from 800 to 1,800 feet above the Gulf of Mexico. Many large rivers rise within its boundaries; among them are the Mississippi, the Red River, and the St. Louis. The area of the State is 84,000 square miles, or a little less than 54,000,000 acres. The number of acres still unsurveyed represents an area which is equal to the combined areas of the States of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts, and Connecticut, and the expanse of arable land is as extensive as the whole of the great State of Illinois. There were but 10 miles of railway in the State in 1862; at present there are 2,225, representing a mile of railroad to every 325 inhabitants. What the citizens value most are the many lakes and the unrivaled water-power at their command. While the flour mills, the cotton and woolen factories, and the copper and iron foundries of Minnesota are likely to be developed on a vast scale, its mainstay must long be, as it is now, the produce of fields and flocks. The cultivated area in 1850 was 1,900 acres; in 1877 it was nearly 3,000,000; this year it will reach 4,500,000 acres. The average wheat product of Illinois is eight, of Iowa a little over ten, of Wisconsin thirteen, and of Minnesota seventeen bushels to the acre. Besides, Minnesota wheat of the first class fetches a higher price in the market than any other grown in the United States, and the harvest of 1878 yielded 60,000,000 bushels, which would furnish 12,000,000 barrels of flour, worth $75,000,000. As for stock-raising, native grasses, nutritious and luxuriant, cover thousands of acres, and free pasturage may be had for many years to come. In 1877 the quantity of wild hay made was nearly 1,000,000 tons, while the quantity of cultivated hay was 155,000,000. Upward of 14,000,000 pounds of butter, and of 1,000,000 pounds of cheese represent the produce of the dairy last year, being a higher average per head than in Iowa, Illinois, and Wisconsin. It has been found that sheep-breeding, when properly conducted, is even more profitable here than wheat-growing.

GENERAL NOTES.

Speaking of a railroad conductor, an Iowa paper says that it is "worth eight dollars and a quarter to see Al. being polite to lady passengers."

Jefferson Davis is to be invited to lecture in Atlanta, Ga., and the Constitution says that there is probably no man in the United States who would draw a larger crowd there than this distinguished citizen.

A Tennessee widow bought a suit of clothes for a young man, with the understanding that he should marry her, but he hastened to his own country and purchased a license for himself and a young lady whom he had previously engaged himself to, and was married. The widow made him surrender the clothes.

The Providence Press says that the plans for the new Alumni Hall of Brown University are well advanced, and will create joy in the breast of every lover of true architecture and all friends of the college. It is to be 75 feet in width by 140 in depth, and will be placed in the centre of the college grounds.

Senator Thurman has just promised to deliver the address before the literary societies of the University of North Carolina at the Commencement in June. At the same time, the correspondent of the Raleigh News writes, Bishop Pierce is expected to preach the annual sermon and ex-Gov. Samuel J. Tilden to deliver the literary address.

The Des Moines (Iowa) Register prints an editorial article entitled "Fair Play is not Generosity," and in the same issue reproduces one of J. R.'s graphic New-Orleans letters to The Times without the slightest acknowledgment of the source from which it was derived. The Register should write another article on the same subject, after thinking a little more upon its applications.

The Philadelphia Press says that the appointment of Col. A. Loudon Snowden to the office of Director of the Mint was made some weeks since, but, in view of Dr. Linderman's declining health, Col. Snowden, from motives of delicacy, did not accept the office. Now that a vacancy has been occasioned by Dr. Linderman's death, Col. Snowden has notified the Secretary of the Treasury that he is ready to be commissioned.

The New-Orleans Picayune of Jan. 25 says: "Miss Louise Pomeroy, the actress, is recovering slowly at Shreveport, from the injuries received by a railroad accident. Her physician says her face will not be disfigured." The Times of the same date says: "Miss Louise Pomeroy, the actress, who was severely injured in the recent railroad accident near Shreveport, is improving rapidly. Dr. Ford, her physician, thinks that, with ordinary care, she will soon be about again."

Mr. C. H. Chamberlin, of Plainwell, Mich., writes to the Allegan Journal that during the late war he "became possessed" of a large volume containing manuscripts of society papers edited by the young ladies of the Richmond Female Institute, of Richmond, Va. And he thereupon proceeds to quote a poem therefrom, and signs the name

TWO REMARKABLE SCAMPS

HENRY COLE AND CHARLES ULRICH.

THE COUNTERFEITERS RECENTLY CAPTURED BY UNITED STATES OFFICERS—"DUTCH CHARLIE'S" WONDERFUL HISTORY—HIS LIFE IN BERLIN—HIS MECHANICAL SKILL—HOW HE MASTERED THE GAME OF BILLIARDS—COLE'S SUCCESSFUL CAREER OF CRIME.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—From the first organization of the Secret Service Division of the Treasury Department, in 1865, until the present time no event has occurred of such grave importance in maintaining the purity of the circulating medium of the country as the recent arrests, by the officers of that service, of Henry C. Cole and Charles Ulrich. These men are, without exception, the most extraordinary criminals in their respective lines of counterfeiting and uttering counterfeits on the currency of the United States that have been known to this continent. Nor are they of the lowest class of criminals. On the contrary, they are men of good education. Charles Ulrich could challenge the skill of any steel-plate engraver upon either side of the Atlantic to cope with him in the higher branches of the engraver's art, as exhibited in the production of national bank and legal-tender note plates; but he lacked the means to enable him to pursue his work, and without capital of his own, or in the absence of aid from others, he would have been compelled to turn his attention to something more honorable than counterfeiting the Government issues. Henry C. Cole could scarcely tell a parallel line from geometrical lathe work as an engraver, but he possessed the brains to originate, and the skill, cunning, and nerve to execute the most subtle and ingenious designs for deluging the country with counterfeit issues; and more than this, he had money to carry out his plans. These men united made a combination more dangerous to the Government and to the people than had ever before existed in the history of American counterfeiters. Both men are in the prime of life—Cole tall, stoop-shouldered, thin of flesh, cadaverous in countenance, with a dark and despondent expression almost constantly hovering about it; Ulrich square-shouldered, bright-faced, and sanguine, a compactly-built, steady-nerved, intelligent man, sharp-brained, reticent, and cool. Such men could not be less than exceedingly wary in their progress along the path of crime, and the story of how they were finally detected and brought once more within the meshes of the law has a tinge of romance and mystery about it quite equal to anything in the history of detective experiences in this or any other country. Both men are familiar with the inside of Penitentiary walls, and each had, in days gone by, made many promises to the Government officers to abandon the ways of crime. Cole promised to be a farmer, Ulrich to pursue his calling legitimately as an engraver. Cole bought a farm, and Ulrich went to work; but neither were contented. Satan plowed with Cole, and he in turn with Ulrich, and the twain disregarding their promises entered into this last and most dangerous combination, which has just ended so disastrously for them. Ulrich is a native of Prussia. He began his career of crime before coming to America, not aspiring to such refinement of art in the matter as has crowned his later efforts, but still doing a class of criminal business which the Police deribe as "clever." Nearly 20 years ago the events occurred in Berlin that rendered Ulrich infamous with the Police of that city. The place had been thrown into a condition of excitement by the announcement that five different banking-houses had been victimized on the same day by forged acceptances. Five descriptions of the alleged forger were furnished the Prussian Police by as many different bankers' clerks, each description differing from the other. One described the criminal as tall, erect, broad-shouldered, straight as an arrow, well dressed, and with a business-like air, and wearing a mustache. Another described him as round-shouldered and having a considerable stoop to his person, well dressed, and wearing a full beard. A third stated that he walked with a limping gait, was smooth-faced, and spoke slowly and very distinctly. A fourth was positive that he was an absolute cripple, one leg being shorter than the other. While a fifth remembered him as a man with a rather aristocratic air about him, and a slight impediment in his speech.

The researches of the Prussian Police showed conclusively that the same individual had presented the forged acceptances at the various banking houses. Circumstances pointed to Ulrich, and he fled to America. One other person only was suspected of having been engaged in the transaction, and that was George Wendelken, now dead. The credit of this clever deception rests between Ulrich and Wendelken, with the balance in Ulrich's favor.

For a long time after his arrival in America Ulrich was one of the greatest mysteries that had up to the time of his coming befogged the American detective officers. It was evident that a master hand in crime had suddenly sprung into being. Ten-dollar notes raised to $100 notes made their appearance in business circles, bearing evidences of the most consummate art in their preparation. Long research resulted in learning that the originator of these notes was known as "Dutch Charlie," and that was all that could be obtained about him for many months. As time rolled on, however, he came within the meshes of the law, as all criminals are sooner or later bound to do, and in an evil hour for him he sold some of his bogus wares to a Secret Service officer who had been introduced to him as an "O. K. coney," and Ulrich was arrested. Up to the moment of his incarceration in Ludlow-Street Jail, New-York City, he had never handled a billiard-cue or taken any interest whatever in the game of billiards. A billiard-table was, in those days, in the centre hall of the jail, and such prisoners as were possessed of means were permitted to use it. Ulrich watched the table and the game from the corridor above every day for a week. Then he asked permission to come down and try his hand. This he did with such success that after playing half a dozen games the best players in the jail could not compete with him. In relating his first experiences with the billiard-cue he said: "I saw at a glance that the billiard-table was an affair of angles; that the moment you were master of this branch of the game you could play it against anybody, provided the mechanism of the eye, the nerve-power of the brain, and the education of the hand were up to the mark. I sat for one whole week and studied the angles, the combination of angles, the ricochet, and the rebound, and the elasticity and precise force of the rubber cushions as the propelling power of the cue. You are pretty well aware that my eye is geometrically correct; I had ample coolness and nerve; half a dozen games educated my hands; hence my success."

Ulrich extricated himself from the dilemma of his first arrest only to get entangled in another. Naturally reticent, he could evade the officers of the law just as long as he kept his counsels. When he departed from this rule he was sure to lose. It is only a short time since he emerged from the Ohio Penitentiary, leaving behind him an admirable specimen of his skill in the shape of a steel-plate portrait of ex-Gov. Allen, which he cut while in the Penitentiary. At the time of his incarceration in that place he was made the victim of jealousy; in other words, his capture was effected from information given by a woman, of whom he had become enamored, by whom his love was reciprocated, and who remained constant to him long after he had deserted her. It appeared from this woman's statements that she did not care so much about Ulrich leaving her as she did about his living with some other woman. "At this," she said, "my heart revolted, it could forgive him anything but that. I meditated over it for a time, and the more my mind dwelt on it the more anxiety it gave me. I knew I must break it up between them, or I should go crazy. Charlie had given me away in exchange for that woman, and that was my excuse for giving Charlie away to the officers." She "gave him away" very boldly indeed. He had confided to this woman more than he had ever before breathed to mortal ears. When he left her for his new flame he fancied she knew nothing of it, but supposed she really believed he had been called away from her on business. She went straight to the officers whom she knew had been looking hard after Charlie, and under their directions wrote him a letter to meet her at an appointed time and place. He came, was arrested, tried, convicted, and sentenced to 12 years in the Ohio Penitentiary at hard labor. The most singular part of this episode in the life of Ulrich is that the woman he abandoned was young and comely, while the one for whom he left her was much older, ill-favored, and unattractive. Ulrich smiled when spoken to of this. "Yes, she is ugly," he said, "but a splendid business woman." In other words she could aid and abet him in criminal matters. Specimens of Ulrich's skill as an engraver are now in the Treasury Department. Up to the present hour they stand unrivaled in delicacy of touch and matchless beauty of finish, and have received many encomiums from Chief Engraver Casilear, of the Treasury Department, who stands at the head of his profession.

The history of Harry Cole is crammed as full of criminal mystery and unhealthy romance as any yellow-covered novel of sensational song. He seems to have been born a criminal, having engaged in war against society at a very early age. His mind has run almost exclusively to counterfeiting the national coin and the paper currency. He began at the very bottom round of the ladder, almost—in the capacity of a "shover," or passer of counterfeit money. Then he became a "boodle carrier," which means that he sallied out with a package of counterfeit money which is known among counterfeiters as a "boodle," that he had with him one or two confidential spirits to whom he gave each one note at a time. If they passed it successfully he took the proceeds and gave them another; if they failed and were arrested, no other counterfeits would be found upon them, which made the matter of their escape a much easier task to accomplish. Then he became a dealer, selling the bogus money in large quantities to smaller dealers, boodle carriers, and shovers. Gaining some means, he went still higher in the criminal code, and became a capitalist in the business, which means that he gave up dealing in the money except in very large sums, as $10,000, $20,000, and $50,000 worth or more at a time. As a capitalist he was compelled to employ engravers and pressmen, go into the wholesale purchase the requisite material, select the various kinds of coins and denominations of notes to be counterfeited; and decide upon the safest and best method of placing them in circulation.

Cole's connection with the arrest of Jack Miner in New-York City, in 1871, exposed a combination of which he was the head and front, but from which he escaped by turning State's evidence and acting as an aid to the Secret Service officers. These officers will not soon forget the terribly wild, dark night on which, in a secluded part of the upper portion of New-York City, Cole met Miner, and, in the blinding storm, delivered $1,500 in good money and received in return a number of valuable counterfeit steel plates of the national currency notes. Nor will they forget the signal given by Cole; the grapple with Miner in the dark; the scattering of the $1,500 to the winds; the subsequent search of every foot of the notes on the same night by the aid of lanterns, many of the precious promises to pay having been buried in the mud-pile where the struggle took place.

Cole's wife, "Effie"—a name by which she is known among the Secret Service officers of the Treasury and by the Police generally—has been esteemed by some as much "the better man" of the two. She has been Cole's aider and abettor from first to last, and no scheme was entered into by Cole that had not received "Effie's" sanction. She has stood by him under all circumstances with a devotion and a constancy that has challenged the admiration of those cognizant of it. Cole's son-in-law, Schoner, has also been engaged with him in the business; hence it was a family matter, nothing being intrusted to outsiders except to those employed like Ulrich, and these employes were only permitted to handle a iota more than was absolutely essential in carrying out their branch of the unhallowed traffic. Cole has placed hundreds of thousands of dollars in counterfeit money upon the market in the course of his nearly 40 years of crime, and but for the exertions of the Secret Service Office of the Treasury would have fairly vitiated the entire currency of the country. He has amassed some money by his operations, but has also been compelled to expend a large portion of his gains in defending himself in the course of his numerous arrests. Add to this his broken health, which, in his case, has been the result of over-anxiety; the wild light that has come to his eyes from constant watchfulness and fear lest the hand of the officer of the law might at any moment be laid upon him, the excessive nervousness and insomnia that has become almost a second nature to him, and his case does not afford pleasant meditation for young criminals. And now, behind the prison bars and in the shadowy recesses of his cell, ample leisure is afforded him to take a retrospective view of a life wholly given to crime, and for the reward of which he can already contemplate in the still heavier bars and bolts and granite walls that must for many long and weary years to come—if his life be spared—hold him in durance, and thus protect society against his criminal designs. It is not supposed that Chief Brooks and the officers acting under him claim that they have done more than their duty in the detection and arrest of such extraordinary criminals as Cole and Ulrich, but when it is known that the former had large means which he was willing to use freely to make good his escape, the position of the officers will be better understood and their labors more highly appreciated by the people. The destruction of the combination herein alluded to is worth more to the Government and the people of this country than it would cost to maintain the Secret Service Bureau of the Treasury for a series of years.

ARRANGING FOR FUTURE LABORS.

INCREASING THE PENALTY FOR BODY-STEALING—THE PROPRIETY OF INSTRUCTING REPRESENTATIVES IN CONGRESS—NEW BILLS INTRODUCED IN THE SENATE.

ALBANY, Jan. 28.—There was little business of interest in the Assembly to-day. In general orders Mr. Fish's bill to punish body-stealing was ordered to a third reading. Mr. Fish explained that the bill had been prepared by the District Attorney of New-York, and that the penalty, considered too light in the existing statute, had been increased. Mr. Fish's bill provides that every person who removes the dead body of a human being, or any part thereof, from a grave, vault, or other place where the same has been buried, or from the place where the same has been deposited while awaiting burial, without authority of law, with intent to sell the same, or for the purpose of dissection, or for the purpose of procuring a reward for the return of the same, or from malice or wantonness, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment in the State Prison for a term of not more than five years.

Mr. Hurd, of Erie, called up his resolution to improve the St. Mary's River and other water routes connecting the great lakes with the Erie Canal, and asking to have the United States Senators and Representatives urged to favor an appropriation for the purpose. Mr. Brooks objected to thus instructing Representatives at Washington, who were supposed to know their duties. He added that his experience taught him to believe that such petitions acted against the measures which they were brought forward to sustain. Mr. Sloan, who agreed with Mr. Brooks as to the good taste expressed in his speech, thought that this was an occasion upon which the Assembly could properly express its sense and not offend Senators or Representatives.

President John Nichols, of the Knickerbocker Life Insurance Company, submitted a report in compliance with the order of the Assembly. He denies that his company is contempt of the House. When a similar resolution to that just passed was adopted two years ago, he says he caused a report to be made and transmitted to James G. Graham, Chairman of the Insurance Committee, on March 20, 1877, and that after ward the same was printed and submitted to a rigorous examination. He understood that the committee were entirely satisfied with his explanations. He adds that no counsel fees were paid to counsel of life-saving stations.

The Carman-Duryea contest will undoubtedly be concluded to-morrow. All the testimony is in, the last witnesses having been heard this morning, and counsel on both sides will be summed up. The committee will meet for consultation to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock, and a report will probably be made at the morning session of the Assembly.

To-morrow night Miss Susan B. Anthony will speak in the Assembly Chamber, before the Judiciary Committee, on woman suffrage. Mr. Strahan, always gallant as Chairman of the committee, has again extended the invitation to the advocates of woman suffrage to make their wants known where they can be heard by a multitude of people.

A joint committee of the two houses, appointed to make arrangements for commemorating in a formal manner the acceptance by the Capitol for the new, met last evening, and resolved that the Legislature will meet in joint session in the Assembly Chamber not later than Feb. 12. The Lieutenant-Governor will preside, assisted by Speaker Alvord. Invitations to be present will be issued to the Governor and his staff, State officers, and the Judges of the Court of Appeals. Speeches will be made by Mr. Dorshimer and Mr. Atwood, and a historical address will be delivered by Erastus Brooks.

The Senate held an hour's session, and laid out some additional work for the future in the shape of new bills introduced. Mr. Bailey introduced a bill that has been before two or three previous Legislatures, for a reduction of the fare for foot passengers on the Thirty-fourth-Street Ferry, East River, from 5 to 2 cents.

Mr. Goebel introduced, "by request," the same bill introduced by Mr. Eidman in the Assembly last week, prohibiting the construction of an elevated railroad east of the Bowery and Third-avenue.

Mr. Ecclesine introduced a bill to compel the elevated railroads in New-York to extend the hours for running "commission trains" at 5 cents fare from 4 o'clock to 9 o'clock in the morning and from 5 o'clock to 8 o'clock in the evening, and also requiring the companies to run at least one "commission" car at 5 cents fare on all trains at all hours of the day and night. The bill also prohibits the companies from using the lands over any street or avenue for storage of the cars or engines, or for washing, cleaning, or repairing the same.

Mr. Sessions offered a resolution, which lies over under the rule, for the appointment of a joint committee of five from the Senate and seven from the Assembly, whose duty it shall be to prepare and report a bill revising the present system of assessment and taxation of property.

Mr. Lippitt offered a resolution, which was adopted, calling upon the Superintendent of Public Works to report to the Senate his views of the propriety of reopening the Chenango Canal, together with his estimate of the expense of putting it in running condition.

The Judiciary Committee has under consideration the resolution introduced by Senator J. F. Pierce for an amendment to the Constitution abolishing the clause which disqualifies Judges from serving after they have attained the age of 70 years, and also adding the Superior Court of Buffalo, and the City Court of Brooklyn to the courts whose Judges can be detailed to hold circuits in any part of the State. There is some difference of opinion among the members of the committee on the propriety of the amendment abolishing the disqualification of age, and an expression of the sentiment of the legal profession, and of the press on the subject is desired.

PHILADELPHIA URGING IMPROVEMENTS.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Jan. 28.—A committee from the City Councils, accompanied by Mayor Stokley and representatives from the Commercial and Maritime Exchanges, Board of Trade, Board of Port Wardens, and other bodies, left here for Washington to-day to urge upon the Committee on Commerce an appropriation of $500,000 for the improvement of the Delaware and Schuylkill Rivers.

CHICAGO'S FINANCES IMPROVED.

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—The Appellate Court this afternoon decided that the act of 1877, providing for the collection of back taxes, is valid, thereby affirming the decision of Judge Loomis. This decision involves from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000 of taxes due the city, and is, therefore, a very important aid to the revenue of Chicago.

CHAMPIONS OF CHILDREN.

FOURTH ANNIVERSARY OF A WORTHY ASSOCIATION.

SPEECHES BY DR. TIFFANY, GEN. PORTER, JOSEPH H. CHOATE, AND DR. NEWMAN—THE SUCCESSFUL WORK OF THE SOCIETY—ITS FURTHER NEEDS—A LARGE AND FASHIONABLE AUDIENCE.

The fourth anniversary of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children was celebrated in Chickering Hall last evening in the presence of a packed audience of intelligent and fashionably-dressed ladies and gentlemen. The exercises were opened by a performance on the organ by Mr. John White. Then Hon. Thomas C. Acton, who officiated as master of ceremonies, introduced the aged President of the society, John D. Wright. Mr. Wright, in the course of his address, said that last year between 600 and 700 children had been received by the society, and provided with comfortable homes in the country. Already 11 or 12 other similar societies have been started in various parts of the country, and inquiries have been received and answered from London and Australia, giving the hope that soon every nation and city on the civilized globe will actively participate in the good work of the parent society of New-York.

The next speaker was Lewis L. Delafield, the counsel of the society. He said that during the year ending Jan. 1, 1878, 6,950 children under 16 years of age were arrested and brought before the Police courts of this City. Of these 5,694 were boys, and 1,256 girls. Nor were they all charged with petty offenses; 1,174 were arrested for larceny and burglary, and 2,498 for assault and battery and disorderly conduct. They were disposed of by sending 1,000 to the Courts of General and Special Sessions for trial, and 427 to the Work-house and City Prison; 3,115 were fined and 2,408 were committed to various reformatory institutions. During this period the society, for want of means, was only able to attend to about 900 of these cases. Of the 6,950, 729 were under 7 years of age, and the great proportion of the others under 14. The speaker held that the responsibility for all this crime and misery rests upon our vicious system of poor laws, our workhouses, and some of our so-called charitable institutions, which neither reform nor punish, but only encourage idleness by furnishing comfortable lodgings to the degraded; upon those who applaud the feats of child acrobats, the shooting of apples off the heads of little boys with rifle balls, &c.; but, most of all, upon the practically free sale of liquor. "Give us," he said, "a reasonable excise law, one which distinguishes between the harmless beverage of the Teuton and the poisoned cup of the Saxon and Celt, a law which can be rigorously and impartially enforced over the rich and the poor by making intoxication a crime, wherever it is found, and punishing it as a misdemeanor, and you will remove the principal cause of juvenile crime." This sentiment was warmly applauded. Continuing, Mr. Delafield said that it is a mistake to think that the greater portion of our criminals are of foreign birth. However it may be with adults, it is not so with children, for of this 6,950 little criminals all but 581 were native-born Americans. Then turning the reverse of the picture around, the speaker said that Mrs. Wright is about consummating his intention of providing a Summer home for children forever. [Applause.] He has given to the American Female Guardian Society a spacious one, capable of accommodating 100 children, with grounds and outbuildings on a hill swept by the breezes of the Atlantic, at Oceanport, N. J., upon the condition that its doors shall be open to such little ones as the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children may send there. In closing, the speaker paid an affecting tribute to one of the best and earliest friends of the society, who had died during the year—Theodore Roosevelt.

Rabbi Henry S. Jacobs, who was to be the next speaker, sent a letter regretting that attendance at a Hebrew Conference in Philadelphia would prevent him from being present. Rev. Charles F. Deems was next called upon. He commended the practice of sending children to homes, as the statistics of England and this country show that children who are cooped up in institutions generally turn out badly. He said that much cruelty to children is caused by the bad tempers and false notions of society of parents—by silly dressing, which takes off the dew of childhood, and stirs up the springs of happiness before they begin to flow. [Applause.] "Let your children," he cried, "wear once in a while a torn gown or a coat, let them cover themselves with the dirt in which they play; let them ride on hay-carts in the Summer instead of moping away their little lives in fashionable equipages at fashionable watering-places. [Applause.] It is said that the worst cases in society are usually those of rich men's daughters. [Laughter.] That is not true. But if it were true it would be because of that overstrained and unmanly sensitiveness which looks at everything beyond, and will not look at anything which is before us. Our appetites were given us to check, but not to root out. They should be trained so that they may come to the ripeness of manhood and womanhood at last." [Applause.]

Gen. Horace Porter was the next speaker. He kept the audience in roars of laughter by a succession of comical anecdotes and witticisms. In conclusion he protested against a statement to the effect which, he said, persons were compelled to endure whose wives had become members of the society. Such wives, he said, supposed that their mission in life was to go around darning small boys' clothes—sewing tares, as it were. [Laughter.] Does the husband wish to take a constitutional walk with his wife up the avenue, hardly have they left their house, when "Mrs. Jones sees a man lifting a child over a gutter by the arm, and she must stop and remonstrate and ask the nurse's name and the name and address of the child. The speaker noticed, however, that the nurses, under such circumstances, generally failed to give up the combination. [Laughter.] Two boys fighting over the stump of a cigar on the next block, and a woman rushing out of a tenement to seize the boy by the hair of the head, is the next on came in for separate lectures on the enormity of their crimes, until the speaker would venture to say that the best time the husband can possibly make will be two blocks an hour. [Laughter.]

Rev. Father McGlynn being absent, Hon. Chauncey M. Depew out of town, and Judge John R. Brady suffering from a sore throat, as appeared from a humorous letter from him that was read, Mr. Acton introduced Joseph H. Choate as one who, having been a bachelor last year, had become a husband and a father in the interval. Mr. Choate corrected this last statement. All his children, he said, were born before the last annual meeting. [Laughter.] Lest the audience should feel alarm about Judge Brady's health he would say that he had just left him enjoying an excellent dinner. [Laughter.] Mr. Choate recalled the fact that he felt like an old acquaintance of the society, having been imposed upon the congregation at every annual meeting that had taken place. He recognized before him the same familiar faces that were on other occasions when they looked just as sympathetic as now. But he did not recognize all their names on the list of members. The seating capacity of the hall was 1,800. Every seat was filled, and aisles were standing, yet the society's roll numbers but 800. "How much," he asked, "is your sympathy worth? Why, when you last heard the objects of the society read, how much did you put in the box at the Captain's office? Every $5 note saves some little waif from perdition. The society has a great deal to be proud of. Four years is but a speck of time in the eye of politician. Four years is not sufficient to enable him to recover from the fatigues of one conflict and prepare to for another. Yet in that period the society has made a record for itself that has never been surpassed. It has demonstrated how much can be done with a great deal of diligence and a very little money. And what is most remarkable of all, the zealots of all sects, who quarrel whenever they get a chance, join hands in amity here. It presents something higher than race or religion to the favor of mankind. A little child is the one touch of nature that makes all mankind akin. Its great enemy is rum. Nine-tenths of the cases with which it deals had to do have been the result of rum." The speaker read the history of a case in which a man was prosecuted for selling liquor to three little girls until they became intoxicated. "Where," he asked, "was such a crime ever heard of before? Many murderers are guiltless beside that man. He was tried at the Tombs before three Justices. Of course, he was fined $50. The society needs much more moral backing than it has yet got. Its next great enemy—you would never guess it—is stepfathers and stepmothers. [Laughter.] This is literally true. The records show it. I don't propose," said the speaker, "to enter into a discourse on the expediency or morality of second marriages. [Laughter.] I would always except the present company, of course." [Renewed laughter.] But here is the proof that a second marriage is a bad thing for the young children of the first—so before you contract a second marriage, let me advise you to remember the baby. You should not come here merely to smile when jokes are made, or to draw down your dismal faces when something pathetic is uttered. Sign the roll, and let it not be for want of active sympathy or money that this society does not do its perfect work." [Applause.]

Rev. John P. Newman followed in an earnest speech, in the course of which he alluded to the fact that the society had laid "its axe at the roots of the proud Maples, who sometimes flourished in the Academy of Music." A telegram was received from the wife of Rev. C. D. W. Bridgman, saying that her husband was sick in bed. At intervals during the speeches the audience was treated to songs from Mr. A. E. Stoddard and Miss Antonia Henne. The former sang "Celebrons le Seigneur" and "In the days of old," and the latter "Ah, mon fils!" and "The robins sang their sweetest song," and together they gave a duet. "Le el Darem la, mario," which was encored. The exercises came to a close shortly after 10 o'clock.

GRAIN IN WESTERN WAREHOUSES.

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—Chicago elevators contain 7,047,301 bushels of wheat, 2,846,883 bushels of corn, 494,804 bushels of oats, 282,017 bushels of rye, and 111,787 bushels of barley, making a total of 11,782,802 bushels, against 11,194,203 bushels a week ago, and 3,259,956 bushels at this time last year. In addition to the above, vessels in the harbor are laden with 459,830 bushels, which makes the amount of grain in Chicago 12,242,632 bushels. Milwaukee warehouses are stored with 3,311,440 bushels of wheat, 38,492 bushels of corn, 199,430 bushels of oats, 127,263 bushels of rye, and 516,816 bushels of barley.

THE DISABLED INMAN STEAMER.

NO FURTHER DOUBT THAT SHE IS THE CITY OF CHESTER—HER ARRIVAL HERE EXPECTED TO-DAY.

The Inman steam-ship City of Montreal arrived yesterday from England. Her rudder was not broken, and the Inman steam-ship sighted at sea disabled in that manner was undoubtedly the City of Chester, which sailed from this port on Sunday, and is now returning.

The Ethiopia, which arrived from Glasgow last night, reports that 30 miles east of Nantucket she passed the steam-ship Ranport, bound west. When first sighted she had the City of Chester in tow. The log further says: "Jan. 27, 4 P. M., 30 miles east of Nantucket, sighted steam-ship City of Chester with rudder partly disabled. Endeavored to render her assistance by giving a towing hawser, but in doing so our transporting line was carried away. Remained in company with her till 9 A. M. She was then steering toward Sandy Hook."

LONG BRANCH, Jan. 28.—Just before dark to-day a large steamer was seen off the bar at Sandy Hook. She seemed to be disabled and trying to make her way into the Hook. She was soon known to be one of the Inman line of steamers, and as the regular steamer of the line had passed the Hook this morning going toward New-York, it is supposed to be the City of Chester, which left New-York on Sunday, and that something has happened to her, and she is returning to New-York. The fog coming up rapidly, shut her out from view, but she is supposed to be now anchored off the bar.

OBITUARY.

THE DEAN OF RIPON.

The death of Very Rev. Hugh McNeile, Dean of Ripon, is announced from London. He was born at Ballycastle, County Antrim, Ireland, in 1795, and took his degree of B. A. at Trinity College, Dublin, in 1815, and entered as a law student at Lincoln's Inn. He decided to devote himself to the Church, and in 1820 was ordained to a curacy in Donegal. He soon married the daughter of Dr. Magee, late Archbishop of Dublin, and was presented to the rectory of Albury, in Surrey, by the late H. Drummond, M. P. At that time he preached frequently in London. In 1834 he was collated to the District Church of St. Jude, in Liverpool. The Bishop of Chester bestowed on him, in 1845, an honorary canonry in Chester Cathedral. At this time his college gave him the degrees of B. D. and D. D. He resigned from St. Jude in 1848, and was presented to St. Paul's, Birkenhead. This was built for him by friends in Liverpool, at a cost of about $60,000. In 1860 the Bishop of Chester collated him to a canonry (residentiary) in his cathedral. In 1868, on the recommendation of Disraeli, he was appointed to the Deanery of Ripon. His publications consist chiefly of sermons, with lectures on the Church of England, on miracles, and on the Jews. A large sum of money was raised for him by his Liverpool friends, but he refused to receive it for his own private use, and it was invested for the foundation of four scholarships in the Collegiate Institution of Liverpool, and an exhibition, value about $200 a year, tenable at the University of Oxford, Cambridge, or Dublin.

CARDINAL ANTONUCCI.

Cardinal Antonio Benoit Antonucci, whose death is announced by cable from Ancona, was born at Subraco on Sept. 17, 1798, and consequently was in his eighty-first year. He was created Cardinal on March 15, 1858. He was Archbishop of Ancona and Count Bishop of Umana. He at one time was the Papal Nuncio at Holland, and at Turin. For some time he had lived in retirement, only coming before the public at the time of the election of the successor of Pope Pius IX., when his eligibility for the Papacy was fully considered. He was a profound student and much devoted to his duties. He classed himself among the "zealots" of the Church. He was timid and retiring in disposition.

THE LEGISLATIVE BILL.

NEARLY $1,000,000 LESS THAN THE DEPARTMENT ESTIMATES APPROPRIATED—PROPOSED TRANSFER OF THE COAST SURVEY TO THE INTERIOR DEPARTMENT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The amount appropriated by the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation bill, as reported from the House committee to-day, is $15,155,565 61, which is $229,572 89 less than the appropriation of last year, and $941,636 29 less than the department estimates. Section 2 of the bill provides that the present Coast and Geodetic Survey shall be transferred from the Treasury to the Interior Department, and shall be hereafter known as the Coast and Interior Survey; to have charge of all coast and interior surveys, except the special survey necessary for geological purposes, the survey of the Northern and North-western lakes now under the direction of the War Department, local surveys for river and harbor improvements, and surveys for military purposes, in accordance with the plan of the National Academy of Sciences. The offices of Surveyors-General are abolished, to take effect June 30, 1879, and the work is to be hereafter done by the Superintendent of the Coast and Interior Survey. Officers of the Army and Navy, when detailed on the employed may be detailed by the Secretary of War or of the Navy to take part in the operations of the Coast and Interior Survey. The heads of the several departments are authorized to make requisitions upon the Postmaster-General for postage stamps are the use of their department, not exceeding the amount stated in the estimates. The pay of assistant messengers, firemen, watchmen, and laborers is fixed at $720 per annum for the first three, and $660 per annum for laborers. A reduction of $500 is made in the salaries of the Sub-Treasurers at Baltimore, St. Louis, Chicago, and Cincinnati. The estimates for the support of life-saving stations are not reduced from $20,400 to $3,500, and the second and third sections of the act of June 18, 1878, to organize life-saving stations are repealed.

ANOTHER ABSURD POST OFFICE RULING.

Another striking instance of the absurdity and extreme oppressiveness of many of the rulings of the Post Office Department, in addition to those recently pointed out in THE TIMES, appears in the following state of facts: A day or two ago there arrived at the New-York Post Office a copy of the Herald, Dubuque, Iowa, addressed to Mr. John H. Bates, No. 34 Park-row, New-York, N. Y. The paper was inclosed in a Government newspaper wrapper, bearing the usual stamp of 1 cent, was not in excess of the legal weight transmissable at that rate, and in compliance (or supposed to be so) with all the requirements of the law. On delivery, however, it was found to be stamped letter rates, and Mr. Bates had to pay an extra postage of 16 cents on a newspaper properly prepaid, which ought to have cost him nothing. The matter was referred to the proper officials here, and they called attention to the fact that the stamp of the publishing office contained not only the title and address of the establishment, but the date of the transmission. It was not claimed that there was any attempt to evade the Post Office regulations or any moral delinquency. The department had arbitrarily ruled that a man may stamp his name and address upon the wrapper in sending a newspaper, but if he simply stamps the date upon it, either with or without name and address, it becomes liable to letter rates. There was no dissension, and no appeal. Thus, an innocent mistake on the part of the Dubuque Herald may cost its subscribers 16 cents extra for every copy they receive. Of course, the New-York Post Office is not to blame for this exaction. On the contrary, the propriety of quietly ignoring a ruling manifestly oppressive and absurd has been under discussion within the last few days, and the propriety of bringing it to public notice has been repeatedly called to the stupidity of exacting letter rates for a date stamped upon a wrapper, while the name and address involve no such penalty. But there seems to be no official to be promoted, and it is not always safe to intimate that there is no practical difference between twoedledum and tweedledee.

SUDDEN DEATH OF A VETERAN.

John Kehoe, aged 39, of No. 161 Clinton-street, died suddenly last evening in the liquor store of Dennis Sullivan, No. 406 Grand-street. Kehoe was a veteran of the war, having served four years in the Second Five Zouaves, and was badly wounded at the capture of Fort Fisher, and also by the explosion of the mine at Petersburg, Va. He was a member of Dahlgren Post, No. 113, Grand Army of the Republic, the members of which have taken charge of his remains for interment.

TRACING A MURDERER.

AUGUSTA, Me., Jan. 28.—Information has been received at the office of the Kennebec Journal that a clue has been obtained to the murderer of J. Wilson Barron, late Cashier of the Dexter Savings Bank. Startling revelations are expected in a day or two. The suspected murderer moves in the highest circles of Dexter. The clue was obtained by a called bond, which was sent to Washington, the former property of Barron, and which has been traced back to the suspected man.

A GAS COMPANY'S DIFFICULTIES.

FALL RIVER, Jan. 28.—It is said the Manufacturers' Gas Company, of which Charles P. Stickney was Treasurer, held a meeting yesterday, and decided to go into bankruptcy.

DEATH OF A BOSTON MERCHANT.

BOSTON, Jan. 28.—Thomas Gray, of the firm of Gray & Co., cotton-dealers, one of the oldest and best known merchants of this city, died suddenly of heart disease at his office this morning.

RECORD OF AMUSEMENTS.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

BROADWAY THEATRE.

It is not without a feeling of dread, ordinarily, that we hear of a new revival of "King Lear," for this is a work of almost unearthly grandeur, a grandeur which, when reduced to the artifices of stage representation, seems painful and puerile by contrast. The character of the King has been fully commented upon in these columns, and it is, perhaps needless to add that no living English or American actor is able to realize its marvelous variety and sustained sublimity. Mr. Booth is never seen to such disadvantage as in Lear, and Mr. McCullough simply tears through the part. As to Mr. Barrett, his failure has been indelibly recorded. No one of these well-known actors, it may be explained, is even satisfactory in the character of the King, because each, and more especially Mr. Booth, aims at absolute greatness, which, like a shadow, eludes his grasp. It was, therefore, with surprise and delight that we recognized in Mr. George Edgar, who made his first appearance in the great tragedy at the Broadway Theatre on Monday night, an earnest interpreter of Shakespeare's profound creation, and an artist whose merits deserve warm and ready commendation. Let it not be inferred from this that Mr. Edgar has fully realized his ambitious endeavor, or that he has accomplished in a bound what his distinguished contemporaries have long labored in vain to attain: such an impression would be indeed false. Mr. Edgar's success is entirely of another sort: without aiming at greatness, he has sought with heart and mind to embody a partial conception, and the picture which he has left upon the imagination is vivid, beautiful, and harmonious. There is no doubt that few persons among the large audience gathered in the theatre on Monday evening expected, at the hands of Mr. Edgar, other than tamely respectable work, if even that; for here was a man entirely unknown to our public as an actor, who proposed to identify himself with the highest type of human wretchedness, with the agonized soul wailing in the desert of existence, with a poetic ideal born of a divine inspiration. This task, even when essayed with knowledge, offset by a wise modesty, might well have been regarded as a foolhardy one. However, from the beginning, Mr. Edgar won his audience and his most thoughtful hearers, not, as we have intimated, by impossible efforts to reach the summits of the character of Lear, but by thoughtful and delicate work, which never overreached certain fixed limits. The result was that the heart and the imagination of all were touched, while the general effect of the performance was strong and distinct. The two chief merits of this performance were the manner in which the lines were read and the perfect sympathy with his subject shown by the actor. Mr. Edgar, it is plain, has studied conscientiously the text of the part, for his readings were, in almost every instance, melodious, natural, and, what follows as a matter of course, poetic. One passage in the second act—that which begins. "O, reason not the need!"—was delivered with such beauty of flow and emphasis that all familiar with it must have been highly pleased. It was evident in this act that Mr. Edgar could not hope to reach the sublimity, while he could realize the pathos, of Lear. The tender emotions which belong to the character were fully expressed by him; but the fearful intensity of the curse scenes was weakly given. In fact, Mr. Edgar may be said to have simply read the imprecation which ends so impressively:

"Turn all her mother's pains, and benefits,
To laughter and contempt; that she may feel
How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is
To have a thankless child.—Away, away!"

As a reading, this was notable for good taste and a wise repression of forces; Mr. Edgar lacks both the voice and the magnetic power to utter it with all its emotional significance. When Mr. McCullough last attempted to deliver these few but awe-inspiring lines, he merely ranted, and the effect was almost ludicrous. Mr. Edgar's weaknesses were chiefly noticeable in the first scene on the heath, where the outpourings of Lear's maddened soul mingle with the roar and the rush of the elements. This scene is, in reality, too great for representation on the stage, although a few mighty geniuses have towered amid its stormy darkness. But in the scene with Edgar, the actor's simple manner and tender utterance were exceedingly affecting. He depicted admirably the gradual passage of Lear's mind from partial insanity to almost entire madness. His recognition of Cordelia in her own true guise of sweetness and spontaneity, mingled with a child-like happiness which had no touch of artifice about it. We might call attention in this way to all the striking points of the performance, but it will be sufficient to observe in general terms that Mr. Edgar's work was thoroughly good, and, as a partial conception comprehensively embodied, unexpectedly successful. He made the mistake, in the opening act, of overdoing Lear's infirmity; but this he will undoubtedly correct in future.

The support included Mr. Joseph Wheelock as Edgar, Mr. Hart Conway as the Fool, and Mr. F. R. Pierce as Kent. Mr. Wheelock's impersonation was vigorous and sincere, and added greatly to the beauty of the representation. Mr. Conway's Fool was played with delicacy and spirit, and merits the popularity which the able young actor has gained in this character. Mr. Pierce was an excellent Kent. The others in the cast,

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

SALES AT THE STOCK EXCHANGE—JAN. 28.

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—10:15 A. M.

U. S. 4s R., 1907.
$2,000..bc.104¾
U. S. 5s '81, R.
$10,000.....104⅞
U. S. 5s C. '81.
$110,000.....106

FIRST BOARD—10:30 A. M.

B., C. R. & N. Int.
$6,000.....71¾
5,000.....71¾
10,000.....71¾
10,000..s10. 48
N. J. C. Adjm't.
500.....94¼
1,000..bc. 94¾
N. J. C. Income.
10,000.....5
N. Y. & P. C. & N.
5,000.....11
Peninsula Int.
1,000.....15
N. W. C. C. 6.
1,000.....106¾
1,000..bc.106¾
N. W. C. R. 6.
10,000.....106¾
Pac. R. Ex. 7s.
3,000.....104¾
D. & H. R. '91.
5,000.....94¾
11,000.....96⅝
D. & H. C. 7s.
7,000.....101
D. & H. R. '84.
3,000.....98½
Erie 2d.
4,000.....100
Erie 4th.
2,000.....106
Ohio & Miss. 7s.
1,000.....55
6,000.....84
20,000..bc. 84
T. & W. 1st, S. L. D., ex mat. cp.
5,000.....95¾
U. S. 6s R. '81.
$10,000..106⅝
$10,000..10-40
10,000.....104¾
U. S. 5s 10-40 C.
$190,000.....105
10,000..bs.106
U. S. 4½ R. '91.
$190,000.....106
10,000..bs.106
U. S. 4½ C. '91.
15,000.....106¾
U. S. 5s 10-40 C.
16,000..bc.104⅜
40,000..bc.105⅞
U. S. 6s R. '81.
$10,000..106⅝
$10,000..10-40
10,000.....104¾
U. S. 5s C. '81.
13,000.....104⅞
10,000.....105
U. S. 4½ C. '91.
10,000.....105¾

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—2:30 P. M.

U. S. 4½ R. '91.
$190,000.....106
10,000..bs.106
U. S. 4½ C. '91.
15,000.....106¾
U. S. 5s 10-40 C.
16,000..bc.104⅜

SECOND BOARD—1 P. M.

K. & D. M. 1st.
$1,000.....85¼
4,000.....85¼
K. J. C. 1st, con. 6.
20,000.....80⅜
10,000..bc. 80
K. J. C. Adjm't.
3,000..bc. 94¾
M. & St. P. 1st, La C.
1,000..bc. 98
M. & St. P. c. & r.
5,000.....103½
M. & St. P. 1st, consol. con.
8,000..bc.121½
M. & St. P. 5s, gold.
10,000..bc.107½
C. & Tol. 8 f.
10,000..bc.108¾
N. Pac. 8 f.
1,000.....10
Ohio & Miss. 2d.
5,000.....84½
Erie Railway pf.
50.....48
200.....48½
100.....48½
100..s10. 48½
100.....47½
100.....47½
Illinois Central.
400.....87½
200.....87¾
100.....87¾
1,000..bc.107½
500.....87
40.....86¾
Panama.
100.....126
Michigan Central.
200.....87¾
300.....87¾
400.....87¾
100.....87¾
20,000.....99½
5,000.....103¼
Can. So. 1st pf.
1,000.....73
Tol. & Wab. 2d.
5,000.....103¾
Tol. & Wab. 2d.
5,000.....103¾
N. C. & St. L. 1st.
10,000.....97½
Mut. Un. 1st.
2,000.....98½
N. J. C. Adjm't.
1,000.....94½
4,000.....94¼
U. S. Express.
10.....48¾
40.....48¾
47.....48¾
Am. American Ex.
100.....49¼
Wells-Fargo Ex.
23.....97½
Delaware & Hud.
7.....43¾
100.....44½
100.....43½
100.....43
100.....42
100.....41
Quicksilver pf.
10.....31¼
100.....30
Mariposa.
100.....34
Homestake M. Co.
100.....25½
100.....25½
100.....25¾
100.....25
500.....25
Pull. Pal. Car.
100.....93
220.....80
At. & Pac. Tel.
50.....37
100.....36¾
100.....36¾
100.....36¾
100.....36
Western Union.
100.....97⅞
100.....97⅝
400.....97⅜
100.....97¼
100.....97¼
700.....97⅛
200.....97⅛
300.....97⅛
100.....97⅛
Pacific Mail.
600.....s3. 13
Mariposa.
100.....25
New-Jersey So.
200.....27⅝
Erie Railway.
100.....53¾
100.....53¾
100.....53¾

THE REAL ESTATE MARKET.

The following business was transacted at the Exchange yesterday, Tuesday, Jan. 28:

A. H. Muller & Son, under the direction of the Executors of the estate of John H. Power, deceased, sold the following described City real estate: Three four-story brick buildings, with lease of plot of land 50 by — by 53.9 by 50, Nos. 93, 95, and 97 44th-av., north-east corner of 11th-st., sold for $10,000, to a party in interest, leased May 1, 1866, term, 21 years; ground rent, $500 per annum; one five story store and two-story brick building, with lot 22.7 by 100 by 19.6 by 100, No. 61 Pearl-st., north side, running through to No. 26 Stone-st., east of Broad-st., sold for $10,700, to same purchaser; two four-story brick buildings, three-story brick building, and three-story frame house, with two lots, each 23.7 by 75.2, Nos. 178 and 180 Canal-st., south-east corner of Mott-st., sold for $28,100, to Henry Stone; two-story brick front house, with four lots, each 25 by 100, on 3d-av., north-east corner of 56th-st., sold for $26,000, to William Laimbeer; two lots, each 25 by 100, on 3d-av., east side, adjoining above, sold for $10,000, to S. Myers; two lots, each 25.3 by 100, on 3d-av., south-east corner of 67th-st., sold for $14,100, to L. Lemison; eight lots, each 25 by 100.5, on East 66th-st., north side, 100 feet east of 3d-av., sold for $14,400, to J. Wendell; six lots, together in size 150 by 100.5, on East 66th-st., north side, adjoining above, sold for $10,700, to A. T. White; two lots, each 25 by 100.5, on east 67th-st., south side, 100 feet east of 3d-av., sold for $4,400, to F. Boedman, and four lots, each 25 by 100.5, on east 67th-st., south side, adjoining above, sold for $7,700, to a party in interest. The sale of the balance of the estate was adjourned sine die.

P. Dailey, at public auction, sold the three brick buildings, with lot 25 by 70.10, Nos. 206 and 206½ East Houston-st., north side, running through to (No. 99) 1st-st., near Ludlow-st., for $9,200, to Emil Emfresa.

Richard V. Harnett, Executor's sale, of the three-story and basement brick house, with lot 21.10 by 92, No. 329 West 18th-st., north side, 356.6 feet west of 8th-av., for $75, to S. S. Baker.

The foreclosure sale by John T. Boyd of the dwelling, with lot, No. 118 West 44th-st., west of 6th-av., was adjourned to Feb. 11.

RECORDED REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

NEW-YORK.

Monday, Jan. 27.

130th-st., n. s., 278 ft. e. of 5th-av., 18x99.11; John Noble, br., and wife to Erastus Brainerd, $10,000
4th-av., n. w. corner of 111th-st., 150x100.11; Edwin R. Hale and wife to Edwin Dobbs..... nom.
53d-st., bet. No. 224, 20x100.5: Eliza S. Conner to Eliza Watson..... nom.
46th-st., n. s., 100 ft. w. of 9th-av., 20x100.4; Charles W. Feltman and wife to John Galbraith..... nom.
132d-st., n. s., 100 ft. w. of 7th-av., 100x99.11; also, 132d-st., 275 ft. w. of 7th-av., 125x99.11; George H. Peck and wife to Edward H. M. Just..... 14,400
Same property; Herman T. Livingston and wife to George H. Peck..... nom.
132d-st., n. s., 200 ft. w. of 7th-av., 75x100; Herman T. Livingston and wife to Edward H. M. Just..... 4,800
76th-st., s. s., 80 ft. w. of 2d-av., 25x78.9; Abraham H. Jonas and wife to William Sieseme..... 8,000
22d-st., s. s., 350 ft. w. of 9th-av., 33x93.6; Mary M. F. Pinto to Sarah W. Drummond..... 18,000
83d-st., s. s., 225 ft. w. of 9th-av., 144.10x50.2; Samuel K. Syms and wife to William J. Syms..... 4,500
Avenue A., n. w. s., 84.4 ft. s. w. of 122d-st., 50x 118.6; Roe, Referee, to Henrietta Phillips..... 4,725
Perry-st., s. s. corner of Bleecker-st., 25x61.7½; H. Donnelly, Referee, to James R. Floyd, Executor..... 5,700
4th-av., n. w. corner of 111th-st., 155x100.11; Edwin Dobbs and wife to John H. Deane..... nom.
46th-st., n. s., 450 ft. w. of 11th-av., 25x100.5; also, 46th-st., n. s., 425 ft. w. of 11th-av., 25x 100.5; William S. Warwick to Mary J. Warwick..... 5,000
9th-av. w. s., 50.5 ft. n. of 42d-st., 20x62; also, 44th-st., s. s., 450 ft. w. of 9th-av., 20x100.4; also, 45th-st., s. s., 275 ft. e. of 10th-av., 25x 100.4; Same to Same..... 30,000
Goerck-st., s. s., 125 ft. n. of Delancey-st., 25x 99.1; J. D. Lewis, Referee, to Merchants' Insurance Company..... 8,925
Riverside-av., s. e. corner of 82d-st., 100.3½x irregular; also, Riverside-av., n. e. corner of 83d-st., 155.23x irregular; also, Riverside-av., n. e. corner of 84th-st., 60.10x irregular to 85th-st., also, Riverside-av., e. s., 107.6 ft. n. of 116th-st., 17.8x135.5; also, 12th-av. s. w. corner of 116th-st., 500x139.3 to Hudson River; Patrick Callaghan to Henry A. Hoffall..... 500
Goerck-st., s. s., 156 ft. n. of Delancey-st., 25x 99.1½; J. D. Lewis, Referee, to Merchants' Insurance Company..... 8,398

LEASES RECORDED.

Avenue A, No. 75, part of, 3 years; Frederick Groenert to Solomon Berliner..... $1,200

MORTGAGES RECORDED.

Blunt, Orison, and wife to William J. Syms; Nos. 52 Leonard-st. and 154 and 156 Chatham-st., 1 year..... $15,000
Boyd, Elizabeth, and husband to Mutual Life Insurance Company; Nos. 34 West 50th-st. and 39 West 55th-st., 17 months..... 45,000
Brainerd, Erastus, and wife to Benjamin Parker; n. s. 130th-st., e. of 5th-av., demand..... 9,000
Drummond, Sarah W., and husband to Mary M. F. Pinto; No. 436 West 22d-st., 3 years..... 9,000
Gilsey, Julius, and wife to Samuel S. Constant; n. s. 81st-st., w. of 1st-av., 3 months..... 4,500
Jost, Edward H. M., to George H. Peck; n. s. 132d-st., w. of 7th-av., 5 months..... 6,150
Just, Edward H. M., to Herman T. Livingston; Same property, installments..... 2,050
Kennedy, John, to Lawrence B. Lynch; n. s. 113th-st., w. of 1st-av., 3 years..... 1,000
Myers, R. W., and wife, to the Manufacturers' and Builders' Fire Insurance Company; n. s. 61st-st., w. of 1st-av., installments..... 15,000

ASSIGNMENTS OF MORTGAGES.

Gunning, Lucena, to William T. Graff..... $1,200
Ziegler, Christian, to Herman Sek..... 3,050
Ziegler, Christian, to Margaret Remig..... 3,000

CITY REAL ESTATE.

PACIFIC HOTEL AND FURNITURE FOR SALE at a bargain. By order of the Executors, to close the estate of the late John Patten, comprising Nos. 170, 172, and 174 (about 80 feet front on) Greenwich-st., this City. Fully and completely furnished. Now is and has been for many years in successful operation; well and favorably known as a $2-per day business hotel. For further information inquire on the premises.
HOMER NORMAN, No. 2 Pine-st., or E. H. LUDLOW & CO., No. 3 Pine-st.

FOR SALE—AN ASSORTMENT OF HOUSES, gold cheap, from $1,500 to $15,000. Situate on 82d, 81st, 80th, and 79th sts., and beautiful corners, 78th and 80th sts. and 1st-av.; desirable as an investment. Call and see them. Office, corner 77th-st. and 1st-av.

FOR SALE—ON WEST 57TH-ST., NEAR 6TH-av., an elegant four-story brown-stone house; perfect finish and all modern improvements. Built expressly for the owner. Apply at No. 160 Fulton-st., Room 10.

BULKHEAD WATER-FRONTS, NEAR CITY, for chemical works, factories, refineries, &c.; also, blocks for dwellings; for sale very low, on easy terms. R. A. YOUNG, Engineer, &c., No. 20 Exchange-place.

NO. 210 EAST 16TH-ST., NEAR STUYVESANT PARK.—Well located, fine, medium-size dwelling; bargain. Permits from V. K. STEVENSON, Jr., offices, 4 Pine, 33 East 17th-st., and 661 5th-av.

HARLEM—RAPID TRANSIT.

Houses, stores, and floors, to let and for sale.
PORTER & CO., No. 173 East 125th-st.

REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION.

BERNARD SMYTH, AUCTIONEER, NO. 5 Pine-st., will sell on TUESDAY, Feb. 11, 1879, at 12 o'clock, at Exchange Sales-room, No. 111 Broadway, by order of the Supreme Court, in partition, under the direction of Henry E. Klugh, Esq., Referee, the five-story brick warehouses, Nos. 19 and 21 Bridge. No. 4 Stone, and No. 272 Water-sts.; and the five-story brick house, No. 129 East 10th-st.
Messrs. COUDERT BROTHERS, Plaintiff's Attorneys, Nos. 68 and 70 William-st.

CITY HOUSES TO LET.

TO LET OR LEASE.

THE FOUR LOTS, with the BUILDINGS THEREON, situated at the north-east corner of 41st-st. and Park-av., constituting the southerly portion of the

GRAND UNION HOTEL.

Apply to HORACE S. ELY,
No. 22 Pine-st., New-York.

"THE WINCHESTER," BROADWAY, ABOVE 31ST-ST.—Newly and hand omely-furnished flat, containing seven rooms on the second floor; every convenience for housekeeping; moderate rent.

STORES, &C., TO LET.

OFFICES TO LET
IN THE
TIMES BUILDING.
APPLY TO
GEORGE JONES,
TIMES OFFICE.

TO LET—THE FOUR SIX (6) STORY BUILDINGS corner Canal and Mulberry sts., fronting on Canal-st., Nos. 206 and 212; suitable for stores or manufactory; will be let separately if desired; well lighted, high ground, and dry basement. Apply to JOHN H. MONTRATH, No. 151 Centre-st.

HOTEL ROYAL TO LEASE.—NOW FULL OF first-class guests; grand business opportunity for one prepared to act promptly. Address
LANGLEY,
No. 740 6th-av.

COUNTRY REAL ESTATE.

NEW HOUSES AT LAUREL HILL, LONG ISLAND.—Estates for mortgages, $1,250 and $1,500; about half actual cost.
R. A. YOUNG,
No. 20 Exchange-place.

HOUSES & ROOMS WANTED.

WANTED—FOR THREE MONTHS, A COMFORTably furnished house, (three or four stories,) in a respectable neighborhood in this City, by a responsible party. Address ADAMS, Box No. 175 Times Office.

SHIPPING.

WHITE STAR LINE.

UNITED STATES AND ROYAL MAIL STEAMERS FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.

NOTICE.—The steamers of this line take the Lane Routes recommended by Lieut. Maury, U. S. N., on both the outward and the homeward passages.
BRITANNIC, Capt. Perry.....Saturday, Feb. 1, noon.
REPUBLIC, Capt. Inman.....Thursday, Feb. 6, 3 P. M.
GERMANIC, Capt. Kennedy.....Sat., Feb. 15, 12:30 P. M.

From White Star Dock, Pier No. 52 North River.

These steamers are uniform in size and unsurpassed in appointments. The saloons, state-rooms, smoking, and bath rooms are amidships, where the noise and motion are least felt, affording a degree of comfort hitherto unattainable at sea.

Rates—Saloon, $80, $85, and $100, gold; return tickets on favorable terms; steerage, $30.

These steamers carry neither cattle, sheep, nor pigs.

For inspection of plans and other information, apply at the company's office, No. 37 Broadway, New-York, or No. 140 Walnut-st., Phila.
B. J. CORTIS, Agent.

CUNARD LINE.

NOTICE.

With the view of diminishing the chances of collision, the steamers of this line take a specified course for all seasons of the year.

On the outward passage from Queenstown to New-York or Boston, crossing the meridian of 50 at 43 latitude, or nothing to the north of 42.

On the homeward passage, crossing the meridian of 50 at 42, or nothing to the north of 43.

FROM NEW-YORK FOR LIVERPOOL OR QUEENSTOWN.
PARTHIA.....WED., Jan. 29 | ABYSSINIA, WED., Feb. 12
SCYTHIA.....WED., Feb. 5 | BATAVIA...WED., Feb. 19

Cabin passage and return tickets on favorable terms, including a special low rate for the Fall and Winter months.

Steerage tickets to and from all parts of Europe at very low rates. Freight and passage apply to No. 4 Bowling Green.
CHAS. G. FRANCKLYN, Agent.

PASSENGERS PER STEAM-SHIP PARTHIA embark from the Cunard Wharf, foot of Grand-st., Jersey City, at 9 A. M., on Jan. 29, 1879.
CHAS. G. FRANCKLYN,
No. 4 Bowling Green, New-York.

GUION LINE.

UNITED STATES MAIL STEAMERS.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.
Leaving Pier 38, N. R., foot of Canal-st.

WISCONSIN.....TUESDAY, Feb. 4, 3 P. M.
WYOMING.....TUESDAY, Feb. 18, 3 P. M.
NEVADA.....TUESDAY, Feb. 25, 7:30 A. M.
MONTANA.....TUESDAY, March 4, 2 P. M.
WISCONSIN.....TUESDAY, March 11, 7 A. M.

☞ These steamers carry neither cattle nor sheep, but have separate compartments, and are furnished with every requisite to make the passage across the Atlantic both safe and agreeable, having bath-room, smoking-room, drawing-room, piano, and library; also, experienced surgeon, stewardess, and caterer on each steamer. The state-rooms are all on deck, thus insuring those greatest of all luxuries at sea, perfect ventilation and light.

CABIN PASSAGE, (according to state-room,) $55, $65, and $75. INTERMEDIATE, $40. STEERAGE, $26.
OFFICES, NO. 29 BROADWAY.
WILLIAMS & GUION.

STATE LINE,

TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, DUBLIN, BELFAST, AND LONDONDERRY.

From Pier No. 42 N. R., foot of Canal-st., as follows:
STATE OF INDIANA.....Thursday, Jan. 30
STATE OF VIRGINIA.....Thursday, Feb. 6

First Cabin, $55 to $70, according to accommodations; excursion tickets, $100 to $120. Second Cabin, $40; excursion tickets, $75. Steerage at lowest rates.

AUSTIN, BALDWIN & CO., Agents,
No. 72 Broadway, New-York.

STEERAGE tickets at No. 45 Broadway, and at the company's pier, foot of Canal-st., North River.

ANCHOR LINE U. S. MAIL STEAMERS, NEW-YORK AND GLASGOW.

From Pier No. 20, North River, New-York.
Ethiopia.....Feb. 1, noon. | Bolivia.....Feb. 15, noon.
Anchoria.....Feb. 8, 5 A. M. | Circassia.....Feb. 22, 6 A. M.
Cabins, $60 to $80. Excursion tickets at reduced rates. Second Cabin, $40. Steerage, $28.

NEW-YORK TO LONDON DIRECT.

From Pier No. 46 North River, foot of Rivington-st.
California.....Feb. 1, noon. | Australia.....Feb. 8, 6 A. M.
Cabins, $55 and $65. Excursion tickets at reduced rates.
HENDERSON BROTHERS, Agents, 7 Bowling Green.

NORTH GERMAN LLOYD.

STEAM-SHIP LINE BETWEEN NEW-YORK, SOUTHAMPTON, AND BREMEN.

Company's pier foot of 24-st., Hoboken.
WESER.....Sat. Feb. 1 | DONAU.....Sat. Feb. 15
MOSEL.....Sat. Feb. 8 | ODER.....Sat. Feb. 22

RATES OF PASSAGE FROM NEW-YORK TO SOUTHAMPTON, HAVRE, OR BREMEN.

First cabin.....$100
Second cabin.....60
Steerage.....30

Return tickets at reduced rates. Prepaid Steerage certificates, $30. STEERAGE TICKETS TO ALL POINTS IN THE SOUTH OF ENGLAND, $30.
OELRICHS & CO., 2 Bowling Green.

INMAN LINE ROYAL MAIL STEAMERS.

FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.
CITY OF MONTREAL.....Thursday, Jan. 30, 11 A. M.
CITY OF BERLIN.....Saturday, Feb. 8, 6:30 A. M.
CITY OF NEW-YORK.....Thursday, Feb. 13, 10:30 A. M.

From Pier No. 37 North River, foot of Charlton-st.
CABIN, $80, $80, and $100, gold. Return tickets on favorable terms. EXCURSION TICKETS, good for six months, at lowest rates. Saloons, state-rooms, smoking and bath rooms amidships. These steamers do not carry cattle, sheep, or pigs.
JOHN G. DALE, Agent,
Nos. 31 and 33 Broadway, N. Y.
Philadelphia: Office, No. 103 South 4th-st.

GENERAL TRANSATLANTIC COMPANY
between New-York and Havre.
Company's Pier, (new,) No. 42 North River, foot of Morton-st.

FRANCE, TRUDELLE.....Wednesday, Feb. 5, 3:30 P. M.
CANADA, FRANGEUL.....Wednesday, Feb. 19, 3:30 P. M.
AMERIQUE, DELIGNY.....Wednesday, March 5, 3 P. M.
Steamers marked thus * do not carry steerage passengers.

Checks drawn on Credit Lyonnais of Paris in amounts to suit.

For freight and passengers apply to
LOUIS DE BEBIAN, Agent, No. 55 Broadway.

IMPERIAL GERMAN MAIL.

Hamburg-American Packet Company's Line for PLYMOUTH, CHERBOURG, and HAMBURG.
GELLERT, Thurs., Jan. 30 | LESSING....Thurs., Feb. 13
CIMBRIA....Thurs., Feb. 6 | WIELAND....Thurs., Feb. 20

Rates of passage to Plymouth, London, Cherbourg, Hamburg, and all points in England: First Cabin, $100; second cabin, $60; Steerage, $30.
KUNHARDT & CO., 2 RICHARD & BOAS.
General Agents, General Passenger Agents,
No. 61 Broad-st., N. Y. No. 61 Broadway, N. Y.

ROTTERDAM LINE.

Steamers leave Jersey City, near Pavonia Ferry.
W. A. SCHOLTEN.....Saturday, Feb. 1
MAAS.....Wednesday, Feb. 12

Cabin, $63-$70. Intermediate, $45-$50. Steerage, $23.
H. CAZAUX, General Agent, No. 27 South William-st.
FUNCH, EDYE & CO., | L. W. MORRIS,
27 So. Wm-st., Freight Agts. | 50 Bway, Gen. Passage Agt.

NATIONAL LINE.—FROM NEW PIER 39 N. R.
LONDON.....Saturday, Feb. 1
FOR LIVERPOOL AND QUEENSTOWN.
Egypt, sat., Feb. 1, 11:30 A. M. | Erin, Feb. 15, 8:30 A. M.
Cabin, $50 to $70, currency; steerage, $26. Drafts from £1 upward issued at very low rates. Company's offices, 69 and 73 Broadway. F. W. J. HURST, Manager.

GREAT SOUTHERN

FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE, FOR CHARLESTON, S. C., FLORIDA PORTS, AND ALL POINTS SOUTH AND SOUTH-WEST.

SAILING FROM PIER NO. 27 NORTH RIVER.
WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS, at 3 P. M.
GULF STREAM.....WEDNESDAY, Jan. 29
CITY OF ATLANTA.....SATURDAY, Feb. 1
SUPERIOR PASSENGER ACCOMMODATIONS.

Insurance to destination, one-half of one per cent. Goods forwarded free of commission. Passenger tickets and bills of lading issued and signed at the office of
JAMES W. QUINTARD & CO., Agents,
Office on the Pier.
Or W. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green.
Or BENTLEY D. HASELL, General Agent,
Great Southern Freight Line, 317 Broadway.

PALMETTO FREIGHT LINE.

VIA STEAM-SHIP TO CHARLESTON, S. C., and the SAVANNAH AND CHARLESTON RAILROAD, to all points in the South and South-west.
Freight rates and insurance at lowest figures.
Bills of lading signed at Pier No. 27 North River.
CHAS. D. OWENS, General Agent
Palmetto Freight Line,
No. 316 Broadway.

SAVANNAH AND FLORIDA.

From Pier No. 43 North River, at 3 P. M.
CITY OF COLUMBUS, Capt. NICKERSON...Wed., Jan. 29
CITY OF SAVANNAH, Capt. MALLORY.....Sat., Feb. 1

Connecting with the Central Railroad of Georgia, Atlantic and Gulf Railroad, Georgia and Florida Steamboat Company, and with the new and elegant iron steamer ST. JOHNS.

GEO. YONGE, Agent.
C. D. OWENS, General Agent A. & G. R. R., No. 315 Broadway. Ocean S. S. Co. and Central R. R. of Ga., No. 409 Broadway.

FLORIDA RAILROAD AND STEAM-SHIP LINE.

ONLY DIRECT LINE TO FLORIDA.
SAILING EVERY SATURDAY.
LOWEST RATES OF FREIGHT AND PASSAGE.
Steamer ASHLAND, SATURDAY, Feb. 1.
And every SATURDAY thereafter.

For Fernandina (entering of bar 12 F. N.), at 3 P.M.
Only line issuing through tickets and bills lading to all points in Florida, and on Chattahoochie, Appalachicola, and Flint Rivers, and Gulf Railroad. Insurance ¼ per cent. Bills lading signed on pier. For further information, through bills lading, and passage rates, apply to
No. 177 West-st., up stairs.

PACIFIC MAIL STEAM-SHIP COMPANY.

Pier foot Canal-st., North River.
For SAN FRANCISCO via ISTHMUS OF PANAMA: Steam-ship AGAMENTICUS.....Friday, Jan. 31, noon
Connecting for South and Central America and Mexico.
From San Francisco for Japan and China:
Steam-ship CHINA.....Wednesday, March 5, noon
From SAN FRANCISCO to HONOLULU, NEW-ZEALAND, and AUSTRALIA:
Steam-ship CITY OF NEW-YORK. Monday, Feb. 17, noon

For freight or general information apply to Company's office, on the pier, foot of Canal-st., North River, and for passage at Company's Ticket Office, No. 257 Broadway.

NEW-YORK AND CUBA MAIL S. S. LINE FOR HAVANA DIRECT.

FROM PIER 17 EAST RIVER AT 3 P. M.
Magnificent accommodation for passengers.
S. S. NIAGARA.....Saturday, Feb. 1
S. S. SARATOGA.....Wednesday, Feb. 12

Tickets issued also for
VERA CRUZ AND WEST INDIA ISLANDS
in connection with French and English R. R. Lines from Havana. JAMES E. WARD & CO., No. 113 Wall-st.

NEW-YORK, HAVANA & MEXICAN MAIL S. S. LINE.
Steamers leave Pier No. 3 North River at 3 P. M.
FOR HAVANA DIRECT AND VERA CRUZ.
Calling at Progreso, Campeche, and Frontera.
CITY OF WASHINGTON, (Havana only,) Thurs., Feb. 6
CITY OF MERIDA.....Saturday, Feb. 8
CITY OF NEW-YORK.....Saturday, Feb. 22

Steamer leaves New-Orleans Jan. 29, Feb. 19 for Vera Cruz via Matamoras, Tampico, Tuxpan, connecting with steamer for Havana, New-York, and above ports.
F. ALEXANDRE & SONS, Nos. 31 and 33 Broadway

NEW-YORK AND HAVANA

DIRECT MAIL LINE.

These first-class steam-ships sail regularly at 3 P. M. from Pier No. 13 North River, at following:
Steamer SANTIAGO DE CUBA.....WED., Jan. 29
Steam-ship .....SATURDAY, Feb. 8

Accommodations unsurpassed. For freight or passage apply to WILLIAM P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green. LAWTON BROS., Agents in Havana.

SHIPPING.

UNITED STATES AND BRAZIL MAIL STEAM-SHIP LINE.

FOR ST. THOMAS, PARA, PERNAMBUCO, BAHIA, AND RIO DE JANEIRO.

Connecting at St. Thomas with German steamers for Porto Rico and Spanish Main. The new first-class iron steam-ship CITY OF PARA, Capt. CARPENTER, will sail for the above ports on Wednesday, Feb. 5, at 3 P. M.

Positively no freight received after 3d. Freight must be paid in advance. Freight and low rates taken for the above ports. Freight received at Dock, Brooklyn. Insurance lower than by any other line. Shippers desiring insurance can effect same under our open policy. For freight engagements or passage, having elegant accommodations, apply to C. H. MALLORY & CO., Agents, Office, Pier No. 20 East River.

RAILROADS.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

GREAT TRUNK LINE
AND UNITED STATES MAIL ROUTE.

On and after Jan. 13, 1879,

Trains leave New-York, via Desbrosses and Cortlandt Streets Ferries, as follows:
Express for Harrisburg, Pittsburg, the West and South, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, 9 A. M., 6 and 8:30 P. M., daily.
For Williamsport, Lock Haven, Corry, and Erie at 8:30 P. M., connecting at Corry for Titusville, Oil Creek Centre, and the Oil Regions. Williamsport and Lock Haven, 9 A. M.
Baltimore, Washington, and the South, "Limited Washington Express" of Pullman Parlor Cars, daily, except Sunday, 10 A. M.; arrive Washington 4:12 P. M. Regular at 4:30 and 8:20 A. M., and 10 P. M.; Sunday 4:30 A. M. and 10 P. M. For Baltimore, 4 P. M., except Sunday.
Express for Philadelphia, 4:30, 7:30, 8:20, 9, (10 limited) 11 A. M., 1, 3:30, 4, 5, 6, 7:30, 8:30, and 10 P. M. Express at 2 second class, 7:10 P. M.
Boats of "Brooklyn Annex" connect with all through trains at Jersey City, affording a speedy and direct transfer for Brooklyn travel.
Trains arrive: From Pittsburg, 6:50, 10:40 A. M., 10:10 P. M., daily: 9:40 A. M., 8:20 P. M., daily, except Monday. From Washington and Baltimore: 6:50 A. M., 2, 8:50, 4:3, 10:10 P. M. Sunday, 6:50 A. M. and 10:10 P. M. From Philadelphia: 4:30, 6:50, 9:40, 10:40, 11:30 A. M., 2, 3:50, 4:50, 6:20, 8:30, and 10:10 P. M. Sunday, 4:30, 6:50, 10:40, 11:30 A. M., 6:20, 10:10 P. M.
Ticket offices, No. 526 and No. 944 Broadway, No. 1 Astor House, and foot of Desbrosses and Cortlandt sts.; No. 4 Court-st., and Brook'yn Annex Depot, foot of Fulton-st., Brooklyn; Nos. 114, 116, and 118 Chestnut-st., Camden Depot, Jersey City. Emigrant Ticket Office, No. 8 Battery-place.
FRANK THOMSON, General Manager. | I. P. FARMER, General Passenger Agent.

RAILROADS.

NEW-YORK CENTRAL AND HUDSON RIVER RAILROAD.

Commencing Dec. 30, 1878, through trains will leave Grand Central Depot:
8:00 A. M., Western and Northern Express. Drawing-room cars to Albany and Rochester, and from Albany to Montreal via Saratoga.
10:30 A. M., Special Chicago and Western Express, with Drawing-room cars to Canandaigua, Rochester, and Buffalo.
11:00 A. M., Express to Albany and Troy, with connections to Utica and Rutland.
4:00 P. M., Montreal Express, with through sleeping car via St. Albans.
6:00 P. M., St. Louis Express daily, with sleeping cars for St. Louis, running through every day in the week; also, sleeping cars for Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Toledo, and Detroit, and for Montreal, excepting Sunday night, via Saratoga.
7:00 P. M., Fast Express for Rochester and Corning via Geneva. Sleeping cars to Geneva and Rochester.
8:30 P. M., Pacific Express, daily, with sleeping cars, for Rochester, Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Cleveland, Toledo, Detroit, and Chicago, and, excepting Saturday night, to Lowville and Watertown.
Tickets for sale at Nos. 252, 261, and 413 Broadway, and at Westcott Express Company's offices, Nos. 3 Park-place, 785 and 942 Broadway, New-York, and 333 Washington-st., Brooklyn.
C. B. MEEKER, General Passenger Agent.

THE ERIE RAILWAY

will hereafter be known by its new name,
THE NEW-YORK, LAKE ERIE AND WESTERN RAILROAD.

Arrangement of Through Trains From Chambers-Street Depot. (Pier 23d-st. see note below.)
9 A. M., daily, except Sundays, Cincinnati and Chicago Day Express. Drawing-room coaches to Buffalo.
6 P. M., daily, Fast Mail, St. Louis Express, arriving at Buffalo 8 A. M., connecting with fast trains to the West and South-west. Pullman's best Drawing-room Sleeping Coaches to Buffalo.
7 P. M., daily, Pacific Express to the West. Sleeping Coaches through to Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Cincinnati, and Chicago without change. Hotel dining coaches to Chicago.
7 P. M., except Sundays, Western Emigrant train.
Accommodation leave Forty-third-Street Ferry at 8:45 A. M., 5:45 and 6:45 P. M.
For local trains see time-table and cards in hotels and depots. JNO. N. ABBOTT, General Passenger Agent.

NEW-YORK, NEW-HAVEN, AND HARTFORD RAILROAD.

Trains leave Harlem River Depot, Forty-second-Street Depot for Boston at 8:05, 11 A. M., 12 M., 1:30, 10, 11:35 P. M. For Boston and Albany R. R.—8:05, 11 A. M., 12 M., 3, 9 P. M. For Connecticut River R. R.—8:05, 11 A. M., 12 M., 3 P. M. For New-York and New-York Air Line R. R.—9:05 A. M., 12 M., 11:35 P. M. For Newport—8:05 A. M., 3 P. M. For Shore Line Division.—8:05 A. M., 1, 5:15, 6:30 P. M. For Harlem and New-York Air Line R. R.—9, 9:05 A. M., 3 P. M. For New-Haven and Northampton R. R.—8:05 A. M., 3 P. M. For Housatonic R. R.—8:05 A. M., 3 P. M. For Danbury and Norwalk R. R.—8:05 A. M., 3, 4:40, 9 P. M. For New-Canaan R. R.—8:05 A. M., 1, 4:40 P. M. For local trains, see time-tables.

LEHIGH VALLEY RAILROAD.

ARRANGEMENT PASSENGER TRAINS, JAN. 1, 1878.

Leave depots, foot of Cortlandt and Desbrosses sts., at 6:30 P. M.—Right Express, daily for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Wilkesbarre, Pittston, Sayre, Elmira, Ithaca, Auburn, Rochester, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, and the West. Elmira and Ithaca coaches attached. Central Eastern Office, corner Church and Cortlandt sts.
CHARLES H. CUMMINGS, Agent.
ROSE BELL SMITH, Superintendent and Engineer.

WICKFORD RAILROAD ROUTE TO NEWPORT, R. I.—Passengers for this line take 8:05 A. M. and 1 P. M. express train from Grand Central Depot, arriving at 4:18 and 8 P. M. at Newport.
THEODORE WARLEN, Superintendent.

STEAM-BOATS.

$1 50 TO BOSTON.
VIA THE OLD, RELIABLE
STONINGTON LINE.
CONNECTING WITH ALL POINTS EAST.
NOT A TRIP MISSED IN TWENTY-SEVEN CONSECUTIVE YEARS.

The elegant steamers STONINGTON and NARRAGANSETT leave Pier No. 36 North River, (foot of Jay-st.) at 4:30 P. M. daily, (except Sundays.)

Special first-class limited ticket, good only on 2:45 A. M. train from Stonington, sold via this line from New-York to Boston for $1 50.

Tickets for sale at all principal ticket offices. Staterooms secured at Office of Western Express Company and at Nos. 363 and 397 Broadway, and at Metropolitan and Fifth-Avenue Hotel Ticket Offices.

FROM DENSE LIES, FOR FREIGHT ONLY.
Steamers ELECTRA and GALATEA leave Pier No. 29 North River, (foot of Warren-st.,) daily, (except Sundays,) at 4 P. M. for Providence direct.
Freight via either line taken at lowest rates.
D. S. BABCOCK, President.
L. W. PITKINS, G. P. Agent.

ONLY $1 50 TO BOSTON,

VIA

Fall River Line.

Tickets limited and good only on day of sale for continuous passage on steamer and train leaving Pall River the following morning at 7 A. M. (or on arrival of Train). Regular tickets at $3, good on any train between Pall River and Boston. Magnificent steamers NEWPORT and PILGRIM, (only line in New-York daily (Sundays excepted) at 4:30 P. M., from PIER NO. 28 North River, foot of Murray-st. Leave Brooklyn, via "Annex" boat, at 4 P. M. Tickets and state-rooms secured at all principal hotels and ticket offices, at the pier, and on steamers. BORDEN & LOVELL, Agents.
GEO. L. CONNOR, General Passenger Agent.

FOR BRIDGEPORT AND ALL POINTS ON Housatonic and Naugatuck Railroad. Fare $1. Steamers leave Catharine-slip daily, (Sundays excepted,) at 11:30 A. M.

FOR NEW-HAVEN, HARTFORD, AND THE NORTH.—Steamers leave Peck-slip for New-Haven at 3 and 11 P. M., connecting with road.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CHOCOLAT—MENIER.
PARIS EXHIBITION, 1878. Awarded the GRAND DIPLOMA OF HONOR.

CHOCOLAT—MENIER.—IN ½-lb. AND ¼-lb. Packets.
For BREAKFAST and SUPPER.

CHOCOLAT—MENIER.—AWARDED TWENTY-three PRIZE MEDALS.
Consumption annually exceeds 17,500,000 lb.

CHOCOLAT—MENIER. PARIS, London, New-York.
Sold Everywhere.
Wholesale, Nos. 49, 51, and 53 Southwark-st., London.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTing: each package is labeled JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœpathic Chemists, No. 48 Threadneedle-st., and No. 170 Piccadilly, London, England.

REWARDS.

$25 REWARD—WILL BE PAID TO ANY person who will put us into communication with Mr. EDOUARD OLIVANTE before Jan. 31.
LORD, DAY & LORD, No. 120 Broadway.

FINANCIAL.

OFFICE OF THE ATLANTIC MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY, NEW-YORK, Jan. 22, 1879.

THE TRUSTEES, IN CONFORMITY TO the charter of the company, submit this following statement of its affairs on the 31st December, 1878:

Premiums received on marine risks from 1st January, 1878, to 31st December, 1878.....	$4,009,309 47
Premiums on policies not marked off 1st January, 1878.....	1,848,607 36
Total amount of marine premiums..	$5,858,006 83
No policies have been issued upon life risks, nor upon fire disconnected with marine risks.
Premiums marked off from 1st January, 1878, to 31st December, 1878.....	$4,186,024 92
Losses paid during the same period.....$2,012,784 45
Returns of premiums and expenses.....$859,960 58
The company has the following assets, viz:
United States and State of New-York stock, City, bank, and other stocks..	$10,086,758 00
Loans secured by stocks and otherwise.	704,200 00
Real estate and claims due the company estimated at.....	613,034 50
Premium notes and bills receivable.....	1,529,239 74
Cash in bank.....	381,210 92
Total amount of assets.....	$13,320,463 16

Six per cent. interest on the outstanding certificates of profits will be paid to the holders thereof, or their legal representatives, on and after Tuesday, the 4th of February next.

The outstanding certificates of the issue of 1875 will be redeemed and paid to the holders thereof, or their legal representatives, on and after Tuesday, the 4th of February next, from which date all interest thereon will cease. The certificates to be produced at the time of payment and canceled.

A dividend of Thirty per cent. is declared on the net earned premiums of the company for the year ending 31st December, 1878, for which certificates will be issued on and after Tuesday, the 6th of May next.

By order of the Board,
J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

TRUSTEES:

J. D. JONES,	HORACE GRAY,
CHARLES DENNIS,	EDMUND W. CORLIES,
W. H. MOORE,	JOHN ELLIOTT,
LEWIS CURTIS,	ALEXANDER V. BLAKE,
CHARLES H. RUSSELL,	ROBT. B. MINTURN,
JAMES LOW,	CHARLES H. MARSHALL,
DAVID LANE,	GEORGE W. LANE,
GORDON W. BURNHAM,	ROBERT L. STUART,
FRANCIS SKIDDY,	JAMES G. De FOREST,
WM. STURGIS,	FREDERICK CHAUNCEY,
ADOLPH LEMOYNE,	CHARLES D. LEVERICH,
JOSIAH O. LOW,	WILLIAM BRYCE,
WILLIAM E. DODGE,	WILLIAM H. FOGG,
ROYAL PHELPS,	PETER V. KING,
THOMAS F. YOUNGS.	THOS. R. CODDINGTON,
C. A. HAND,	HORACE K. THURBER.
JOHN D. HEWLETT,	A. A. RAVEN,
WILLIAM H. WEBB,	WILLIAM M. DEGROOT.
CHARLES P. BURDETT,	BENJAMIN H. FIELD.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice-President.
W. H. H. MOORE, Second Vice-President.
A. A. RAVEN, Third Vice-President.

UNITED STATES

4

THE DAVENPORT INQUIRY.

TAMMANY'S CHARGES AGAINST HIM.

AN INVESTIGATION COMMENCED BY A CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE—THE ARRESTS MADE DURING THE LAST ELECTION—SYNOPSIS OF THE TESTIMONY.

The sub-committee of the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives, who have come to this City to investigate certain charges against United States Commissioner John I. Davenport, began its labors at 10 o'clock yesterday morning in the Post Office Building. The members of the committee are Congressmen Lynde, of Wisconsin, Chairman, Forney of Alabama, and Frye of Maine. The latter is the only Republican representative on the committee. The charges against Mr. Davenport are based upon his action in causing the arrest of persons who attempted to vote at the last election in this City upon naturalization papers of the fraudulent issue of 1868, and are to the effect that in so doing he unnecessarily and unlawfully interfered with the rights of such persons. The petition upon which the Democratic House ordered the investigation is signed by 63 obscure persons who were arrested on election day. When the committee commenced the proceedings yesterday, about 25 persons were present, and not over 40 or 50 were in the room at any time during the day. As soon as Congressman Lynde had called the committee to order, Gen. George W. Wingate said he appeared for the petitioners. Congressman Frye called the committee's attention to the peculiar wording of the resolution under which they were acting, and said it was evident that the committee were there to investigate Mr. Davenport's conduct at the last election as Supervisor of Election. As a United States Commissioner the committee had nothing to do with him. The Judge who appointed Mr. Davenport could at any time remove him for malfeasance, and he proposed that they do not permit the doors to be opened to investigate Mr. Davenport in any other light than that of Supervisor of Election. Chairman Lynde replied that he believed they had the power to investigate the Commissioner's conduct both as a Commissioner and a Supervisor of Election, and Mr. Forney agreed with his fellow-Democrat.

Mr. Edward J. Denning, Superintendent of the retail department of A. T. Stewart & Co.'s establishment, was the first witness. He testified, in answer to Gen. Wingate, that he had been with A. T. Stewart & Co. 19 or 20 years, and came to this country in 1860; he was naturalized in December, 1868, in the "regular way," and had voted right along up to 1878; on Oct. 26 witness went to register, and was asked to show his naturalization papers; the papers were taken from him, and he could not learn the cause; when he went to vote he was arrested before casting his ballot; he was taken before Commissioner Deuel, in the Post Office Building, who desired witness to give bonds, and he demurred; he then went before Commissioner Davenport, who allowed him to leave upon his own recognizance and a promise not to try to vote. "That was the only way I could get released," said Mr. Denning.

Mr. Denning's cross-examination was conducted by Mr. Davenport, to whom the witness stated that he had declared his intention of becoming naturalized two years before he had done so. To Gen. Wingate the witness said that his naturalization papers had always been considered perfectly legal before, and he was very greatly astonished at his arrest.

This closed Mr. Denning's examination, and Gen. Wingate then made a little stump-speech to the effect that Mr. Davenport had issued a great mass of warrants for the holders of 1868 papers, upon the single ground that they were illegal because the clerks of the Supreme and Superior Courts did not enter certain facts in the records of the courts. This action, he claimed, was entirely wrong and illegal. Mr. Davenport "talked back" with considerable earnestness, denying Gen. Wingate's charge and declaring that the warrants were issued upon proper complaints and affidavits in each instance.

Lawyer Henry H. Rice corroborated the testimony of Mr. Denning.

The third witness was Stephen Mosher, one of Mr. Davenport's clerks, who swore to nearly all of the complaints upon which the disagreeable warrants were issued. He was first interrogated as to the number of complaints he had sworn to, when Mr. Davenport interrupted and said that to save time he would admit that Mosher had signed 3,100 complaints before him, by his consent and advice. The witness testified that the warrants were filled out by himself and several other clerks a few days before election; they were sworn to in parcels of various sizes by the witness before the Commissioner, on the Saturday and Monday before election day; of the 3,100 warrants witness verified from 400 to 500 himself, and trusted to the other clerks for the remainder. "Then you made an affidavit to papers which you had not read, did'nt you?" asked the Tammany Hall counsel, and Mr. Mosher said, "Yes." Witness stated that he made the complaints on the ground that there were no records kept of the 1868 naturalization papers issued from the Supreme and Superior Courts, and on his personal knowledge that very many of the applications made that year were fraudulent in their character. The question of complaints made against the holders of 1868 papers, in 1876, and previous to 1878, was next investigated, and after Mr. Mosher had testified that he had signed most of them, he was asked how many there were. Mr. Davenport answered for him that the number was 9,300. "How many persons were arrested on those complaints?" the witness was asked, and Mr. Davenport again answered for him that there were between 200 and 300. About 3,400 persons came to the Commissioner's office and surrendered their papers, with the understanding that for that reason they would not be proceeded against. This closed Mr. Mosher's direct examination, and Mr. Davenport then proceeded with the cross-examination. Witness said he had made out the complaints upon the information he had obtained and the legal questions he had heard raised.

A recess was here taken, and when the committee reassembled at 2 o'clock, Mr. Mosher testified that the first notice to holders of 1868 papers was issued by the District Attorney Aug. 24, 1878, and called upon them to surrender their papers on or before Sept. 21; the notice was afterward renewed; the witness was certain that no instructions, orders, or suggestions were made to Supervisors, Marshals, or anybody to pursue any different course with different persons in the manner of executing warrants; he was equally positive that there were no directions given to keep secret the fact that warrants were to be issued for all who registered upon 1868 naturalization papers; the warrants were sent to the different election districts as fast as they were prepared. He testified at length regarding the manner of examining the Supervisors' books, and said that no complaints were issued until the examination was completed: it was Mr. Davenport's invariable custom to inform each person of the nature of the complaint against him, and no fee was charged by the Commissioner for taking the depositions, &c., in the matter.

The last witness called was United States Commissioner Deuel, who said that he sat in the Circuit Court-room on election day and heard about 200 cases; in each case the person was informed of the charge against him; the prisoners generally waived examination and were permitted to leave on their own recognizance; in all cases the men were cautioned not to attempt to vote. On cross-examination, Mr. Deuel said that he discharged no person without an examination, and remained on the bench until late at night in order to dispose of every case. Gen. Wingate had previously hinted that Mr. Deuel had issued the warrant in the case of Michael Lawless, but Mr. Davenport disposed of that charge by producing the original document and having it identified by the witness. Mr. Deuel was positive that Mr. Davenport did not discriminate against any person whatever. About 1,000 persons applied in the Circuit Court for preliminary papers to get new naturalization papers, and Mr. Davenport directed that no fees should be taken from them during the entire Summer Mr. Davenport and the witness remained at their offices till late in the evening to facilitate the surrender of 1868 papers by persons who could not have their work during the day. Witness never knew of any promise to return the papers; Mr. Davenport's invariable answer to every such request was an emphatic refusal. On the redirect examination Gen. Wingate tried to get figures out of the witness to show that Commissioner Davenport's fees from the issuance of so many complaints and warrants must have amounted to about $19,375 for the year, but Mr. Davenport interrupted to say that in reality he had received less than $3,000. Gen. Wingate then tried to make capital out of the witness' belief that a majority of the arrested men were Democrats, and hence the Commissioner had discriminated against that party. "I judged the majority were Democrats by the number of Democratic lawyers they had in court," said the witness. Counsel dwelt upon the fact that there were more Democrats than Republicans arrested, and Congressman Frye said he was glad to admit that fact. On the recross-examination Mr. Deuel said he remembered a Tammany Hall placard to the effect that "Tammany protects naturalized citizens against the tyranny of Davenport;" he also remembered the publication, after election, that Gen. Wingate had been appointed counsel for Tammany, and also a certain speech by John Kelly, published in full, the day after election. Telegrams from Kelly to various lawyers were found on the court-room tables after Mr. Deuel had disposed of the cases before him election day, and hence he did not think the Democrats were "astonished," as Gen. Wingate intimated, when the men were arrested; he was also led to this belief by the fact that the names of Democrats who were to attend the polls and "protect naturalized citizens" were published in advance, while a committee was appointed by Tammany to sit with Commissioner Davenport while the latter was disposing of cases. Mr. Deuel's examination closed at this point, and, it being then after 4:30 o'clock, the committee adjourned until 10 o'clock this morning. It is expected that the committee will sit about two weeks, which will allow one week for Tammany's prosecution of the Commissioner and one week for the latter's defense.

CHARGED WITH FALSE PRETENSES.

Charles L. Brown, a mechanic, was arraigned before Justice Flammer, in the Jefferson Market Police Court, yesterday, on a charge of false pretenses, preferred against him by Dr. Lawrence Johnston, of No. 323 West 27th-street. The Doctor alleges that Brown owed him a bill of $16 for medical attendance and paid him by a bogus check for $21 80 on the Second National Bank, and received the difference in money. Several other persons appeared against the prisoner and made similar charges against him. Justice Flammer committed him until Saturday next.

THE POLICE BOARD DIFFICULTY.

COMMISSIONER ERHARDT REAFFIRMS THE CHARGES AGAINST HIS ASSOCIATES—THE NEED OF AN INVESTIGATION STATED.

The following communication was sent to the Board of Police yesterday by Commissioner Erhardt:

To the Board of Police:

Certain resolutions, offered by Commissioner Erhardt at the meeting of the Board of Police, Jan. 21, having provoked some comment and denials of their necessity or propriety by his associate, he reaffirms the necessity for them, and alleges the truth of the implications therein contained; and he states that it is his opinion, where abuses and evils are to be attacked for the purpose of remedying them, that the proper place to do so is where they exist—in this case in the board of which he is a member—and, after vainly attempting to accomplish certain reforms quietly, subsequent allusions to them should be unmistakably clear, and that the grapple should be an open one. And he accepts the criticism following the request to investigate the official acts of his associates and his own, rather than drift with an important department to confusion. He alleges, as a matter that cannot be gainsaid, that the Police Department has not been investigated at all since January, 1876, and never, within his recollection, has been examined with any care, and yet this department disburses annually nearly $4,000,000—being since January, 1876, nearly $12,000,000—while indifference and carelessness naturally will creep in and grow in handling so large a sum annually, especially where a department has no final auditor but itself. The condition of the Police force proper has never been looked into by the Executive of the City with a view to determine the justice of promotions, impartial discipline, or consistent enforcement of law, and to assume that investigation is not necessary is to invest the head of the Police Department with a continuous sound judgment and fidelity not elsewhere found. He reiterates that there has been carelessness or inefficiency in performing the duties imposed by law upon the board, and he insists that the cases where that carelessness and extravagance in some cases has been rewarded by promotion, and that the discipline for violations of rules and law has not been such as an honest difference of opinion would justify. He alleges that the Police force have not, in some instances, had the good example of the board to guide and stimulate them, but have been witnesses of the contrary. He insists that it is well known to the Board of Police that certain members of the Police force received instructions from at least one of them that parties to assist or hamper at the election held in November, 1878, and he declares his opinion that such a course was destructive of all discipline and contrary to the express rules of the department. He alleges that during the past six months the interests of those who have been engaged in politics has been more successful with the Board of Police in preventing punishment to offenders than was consistent with their duty, sitting as an executive judicial body to justify. He says such a course has borne evil fruits. He states that the transfers of many members of the force as high as the rank of Captain have been made to gratify personal spite, or advance individual or party interests, and he believes that the non-assignment and refusal to permit the Superintendent of Police to assign two Captains of Police to any duty, save drawing their salary, since Sept. 13, 1878, to the present time is inexcusable.

He alleges that there is a dilatoriness in imposing punishments on offenders, apparently measured by the number and strength of the adherents of the accused, and he believes that the attempt to remit a fine regularly imposed upon a patrolman, and which became a portion of the pension fund; under the law sacred and inviolable, indicates a desire to tamper with that fund which is unpardonable. He insists that it was a grievous wrong to refrain for three months from awarding pensions to petitioners entitled to them under the law—some of them 69 years old—until a new statute became operative, and their rights became obscure and the amount of pensions diminished. And he states further that the evils and abuses, some of which are above alluded to, are known to exist by all the members of the Police Board just as well as to Commissioner Erhardt, and it is also known to them that the past eight months have witnessed a most rapid demoralization of the force, which still continues; and he concludes by saying, that he is unwilling, by his silence, to seem longer to be responsible for the acts of four men, with the power of one only.

JOEL B. ERHARDT,
Chairman of Committee on Rules and Discipline.

THE TRIAL OF CAPT. BLAIR.

By order of the President of the United States, a court-martial will assemble on Governor's Island on the 3d of February to try Capt. Blair, of the Regular Army, for conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman. The gravamen of the charge is that Capt. Blair, having then a wife living, from whom he had not been legally divorced by the laws of any country, had married the widow of Gen. Gordon Granger, one of the most prominent officers of the Union Army during the war of the rebellion. The detail for the court-martial is Gen. Ayres, Gen. Richard Arnold, and Capt. Dewees, U. S. A. The counsel who will act upon the part of the Government is Judge Advocate Lieber, and it is known that Gen. M. T. McMahon has been engaged to defend the accused, and that yesterday afternoon he visited Governor's Island and had a protracted consultation with his client. There are indications that the trial will be one of the most protracted and in a certain sense one of the most interesting in the annals of the Army.

THE "PALMA" TO GO TO BOSTON.

The Executive Committee of the National Rifle Association held a special meeting yesterday afternoon, Judge N. P. Stanton in the chair. The publication of the annual report was awarded to Mr. A. H. Weston, the Assistant Secretary. On motion of Gen. Shaler, it was decided to grant the requests of the Amateur and Washington Grey Rifle Clubs to include synopses of their leading matches in the annual report of the National Rifle Association, providing they do not exceed the amount of space which two full reports of matches would cover, as provided in the by-laws of the association. A letter was received from Capt. W. H. Jackson, of the American Rifle Team of 1878, requesting that the "Palma," or Centennial trophy, be shipped to Boston for exhibition for one month. On motion of Mr. G. S. Schuyler, Jr., the request was granted for a period not exceeding three months, on receiving proper assurances from Capt. Jackson that the trophy would be safely cared for. The Secretary was directed to preserve 84 copies of the annual report of the association of each of the years since its organization, as Gen. Shaler stated that they would undoubtedly become valuable in future years. The meeting then adjourned.

SUICIDE AT THE PASSAIC FALLS.

The body of a dead man, with the face horribly contused, was found yesterday morning in the Valley of the Rocks, at the Passaic Falls, near Paterson, N. J. It was soon identified as that of Henry Gerlach, a German shoemaker, aged 61, and residing at No. 57 Water-street. It was subsequently ascertained that he had been a sufferer from very acute neuralgia for a long time; that he was very despondent on Sunday evening, and had purchased a pistol on Monday. This pistol was found, with one chamber discharged, a short distance from where his body lay. The contusions of the face are accounted for by the theory that Gerlach shot himself, and then rolled down the jagged and sharp rocks. Coroner Rutan will hold an inquest.

A DEAF-MUTE REGAINS HIS SPEECH.

Bernard Goldman, who is well known around the Fourth Ward as a beggar, who walks the streets bearing a placard stating that he is deaf and dumb and partially paralyzed, turned up in Judge Gildersleeve's court yesterday as complainant against Margaret McLoughlin, of Water-street, whom he charged with having cheated him out of $2. The old impostor admitted on the witness stand his identity with the alleged deaf-mute, and told the story of the larceny with sufficient clearness to secure the conviction of the prisoner. Judge Gildersleeve sent her to the Penitentiary for one year.

REFUSING TO PAY FOR DRINKS.

At 1 o'clock yesterday three unknown young men entered the lager-beer saloon of Frederick Wittpen, No. 184 Forsyth-street, and engaged in throwing dice for drinks. One of the party lost, and after they had partaken of the beer they refused to pay, and caused a disturbance. Wittpen locked the door of the place, and refused to let the party out until they had paid for the drinks. The ruffians then smashed the windows. One of the assailants picked up a kettle of boiling water and threw the contents over Wittpen, scalding him severely on the head and face. They then fled from the place and escaped.

INDICTED FOR LIBEL.

The Grand Jury has found an indictment for libel against Richard R. Fox, proprietor of the National Police Gazette, for publishing an illustration and describing a scene at the death-bed of Ebenezer T. Smith, a Boston millionaire. In the General Sessions Court, yesterday, Fox was arraigned and pleaded not guilty. He was held for trial in $1,000 bail, William H. Reagan, of No. 5 Beekman-street, becoming his bondsman.

DEATH OF A CENTENARIAN.

The death of Ann Scully, a widow, aged 102 years, was reported at the Bureau of Vital Statistics yesterday as having occurred at the Home for the Aged, No. 179 East Seventieth-street. The deceased was a native of Leitrim, Ireland, and had been 33 years in this country. Death resulted from senile asthenia.

GOOD AND BAD BILLIARDS.

YESTERDAY'S TOURNAMENT CONTESTS.

GALLAGHER DEFEATS HEISER IN THE POOREST GAME THUS FAR PLAYED—SCHAEFER PLAYS SOME REMARKABLE RUNS, BADLY BEATING DALY.

The twelfth and thirteenth games of the Brunswick & Balke championship tournament were played yesterday in Cooper Institute, and furnished a striking contrast to each other, the afternoon contest between Randolph Heiser and Thomas J. Gallagher being, as a whole, as devoid of really good play and life as the evening meeting between Maurice Daly and Jacob Schaefer was replete with brilliancy and excitement. An incident that occurred in the latter game, however,—the prompting of Schaefer to claim a "foul"—suggests the propriety of keeping the players' platform clear of all individuals not directly connected with the playing of the games. After waiting a very long time for Gallagher to put in an appearance, which he did half an hour later than the time fixed for the afternoon game, the Boston lad, Heiser, won the lead, selected the white ball, and quickly retired with a "goose-egg." The balls seemed to be asleep in the opening stages of the contest, however, and were apparently ugly at being awakened, for they refused to roll well for either player. In the fifth inning, however, Gallagher got them thoroughly awake and played them carefully for 37 points, when they again went to sleep, to awaken five innings later to count 33 points for Gallagher, and to run around in rattling style for the Boston lad, who scored 34 points. In his thirteenth inning the lad gathered them on the right rail and played them very prettily toward the top rail, "nursing" delicately and skillfully. They rolled along, chiming gleefully as they went, turning the corner in fine style, but "breaking" immediately after caroming 76 times. The lad then began some very neat, and, at times, brilliant, open table shots, which were frequently applauded, and before he retired scored 107 caroms. In the next inning he brought his score up to 201, 98 ahead of Gallagher's, while in the succeeding inning he opened a small run of 11, with a very bold "twice-around-the-table" shot, which elicited loud applause. Gallagher seemed to have entirely lost control of the ivories meantime, while the Boston lad for a time went speeding toward the home stretch like a frisky colt, stopping to play by the wayside for awhile, and then dashing away with flying hoofs. He essayed a difficult "twice-across-the-table" carom later on, but his ball jumped from the quick cushion, and sprang like a meteor into the air, described a parabolic curve, fell upon the cushion, and bounded once more into the air, and then dropped back upon the table, leaving the ivories "dead safe" on his adversary, who was having very hard luck, indeed. In a subsequent inning, Gallagher went to the table with a very determined brow, determined to drive the balls into submission, if possible. He succeeded, and counted 69 fine caroms, which made his score 241. Heiser then started in for "nurse" the ivories on the rail, but was muscled in the outset of what might have been a pretty run by a claim of "foul," which was allowed by the referee, amid considerable excitement among the spectators, who began to "hiss" among the decision was correct. Heiser complained, fancying that he had been done an injustice, and played wildly thereafter, although he had the sympathies of the audience with him. Gallagher not being able to play meantime, the game dragged with a snail-like slowness, and gave ominous signs of becoming the longest on record, in respect to time consumed in making points. Heiser had long since lost his colt-like friskiness, and was lingering slothfully on his journey, while Gallagher woke up, and did some slow but effective work. This Heiser nullified with a spurt of 11 caroms, which brought up his previous poor work, but Gallagher gathered the ivories on the rail, and laboriously "nursed" them for 135, which run, to the great relief of the somnolent spectators, brought their agony to an end, and closed one of the most games of the tournament. Appended is the score:

Gallagher—3, 2, 0, 1, 3, 0, 6, 0, 14, 33, 7, 2, 1, 7, 4, 0, 1, 0, 4, 4, 9, 0, 0, 4, 1, 5, 0, 69, 11, 10, 9, 5, 0, 1, 3, 1, 9, 0, 21, 0, 0, 13, 0, 4, 45, 55, 37, 2, 2, 8, 135—500.

Heiser—0, 2, 7, 7, 1, 2, 4, 0, 0, 0, 34, 6, 107, 0, 31, 0, 11, 0, 9, 2, 1, 0, 2, 0, 11, 0, 2, 2, 16, 1, 0, 8, 0, 3, 5, 0, 1, 14, 2, 6, 6, 1, 0, 7, 0, 11, 2—258—448.

Winner's average—11 17-53; loser's, 8 20-53.

Best runs—Gallagher, 135, 69; Heiser's, 107, 83.

Umpires—Mr. Marshall for Heiser, Mr. Murphy for Gallagher.

Referee—Michael Geary; marker, G. H. Ellis.

Time of game—2 hours 37 minutes.

Schaefer came up in his shirt-sleeves and armed with sand-paper, to meet Daly in the evening contest, and after both had chalked their cues, Schaefer won the lead, but failed to score from the "string." Daly made 13 points, when Schaefer began some dashing shots on the open table, but slipped up on a cushion "massé" after scoring 9. To this Daly responded with 15, and on a subsequent inning a friend of Schaefer claimed a "foul," and for the first time in his career Schaefer was known to appeal to decide a claim not put in by an official umpire, a fact which naturally nettled Daly, who very properly told Schaefer's friend to "mind his own business." Schaefer made 43 caroms in his sixth inning, and, gathering the balls on the rail in his succeeding inning, began to "nurse" them deliberately and with astonishing rapidity. He drove the balls gently along the rail, and then played them back toward the left rail, counting 72, before he slipped up on another "massé." Schaefer, however, seemed assured of victory from the start, and played difficult shots with the greatest rapidity, boldness, and brilliancy, while Daly, although he made many fine shots with easy grace, seemed unable to bring the ivories into position. Schaefer opened his twelfth inning with a very brilliant open-table play, and, gathering the balls, began a long series of "kiss caroms," getting them into position on the right rail, where they began to ring out merrily, carom after carom, as the player's pearl-mounted cue tapped them repeatedly, from all sorts of angles, but with unerring accuracy and judgment. One hundred was rung out, but still the tapping and the ringing continued, until on a difficult "double cushion" long carom, the chimes failed to sound, and the Western expert retired with a run of 140 to his credit, making his score 289 to 59. Daly retired with 9, and again Schaefer's boldly executed "open-table" position brought the balls quickly to the bottom rail, along which he rolled them skillfully, turned the right corner "crotch," and drove them up along the right rail, while they chimed away with clock-work regularity, counting out carom at each stroke of the cue. Once more 100 was rung out, and turning the corner prettily, the ivories continued their quick journey across to the left rail, down which they rolled ever obedient to the guidance of the finely-manipulated cue. Tap, tap, tap, sounded the cue, and click, click, click rang the balls, until, after chiming 189, they scattered, but only to be brought back to where masterly position" stroked, and forced to resume their interrupted journey, until they had rung out 311, and brought to a close another most brilliant game. Schaefer then dropped his cue, shook hands with Daly, and left the table to handle the cues, but detecting his motives, the spectators frantically yelled, "Go on! Go on!" wishing to see more of his scientific play. Schaefer hesitated some moments, but as the cries of the spectators continued he yielded, and kept up the scientific "clock-work" caroms. He played altogether 448 points, and then purposely essayed an almost impossible long "cushion massé," which he failed to count. The spectators hammered with their canes, stamped with their feet, flourished their handkerchiefs, and sprang like a meteor into the air, described a parabolic curve, fell upon the cushion, and bounded once more into the air, and then dropped back upon the table, leaving the ivories "dead safe" on his adversary, who was having very hard luck, indeed. In a subsequent inning, Gallagher went to the table with a very determined brow, determined to drive the balls into submission, if possible. He succeeded, and counted 69 fine caroms, which made his score 241. Heiser then started in for "nurse" the ivories on the rail, but was muscled in the outset of what might have been a pretty run by a claim of "foul," which was allowed by the referee, amid considerable excitement among the spectators, who began to "hiss" among the decision was correct. Heiser complained, fancying that he had been done an injustice, and played wildly thereafter, although he had the sympathies of the audience with him. Gallagher not being able to play meantime, the game dragged with a snail-like slowness, and gave ominous signs of becoming the longest on record, in respect to time consumed in making points. Heiser had long since lost his colt-like friskiness, and was lingering slothfully on his journey, while Gallagher woke up, and did some slow but effective work. This Heiser nullified with a spurt of 11 caroms, which brought up his previous poor work, but Gallagher gathered the ivories on the rail, and laboriously "nursed" them for 135, which run, to the great relief of the somnolent spectators, brought their agony to an end, and closed one of the most games of the tournament. Appended is the score:

Gallagher—3, 2, 0, 1, 3, 0, 6, 0, 14, 33, 7, 2, 1, 7, 4, 0, 1, 0, 4, 4, 9, 0, 0, 4, 1, 5, 0, 69, 11, 10, 9, 5, 0, 1, 3, 1, 9, 0, 21, 0, 0, 13, 0, 4, 45, 55, 37, 2, 2, 8, 135—500.

Heiser—0, 2, 7, 7, 1, 2, 4, 0, 0, 0, 34, 6, 107, 0, 31, 0, 11, 0, 9, 2, 1, 0, 2, 0, 11, 0, 2, 2, 16, 1, 0, 8, 0, 3, 5, 0, 1, 14, 2, 6, 6, 1, 0, 7, 0, 11, 2—258—448.

Winner's average—11 17-53; loser's, 8 20-53.

Best runs—Gallagher, 135, 69; Heiser's, 107, 83.

Umpires—Mr. Marshall for Heiser, Mr. Murphy for Gallagher.

Referee—Michael Geary; marker, G. H. Ellis.

Time of game—2 hours 37 minutes.

Schaefer came up in his shirt-sleeves and armed with sand-paper, to meet Daly in the evening contest, and after both had chalked their cues, Schaefer won the lead, but failed to score from the "string." Daly made 13 points, when Schaefer began some dashing shots on the open table, but slipped up on a cushion "massé" after scoring 9. To this Daly responded with 15, and on a subsequent inning a friend of Schaefer claimed a "foul," and for the first time in his career Schaefer was known to appeal to decide a claim not put in by an official umpire, a fact which naturally nettled Daly, who very properly told Schaefer's friend to "mind his own business." Schaefer made 43 caroms in his sixth inning, and, gathering the balls on the rail in his succeeding inning, began to "nurse" them deliberately and with astonishing rapidity. He drove the balls gently along the rail, and then played them back toward the left rail, counting 72, before he slipped up on another "massé." Schaefer, however, seemed assured of victory from the start, and played difficult shots with the greatest rapidity, boldness, and brilliancy, while Daly, although he made many fine shots with easy grace, seemed unable to bring the ivories into position. Schaefer opened his twelfth inning with a very brilliant open-table play, and, gathering the balls, began a long series of "kiss caroms," getting them into position on the right rail, where they began to ring out merrily, carom after carom, as the player's pearl-mounted cue tapped them repeatedly, from all sorts of angles, but with unerring accuracy and judgment. One hundred was rung out, but still the tapping and the ringing continued, until on a difficult "double cushion" long carom, the chimes failed to sound, and the Western expert retired with a run of 140 to his credit, making his score 289 to 59. Daly retired with 9, and again Schaefer's boldly executed "open-table" position brought the balls quickly to the bottom rail, along which he rolled them skillfully, turned the right corner "crotch," and drove them up along the right rail, while they chimed away with clock-work regularity, counting out carom at each stroke of the cue. Once more 100 was rung out, and turning the corner prettily, the ivories continued their quick journey across to the left rail, down which they rolled ever obedient to the guidance of the finely-manipulated cue. Tap, tap, tap, sounded the cue, and click, click, click rang the balls, until, after chiming 189, they scattered, but only to be brought back to where masterly position" stroked, and forced to resume their interrupted journey, until they had rung out 311, and brought to a close another most brilliant game. Schaefer then dropped his cue, shook hands with Daly, and left the table to handle the cues, but detecting his motives, the spectators frantically yelled, "Go on! Go on!" wishing to see more of his scientific play. Schaefer hesitated some moments, but as the cries of the spectators continued he yielded, and kept up the scientific "clock-work" caroms. He played altogether 448 points, and then purposely essayed an almost impossible long "cushion massé," which he failed to count. The spectators hammered with their canes, stamped with their feet, flourished their handkerchiefs, and sprang like a meteor into the air, described a parabolic curve, fell upon the cushion, and bounded once more into the air, and then dropped back upon the table, leaving the ivories "dead safe" on his adversary, who was having very hard luck, indeed. In a subsequent inning, Gallagher went to the table with a very determined brow, determined to drive the balls into submission, if possible. He succeeded, and counted 69 fine caroms, which made his score 241. Heiser then started in for "nurse" the ivories on the rail, but was muscled in the outset of what might have been a pretty run by a claim of "foul," which was allowed by the referee, amid considerable excitement among the spectators, who began to "hiss" among the decision was correct. Heiser complained, fancying that he had been done an injustice, and played wildly thereafter, although he had the sympathies of the audience with him. Gallagher not being able to play meantime, the game dragged with a snail-like slowness, and gave ominous signs of becoming the longest on record, in respect to time consumed in making points. Heiser had long since lost his colt-like friskiness, and was lingering slothfully on his journey, while Gallagher woke up, and did some slow but effective work. This Heiser nullified with a spurt of 11 caroms, which brought up his previous poor work, but Gallagher gathered the ivories on the rail, and laboriously "nursed" them for 135, which run, to the great relief of the somnolent spectators, brought their agony to an end, and closed one of the most games of the tournament. Appended is the score:

Gallagher—3, 2, 0, 1, 3, 0, 6, 0, 14, 33, 7, 2, 1, 7, 4, 0, 1, 0, 4, 4, 9, 0, 0, 4, 1, 5, 0, 69, 11, 10, 9, 5, 0, 1, 3, 1, 9, 0, 21, 0, 0, 13, 0, 4, 45, 55, 37, 2, 2, 8, 135—500.

Heiser—0, 2, 7, 7, 1, 2, 4, 0, 0, 0, 34, 6, 107, 0, 31, 0, 11, 0, 9, 2, 1, 0, 2, 0, 11, 0, 2, 2, 16, 1, 0, 8, 0, 3, 5, 0, 1, 14, 2, 6, 6, 1, 0, 7, 0, 11, 2—258—448.

Winner's average—11 17-53; loser's, 8 20-53.

Best runs—Gallagher, 135, 69; Heiser's, 107, 83.

Umpires—Mr. Marshall for Heiser, Mr. Murphy for Gallagher.

Referee—Michael Geary; marker, G. H. Ellis.

Time of game—2 hours 37 minutes.

MRS. HOOPER IN CUSTODY.

Officer Terpenning, of the Twenty-ninth Precinct, yesterday afternoon arraigned Mrs. Mary Hooper before Justice Flammer, in the Jefferson Market Police Court, on a charge of having, on Friday morning last, made a felonious assault on "Augustus Phillips," better known as "Oofty Goofty," by shooting him in the left side with a pistol. Her face was still much discolored from the blows which had been dealt her by Phillips with the poker after he was shot. Officer Terpenning presented to the court a certificate from the House Surgeon of New-York Hospital, in which "Oofty Goofty" is still confined, stating that his condition is not at present deemed critical or dangerous unless inflammation, which the House Surgeon does not anticipate, should set in; but that he was unable to leave his bed. Thereupon Justice Flammer told Mrs. Hooper that if she had any statement to make in mitigation or denial of the charge against her, she could make it, but she said she had nothing to say. She was committed to a cell in the Jefferson Market Prison to await the result of "Oofty Goofty's" injuries.

MORTALITY DURING THE PAST WEEK.

The following is a synopsis of the weekly report of Dr. John T. Nagle, Deputy Register of Records, to the Board of Health: Six hundred and thirty-nine deaths were reported to have occurred in this City during the week ending Jan. 25. This represents an annual death-rate of 30.44 per 1,000 inhabitants, the population estimated at 1,091,453. The cause of the high mortality during the week is principally due to the fatal prevalence of pulmonary complaints, scarlatina, diphtheria, whooping cough, and nervous disorders. The following 8 diseases were most fatally prevalent: Scarlatina 60; diphtheria, 23; whooping cough, 23; phthisis, 106; bronchitis, 39; pneumonia, 86; nervous diseases, 72; Bright's disease, 28. Of the 60 deaths from scarlatina 37 were in tenement-houses, 21 in other dwellings, and 2 in institutions; of the 23 deaths from diphtheria 18 were in tenement-houses, 4 in other dwellings, and 1 in an institution; of the 23 deaths from whooping cough 18 were in tenement-houses, and 5 in other dwellings. The total number of deaths from these 8 causes was 437, which is 68.39 per cent. of all the deaths reported for the week. Two hundred and fifty of the total weekly number of deaths were reported to be under 5 years of age.

REVISION OF THE BIBLE.

MEETING OF THE MANHATTAN CONGREGATIONAL ASSOCIATION.

The members of the Manhattan Congregational Association met yesterday in the Church of the Disciples, (Rev. Dr. Hepworth's,) for the purpose of transacting the routine business of the association and to listen to addresses from Rev. Philip Schaff, D. D., on the revision of the Bible, and from Prof. John A. Paine, of Tarrytown, on the exploration of Palestine. The following gentlemen were present: Rev. William M. Taylor D. D., Rev. George H. Hepworth, D. D., Rev. Richard S. Storrs, D. D., Rev. John H. Lockwood, D. D., Rev. D. B. Coe, D. D., Rev. A. H. Clapp, D. D., Rev. E. W. Gilman, D. D., Rev. B. N. Martin, D. D., Rev. H. H. McFarland, Rev. W. H. Ward, D. D., Rev. H. M. Saudder, D. D., Rev. B. Falkner, Rev. C. B. Ray, Rev. R. E. Field, Rev. A. F. Schauffler, and Prof. J. A. Paine. A letter was read from Dr. William Ives Budington, announcing that, though convalescent, he was unable to attend the meeting. Dr. Schaff, who is the President of the American Bible Revision Committee, was introduced by Dr. Coe, the presiding officer, and gave an interesting sketch of the progress of the work in this country. He said that in the original translation of the Old Testament there was a monarchical and—if the term might be used—an episcopal bias. "Gheziz," the title of an Arab chief, was frequently rendered by the word duke in Genesis, and "Episcopoi" was made to signify "Bishops" when it was evidently intended to convey the idea of "overseers," in Acts 20. The original translators were undoubtedly affected by the unconscous influence of traditions, however honest may have been their intentions. It was almost a marvel, Dr. Schaff thought, that the Church of England, which had exiled, tortured, and roasted at the stake dissenters from its faith, should have opened a question in which all sects were interested, and invited to their counsels the descendants of John Bunyan and Baxter. It was a marvel that the English race should have invited American advice, but it was done, Dr. Schaff thought, in a spirit of love. The revision will retain the beauties of King James' version in all English-speaking countries, and the result will undoubtedly be an increased interest in the Bible. It will be necessary that the American Bible Society should alter its constitution in order to publish the proposed work, but this will in no way tend to delay its publication.

At the conclusion of Dr. Schaff's address, those present were entertained at luncheon by Rev. Dr. Hepworth, at his home, No. 19 West Forty-seventh-street. The session was resumed at 3 P. M., Prof. John A. Paine speaking upon his reminiscences in the exploration of Eastern and Western Palestine. Prof. Paine gave an interesting sketch of the topography and archæology of Eastern Palestine, advancing the theory that Mount Hermon and Mount Lebanon were identical, and not separate, as the places indicated upon the maps. Prof. Paine was invited to speak upon this subject at the next regular meeting of the association, which will take place in the Church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn, on the first Tuesday in April.

The nine churches represented in the association had 5,139 members on Dec. 31, 1878.

THE DROWNING OF MR. STEVENSON.

DANGERS OF HARLEM BRIDGE—THE COMPLAINT AGAINST THE KEEPER DISMISSED—WHAT THE GRAND JURY SAY.

During the past week the Grand Jury investigated the facts connected with the drowning of Thomas E. Stevenson, of One Hundred and Forty-first-street and Alexander-avenue, who lost his life in the Harlem River. As Mr. Stevenson, who was a buyer in the employ of A. T. Stewart & Co., was proceeding home on Christmas Eve, laden with presents for his little ones, he fell from Harlem Bridge into the water and was drowned, his death shrieks being distinctly heard blocks away. An effort was made to rescue him, but before a boat could be launched he had sunk beneath the water for the last time. It was then discovered that the draw of the bridge had been left open, and the unfortunate man had walked to his death, suspecting no danger. The Coroner held Daniel Daly, Sr., the bridge-keeper, in $1,000 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. The latter body, after an exhaustive inquiry, dismissed the complaint against Daly, and yesterday made the following presentment in relation to the matter:

Whereas, The sad accident of the drowning of Thomas E. Stevenson in the Harlem River, by stepping off the Harlem Bridge while the draw was open, on the night of Dec. 24, is evidence to this Grand Jury that precautions and safeguards are needed on said bridge for the proper protection of human life. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this Grand Jury, the Park Commissioners, or other authorities, should, without delay, employ gate-keepers for both ends of the draw-bridge, for the purpose of opening, shutting, and guarding said gates and passenger-ways; that said gates should be kept locked while the draw is open, and that proper and sufficient life-saving apparatus should be provided on the bridge for immediate use in case of accident.

BROOKLYN UNITARIAN CONFERENCE.

The opening sermon of the Unitarian Conference, last evening, in the Church of Our Saviour, corner of Pierrepont-street and Monroe-place, Brooklyn, was delivered by Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D. D., of Boston, who took for his text the sixth verse of the third chapter of Second Corinthians. The attendance was quite large, and the sermon was listened to with rapt attention by the congregation. The church was handsomely decorated for the occasion. The Conference will continue through the day and evening to-day, beginning with a morning session at 10 o'clock, at which Rev. A. D. Mayo, of Springfield, Mass., will deliver an essay upon "Revivals, True and False," to be followed by addresses by speakers eminent in the Unitarian faith upon the subject of the essay, or upon such

The New-York Times.

VOL. XXVIII.....NO. 8545. NEW-YORK, THURSDAY, JANUARY 30, 1879. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

JAN 1878

WILL MACMAHON RESIGN?

POLITICAL TURMOIL IN FRANCE.

THE PRESIDENT PERSISTS IN REFUSING TO CHANGE THE MILITARY COMMANDANTS—A VOTE OF CONFIDENCE IN THE MINISTRY AND MACMAHON'S RESIGNATION PROBABLE—PROMINENT CANDIDATES FOR THE PRESIDENCY AND THEIR RESPECTIVE CHANCES.

PARIS, Jan. 29.—Everything indicates that President MacMahon will resign. It may be considered that he has already morally done so. The probable course of events is as follows: To-morrow the Government will formally announce the situation to the Chambers, and report the President's refusal to sign the decrees respecting the great military commands. The Senate and Chamber of Deputies will pass votes of confidence in the Ministry, who will thus be obliged to press their demands on MacMahon for changes in the staff of Generals. A joint congress of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies will afterward be summoned to nominate a new President. It is possible that the congress will not meet until Friday. In the interval between MacMahon's resignation and the election of a new President the Council of Ministers will be invested with the executive power in accordance with the Constitution.

Much excitement prevails in Paris, but there has been no disturbance. Some politicians think MacMahon's resignation would be an excellent thing, because the President should not be allowed to perpetuate an ambiguous situation, and a crisis anyhow was inevitable. Others prefer to see MacMahon remain until the expiration of his legal term.

Speculation is rife respecting the President's successor. Dufaure is too old. The Duke d'Aumale and Gen. Chanzy have lost the chances they formerly possessed. The only candidates mentioned are Admiral Pothuan and M. Grévy, with the chances in favor of the latter.

The Republique Française, M. Gambetta's organ, says: "Those who see in the threat of President MacMahon's resignation as a scarecrow are mistaken. France does not desire, but does not fear, a change in the head of the Government. What France will not have is unconstitutional resistance to the will of the nation."

The Dix Neuvieme Siecle says: "M. Dufaure, President of the Council, had an interview with President MacMahon last night, and President MacMahon persisted in his refusal to sign the decree changing the corps commanders."

M. Dufaure this morning, at the Palais d'Elysée, had another conference with President MacMahon, the result of which has not been made public, but it is generally believed that the Marshal persists in his refusal to sign the decree.

After the conference between President MacMahon and M. Dufaure to-day, a Cabinet Council was held at noon and another this afternoon, when the President of the Senate and the President of the Chamber of Deputies were present.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—Reuter's dispatch from Paris says it is possible the explanation to the Chambers to-morrow will take the form of a Presidential Message. M. Grévy's chances for the Presidency have improved. Minister Dufaure having declined to become a candidate.

BERLIN, Jan. 29.—The North German Gazette, in an article on the French crisis, declares that Radicalism is leading France and the Liberals only too speedily to their fate.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—A special dispatch to the Standard, dated Paris, midnight, says: "President MacMahon has informed M. Dufaure that he will communicate his decision to him at Versailles at 1 o'clock Thursday afternoon. It is understood that there will be a Message to both houses. A few persons fear the President may avail himself of his constitutional right to form an extra-Parliamentary Ministry and prorogue the Chambers two months, but such a course is improbable. The correspondent is convinced that the difficulty concerning the military commands is a mere pretext, and that President MacMahon is really determined to resign, because dissatisfied with the impeachment of the De Broglie Cabinet."

The Times' special dispatch from Paris, dated Wednesday evening, says: "M. De Marcere, Minister of the Interior, waited on President MacMahon this evening. The President did not indicate in any way what his final decision with regard to resignation would be. He confined himself to declaring that he would preside at the Cabinet Council on Thursday. All accounts agree that his refusal to sign the decree relative to the military commands was couched in vehement terms. He has not even signed the decrees relative to the changes in the magistracy." The correspondent regards the suggestion that the prorogation of the Chambers by the President an absurdity, and considers it certain that MacMahon will announce his resignation in a message on Thursday. He adds: "The Chambers assembled in Congress on the same evening will accept the resignation by a vote of about 550 to 250, and proclaim M. Grévy President, who, as MacMahon's resignation is not the result of intrigue, will unhesitatingly accept." All the foreign representatives at Paris have informed their respective Governments of the probable resignation of President MacMahon and accession of M. Grévy. Only one Ambassador, a supporter of MacMahon's conduct, Prince Hohenlohe, the German Ambassador, is absent from the city.

Another dispatch to the Times from Paris states that the Police and military authorities have taken some formal precautions. A statement is made, but lacks confirmation, that at a dinner yesterday (Wednesday night) 200 Generals approved Marshal MacMahon's conduct.

The Paris correspondent of the Daily News is assured that Minister Dufaure already holds President MacMahon's resignation. This is probably premature. All other advices contradict it.

CHECKING THE RUSSIAN PLAGUE.

NO NEW CASES IN ASTRAKHAN—THE BODIES OF VICTIMS TO BE BURNED—COUNT MELIKOFF GIVEN EXTENSIVE POWERS FOR THE SUPPRESSION OF THE DISEASE.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 29.—An official report states that there have been no cases of the plague in the Government of Astrakhan since the 26th of January. The precautions against the contagion are now confined to disinfection, and other sanitary measures, by the police.

The Agence Russe reports that a committee of Ministers, at which the leading medical authorities were present, decided that the bodies of the dead throughout the infected districts should be burned; that all the executive authority should be concentrated in the hands of Count Loris Melikoff, who should immediately proceed to Astrakhan as Commissioner-General, invested with the most extensive powers to deal with the emergency, and that the advice and assistance of all well-known European physicians should be readily accepted.

BERLIN, Jan. 29.—The proposals of the committee appointed to discuss measures of precaution against the plague have been adopted by the Federal Council and submitted to the Emperor for his sanction. They will be promulgated immediately.

VIENNA, Jan. 29.—Dr. Bressadecky, the leading physician of Galicia, and several Austrian physicians, will start for Russia on Friday. No definitive measures of precaution will be adopted until their report is received.

NOTES ON EASTERN AFFAIRS.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 29.—The opening of the Bulgarian Assembly of Notables, at Ternova, for the election of a Prince, is now fixed for the 22d of February.

Negotiations continue between Sir Austen Henry Layard, British Ambassador at Constantinople, and the Porte relative to the purchase of the State domains of Cyprus.

France has counseled Greece to moderate her demand relative to the central portion of the frontier not distinctly defined by the Berlin congress.

THE CONSTITUTION SALVAGE CASE.

THE MOTION TO ARREST THE FRIGATE DISMISSED—ARGUMENTS OF THE COUNSEL OF THE CROWN AGAINST THE MOTION.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—In the Admiralty division of the High Court of Justice to-day, the motion to arrest the United States frigate Constitution and her cargo was argued. The counsel for the ship, under instructions from the United States Minister, Mr. Welsh, claimed that the Constitution and her cargo were not within the jurisdiction of the court. Sir Robert Joseph Phillimore dismissed the motion.

Minister Welsh, in his letter of instructions to the solicitors employed on behalf the United States frigate Constitution says: "The Constitution is a national ship, and her cargo was in charge of the United States Government for public purposes. Under the circumstances, I cannot recognize that the High Court of Justice has any jurisdiction." The counsel for the Crown also opposed the motion, and said that the granting of the application might even result in war between Great Britain and the United States. Sir Robert Joseph Phillimore said that in no case had such an application as this been granted, and there was no circumstance in this case to take it out of the ordinary category.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The United States frigate Constitution sails this morning, homeward bound. A Government tug will take her outside the Needles. Her repairs were merely nominal. The officers have been the guests of the naval and military commanders at Portsmouth. The total of the salvage claims, made principally by the owners of the steam-tugs, is £4,200, of which £1,330 have actually been paid. The remuneration which was offered was accepted in every case except in the one, that was adjudicated yesterday.

CURRENT TOPICS ABROAD.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—A dispatch from Lisbon to the Daily News says: "A large quarry in the suburbs of Oporto has caved in, burying several houses. Many persons were killed, and the ruins of the demolished houses took fire."

A reduction to-morrow of the Bank of England's rate of discount, now 4 per cent., is anticipated in some quarters, but not very confidently.

The election in Cambridgeshire to fill the vacancy in the House of Commons caused by the death of Hon. Eliot Constantine Yorke, (Conservative,) has resulted in the return of Mr. E. Hicks, the Conservative candidate, against whom there was no opposition.

The winner of the £5,000 prize in the Paris Exposition lottery is a journeyman currier named Aubriot, the occupant of two rooms on the fifth floor of a house in the Rue Cardinal Lemoine. The winner of the second prize, £4,000, is a tobacco vender, in the Rue St. Honore, and the winner of the fourth prize, £2,000, is a clerk in an insurance office.

A letter from Lord Beaconsfield is published, in which he acknowledges the receipt of an address from the St. George's Union of North America, expressing his thanks for the goodwill of so large and influential a body of Englishmen.

BERLIN, Jan. 29.—The lower house of the Prussian Diet to-day discussed a motion made by Herr Windhorst, an Ultramontane, for restoring the three articles of the Constitution concerning the relations of Church and State, which were annulled by the Ecclesiastical laws. A counter motion was introduced by Prof. Aegidi, that the House should pass to the order of the day, and was adopted, the Ultramontane, Polish, and old Conservative Deputies only opposing it.

PORT SAID, Jan. 29.—The navigation of the Suez Canal, which had been blocked since Sunday by the grounding of a steamer in Bitter Lake, is now unobstructed, the steamer having floated.

TRURO, Jan. 29.—The creditors of the Cornish Bank, which suspended on the 4th inst., have accepted a compromise of 16 shillings on the pound.

BIRMINGHAM, Jan. 29.—Hinks & Son's lamp works have been destroyed by fire. An immense quantity of goods was lost, and 300 workmen have been thrown out of employment.

CAIRO, Jan. 29.—Accounts from Upper Egypt give heart-rending details of the famine there.

SITTING BULL OVER THE BORDER.

LARGE NUMBERS OF CANADIAN INDIANS IN AMERICAN TERRITORY, OSTENSABLY AFTER BUFFALO.

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 29.—Gen. Sheridan is in receipt of a communication from Fort Belknap, Montana, from Indian Agent W. T. Lincoln, dated Jan. 4, confirming the news that Sitting Bull has crossed the border. He says he is informed that there are 450 lodges of Piegans in the Bear Paw Mountains, about 40 miles south-west of that post, and that probably as many more British Blackfeet, Bloods and Piegans are on their way to the Bear Paw Mountains, and were in close proximity at last accounts. The British Crees Indians are also in the mountains. The British Assinaboines have camped with the American Assinaboines. Sitting Bull is on Frenchman's Creek, this side of the line, with his whole camp. The ostensible reason for this influx is the pursuit of buffalo, which they justly claim are not now to be found north of the Missouri River they claim to be friendly, but Agent Lincoln regards their presence in such numbers as a matter of grave import. He is sure of the Grosventres, but not of the Assinaboines, who are influenced for evil by their British namesakes. Col. Brooks, of Fort Shaw, in forwarding this intelligence, promises later news from his scouts in a few days.

A VACANT SENATORSHIP.

MR. CHRISTIANCY'S APPOINTMENT TO THE PERUVIAN MISSION—PROBABILITY THAT EX-SECRETARY CHANDLER WILL BE HIS SUCCESSOR IN THE SENATE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—In addition to the Custom-house cases, the Senate, in executive session, to-day considered and acted upon a number of minor nominations. It was also decided, without a dissenting vote, to confirm Senator Christiancy, of Michigan, to be United States Minister to Peru. This action, and the announcement that Mr. Christiancy will proceed to his new field of labor as soon as possible, again revives the report that Zach. Chandler will, in all probability, be elected to the seat in the Senate made vacant by his appointment and confirmation.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 29.—Political circles here are stirred up over the announcement of the appointment and confirmation of Senator Christiancy to the Peruvian mission. His intimate friends of Lansing have known for some time that physicians thought that his health would be greatly benefited by the change to a tropical climate, but his resignation had not been generally believed to be intended until the reports of the last few days came in such definite shape. It is understood that he has started for Michigan from Washington, and that his resignation as Senator will be soon placed in the Governor's hands. There is no doubt that ex-Secretary Chandler will be elected by the Legislature to the vacancy thus created. That body is strongly Republican in both branches, and Mr. Chandler's friends are very largely in the majority. Gov. Bagley will have some following, but not enough to make any contest probable.

CALIFORNIA FREIGHTS ON WHEAT.

BOSTON, Jan. 29.—At a meeting here, to-day, of ship-owners of New-England now having ships at San Francisco, it was agreed to hold out for 50 shillings freight a ton on wheat to Liverpool.

THE COLLECTORSHIP WAR.

ACTION POSTPONED UNTIL FRIDAY.

SECRETARY SHERMAN TO BE GIVEN MORE TIME TO PREPARE HIS REJOINDER—THE DEBATE DEFERRED ON THE PERSONAL REQUEST OF SENATOR THURMAN.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—On motion of Senator Conkling, the Senate went into executive session early this afternoon, and it was at once noised about the Capitol that the New-York Custom-house cases were to be acted upon. There is no doubt that it was for this purpose that the executive session was called, but it was soon found that it would be impossible to decide the long-pending discussion. Mr. Conkling was evidently prepared to make his fight, but he was prevented from doing so by Stanley Matthews, who stated that the Secretary of the Treasury desired to reply to Collector Arthur's answer, and that he would need further time to do so. Upon this there was considerable discussion as to whether or not the cases had not already been made up, and on the one hand it was held that if Mr. Sherman was allowed to send in another communication, Collector Arthur would be entitled to the same privilege, while on the other it was declared that the Secretary's defense against Gen. Arthur's answer should end the controversy. It was finally agreed, informally, that if the Secretary's communication should contain new matter or fresh charges, that the Collector should be allowed to reply to him, but that if the letter should refer only to the old charges, it should be the last which the Senate would entertain. Even with this understanding it is doubtful if action on the nomination of Acting Collector Merritt could have been postponed, but upon Senator Thurman taking the floor, stating that he and other Senators had not had an opportunity to read the papers in the case, and requesting that the whole discussion be adjourned until he had had an opportunity to do so, it was generally believed that the debate would go over. This proved to be the case. By a majority of two—the vote being a rising one—it was decided to take no further action until Friday at 1 o'clock, when it is hoped a decision may be reached. Pending the discussion, it was suggested that the Committee on Commerce had simply reported adversely upon the nomination of Mr. Merritt, and that it would be well if the reasons for this action were given. The proposition did not seem to meet with much favor, however, and it was dropped without debate.

There is a disposition in certain circles this evening to regard the vote to-day as a test one, and unfavorable to Senator Conkling. This, as those acquainted with the usages of the Senate are fully aware, is very far from being the case. It is the common house to vote under action upon almost all questions at the personal request of even one Senator, and Mr. Thurman's request in the present instance would, doubtless, have been sufficient to send the case over. Indeed, it is only remarkable that, under the circumstances, so many Senators acted with Mr. Conkling. In all events, the vote can in no sense be regarded as a test one.

THE LEGISLATIVE PETITION.

REASONS GIVEN BY MEMBERS OF THE ASSEMBLY FOR SIGNING THE PETITION IN FAVOR OF MERRITT—46 NAMES SECURED.

ALBANY, Jan. 29.—There has been more talk here to-day about the petition on behalf of Merritt, Burt, and Graham, than upon any other subjects. Last night an effort was made to see Mr. Hepburn, who had circulated the petition for signatures, while Gen. George W. Palmer button-holed everybody he could find to urge upon them the importance of giving countenance to the movement. The list of names had been promised to THE TIMES for publication by Mr. Hepburn himself, who said that he was anxious to have it completed before he published it. Gen. Palmer was asked for the list, and as to Mr. Hepburn's whereabouts at 11 o'clock last night, in the Delavan House. He then plainly intimated that he could not find Mr. Hepburn, and that the list would not be ready until to-day. Mr. Hepburn to-day says that he gave Gen. Palmer the petition with the signatures attached early in the evening of Tuesday, and he probably had only just received it from Mr. Hepburn's hands when he affected to know nothing about it. THE TIMES' correspondent to-day made a careful canvass of the Assembly, and found 46 members who admitted that they had signed the petition. This, Mr. Hepburn says, was the full number.

Of the 46 members who signed, Mr. Gentsch, of Erie, did not authorize the use of his name until this morning, when he allowed it to be sent to New-York by telegraph to be attached to the list. It is now understood here that the petition was brought up from New-York on Monday night by Mr. George H. Forster, who was accompanied by Gen. Palmer on his harmonizing mission. Mr. L. Bradford Prince, alluded to in a New-York paper this morning as having been here in the interest of the petition and of Acting Collector Merritt, and the others for whom the petition was written, said to your correspondent last night that he was not here for that purpose at all. The names of the Assemblymen who signed the petition are as follows:

Baker,	Low,	Skinner,
Beckwith,	Mann,	Stegman,
Bradley,	McAllaster,	Stephenson,
Brennan,	McNaught,	Stewart,
Brundage,	McQueen,	Sullivan,
Case.	Munson,	Swift,
Chase,	Noyes,	Talimadge,
Chickering,	Ogden,	Travis,
Doyce,	Palmer,	Van Valkenburgh
Duguid,	Peck,	Wadsworth,
Evans,	Prenderrast.	Warner.
Gentsch,	Reynolds,	W. F. Wheeler,
Halsey,	Sanders,	Willis,
Hepburn,	Sheard,	Youngs.
Ingersoll,	Sherman,
Johnson,	Shuit.

The opinions of the signing members, as far as ascertained, are substantially the same about the petition. A feeling of impatience toward Senator Conkling pervades all of them, and they say that they have seized this opportunity of expressing the opposition to him that was repressed in the caucus for Senator. Mr. Baker, of Monroe, says that he thinks the Assembly had sufficiently gratified Senator Conkling, and that now he ought to cease fighting the Administration over the appointments to the New-York Custom-house. Mr. Bradley, of Westchester, says that while friendly to Senator Conkling, he has no disposition to see the question of appointments carried over to March 4, when the Democrats will have everything their own way, the President alone remaining to oppose them. Mr. Hepburn has never been an admirer of Senator Conkling, and he voted for him in the caucus with bitter self-reproaches. He has always been with the Administration in the matter of the New-York appointments. Mr. Mann, of Rensselaer, says that he, too, is friendly to Conkling, but that he sees no reason why he should persist in protracting this dispute longer. Mr. Skinner, as usual, is frank. He says that it is about time the Republicans of this State ceased to think that the party revolved about Cornell and Arthur, and that Roscoe Conkling turns the wheel by which they are moved. There are many Republicans in the Assembly, he said, who had sacrificed a sense of decent self-respect to vote for Conkling for Senator; having done that they had done enough, and now it was in order for them to assert their manhood. Mr. Travis, of Westchester, said that his reasons for signing the petition was that he had done quite as much for Senator Conkling as that gentleman could expect Assemblymen to do. He had voted for him, as others had, believing there was nothing else to do, as no strong man had been decided upon to oppose him. Now, however, he believed it was time for Conkling to feel satisfied and to cease the strife at Washington over the New-York nominations. Mr. Munson, of Wayne, regretted that he had signed it.

Gen. Palmer left with the petition last night, intending to forward it to Washington from New-York to-day.

The Democratic Senators, for some reason best known to themselves, have seen fit to mix in the quarrel over the Custom-house appointments, and all of them, with Lieut.-Gov. Dornheimer included, have signed a petition requesting the Democratic members of the United States Senate to vote for the confirmation of Merritt, Burt, and Graham. They say it was intended more particularly for Senator Kernan, who has heretofore voted with Conkling on this subject.

CONGRESSIONAL TOPICS.

THE SOUTHERN DEMOCRATS WAITING FOR AN OPPORTUNITY TO REPLY TO GEN. BRAGG'S SPEECH—THE DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEES ARRANGING FOR THE NEXT CAMPAIGN.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The Southern Democrats have not abandoned their intention to reply to the recent speech in the House by Gen. Bragg on war claims. To-day when the Post Office Appropriation bill was called up Mr. Hooker antagonized it with the morning hour business, insisting that that was the regular order. Speaker Randall ruled that Mr. Blount's motion to go into Committee of the Whole to consider an appropriation bill was privileged, but if that motion was voted down by the House, the regular order would be the morning hour. Mr. Hooker, supported by the Republicans, resisted the motion to go into Committee of the Whole, and the yeas and nays were called to decide it, resulting in its adoption by a small majority. The Democrats desire to prevent replies from being made to Bragg, but it is pretty certain that they will be unable to control Hooker and a few other Southern members, who are determined that the matter shall not be thus passed over.

The Democratic Congressional Committee and some members of the Democratic National Executive Committee met this morning to consider the general plan of the coming Fall campaign. It was suggested that the experience of the past was not favorable to the continuation of two independent committees—one composed of Democratic Senators and members, and one composed of others than Congressmen. The two committees, it was claimed, had much the same authority, and yet they worked independently, and were so directed as to waste much of their force by duplication. After some discussion, a sub-committee was appointed, consisting of Senator Barnum and John G. Thompson, of the National Executive Committee, and Senator Wallace and Congressmen Blackburn and Morrison, of the Congressional Committee, to consider and report at a future meeting upon the proposition to organize one Campaign Committee, which should be charged with the management of the next campaign, and also to consider all other matters relating to the conduct of the party organization.

The appointment of Paul Strobach, of Alabama, to be Postmaster of the City of Montgomery, in that State, meets with the hearty approval of all good Republicans here. Mr. Strobach is well known as one of the most earnest and deserving in his party and a thorough executive officer. The Post Office at Montgomery has long been so managed—or it would be better to say mismanaged—as to cause great inconvenience to the public, and it is believed that the proposed change will give general satisfaction to the business men of Montgomery. Col. Henry Pace, for seven years State Treasurer of Kansas, who was to-day confirmed as Indian Agent to the Utes, of Southern Colorado, is another Southern Republican who has met with deserved recognition.

THE SOUTH CAROLINA ELECTIONS.

CONCLUSION OF THE LABORS OF THE TELLER COMMITTEE IN CHARLESTON.

CHARLESTON, Jan. 29.—The Teller committee to-day examined two Republicans from Georgetown County, who testified that the vote at the five precincts where the Republicans had a majority was thrown out on account of alleged informalities, and the county thus given to the Democrats. The remainder of the testimony related to Charleston County.

The Democrats brought forward G. R. Walker to contradict the testimony of R. C. Brown as to the obstruction of voters and other irregularities at Mount Pleasant. S. J. L. Matthews, a white Democrat, testified to the quietness of the election and the strength of the colored Democratic vote in the city. Stephen Hayne, a colored witness, estimated that 2,000 colored men voted the Democratic ticket in the city at the last election; he had been repeatedly threatened and cursed because he was a Democratic. R. Smith, colored, who has been a Democrat since 1872, was positive that over 3,000 colored men in Charleston voted the Democratic ticket at the late election; they no longer feared that Democratic success would impair their rights, and they increased in number daily. The witness had been hooted by colored Republicans for being a Democrat.

On the Republican side, Frank Johnstone, Republican Supervisor, testified that colored voters were challenged and refused the right to vote in Ward 2.

G. H. Dantzman, colored Republican Supervisor, testified to the rejection of colored voters, the use of tissue tickets, and fraudulent additions to the poll-list in Ward 6. A copy of the poll-list was produced, and the witness declared that it contained the names of dead men and others who did not vote at the last election. Mayor Sale, of Charleston, was summoned to appear and bring with him the census of Charleston lately taken and never published, but failed or refused to appear.

The committee then adjourned, to meet in Washington next Monday.

PENNSYLVANIA'S FORMER SOLDIERS.

THE ENCAMPMENT OF THE GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC.

HARRISBURG, Jan. 29.—The Encampment of the Department of Pennsylvania, Grand Army of the Republic, met in this city to-day. About 200 delegates and officers are present, representing a membership of nearly 9,000, distributed among 126 posts. The day was occupied in hearing reports of officers and transacting routine business. From the report of the Assistant Adjutant-General of the Encampment it appears that Pennsylvania leads all other States in membership in the organization, and has more uniformed and equipped members than all the other States combined. Over $10,000 were expended in charity by the order in the State during 1878. This evening an interesting meeting was held in Brandt's Hall, which was largely attended. The meeting was presided over by Adjt.-Gen. Latta in the absence at Washington of Gov. Hoyt, who expected to be present. A number of addresses were made by members of the order, and the pupils of the White Hall Soldiers' Orphan School entertained the audience with songs and addresses. The Encampment will adjourn to-morrow.

THE COMMERCIAL TREATY WITH FRANCE.

BOSTON, Jan. 29.—A well-attended meeting was held at the Board of Trade this afternoon in behalf of the Franco-American treaty of commerce. A report was presented by Mr. Kennard, Chairman of the committee that represented the board at Paris last Summer. Speeches were made by Nathan Appleton, Leon Chotteau, delegate from France; John W. Candler, and others. A resolution was passed appointing a committee of five members of the board to take the whole subject into consideration, and report at the next meeting.

KANSAS TRYING TO ELECT A SENATOR.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 29.—A dispatch from Topeka, Kan., says the following is the result of the first ballot for United States Senator in joint session to-day: Ingalls, 63; Anthony, 26; Goodin, (Democrat,) 22; Mitchell, (Greenback,) 18; Simpson, 17; Phillips, 14; Campbell, 4; Horton, 2; Pomeroy, 2. It requires 85 votes to elect.

SHOT FOR A BRUTAL ASSAULT.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 29.—A negro employed on the farm of J. A. Stokes, near Helena, yesterday attempted to outrage Mrs. Stokes. Her cries brought her husband and brother to the scene, and the fellow fled without accomplishing his purpose. He was pursued and shot and died a few hours afterward in Helena Jail.

JAY GOULD'S DIFFICULTIES.

THE GREAT "FINANCIER" GETTING CRUSHED.

HIS LOSSES SAID TO AMOUNT TO $100,000 A WEEK—HOW HE TRIED TO "BUCK AGAINST THE WHOLE AMERICAN PEOPLE" AND FAILED—THE EFFECT THE RESUMPTION OF GOLD PAYMENTS HAD UPON HIM—STAGGERING UNDER A LOAD OF "UNION PACIFIC" AND "SHORT" ON GENERAL STOCKS—"COMING TO THE FATE THAT ALL SUCH MEN AS HE IS COME TO."

About the beginning of last October Mr. Jay Gould, seeing the near approach of the time when the Government had promised to establish the return of specie payments, began to shape his operations decisively for an assault on the credit of the nation at large, including in his designs the act of the Government itself as well as the faith of the larger and better class of the people who had confidence in and hoped for the realization of the national promise. To effect this he engaged in an effort to "bull" the gold market and to "bear" stocks heavily—being actively engaged in both movements, though, as is well known, the natural result of either movement on any extended scale is to produce the other effect. The 1st day of January, 1879, came, and the Government pledges were so amply redeemed, and by such easy processes, that there was not the slightest disturbance in mercantile affairs. On the contrary, whatever movement was experienced was beneficial, and tended to stimulate present business as well as the expectations of the future. The stock market, likewise, refused to be hammered down, and responded to the tone of commercial and mercantile confidence which had been struck by the ringing of the gold once more in factory and counting-house. Under these pleasing circumstances the general public have become somewhat forgetful of the condition of the man whose energies were directed against the realization of these results, and for some weeks past little or nothing has been heard of Mr. Jay Gould. Not many months ago a mere rumor that he was beating down the market would at times give the market that tendency, so potent had his name become as a bear movement as men ran away when they heard he was coming, so to speak, for his career had been noted from the remorseless way in which he rolled over and crumbled up values. A day's careful inquiry for his whereabouts has revealed the real cause of his silence, and shows, in effect, that the market is in fact, submitting him to a rolling and a crunching process—that he is underneath this time, and the people are doing the crushing business themselves. From the most trustworthy sources, in some instances from the lips of men who have been his business associates and know beyond question his present attitude and strength, it was learned yesterday that Jay Gould is staggering under the weight of about 169,000 shares of Union Pacific, which he is carrying himself, and which no one will buy, and that while stumbling with this weight on him he is reaching in every direction to clutch about 120,000 shares of stocks on the general list, on which he has been short for weeks past. A man whose relations to Gould have been very intimate said yesterday, "Well, Mr. Gould has made a great mistake this time—he has been foolish enough to 'buck' against the whole American people. His story is a long one, and I can only give you the points. He was always a gold 'bull,' and when resumption was announced to take effect in January he believed he saw a chance to make at least one more dash. His mind is so distorted against real values that he dreaded to see a return to the solid basis of gold, for he revels in every kind of commercial disturbance. By a series of manœuvres in the 'street' and through outside agencies he did actually succeed in forcing the price of gold up 1 to 1½ per cent., but it was only temporary. As soon as his game became known he was staggered by New-England first. You know New-England is a loyal portion of our country, and Mr. Gould had obtained a good many loans in that section, Union Pacific having its head-quarters in Boston. Some of his friends there at once sent word to him that if he meant to assault the credit of the Government they would call in their loans, as they could not countenance any act which sought to embarrass the good faith and integrity. He was already weighted downwith his holdings in Union Pacific, and this warning brought him to a stand. Meantime he had sold 'short' on the general list of stocks, and the resumption movement went forward so steadily and surely that he was already very much behind, but his instincts as a 'bear' would not permit him to cover his 'shorts,' and he became more and more involved by his contracts. You know the only thing he ever 'bulled' was gold, if we except his own holdings in Erie and Union Pacific. He has always been seeking to destroy other men's property and interests. He had some friends, and for a time he was able to induce them to hang with him, but it was against their judgment, and they at last broke loose, leaving him virtually alone. His own partner, Mr. Belden, was urged by Gould to go in with him in a heavy 'bear' movement, but he said to him, 'Gould, I can't do it. If I go with you on these "shorts" I shall "copper" them.' He didn't go in, and, as you see, the firm has dissolved, and Mr. Belden and he are no longer even friendly. I am pretty reliably informed when I tell you that Gould's losses for weeks past have averaged $100,000 a week."

Another gentleman, whose record on Wall-street is much older than that of Mr. Gould, said in reply to some questions: "I have it from very good sources that Mr. Gould is short 15,000 shares of Michigan Central and 25,000 shares of Lake Shore, and that he has been largely short of Illinois Central, North-west, common and preferred, and St. Paul, common and preferred, ever since last November. He sold North-west at 41 and 42, and to-day it is up to 63, strong and steady. Lake Shore has gone up on him 6 per cent., and on Michigan Central his risks are enormous, for he sold it down as low as 40, and it would have to go down to 35 to let him out; but to-day it stands on the list at 89. He is a most reckless man, but he is certainly in a very remarkably tight place this time, and is not bucking against any single operator, but against the whole tide of affairs. His people settled with him once or twice on North-west common, and let him have the stock at 1 per cent., but what did he do? Why, he sold right out again on them. Mr. Sage has had to lend him a large amount of money on Union Pacific, and I know that the current impression is that without Sage, he would drop at once—he couldn't get along without him. Oh yes, Sir; Gould has been a great failure for the last four months. He has done everything he could to thwart the Government; he put gold up before the 1st of January, and his course in that respect was so flagrant that if it had been in the old war times he would have been put in Fort Lafayette. He is a man who can't make any money himself, and doesn't want to see anybody else do so. He has been wrong ever since November. His idea was that the Government either could not resume, or that it would experience difficulty in doing so, and he tried to put up the price of gold by bidding it up, twice. To aid this end, he did all he could to circulate damaging stories as to the means of the Government and its gold resources. He took advantage of the Glasgow Bank failure to predict that everything was going to eternal smash; said we couldn't ship a bushel of grain to Great Britain, and that the Bank of England would go next. The fact is, he is the great 'bear' of this country, against the people and the Government itself."

In reply to the question whether the tumble in stocks on Tuesday last was either caused by or served to help Gould out of his embarrassments, the speaker said; "Oh, no; it was not caused by him. He hasn't the strength to put down the market. He may have taken some slight advantage of the fall, but it was too sudden and too brief to be of any real aid to him. Say that he made $100,000 out of it, that would only be a drop in the bucket on his obligations. Look at his 'short' 15,000 shares of Michigan Central! He is 50 per cent. wrong on those alone, and that is a single transaction, and on the whole list he is off from 10 per cent. up to that 50. He has nothing to break the market with but his Union Pacific, and he does not dare to unload that for various reasons, for he has got heavy loans already on some of it, and as no one is dealing in it there is no market for it. Look at the list and you will see that the daily transactions in Union Pacific average only 300 or 400 shares. On the other hand, the market is supported by Mr. Keene, Mr. Vanderbilt, and other heavy holders, backed by the general public, and it is no use for Gould to attempt to handle a combination of that size. No, Sir; he is coming to the fate that all such men as he is come to, and if he was out of the way to-day the tone of business would be even better than it is to-day. His methods are destructive, and it is his only system of operations. Why, only yesterday he circulated in some of the papers reports about the cutting of rates, when there was not the slightest foundation for it. Gould's move against resumption was the most serious mistake of his life. At present he is on his retreat from Moscow, and is using Union Pacific as his 'old Guard.'"

Still another well-known Wall-street man, who has been for years on the "Street," said, "I heard Mr. Belden, Gould's late partner, say in a prominent office yesterday that Gould was short 12,000 shares of Michigan Central, and that if Mr. Vanderbilt was to make him a present of that amount of stock, it wouldn't let him out on his contract—Gould would still be a loser. The fact is that 'Jim Keene' is drawing the coils around Gould with masterly strategy. He does not know what it is to have fresh blood after him, but the young giant of the West has got him at bay this time, and is favored in the struggle, too, by the whole tone of the market. Mr. Vanderbilt is in also against him, not so much as a matter of choice, but in his reckless efforts to 'bear' everything, Gould struck on some of the Vanderbilt shares, and Vanderbilt will never let Gould carry them down, so he may be taken as a passive but wide-awake participant in the movement."

The last gentleman with whom the reporter conversed is known as widely as any man on Wall-street, and has been connected with Gould financially and intimately. He confirmed the general statements made by other persons, and said that he knows what Gould's actual position is, and that he knows it better than any man on the street, excepting Gould himself. He said, "Mr. Belden has been forced out of his copartnership with Gould because he would not co-operate with him in his ruinous enterprises. Only a few weeks ago, but before the rupture between Gould and Belden, Gould asked Belden to go short with him on the market, and particularly on North-west. Belden told Gould frankly and squarely that he would not do it; that it would result in ruin if persisted in, and that if he did go in with him on a 'bear' movement he would buy outside against the short sales. Through this serious difference, and others of a similar character, which Belden believed would be injurious to his own and to his brother's interests, as well as against the natural tendency of business, the firm separated, and, so far as is generally known, Mr. Russell Sage is the only friend that Gould now has, and even on this point there is a story going the rounds of the street that is at least very amusing, if not literally true. For some months past Gould and Sage have lunched together. Sage being Gould's guest at these repasts. If Sage had paid for his own lunches they would have averaged $1 50 a day, but they say that these three or four months' lunches have cost Sage about $1,000,000, because while he has been eating Gould's lunch Gould has frightened him so that he wouldn't buy anything, though the market was rising steadily, and now the boys say that Gould fed Sage with 'bear's' meat. They have also been ringing in the story that Sage has been reading up the story of 'Blue Beard,' because somebody said he was Blue Beard's last wife, and that when he gets the keys of Blue Beard's closet he will find there the heads of all the former wives. This is, of course, an allusion to the fact that Gould has always quarrelled with his closest friends. Charley Osborne was with him for years, and so was S. M. Mills, and finally Belden. But where are they now. One of them is ruined, and the others would have been ruined if they had staid long enough. Fisk once said that Gould's touch was 'cold and clammy,' and it did seem as though there was more in the remark than Fisk meant, although Fisk's fate served to illustrate it. Whatever Gould's hand falls upon seems to wither away, whether railroads, steamships, or telegraphs. To realize this, look at Erie, Pacific Mail, and Atlantic and Pacific (remembering, of course, that he is not yet done with Union Pacific.) One of his earliest business associates was Leupp, who was ruined and ended his life by suicide. Next comes Fisk, murdered while carrying out Gould's schemes. Tweed, his co-Director, died in prison. Judge Barnard, his social friend and legal ally, deposed from the Bench and permanently disbarred. And following up these prominent examples, dozens of instances might be cited of men who had at some time been ready to aid him, and did aid him, but who, as soon as they had accumulated a dollar, were deceived by him that he might sweep them away and swallow up their little earnings. The fact is," said this gentleman, "that chickens come home to roost, and they say that curses do likewise, and I think they are on their way now. When I say it I say what I know. The chances are even any day that Union Pacific even will slip from his grasp in the same way that Erie slipped in 1872, or that he will be obliged to hypothecate so much of it that he will lose control, in order to realize for his 'short' contracts. What he may eventually do, of course, no man can tell, for a man who could voluntarily surrender $7,000,000 to Erie and still have enough money left to dominate Union Pacific, proves he began with nothing, is a man of no ordinary genius and resources of expediency."

A SEQUEL TO THE ARMSTRONG MURDER.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 29.—There are indications that the Armstrong tragedy is about to give cause for an insurance trial which will be no less conspicuous than was the trial of Hunter for murder. In addition to the claim filed in the office of the New-York Mutual Company by Armstrong's relatives for the $10,000 placed by Hunter on Armstrong's life in that company, Philip P. Armstrong, a brother of the deceased man, and the latter's widow have also filed claims at the office of the Provident Insurance Company, of this city, for $10,000 the amount of a policy in that company, and for the sum of $6,000 in the Manhattan, the amount of the policy in that company, and the matter has been placed in the hands of an attorney. The claims against the Mutual and Manhattan gave them to Chairman Potter in the order they were sent. The telegrams, translated, read as follows:

TALLAHASSEE, Dec. 1.

John Wing, Washington:
Florida will go for Hayes.
BRADY.
WASHINGTON.

Gen. Brady, Tallahassee:
Florida in trouble. I speak advisedly. Have no other fears. JAMES N. TYNER.
WASHINGTON.

Gen. Brady, Tallahassee:
Reliable information here says Democrats claim two of Florida Returning Board. Do you believe it?
WING.
TALLAHASSEE, Fla.

John Wing, Washington:
We have no intimation of treachery, except on the part of one of our own number. If we come to grief it is through him—the New-Yorker. We are advised that he recommends contrary to our interest. His many and mysterious interviews arouse suspicion. BRADY.

The Chairman—Who was meant by the New-Yorker? A.—Gen. Barlow, of New-York City.

Several other telegrams were read, but were of no importance, the last one relating the conclusion of the court, and stating that the State had gone for Hayes.

It was developed by the cross-examination that "John Wing" was a fictitious name for Judge Tyner, and that it was arranged previous to the witness' departure that telegrams should be so addressed. The cipher used was also arranged before Gen. Brady left Washington. His cipher, he said, had been destroyed, and he presumed Mr. Tyner had destroyed his copy.

MR. TYNER EXAMINED.

First Assistant Postmaster-General Tyner was then sworn. He had recently been informed by Gen. Brady that the committee were about to examine the cipher telegrams, and he feared, as they—or a portion of them—had been once in his possession, that it would lead to misconstruction and probably mix him [Gen. Brady] up in the affair.

Mr. Tyner then desired to say a word regarding the testimony of the Western Union officers, Messrs. Green, Carey and Grant. The testimony of Mr. Green, to the effect that telegrams passed between himself and John W. Foster concerning the sale of certain offices, and between himself and Z. Chandler, regarding the appointments of Indian Agents had no warrant whatever in their contents. The idea of Mr. Carey that the telegrams in question related to a dirty piece of political engineering was entirely erroneous. He would verify this statement by producing all of the telegrams sent by him bearing upon the subject under investigation. He procured these telegrams after an accidental conversation with President Orton, that gentleman having mentioned one evening at Willard's Hotel that by disclosing the telegraphic correspondence required by the committee many persons might be somewhat embarrassed, adding that if the request to furnish the same had been a little later, the telegrams would, in the regular order of business, have been destroyed, it being customary to destroy them every six months. Mr. Tyner at this interview mentioned nothing as to certain telegrams, and inquired if he could properly withdraw them, as they might be misconstrued and act injuriously to all parties concerned. Mr. Orton informed Mr. Tyner that if he would furnish a memorandum of his telegrams, they would be sent him. This was done, and he subsequently received the telegrams, and was now ready to produce them.

THE FOSTER-TYNER DISPATCHES.

The witness then produced the telegrams, and where they were in cipher gave an explanation of the cipher and an interpretation of the message. The first of the Foster-Tyner dispatches was dated Indianapolis, Sept. 29, and was as follows:

[Personal.]

To James W. Tyner:
Smith case and arrangements are satisfactory. Certain will be necessary in addition to early promised by Mr. McCormick. Wait at Washington for my letter, mailed last night, and then go to New-York at once.
J. W. FOSTER.

The witness explained how these telegrams came to be written and the cipher to be used. Some time during the campaign, he said—probably as early as July or August—he had a conversation with Mr. Zachariah Chandler, the Chairman of the Republican National Committee, with reference to Indiana, the Central Committee of which State had written to him asking the assistance of the National Committee; gentlemen in New-York and elsewhere, witness was informed, had expressed their readiness to assist Indiana if Mr. Foster, who was formerly Chairman of the committee in Indiana, was then Chairman or connected with the committee, as they would have a great deal of confidence in his management. Chandler suggested that Mr. Foster, who was on a furlough from Mexico at the time, should be requested to go to Indiana to assist the local committee with his advice and presence, and subsequently Mr. Foster was asked, and consented to do this, and a telegram dated Binghamton, N. Y., was received by witness from him to that effect; of that telegram witness had no copy; upon the invitation contained in that telegram, witness met him at the Fifth-Avenue Hotel, New-York, in September. Mr. Foster said that in Indiana they would need $7,000 from the National Committee, only to be used in meeting the expenses of speakers, printing bills, &c., and it was proposed to make an effort to secure the services of some active members of the Greenback organization there to induce voters to go back on their old love and vote the Republican ticket; another proposition was for the purchase of the Indianapolis Sentinel, a Democratic newspaper, which was said to be in financial distress and might be purchased cheaply; we went into Gen. McCormick's room, and that gentleman promptly stated that within a short time the committee would be able to furnish the Indiana Republicans with $10,000 toward their campaign expenses. The proposition about purchasing the Sentinel was not then taken up. At Foster's request leaving the room he said: "I might want to telegraph to you, and might it not be well to have some phrase to use between us?" He thereupon sat down and made the phrase which is used in the telegrams. Everything that related to the Greenbackers, aside from the purchase of the Sentinel, was to be known as the Smith arrangement. The term "Smith" applies to no person whatever. The proposal to purchase the Sentinel was to be known as Brown. The word "certain" meant $5,000, and "early" meant $10,000. This was the extent of the cipher. The foregoing telegram meant that active members of the Greenback Party had agreed to assist in arresting the Greenback movement; $5,000 would be necessary to meet their expenses, in addition to the $10,000 promised by McCormick for general campaign purposes on the same date probably there was a telegram from Foster requesting the witness to leave Washington for New-York, and on the 1st of October he received the following dispatch from Indianapolis:

Dispatched you friday to go to New-York at once. Have no answer. It is of utmost importance you should go to-night. Letters and particulars await you there. It is essential to success.
J. W. FOSTER.

To this the following reply was sent:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 1, 1876.

To J. W. Foster, Indianapolis:
Your telegrams all received. Early will positively leave New-York next Tuesday. By that time I hope to complete other arrangement here, as it is half done now.
JAMES. N. TYNER.

This referred to the $10,000 promised by the National Committee, and to the fact that witness hoped to be able to obtain the $5,000, one-half of which he had already obtained for the special purpose mentioned.

Mr. McMahon—The expenses for that special purchase would not have been paid out of "Early?" A.—I know nothing about that; the $10,000 was to go to the Indiana Central Committee, and the $5,000 to Foster, who was not a member of the committee; it was the special arrangement.

Q.—John W. Foster was a sort of a side committee to get round the Greenback leaders? A.—The so who might be induced to assist the Republican Party.

The next telegram was dated Indianapolis, Oct. 2, to James N. Tyner, and read as follows:

Send the certain direct to me. Telegraph when sent.
J. W. FOSTER.

To be forwarded if absent. Charge to Republican Committee.

On the same date a second telegram was received from Mr. Foster as follows:

"The arrangement as to Smith is in satisfactory progress; that now secured, all our friends agree it would be highly desirable to do what Brown asked in his visit to New-York to be controlled by us. Only require early, and we personally pledge certain, if certain can be provided through your or Orton's influence. This upon understand is in addition to all previously promised. We all feel sure of its success."

The interpretation of this, the witness testified, was that the arrangement to secure the Greenbackers was in satisfactory progress; that being secured, all Mr. Foster's friends agreed it would be highly desirable to purchase the Indianapolis Sentinel, to be controlled by Republicans; it would only require $10,000, and they pledged themselves to raise $5,000 in Indiana if $5,000 more were provided by outsiders; this latter sum was to be in addition to the $10,000 promised by the National Committee; to this the witness forwarded the following reply from Washington the same date:

"Your last telegram confuses me. Is the arrangement with Smith still unsettled; if so, is it contemplated to submit Brown's proposition, which he made in New-York? That proposition would not meet with favor here, but to carry out Smith's arrangement all that was promised would be done. I cannot now assure you of the certain, as only half that can be obtained, but I will telegraph you from Philadelphia in the morning. I go there this evening, in answer to telegrams received."

Mr. Sprinzer—If Brown was an arrangement similarly how could he have visited New-York? A.—The term Brown was applied to everything in connection with the purchase of the Indianapolis Sentinel.

The witness having explained the telegram fully, the reply of Col. Foster, of the same date, was read:

"It is not intended to submit Brown's proposition for the arrangement with Smith. It is additional and independent and of less importance. Have early mailed for afternoon mail New-York, and certain sent to-morrow evening to secure Smith arrangement."

The witness explained the dispatch to the committee, and stated that he sent the following from the Pennsylvania Depot, Philadelphia, the same evening:

"Messenger leaves here to-night with half of certain. I go to New-York to-night. Will telegraph to-morrow."

From the Post Office Building in New-York City, witness telegraphed to Foster, the next day:

"All right. Go ahead. Last messenger leaves here this evening."

This meant that the $2,500, the other half of Early for special purposes had been sent. The witness asked leave to state that the Indianapolis Sentinel was not purchased, and nothing further was ever said about it. This concluded the Tyner-Foster dispatches.

THE NOVEMBER ELECTION IN INDIANA.

After the October and before the November elections witness was in New-York again, and was talking with Secretary Chandler about affairs in Indiana, and what chances there were of carrying the State; he told Mr. Chandler that the Republicans were very much disappointed by their defeat in October, and that the prospects were very doubtful, but that a number of Republicans had expressed their confidence of being able to carry it if they were assisted by the National Committee. Certain arrangements were suggested, and the witness was asked to go there and see what could be done. If there was any chance of success he was to telegraph to Mr. Chandler, who would furnish him with funds to the extent of $10,000. Before he left, witness said to Secretary Chandler: "If we telegraph about money we had better use a phrase. It was decided that if $5,000 was needed, witness should telegraph for one Indian appointment; if $10,000, two Indian appointments, and Chandler would honor his drafts for those sums. Witness proceeded to Indianapolis, and on the 3d of November telegraphed to Mr. Chandler:

If you cannot appoint two Indian agents, please appoint one. Please answer promptly, as I must leave here to-morrow evening.

Mr. Chandler replied from the Fifth-Avenue Hotel, New-York:

The appointments will be made. ZACH CHANDLER.

When witness received this he went to members of the State Committee and informed them that they were at liberty to draw on Mr. Chandler; they suggested that, as they were doing business with the Central Bank of Indiana, they should draw through that house, but the manager raised some objection to cashing the drafts of the committee, stating that he desired the $10,000 to be deposited in a bank in New-York with which he did business; he mentioned the Hanover National Bank, New-York, and witness, "having worried his head over it for some time," sent the following to Mr. Chandler:

"Put sum representing previous appointments to credit of Central Bank, Indianapolis, with Hanover National Bank to-day. Telegraph me when done. The bank requires this."

Secretary Chandler's answer to this was:

"It will be done to-day without fail as requested."

These were all the telegrams that passed between Mr. Chandler and the witness.

Mr. McMahon—Why did it worry you? Why did not you at once telegraph him to deposit the money in the Hanover Bank? A.—Because I did not want to say anything about money.

Q.—Did not you say: "Put the sum representing the two appointments in bank," and was not that an illusion to money? A.—I might have sent a better telegram if I had considered well, I dare say; the term Indian Agents did not allude to any appointments of Indian Agents, and I have never asked Mr. Secretary Chandler to make any appointment; I cannot tell how we came to use those particular words to represent $5,000. Witness further stated that he knew Mr. Bullock, and had heard of the telegrams in his possession.

The Chairman—Suppose a clerk in your office, who is an ardent Republican, finds a Democratic letter which is in the Dead-letter Office and has not been delivered; and supposing that he finds such letter may injure me, and that thereupon he copies the letter and publishes it? A.—I should deal just the same with him as if the entire case was never-ed. We should make no different order whether the matter related to Democrat or Republican.

Mr. Cox—Or suppose that a forgery had been committed, and your clerk opened a letter which disclosed it?

The Chairman—That is a different case.

Mr. Reed—I suppose the question is, whether Gen. Brady ought to be dealt with for exposing those dispatches from Florida. I do not know whether the Post Office Department has anything to do with that or not, but I think it has a citizen, as well as Assistant Postmaster-General, and those dispatches were not in his hands as a Post Office officer, but as an individual.

Mr. Cox—There is the question of Mr. Evans' letter. If the committee is about to open a school for the discussion of moral ethics, I am ready for them.

WILLIAM E. CHANDLER RECALLED.

Mr. W. E. Chandler was then recalled, and testified that he wrote and signed one of the two telegrams sent by Mr. Zach Chandler in which Indians were mentioned; he remembered the great admiration with which he regarded that clever cipher; [laughter;] still the cipher was made, and he had to use it.

To the question whether the dispatch had reference to any appointment, he said: "Any one who knows Mr. Zach Chandler knows that he never made any appointment in his department, either for money or any consideration of the kind, and I did not think any gentleman would suggest it." [Laughter.]

The committee adjourned until to-morrow. Mr. Reid, of the New-York Tribune, will probably be examined in the morning, and in the afternoon St. Martin will be recalled and his testimony completed.

MORTON COMMANDERY BALL.

BRIGHT COSTUMES AND BRILLIANT UNIFORMS—A PLEASANT NIGHT AT GILMORE'S GARDEN.

Gilmore's Garden underwent another transformation last night, the large sheet of ice, on the surface of which hundreds of merry skaters had on the previous evening cut graceful figures, having been floored over and converted into a handsome ball-room, for the reception of Morton Commandery, No. 4, Knights Templar. The building was artistically decorated, and blazed with countless lights. Streamers of tri-colored bunting depended from the ceiling, while the silken flags of the Order of Knights of the Red Cross ornamented the pillars. The boxes were draped in tri-color hangings, and flags and banners were displayed from every conceivable point. The ballroom floor proper was surrounded by a low partition, which, while it afforded good seating accomodation, kept the crowd from invading the domain of the dancers, and formed a pleasant promenade extending completely around the building. The cascade was hidden by the musicians' platform, where Gilmore directed the orchestra. The doors were thrown open at 9 o'clock, at which hour the crowd began to arrive, and extended in a line through Twenty-seventh-street, half-way to Fourth-avenue. The throng within the building was undoubtedly the largest ever congregated there. At 10:20 the grand entrée took place, the procession being led by Eminent Commander Sir William F. Costenbader, preceded by the floor committee. The scene at this moment was the most brilliant imaginable. The waving plumes and glittering swords of the Knights Templar were almost thrown into the shade by the brilliant uniforms of the various Militia regiments, members of which were in attendance in large numbers. The majority of the ladies wore bright evening costumes, and the effect produced as the various uniforms blended with the more sober colors reminded one of the changes in a kaleidoscope. The opening procession was so large that it extended in double lines around the ball-room. When the opening lancers was caned, the immense floor was crowded to inconvenience, while it was almost impossible to move in the promenade outside, so dense was the crowd. The boxes were filled with ladies and gentlemen in full dress, and every seat, away up to the roof, was occupied. Every prominent Mason in the jurisdiction was present, and large delegations from New-Jersey, Philadelphia, New-Hampshire, Connecticut, and Virginia were in attendance. A number of well-known City officials were present in the uniform of Morton or some other commandery, and eminent citizens engaged in the mazy dance to the accompaniment of clanging armor. At midnight it was calculated that there were fully 10,000 persons in attendance, and still late arrivals kept pouring in. The order of dance was not exhausted until an early hour this morning.

IN MEMORY OF BAYARD TAYLOR.

A large audience assembled at Steck's Hall in East Fourteenth-street, last evening, the occasion of their gathering being the memorial meeting of the Goethe Club in commemoration of the late Bayard Taylor. Mr. Taylor was an honorary member of the club, and was entertained by its members just before leaving this City to assume his Ministerial duties in Berlin. The hall was hung with black drapery, and upon the platform was a draped bust of Mr. Taylor. Seated upon the platform were Messrs. Parke Godwin, Edmund C. Stedman, John Elderkin, and William T. Clarke, Rev. Dr. Samuel Osgood, Rev. O. B. Frothingham, and Gen. James Grant Wilson. Mr. Godwin, presided, and made an address.

Letters of regret were read from President Hayes, Secretary Evarts, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Rev. Henry W. Bellows, George William Curtis, Andrew D. White, Thomas W. Higginson, John Bigelow, and Samuel J. Tilden. Mr. Higginson offered, in his letter, a suggestion that the Goethe Club should send to the library at Weimar a copy of Mr. Taylor's translation of "Faust." Addresses were made during the evening by Mr. Frothingham, Mr. E. C. Stedman, the poet; Gen. J. G. Wilson, and Mr. William T. Clarke, and a poem entitled, after Taylor's last work, "Denkalion," written by Rev. Horatio N. Powers, was read by Dr. Osgood.

DISASTERS AT SEA.

ST. MICHAEL'S, Jan. 21.—The Norwegian bark Gauger Rolf, Capt. Lepsoe, from New-York Jan. 2, for New Castle, has arrived here in a leaky condition. She jettisoned a part of her cargo.

The Gauger Rolf brought the crew of the British bark Heltha, Capt. McBride, from New-York Dec. 28, for Honfleur, which foundered.

The Portuguese brig Mareanna I., Capt. Santos, from Bahia Nov. 24, for New-York or Boston, has also arrived here. Her rudder is sprung, and she has lost sails.

PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 29.—The schooner W. R. Pace, from New-York for Eastport, has put in here with loss of boat, davits, and bulwarks above.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—The ship Cultivator, Capt. Russell, from Liverpool, Jan. 11, for Norfolk, has put into Queenstown, and is reported leaky.

The new British ship Cyprus, Capt. Kelley, from Savannah Nov. 29, for Liverpool, was run into while anchored off Innishowen Head and much damaged. She was subsequently towed to Liverpool.

THE MISSISSIPPI FREE AT ST. LOUIS.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 29.—Little ice is floating past this city to-day. The river is open to the mouth of the Missouri, and possibly some miles up that stream, but how far is not known. The Mississippi is still closed at Alton. Nothing is known as to the condition of the river below here, but the supposition is that all the gorges are gone and the channel open to the back water above Cairo. No further damage is reported.

STRANGLED IN MILL-BELTING.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 29.—A Detroit dispatch says that James Petherbridge, an employe of the Champion Flour Mills, in Jefferson-avenue, was caught in the belting last night and gradually drawn toward two large wheels. Just as he was about to be crushed, his situation was discovered and the machinery stopped, but he had been strangled to death before aid reached him.

STATE LEGISLATIVE WORK.

CRITICISING THE GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

SENATOR HARRIS' DEFENSE OF HIGHER EDUCATION—PICTURING THE GOVERNOR A SOUR, MOROSE OLD MAN—SENATOR HUGHES' REPLY.

ALBANY, Jan. 29.—The Governor's Message was the special order in the Senate again to-day, and occupied its time for a couple of hours. Senator Harris opened the discussion, after waiting some time for a Democratic Senator to rise in defense of the Governor, by saying that, as no friend of the Executive appeared to be willing to speak for him, he would say a few words upon the subject of higher education, which received such extraordinary treatment in the Governor's Message. The Governor, he said, opposed the high schools and academies on the ground that the children who got the benefit of these schools did so at the expense of others. It was "legalized robbery"—to use the Governor's words—the taking of one man's money to educate another man's children. This argument would apply with double force to the common schools, and if reduced to practice, would destroy the whole public school system. A very much larger amount was taken from the rich to educate poor men's children in the common schools than in the academies. While the tax to support the former amounted to millions annually, the entire sum appropriated by the State for high schools and academies the past year was only $104,000. This doctrine of the Governor's Message would reverse the whole system of public education, on which the prosperity of the nation rests, and carry the country back to the dark ages. The Governor's language was the utterance of a disbelief in the equality of man which lay at the foundation of the political system. It was not the language of an American, but of a European. Its tendency was to foster class privileges, and keep the children of the poor man in the place in which they found themselves by the accident of birth. Had the Governor's views prevailed in the past, most of the men who had molded the opinions of the country, built up its industries, and enlarged its power and glory, would have been compelled to remain in the poverty and obscurity of their parents. In point of fact, the taxation for the support of the higher schools was not oppressive to the poor; it was levied for the most part upon the rich; but, in the opinion of the wisest statesmen, it was money profitably expended. The Governor's notions were not those of the great leaders of the party to which he now belonged. Gov. Seymour gave utterance to very different sentiments almost at the very moment that Luclus Robinson was penning his anti-American and anti-democratic tirade against the higher education of the State. According to Gov. Seymour, "learning in its best estate is the right of all, and should be placed within the reach of all."

Mr. Harris closed his speech by picturing Gov. Robinson as a sour, morose old man, sitting in his lonely chamber in the lonely old Capitol, and pouring but his lamentations upon the degeneracy of his time, finding fault with everything, having no faith in anything or anybody, with no generous impulses, and only relieved from utter despair by the whisperings of royalty conveyed to him through the suggestions of Lord Dufferin in relation to an international park to hedge in Niagara Falls, so that nervous old gentlemen like himself could enjoy the cataract unmolested. While wishing over the expenditure of a few dollars for the higher education of the children of this State, this melancholy old Governor plunged headlong into the extravagance of an international park, and recommended that negotiations be commenced with a foreign power, in violation of the Constitution of the United States, and in derogation of the power of this State to take any steps or appropriate any money for such a purpose. Until the Governor could show some authority for the State of New-York entering upon this wild scheme, he would be pardoned for characterizing it, in the language of his Excellency, "legalized robbery."

Senator Hughes followed Mr. Harris in a labored defense of the Governor's Message, and maintained that the real meaning of its views should be open, unobstructed, well lighted, and safe to the sea.

Gov. Hoyt made a short address, in which he remarked that he was not a Philadelphian, but came from the interior of the State; that he did not appeal for a local interest, but looked at the subject as one not of State but national importance, and hence worthy of the consideration of Congress.

Chairman Reagan promised that the subject should receive the most careful attention, and the delegation withdrew.

THE STRIKING COAL-MINERS.

POTTSVILLE, Penn., Jan. 29.—It was reported this morning that the miners employed at the Luke Fidler and Cameron colleries, at Shamokin, had resumed work at their old wages. Investigation shows that the company has offered the Luke Fidler men their former wages, but they refuse to go to work until a similar concession is made to the demands of their fellow-workmen in the Cameron mine.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 29.—The lockout at the Ashland, Ky., Norton Iron-works and Princess Furnace mines still continues. A large body of miners is on guard at the iron-works to prevent those who wish to resume work from working. Over 1,000 employes are thus thrown out of work, causing great distress among them. Many families are in need of the necessaries of life, the husband and father having been out of work all through the last strike, which has existed for six months.

THE WHITE PLAINS TRAGEDY.

GREENWICH, Conn., Jan. 29.—William L. Harris, who shot and killed a man named Jackson at White Plains, about a week ago, during a drunken row caused by the refusal of Harris to drink some hot gin that had been prepared, was arrested by Sheriff Dayton, of this place, Monday afternoon, at North Stamford. He had been wandering in the snow ever since the murder was committed, and his feet were badly frozen. He told Sheriff Dayton that he shot Jackson in self-defense; that Jackson had threatened to kill him, and, acting under that fear, he committed the deed. Sheriff Dayton immediately telegraphed to Sheriff Brundage at White Plains, who sent Deputy Sheriff Ford for the prisoner. Harris expressed a willingness to return with the Deputy Sheriff without a requisition, and he was safely lodged in the White Plains Jail.

ICE-CUTTING STOPPED BY RAIN.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Jan. 29.—The rain and warm weather which have prevailed during the past two days, have caused the ice in the Hudson to waste. Several of the ice companies have suspended operations. The ice, from this city to Poughkeepsie, varies in thickness from 4 to 9 inches. The Knickerbocker Company has stopped at Marlborough and at other points. Unless 10-inch ice can be procured, no more will be harvested south of Poughkeepsie. North of that point, the houses are nearly full, with the finest crop gathered in a number of years.

ASSAULTED BY HIS SCHOLARS.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 29.—Much excitement exists in Winchester, Ind., over a fight which occurred there yesterday between J. M. Carver, teacher of the public school, and several male scholars. Carver was whipping a small boy, when several large boys assaulted him with clubs, some of them drawing knives. The boys were expelled by Superintendent Butler, but were immediately reinstated by the School Board, whereupon Butler and Carver tendered their resignations.

JUDGE CADWALADER'S FUNERAL.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 29.—The funeral of Judge Cadwalader took place this morning, and was attended by a large number of people. The Judges and members of the Bar assembled in the United States Court-room, and, led by Judges McKenna, of the United States District Court, and Paxson, of the Supreme Court, marched in a body to the house. The remains were deposited in the family vault, adjoining Christ Church.

ANXIETY ABOUT A GIRL'S FATE.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 29.—Miss Bowan, daughter of Daniel Bowen, of Vinton Township, near McArthur, Ohio, left her father's residence on Jan. 20, to visit friends a mile away. She has not been seen since. Having to cross Raccoon Creek, upon a large drift, it is though she missed her footing and sank beneath the drift-wood. She was plaintiff in a breach of promise suit against William H. Keepers.

SHERMAN'S MARCH THROUGH GEORGIA.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 29.—Gen. Sherman and party arrived here to-day, it being his first visit to this city since the war. Several thousand people were congregated at the depot. The weather was fine, and the entire party walked to the hotel, Gen. Sherman going arm in arm with Gen. Augur. The party will attend, to-night, a ball given in his honor at McPherson Barracks.

DISCUSSING PASSENGER REGULATIONS.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 29.—A meeting of Agents of the Vanderbilt and Canada pool lines of railroad was held here to-day to consider the feasibility of giving out tickets to agents for sale and the payment of commissions. It was decided not to do so as far as this city is concerned. The meeting adjourned without arrangements as to Eastern points.

TWO ATTEMPTS AT SUICIDE.

WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 29.—William Thomas, who was acquitted recently of a charge of murdering his wife, and subsequently cut his throat, but recovered, made another desperate attempt on his own life last night. He succeeded in inflicting some serious wounds on his neck with a knife, but it is thought he may recover.

THE TOURNAMENT GAMES.

GARNIER MAKES HIS LARGEST RUN IN PUBLIC.

HIS BRILLIANT PLAY IN A GAME WITH HEISER—SEXTON EXHIBITS HIS STRENGTH AT OPEN-TABLE PLAY AND DEFEATS RUDOLPHE.

The main characteristic of the games played yesterday in the Brunswick and Balke championship tournament was the absence of any extensive "nursing," both the afternoon and evening contests being played, for the most part, on the "open table," affording the players abundant opportunity for brilliant shots. In his afternoon game with Randolph Heiser, Albert Garnier made his best run in public, counting 220 consecutive caroms in very dashing style. In his evening struggle with A. P. Rudolphe, William Sexton gave a fine exhibition of his strength in open-table play, but the interest of the game was greatly marred through his poor play toward the close. The afternoon game between Garnier and Heiser began with elaborate chalking and sand-papering of cue-tips, and poor play on both sides. The gathering of "goose-eggs" was alarming, while the balls rolled very widly and eluded all efforts to capture them. Garnier began to laugh, after a while, at the frequency of his "misses," and then becoming somewhat nettled, played at the ivories in his seventeenth inning with something of his usual spirit and grace, beginning with a series of fine open-table shots, which he changed to delicate "nursing" for a while, and then again resumed his favorite "cushion," "draw," and "masse" caroms. Later on he exhibited some pretty "nursing" once more, gathering in all a very fine run of 90 caroms. He was now in good spirits, and warmly interested in his play, and when, in his nineteenth inning, the Boston lad began to play with some skill, he followed his movements with a watchful eye, taking advantage of his opportunities to place to his credit many beautifully-executed shots. In his twentieth inning he "nursed" the ivories with an easy, delicate touch, carrying them very neatly along the rail, until he had made 75 caroms. He then separated them to vary the run with some fine caroms on the open table, while the spectators watched him with silent interest, occasionally breaking into applause to testify their pleasure. After playing open shots for a time, he again gathered the balls upon the left rail, and resumed his "nursing" until they rang 200, when he again purposely drove them apart. Several shots for position brought them together so closely that they seemed to be "frozen," and the Frenchman, creeping up as slyly and silently as a mouse, gazed at them, and then looked up with a smile. They were not "frozen," but at the next shot one of the balls rolled "off," and turning to the Referee, Garnier said, "There's something on the ball." Geary went forward to remove the "something," when, amid general laughter, Schaefer cried out, good-humoredly, "foul—441," mocking Rudolphe's objection in a previous game and intimating that he thought his friend was going to exceed Sosson's famous run. Heiser also remarked with a smile, "What right have you got to touch that ball?" Meantime, in the midst of the general enjoyment, Garnier continued to play, until on his two hundred and twentieth shot the balls "froze," and, failing to count from the string, he retired. The run was the largest ever made by Garnier in public, and, varied as it was by open-table play, fancy shots, and "nursing," was undoubtedly the most brilliant yet scored in the tournament, and was deservedly greeted with hearty and continued applause. He followed it, four innings later, with another well-played run of 75 caroms, which made his score 450 to Heiser's 75. The lad seemed frightened and unable to gain control of the balls, but, nevertheless, he sat watching Garnier with much pleasure, frequently praising his brilliant play. Garnier slipped up, after scoring 29, in his twenty-sixth inning, leaving the ivories in splendid position for Heiser, who played them prettily for 53. The latter then fancy cue then began to tap them once more as Heiser took his seat, and they chimed away softly until 47 had been made. The Boston lad, who had had a constant run of luck, here forged them by one, and again they became the willing captives of Garnier's skilful hand, and after closing a run of 23, with a marvelous "follow and draw" fancy shot, which astonished not only the spectators but even the experts present, the ivories engaged in a race around the table, and slipped away from the player, running in such a way that Heiser could not catch them. At length, after playing a while in a fashion new to the latter, there was constant an opportunity to increase his score, Garnier caught the spheres and brought the game to a close, and, amid great applause, laid down his cue, having beaten Heiser by a large number of points. The game was the quickest afternoon contest of the tournament, and its score was as follows:

Garnier—0, 3, 1, 10, 0, 0, 0, 0, 0, 1, 0, 1, 2, 0, 0, 0, 10, 18, 26, 2, 5, 0, 75, 29, 47, 8, 23, 2, 0, 6, 1, 20, 3, 0—300.

Heiser—0, 8, 0, 0, 2, 0, 0, 7, 0, 5, 5, 1, 8, 1, 1, 0, 4, 2, 24, 3, 2, 2, 1, 8, 51, 3, 1, 0, 0, 27, 0, 2, 10, 1—194.

Winner's average—17 1-7; loser's, 5 9-35.

Best runs—Garnier, 220, 90, 75; Heiser, 51, 27.

Umpire—A. Newburger for Garnier, E. H. Marshall for Heiser.

Referee—Michael Geary; marker, E. H. Ellis.

Time of game—46 minutes by actual play.

In the evening Rudolphe came in early, and in a pleasant way said to the reporters, "Gentlemen, you see before you another victim," and then Sexton arrived, and began testing different sets of balls. At length a satisfactory set was obtained, and Sexton, with the remark, "Now for a run," struck, and at once began position play, but retired on a "draw," after scoring 10 caroms. In two shots Rudolphe drew the ivories to the left rail, in his next inning, and began to "ring the chimes," but the spheres were obstinate and "froze" on the twenty-eighth carom. They seemed inclined to get away from their imprisonment on the rail, but Sexton succeeded, as the player "fouled" shortly afterward, and retired, with a smile, having placed 41 points to his credit. Rudolphe played with great care, carefully studying his shots and his feet were badly frozen. As he did, Sheriff Dayton that he shot Jackson in self-defense; that Jackson had threatened to kill him, and, acting under that fear, he committed the deed. Sheriff Dayton immediately telegraphed to Sheriff Brundage at White Plains, who sent Deputy Sheriff Ford for the prisoner. Harris expressed a willingness to return with the Deputy Sheriff without a requisition, and he was safely lodged in the White Plains Jail.

ICE-CUTTING STOPPED BY RAIN.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Jan. 29.—The rain and warm weather which have prevailed during the past two days, have caused the ice in the Hudson to waste. Several of the ice companies have suspended operations. The ice, from this city to Poughkeepsie, varies in thickness from 4 to 9 inches. The Knickerbocker Company has stopped at Marlborough and at other points. Unless 10-inch ice can be procured, no more will be harvested south of Poughkeepsie. North of that point, the houses are nearly full, with the finest crop gathered in a number of years.

ASSAULTED BY HIS SCHOLARS.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 29.—Much excitement exists in Winchester, Ind., over a fight which occurred there yesterday between J. M. Carver, teacher of the public school, and several male scholars. Carver was whipping a small boy, when several large boys assaulted him with clubs, some of them drawing knives. The boys were expelled by Superintendent Butler, but were immediately reinstated by the School Board, whereupon Butler and Carver tendered their resignations.

JUDGE CADWALADER'S FUNERAL.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 29.—The funeral of Judge Cadwalader took place this morning, and was attended by a large number of people. The Judges and members of the Bar assembled in the United States Court-room, and, led by Judges McKenna, of the United States District Court, and Paxson, of the Supreme Court, marched in a body to the house. The remains were deposited in the family vault, adjoining Christ Church.

ANXIETY ABOUT A GIRL'S FATE.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 29.—Miss Bowan, daughter of Daniel Bowen, of Vinton Township, near McArthur, Ohio, left her father's residence on Jan. 20, to visit friends a mile away. She has not been seen since. Having to cross Raccoon Creek, upon a large drift, it is though she missed her footing and sank beneath the drift-wood. She was plaintiff in a breach of promise suit against William H. Keepers.

SHERMAN'S MARCH THROUGH GEORGIA.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 29.—Gen. Sherman and party arrived here to-day, it being his first visit to this city since the war. Several thousand people were congregated at the depot. The weather was fine, and the entire party walked to the hotel, Gen. Sherman going arm in arm with Gen. Augur. The party will attend, to-night, a ball given in his honor at McPherson Barracks.

DISCUSSING PASSENGER REGULATIONS.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 29.—A meeting of Agents of the Vanderbilt and Canada pool lines of railroad was held here to-day to consider the feasibility of giving out tickets to agents for sale and the payment of commissions. It was decided not to do so as far as this city is concerned. The meeting adjourned without arrangements as to Eastern points.

TWO ATTEMPTS AT SUICIDE.

WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 29.—William Thomas, who was acquitted recently of a charge of murdering his wife, and subsequently cut his throat, but recovered, made another desperate attempt on his own life last night. He succeeded in inflicting some serious wounds on his neck with a knife, but it is thought he may recover.

NAVAL INTELLIGENCE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Master Gustavus C. Hanus is ordered to the Vandalia at Boston. The orders assigning Surgeon Thomas Hiland to the Lackawanna and Lieut. Clifford H. West to the Vandalia have been revoked. The former is placed on waiting orders, and the latter is directed to remain on duty at the Navy-yard, New-York. Stephen H. Radford, Assistant Paymaster, has resigned.

THE UNITARIAN CONFERENCE.

AN ATTEMPT TO BE MADE TO SAVE THE CHURCH OF THE MESSIAH.

The morning session of the Unitarian Conference was opened at 10 o'clock A. M. yesterday in the Church of the Saviour, corner of Pierrepont-street and Monroe-place, Brooklyn. A large number of prominent Unitarian clergymen were present. Rev. A. D. Mayo, of Springfield, Mass., read an essay on the subject of "Revivals, True and False." The proper title of the essay, the speaker said, would perhaps be "Moody and the Latest Revival."

At the afternoon session Rev. Brooke Herford, of Chicago, read an essay upon "Christ's Help to the Religion of the Present." After which Rev. Martin K. Schermerhorn, of Newport, R. I., read a report touching the financial condition of the Church of the Messiah, Park-avenue and Thirty-fourth-street, this City. He reported that almost all of those who built the magnificent edifice, and incurred the debt, have either died or removed, or deserted the cause with the desertion of its two former Pastors, Dr. Osgood and Rev. Mr. Hepworth, so that the families now worshiping there are, with, perhaps, half a dozen exceptions, the unfortunate victims upon whose heads rests a crushing financial burden for which they are in nowise, either legally or morally, responsible. Several persons have put down their names for subscriptions to pay off the debt one for $17,000, another for $2,000, another for $500, and so on down to $50. Every person, with one exception, in the church had contributed something. In conclusion, Rev. Mr. Schermerhorn said he believed that the salvation of this commodious and convenient structure was essential to the continued existence of the society itself. In case the church is not saved, the disagreement and demoralization will, he said, be so great, and the obstacles so numerous, that nearly all the families now lingering about the church will be scattered to the various churches in the neighborhood, and the Unitarian cause will be left with but one church to represent it in the great City of New-York. The church property, worth $250,000, is mortgaged for about half that sum, and notice has been given that the first mortgage is to be foreclosed. In view of all these threatening facts, the few remaining members of the congregation, as their last resort, say: "We can and will immediately cancel the whole debt of $125,000, in case Dr. Bellows' church will donate the amount of $17,000 which they hold in bonds against the church, and in case the Unitarian Assembly, or Unitarians at large, will procure the sum of $33,000. The full committee and subscriptions have already been made by the people of the Church of the Messiah to the amount of $63,000, which is all they can possibly do, and it now rests with the bondholders or Dr. Bellows' church and with the Unitarian denomination whether they will and can, to save the church, pledge and secure the above-named amounts.

A resolution was presented at the evening session recommending the publication of the report and its presentation to all the churches of the Unitarian denomination, and that a special collection be taken up in all their churches on Sunday, Feb. 9, for the benefit of the Church of the Messiah.

THE BRITISH LABOR TROUBLES.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—The Echo states that the employes of the London engineering firms are generally disposed to submit to a reduction of their wages, but not to the extent proposed by the masters.

Four hundred "locked-out" agricultural laborers left Kent for Australia to-day.

The notices of a reduction of wages posted at the Govan engineering works call for an average reduction of 7½ per cent.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

ALL

FORTY-FIFTH CONGRESS.

THIRD SESSION—Jan. 29.

SUMMARY.

The Senate, after some debate, passed Mr. Edmunds' resolution excluding the general public from the corridors in the rear of the Senate chamber. The bill for promoting the efficiency of the corps of Chaplains in the Navy was passed, as were also several pension bills. Mr. Edmunds' resolutions affirming the validity of the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth amendments to the Constitution were then taken up, but as Mr. Morgan, who was entitled to the floor, was not ready to go on, the Senate, on motion of Mr. Conkling, went into executive session, and when the doors were reopened adjourned.

The day session of the House was consumed in considering the Post Office Appropriation bill in Committee of the Whole, and several amendments were adopted increasing appropriations for various branches of the service. The bill was then reported to the House, but without final action a recess was taken until 7:30 P. M. The evening session was devoted to the consideration of bills reported by the Commerce Committee, among them being one to extend the limits of the port of New-York, which was passed.

SENATE.

THE POLARIS EXPEDITION.

On motion of Mr. ANTHONY, of Rhode Island, the Senate non-concurred in the House amendment to the joint resolution providing for the publication and sale of the narrative of the Polaris expedition, and a committee of conference was ordered.

EXCLUSION OF PERSONS FROM THE CORRIDORS.

Mr. EDMUNDS, of Vermont, called up the resolution submitted by him yesterday, providing that during the remainder of the present session no person not entitled to the privileges of the floor shall be admitted to the corridors or marble room in the rear of the Senate Chamber.

Mr. SAULSBURY, of Delaware, opposed the resolution, and said the people of this country had rights. He did not want to see them excluded from this portion of the Capitol. He hoped the virtue of every Senator was sufficient to resist the influence of lobbies.

Mr. EDMUNDS said that as a matter of health, and for the convenience of Senators, the resolution should be passed. The marble room was the only place where Senators could go for consultation and a moment's rest. There was plenty of room in the galleries and all over the Capitol for the public.

Mr. WITHERS, of Virginia, submitted an amendment, to add to the resolution, "except when accompanied by a Senator."

Mr. BLAINE, of Maine, in opposing this amendment, said the result of it would be that every Senator must stand guard over his visitor. It meant that as soon as a Senator came in with his visitor, he must say "scat." [Laughter.]

During the debate it was argued by several Senators that the nominations sent in again to all Senators, Democrats as well as Republicans.

Mr. BLAINE, referring to this, said the Republicans desired to make the Democrats entirely at home in the committee-rooms because they [the Republicans] wanted a little of the same courtesy next year. [Great laughter.]

After some further discussion, the amendment of Mr. Withers was adopted, and the resolution agreed to as amended. Yeas, 36; nays, 12.

CHAPLAINS IN THE NAVY.

Mr. HAMLIN, of Maine, called up the Senate bill for promoting the efficiency of the corps of Chaplains in the Navy, and it was passed without discussion. It amends the Revised Statutes so as to provide that no person less than 25 years nor more than 35 years of age, shall be appointed Chaplain in the Navy, fixes their relative rank as follows: Four to rank as Captains, eight as Commanders, and twelve as Lieutenant-Commanders. It fixes their pay according to duties, length of term of service, &c., and provides that the whole number of Chaplains shall not exceed 20.

PENSION BILLS.

On motion of Mr. VOORHEES, of Indiana, the Senate proceeded to consider bills on the calendar granting pensions to certain persons.

Among the bills passed was one granting a pension of $50 a month to Ann M. Paulding, widow of Hiram Paulding, late Senior Rear-Admiral of the United States Navy.

The Senate bill increasing the pension of Dr. Mary E. Walker to $20 a month, and House bill granting a pension of $30 a month to Mrs. Eliza B. Anderson, widow of Gen. Robert Anderson, United States Army, were passed.

MR. EDMUNDS' RESOLUTIONS.

At 2.10 P. M., the time for the consideration of Pension bills having expired, the Senate took up the unfinished business, being Mr. Edmunds' resolutions in regard to the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth amendments to the Constitution.

Mr. CONKLING, of New-York, said he believed that the Senator from Alabama, [Mr. Morgan,] who submitted a substitute for the resolutions, was entitled to the floor. As he had not yet done so, he did not on to-day with his remarks, he [Mr. Conkling] moved that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. MORGAN said he did not claim the floor.

The motion of Mr. Conkling was then agreed to without a division.

THE ANTI-CHINESE BILL.

While the galleries were being cleared the VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the bill which passed the House yesterday, to restrict Chinese immigration.

Mr. SARGENT, of California, said he desired to call the attention of the Committee on Foreign Relations to the fact that they had had a bill similar to this before them during the last session of Congress, and he hoped there would be speedy action upon the matter now.

The bill was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and then at 2.15 P. M. the Senate went into executive session. At 3:15 P. M. the doors were reopened.

Mr. ALLISON, of Iowa, was appointed a member of the Board of Visitors to West Point, in place of Mr. Christiancy, to-day appointed Minister to Peru.

The Senate then adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

A PRIVILEGED MOTION.

Mr. BLOUNT, of Georgia, moved to go into Committee of the Whole.

Mr. CONGER, of Michigan, and Mr. HOOKER, of Mississippi, inquired if the morning hour was not the regular order.

The SPEAKER replied that it was not, as the motion of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Blount] was a privileged one.

The vote on Mr. Blount's motion resulted—yeas 88, nays 82, and the yeas and nays were demanded and ordered by the Republicans. The Democrats, as a rule, voted in the affirmative, though a few of the Southern members voted with the body of the Republicans in the negative. The vote resulted—yeas 118, nays 115. There was a good deal of excitement during the roll call, and, previous to the announcement, a number of changes were made, Mr. TOWNSEND, of New-York, who had voted in the affirmative, saying, as he changed his vote to "No," that he did so by request.

THE POST OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

The House then, at 3:05 P. M., went into Committee of the Whole, [Mr. COX, of New-York, in the chair,] on the Post Office Appropriation bill.

Mr. FOSTER, of Ohio, submitted an amendment repealing the proviso to the bill making an appropriation for a deficiency in the appropriation for postal transportation by railroad for the fiscal year ending June, 1879, which forbids any increase in the postal-car service beyond what existed Dec. 1, 1878.

Mr. HUNTON, of Virginia, submitted an amendment providing that the Postmaster-General shall make no deficiency during the current fiscal year by paying postage on any line. Adopted.

Mr. BAKER, of Indiana, moved to increase the appropriation for route agents from $1,075,000 to $1,125,000. Adopted—yeas 106, nays 70.

Mr. FENN, of Idaho Territory, submitted an amendment increasing the appropriation for local agents by $10,000. He referred to some remarks of Mr. Blount about the little Territory of Idaho, and stated that that "little Territory" was much larger than the State of Georgia, as also were the New-England States, New-Jersey, and Delaware combined; in fact, the latter State was not large enough to make a fraction of a county in Idaho. There were no mail facilities in Idaho, and the Winter of 1862 he had been obliged to pay $2 for every letter he received. The amendment was rejected.

Mr. LATHROP, of Illinois, submitted an amendment providing that if the stamps required by the Post Office Department can be manufactured at less than their present cost by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, the work shall be transferred to that bureau. Adopted.

An appropriation of $20,000 was made for preparing a new edition of the laws of the Post Office Department, and the committee then rose and reported the bill to the House.

The first amendment on which a separate vote was demanded was that increasing the appropriation for clerks in Post Offices from $4,460,000 to $3,000,000, and it was adopted—yeas 121, nays 109.

The amendment increasing from $1,900,000 to $2,000,000 the appropriation for the payment of letter-carriers was adopted—yeas 137, nays 92.

The following amendments were then agreed to: Increasing the appropriation for transportation on star routes, from $5,690,000 to $5,900,000; for railroad transportation, from $8,715,000 to $9,000,000; and for steam-boat transportation, from $750,000 to $900,000.

The House then, without final action on the bill, at 4:35 P. M., took a recess until 7:30 P. M., the special order for the evening session being the consideration of reports from the Committee on Commerce.

EVENING SESSION.

DRAWBACKS ON SUGAR.

Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois, offered a resolution calling on the Secretary of the Treasury for information as to the amount of drawback paid during the last fiscal year on exported sugar and molasses claimed to have been refined or manufactured from imported sugar, melado, or molasses. Adopted.

BILLS RELATING TO COMMERCE.

The following bills were reported from the Committee on Commerce and passed:

Bill affixing a penalty of $200 for the violation by any sailing vessel of the laws in regard to lights and fog-whistles, and a penalty of $500 for such violation by steam vessels.

A bill requiring the master of every coasting vessel to make a report every year to the Collector of Customs of the home port of the number and species of fish caught by such vessel.

Mr. DUNNELL, of Minnesota, from the Committee on Commerce, reported a bill extending the limits of the port of New-York. It includes within the limits of the port of New-York that part of Hudson County, N. J., now included within the collection district of Newark.

On motion of Mr. HARRISON, of Illinois, the bill was amended so as to include within said district only that part of Hudson County now within the District of Newark east of Newark Bay and the Hackensack River, and the bill as amended was passed.

Mr. BLISS, of New-York, from the same committee, reported a bill to facilitate the negotiation of bills of lading and other commercial instruments and to punish frauds therein. Referred to the Committee of the Whole.

Also, a bill providing that all private foreign steam vessels carrying passengers from any United States port to any other port shall be subject to the laws relative to life-preservers, &c., and making such vessels liable to visitation and inspection by the proper officers in any port of the United States. Passed.

Mr. DUNNELL from the same committee, reported back the bill defining the jurisdiction of the United States over the harbors and navigable waters of the United States. It provides that when the Secretary of War may have reason to believe that the navigation of any harbor is impeded by the undue occupation of wharves, piers, &c., he shall order a survey of such harbor to be made, and if it shall be found that the navigation is impeded, he shall make a report of the survey to Congress for its action thereon. It provides further that no bridge across any navigable water shall be constructed until the Secretary of War shall approve of the plan for the bridge. It provides also for the removal of wrecks from harbors at the expense of the Government, and in the case of the owner after due notice the owner of the wreck shall neglect to remove it. Referred to the Committee of the Whole on a point of order.

The House then, at 9:50, adjourned.

NOMINATIONS BY THE PRESIDENT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The President today sent the following nominations to the Senate:

Isaac P. Christiancy, of Michigan, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Peru.

William W. Dudley, Marshal of the United States for the District of Indiana.

Naval—Lieut.-Commander H. E. Mullen, to be a Commander; Capt. Thomas S Phelps, to be a Commodore. Commander Joseph P. Fyffe, to be a Captain. Master John Hubbard, to be Lieutenant; Ensign Charles W. Deering, to be a Master.

Postmasters—Charles W. Greene, at Fall River, Mass.; Temple Dodge, at Malden, Mass.; Roland E. Bowen, at Millbury, Mass.; Charles E. Horn, at Stoneham, Mass.; Walter D. Blaisdell, at Plymouth, N. H.; Samuel H. Canfield, at Seymour, Conn.; David S. McLaughlin, at Fishkill-on-the-Hudson, N. Y.; James C. Evans, at Glasgow, Ky.; Henry Becker, at Montague, Mich.; Abner L. Harris, at Reedsburg, Wis.; Fayette W. Crane, at Maquoketa, Iowa, and Herman J. Fringer, at Dodge City, Kan.

CONFIRMATIONS BY THE SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The Senate, in executive session this afternoon, unanimously and without referring it to a committee confirmed the nomination of Senator Christiancy to be Minister to Peru. The following nominations were also confirmed: Henry Page, of Arkansas, to be agent for the Indians of the Southern Ute Agency in Colorado.

Postmasters—Charles A. Fuller, Sherburne, N. Y.; Eugene A. Hinds, Richfield Springs, N. Y.; Levi M. Gano, Watkins, N. Y.; Horatio N. Barkley, Delhi, N. Y.; Augustus C. Davis, Somerset, Mass.; John B. Tyler, North Adams, Mass.; Daniel L. Dunning, Middletown, Del.; Hiram A. Goodspeed, Ligonier Ind.; William Francis Ackley, Iowa; Michael A. Frank, Falls City, Neb.; Aneyl A. West, Lebanon, Mo.; Clay F. Byers, Appleton City, Mo.; Wilson A. Pond, Savannah, Mo.; Louis W. Ehrman, Washington, Mo.; John T. Weathers, Harrisonville, Mo.; Lewis W. England, Canton, Mo.; James G. Hatchitt, Frankfort, Ky.; William P. Allet, Winchester, Ky.; John H. Bibb University, of Virginia, Va.; Mrs. Josephine C. Owen, Randolph, Ky.; Lafayette Alfred Mexico, N. Y.; George V. Case, Liberty, Va.; John H. Shuttleworth, Clarksburg, West Va.; Hugh Sterling, Wheeling, West Va.; Charles F. W. Kitzen, Grafton, West Va.; Mrs. Pauline Wood, Corsicana, Texas; Joseph B. Marshall, Gold Hill, Nev.

William K. Burchinell to be Receiver of Public Moneys at Fort Hall, Idaho. Thomas Gilliendidy to be Indian Agent for the Red Cloud Agency. Samuel R. Davis, to be Surveyor of Customs, at Port Jefferson, N. Y.

A CHARGE NOT SUSTAINED.

John Frost, a driver of the Ninth-Avenue Railroad Company, was charged with cruelty to a horse yesterday in the Court of Special Sessions. Justices Kilbreth, Wheeler, and Otterbourg were on the bench. Mr. Henry Bergh, Jr., testified that on the 23d inst. Frost was driving a horse which was in a very exhausted condition. The car—a "bobtail" one—contained nine passengers, and the wheels, because of the snow upon the track, did not revolve, thus increasing the strain upon the horse. The horse was foaming at the mouth, was panting for breath, and "was covered with sweat from ear to hoof." Col. Spencer, who represented the railroad company, contended that there was very little if any snow upon the track on the day in question, and that Mr. Bergh, Jr., was in error as to the horse's condition. The foreman of the Ninth-Avenue Railroad Company's stable deposed that Frost brought his horse back to the stable in good trim, and that the prisoner "was a very careful driver." Mr. Henry Bergh, Sr., in a vigorous address, commented severely upon the conduct of railroad companies who, influenced by a greedy and selfish desire to increase their dividends, employed "bobtail" cars and "bob-tail" conductors. "I know this court," said Mr. Bergh, warming to his subject, "to consider this fact, and I ask you to consider the sympathy and humanity due to an animal which serves man so nobly, and which is the rapidity of owners step in and ask the poor horse to do more labor than Providence intended him to do." Justice Kilbreth rendered the decision of the court in the following words: "We have a desire to encourage cupidity; the only question before us is whether this young man maltreated his horse. We are unanimously satisfied that the charge is not sustained, and the prisoner is therefore discharged."

A JURY SEEKING REDRESS.

The facts that Judge John S. Barkalow, Presiding Judge of the Court of Sessions at Paterson, N. J., recently discharged 12 jurors for the term, and that these 12 happened to be the jurors who found a verdict of "not guilty" in a case where the Judge told them "that the evidence was all in favor of the State, and that they must bring in a verdict in accordance with the evidence," have been reported. The jurors, however, do not seem disposed to allow the matter to drop, have organized themselves, employed counsel, and express themselves determined to seek legal redress. By advice of counsel they sent a communication to the Judges constituting the court before whom the case was tried, claiming that they had rendered a verdict according to evidence, that the evidence before them, though it was all on the part of the State, the accused offering no defense, was not of a kind which they could not believe, and that consequently their verdict was conscientiously rendered. The court not replying to this, the jurors are now about to take steps tending to the impeachment of Judge Barkalow. The bar says that where the full panel of jurors is deemed unnecessary, the Judges may discharge some of them, but that such discharge shall be done by lot. The jurors in this case claim that the action of the court was not only an insult to them, but also contrary to all the provisions of law and precedents of practice.

COAL STILL LOWER.

One hundred thousand tons of Scranton coal were sold at auction yesterday. There was a good attendance of buyers and stock brokers, and bidding was spirited, but the prices realized were 20¢ cents per ton lower on an average than at last month's sale. This makes a reduction of nearly $1 50 per ton since the breaking up of the combination. The lots yesterday were in small parcels for retail distribution. Seven thousand tons of steamer coal averaged $2 35, a decline since December of 7¢ cents per ton; 26,000 tons of grate averaged $2 32½, a decline of 22½ cents per ton; 20,000 tons of egg averaged $2 31¼, a decline of 34 cents per ton; 40,000 tons of stove averaged $2 75, a decline of 23¼ cents per ton, and 7,000 tons of chestnut averaged $2 39½, a decline of 3 cents per ton.

CHARGED WITH MANSLAUGHTER.

John W. Beake, Inspector of Steam Boilers for Connecticut, was arrested in Jersey City yesterday on a charge of manslaughter, a capias having been issued by the United States Circuit Court for the State named. The offense consists in Beake having falsely certified that the boilers on the steamboat Adelphi were sound and in good condition. Shortly after the boilers exploded while the boat was lying at Norwalk, killing one or two pe sons and wounding several others. Beake was taken before United States Commissioner Muirheid but waived an examination, and furnished bail in $5,000 to appear at the April term of the court. The investigation that followed the explosion revealed the fact that the boilers which Beake had certified were sound were worn nearly through in several places.

DEATH OF MR. A. B. M'DONALD.

Mr. Anthony Bleecker McDonald, the oldest insurance underwriter in this City, died at his residence, No. 47 West Twenty-fifth-street, on Tuesday, in the seventy-third year of his age. Mr. McDonald had been manager of the Royal Insurance Company's agency in this City since 1857, and was universally esteemed and respected. For 50 years he had been a member of St. Luke's Protestant Episcopal Church, and for 42 years the Superintendent of its Sunday-school. Mr. McDonald was Senior Warden and Treasurer of this church at the time of his death, and was also a Trustee of the General Theological Seminary. He was largely instrumental in the establishing of St. Luke's Home.

THE DAVENPORT INQUIRY.

TAMMANY WITNESSES ON THE STAND

THEIR TESTIMONY RESPECTING THE ARRESTS ON ELECTION DAY—GEN. WINGATE'S EXTRAORDINARY CONDUCT IN COURT—A ROUGH AND TUMBLE FIGHT BETWEEN A WITNESS AND MR. DAVENPORT.

The Davenport Investigating Committee met again yesterday. The number of spectators was much larger than on the previous day. Mr. John A. Foley, one of the lawyers designated by Tammany Hall to look after the interests of Democrats arrested on election day, was the first witness called. Mr. Foley said that he was called up at 6 o'clock on the morning of election day to attend to the case of a man who had been arrested in the Fourteenth Assembly District. Witness found the man at First-avenue and Tenth-street in charge of a Deputy Marshal. Mr. Davenport interrupted at this point, and said that a Deputy Marshal was not an officer appointed by him, or over whom he had any control. The witness testified that he went with the prisoner to the Republican head-quarters, in Clinton-place, where John H. Brady, a Republican leader, drove up in a carriage with a man claiming to be a Special Deputy Marshal, who produced a telegram purporting to be signed by Commissioner Davenport. The latter here interrupted again to object to the contents of the telegram, and to reassert that he had nothing to do with Deputy Marshals. "Well," said Gen. Wingate, "we all know that whatever may be the legal form of appointment, the men who are appointed are designated by you." "That is untrue," replied Mr. Davenport, jumping to his feet. "It is untrue in fact and construction; I want that understood distinctly. I never had anything to do with the appointing of Deputy Marshals, and you know it," shaking his finger at the Tammany counsel. The latter mumbled a few unintelligible words, and then went on with Mr. Foley's examination. The substance of the telegram was that all arrested men taken to the Republican head-quarters should be brought before Mr. Davenport. Witness reached the Post Office soon after 7 o'clock, and was there all day. He detailed the Commissioner's manner of disposing of cases, and said that over four-fifths of the persons arrested were Democrats. On cross-examination, Mr. Foley said he was one of the Tammany lawyers designated in advance to assist arrested men in their examinations before the Commissioner on election day. To Mr. Wingate, witness said that, in his judgment, the arrests deterred many men from voting in his district, but he could not give any names. Commissioner Davenport asked him if he received any telegrams from John Kelly on election day. Witness replied that he sent telegrams to Kelly, but received none from him. Two telegrams were then handed to Mr. Foley, who swore positively that he never received them. Mr. Davenport stated that they were found on a table in his room, in front of which Mr. Foley had stood during the day. After some discussion they were admitted in evidence. The first was as follows:

TAMMANY HALL, NEW-YORK, Nov. 5.

To John A. Foley, Commissioner Davenport's Office, General Post Office, New-York:

Get out habeas corpus before Judge Donohue and test the question.

JOHN KELLY.

The other was the same in substance. Witness again declared that he had never seen them before, and then ex-Justice Davis Quinn was called to the stand. He testified that he was designated by Tammany Hall to look after the interests of the men arrested in the First Assembly District. He said he was appointed about July 1, 1878, on a committee to look into the question of naturalization; that committee consisted of Mr. Davenport, who told them that about 8,000 illegal and fraudulent naturalization papers were issued in 1868, and it was his duty, as far as possible, to prevent their holders from voting upon them. In his cross-examination, the ex-Justice said that the appointment of the committee was the result of a discussion in the Tammany Committee on Organization, and modestly added, "several prominent gentlemen took part in the discussion, among them myself." Witness on cross-examination, admitted that Mr. Davenport had expressed a wish to secure the holders of 1868 papers their rights, and had suggested that some method to prepare a book should immediately declare their intention to become naturalized in order that they might get new papers in time for the election of 1880. "But," added Mr. Quinn, "I don't recollect that any definite result was arrived at." The witness was then interrogated concerning various cases he had taken charge of before Commissioner Davenport, but his recollection as to details was very dim. He remembered that the Commissioner "studiously acted so as to delay matters" up to 1 o'clock, and after that disposed of the cases rapidly. To Gen. Wingate he said that the arrest of the holders of 1868 papers amounted to 7,000 to 10,000 votes, at least, to the Democratic Party.

In the afternoon Gen. Wingate called Michael Lawless, who said he voted on an 1868 paper, was arrested at 9 o'clock, discharged at 11 o'clock before Deuel, and was home again by 4 o'clock. He was one of the signers of the petition to Congress.

Gen. Martin T. McMahon then took the witness chair and said he had charge of the telegrams to Commissioner Davenport, from the Seventh Assembly District. He detailed the proceedings in two cases. He did not think the arrests were a general surprise. Many Tammany Hall anticipated it some days before election. Witness himself had considered it "a piece of bluff" up to the time of the arrests.

Thomas O'Reilly testified that he voted on 1868 papers, was arrested, discharged, and cannot a cold, which he had not got rid of yet. He said on direct examination that he came to this country in 1833, and on cross-examination he was shown an affidavit made by him to the effect that he arrived here in 1848.

Adolph Kuhmann told a similar story of arrest and discharge, and William Kelly followed him with the same story. Both had been arrested during the war. Kelly could not remember whether he had voted before his arrest or not.

Albert Pohl then took the stand, and before he left it the monotonous proceedings of the day were enlivened by the exciting fight which the newspapers had been taken from him when he registered, and on election day he tried to see Mr. Davenport to get them back so as to vote. He was not arrested. Gen. Wingate asked Mr. Davenport to let him have the witness' naturalization paper, as he wished to ask the witness some questions about it. The Commissioner handed the paper to the Tammany counsel, who asked a few unimportant questions, and then said to the witness, "You value this paper very highly, don't you?" "I do that," Pohl answered. "Then you had better take it," said the lawyer, extending the paper toward him. Commissioner Davenport sprang from his seat and rushed between the witness and Gen. Wingate. Pohl was too quick for him, however, and got hold of the paper. The Commissioner grappled him, and a lively struggle for the possession of the paper ensued, while the spectators cheered and yelled, and several shouted to the witness to "Hould on to it on his life!" Pohl did so with success, and when Congressman Frye raised his voice so as to be heard above the din, and said to the passive Democratic committeemen: "That paper is the constitution of the country, and no man has a right to do as he did." "Don't you give it up, Pohl!" yelled a man in the audience, and then Chairman Lynde woke up, and said the proceeding was improper. "Well," said Gen. Wingate, to the witness, "then you had better give the paper back to me." "Don't you do it!" yelled the crowd, and Pohl replied that he had got the paper, and was going to keep it. Mr. Frye again addressed his colleagues, and said that he should ask the committee to exclude from the room any counsel, witness, or outsider who interfered with the proceedings in such a way. "It was a disgraceful contempt of court on the part of the counsel, the witness, and the outsiders," said the Congressman. The witness was finally induced to give up the paper to Chairman Lynde, with the remark that he intended to get it back again some way. Gen. Wingate asked the Chairman to keep the paper. Commissioner Davenport protested that the paper was lawfully in his custody, subject to the action of the courts, and he wanted it. The Chairman said he would take the paper for the present, and the commit ee would decide its final disposition hereafter. Then the Tammany lawyer explained that he handed the paper to the witness upon an impulse of his generous heart, and he supposed that he had anticipated some such action, and would be careful how he allowed the Tammany lawyer to get hold of any papers hereafter. The excitement subsided somewhat, and when Michael Dooley, another of the signers of the petition to Congress, testified that he was under arrest on election day from 7:30 A. M. until 4:30 P. M. for "non-residence," and did you have anything to eat or drink during that time?" asked Gen. Wingate. "I had a glass of whisky by chance," replied the witness, "and I paid for it, too." The committee, at 4:30 o'clock, adjourned until this morning.

A RECEIVER FOR W. BELDEN & CO.

The disputes between the members of the lately-dissolved firm of William Belden & Co., stockbrokers, were finally passed upon yesterday in a decision rendered by Judge J. F. Daly, in the Court of Common Pleas, Chambers. The motion under consideration was one made on behalf of Washington E. Conner for the removal of Henry Belden, Jr., from the position of joint Receiver with the petitioner of the assets of the dissolved firm. The ground of the motion was that Belden had disobeyed the orders of the court. Judge Daly decides that a joint Receivership participated in by parties with opposing interests is productive of vexatious litigation. He therefore removes both Belden and Conner from their joint office, and appoints Mr. William J. Best as Receiver, "on account of the excellent reputation he has acquired for ability and success in administering such trusts."

THE BREWERS' AND GROCERS' BANK.

A decision was rendered yesterday by Judge Davis, in the suit of Thalmessinger against the Brewers' and Grocers' Bank for the appointment of a Receiver of the assets of that institution. Judge Davis briefly comments upon the litigious characteristics of the stockholders of the bank, and their inability to agree upon the appointment of any officer of the bank to wind up its affairs. He then appoints Thomas B. Musgrave, as "a wholly disinterested Receiver," and orders him to file a bond with two or more sureties in the penalty of $20,000.

STATE PRISON FOR LIFE.

CONVICTED OF MURDER IN THE SECOND DEGREE—THE CASE OF THE ITALIAN RAG-PICKER.

The trial of Francisco de Jeane, an Italian rag-picker, for the murder of William Pease, a truck-driver, in the tenement-house No. 10 York-street, was resumed before Judge Cowing, in the General Sessions Court, yesterday. Deputy-Coroner Miller, who made the post-mortem examination, testified to the nature of the dead man's wounds, and Officer Finnell testified to finding the knife with which the stabbing was done, outside the door of the room in which Pease received his death wounds. Counsel for the prisoner contended that the homicide had not been committed by his client, but by another Italian, named Dominic Theodore, with whom the wife of Pease was living on terms of criminal intimacy. Assistant District Attorney Rollins claimed that the prisoner's guilt had been conclusively proved. Judge Cowing, in his charge to the jury, said the last evening of the term had now been reached, and they were approaching the last stage of a case of homicide as important as any they had to try during the month. "When I took leave of this term," the Honor said, "it seems to me, as I have no doubt it does to you, that we have been engaged in the trial of issues which affect not only the personal liberty but the life itself of human beings, and I marveled the reading in the newspapers that the distinguished gentleman from Richmond County—Mr. Brooks—should have characterized in the Legislature the this court as a court of inferior jurisdiction. If the right to try such cases makes this a court of inferior jurisdiction, then it is a wonder to my mind where we may look for a court of superior jurisdiction; and certainly, I have no worse wish for that gentleman than that he may be required to act in a judicial capacity for punishment before his bar." His Honor then instructed the jury in the law of homicide, and after an hour's deliberation they returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the second degree. Judge Cowing, in passing sentence, said that the prisoner had committed a crime which formerly was punishable with death. The law, in its mercy, however, he said, has taken the crime which the prisoner had committed from the category of crimes of a capital nature, and substituted imprisonment for life. "You are a dangerous man," continued his Honor, "to walk abroad in the community, for you took the life of a human being without provocation. It is proper that you should be confined in the State Prison for the remainder of your natural life, and that is the sentence I now impose upon you."

The prisoner, who is a man of the lowest order of intellect, heard his sentence from the interpreter without moving a muscle. This is the third case involving a penalty of imprisonment for life that Judge Cowing has disposed of during this, the first term of his office. He has sentenced two murderers to imprisonment for life, and next week will be called upon to sentence Isaac Peristein, one of the East-Side "five-boys," to a similar penalty on a conviction obtained last Friday.

LABORERS RETURNING HOME.

SUFFERINGS OF MEN WHO WERE EMPLOYED ON THE MADEIRA AND MAMORE RAILROAD.

The steam-ship City of Para, which arrived yesterday from Rio Janeiro, had on board 100 laborers who had been employed on the Madeira and Mamore Railroad, but were obliged to leave, as many of them were sick, and there was no money at hand to pay them for their labor. Mr. Collins had not received the money which he expected from the English bondholders, and he instructed his agents to give $30 of the men who desired to leave written promises of payment, and transportation was furnished them to Para, where they arrived on the 16th of December. They were then in a destitute condition; a large number were sick, and, with little clothing or provisions, they found themselves among people whose language they could not speak and upon whom they had no claim. Mr. Collins' agent at Para had some $2,700, which went but a very short way toward the payment of the laborers' claims. The Brazilian steam-ship for this port was due for several weeks, and the question of how they could manage to subsist in the meantime became a serious one. Many were obliged to sleep in the streets, and but for the charity of Mr. Frederick G. Fo'd, American gentlemen residing at Para, and Mr. A. C. Prindle, the United States Consul, many of the unfortunate wanderers would have starved. Subscriptions were started and a sum was raised sufficient to provide for the men, who, for the remainder of their stay at Para, had only one meal a day, which cost their benefactors at the rate of 16 cents per each meal. In the meantime Mr. Collins telegraphed to Rio Janeiro asking that the City of Para should be prepared to take home 100 of the laborers and the City of Rio de Janeiro the remainder of them. Mr. John Roach telegraphed from Pernambuco by way of England, and word was sent from there to Para that the steamer should receive as many of the men as possible. They continued at Para, however, for a week or more after the arrival of them until Jan. 15, when the City of Para arrived and took on board her share of the men. The others are less crowded than before, and their privations are probably less, as there are fewer to be taken care of. On their arrival at this City yesterday, an agent of Mr. Collins was ready to receive them, and they were soon on their way to Philadelphia. Mr. Collins' agent is the Chief Engineer of the Road, employed by the English bondholders, was also a passenger on the City of Para. He is on his way to England on business connected with the railroad.

FORGERS SENT TO PRISON.

HOW A GANG OF THIEVES WAS BROKEN UP —THEIR CONVICTION IN GENERAL SESSIONS.

Four skillful forgers—John C. Richardson, John Jones, (alias Isaac Hoffman,) Charles H. Tischer, (alias Charles Herriman,) and Thomas Welling—perpetrated a series of check forgeries during the Summer and Autumn of 1877. They made their headquarters at the St. Charles Hotel in this City, but made occasional visits to Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, and other towns. The banks principally operated on in New-York were the Chemical, Tenth National, and Merchants' and Traders'. On Dec. 22, 1877, a fine-looking old gentleman visited the store of C. Godfrey Gunther's Sons, and purchased a seal-skin sacque for $90, stating that the garment was for his daughter, a young lady living at his country-seat in the Interior of the State. The old gentleman tendered, in payment of the sacque, what purported to be a certified check for $150 on the Chatham National Bank, drawn by Clinton R. Gorner, to the order of H. B. Howard. The check was subsequently discovered to be a forgery, and the drawers of the check myths. From the description supplied by Gunther's sons, Detective Woolsey, of the Central Office, arrested Richardson at the St. Charles Hotel, and he was promptly identified as the man who had presented the check. After his arrest, Richardson gave information which secured the arrest of Hoffman and Tischer, and Welling, but the fourth member of the gang—Welling—made his escape. Hoffman was tried before Judge Gildersleeve in the Court of General Sessions, and Tischer and Richardson, having pleaded guilty, were used as State's evidence. The foregoing facts were proved on the trial by Assistant District Attorney Lyon, and Hoffman was convicted. Yesterday the three co-inpirators were brought before Judge Gildersleeve and sentenced Hoffman to four years in State Prison; Tischer to two years and six months in the same institution, and Richardson to one year in the Penitentiary.

THE VANDERBILT ONE MILLION SUIT.

Another long argument upon legal technicalities, in the $1,000,000 suit of Cornelius J. Vanderbilt against William H. Vanderbilt, took place yesterday afternoon before Judge Landon, in the Supreme Court, Circuit, Part III. After the dismissal on Tuesday of the order to show cause why the stay of proceedings granted by Judge Davis should not be vacated, Mr. Scott Lord obtained from Judge Landon another order to show cause, which was made returnable yesterday afternoon, on the faith of an affidavit made by Mr. Lord that it was urgent to dispose of all preliminary questions, and bring the suit to trial at an early date. After listening to long arguments by Mr. Lord, for the plaintiff, and by Messrs. Henry L. Clinton, Joseph H. Choate, and William A. Beach, for the defendant, Judge Landon dismissed the order on the ground that when it was applied for no statement was made respecting the refusal of Judge Davis, on Monday last, to vacate the stay granted by him on Friday. Judge Landon said that he must assume that Judge Davis was right in his action until he knew that he was wrong, and the only way in which he could learn that he was wrong was for counsel to go before him and ask the opinion of Judge Davis, and the papers upon which it was based, submitted to him.

ASSIGNMENTS FILED YESTERDAY.

The schedule of assets and liabilities of Herman Brock, commission merchant at No. 51 Newstreet, assignor to Julius Wolff, was filed yesterday in the Court of Common Pleas. The liabilities are $117,000 11; nominal assets, $44,814 18; and real assets, $32,625. The assets and liabilities of Henry Zeltner, assignor to Joseph Kuntz, as shown by the schedule also filed in the Court of Common Pleas, are: Liabilities, $155,957 41, nominal assets, $100,419 80; and actual assets, $15,191 36. Zeltner is a brewer in One Hundred and Seventieth-street, Morrisania.

THE NEW COMMISSIONERS OF ACCOUNTS.

Mayor Cooper yesterday afternoon appointed Mr. Robert F. Hatfield as Commissioner of Accounts in place of Mr. John H. Mooney, who was removed on Tuesday last. Mr. William Pitt Shearman, who was appointed a few days ago to succeed Mr. Lindsey I. Howe, said yesterday that he would consult with his colleague, Mr. Hatfield, and begin work at once. He thought the system of book-keeping at present in use in the departments could be simplified, and in his opinion the simpler the method of keeping accounts the better it would be for the City.

COURT OF APPEALS.

ALBANY, Jan 29.—In the Court of Appeals to-day the following business was transacted: No. 34—Patrick Tierney, respondent, vs. The New-York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company, appellant; argued by Samuel Hand for appellant, and A. J. Calvin for respondent. No. 7—Celestia Meeker et al., Administrators, appellants, vs. Cordelia Wright et al., respondents; submitted. No. 10—Tamer Francis Treadwell, Administrator, &c., respondent, vs. Thomas O. Archer et al., appellants; submitted. No. 58—Charles A. Sweet, Receiver, &c., respondent, vs. Frederick Gelbt et al., appellants; argued by John Hubbell for appellants, and William H. Gurney for respondent. No. 20—The People of the Williamsburg Gas-light Company, appellant, vs. The Board of Assessors of the City of Brooklyn, respondent; argued by Edgar M. Cullen for appellant, and John H. Knaebel for respondent.

The following is the day calendar for Thursday, Jan. 30: Nos. 12, 11, 72, 13, 21, 24, 57, 59.

DECISIONS IN THE COURTS.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

By Judge Davis.

Thalmessinger vs. The Brewers' and Grocers' Bank.—Motion granted. Memorandum.

By Judge Barrett.

Motion for an Extra Allowance Denied.—McCarthy vs. The Committee on Fellowship, Ordination and Discipline of the New-York State Convention of Universalists.

Dismission in Bankruptcy.—Motion granted.

Cook vs. Jenkins.—Order entered.

In the Matter of Mulley, &c.—Memorandum.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

By Judge Lawrence.

The People ex rel. Campbell vs. Campbell, &c.—Order staying proceedings granted.

By Judge Van Vorst.

Clarke vs. The Mutual Life Insurance Company.—Granted.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

By Judge Sedgwick.

Sewell vs. Ives.—Memorandum.

Siegel et al. vs. T. e La e Shore, &c. Railroad Company.—Order amending order of Jan. 13.

Davis vs. The Christopher and Tenth-Street Railroad Company.—Order of discontinuance.

Cooper vs. Matthews et al. vs. Salter; Manson vs. Schneffin et al.

Commission Ordered.—Hirsch vs. The Lake Shore, &c., Railroad Company; same vs. Same; Boehm vs. Morch.

Hoe vs. Miner.—Order of discontinuance.

Hinrichs vs. Holberton et al.—Order of discontinuance.

Orders Granted.—Robinson vs. Lawless; Watkins vs. Weller; Thyer vs. Thyer; Weitz vs. We

INDEX TO CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS.

AMUSEMENTS—Seventh Page—6th and 7th cols.
BANKRUPTNOTICES—Sixth Page—6th & 7th cols.
BOARDING AND LODGING—Seventh Page—5th col.
BUSINESS CHANCES—Seventh Page—4th col.
BUSINESS NOTICES—Fifth Page—6th and 7th cols.
CITY HOUSES TO LET—Seventh Page—1st & 2d cols.
CITY ITEMS—Fifth Page—6th col.
CITY REAL ESTATE—Seventh Page—1st col.
COAL AND WOOD—Seventh Page—3d col.
COPARTNERSHIP NOTICES—Seventh Page—4th col.
COUNTRY REAL ESTATE—Seventh Page—1st col.
DANCING—Seventh Page—3d col.
DEATHS—Fifth Page—7th col.
DIVIDENDS—Seventh Page—5th col.
DRY GOODS—Seventh Page—6th col.
ELECTIONS—Seventh Page—5th col.
FINANCIAL—Seventh Page—4th col.
FURNISHED ROOMS—Seventh Page—5th col.
HELP WANTED—Sixth Page—6th col.
HORSES, CARRIAGES, &c.—Seventh Page—7th col.
INSTRUCTION—Seventh Page—7th col.
LECTURES—Seventh Page—7th col.
LEGAL NOTICES—Seventh Page—6th col.
MARRIAGES—Fifth Page—7th col.
MEETINGS—Seventh Page—7th col.
MISCELLANEOUS—Seventh Page—5th col.
MUSICAL—Seventh Page—3d col.
NEW PUBLICATIONS—Fifth Page—7th col.
RAILROADS—Seventh Page—3d col.
REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION—Seventh Page—1st col.
REWARDS—Seventh Page—7th col.
ROOMS WANTED—Seventh Page—5th col.
SHIPPING—Seventh Page—2d and 3d cols.
SITUATIONS WANTED—Sixth Page—5th & 6th cols.
SPECIAL NOTICES—Fifth Page—7th col.
STEAM-BOATS—Seventh Page—7th col.
STORES, &c., TO LET—Seventh Page—2d col.
TEACHERS—Seventh Page—7th col.

The New-York Times.

NEW-YORK, THURSDAY, JAN. 30, 1879.

AMUSEMENTS THIS EVENING.

FIFTH-AVENUE THEATRE.—Dr. Clyde.
BOOTH'S THEATRE.—The Danites.
WALLACK'S THEATRE.—Ours.
UNION-SQUARE.—Banker's Daughter.
PARK THEATRE.—Dot.
STANDARD THEATRE.—H. M. S. Pinafore.
BROADWAY THEATRE.—King Lear.
LYCEUM THEATRE.—H. M. S. Pinafore.
NIBLO'S GARDEN.—Hero.
THEATRE COMIQUE.—Vaudeville.
THE AQUARIUM.—Afternoon and Evening.
SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS.—Minstrelsy.
AMERICAN MUSEUM.—Curiosities.
COOPER INSTITUTE.—Billiard Tournament.
CHICKERING HALL.—Symphony Concert.
ASSOCIATION HALL.—Lecture.
STEINWAY HALL.—At 2.—Concert Rehearsal.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

TERMS, POSTAGE PAID.

The Daily Times, per annum, including the Sunday Edition $12 00
The Daily Times, per annum, exclusive of the Sunday Edition 10 00
The Sunday Edition, per annum 2 00
The Semi-Weekly Times, per annum 2 50
The Weekly Times, per annum 1 00

BRANCH OFFICES OF THE TIMES

The Times Up-town Office—No. 1,238 Broadway.
Paris Office of The Times—No. 39 Rue de Lafayette.
The Times is on sale in London at No. 449 Strand, W. C., from Henry F. Gillig & Co., and at Mr. Stevens', No. 4 Trafalgar-square.

The Signal Service Bureau report indicates for to-day in this region, partly cloudy weather and slowly rising temperature; winds mostly from north to west, and no decided change in barometer.

There is something pathetic in the persistence with which Mr. Potter's committee clings to the suspicion that there is fraud hidden in the political dispatches of the Republicans. "I know there must be something wrong here," reiterates Mr. Potter, anxiously putting his head into dust-bins and waste-baskets, apparently ignorant of the huge Democratic scandal which looms up just behind him. The committee are still lingering over the Tyner dispatches, and have only just now come to the conclusion that there is nothing in them. If the Democratic members could only make up their minds to face this miserable business like men, and have done with it as speedily as possible, they might regain popular respect

Both parties in the State Legislature appear to be devoting a good deal of attention to the struggle over the New-York Custom-house appointments. The names of forty-six Republican members of Assembly have been affixed to a petition in favor of the confirmation of Mr. Merritt as Collector of the Port, and all the Democratic Senators, with the addition of the Lieutenant-Governor, have united in a similar request. Among the reasons alleged by the Republicans who favor the Administration nominee for Collector are these: It is desirable to remind Senator Conkling that he cannot pursue for the next six years the merely personal ends to which his present term has been devoted; the "harmony" of the party is of more consequence than the question of whether the President or Mr. Conkling shall control the Federal appointments in New-York; the dispute should not be left open till the 4th of March, after which the decision of the question will be in the hands of the Democrats. It does not appear what were the arguments which moved the Democratic Senators to request Mr. Kernan to vote for the confirmation of Mr. Merritt, but it may safely be assumed that they did not include any of those above stated. The Albany statesmen, who have taken a hand in this controversy, fail to perceive that the real question at issue is not one between Hayes and Conkling, Arthur and Merritt, or partisan harmony and discord. It is whether a public officer shall be removed without cause, whether a reputation for honesty and ability shall be at the mercy of any one who can furnish charges to afford a pretext for the exercise of the Executive's power of suspension. It is quite possible to be disgusted with the taste and temper with which Mr. Conkling conducts this and cognate discussions, while, at the same time, recognizing the necessity of indignantly protesting against the way in which the President throws principle and common fairness to the winds in sustaining his side of the case.

No better proof of the rapid progress toward political stability in France could be desired than the calmness with which the succession to the Presidency is canvassed, on the eve of the probable resignation of Marshal MacMahon. The Republican programme of purging the public service of all persons distinctly inimical to the perpetuation of the Republic extended to the higher commands in the Army, where it is very obviously necessary to have men who are loyal to the established order of government. The President evidently regards military fitness as the first and last requisite for the chief officers of the Army, and absolutely refuses to concede that political leanings can be taken into account at all. Hence the disagreement which bids fair to end in his resignation and the election of M. Grevy or some other moderate Republican as President till 1880. To-day's dispatches contradict previous reports as to the impending breach between the majority in the Chamber and the Ministry, and give a very instructive insight into the entirely unique position of the French Legislature among representative assemblies. It will take up the executive power which Marshal MacMahon may surrender, and it will confer that power on his successor without any necessity of appealing to the people, on the one hand, or of deferring to the wishes of either the outgoing or incoming President, on the other. The National Assembly is sovereign, and the man who controls its action is the true ruler of France.

Mr. Jay Gould is one of the very few American financiers whose misfortunes will be generally regarded as a public gain. For the foundations of Mr. Gould's fortune were laid in the plunder of confiding investors, and the additions to his wealth have come from loss and disaster of which he was to a great extent the cause. This representative "wrecker" in American enterprise chose to bet heavily against resumption when all the resources of the country were tending to accelerate it; he has persisted in betting that stocks would go down at a time when the surplus capital of the country is pouring into railroad and other investments, with the natural consequence of sending stocks up. That Mr. Gould has been, in the language of Wall-street, very tightly "squeezed," seems to be generally admitted; that he is staggering under a load which, ere long, must crush him, is the opinion of several persons who are tolerably familiar with his affairs. The permanent restoration of confidence would certainly be rendered more secure by the compulsory retirement from business of Mr. Jay Gould.

Formal charges against the County Clerk have at length been presented to the Governor, and Mr. Gumbleton has been ordered to show cause on the 10th of February why he should not be removed from office. The charges include omissions to comply with the law by failing to keep an exact account of the fees and emoluments of his office, and disregard of the law in demanding for services larger fees than it allows. Other specifications as to his refusal to permit an inspection of his books, and his failure to lodge with the Controller a proper account of his monthly receipts, make up the general indictment on which the Governor is called upon to act. It is to be hoped that the Executive will permit the interposition of no unnecessary delays, either in this case or in that of the Register, and that the committee of the Bar Association will now find time to prepare their charges against the Sheriff likewise.

INFLATION IN CANADA.

The paper-money craze has extended to Canada. A St. Catherine's dispatch informs us that a National Currency League has been formed there, that its object is "to induce the Government to issue a supply of paper money," and that "many leading merchants" are enlisted in the movement. We had previously noticed allusions in Ottawa correspondence to an alleged popular feeling in favor of the issue by the Government of sufficient currency to provide for the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railroad. So strong is this feeling, according to one writer, that it commands the attention of politicians and has the sympathy of at least two members of the Dominion Government. What connection exists between the St. Catherine's league and the Ottawa agitation, we are not told. Their general ideas, however, are identical. One asks for a supply of paper money, and the other shows how such money may be forced into circulation. But its attributes are not explained. That it is to be convertible into something we infer from a remark that of the hundred millions, or thereabout, which will be required on account of the Pacific Road, not more than 75 per cent. will return for redemption; the missing 25 per cent., it is assumed, will be lost or destroyed, and will represent the gain accruing to the Government from the transaction. On the other hand, the warm advocacy of a paper currency which is noted as a feature of the St. Catherine's meeting is suggestive of our Greenbackers' aversion to convertibility. The "leading merchants" may be disciples of the Butlerian philosophy, which seeks as the perfection of finance an inconvertible currency whose worthlessness will obviate the risk of a drain for the benefit of outside barbarians.

"If the thing goes on at this rate," says one of the Ottawa writers, "the two political parties must soon pronounce on the subject." For the credit of Canada, we hope this does not mean that the two parties are waiting to see how the project is received before declaring for or against it. No movement can be imagined that would call for more prompt or more decisive treatment. The protectionist craze which recently swept the Dominion was sufficiently discreditable, both as regards the motives which led politicians to foster it and the confusion of purposes which was apparent in the councils of its promoters. But the impending tariff policy, whether it take the form of consistent protection, aimed alike at England and the United States, or whether it be an embodiment of the retaliatory notion, directed solely against the United States, is a delusion not necessarily productive of great disaster. It is more likely to prove embarrassing to the politicians who profited by demands which they cannot satisfy, and to the manufacturers, who expect more from the Government than they can by any possibility obtain, than to operate very injuriously upon American interests. The delusion will be dissipated, the politicians who fostered it will reap their reward, and the Dominion will apply itself to the recovery of lost ground. The financial craze now in motion, if it acquire strength enough to dictate a policy to the Parliament, will be much more formidable. It will run a course substantially like that from which this country is slowly emerging, with results as ruinous as have been apparent here, and offering the same obstacles to the re-establishment of a sound financial system. One may laugh at the attempt to make Canada prosperous by sacrificing the farmers to increase the profits of manufacturers, and by making war on trade with the United States. But a scheme for making Canadians rich by the issue of inconvertible notes—by a process of inflation, in fact, with the inevitable collapse—is too pregnant with evil to be treated lightly. The support it receives shows how slightly Canadians have profited by our experience.

There is probably a close connection between the two schemes. Both originate in the stagnation of Canada's trade, the prostration of its industries, and the depreciation in value of its real estate. The credit of the Dominion suffers from a constant increase of its debt; municipalities have assumed burdens that frighten the tax-payers; and the transactions of numberless loan societies are evidence of the extent to which real estate is mortgaged. Foreclosure is useless because, in the majority of cases, property cannot be sold for the amount of the mortgage. These facts account for the credence given to the sophistry and the extravagant promises of protectionist politicians at the general election. They also help to explain the aversion widely felt with regard to the enormous increase of Dominion indebtedness consequent upon the prosecution of the Pacific Railroad scheme. Out of this aversion, probably, grows the proposition to issue currency for the building of the road, instead of incurring further debt. If this currency be made legal tender, the financial fabric—not now too strong, as the dealings in bank shares show—will be rudely shaken. If not legal tender, it must have some guaranteed purchasing power to commend it to contractors. It may be receivable for taxes, for Customs duties, for public lands. Invested with these qualities, its issue will inflate a currency already amply sufficient for legitimate business purposes. We suspect, indeed, that inflation is the end which the "many leading merchants" of St. Catherine's have in view. Not content with clamoring for law-made prosperity in the shape of a protective tariff, they want to make assurance doubly sure by a large issue of Government paper. Only let it get into circulation and everybody will be prosperous! Trade will be brisk, prices will rise, real estate will go up like a balloon, and all Canada will be happy! It has been the boast of Canadians that while on our side of the line a baneful financial system prevailed, on theirs a reasonably sound system was maintained. Unless the politicians in power display more principle and courage than were apparent in the conduct of a protectionist canvass, the boast will not be tenable much longer. They must stamp out the tendency to inflation, or inflation will yield trouble which Canada is poorly prepared to meet.

THE GREAT CIPHER JOKE.

If it should be established that the late Democratic candidate for the Presidency was a party to a conspiracy to buy one or more Electoral votes, every honest American citizen would feel humiliated. If it should be proved that the near and intimate friends of that candidate were guilty of an attempt at bribery, and that their plans were laid to secure the Presidential office by the corrupt use of money, every fair-minded man would admit that there had been exposed a great scandal, the consequences of which would reflect upon the people of the United States. In such a case, all partisan advantage, real or imaginary, would be lost sight of in the depth of the disgrace which every citizen would deplore. It would be impossible for the American name to be cleared by any attempt to put the responsibility for such a felonious act upon individuals or parties. Tilden, Pelton, Marble, and the entire band of alleged conspirators are American political managers. The Democratic Party is one of the great political organizations of the American Republic. Their crimes, if they have committed any, are not only offenses against public morality, but they are offenses for which the American people will be held responsible.

It is not necessary that we should here discuss the evidence produced to sustain the charges and implications laid at the door of the managers of Mr. Tilden's campaign. It is enough to know that it is alleged that these men did attempt to corrupt Presidential Electors in several States. To sustain these allegations, reliance is placed on certain telegraphic dispatches which passed between the Democratic managers during the time immediately succeeding the November election of 1876, and before the organization of the Electoral Commission. These telegrams were mostly in cipher. They went from the telegraph company's custody into that of a committee of the Senate. They were not used, and William E. Chandler, a small and noisy politician, got his hands upon them after they had been neglected by the Senate committee. It is evident that Chandler did not know precisely what kind of explosive material, if any, was contained in these cipher dispatches. But at that time he was engaged in wreaking his little revenges upon some of the members of his own political party. He had his private grudges to gratify, his personal griefs to assuage. So he carried the telegrams to B. F. Butler, for whom he avowed a preference over other members of the committee, because "he was the only member who was willing to investigate the Wormley conference." This so-called Wormley conference, as the reader knows, was largely an invention of Mr. W. E. Chandler's imagination. If the so-called cipher dispatches could be made to throw any light on the alleged proceedings of that conference, Chandler was most anxious that they should be opened. If they could be used to the damage of persons in the Republican Party to whom Chandler was unfriendly, he would be glad to know it. Therefore, he carried them to B. F. Butler, who sympathized with "the political tramp" in many of his personal animosities.

Having belittled the whole case bound up in the bundle of cipher dispatches, by treating it as a matter to be used for his personal advantage, Chandler despairing of gaining any immediate profit from it, sent the package to the Tribune. They were deciphered; and that was more than Chandler could do with them. But, having given what seems a true key to the cryptogramic messages, the Tribune proceeded to treat the whole matter with the giddy levity of a school-girl. Here was unraveled what seemed to be an infamous political conspiracy—a conspiracy against the dearest rights of the American citizen, a conspiracy to undermine the foundations of the Government, corrupt the fountains of power, and destroy the operation of popular suffrage. The Tribune, elated with the possession of information of which it was the accidental depository, printed the scandal with giggles of delight. To sober people, the unearthing of such a disgraceful plot as this seemed, was a matter to be sorry and indignant over. The Tribune, from the first until now, has treated it as a great joke. While other people have felt humiliated by revelations which must needs have been made, the newspaper which published them has perpetually grinned through a horse-collar. Taking leave of all semblance of dignity, it has, each morning, begun its daily gabble with, "How do you feel by this time, Moses?" or some such witty thrust at "the coparceners."

So it has come to pass, after months of silly and undignified treatment of what was once a serious matter, that most men have grown heartily sick of it all. The reader of the Tribune, when he has encountered the usual mysterious rubbish about "Copenhagen" and "Denmark," or "Manton Moses Marble," with a guffaw in parenthesis, has turned the page with a qualm of disgust. It is fortunate for the men accused of this conspiracy that the evidence against them has fallen into such trifling hands. The contemptible demagogue to whom Chandler first gave it, for reasons of his own, made no use of the bundle of evidence. The political tramp, who, by a mysterious dispensation of Providence, was allowed to nurse this scandal under his ragged reputation, dropped it in despair. And it is not the fault of the Tribune if the cipher business is not to-day regarded as a trifling and worn-out joke by all who have ever heard of it.

PROF. WALKER ON THE SILVER CONFERENCES.

The report of the American Commission to the Monetary Conference of 1878 was not a very satisfactory document. There was an air of depression and defeat about it, as if its authors were weary of their work, and ashamed of its result, and would like to get away with as little notice as possible. It is now supplemented by an article from Prof. Francis A. Walker, in the Princeton Review, which, without going into a narrative of the conference, seeks to give some explanation of its failure to do anything, some critical opinion of the consequences of the failure, and some indication of the various lines of action which are left open to the United States. The article is valuable, interesting, and, in many regards, sensible, which the report was not. Prof. Walker is a firm believer in bi-metalism. He accepts, apparently without reserve, the theory that a country like France, by maintaining free coinage of both metals at a rate somewhere near their market value, could prevent any serious fluctuation in either. He frankly claims that the maintenance of this policy by France in 1857 prevented the consequences of a gold panic. "The new supplies from California and Australia poured in like a flood, and still the French Mints remained open." "The greatest consternation pervaded mercantile and banking circles, but the French statesmen stood by the law, took gold, gave silver, and thus brought the commercial world through what threatened to be one of the gravest crises of history." "The pluck and faith of the men at the head of affairs kept gold and silver near to their traditional ratio of $15\frac{1}{2}$ to 1. As Prof. Jevons states it, the maximum variation never exceeded $4\frac{3}{4}$ per cent., and the whole permanent effect of the discharge of the Californian and Australian gold by hundreds of millions into the circulation of Europe was to change the silver price of that metal but $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent." Prof. Walker thinks it "not unreasonable" to believe that France could in like manner have stemmed the consequences of German demonetization of silver, of the sudden increase in production in Nevada, and of the fall in the demand for India.

France, however, did not dare to try the experiment, and first restricted and then suspended the coinage of silver. It was to meet the situation thus produced that the Monetary Conference of 1878 was called by the United States Government. Its specific results amounted to little, and are already known. Prof. Walker regards the motives which controlled its action as more political than economical. The most important consideration in the mind of the French Cabinet, he thinks, was the fear of alienating Belgium and driving it into closer affiliation with England and Germany. Owing to a recent change in the majority of the Belgian Parliament, a mono-metalist was placed at the head of affairs. The adhesion of that Government to any bimetallic recommendations by the conference was not to be expected, nor could the Latin Union, consisting of France, Belgium, Switzerland, and Italy, be maintained if an unreserved policy of bi-metalism had been announced by France. Without averring that, but for this motive, France would have agreed to a bi-metallic programme, Prof. Walker thinks that this had much to do with preventing it. It may be so, but whatever the motive, the fact remains. There is very little substantial evidence that a bi-metallic policy will in the immediate future obtain any practical aid from any important European power. It would be worse than folly, it would be criminally obstinate and wrong-headed, to shape the policy of the United States with reference to any such hope.

What the course of the United States should be, Prof. Walker thinks depends upon the end which we wish to reach. If we "hold as a people, that something should be done to restore silver to the place from which it has been cast down by the action of Germany," we should "stop the coinage of silver but accumulate silver bullion in the Treasury to an equal or greater value" than that of the coinage now required or allowed by law. "To coin silver in considerable amount at the ratio of 16 to 1 is not to help but to hurt the cause." European countries will not adopt that ratio, and the more silver that is coined according to it the more difficult it will be to get a uniform ratio.

It is evident from this that Prof. Walker, who is the most candid and intelligent bi-metalist in the United States—who may almost be said to be the only one who unites intelligence with candor—will give no aid to the scheme which is unquestionably the next one in order from the silver leaders—that of unlimited coinage. We have already had occasion to point out that the Silver bill receives not the slightest approval from European bi-metalists. It is unfortunate for the silver movement in this country that the only economists who are inclined to give their authority to the principles on which it is professedly based, find themselves compelled to condemn everything which is done or intended to carry these principles into effect.

SCIENTIFIC BILLIARDS.

The general interest shown in the billiard tournament now in progress in this City gives evidence of the growing popularity of this most scientific of games. When we speak of the game as "scientific," we do not pretend that the professional players, who display such marvelous expertness in manipulating the ivory balls with the end of a cue, have any comprehension of the laws of force and motion which they are continually bringing into play. With them it is very little a matter of study, and very much a matter of practice. They acquire their skill by no theoretical mastery of principles, but by prolonged and persevering experiment, in which success is the sole criterion of correctness. They learn by trial and the succession of failures and successes involved in it, to attain the movements, in force and direction, which will produce the results aimed at. Nevertheless, underneath the exercise of skill which constitutes the game are purely scientific principles, interesting to the student of mathematics and physics, and from this fact may be derived in some measure the almost universal fascination of billiards. It is, moreover, a game generally wholesome for mind and body, giving both that degree of exercise that is pleasurable and not wearying. The sole objection that can be brought against it is derived from its associations, the bar-room and loafing-place atmosphere which too often surrounds it, and its availability for the uses of the gambler. The latter source of objection is comparatively fruitless, as, to most players, the attractions of the game itself are a sufficient incitement, and the gambler can only use it, as he does walking and riding, as a subject for betting on matches between experts. The other ground of objection has greatly diminished, and is still diminishing, as the billiard-table comes more and more in use in reputable clubs and in dwellings, for the private entertainment of those who make their own social surroundings.

The tournament affords an opportunity to mark the extraordinary advance of the game of billiards in the last few years in the matter of scientific play and the development of professional skill. It does not require a long memory to recall the old-fashioned game with four balls, on a table with six pockets, in which there were so many ways of counting and so much scope for chance. With the simplification of the game by removing the pockets and counting only plain caroms, and all alike, science has become more prominent in the play, and it has at the same time grown more attractive. When the three-ball French carom game was attained, it was thought to be the acme of progress in billiards, but there now appears plainly the need of still further improvement. In the present tournament some of the games that promised to be most brilliant, and were certainly pitched between the most expert players, have been reduced to comparative dullness, and made no fair criterion of skill, by the vicious but thus far altogether legitimate practice of "nursing" the balls. It is true that "nursing" requires skill. It involves a certain accuracy and delicacy of touch that is not easily attained. But it is, after all, a knack, a clever trick, that may be acquired by persistent practice, and when attained it makes the game depend almost wholly on working the balls into a favorable position, and tapping them in monotonous fashion along the cushion and around the table. To the unpracticed hand, it is no doubt extremely difficult to keep them together and work them along in this unattractive way, but one may neglect everything else to acquire this skillful trick, and once master of it, he may defy the most brilliant player over the general field. When two-thirds of the game can thus be carried in a single "run," there is little chance for an opponent who is not equally good at "nursing," however he may excel in more brilliant, more scientific, and really more difficult play.

Some of the beaten players in recent games at the Cooper Institute were unquestionably superior to the victors in what may be called exhibition or display shots. They could show a mastery over the balls in difficult caroms and position-play in which the others could not approach them, and yet they had not the trick of "nursing," and must needs stand and see the game carried to a point of tremendous odds against them, with a display of skill in only a single point, and that of an inferior order. In fact, "nursing" threatens to spoil a game the most beautiful and scientific, and, withal, about the least objectionable of all with which men are wont to amuse themselves. Of course, it will hardly spoil it for ordinary players, who are not likely to devote themselves to mastering the trick by which its science and its beauty are so largely eliminated, but it will take away the attraction of match games between experts, and reduce the championship to an evidence of superiority in the exercise of that trick alone. How, then, is this difficulty in the way of progress in scientific billiards to be removed? This is a question for the experts and not for the critical on-lookers, but among the suggestions that seem most promising is one in favor of another step forward in getting rid of comparatively easy and unskillful shots, by barring in match games of the highest order all direct caroms, and requiring a cushion to be taken in every successful hit.

The City of Boston has recently discovered, to its cost, that outside, as well as within its limits, a wealthy municipality is considered a legitimate object to prey upon. Some time since, the Bostonians thought it advisable to increase their water supply, and for this purpose obtained the right to take a large quantity of swampland, located on both sides of the Sudbury River, in the Town of Framingham, about 20 miles from the city. This has been legally seized, and the space has been converted into great water-basins, around which curbings of masonry have been placed. To uninterested persons the change has appeared to be in the direction of an improvement to the township, particularly to property in the vicinity of the reservoirs; for what was formerly unsightly waste land, has been transformed into lakes of water which are of sufficient size to make one forget their artificial origin. This, however, is not the opinion formed by the previous owners of the land. They claim that the change has deprived them of property of great prospective value, and that they have had to sacrifice many cherished landmarks and associations of the past. It is on this basis that their demands for money damages are computed, and in cases that have been brought before the courts they have somehow managed to make good their claim. One recent decision may be given as an example. A man whose entire estate, including his residence and outbuildings, was taxed for $23,000, was awarded about $20,000, in consequence of the taking of some swamp land, which, in making up the above-given tax valuation, was rated as worth not over $3,000. Still another unsettled claim is that made by the owner of an upland pasture, beneath which, at a depth of 90 feet, a tunnel has been constructed which is to contain the conduit used for bringing the water into the city.

As might be expected, the California papers comment on the passage of the Anti-Chinese bill by the House as a purely political measure. The Democrats are elated that their party has the credit of this stroke of policy, and the Republicans, while they approve the bill, think that the Republican Senate can divide the honors by following the example of the House. The Sacramento Union alone has the courage to denounce the bill as it deserves; and the astute Kearney fitly characterizes it as "a political dodge." The sand-lot orator probably represents the average voter.

The contemplated resignation of Archbishop Purcell, of Cincinnati, has excited public curiosity in Roman Catholic circles as to his successor, in the event of its acceptance. The name of Bishop Chatard, of Columbus, Ohio, has been frequently mentioned, but he declares that there is no foundation for existing rumors, and that the Archbishop is altogether likely to continue in office during life. The assumption that the Bishop of Vincennes, Ind., might be selected for the vacant archiepiscopate is said to be erroneous, for his diocese is not, as has been represented, the first in the Province of Cincinnati in age, importance, or Catholic population. That province consists of seven bishopries in the following order of rank: Louisville, Cincinnati, Detroit, Vincennes, Cleveland, Fort Wayne, Columbus, and stands among the 11 Provinces under Cardinal McCloskey about as the Columbus diocese stands in the Cincinnati Province. The present Archbishop was consecrated Bishop 45 years ago, and his longevity is regarded as remarkable by Catholics, who say that priests in this country seldom last long. The Archbishop explains his hale old age by simple fare, early retiring and rising, continual employment, and abundant out-door exercise. Until very recently he has always walked in the City in all weathers, very rarely taking a carriage, except to save time.

A bill has been introduced into the United States Senate by Mr. McDonald, which authorizes the President "to nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint Spruille Braden an Ensign in the Navy, to take position at the foot of the list of Ensigns on the active list." The young gentleman whom it is thus intended to commission into the Navy is the American lad who late last Summer graduated from one of her Majesty's naval colleges with the highest attainable honors. In a class numbering nearly 100, and composed almost exclusively of young Britons, Master Braden was the only one from the United States, as indeed he was the first boy from this country ever admitted to an English nautical college. For three long years he struggled alone and, so to speak, unaided against a class in a land where naval heroes are born and bred, and where sailors seem almost indigenous to the soil. In course of time the examinations were begun, and it was soon known that young Braden was far ahead of all others in the graduating class, and was bound to carry off all the honors. The first, and most coveted, prize was a grand gold medal, valued at $500, and sent personally by Queen Victoria, "to be awarded to the boy who shows the qualities likely to make the finest sailor." These, she added, "consist of cheerful submission to superiors, self-respect, and independence of character, kindness and protection to the weak, readiness to forgive offense, desire to conciliate the differences of others, and, above all, fearless devotion to duty, and unflinching truthfulness." To win this prize a Cadet had not only to gain the indorsement of the Captain of the ship and his Professors, but also the good-will of his fellows, as each one on board had a voice in its bestowal. This prize was awarded to Braden by an almost unanimous vote. Several other first-class prizes fell to his lot, and the only one he left untouched was a Midshipman's warrant in the Royal Navy. This he won, and it would have been given to him had he claimed it; but his loyalty to his own country prevented his doing anything of the sort. This course met with the hearty approval of the boy's countrymen, and this is perhaps the main reason why Senators and Representatives of all parties are now working for the passage of a bill, the substance of which we have already quoted. They hold, and very properly, too, that a young man who graduates with the highest honors in a British nautical college, and who is patriotic enough to refuse a Midshipman's position in the greatest Navy in the world, is fully entitled to an Ensigncy in the American service.

The effect of the existing business depression upon the coal trade of Great Britain is in some respects exactly the reverse of what most persons would suppose it to be. It is well known that many manufactories have been shut down, that only a comparatively small amount of iron is now made, and that steam-ship companies and other large consumers have not of late needed as much coal as they formerly required. Hence, the natural supposition would be that a marked falling off in amount would be shown in the out-put of coal. So far from this being the case, the quantity mined each year since 1874, in Great Britain, has steadily increased, and is now larger than it ever has been before. It must not be understood by this that the coal trade has passed untouched through the general mercantile blight, for few branches of business have suffered more severely; only the loss has not shown itself in a diminution of production. Instead of this, it has borne down heavily on wages, profits, and the number of men to whom employment could be given. In 1873 the coal-miners in the north of England were able to earn from three to four dollars a day, which, considering the purchasing power of money in England, was exceedingly good pay. The reader may remember that at the time there were several burlesque illustrations in Punch, in which the opulence of the coal-miners was contrasted with the penury of the clergy and gentry. But this has been wholly changed, and the average wages at the present time are but very little over one dollar per diem; or, if we take the aggregate reduction into account, the miners received in pay during the year just past $130,000,000 less than in the year 1873. Besides this, more work has been exacted from the laborer. Formerly, the average number of tons raised by each man in a year was 223, but last year it was 274. And for this reason, although the out-put was exceedingly large, there were fewer men employed than during several previous years. Of course, this diminution could not have occurred without entailing an immense amount of physical suffering, for which there is no immediate prospect of relief. The grievances of those who own or lease mines are less calculated to draw upon one's sympathies, but when it is said that they have been obliged to meet a decline in annual net income of not less than $75,000,000, it will be seen that they have real and weighty sorrows.

TRUSTEES ACCUSED OF RASCALITY.

Troy, N. Y., Jan. 29.—Isaac Smith, the Special Examiner appointed by Superintendent Lamb to inquire particularly into the connection of D. Thomas Vail and Daniel Robinson with the suspended Merchants' and Mechanics' Bank, the bankrupt Schaghticoke Woolen Mills, the Troy and Boston Railroad, and the Troy Savings Bank, submits a startling report. The first-named bank is alleged to have been insolvent for 12 years. The Cashier says that he swore to false statements under assurance from Robinson that he would be protected. The Examiner finds several persons whose names were signed to notes for $50,000 each, which notes were put in the bank by Robinson or Vail. These persons say their signatures were forged. The report says that the Troy Savings Bank claim of $65,000 is not preferred, and that only a trifling percentage will be paid. The money was procured from the savings bank by virtue of a contract made by Vail's and Robinson's influence, while they were interested in the management of both banks. Several clerks of the Troy and Boston Railroad, who had saved a few thousand dollars each, were induced by Robinson to sign notes in blank, which he afterward filled for large amounts, and deposited in the Merchants' Bank. They will be ruined. Superintendent Lamb will apply next week for an order removing Robinson from his position as Trustee of the savings bank.

NEW-JERSEY LEGISLATION.

HOW GOV. M'CLELLAN ESTABLISHES A NON-PARTISAN JUDICIARY—A LITTLE TRICK UNCOVERED—INVESTIGATION OF THE ACCOUNTS OF CORRUPT LOCAL OFFICERS.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 29.—The first joint meeting of the session was held to-day. It was for the election of a State Treasurer and Director of the United Railroads. The Directorship is a mere nominal position—worth two or three dinners a year and a pass—and the main struggle was, of course, over the State Treasurership. John Hill, who was Mr. Phelps' predecessor in Congress, James L. Hayes, of Newark, and George M. Wright, the present incumbent, were the principal aspirants for the Republican nomination. On the first ballot in the Republican caucus Mr. Wright received 22 of 44 votes, Mr. Hayes 13, and Mr. Hill 9. On the second ballot Mr. Wright was accorded the nomination. C. A. Butts received the nomination for the other position on the first ballot. The joint session was held only to carry out the Republican programme. Senator Sewell presided, and Senator Hobart nominated to the joint meeting the persons selected by the Republican caucus, and they were elected, of course. The Democrats placed before the convention the name of William P. McMichael, of Burlington, for Treasurer, and of William Patterson for Director. Mr. Wright enters upon his second term on April 1.

The agitation over the Governor's nominations for Law and Lay Judges continues. The Democratic Senators—some of them, at least—charge the Governor with having played them false. That to his party friends the Governor has awarded the only two places worth the taking—the Presiding Judgeships in Essex and Mercer Counties—does not satisfy their party greed. They wanted all of the Lay Judgeships as well, and the fact that Gov. McClellan has distributed these places of little honor or profit among the Republicans has aroused their most bitter animosities. Some of the Senators even go so far as to charge the Governor with falsehood. He is said to have promised them that in no Democratic count, would he assist to place Republicans on the Bench. Set Fry, who is placed before the Senate for Law Judge, and other nominees for other Democratic counties, are Republicans. Nor are the Republicans entirely pleased with the list of nominees. But they are struggling to maintain a principle, and their quoted expounder is the worthy Chief Executive himself. It now appears that when the Governor sent in the list of nominees, he also sent a letter commending himself to the Senators for his wondrous generosity. He did not say that he had been induced to nominate Republicans for the little places so as to insure the confirmation of his Democratic nominees for the big places, but he placed his concession to the Republicans on "high moral grounds." For the first time in the history of the State, he wrote, it became the duty of the Executive to declare whether the judiciary should be non-partisan or a political machine. He enunciated his adherence to the principle of non-partisan judiciary, and had with that view sent in the nomination which accompanied the letter. If the Republicans had been animated by a proper spirit of gratitude, they would have confirmed the nominations at once. But they wisely stopped to inquire whether the Governor had, indeed, carried out the principle so ostentatiously announced. To this delay may be ascribed the discovery that the nomination of Ludlow McCarter for Law Judge of Essex, and of J. H. Stuart for Law Judge of Mercer, leaves the Republicans without representation on the Bench in those two Republican counties. The nomination of Democrats for Lay Judges in Monmouth and Middlesex makes the Bench in these two counties exclusively Democratic, also. The Republican Senators thought that the Governor might not have been aware of the effect of his nominations in these counties, and a committee of Senators waited upon him. The Governor only assured it that he considered that the Presiding Judgeships were the legitimate spoils of his party, and that the great principles of a non-partisan judiciary will be observed only where it does not interfere with Democratic rights. So the matter stands this evening. The Senators on both sides of the Chamber will discuss the matter in caucus next week, and, notwithstanding the dissatisfaction, the nominations will probably be confirmed.

Early in the session Mr. McDonald, of Hudson, introduced a bill reducing carriages from 3 to 2 cents. Speaker Jackson sent it to the Committee on Judiciary. This afternoon the Committee on Railroads and Canals reported it favorably. Mr. Deacon, Chairman of the Judiciary, wondered how a committee that had never had the bill in its custody could have acted on it, and when the matter was brought to the notice of the House a little piece of trickery was uncovered. Mr. McDonald told the House that he presumed that the bill had been referred to the Committee on Railroads, and went to it with a request that they report it. The committee had lost sight of one of its bills. Mr. Blodgett, who is away, had misplaced it. Mr. McDonald convinced the committee that the mislaid bill was his, and to put it in position to report it, supplied it with a copy, and it was reported. When the facts became known the record of the report, by order of the House, was expunged from the Clerk's minutes.

Senator Hobart introduced a bill to-day which will create a sensation. The security of corrupt rings in county and city and town governments lies in the impossibility of originating an investigation. In Hunterdon County, for instance, where a ring as wicked as the Warren County ring flourishes, the corrupt officials control all the county machinery. They have their friends in the county boards and on the Grand Juries. Mr. Hobart's bill provides that a Justice of the Supreme Court, upon the application of 25 freeholders, may make or order an investigation of the accounts of any town, city, or county officers.

PENNSYLVANIA LEGISLATURE.

THE SENATE STILL DISCUSSING INTER-STATE COMMERCE—BILLS INTRODUCED IN THE ASSEMBLY.

Harrisburg, Penn., Jan. 29.—The Senate to-day resumed the consideration of the subject of inter-State commerce or freight discrimination. Senator Kauffman, of Lancaster, offered a substitute for the resolution offered yesterday by Senator Cooper, of Delaware. The substitute is as follows:

Resolved, If the House concur, That the Senators in the United States Senate from this State are hereby instructed to use all honorable means to procure the passage of the bill known as the Inter-State Commerce bill, passed by the House of Representatives of the United States on the 11th day of December last, with such amendments, if any are necessary, as to make it a measure doing justice to all parties and preventing discrimination in the rate of freights on the part of all common carriers, and that a copy of the resolution be sent to each of our Senators.

The substitute was adopted without a call of the yeas and nays. A joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution, abolishing the Board of Pardons, was affirmatively reported from the PAYING A DEATH PENALTY.

TWO MEN HANGED ON ONE GALLOWS.

EXECUTION OF ACHEY AND MERRICK AT INDIANAPOLIS—DYING DECLARATIONS OF THE MURDERERS—SKETCHES OF THE CRIMES FOR WHICH THEY SUFFERED DEATH.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 29.—Gov. Williams informed Achey's attorney at 9 o'clock this morning that he would not interfere, and at 12:20 John Achey and William Merrick were hanged. Some sympathy was felt for Achey because of the wide disparity between himself and the man Merrick and in the circumstances and conditions surrounding the two crimes, and had the Governor granted a commutation at the last moment, public opinion would have sustained him. The appearance of the men on the gallows added to this feeling on the part of the spectators—about 125 in number—who were admitted to the execution. Both men were cool, but Achey looked and acted like a man above the ordinary grade of criminals. He was fully alive to his situation, regretting the manner of death and believing it unjust, but still prepared for the worst. Merrick looked like a ruffian; he never raised his eyes, and died with what all believed a lie upon his lips.

The condemned men arose this morning at 6:30 o'clock. They occupied the same cell last night, and were guarded by two deputies. Achey retired early and slept uneasily, but Merrick sat up until after midnight writing letters, one of them to his sister. Achey was baptized into the Catholic Church yesterday, and at 7 o'clock this morning received the sacrament of the eucharist from Father Bessolnes. The latter passed the greater part of the morning with him, except half an hour spent by the prisoner with his wife, brother-in-law, and two nieces. The parting between the husband and wife was very affecting. The two Methodist ministers who have been with Merrick came to the jail at 9 o'clock, but their utmost efforts could not obtain from him any intimation that he needed repentance or desired prayer. He knelt with them in prayer, but never offered a petition for himself nor alluded to any sin of which he was guilty. He steadily asserted that his wife was alive and would some time appear. No one came to see Merrick or bid him good-bye, except one of his attorneys. The men were shaved, and dressed in suits of black clothes. They both wore white gloves. Promptly at 12 o'clock, as the bell of the Court-house tolled, the little procession went from the jail to the yard and to the gallows. The Sheriff and Dr. Bayliss led, followed by Merrick with a deputy and Achey with another deputy. The line was closed by two armed patrolmen with fixed bayonets.

Achey eyed all the arrangements with curiosity, particularly examining the rope and the beam to which it was attached. He also paid close attention to the reading of the warrants. Merrick took no interest in anything. In response to the question of the Sheriff, Achey, in a clear, firm voice, spoke as follows: "I would like to say something, if I thought it would do any good. It appears that the evidence that Brown gave in is the only conclusive evidence of premeditated murder, and being one of the robbers himself, the chances are he swore to a lie; besides, he acknowledged it to a man in St. Louis. When I am dead and gone, they don't go write a letter there; They will hang John Achey." The truth of the arrangement is, it was not premeditated, and therefore I was wrongfully convicted. The people here are prepared for a hanging, and I suppose my death will make no difference any how. I am ready."

Merrick said: "I have a great deal I would like to say, but it would not be worth while to say anything. The State of Indiana to-day, in the sight of that Court-house, is doing a thing to me that is one of her citizens. I say, as I have said before to this people and to the world, I am innocent of the charge. When that drop falls and my life goes out, it will be eternal peace. I have to say nothing more."

Prayers were then said by Rev. Mr. Tevis, and for Achey particularly by Father Bessolnes. Then all left the platform but the two men and the Sheriff and his deputies. Good-bye was then said, and Achey, standing with the rope about his neck, said to the physician at the foot of the scaffold. "It's rough, ain't it?" and then again, "It's not only rough, but it is brutal." While Dr. Bayliss commended the men to the mercy of God the Sheriff sprung the trap, at 12:21. The necks of both men were broken by the fall. Merrick was pronounced dead in six and a quarter minutes and Achey in eight minutes. Merrick hung almost motionless, but Achey's body twitched convulsively for several minutes, his legs thrusting up six or eight times and the breast heaving heavily. After hanging 12 minutes they were cut down. Achey's body was delivered to his relatives, and will be buried Friday, while Merrick will be buried to-morrow at the county's expense.

A crowd of about 5,000 persons thronged about the jail, but there was no disorder, and armed patrolmen experienced no difficulty in maintaining perfect quiet. The Legislature was so excited by the execution that but few members could be found, several members were within the inclosure and manifested great eagerness to possess themselves of pieces of rope. The nooses were quickly cut up by relic hunters. This is the first execution ever had within Marion County. Three brothers of Merrick's murdered wife witnessed the execution, and when Merrick said the State was doing an injury to one of its citizens, one of the brothers spoke quite loudly, "Not by a — sight."

ACHEY'S CRIME.

George Leggett was a well-known gambler, with some money, and a good reputation, aside from his business. John Achey came of good family, but he had squandered both his patrimony and his character. He had come to be known as a "roper-in" for gamblers. By the death of his mother he had come into possession of a few hundred dollars. This sum he invested in a faro bank, he claims, by the advice of Leggett, who was the principal partner in the game. The man employed to run the bank managed to break it, and Achey believed it was by and through collusion between Leggett and the keeper. At 2:40 P. M., on Tuesday, July 16 last, Achey saw Leggett enter the saloon of Chopin & Gore, just north of the Hotel Bates, in one of the principal streets of the city. He had meditated revenge against the man who, he believed, had defrauded him. With a revolver in his pocket Achey followed Leggett to the bar of the saloon. Without a word he drew his weapon, fired twice, turned upon his heel and coolly walked away. One of the shots struck Leggett behind the ear, breaking the skull, and the effects of the wound he died in 20 minutes. Achey was arrested in Washington-street, about two blocks distant from the scene of the murder. On his way to the jail he defended his action, giving the motives as here detailed, and rather leaned to the view that he had done a virtuous act in ridding society of a gambler.

The trial of Achey began in the Criminal Court on Nov. 4, and, after a three days' hearing, the jury convicted him of murder in the first degree. Under ordinary conditions Achey might not have been sentenced to death, but in the time elapsing between his crime and his trial two other murders occurred. When on his way to jail Achey said to the bailiff: "It's an awful thing to hang." Four months before he had been utterly indifferent. Since his conviction Achey has led a very quiet life in jail. He has been very taciturn. There has been no exhibition of bravado, but he became subject to a settled melancholy, which so weakened him physically that he was only a skeleton of his former self. At no time has he evinced any belief that his sentence would be changed, and, although his attorneys and friends have been unceasing in their efforts to avert the penalty, Achey himself has acted as a man without hope. The Supreme Court on Thursday last affirmed his sentence in their review of the evidence, saying the jury had full warrant for finding the murder to be one with premeditation and deliberate malice. Achey was under the spiritual advice and counsel of Father Berrones, the leading Catholic priest of this city, and continually asserted his resistance.

MERRICK'S HORRIBLE DEED.

William Merrick's crime was committed on the night of Sept. 14 last, but did not come to light until Sunday morning, Sept. 22. Early that day two men, living just west of the town, came to the Coroner with the information that a dead body was lying amid the weeds and brush that lined the margin of Eagle Creek, near the bridge across a road leading directly to the city. Arriving at the place indicated, the Coroner found the half decomposed body of a nude woman, and, lying beside her, the umbilicus not entirely severed, the form of a male child. The woman was identified as Julia Merrick, the daughter of a well-to-do farmer living in the next county. Her home had not been pleasant to her, and in girlhood she left it, coming to Indianapolis to earn her own living. When or how or where she became acquainted with William Merrick is not known. A few weeks before her death she appeared as the plaintiff in a bastardy suit, which was compromised by marriage. Her married life was full of beatings, cursings, and starvation. The woman had a little money and property, and this Merrick succeeded in getting away from her, investing it in the livery business, living with his wife in an upper room of the stable. To the woman of the town, with whom he kept company, he several times confided his purpose to kill his wife. Suspicion at once pointed to the husband as the murderer. He was arrested on the night after the discovery of the body, in his sleeping room over the stable. When arrested he denied all knowledge of the murder, and said he could produce his wife, whom he had taken in a buggy on Saturday night, Jan. 14, to a colored midwife, to remain until after her confinement. Several persons saw him drive off with his wife on that evening. A woman's clothes were found in the upper room, where he was in bed, and a part of the dress was recognized as that worn by Mrs. Merrick on that Saturday night. A buggy-seat stained with blood and a bloody lap-robe, and, finally, a pair of blood-stained trousers were found. The story of that ride was given in the testimony as follows: Leaving the stable about 8 o'clock with his wife, the couple drove about the streets for a time, and then Merrick drew up in front of a saloon. He there procured a glass of blackberry wine, into which he poured a white powder, [strychnine, which he had purchased the day before; one of the men in the saloon swearing that he saw the skull and crossbones on the paper as Merrick poured the contents into the glass,] saying that it was for a sick person outside in a buggy; the woman drank the draught handed to her by her husband, and then the drive was continued, westward; on which they passed a wagon, the driver of which says the woman was crying and endeavoring to jump from the carriage; Merrick turned his horse toward the woods, and there, at 10 o'clock at night, the woman suffered such horrible pangs as to cause her to cry so loudly that a neighboring farmer got up and went to her assistance. He testified that a man was standing near the buggy and a woman was lying on the ground moaning, as if in great pain; he recognized the man as Merrick, and said he requested him to help the "drunken woman" into the buggy. The farmer did so, and found the body of the woman stiff. Merrick while he took hold of her feet and Merrick of her head she did not bend. Then Merrick drove to the city, and calling at a saloon, obtained a drink of whisky. The saloon-keeper noticed the appearance of the body in the buggy, leaning straight with feet against the front and head pressing the back curtains. It was covered with a shawl, and Merrick said "his girl was drunk." The woman, undoubtedly, was then dead.

Merrick had arranged with the janitor of the medical college to furnish him with a body about that date, and the testimony shows that he drove around town with the dead body of his wife in the buggy with him until it should become cold enough to warrant him in delivering it to the medical college. Merrick had before assisted in furnishing "subjects" for the college, and had, in his turn, been called to for disposing of his wife's corpse. But the plan was not successful, and so Merrick drove back to the place where the body was found, and, having stripped the clothes from her person, he tumbled his wife into the soft mud and slime by the margin of the creek, and rudely covered it with drift-wood and bushes. He brought the clothes back to the stable, burned some in the office stove, and, finding other indestructible material being found in the ashes—and the remainder he secreted up stairs, where they were found and identified as part of the clothing worn by Mrs. Merrick the night she was cast out of the stable with her husband. The physicians testified that the act of birth occurred some time after death.

Following upon the shooting of Leggett and the killing of the Spencer House waiter-girl, Mary McGlew, by Louis Gutig, whose sentence of death was reversed by the Supreme Court on Monday, he being granted a new trial for error in the charge of the Judge, the most intense indignation was awakened in the community, and for several days there was imminent danger of mob violence. The jail was kept guarded by an extra force day and night for nearly a week. Merrick's trial began on Dec. 2, and ended on Dec. 13 with a verdict of guilty and sentence of death, the jury being out only 11 minutes. Merrick has said nothing to anybody, giving no indication of interest in what was going on until Friday last, when the news of the affirming of Achey's case aroused him sufficiently to send for a minister. Rev. Dr. Bayliss (Methodist) was his choice, and that gentleman has called upon him every day. To this minister Merrick maintained his air of composure, referring to himself as little as possible, and making no allusion to the crime for which he was under sentence. His conversation has all been upon the theory of his innocence, and he has said that if he was hanged, it would not be the first time an innocent person had suffered. Merrick has two brothers who are Methodist ministers, and his sister is the wife of a minister of that Church. He himself claimed to have united with one of the Methodist churches of the city, and in his conversation regarded himself as a pious man, for whom neither confession nor repentance was necessary.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE NEW-YORK QUINTET CLUB CONCERT

The first concert of this combination of artists at Steinway's small hall yesterday afternoon was so successful that it is to be hoped their future entertainments may be given under more favorable circumstances. The club consists of Miss Lina Antonio, piano; Messrs. Carl Richter and Hugo Kescheld, violins; Mr. Risch, viola, and Mr. Popper, violoncello. The hall was uncomfortably full, and as the room possesses no means whatever of ventilation, the audience suffered from the dangers of asphyxia. In the latter part of the concert the doors opening into the large hall were thrown back, whereby those who had successfully survived were exposed to drafts and cold currents of air, which were calculated to test the strongest constitutions. The programme was as follows:

1. Quartet, op. 19.....Robert Fuchs
2. a, "Mondnacht".....Schumann
   b, "Am Meere".....Schubert
   Mr. Ch. Fritsch.
3. Intermezzo from quartet for strings, (first time).....Julius Von Bellezay
4. Song—"Célébrons le Seigneur".....George Kuses
   Mr. A. E. Stoddard.
5. Sextet, op. 30.....G. Onslow

The performance of the quartet was, on the whole, commendable, and showed the finish which careful practice and the skill of the trained musician can bring, though it may be said that there was something of nervousness in the vigor of attack, and that there was an absence of the repose and delicacy which only continuous playing in concert will certainly afford. In Onslow's sextet the same criticism may be made. Neither of these works are worthy of any special mention. Onslow, whose compositions have been frequently played in New-York by an excellent club named in his honor, is a writer who just misses being of the first class. He raises expectations which are not satisfied, and, considering how much good chamber-music has been written, it hardly seems worth while to spend so much time and attention on his compositions. They are well written, technically good, and without a fault that may be described, but are more interesting to the performer than to the listener, and lack the vital spark of genius which can be found in the chamber-music of the masters he followed but never rivaled.

Mr. Fritsch, who was first announced to sing the immortal "Adelaide" of Beethoven substituted two songs, "Mondnacht," by Schumann, and "Am Meere," by Schubert. These he gave with taste and in an artistic spirit. Mr. Stoddard also sang well. The full and appreciative audience which this concert drew out will undoubtedly be an incentive to the club, and if their next entertainment is given in some place where it may be listened to without physical suffering, it will be still more enjoyable.

GENERAL MENTION.

The concert of Mr. O. B. Boise will be given this evening at Chickering Hall. The programme, which consists entirely of the compositions of Mr. Boise, will be rendered by an orchestra of 50 musicians and Mme. Auerbach, Miss Winant, Mr. S. P. Warren, and a vocal quartet. Mr. Boise will give a symphony called "In Memoriam," a concerto for piano and orchestra, a "Festival Overture," three songs for contralto, and a "Child's Requiem" for quartet and organ.

The rehearsal of the fourth concert of the Symphony Society, under the direction of Dr. Damrosch, will take place this afternoon at Steinway Hall. In addition to the performance by the orchestra of Saint-Saën's Symphony No. 2 in A minor, Liszt's "Les Préludes" and other works, Herr Willhelmj will play the allegro of Beethoven's Concerto, and Bach's Chaconne. This will be the first opportunity the musical public have had to hear Wilhemj with an orchestral accompaniment suited to the playing of an artist of his rank. Mr. Bergner will perform the cello obligato in a "Serenade" for string orchestra by Volkmann.

A FINE AMATEUR ENTERTAINMENT.

It was a very fashionable and elegant assemblage that crowded the hall of the Young Women's Christian Association, No. 7 East Sixteenth-street, last evening to listen to the readings of Mr. Hopkinson Smith, preceded by a musical programme, in which Miss Silvie Burgy, soprano; Miss May Callender, Mr. W. C. Baird, Mr. J. Lewenberg, the violinist; Mr. Antonio Knauth, and Messrs. C. Montague Ward and Gustave Kobbe, amateur pianists, bore prominent parts. Mr. Baird sang the "Creole Lover's Song" with a grace and passion that provoked enthusiasm even from disdainful fashion, and Miss Burgy was equally fortunate with the cavatina from "Lucia." Miss Callender executed the page's song in "Les Huguenots," and Mr. Lewenberg a violin solo ("Legendre") from Wieniawski, both of which were well received. But the laughter and tears were reserved for Mr. Hopkinson Smith's readings, which embraced a rare and spirited selection commencing with Mark Twain's inimitable morceau of dialect composition, "Miss Wagner's Glass Eye," in which occurs that sage maxim that a dog cannot be depended upon to carry out a special providence. The assemblage first smiled, then laughed rather restrainedly, and finally broke into uncontrollable paroxysms of fun. Every one remembers the rough pathos of "Surly Tim," and this proved a remarkably fine antidote to the toxic properties of "Miss Wagner's Glass Eye," or the story thereof, as Jim Bis ne told it. The "Fall of Pemberton Mill," one of Elizabeth Stuart Phelps' happiest bits of descriptive writing, was also recited with good effect. Songs from "Galathée," "Carmen," and "Les Rameux," executed by Miss Burgy, Miss Callender, and Mr. Baird, closed one of the most brilliant and enjoyable amateur entertainments that has been given this Winter. The proceeds will inure to the benefit of the association.

LIVE STOCK KILLED BY AN ACCIDENT.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 29.—A broken rail on the Cincinnati, Sandusky and Cleveland Railroad last night threw a freight train from the track near Sandusky, demolishing eight loaded cars and killing 100 hogs.

GAS COMPANIES' EXACTIONS

HOW THEY MAKE MONEY OUT OF DEPOSITS.

A GLANCE AT ONE OF THE EXTORTIONS OF THE COMPANIES—WHAT $10 FROM EACH CUSTOMER AMOUNTS TO—PROPORTION OF THESE DEPOSITS UNCLAIMED.

When sarcastic old John Randolph of Roanoke described a corporation as something having neither a body to be kicked nor a soul to be damned, he translated into terse and vigorous English an idea which our Metropolitan experience with corporations possessing monopolies in their several directions has abundantly verified. While the income tax was in force, for example, although the amount of the tax was less than 2 mills on each fare of 5 cents, the street railway companies exacted an extra cent from each passenger, and put 80 per cent. of the amount in their own pockets, thus compelling the pecuniary necessities of the Government to subserve their greed for gain to the amount of hundreds of thousands of dollars, and putting an extra burden on the public of five times the amount imposed upon them. Such abuses have become so common of late years that the good-natured public has long since ceased to complain, preferring to submit to the exaction without protest rather than accept the humiliation of being snubbed in a vain attempt to argue the case with Presidents, Vice-Presidents, Secretaries, or Superintendents. The fact remains, however, that a very considerable proportion of the incomes of various corporations arises from illegal exactions which are very small, singly considered, but very imposing in their aggregate amount. An instance in point, and one that has been a source of constant annoyance to householders ever since gas companies have had their insolent existence, may be cited, not only as an illustration of the methods of monopolies, but as furnishing a large but popularly overlooked or underestimated source of dividends. It is a familiar fact that every customer of a gas company has to pay on an average a deposit of $10. This amount is popularly supposed to be in the nature of a security for the meter, but is in reality exacted to cover any possible failure of customers to meet their bills promptly. It requires very little calculation to show the enormous aggregate of the people's hard-earned money which is constantly in the hands of the gas companies, in order to cover a most unlikely contingency; for, of all vendors of articles of popular consumption, the percentage of loss on their actual sales by the gas companies is, in the nature of things, most insignificant, the commodity itself being one that can only be procured of a given company in a given section of the City by prompt payment of bills. And yet, notwithstanding their practical monopoly of a commodity that every householder must have, and their power of enforcing payment, the gas companies of the City find it necessary, they say, to hold in the aggregate nearly $1,000,000 of their customers' money by way of security.

It appears from the testimony of practical men that the number of meters in use by all the companies, each representing a customer, is rather above than below 90,000. Multiply 90,000 by 10, (the deposit being on an average $10,) and it is apparent at a glance that the aggregate cash represented by this exaction is $900,000, a sufficient capital to found and carry on a very extensive business in gas manufacture and distribution. Upon careful inquiry among the companies it appears that, while many have customers of 25 years' standing, the average throughout the City is not in excess of about three years. This being the case, the amount in deposits annually exacted is about $300,000, which, on the face of the receipts given, bears interest at 7 per cent. and is liable to be called for at any time. To put these extraordinary figures in another and even more startling aspect, the gas companies of the City exact from their customers, in deposits, the vast sum of $3,000,000 every 10 years, and have at all times in their possession about $1,000,000. A more interesting point, however, turns upon the question of what percentage of this vast aggregate is ever refunded to the consumer. Receipts will get lost, mislaid, defaced, leaving the customer without any evidence of the indebtedness of the company. Officers profess to be absolutely incapable of giving any exact information on this point. Some state the proportion to be as high as 30 per cent.; others, at 25 per cent.; others, 20 per cent., but the general impression on the subject; but all agree that the aggregate of unclaimed deposits is very large. Where the account runs only one year, in those quarters of the City where householders neither own their houses nor hold them on long leases, the amount unclaimed is not comparatively large, while in the more opulent quarters the deposits are practically never claimed. Gas officers state that, in the majority of instances where a settlement is claimed, the current indebtedness of the depositor approximates the amount of the deposit, but this statement, considering the vigilance and persistency of their collectors, and the fact that to evade payment is to be immediately deprived of the commodity, must be taken at a large discount.

An incidental verification of these figures appears in the report of the Manhattan Gas-light Company for 1878, or, rather, from a short financial statement which the company is compelled to make in order to clear its Directors from liability for corporate debts, showing the amount of the capital as $4,000,000—all actually paid in—the statement gives the amount of current indebtedness at $54,823 50, the greater proportion of which is represented by customers' deposits for the year. The Manhattan Gas Company runs about 280,000 meters, representing deposits to the amount of $28,000. If, then, the deposits per year are $75,000 or thereabouts, the average period during which the company holds each customer's $10 is a little less than four years in one of the wealthiest sections of the City. A glance at these figures shows the pecuniary interest involved to be one of large magnitude, and explains why the corporate exaction to which popular attention has been directed since the repeal of the Income tax forced the street railways to abandon their ordinary profits of 10 per cent. on that item by levying a cent on each passenger, and to return to their legal tariff. The business value of $300,000 for 10 years at 7 per cent., compound interest, is about $600,000 when cleverly invested, a figure which companies can readily carry on large operations in Wall-street by using the amount of customers' deposits with ordinary shrewdness.

It is urged by gas officers that these deposits are liable to be called for at any time and cannot be reinvested with safety. This statement, however, on very cursory analysis, evinces its own absurdity. The yearly receipts of the companies from this source are as nearly fixed and invariable as the percentages of mortality for any series of years. There is, with an annual trade of 28,000 meters, an annual deposit of more than $70,000, not liable to be called upon to any large amount at any one time, except, possibly, about May 1, when the Spring cleaning in many business that promises large profits. In reality a large proportion of the capital of such a corporation as the Manhattan, which represents fully four times the amount essential to conduct the business, remains to be invested in other departments of business than gas manufacture, although customers are compelled to pay at such rates as to produce large dividends on a capital not actually engaged in doing business on their behalf.

But to return to the question of deposits. Supposing the Manhattan Gas Company to have been doing business by the present system for 20 years, with an average of 28,000 meters, it will appear that during that period they have exacted from their customers under pretense of security against possible losses, the enormous amount of $600,000, or three-fourths of their present paid-in capital. Of this vast aggregate a proportion of about 30 per cent., according to some authorities, 25 according to others, has never been refunded, and probably never will be. Twenty-five per cent. of $3,000,000 is $750,000, obtained from unclaimed deposits, to say nothing of the usufruct of the whole amount when shrewdly invested. This figure is largely amplified by three and a little more, in order to cover the transactions of all the companies for 20 years in this individually insignificant item; and thus it appears that at the present rates, the gas companies of New-York City practically rob its citizens of $2,500,000 every 20 years, $1,250,000 every 10 years, and over $100,000 every year. A commission, with the necessary authority to send for persons and papers, would undoubtedly open the eyes of the community to what is meant by an exaction of this kind when applied to a city possessing a population of 1,000,000.

A NEW DAILY NEWSPAPER.

VINCENNES, Ind., Jan. 29.—The Vincennes Western Sun, the oldest paper in the State, established in 1804, now issued weekly and semi-weekly, will appear Monday as a daily paper. The Sun is intensely Democratic, the organ of that party in this county.

LOUISIANA ELECTION VIOLATIONS.

NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 29.—United States Marshal Wharton continues making arrests in various parishes of persons against whom true bills have been found by the United States Grand Jury for violation of the election laws. The steamer Bart Able is expected here to-night with 29 prisoners, in charge of a Deputy Marshal. It is stated that 100 will arrive in the next few days.

A STRAY BALLOON FOUND IN MEXICO.

WARRINGTON, Jan. 29.—Mr. Edmund Johnson, United States Consul at Tampico, Mexico, in a letter written to a friend in this city, dated the 20th inst., says: "A balloon, evidently from some civilized country, about 60 or 70 feet in size, with a car and all the comforts for a voyage, made of silk &c., was found at Orizimba, by the Indians, in the woods. They tore the silk from it, and stole everything that could be carried off, and refused to give any information on the subject for fear they would have to disgorge."

DEAD AT THE ALTAR.

REV. FATHER PELLETIER STRICKEN DOWN WHILE PERFORMING THE MARRIAGE CEREMONY.

Rev. Father Alphonsus P. Pelletier, one of the priests attached to the Catholic Church of St. Francis Xavier, in West Sixteenth-street, died suddenly last evening, when about to perform a marriage ceremony at the church. The couple whose marriage was signalized by so tragic an event were Charles M. Brennan, a son of Owen W. Brennan, ex-Commissioner of Charities, and a nephew of the late ex-Sheriff Matthew T. Brennan, and Miss Meta Peetsch. The wedding was to have been celebrated during last week, but owing to the death of ex-Sheriff Brennan it was postponed until last evening. When, at 7:30, the bridal couple entered the church the sacred edifice was filled with the friends of the pair, comprising a very fashionable and brilliantly-attired assemblage. The bridegroom had been a pupil at the College of St. Francis Xavier, and for several years had been under the tuition of Father Pelletier, and it was therefore arranged that he should perform the marriage ceremony. When the bride and groom stood at the communion rail Father Pelletier made a short congratulatory address to them, and when he had concluded he was noticed to stagger, and would have fallen but for the presence of Father Merrick, who was standing near him, and who sprang to his assistance. The sick priest was assisted into the vestry-room, behind the sanctuary, and before medical aid could be summoned he had expired. Father Merrick returned to the church, and announced to the assembled that Father Pelletier had been taken suddenly ill, performed the marriage ceremony on the waiting couple and dismisse the congregation, who were greatly excited at what they had witnessed, without informing them that the priest was dead. Father Pelletier was 43 years of age, and a native of Quebec. He was a member of the Order of Jesuits, and had been five years attached to St. Francis Xavier's Church. He was a very learned and devoted priest, and his associates are greatly shocked at his sudden death, which is believed to have resulted from disease of the heart.

IN FAVOR OF MAJOR RENO.

A WITNESS WHO THINKS HE HANDLED HIS COMMAND SKILLFULLY.

CHICAGO, Jan. 29.—The Reno investigation was continued this morning. Capt. Charles De Rudio, of the Seventh Cavalry, who is now stationed at Fort Meade, was called. The witness commended the manner in which the skirmish line was formed by Major Reno. Reno's retreat was, he said, a demoralized one. He was himself left in the timber. It was then about 2 o'clock. It was not until the morning of the 27th that he joined Reno on the 26th the Indians set fire to the woods in which he was concealed. Later in the day the whole Indian village passed by him, some within 50 or 60 yards. In the night he waded the stream, and, after cautiously advancing at last found Reno's men. The number of Indians the witness estimated at 4,000. It seemed as if there were many more at the time. The Captain believed that Major Reno handled his troops with a great deal of skill, and that in his conduct nothing could be seen of cowardice.

Sergt. Edward Davern, of Company F, of the Seventh Cavalry, was called. He said that he accompanied Reno on 25th; that the order which has caused so much diversion of opinion was given, the witness said, by Gen. Custer to Adjt. Cook, who delivered it to Major Reno. His statement of the substance of the order does not vary from what has previously been given.

LARGE FIRE IN ST. JOSEPH.

TWO BUILDINGS DESTROYED, WITH A LOSS OF $235,000—THE INSURANCES.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 29.—A dispatch from St. Joseph, Mo., says that the extensive furniture establishment of Louis Hax, on Fifth-street, and the large wholesale dry goods house of J. W. Bailey, adjoining, were burned early this morning. The goods on the ground floor of Bailey's store were carried into the street in a damaged condition, but no part of Hax's stock was saved. Hax's loss on stock is estimated at $100,000, and on the building $15,000. Bailey's loss on stock is fully $100,000, and on the building $20,000.

The insurances aggregate $130,700, as follows: On Hax's stock: Royal, $3,000; Buffalo German, $1,500; Allemania, $2,000; Springfield, Ill., $1,500; St. Joseph Fire and Marine, $2,500; North British and Mercantile, $1,500; Imperial, $2,500; Pennsylvania Fire, $2,000; Phœnix, of Hartford, $2,000; North American, $2,000; Hartford, $2,000; Ætna, of Hartford, $4,000; German-American, $2,000; Commercial Union, $1,200; American, of Philadelphia, $2,500; North-west National, $2,500; miscellaneous, $1,500. Total, $36,200.

On the Hax building, Lancashire, $3,000; Merchants', of St. Joseph, $2,500; Fairfield, $3,000; St. Joseph Fire and Marine, $2,500; total, $11,000.

On Bailey's stock, Niagara, $2,500; Scottish Commercial, $2,500; Faneuil Hall, $2,500; American Cincinnati, $2,500; Home, of New-York, $5,000; North American, $2,500; Glenn's Falls, $5,000; Commercial, $2,500; American, of Philadelphia, $5,000; St. Joseph Fire and Marine, $5,000; North British and Mercantile, $5,000; Imperial and Northern, $5,000; London Assurance, $2,500; Commercial Fire, $5,000; Manufacturers', $2,500; Firemen's Fund, $2,500; Continental, $2,500; Royal, $2,500; Springfield, $2,500; total, $65,000.

On Bailey's building—Queen, $5,000; Buffalo German, $2,000; Allemania, $4,000; Millville, $2,000; Firemen's, of Dayton, $2,000; Commonwealth, of Boston, $2,000; Commercial Union, $1,500; total, $18,500.

OTHER LOSSES BY FIRE.

A fire yesterday in the baby-carriage manufactory of S. H. Kimball at Everett, Mass., caused a loss of between $8,000 and $10,000, which is partially covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is unknown. Three firemen received severe injuries by falling bricks.

A fire at Hodgensville, Larue County, Ky., early Tuesday morning, destroyed two dry goods stores, Hodgens & Harper's and Harper's. The loss is estimated at $10,000; insured for $5,000.

Chabot's dry goods store, in Ottawa, Ontario, was damaged by fire early yesterday morning to the extent of $10,000; insured in Canadian companies.

The steam-tug J. B. O'Brien, engaged in harbor work at Natchez, Miss., was totally destroyed by fire yesterday, about seven miles below the city.

FRAUD IN AN ALMS-HOUSE.

CLUMSY SWINDLING BY THE POOR-HOUSE AUTHORITIES AT TROY.

TROY, Jan. 29.—Great excitement was created in this city to-day by the report of the committee of the Board of Supervisors on the Superintendents of the Poor. The acting Superintendent of the Poor is John R. Ford, who was elected on the Democratic ticket in the Fall of 1877. The committee charges gross frauds on the part of Ford, two of his sons, James B. Hall, a prominent dry goods dealer; William H. Hegeman, Keeper of the County-house, and Darius Allen, an extensive grocery dealer. The report says that large quantities of dry goods, shoes, meat, and clothing were paid for by the county which were never delivered at the Alms-house. Enough shoes were purchased to supply each of the 200 inmates with four pairs of shoes a year, but the committee could find only a few who had received one pair. It is charged that Hall bought second-hand blankets at 28 cents a pound, and sold them to the Superintendent at 60 cents, charging about double the actual weight. The committee finds that for Hegeman's private table 105 pounds of meat were supplied last February, while in July 1,100 pounds were required, besides 400 pounds of ham, pork, and fish. The committee expresses surprises that in a month when ordinary people are not so partial to meat as they are in February the consumption should increase so largely.

The report also shows that the fraud was perpetrated very cunningly, the order for the meat for July being dated Aug. 6. E. J. Ford, son of the Superintendent, was paid by the State Board of Charities for conveying paupers chargeable to the State to the State Alms-house. He afterward presented the same bills, raised 300 per cent., to the Superintendent, who audited them. The committee recommends the Board of Supervisors to apply to the Governor to remove Ford. The board afterward appointed a committee to carry this suggestion into effect.

THE SUSPENDED MASTIN BANK.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 29.—A dispatch to the Globe-Democrat, from Independence, Mo., says: "Kersey Coates, Assignee of the suspended Mastin Bank, of Kansas City, commenced hearing and allowing claims against that institution here to-day. About $200,000 was allowed, and the hearing will continue to-morrow and Friday. State Treasurer Gates presented his claim of $258,000, but it was objected to, and continued until the first Tuesday in March, when argument will be heard.

TRAMPS AS TRAIN-WRECKERS.

YORK, Penn., Jan. 29.—A short time before the arrival of the mail train from Harrisburg, yesterday afternoon, a pile of stones and brake-blocks was discovered on the track a short distance above this station. They had been placed there by tramps, who afterward visited the station and were very abusive to the passengers. About 30 of them have been arrested.

THE SUPPRESSION OF VICE.

HISTORY OF A YEAR'S GOOD WORK.

SOME STARTLING FACTS FOR RESPECTABLE PEOPLE TO THINK OVER—SHAMEFUL LAXITY OF THE STATE COURTS—PRESIDENT HAYES CENSURED—MR. KIMBALL AT WORK.

The Society for the Prevention of Vice held its fifth anniversary meeting in Association Hall last evening. A large and highly respectable audience of men remained throughout the exercises. After prayer by Rev. Dr. Ludlow, Secretary Comstock read an abstract of the annual report. It begins with the history of what is denominated a deep-laid and malicious plot to impair the usefulness of the society and its agents by spreading untruthful reports about the character and methods of the latter, and by attempting to secure the repeal of the laws of 1873 against the transmission of obscene matter through the mails. This plot was the work of infidels and convicts. Fifteen thousand circulars were distributed throughout the country, alleging that innocent men had been thrown into prison for sending perfectly legal matter through the mails. The case of one Simpson was particularly mentioned, whereas Simpson had been twice convicted by juries of the highest character. Two of the jurors, while in the act of rendering the verdict, had been bribed, and each time piles of obscene matter had been seized in it. The circulars also charged the agent with receiving a salary as a Government officer and with levying black-mail. A lying book, purporting to give a sketch of his life, was circulated broadcast. In April a petition, said to be signed by 70,000 persons, was presented in Congress, asking for the repeal of the law of 1873. During six weeks the representatives of the convicts and infidels had the ear of the committee to whom the petition had been referred. The President of the society and its agent argued before the committee less than two hours, and a unanimous decision was immediately given in their favor. Yet the press dispatches announced that the decision had been unanimous in favor of repeal. In other ways respectable newspapers lent themselves to vile insinuations against the society and its agents. These papers were distributed about the Capitol at Washington, and copies were sent to every member of Congress. An Associated Press dispatch published all over the country the lie that Mr. Comstock had been arrested on 11 indictments. Other papers announced that another agent had been arrested in this City on a charge of black-mail, whereas a warrant had been refused in the case after a full hearing by Justice Duffy. Never had there been more unfair and unjust criticism of the methods of the society than during the past year, yet never had more discretion been used and more care taken. The same methods were used as had been used during the previous five years, and everything that had been done had been done within the prescriptions of the common law. The agents had merely answered advertisements published in the newspapers; yet every scoundrel so caught had pleaded that he had been induced to commit crime. Another almost total obstacle had been found in the non-trial of cases in the State Courts. Of all the indictments found in these courts between 1875 and 1877, not one was tried during the year. Of the 25 found in 1877, not one was tried; yet the Grand Jury in the latter cases passed a vote of thanks to the agents of the society for the manner in which they had prepared and laid the evidence before them, and indorsing their action throughout. The United States courts had been prompt in all but one or two cases in the West, and the Police courts and Special Sessions enforced the laws better than ever before.

During the year 23 arrests were made in the United States courts, and 25 in the State courts, making a grand total of arrests by the society of 364. Two were discharged, and 4 were remanded for jury trial; 22 were convicted, 20 were sentenced, and 1 absconded. This makes a grand total of 184 convicted, and 168 sentenced. Bail bonds of $2,500 were forfeited, making a grand total of $37,500. Sentences were imposed aggregating 31 years 2 months and 10 days' imprisonment and $1,100 fine, making a grand total of 142 years 5 months and 23 days' imprisonment, and $47,585 fine. Three convicts were pardoned during the year. One hundred thousand had books weighing 2,100 pounds; 475 obscene pictures and 20 pounds of stereotyped matter destroyed, making a grand total of 23,250 pounds of bad books, 202,679 obscene pictures, and 14,420 pounds of stereotype plate destroyed, or 7 tons and 420 pounds of plate and nearly 12 tons of books and printed matter. These were also destroyed during the year 787 boxes of pills and powders and bottles of medicine used by abortionists, making in all 1,185, and 3,000 lots of circulars, making in all 1,241,388. Over 300,000 names and addresses for circulars were captured. The agents of the society traveled 14,550 miles, making a total of miles traveled of 142,854. Seven persons were arrested in Cincinnati, and five in other portions of this State. Sister societies were established during the year in Boston, Cleveland, Louisville, St. Louis, and Chicago. The greatest triumph of the year had been in closing Adèle Smedile's place of business in April. Next had been the arrest of a man in Rochester in November. Six trucks were used to carry off 100,000 books and over 1,000,000 circulars were destroyed in Cincinnati. These books had cost $1.000 and the circulars $600 to print. The books were retailed at 50 cents each, making them worth $50,000. This gives a notion of the profits of the business. Some matter seized in the Bowery had been more than 15 years per pound had been retailed at the rate of $53 83 per pound. The Rochester man had had 55,630,000 circulars printed by one firm. Another triumph was the conviction and sentence of Heywood, the leading freelover of the country—Heywood, of Boston. He appealed to a full bench, which confirmed the judgment of the lower court and gave him two years in State prison. He had, since his arrest, on the record of the society to repeat the filthy language used toward young men by women at the meetings at which Heywood presided, yet the President of the United States had pardoned him. He had also pardoned another man who had been convicted three times and sentenced twice for similar off

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

SALES AT THE STOCK EXCHANGE—JAN. 29.

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—10:15 A. M.

U. S. 5-20 R. '67.....C. U. S. 5s 10-40 R. C. U. S. 4½ R., '91.
$10,000 b. last Pd. $50,000.....104¼ $70,000.....106
U. S. 5-20 R., '68.
15,000.....102⅜

FIRST BOARD—10:30 A. M.

B. C. R. & N. 1st..Pacific of Mo. 2d..Western Union.
$3,000.....70¼ 2,000.....c. 104¾ 100...b.c.83. 98⅛
10,000.....71 R. P. & E. 1st, '96. 98¾ 300.....c. 98⅜
10,000.....71¼ with coup. cer. 200.....98⅜
3,000.....71 $3,000.....105⅝ 800.....98⅝
15,000...c. 71 R. W. & O. D. 1st. 100.....98⅝
N. J. C. 1st, con.s. with coup. cer. Erie Railway.
5,000.....80⅛ 25,000.....81¼ 5700.....b.c. 25
N. J. C. conv.....C. & A. C. 1st. 1000.....25⅛
1,000.....96 3,000.....60 Michigan Central.
N. J. C. conv. ss. Southern Pac. 1st. 200.....b.c. 86⅜
7,000.....71⅜ 14,000.b.c. 98¼ 300.....86⅛
4,000.b.c. 89 S. L. K. C. & N. R. E. L. S. & M. S.
N. J. C. Adjm t. '75 '85. 300.....b.c. 72⅛
2,000.....84⅛ 1,000.....99⅝ 100.....72
1,000.....84¼ W. U. T. C. 1,000. 500.....83. 71⅞
M. & St. P. c. s. f. 1,000.....112 900.....72
2,000.....103¼ Rail. & Sn. 1st. 1,000.....83⅜
M. & St. P. L. & D. 5,000.....105 Chi. & N. W.
5,000.....102 2,000.....105⅝ 200.....b.c. 62⅛
D. L. & W. 1st, '67. 5,000.....81 100.....62⅝
4,000.....107 2 mat. coupon. 1930.....61¼
M. & E. 1st con. 1,000.....96 100.....61⅝
1,000.....94⅛ R. W. & O. con. 100.....61½
D. & R. G. 1st. 1,000.....86¼ Chi. & N. W. pf.
7,000.....84¼ T. & W. con. conv. 700.....b.c. 85½
Ala. C. Mar. 1st, coupon. 1000.....83⅜
15,000.....104 2,000.....74⅜ 100.....83¾
B. & St. Jo. 8s, coupon. 1,000.....74⅝ 100.....85⅛
C. R. I. & P. 8s, coupon. 1,000.....74⅞ C. & C. L.
4,000.....107 Gr. West. 2d pf. 150.....b.c. 40
Varieties & C. 1st. 7,000.....96 100...b.c. 83. 45¾
2,000.....87⅜ 10,000.....86¼ 100.....48½
Met. Ele. 1st. C. St. P. & Minn. Central of N. J.
10,000.....93⅛ 1,000.....b.c. 14¼ 100.....b.c. 41⅞
M. K. & T., c. as. 2,000.....48 100.....40⅛
5,000.....94 & C. St. P. 1st, ed by C. & St. P.
5,000.....50⅛ Lake Shore. 100.....b.c. 42⅜
10,000.....93⅜ 30,000.....98 200.....b.3. 42⅝
R. & G. 1st, '82. & C. C. & I. 600.....42⅜
10,000.b.3. 16 C. C. & I. 600.....42⅜
Can. So. 1st 2d. & C. C. & I. 600.....42⅜
50,000.....106 1,000.....b.3. Wabash.
50,000.b.3. 106⅛ 1,000.....90 2,000.....b.c. 22⅜
Ohio & Miss. 2d. Bank of Com. Del., L. & West.
6,000.....84½ 100.....b.3. 100.....b.c. 15
1,000.....84¾ Metropolitan Ele. 100.....50⅞
Cen. Pac. gold. 5,000.....116 Chicago & Alton.
6,000.....107¾ Well-Fargo Ex. 100.....b.c.83. 87⅜
Un. Pac. 1st. 200.....97⅛ Adams Express.
10,000.....107⅜ Adams Express. 100.....87
C. P. 1st, s. f. 10.....b.c. 106⅛ U. P. & W. C. & C.
3,000.....94⅜ U. S. Express. 100.....105½
2,000.....98⅜ 18.....b.c. 4 St. L. K. C. & N. pf.
4,000.....88⅛ Homestak. M. Co. 100.....b.c. 35⅜
C. P. 1st & 6 per. 25.....b.3. 100.....b.c. 37
1,000.....87¼ Erie Railway pf. 6.....100¼
Pacific of Mo. 1st. 100.....b.c.83. 87⅛
Un. Pac. 1st. 200.....97⅛ Ohio & Miss.
2,000.....108⅝ 200.....b.c. 27

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—1:30 P. M.

U. S. 5s C. '81. U. S. 5s 10-40 C. U. S. 5s C. '81.
$40,000.....106¼ $10,000.....101⅝ $6,000.b.c.105⅞
U. S. 5s R. '81. 10,000.....101¾ 6,000.....106
6,000.....106⅛ 10,000.....106¼ 14,400.b.c.101⅜

SECOND BOARD—1 P. M.

B. C. R. & N. 1st..No. Missouri 1st. N. Y. C. & R.
$2,000.....71⅜ 3,000.....108⅝ 100.....b.c. 115⅜
24,000.....b.c. 71 1,000.....107⅞ D. L. & W.
C. B. & Q. 8s. with cp. cer. Erie Railway.
1,000.....110⅞ 8,000.....81¼ 2400.....b.c. 25¼
5,000.....111 5,000.....81⅝ 2,000.....25⅛
1,000.....110⅞ 8,000.....80¾ 500.....25⅜
L. & W. B. con. ss. Kan. Pac. 1st. Div. 1,000.....83. 25
1,000.....b.c. 44¼ Trust Rec. 200.....25⅜
M. & St. P. 1st, s. f. 1,000.....87 Michigan Central.
1,000.....103⅛ C. & P. c. f. 200.....b.c. 87½
10,000.....b.c. 107⅜ 10,000.....116 100.....87⅜
M. & St. P. L. & D. 1,000.....b.c. 74 N. Y. C. & H.
N. J. C. 1st, con. 15,000.....86¼ 70 C.....b.c. 72¾
5,000.....97⅜ 1,000.....86¼ 300.....72¾
5,000.....97⅝ 1,000.....86¼ 300.....72¾
D. L. & W. 1st, '67. 5,000.....81 M. & St. P.
500.....42 B. & O. Sc. 1st. 400.....b.c. 42⅜
Met. Ele. 1st. 1,000.....96¾ 300.....42⅜
1,000.....98⅛ 10,000.....73⅜ 300.....42⅜
Can. So. 1st 2d. D. & H. C. 7s. 94. 200.....42⅜
Ohio & Miss. 2d. 1,000.....b.c. 74⅜ 200.....42⅜
C. P. 1st, s. f. Bridewave & Hud. 300.....42⅜
5,000.....98⅜ 100.....b.c. 41⅛ Del., L. & West.
N. Y. Chic. 1st. 500.....41 100.....b.3. 84
15,000.....106⅛ Western Union. 200.....50⅝
D. & H. R., '91. 100.....b.c. 99⅝ 200.....50⅝
80,000.....b.c. 104 E. Ar. ry. 100.....50⅝
D. & H. R. '91, coup. Pacific Mail. 300.....50⅝
2,000.....106 200.....b.c. 12⅜ 100.....50⅜
D. & H. 6th, '85. 1,000.....b.c. 99⅛ K. C. & St. P.
with coup. cer. 100.....12⅜ 100.....35⅜
5,000.....106⅛

SALES FROM 2:30 TO 3 P. M.

D. & R. G. 1st. Delaware & Hud. St. Paul pf.
$2,000.....92 100.....b.c. 107⅜ 100.....83⅛
3,000.....92⅛ 100.....107⅜ 100.....83⅜
7,000.....92⅜ Harlem. 500.....83⅜
1,000.....94⅛ 100.....145 100.....83⅜
H. & St. Jo. 8s, con. Michigan Central. 100.....83⅜
5,000.....107⅜ 300.....87⅜ 200.....83⅛
C., R. I. & P. 8s, coup. 100.....87⅝ 25.....83⅜
1,000.....b.c. 107 200.....87⅝ 200.....83⅜
5,000.....111⅜ 500.....88 100.....b.3. 84
5,000.....111 100.....88⅛ Boston & L.
N. J. C. conv. ss. 300.....b.c. 88⅜ 200.....84
5,000.....89⅜ 200.....83. 88⅜ 200.....83¾
5,000.....b.c. 90 100.....88⅜ 100.....83¾
5,000.....96⅛ 300.....88⅜ 100.....84¼
C., St. P. & M. 1st. 800.....88⅜ 100.....84¼
L. S. Income. Lake Shore. 100.....84⅜
2,000.....70 300.....122¾ 100.....84⅜
U. S. Express. 1800.....72¾ Del., L. & West.
100...48⅝ 800.....72⅝ 600.....50
100.....48⅝ 800.....72⅝ 600.....50
35.....48 800.....72½ 500.....49¾
American Ex. 800.....72⅝ 600.....50
149.....49 800.....72⅝ 500.....50⅛
Adams Ex. 800.....73 500.....50⅛
25.....105 1400.....73⅛ 100.....50⅝
Buffalo R. & P. 1400.....73⅛ Wabash.
14.....22 2200.....73⅜ 600.....50⅝
Canton. 200.....73⅜ 100.....50⅝
100.....21 1700.....73⅝ 1400.....50⅝
200.....29½ 900.....73⅝ 300.....50⅝
100.....b.c. 30 2000.....73⅝ 1000.....51⅛
200.....30⅛ Illinois Central. 3600.....51⅛
100.....b.3. 30⅜ 10.....b.c. 83⅜ 2300.....51⅜
100.....30⅜ 100.....87 1000.....51⅜
Homestak. M. Co. 200.....87 1000.....51⅜
100.....37 250.....88¾ 2800.....52
420.....25⅜ 200.....88¾ 2800.....52⅛
Pacific Mail. 100.....b.3. 88¾ 2400.....52⅛
150.....c. 12⅜ Rock Island. 2400.....52⅛
200.....12⅝ 200.....125⅜ 700.....51⅞
100...b.30. 12⅜ 200.....125⅜ 1000.....52
At. & Pac. Tel. 2100.....125⅜ 300.....52⅜
100.....36¼ 200.....127 300.....52⅜
100.....37 150.....127⅛ 45.....b.3. 52⅜
100.....37¼ 150.....127¼ 45.....46⅜
250.....38 200.....127¾ 650.....47
50.....b.3. 10 North-west. Chicago & Miss.
100...b.3. 37¼ 100.....61⅞ 300.....99
100.....37¾ 800.....61⅞ 100.....99
Western Union. 200.....61⅞ Ohio & Miss. pf.
1000.....99⅛ 200.....62 50.....b.3. 30
3000.....99⅜ 1000.....b.3. 62⅜ 50.....30
1000.....99⅝ Han. & St. Jo. 100.....62⅜
700.....99⅞ 300.....b.3. 62⅜ 100.....14⅝
2800.....100 525.....62⅜ 100.....14⅞
1000.....100 500.....62⅝ 100.....b.3. 62⅜
1900...b.3. 100⅛ 100.....62⅝ Han. & St. Jo. pf.
700.....100⅜ 1800.....62⅞ 500.....38¼
400.....100⅜ 1100.....63 200.....38⅜
100.....100⅜ Cleveland & Pitt. 200.....39
200.....100⅞ 500.....85⅜ 200.....39¼
600.....100⅞ 400.....85⅝ Norris & Sev.
1400.....100⅝ 500.....86 100.....83¼
100...101⅛ 900.....86¼ 100.....83¼
600.....101⅛ 300.....86¼ 300.....83¾
100...83.101⅛ 400.....86½ 100.....84
200.....101⅜ 400.....86⅝ 100.....84¼
100.....101⅜ 400.....86⅝ 100.....84¾
200.....101⅜ 100.....b.3. 87 300.....84¾
1200.....101 600.....87¼ 600.....84¾
25.....100⅞ Journal of J. 100.....84¾
25.....100⅞ 400.....41¾ 100.....84¾
200.....100⅞ 200.....41¾ St. L. K. C. & N.
100.....100⅞ 100.....42 St. L. K. C. & N. pf.
100.....100⅞ 350.....42⅛ 300.....84
100.....100⅞ 300.....42⅛ 100.....85
300.....101⅛ 500.....42⅜ St. L. K. C. & N. pf.
100.....101⅞ 300.....42⅜ 100.....c. 35⅞
100.....b.c. 16 100.....42⅜ 100.....b.c. 36
100.....b.c. 16 100.....42⅜ 100.....b.c. 36
100.....b.c. 16 100.....42⅜ 100.....b.c. 36

THE REAL ESTATE MARKET.

The only sale effected at the Exchange yesterday, Wednesday, Jan. 29, was one by E. H. Ludlow & Co., who, by order of the Supreme Court, in foreclosure. Theodore Arnold, Esq., Referee, sold the three-story brick dwelling, with lot 16.8 by 50.4, No. 169 West 48th-st., north side, 50 feet east of 7th-av., for $7,800, to Mary M. Leavitt.

The following legal auction was postponed: Sale by C. J. Tower, of the house, with lot, No. 923 3d-av., east side, 85.5 feet east of 55th-st., adjourned to Feb. 12.

RECORDED REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

NEW-YORK.

Tuesday, Jan. 28.

120th-st., n. s., 268.9 ft. w. of Avenue A, 18.9x100.10; Henry Mulholland and wife to New-York Life Insurance Company..... nom.

Ridge-st., n. s., 66 ft. w. of Broome-st., 34x75; Julius Fischer and wife to Eva Michenfelder.. $9,700

Stanton-st., w. s., 57 ft. s. of Norfolk-st., 50x23; Same to same..... 8,150

113th-st., n. s., 263 ft. w. of 6th-av., 22.4 4-5x103.3; William H. Christie to William H. McDermot..... 6,000

45th-st., n. s., 245 ft. e. of 5th-av., 20x100.5; Ebenezer B. Shafer and wife to Louise Simmons..... 29,000

40th-st., s. s., 150 ft. e. of 10th-av., 25x98.9; Thomas McGrath to James Gonnoud..... 2,000

15th-st., n. s., 230 ft. w. of Avenue B, 25x103.3; Chesis E. Zeller and husband to Hattie S. H. Hills..... 300

52d-st., n. s., 110 ft. e. of 8d-av., 18.8x100.5; Charles R. Parfitt and wife to Martha B. Tomkins..... 13,000

Madison-av., 70 ft. n. of 63d-st., rear lot, 12x28; Sarah E. Cornish, Executrix, to John M. Pinckney..... 1,250

114th-st., n. s., 130 ft. w. of 4th-av., 25x100.11; Augusta Anker to Catharine Sulzer.. nom.

86th-st., n. s., 175 ft. w. of Avenue B., 25x140; same to same..... 4,001

Water-st., No. 476; Sarah E. Davis and husband to Frederick Delgke and others..... nom.

7th-av., n. w. corner of 91st-st., 100x100.8½; S. S. Rapallo, Referee, to Citizens' Insurance Company..... 8,000

Westchester-av., n. w. corner of 156th-st, 113.6 x100, to Tinton-av., 23d Ward; Horace P. Wilson and wife to Harold S. Kirk..... 7,000

Concord-av., w. s., 71.2 ft. n. of Westchester-av., 50x87, 23d Ward; Same to Same..... 1,250

Hamilton-st., s. s., No. 10, 25x100; also, Catharine-st, irregular; William Ward to Nicholas Schroeder..... 100

Cherry-st., No. 142, 25x114.10; Same to Same.. 100

2d-av., w. s., 82 ft. n. of 74th-st., 20.2x77; Elizabeth Scaffner and husband to Michael Keefer.. 10,000

1st-av., e. s., 49.6 ft. s. of 36th-st, 49.1.9x100; Maria Davenport and husband to David Jones.. 11,500

Spring-st., No. 208, 25x100; W. Sinclair, Jr., Referee, to Broadway Savings Institution..... 8,000

Water-st., n. s., No. 332; also Lewis-st., 43.7x76; also, Lewis-st., n. w. corner 3d-st., 81.3x14.6; Francis Loqueer and wife to Robert Loqueer and others..... nom.

Pearl-st., No. 478, 25x120; William D. Lyons to Catharine Lyons, Executrix..... 10,000

Pearl-st., No. 476, 25x100; Catharine Lyons, executrix, to William D. Lyons, Executor..... 10,000

85th-st., s. s., 300 ft. e. of 5th-av., 25x102.2; Catherine Perdue and husband to Mary Perdue.. nom.

84th-st., s. s., 150 ft. e. of 2d-av., 25x100.5; James Bray to Mary Sanderson..... nom.

Hester-st., n. s., No. 101, 2.3x50; Catharine Bailey to Delia Woodruff..... nom.

Canal-st., s. s., 205 ft. e. of Robbins-av., 50x125, 23d Ward; William J. Best, Receiver German Savings Bank of Morrisania, to John Walker..... 1,725

Washington and West sts., 40x150; also, Pier No. 9 North River; also, Record-st., corner of Washington-st., 100.2x — feet; deed dated 1924; Peter Schermerhorn to Oliver W. Willis..... 100

6th-av., 160 ft. w. of, between 120th and 121st sts. gore lot; Jane E. McEvers to James M. Brown..... nom.

120th-st., n. s., 145 ft. w. of 4th-av., irregular; James M. Brown and husband to Jane E. McEvers. nom.

LEASES RECORDED.

1st-av., e. s., 84 ft. n. of 4th-st., 21.10x87.11, 20 years; William As or, Trustee of, to Charles Lindner..... $425

4th-st., s. s., 275 ft. w. of Avenue A, 25x96.2, 2 years; William B. Astor to William Wolf and others..... 175

1st-av., n. e. corner of 4th-st., 21x87.11, 20 years, William A tor, Trustee of, to Morris Cohen and others..... 525

6th-av., No. 785, 3 years; Henry W. Hart, Trustee, to Frederick Michels..... 2,090

Pier No. 24 East River, ½ part of, 5 years; E. H. Schermerhorn, Executor, to Stephen H. Mills..... 4,500

MORTGAGES RECORDED.

Attea William, and wife to the Mutual Life Insurance Company; No. 143 West 42d-st., 17 months..... $12,500

Austin, A. L. to Charles A. Briggs; w. s. New-av., n. of 143th-st..... ----

Brown, Frank G. and wife, to Helen M. Starr, guardian, &c.; s. e. corner of Alexander-av. and 134th-st., 1 year..... 2,325

Same to same; n. e. corner of Alexander-av. and 134th-st., 1 year..... 2,325

Bull, Samuel B., and wife to the Mutual Life Insurance Company; No. 723 7th-av., 17 months..... 12,500

Connolly, William, and wife to John Burlinson; e. s. Avenue A, n. of 75th-st., 3 years..... 400

Evans, Davis W., to Lewis E. Crane; No. 164 East 81st-st., 5 years..... 5,000

Bleser, Jane, and wife to William A. Cauldwell; n. s. 30th-st., w. of 1st-av., 3 years..... 12,500

Green, Amanda E., and husband to the New-York Mutual Gas-light Company; East Gramercy-place, n. e. corner of 20th-st. to 21st-st., to secure notes for..... 1,484

Genarin, Frederick, and wife to George B. Snyder; n. s. 44th-st., e. of 9th-av., 3 years..... 3,000

Lyons, William D., to Cornelius A. Williamson; No. 478 Pearl-st., 1 year..... 3,000

Luquer, Robert S., and others to Janette Pirsson, and others, Executors, &c.; Lewis-st., north west corner of 3d-st., and other property, to secure annuity to Margaret P. H. Luquer.. 806

Minor, Charlotte E., and husband to Robert Ross; s. s. 131st-st., w. of 4th-av., 3 years..... 2,200

Reed, James, and wife to Esther Emily James; No. 221 West 27th-st., 3 years..... 6,500

Riley, George P., to William H. Riley; e. s. Ogden-av., n. of Devoe-st., 3 years..... 1,900

Simmons, Louisa, to E. B. Shafer; No. 14 East 4th-st., 9 months..... 3,000

Sisters of the Poor of St. Francis in the State of New-York to The Mutual Life Insurance Company; Nos. 605, 607, 609, 611, and 613 5th-av., 17 months..... 31,000

Seward, Daniel J., and wife to James M. Brown, Trustee, &c.; w. s. 8th-av., s. of 20th-st..... 47,500

Sweeny, Charles L., and wife to the Trustees of the New-York Universalist Relief Fund; No. 273 Bowery, 3 years..... 12,000

Vetter, Jacob, and wife to Emile Senouville; n. s. 3d-st., s. of Avenue B, 4 months..... 1,500

Weiss, Sohn M., and wife to Caroline Kohl; n. s. 135th-st., near Cortlandt-av., 3 years..... 400

Wolf, Lob, and wife to Roseline and Emma Heyman; No. 196 East Broadway and Nos. 153 and 185 Division-st., 3 years..... 3,000

Wright, Martha E., and husband to Charles Crary, Receiver, &c.; n. s. 116th-st., w. of 2d-av., 5 years..... 6,500

SATISFACTIONS OF MORTGAGES.

Manhattan Savings Institution to Elizabeth Van Anthon..... $4,500

Manhattan Savings Institution to Louisa D. Van Buren..... 15,000

Obl. Ernest, to Eliza Ehlert..... 1,700

Streberg, R. M., to A. S. Levy..... 12,236

Waters, Catharine, and another to Mary J. Garcia..... 1,500

Wolf, Lob, and another, Executors, &c., to Roseline and Emma Heyman..... nom.

CITY REAL ESTATE.

PACIFIC HOTEL AND FURNITURE FOR sale at a bargain, by order of the Executors, to close the estate of the late Jos. Sweeny, comprising Nos. 170, 172, and 174 (about 50 feet front on) Greenwich-st., Lais City. Fully and completely furnished. Now is and has been for many years in successful operation; well and favorably known as a first class business hotel. For further information apply to HOALR MORGAN, No. 2 Pine-st., or H. E. LUDLOW & CO., No. 3 Pine-st.

FOR SALE—IN 68TH-ST.: COMMENCING 225 feet east of 5th-av., five houses, varying in size from 18 to 22 feet front; three of these houses have dining-room extensions, 16x26 feet; the location is one of the best in this City. Inquire of ANTHONY MOWBRAY on the premises.

FOR SALE—AN ASSORTMENT OF HOUSES, of gold prices, from $3,500 to $15,000. Situate on 2d, 81st, 86th, and 87th sts. The beautiful corners, 79th and 80th sts. and 1st-av.; desirable as an investment. Call and see them. Office, corner 79th-st. and 1st-av.

A LOT ON 57TH-ST., 25X140, WITH RIGHT of alley, fronting the Park. Two and 57th-st. Price, $20,000. Also, No. 627 West 51st-st.; price, $8,000. For sale by order of Executors to close an estate. JAMES PRICE, No. 200 Pine-st.

$25,000 FOR 20-FOOT WEST 57TH-st. house, near 6th-av.; $15,000 for 5th-st. near Broadway. J. W. STEVENS, Broadway, corner 52d-st.

FOR SALE—ON WEST 57TH-ST., NEAR 5TH-av., an elegant four-story brown-stone house; finished finish and all modern improvements. Built expressly for the owner. Apply at No. 160 Fulton-st., Room 10.

CANAL-ST., NEAR BROADWAY.—FOR SALE, a desirable medium-sized property, suitable for wholesale trade. JESSE HOYT, No. 200 Hudson-st.

HARLEM—RAPID TRANSIT.

Houses, stores, and floors to let and for sale. PORTER & CO., No. 173 East 125th-st.

REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION.

EXECUTOR'S SALE.—RICHARD V. HARSTON, Auctioneer.—Two lots of land on north side of 78th-st., distant 250 feet east of 1st av., each lot being 25x102.2, will be sold at public auction, at the Exchange Sales-rooms, No. 111 Broadway, on TUESDAY, Feb. 4, 1879, at 12 o'clock noon. Terms at sale. By direction of Henry Ke nney, Executor.

A. Lorneys, No. 2 Greenwich-st., New-York City.

COUNTRY REAL ESTATE.

A BEAUTIFUL COUNTRY RESIDENCE AT TARRYTOWN.—Five acres land in lawn and garden, large and good stone house, and stable. The place is very elegibly located, and is surrounded by costly and elegant residences. For sale at $15,000—less than half its cost. Also, a residence at Eltingville, Staten Island; 8¾ acres land, frame house, and stable; price, $8,000. HOMER MORGAN, No. 2 Pine-st.

FOR SALE—FARM OF 84 ACRES, ALL UNDER cultivation, near Bound Brook, N. J.; high ground, healthy location; Raritan River runs along front of the place; one mile and a half from depot; splendid house, with lawn and shade trees; all kinds of outbuildings, in good order. Address W. D. BANCKER, No. 430 Clinton-av., Brooklyn.

A RARE CHANCE FOR INVESTMENT IN as large parcel of land of about 100 acres intact, on the high banks of the Hudson, situated about 18 miles, or 35 minutes, from the City Hall; part of an old family estate; prospects of future rise very great. For sale at a great bargain. HOMER MORGAN, No. 2 Pine-st.

CITY HOUSES TO LET.

TO RENT LOW—THREE-STORY FRAME House on 124th-st., near Madison-av.; all improvements; garden; rapid transit now; family in house. JAMES PRICE, No. 200 Hudson-st.

CITY HOUSES TO LET.

HOTEL ROYAL TO LEASE.—NOW FULL OF first-class guests; grand business opportunity for one prepared to act promptly. Address LANGLEY, No. 740 6th-av.

FLATS TO LET—CORNER 55TH-ST. AND 6TH-av., in complete order; seven rooms besides bath-room; have every convenience. Apply to FLOYD CLARKSON, No. 80 Wall-st., or to the janitor. No. 301 West 55th-st.

TO RENT—FINE HOUSE, OPPOSITE CENTRAL Park; cabinet finish; perfect order; elegant extension; stable on rear street; City and country combined. JAMES PRICE, No. 200 Hudson-st.

STORES, &C., TO LET.

OFFICES TO LET IN THE TIMES BUILDING. APPLY TO GEORGE JONES, TIMES OFFICE.

TO LET—WITH OR WITHOUT STEAM-POWER in the new iron-front building, Nos. 108, 110, 112, and 114 Wooster-st., the second floor, 50x50; the fifth floor, 100x100; one story, 100x100, or two stories, 50x100, and basements; Otis elevators, steam heaters, water, and gas throughout; will be rented very low. Inquire of BRUEN & MOORE, Nos. 41 and 43 West 14th-st.

TO RENT.—SEVERAL STORES IN THE NEW building corner of Greenwich and Harrison sts.; suitable for grocery, butter and cheese, and commission trade; also, six or eight apartments of four and three rooms each; improvements. Janitor, Room No. 1, or JAMES PRICE, No. 200 Hudson-st.

FIRST LOFT, NO. 12 LISPENARD-ST., 25x90; in perfect order; rent low. JOHN M. PINCKNEY, No. 24 Park-place.

SHIPPING.

CUNARD LINE.

NOTICE.

With the view of diminishing the chances of collision, the steamers of this line take a specified course for all seasons of the year.

On the outward passage from Queenstown to New-York or Boston, crossing the meridian of 50 at 43 latitude, or nothing to the north of 42.

On the homeward passage, crossing the meridian of 50 at 42, or nothing to the north of 43.

FROM NEW-YORK FOR LIVERPOOL OR QUEENSTOWN.

SCYTHIA.....WED., Feb. 5 HATAVIA.....WED., Feb. 19
ABYSSINIA.WED., Feb. 12 ALGERIA...WED., Feb. 26

Cabin passage and return tickets on favorable terms, including a special low rate for the Fall and Winter months.

Steerage tickets to and from all parts of Europe at very low rates. Freight and passage apply to No. 4 Bowling Green. CHAS. G. FRANCKLYN, Agent.

WHITE STAR LINE.

UNITED STATES AND ROYAL MAIL STEAMERS FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.

NOTICE—The steamers of this line take the Lane Routes recommended by Lieut. Maury, U. S. N., on both the outward and the homeward passages.

BRITANNIC, Capt. PERRY.....Saturday, Feb. 1, noon
REPUBLIC, Capt. IRVING.....Thursday, Feb. 6, 3 P. M.
GERMANIC Capt. KENNEDY.....Sat., Feb. 15, 12:30 P. M.

From White Star Dock, Pier No. 52 North River.

These steamers are uniform in size and unsurpassed in appointments. For saloon, second cabin, smoking, and bath rooms are amidships, where the noise and motion are least felt, affording a degree of comfort hitherto unattainable at sea.

Rates—Saloon, $80, $90, and $100, gold; return tickets on favorable terms; steerage, $28.

These steamers carry neither cattle, sheep, nor pigs.

For inspection of plans and other information, apply at the company's office, No. 37 Broadway, New-York, or No. 140 Walnut-st., Phila. R. J. CORTIS, Agent.

GUION LINE.

UNITED STATES MAIL STEAMERS FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.

Leaving Pier 38, N. R., foot of King-st.

WISCONSIN.....TUESDAY, Feb. 4, 3 P. M.
WYOMING.....TUESDAY, Feb. 11, 8 A. M.
NEVADA.....TUESDAY, Feb. 25, 7:30 A. M.
MONTANA.....TUESDAY, March 4, 2 P. M.
WISCONSIN.....TUESDAY, March 11, 7 A. M.

☞ These steamers are built of iron, in water-tight compartments, and are furnished with every requisite to make the passage across the Atlantic both safe and agreeable, having bath-room, smoking-room, drawing-room, piano, and library; also, experienced surgeon, stewardess, and caterer on each steamer. The state-rooms are all on deck, thus insuring the greatest of all luxuries at sea, perfect ventilation and light.

CABIN PASSAGE (according to state-room.) $55, $65, and $75. INTERMEDIATE, $40. STEERAGE, $26.

OFFICES, No. 29 BROADWAY.
WILLIAMS & GUION.

STATE LINE,

TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, DUBLIN, BELFAST, AND LONDONDERRY.

From Pier No. 42 N. R., foot of Canal-st., as follows:
STATE OF INDIANA.....Thursday, Jan. 30
STATE OF VIRGINIA.....Thursday, Feb 6

First Cabin, $55 to $70, according to accommodations; excursion tickets, $100 to $120. Second Cabin, $40; excursion tickets, $75. Steerage at lowest rates.

AUSTIN, BALDWIN & CO., Agents.
No. 72 Broadway, New-York.

STEERAGE tickets at No. 45 Broadway, and at the company's pier, foot of Canal-st., North River.

ANCHOR LINE U. S. MAIL STEAMERS, NEW-YORK AND GLASGOW.

From Pier No. 20 North River, New-York.

Ethiopia.....Feb. 1, noon Bolivia.....Feb. 15, noon
Anchoria.....Feb. 8, 6 A. M Circassia.....Feb. 22, 8 A. M.
Cabins, $60 to $80. Excursion tickets at reduced rates.

Second Cabin, $40. Steerage, $28.

NEW-YORK TO LONDON DIRECT.

From Pier No. 40 North River, foot of Charles-st.
California.....Feb. 1, noon Australia.....Feb. 8, 6 A. M.
Cabins, $55 and $65. Excursion tickets at reduced rates.
HENDERSON BROTHERS, Agents, 7 Bowling Green.

NORTH GERMAN LLOYD.

STEAM-SHIP LINE BETWEEN NEW-YORK, SOUTHAMPTON, AND BREMEN.

Company's pier foot of 2d-st., Hoboken.
WESER.....Sat., Feb. 1 HODER.....Sat., Feb. 15
MOSEL.....Sat., Feb. 8 DONAU.....Sat., Feb. 22

RATES OF PASSAGE FROM NEW-YORK TO SOUTHAMPTON, HAVRE, OR BREMEN.

First cabin.....$100
Second cabin.....60
Steerage.....30

Return tickets at reduced rates. Prepaid Steerage certificates, $30. STEERAGE TICKETS TO ALL POINTS IN THE SOUTH OF ENGLAND, $30.

OELRICHS & CO., No. 2 Bowling Green.

GENERAL TRANSATLANTIC COMPANY

between New-York and Havre.

Company's Pier, (new,) No. 42 North River, foot of Morton-st.

FRANCE, TEFDELLE.....Wednesday, Feb. 5, 3:30 P. M.
CANADA, FRANQUET.....Wednesday, Feb. 19, 3:30 P. M.
AMERIQUE, DELORD.....Wednesday, March 5, 3 P. M.

Steamers marked thus * do not carry steerage passengers.

Checks drawn on Credit Lyonnais of Paris in amounts to suit.

For freight and passengers apply to LOUIS DE BEBIAN, Agent, No. 55 Broadway.

INMAN LINE ROYAL MAIL STEAMERS, FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.

CITY OF MONTREAL.....Friday, Jan. 31, noon
CITY OF BERLIN.....Saturday, Feb. 8, 6:30 A. M.
CITY OF NEW-YORK.....Thursday, Feb. 13, 10:30 A. M.

From Pier No. 37 North River, foot of Charlton-st.

CABIN, $60, $80, and $100, gold. Return tickets on favorable terms. STEERAGE, at the lowest rates. Saloons, state-rooms, smoking and bath rooms amidships. These steamers do not carry cattle, sheep, or pigs. JOHN G. DALE, Agent.

Nos. 31 and 33 Broadway, N. Y.
Philadelphia Office, No. 105 South 4th-st.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—THE STEAM-SHIP CITY OF MONTREAL will sail on FRIDAY, Jan. 31, at noon, from Pier 37, foot of Charlton-st., North River. JOHN G. DALE, Agent.

IMPERIAL GERMAN MAIL.

Hamburg American Packet Company's Line for PLYMOUTH, CHERBOURG, and HAMBURG.

ORIENT.....Thurs., Feb. 13 SILESIA.....Thurs., Feb. 20
CIMBRIA...Thurs., Feb. 6 WIELAND...Thurs., Feb. 20

Rates of passage to Plymouth, London, Cherbourg, Hamburg, and all points in England: First Cabin, $100; second cabin, $80; Steerage, $30.

KUNHARDT & CO., C. B. RICHARD & BOAS.
General Agents, General Passenger Agents,
No. 61 Broad-st., N. Y. No. 61 Broadway, N. Y.

ROTTERDAM LINE.

Steamers leave Jersey City, near Pavonia Ferry.

W. A. SCHOLTEN.....Saturday, Feb. 1
MAAS.....Wednesday, Feb. 12

Cabin, $65-$70. Intermediate, $45-$50. Steerage, $23. H. CAZAUX, General Agent, No. 27 South William-st.
PUNCH, EDYE & CO., C. MORRIS,
27 So. Wm-st., Freight Agts. 150 B'way, Gen. Passage Agt.

FLORIDA RAILROAD AND STEAM-SHIP LINE.

ONLY DIRECT LINE TO FLORIDA.
SAILING EVERY TUESDAY.
LOWEST RATES OF FREIGHT AND PASSAGE.
Steamer ASHLAND, SATURDAY, Feb. 1,
and every Saturday thereafter.

For Fernandina direct, from Pier No. 12 N. R., at 3 P. M. Only line issuing through tickets and bills lading to all points in Florida, and on Chattahoochie, Appalachicola, and Flint Rivers, and BRUNSWICK, Ga. Insurance ¼ per cent. Bills lading signed on pier. For further information, through bills lading, and passage rates, apply to J. K. ROBERTS, No. 177 West-st., up stairs.

SAVANNAH AND FLORIDA.

From Pier No. 43 North River, at 3 P. M.

CITY OF SAVANNAH, Capt. MALLORY.....Sat., Feb. 1
GATE CITY, Capt. DAUGHTY.....Wednesday, Feb. 5

Connecting with the Central Railroad of Georgia. Atlantic and Gulf Railroad, Georgia and Florida Steamboat Company, and with the new and elegant iron steamer ST. JOHNS.

C. D. OWENS, General Agent A. & G. R. R., No. 315 Broadway.
GEO. YONGE, Agent, Ocean S. S. Co. and Central R. R. of Ga., No. 409 Broadway.

PACIFIC MAIL STEAM-SHIP COMPANY.

Pier foot Canal-st., North River.

For SAN FRANCISCO via ISTHMUS OF PANAMA:
Steam-ship ACAPULCO.....Friday, Jan. 31, noon

Connecting for South and Central America and Mexico.

From San Francisco for Japan and China:
Steam-ship CHINA.....Wednesday, March 5, noon

From SAN FRANCISCO to HONOLULU, NEW-ZEALAND, and AUSTRALIA:
Steam-ship CITY OF NEW-YORK. Monday, Feb. 17, noon

For freight or general information apply to Company's office, on the pier, foot of Canal-st., North River, and for passage at Company's Ticket Office, No. 257 Broadway.

NEW-YORK AND HAVANA DIRECT MAIL LINE.

These first-class steam-ships sail regularly at 3 P. M. from Pier No. 13 North River, at following:

Steam-ship MORRO CASTLE.....WEDNESDAY, Feb. 19
Steamer SANTIAGO DE CUBA.....SATURDAY, March 1

Accommodations unsurpassed. For freight or passage apply to WILLIAM P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green. LAWTON BROS., Agents in Havana.

SHIPPING.

GREAT SOUTHERN

FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE, FOR CHARLESTON, S. C., FLORIDA PORTS, AND ALL POINTS IN THE SOUTH AND SOUTH-WEST.

SAILING FROM PIER NO. 27 NORTH RIVER, WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS at 3 P. M.

CITY OF ATLANTA.....SATURDAY, Feb. 1
CHARLESTON.....WEDNESDAY, Feb. 5

SUPERIOR PASSENGER ACCOMMODATIONS.

Insurance to destination, one-half of one per cent. Goods forwarded free of commission. Passenger tickets and bills of lading issued and signed at the office of JAMES W. QUINTARD & CO., Agents, Office on the Pier.

Or W. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green.
Or BENTLEY D. HASELL, General Agent,
Great Southern Freight Line, 317 Broadway.

PALMETTO FREIGHT LINE.

VIA STEAM-SHIPS TO CHARLESTON, S. C., and the SAVANNAH AND CHARLESTON RAILROAD, to all points in the South and South-west.

Freight rates and insurance at lowest figures.
Bills of lading signed at Pier 27 North River.
CHAS. D. OWENS, General Agent
Palmetto Freight Line,
No. 315 Broadway.

UNITED STATES AND BRAZIL MAIL STEAM-SHIP LINE.

FOR ST. THOMAS, PARA, PERNAMBUCO, BAHIA, AND RIO DE JANEIRO.

Connecting at St. Thomas with German steamers for Porto Rico and Spanish Main. The new first-class iron steam-ship CITY OF PARA, Capt. CARPENTER, will sail for the above ports on Wednesday, Feb. 5, at 3 P. M.

Positively no freight received after 3d. Freight must be paid in advance. Freight at low rates taken for the above ports. Freight received at Roberts' Dock, Brooklyn. Insurance lower than by any other line. Shippers desiring insurance can effect same under our open policy. For freight engagements or passage, having elegant accommodations, apply to C. H. MALLORY & CO., Agents. Office, Pier No. 20 East River.

NEW-YORK, HAVANA & MEXICAN MAIL S. S. LINE. Steamers leave Pier No. 3 North River at 3 P. M.

FOR HAVANA DIRECT AND VERA CRUZ.

Calling at Progreso, Campeche, and Tuxpan.

CITY OF WASHINGTON, (Havana only.) Thurs., Feb. 6
CITY OF MERIDA.....Saturday, Feb. 8
CITY OF NEW-YORK.....Saturday, Feb. 22

Steamer leaves New Orleans Jan. 29 and Feb. 16 for Vera Cruz via Matamoros, Tampico, Tuxpan, connecting with steamer for Havana, New-York, and above ports.

F. ALEXANDRE & SONS, Nos. 3 and 33 Broadway.

NEW-YORK AND CUBA MAIL S. S. LINE FOR HAVANA DIRECT.

FROM PIER 17 EAST RIVER AT 3 P. M.
Magnificent accommodation for passengers.
S. S. NIAGARA.....Saturday, Feb. 1
S. S. SARATOGA.....Wednesday, Feb. 12

Tickets issued also for VERA CRUZ AND WEST INDIA ISLANDS in connection with French and English S. S. Lines from Havana. JAMES E. WARD & CO., No. 113 Wall-st.

RAILROADS.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD. GREAT TRUNK LINE AND UNITED STATES MAIL ROUTE.

On and after Jan. 13, 1879.

Trains leave New-York, via Desbrosses and Cortlandt Streets Ferries, as follows:

Express for Harrisburg, Pittsburg, the West and South, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, 9e A. M., 6 and 8:30 P. M., daily.

For Williamsport, Lock Haven, Corry, and Erie at 8:30 P. M., connecting at Corry for Titusville, Petroleum Centre, and the Oil Regions. Williamsport and Lock Haven, 9 A. M.

Express for Baltimore, Washington, and the South, "Limited Washington Express" of Pullman Parlor Cars, daily, except Sunday, 10 A. M. Sunday, 9 A. M. Express for Baltimore, regular at 4:30 and 8:20 A. M., 1 and 10 P. M.; Sunday, 4:30 A. M. and 10 P. M. For Baltimore, 4 P. M., except Sunday.

Express for Philadelphia, 4:30, 7:30, 8:20, 9, (10 limited) 11 A. M., 2, 3:30, 4, 5, 6, 7:30, 8:30, and 10 P. M. Sunday, 4:30 and 9 A. M., 5, 6, 7:30, 8:30, and 10 P. M. Emigrant and second class, 7:30 P. M.

Boats of "Brooklyn Annex" connect with all through trains at Jersey City, affording a speedy and direct transfer for Brooklyn travel.

Trains arrive: From Pittsburg, 6:50, 10:40 A. M., 10:10 P. M., daily; 9:40 A. M., 6:20 P. M., daily, except Monday. From Washington and Baltimore, 6:50 A. M., 2, 8:50, 4:45, 10:10 P. M. Sunday, 6:50 A. M. and 10:10 P. M. From Philadelphia, 2, 3:30, 8:30, 9:40, 10:40, 11:30 A. M., 2, 3:50, 4:55, 6:20, 8:30, and 10:10 P. M. Sunday, 4:30, 6:50, 10:40, 11:30 A. M., 6:20, 10:10 P. M.

Ticket offices, No. 526 and No. 944 Broadway, No. 1 Astor House, and foot of Desbrosses and Cortlandt sts.; No. 4 Court-st., and Brooklyn ex Annex Depot, foot of Fulton-st., Brooklyn; Nos. 114, 116, and 118 Hudson-st., Hoboken; Depot, Jersey City; Emigrant Ticket Office, No. 8 Battery-place.

FRANK THOMSON, General Passenger Agent.
General Manager.

TO PHILADELPHIA VIA PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

THE OLD ESTABLISHED ROUTE AND SHORT LINE between NEW-YORK AND PHILADELPHIA.

14 Through Trains each way daily. 3 Depots in Philadelphia, 2 in New-York.

Double Track, the most Improved Equipment, and the Fastest time consistent with absolute safety.

On and after Dec. 16, 1878.

Express Trains leave New-York via Desbrosses and Cortlandt Streets Ferries, as follows:
4:30, 7:30, 8:20, 9, 10, (limited,) 11 A. M., 1, 3:30, 4, 5, 6, 7:30, 8:30, and 10 P. M. Sundays, 4:30 and 9 A. M., 5, 6, 7:30, 8:30, 10 and 10 P. M.

Boats of "Brooklyn Annex" connect with all through trains at Jersey City, affording a speedy and direct transfer for Brooklyn travel.

Returning, trains leave Philadelphia 12:01, 3:45, 3:55, 7, 7:35, 8, 8:30, and 11 A. M., (Limited Express, 1:30 P. M.,) 2, 4, 5:30, 7, and 7:35 P. M. On Sunday, 12:01, 3:45, 3:55, 8:30 A. M., 7:35 P. M.

Ticket offices, Nos. 526 and 944 Broadway, No. 1 Astor House, and foot of Desbrosses and Cortlandt sts; No. 4 Court-st., and Brooklyn ex Annex, foot of Fulton-st., Brooklyn; Nos. 114, 116, and 118 Hudson-st., Hoboken; Depot, Jersey City. Emigrant Ticket Office, No. 8 Battery-place.

FRANK THOMSON, General Manager. L. P. FARMER, General Passenger Agent.

NEW-YORK CENTRAL AND HUDSON RIVER RAILROAD.—Commencing Dec. 30, 1878, through trains will leave Grand Central Depot:

8:00 A. M., Western and Northern Express. Drawing-room cars to Albany and Rochester, and from Albany to Montreal via Saratoga.

10:30 A. M., Special Chicago and Western Express, with Drawing-room cars to Canandaigua, Rochester, and Buffalo.

11:00 A. M., Express to Albany and Troy, with connections to Utica and Rutland.

4:00 P. M., Mail and Central Express, with through sleeping car via St. Albans.

6:00 P. M., St. Louis Express daily, with sleeping cars for St. Louis, running through Niagara Falls, Toledo, and Detroit, and for Montreal, excepting Sunday night, via Saratoga.

7:30 P. M., Fast Express for Rochester and Corning via Geneva. Sleeping cars to Geneva and Rochester.

8:30 P. M., Pacific Express, with sleeping cars, for Rochester, Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Cleveland, Toledo, Detroit, and Chicago, and, excepting Saturday night, to Lowville and Watertown.

Tickets for sale at Nos. 252, 261, and 413 Broadway, and at Westcott Express Company's offices, Nos. 3 Park-place, 785 and 942 Broadway, New-York, and 333 Washington-st., Brooklyn.

C. B. MEEKER, General Passenger Agent.

THE ERIE RAILWAY

will hereafter be known by its new name, THE NEW-YORK, LAKE ERIE AND WESTERN RAILROAD.

Arrangement of Trains, 5 Depots, Trains From Chambers-street Depot. (For 23d-st. see note below.)

9 A. M., daily, except Sundays, Cincinnati and Chicago Day Express, through cars to Dunkirk and Buffalo.

6 P. M., daily, Fast St. Louis Express, arriving at Buffalo 8 A. M., connecting with fast trains to the West and South-west. Pullman's best Drawing-room Sleeping Coaches to Buffalo.

7 P. M., daily, Pacific Express to the West. Sleeping Coaches through to Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Cincinnati, and Chicago, without change. Hotel dining coaches to Chicago.

7 P. M., except Sundays, Western Emigrant train.

Above trains leave Twenty-third-Street Ferry at 8:45 A. M., 5:45 and 6:45 P. M.

For local trains see time-tables and cards in hotels and depots. JNO. N. ABBOTT, General Passenger Agent.

NEW-YORK, NEW-HAVEN, AND HARTFORD RAILROAD.—Commencing Dec. 2, 1878, second-Street Depot for Boston at 8:05, 11 A. M., 12 M., 1, 3, 9, 10, 11:35 P. M. For Boston and Albany R. R.—8:05, 11 A. M., 12 M., 3, 9 P. M. For Springfield, Conn. River R. R.—8:05, 11 A. M., 12 M., 3 P. M. For New-York and New-England R. R.—8:05 A. M., 12 M., 11:35 P. M. For Newport—8:05 A. M., 3 P. M. For Shore Line Division—8:05 A. M., 1, 3, 5:15, 10 P. M. For Boston and New-York Air Line R. R.—9, 9:05 A. M., 3 P. M. For New-Haven and Northampton R. R.—8:05 A. M., 3 P. M. For Naugatuck R. R.—3, 8:05 A. M., 1, 3, 4:40 P. M. For Housatonic R. R.—8:05 A. M., 3 P. M. For Danbury and Norwalk R. R.—8:05 A. M., 3, 4:40, 9 P. M. For New-Canaan R. R.—8:05 A. M., 1, 4:40 P. M. For local trains, see time-tables.

LEHIGH VALLEY RAILROAD.

ARRANGEMENT PASSENGER TRAINS, JAN. 1, 1878.

Leave depots, foot of Cortlandt and Desbrosses sts., at 6:30 P. M.—Night express, daily for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Wilkesbarre, Pittston, Sayre, Elmira, Geneva, Auburn, Rochester, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, and the West. Pullman sleeping coaches attached. Central Eastern Office, corner Church and Cortlandt sts. CHARLES H. CUMMINGS, Agent.

ROBERT H. SAYRE, Superintendent and Engineer.

WICKFORD RAILROAD ROUTE TO NEWPORT, R. I.—Passengers for this line take 8:05 A. M. and 1 P. M. express train from Grand Central Depot, arriving at 4:10 and 9 P. M. at Newport.

THEODORE WARLEN, Superintendent.

MUSICAL.

EXTRAORDINARY OFFER FOR JANUARY.—SPLENDID ORGANS, $45, $50; 2 sets reeds, $50; 1 do., $40; 1 do., $35. 7-oct., all ROSEWOOD PIANOS, $130; 7 1-3 do., $140; ALL ROSEWOOD GRAND do. do. $175. CASH, $84, $90, $99, $105, $108, $114, $120, $125, $130, $135, $140, $144, $150, and upward. Sold, also, for easy payments. A small organ of best quality for $15 per quarter (3 mos.) for 10 quarters. CATALOGUES FREE.

DANCING.

ALLEN DODWORTH'S SCHOOL
FOR DANCING AND DEPORTMENT,
No. 681 Fifth-avenue.

NOW OPEN. FOR TERMS, SEND FOR CIRCULAR.

NOTICE.—An extra class for children (beginners and others) will commence on Monday, Jan. 6, to meet on Mondays and Thursdays, from 3:30 to 5:30 P. M.

COAL AND WOOD.

EMPIRE WOOD AND COAL DEPOT, 150 and 152, 154 East 26th-st. Prices reduced. WILLIAMS.

FINANCIAL.

CITY OF ST. LOUIS

6 PER CENT. GOLD BONDS,

NEW LOAN.

$675,000, or £135,000,

HAVING TWENTY YEARS TO RUN FROM JAN. 1, 1879. Each bond is for $1,000 U. S. Gold Coin, or £200 (Pounds Sterling,) payable to bearer.

The principal at maturity, and the simi-annual interest, (January and July,) are payable either at the NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE in New-York, or at the office of J. S. MORGAN & CO., London, in pounds sterling, at the option of the holder.

The above loan having recently been awarded us, we now OFFER THE BONDS FOR SALE.

BLAKE BROS. & CO.,

NO. 54 WALL-ST., NEW-

OFFICIAL ABUSES STATED.

FORMAL CHARGES AGAINST THE COUNTY CLERK.

A COPY SERVED YESTERDAY ON MR. GUMBLETON—GOV. ROBINSON REQUIRES HIM TO SHOW CAUSE ON FEB. 10 WHY HE SHOULD NOT BE REMOVED.

A copy of the formal charges, preferred by the Bar Association's Committee on Official Extortions against the County Clerk, was served on that official at about 2 P. M. yesterday, together with a copy of Gov. Robinson's mandate directing Mr. Gumbleton to show cause on Feb. 10 why he should not be removed from his office. This movement on the part of the committee is an unexpected one, inasmuch as it was generally believed that they would await the result of the legal proceedings instituted by them for the purpose of getting access to the fee-books of the County Clerk, before applying to the Governor for the removal of Mr. Gumbleton. Indeed, many believed that the committee, in consequence of his refusal to allow them to inspect the books in question, were unprovided with evidence sufficient to warrant an appeal to the Governor. It will be seen, however, that, although the instances of extortion and the like are not as many or as glaring as those given in the charges against Register Loew, they are sufficiently definite for the purpose. One of the charges is the refusal of Mr. Gumbleton to allow his books to be inspected, and it is hardly considered probable that in view of this circumstance he will be permitted to object to the charges as being indefinite. The petition on which the Governor acted, and in which the charges against the County Clerk are set forth, is signed by all the members of the Bar Association's committee, namely, Messrs. Artemas H. Holmes, Henry E. Knox, George De Forest Lord, Charles F. MacLean, and J. Adriance Bush, and was sworn to by them on Jan. 27. They petition as "residents of the City and County of New-York and counselors at law of the Supreme Court of this State," and charge Mr. Gumbleton "with neglect of duty in office, with malfeasance in office, with malpersonation in office, and with extortion." Thirteen distinct and specific accusations are made against the County Clerk.

The first of these is that Mr. Gumbleton "did not, as required by law, during the period between the 1st day of January, 1877, and the day of the date hereof, or did not, on the 5th day of October, A. D. 1878, keep an exact account, in a book or books, of all fees, perquisites, and emoluments actually received by him for any service done by him or his assistants in his or their official capacity, by virtue of any law of this State, and of all fees, perquisites, and emoluments which he, the said Henry A. Gumbleton, was entitled to demand and receive from any persons for any service rendered by him in his official capacity."

As a second specification, the committee assert that, if Mr. Gumbleton did keep such a book or books, the same "did not show when and for whom every such service had been performed, the nature of such service, and the fees chargeable therefor." The third, fourth, and fifth specifications set forth that such book or books were not kept open for inspection, as required by law; that Mr. Gumbleton refused to allow the members of the committee to inspect the same, although the request was "made in business hours and with the assurance that such examination would be made without interference with any subordinate who might be using the same, or with the public business;" and that he refused to allow the book or books to be examined by Henry E. Knox and George De Forest Lord on Dec. 14 and 16, 1878, by J. Adriance Bush on Dec. 13, 1878, and Jan. 13, 1879; by Walter Edwards, Jr., on Jan. 24 and 25, 1879, and by Frederick S. Wait on Jan. 25, 1879.

The sixth specification takes up another branch of the subject, and one, moreover, which has not been heretofore brought to public notice. By law the County Clerk is required, within 10 days from the expiration of each calendar month, to transmit, under oath, to the Controller a transcript of his accounts he is obliged to keep of "all fees, perquisites, and emoluments actually received by him for any service done by him or his assistants in his or their official capacity, by virtue of any law of this State," as well as of the fees, &c., he was entitled to demand and receive for official services. It is charged that Mr. Gumbleton did not do this, or that if he did send any so-called transcript of the kind to the Controller, such pretended transcript did not, as required by law, contain a statement "specifying the total amount received from each person, and the name of each person, and also a statement of the fees, perquisites, and emoluments which he, the said Gumbleton, as such Clerk of the City and County of New-York, or his assistants, were entitled to demand from any person for services rendered in his or their official capacity, by virtue of any law of this State, since the making by him, the said Gumbleton, of the last preceding return made by him, specifying the amounts chargeable to such persons, the name of such persons, and the character of the service or services rendered."

By the seventh specification the verification by Mr. Gumbleton of his transcripts to the Controller is pronounced an improper one. The eighth specification deals wholly with his so-called transcript of fees received in January, 1877, which is declared to be an evasion of the requirements of section 10, chapter 432 of the Laws of 1847. In this transcript or return Mr. Gumbleton has items like this: "To cash from J. Henry Ford, for month, $407;" "to cash from Gerome Hardie, for month, $475 50," and similar notes of receipts from Stephen E. Durgee, Edward McCue, William E. Haskin, William Sinclair, William Bamb, John Von Glahn, and Michael F. McLaughlin, and for stenographers' fees. The persons mentioned, say the committee, were not persons for whom official services were performed or rendered in the County Clerk's office, but were simply Mr. Gumbleton's assistants or employees. Mr. Gumbleton's returns of fees for other months were similar to this one, "each of said papers being an evasion of law."

The accusations of extortion begin with the ninth specification, which sets forth that he, the said Henry A. Gumbleton, then and there being the Clerk of the City and County of New-York, in disregard and contravention of the statute of this State, providing and commanding that (no officer whatever or other person to whom fees or compensation shall be allowed by law for any service, shall take or receive any other or greater fee or reward for such service but such as is or shall be allowed by the laws of this State), for the period between the 1st day of January, A. D. 1877, and the day of the date hereof, or during one or more of the months embraced in such period, habitually took or received, or caused or permitted to be taken or received in his office, fees or compensation for filing and recording papers, required by law to be filed and recorded in his office, in excess of the amount which he was by law authorized to charge, take, or receive therefor."

By the tenth specification it is charged that Mr. Gumbleton, in violation of law, took, received, or demanded or charged, or permitted the same to be done for filing and recording in his office the fee of $1 in each of the cases mentioned below, the charge being in each instance in excess of that authorized by law:

Date.	Title. Plaintiff.	Defendant.	No. Words.
1877, Aug. 9	Backus	Bender	330
1878, July 8	Wammer	Walsh	345
1877, Aug. 4	Bogert	Fish	310
1877, Oct. 5	Jockel	Greene	350
1877, Nov. 2	Wammer	Walsh	405
1877, Sept. 25	Roges	Brunner, No. 1	380
1877, Dec. 1	Townsend	Curry	330
1877, Oct. 1	N. Y. Life, &c.	Forman, No. 1	365
1877, Nov. 2	N. Y. Life, &c.	Hargrave	375
1878, Oct. 8	Van Wyck	Brettell	396
1877, Feb. 13	Wandell	Gregory	280
1877, March 16	Hackemann	Arnstein	465
1878, Oct. 17	Thorne	Doriand	410
1878, Nov. 2	Webb	Wimer	495
1877, Sept. 5	Grice	Fox	375
1877, Sept. 8	Belmont	Martin	365
1877, June 21	Metzer	Eckhardt	370
1877, March 7	Valentine	Goebeler	350

The eleventh specification sets forth that he, "in violation of law, or without any authority therefor, during the period between the 1st of January, A. D. 1877, and the 1st day of December, A. D. 1878, or during one or more of the months embraced in such period, habitually or frequently took or received, or demanded, or charged, or caused, or permitted to be taken, or received, or demanded, or charged, a commission or allowance at the rate of 1 per cent., or at some other rate, upon sums deposited with him by order of the Supreme Court, or by order of some Judge thereof, or by statute."

The twelfth of the charges is that he, during the same period, "or during one or more of the months embraced in said period, habitually or frequently, in violation of law, took, or received, or demanded, or charged, or caused, or permitted to be taken or received, or demanded, or charged, the sum of $1 25 from persons sworn at his office as notaries public and furnished at his said office with a certificate as notaries public, the said sum being in excess of the fees allowed by law for such service."

In the thirteenth and last of the specifications it is charged that Mr. Gumbleton, on Jan 25, 1879, "refused to exhibit, on request or demand, any book or books kept by him as such Clerk, in pretended compliance with the requirements of section 9 of chapter 432 of the Laws of 1847, except upon condition that the person desiring to inspect or examine the same shall first sign a certificate to the effect, in substance, that the person is not in anywise connected with a certain committee of the Association of the Bar of the City of New-York; that he does not seek the inspection for the purpose of giving information to said committee; that he will not furnish any information to said committee, and that he does not seek the inspection for the purpose of gathering information to enable the said committee to prefer charges against said Clerk of the County of New-York; and this without warrant of law, and in violation of the laws of this State."

The Governor's mandate to Mr. Gumbleton, to which is attached a notice informing the County Clerk that he is to have an opportunity to be heard, is as follows:

Whereas, Artemas H. Holmes, Henry E. Knox, and other citizens of the City and County of New-York, have preferred charges of official misconduct, neglect of duty in office, and malfeasance and malversation in office, against Henry A. Gumbleton, Clerk of the County of New-York, and upon such charges have requested the removal of the said Henry A. Gumbleton from his said office; now, therefore, it is hereby ordered that the said Henry A. Gumbleton do make answer in writing, and on oath, to each of the said charges and specifications, and show cause before me at the Executive Chamber in the Capitol, in the City of Albany, on the 10th day of February next, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon of that day, why he should not be removed from his said office in accordance with the statute in such cases made and provided. L. ROBINSON.

By the Governor.
D. C. ROBINSON, Private Secretary.

A COMPLAINT FROM MR. GUMBLETON.

Mr. Gumbleton, after being served yesterday with a copy of the charges made against him, penned a long letter to Hon. William M. Evarts, the President of the Bar Association, complaining of the composition and motives of the committee. He makes these three grounds of complaint:

I. Its members have been selected exclusively from the ranks of my political enemies.

II. It is not in any sense a committee of investigation, but an irresponsible, star chamber inquisition.

III. Its avowed aim is plunder through the capture of several important offices, to which neither they themselves, nor their aiders and abettors, could ever be elected by the people.

The principle of minority representation, he says, speaking with reference to the first point, is utterly ignored in the formation of this committee. As to the second, he writes: "Who ever heard of a committee of investigation which was not required to report back to the body that created it? True, one of the resolutions adopted at your first meeting provided for such a report, whereby your association wisely held control over the investigation, but the exigencies and predatory zeal of your committee soon made away with that resolution. As the next meeting it was dropped, and thus Messrs. MacLean & Co. were clothed with dangerous, revengeful, and extraordinary powers, as far as your association possessed or could delegate such powers to a committee. It was surrendering the corporate entity without condition to a committee, who, from being investigators, had now become prosecutors and plaintiffs-attorney to do what they liked, assail whom they did not like, and affect, if they could, political changes for undisclosed purposes. This engine for mischief was put in motion for the benefit of somebody whose hand was well concealed, but whose intrigue and finesse are so clever as to direct general suspicion to a certain gentleman well versed in such ways as the real author of the inquisition." He expresses the belief that the great body of the lawyers of this City and the majority of the members of the association would condemn the movement if they were acquainted with the motives and the conduct of those who began and are pursuing it, and he thinks the occurrences for the past few days in and about his office have been so derogatory to the dignity of the association, and so utterly wanting in fair dealing toward him, that he is determined to call Mr. Evarts' attention to them, and to remonstrate against their continuance. Two instances of "occurrences" are given, one being as follows:

On last Saturday Mr. MacLean came to my office with another lawyer, to whom he declared that I kept no docket entry of the moneys deposited with me to discharge mechanics' liens. An examination of the dockets was made by MacLean and his friend, and the charge of the former was found to be untrue. The records, in every instance, refuted your committeeman's accusations.

The other is about a young lawyer, whose name is not given, but who "claimed to be a particular friend of the committee." This young man told Mr. Gumbleton he had met one of the committee at church on the previous Sunday, and that the committeeman urged him to look into Mr. Gumbleton's fee-books, saying "When we get rid of Gumbleton there will be quite an amount of patronage to distribute." Mr. Gumbleton then quotes a text of Scripture anent the unanimous of unrighteous mammon, adds "In conclusion, permit me to say through you to the Bar Association and the people of New-York, that I feel competent to disprove the charges that have been brought against me before the Governor." This is the only expression in the letter which can be construed as an attempt at answering any of the charges.

THE PROCEEDINGS AT ALBANY.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 29.—Mr. Artemas H. Holmes, of the Bar Association's Investigating Committee, came to this city on Tuesday afternoon, bearing charges against County Clerk Gumbleton, which he was to present to Gov. Robinson. He took a hasty dinner at the hotel, and then went to the Governor's office, where he handed in a copy of the charges in printed form. The Governor looked over the charges rapidly, and, becoming satisfied that the document contained sufficient material to authorize him to order an answer, made the order requiring the County Clerk to put in his answer by Feb. 10. Mr. Holmes was very anxious to be able to get away, in order to be able to present the order, with a copy of the charges, to County Clerk Gumbleton last night. He left here on the 5:30 train, and the Governor expected to see the charges published in the New-York papers today. Inquirers at the Governor's office did not hear of the fact that the charges had been presented, and it was not until to-night that the news got abroad. It causes some stir among the Tammany Senators and Assemblymen.

THE TROUBLE IN THE POLICE BOARD

A SENSATION CREATED BY MR. ERHARDT'S LETTER TO THE BOARD.

Owing to the absence of Gen. Smith from the Central Office, there was no meeting of the Board of Police yesterday, as was expected, and therefore no action was taken in relation to the communication sent to the Board on Tuesday by Commissioner Erhardt. The publication of the document created a sensation at the Central Office, and the opinion was universally entertained and freely expressed that Mayor Cooper has now no alternative but to at once call on Mr. Erhardt to make specific charges against his colleagues in the board, and then proceed with the trial of the Commissioners. Commissioner Wheeler was present at the Central Office yesterday for the first time since his return from Washington, but he refused to make any statement at present. Commissioner Nichols was equally uncommunicative, and Mr. Erhardt said yesterday that he had nothing further to add to what had already been published. A meeting of the Board will probably be held to-day. Gen. Smith's absence yesterday is accounted for by an accident to his wife, who fell on the sidewalk at Fifth-avenue and Forty-first-street, on Tuesday, and broke her left leg at the ankle. An effort was to have been made yesterday, to set the limb, and the General was summoned at noon. Mayor Cooper when questioned in relation to the matter, yesterday, replied that he had nothing to say on the subject.

CONVICTED OF CONSPIRACY.

The case of Rev. Arthur B. Greenwood, indicted with William S. Hoine and Mosse Meeker, two New-York detectives, for conspiracy to induce men to violate the law by inducing the Passaic City liquor-dealers to sell beer on Sunday, was given to the jury at Paterson, N. J., yesterday morning, after an able charge from Judge Barkalow. The jury were out but a short time before they returned with a verdict of "guilty as charged in the indictment." The offense is punishable by a fine of $200, or imprisonment in the State Penitentiary for two years, or both. A mere conviction, under the old law, deprived the convicted of all rights of citizenship, and disqualified him from appearing as a witness in all causes, both civil and criminal. A recent statute revokes the disqualification as witness, but as the loss of citizenship is still a clause in the statute, nothing short of a special act of the Legislature can restore that. It being the first conviction in the State of temperance advocates for doing what they have done in New-York as well as New-Jersey for years, it is very probable that in this case justice will be tempered with mercy, though it will certainly prove a serious check to the war waged on liquor-dealers by temperance advocates at present. Sentence day has as yet not been fixed upon.

SUICIDE IN PRISON.

Frederick Muller, a German living on Jersey City Heights, was sentenced to the Penitentiary two weeks ago, having been convicted of the larceny of a number of brass faucets, from Roemmelt & Leicht's brewery. He was detained at the County Jail, the keeper intending to send him to Snake Hill yesterday morning. At 9 o'clock he was let out upon the corridor with the other prisoners, and seemed to be in his usual good health. For a few minutes later he returned to his cell, and when a fellow-prisoner went to call him out half an hour later he was found dead. He had fastened a bit of a rope to a peg on the wall, and to the rope attached a strap, which he had fastened about his neck. Probably to prevent an involuntary groan escaping his lips, he had bound a handkerchief firmly over his mouth. He was dead when cut down.

A SERIOUS STABBING AFFRAY.

Yesterday morning, at 1:30 o'clock, Christian Scheft and William Keiswetter, two butchers, living at No. 500 Eleventh-avenue, quarreled, and each drew a knife on the other. Scheft disarmed his opponent and stabbed him on the head with a large "fat knife," inflicting a most horrible cut, beginning above the left temple and extending down the face, around the jaw and along the neck, stopping within half an inch of the jugular, and laying the flesh open to the bone. Keiswetter was removed to Roosevelt Hospital, and Scheft was arrested. He was identified by Keiswetter, taken before Justice Flammer, in the Jefferson Market Police Court, and committed to await the result of Keiswetter's injuries.

A HOUSE BURNED AT RAHWAY, N. J.

Mrs. Coot, the occupant of a house on Hazlewood-avenue, Rahway, was descending the stairs on Tuesday night, when she fell, and a lamp she carried broke and set fire to the house. Mrs. Coot was severely but not dangerously burned. The house was burned to the ground. It might have been saved, but the old Fire Department had recently been disbanded, and the new men did not understand their business. The building originally cost $10,000, and was insured for $2,500.

A FUGITIVE BROUGHT BACK

THOMAS D. CONYNGHAM IN CUSTODY

THE WILKESBARRE FORGERY CASE AND THE PRISONER'S ALLEGED CONNECTION WITH IT—HIS FLIGHT TO ENGLAND AND SUBSEQUENT WANDERINGS—CLEVER WORK BY A DETECTIVE.

Detective Timothy Golden, of the Central Office, arrived yesterday at this port on the steamer City of Para from Rio Janeiro, having in custody Thomas D. Conyngham, of Wilkesbarre, who is accused of forgery. Conyngham is a member of one of the oldest, wealthiest, and most respected families in Wilkesbarre, Penn. He was engaged in the iron business there as a member of the firm of Broderick & Co. His brother, William L., is a member of Conyngham & Co., coal dealers, in Wilkesbarre, and of the firm of S. H. Brown & Co., of this City. The accused was much respected in the city in which he did business, and his word was deemed as good as that of any business man in that section of the country. He had unlimited credit, and was trusted implicitly by those with whom he did business. The firm of which he was a member did a large business in coal and iron in Pennsylvania, Virginia, and New-Jersey. The forgeries which he is accused of having committed, and which amount to over $200,000, were made, it is said, to retrieve previous losses in stock speculation and imprudent business ventures. The forged paper was mostly drawn in the name of the firm of which he was a member, and was held by various banks in Wilkesbarre, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and other cities. The officers of the Second National Bank, at Wilkesbarre, have been the only ones of his many victims who have gone to any expense or trouble to procure his arrest and return to this country.

Mr. Spalding, the Cashier of the bank, said to a TIMES reporter yesterday that Conyngham used the names of the members of his family, particularly that of his brother, William L., as indorsement on the forged paper. One note for $5,000 was taken up by his brother when it was due, to prevent the forgery being discovered. About the 1st of August, 1876, the other alleged forgeries were discovered. Conyngham was at that time still in Wilkesbarre. His relatives agreed to make good the amount of money obtained by the forgeries, and also agreed that Conyngham should remain in town as a guarantee of their good faith. In the afternoon of the same day it was learned by the bank officers that Conyngham had fled from the city after having made an assignment of all his property to his relatives. This was considered as an act of bad faith on the part of the Conynghams, and Mr. Spalding was sent to this City, whither it was known that Conyngham had fled, to secure his arrest, but subsequently Mr. Spalding received a telegram to allow Conyngham to leave the country without molestation. The next day, Aug. 4, 1876, Conyngham sailed for Europe. The terms of the settlement which the Conynghams family had made with the banks to protect the fugitive were, it is alleged, not kept in good faith, and the Directors of the bank, therefore, instituted a search for the fugitive. It was learned that the whole affair in Conyngham's name was laid before the Grand Jury of Luzerne County, and indictments for forgery were found against Conyngham, Gov. Hartranft thereupon issued a requisition for his arrest and rendition, and President Grant was requested to forward the extradition. An agent was sent to London, but, owing to the difficulty at that time between the United States and Great Britain in regard to the extradition treaty, Conyngham was not molested. When the difficulties in relation to the treaty had been settled, search was made for Conyngham, but he had disappeared.

Capt. Kealy subsequently learned that an American answering the description of Conyngham was in Chili, South America, in the employ of the late Henry Meiggs, the millionaire railroad constructor. Capt. Kealy opened a correspondence with a personal friend in Chili, and inclosed a photograph of the fugitive. In due time a reply was received that an American bearing the closest possible resemblance to the photograph had been sojourning in Chili, but was at that time in Lima, Peru, where he was known as H. E. Robinson. Subsequent inquiries convinced Capt. Kealy and Detective Golden that Robinson was none other than Conyngham. The officers of the Wilkesbarre Bank were then notified, and Mr. Spalding, the Cashier, had new extradition papers issued by Gov. Hartranft and President Hayes. Detective Golden left this port on the steam-ship Colon, on Oct. 21, 1878, bound for Lima. He arrived at Callao on the 15th of November. The next day he went to Lima and called on Mr. Gibbs, the United States Minister, who told him "his bird had flown." Golden visited the steam-ship offices at Callao and discovered that Conyngham, alias Robinson, had taken passage on the Sakkara, for Montevideo on Sept. 17.

On Nov. 19 Golden took passage on the steamer Luxor for Montevideo. On the passage round the Horn he made inquiries at all the stopping places for Robinson, and learned that at Valparaiso he had gone ashore from the Sakkara, but had come aboard again and continued on the trip to Montevideo. Golden arrived at Montevideo on Saturday, Dec. 21, and after a long search discovered that Robinson had arrived in the Sakkara, from Callao, and had left again on the steamer Saturna for Buenos Ayres. Golden took the next French steamer to Buenos Ayres, and there he discovered that Conyngham had gone to Rio Janeiro. The detective took passage on the steamer Congo for Rio, and arrived there at midnight on Dec. 30. The next day he called on Mr. John C. Wilson, United States Secretary of Legation and Chargé d'Affaires, in the absence of Minister Hilliard. Mr. White offered Golden all the assistance in his power, and called upon Dr. Cobs-Fero, the Under Secretary of Foreign Affairs, to make arrangements for the arrest and extradition of Conyngham, who, in the meantime, had been found by Golden living at Carson's Hotel, Boto-Fogo, a suburb of Rio Janeiro. Conyngham was arrested by the officers on the evening of the 4th inst., and was delivered to the custody of Detective Golden on the steamer City of Para the next morning, a short time before the steamer sailed.

Conyngham's brother, William L., his counsel, Ex-Attorney-General Palmer, of Pennsylvania, and Mr. Spalding, the Cashier of the Wilkesbarre bank, were waiting to see him when he arrived at the Central Office yesterday. They were all accorded an interview, after which the prisoner was locked up. He refused to make any statement for publication. Mr. Golden said last night that but for the prompt and determined action of Mr. White, the United States Chargé d'Affaires, and the courtesy and facilities accorded him by the Brazilian Government, he would not have been able to secure the capture of the fugitive. Conyngham will be taken to Wilkesbarre to-day.

The counsel for the prisoner said to a TIMES reporter last night that Conyngham, after leaving this country, went to England, where he remained until after the extradition difficulty was settled, when he went to the Island of Minorca, thence to Spain, and then to South America, where he obtained employment in Brazil with Collins, the American railroad contractor. He was arrested in Brazil in violation of law, and smuggled on board the steamer without an opportunity to explain his position. The counsel said that the reason that the officers of the bank wanted him arrested was that they thought if he was a prisoner his family would make a compromise. The prisoner was a college mate of the Judge before whom the indictments will be tried, and of the present Gov. Hoyt of Pennsylvania. He has a wife and family living in Wilkesbarre.

DEATH OF AN OLD SHIP-BUILDER.

Joseph Bishop, one of the old citizens and ship-builders of New-York, died at his residence at Noroton, Conn., on Tuesday last. He was born in this City in 1802, and early in life he became connected with ship-building interests. He took a prominent part in establishing steam ferries on the East River, and became a member of the ship-building firm of Bishop & Simonson, their ship-yard being situated at the foot of Seventh-street. Many of the Sound and Hudson River steamers were built by this firm, among which was the Sound steamer Atlantic, that was wrecked and many of whose passengers were drowned. The alarm-bell of the steamer that was rung on the occasion was transferred to the Bishop and Floating Church, at the foot of Dey-street. After the dissolution of the firm, Mr. Bishop was appointed United States Inspector of Vessels in New-York, and then retired to his residence in Connecticut, where he passed the remainder of his days. His funeral will take place this afternoon.

A CASE OF FALSE IMPRISONMENT.

A somewhat strange case of false imprisonment is reported from New-Brunswick, N. J. James R. Ford, of Newark, became indebted to a saloon-keeper of the former place in the sum of $4 50 for drinks. The saloon-keeper procured a warrant for Ford's arrest and gave it to a constable, who went to O'Neil's arrested Ford, and took him to New-Brunswick, where he was thrust into jail. The matter will be brought to the attention of the courts by Ford's counsel.

THE POLICEMEN'S PAY.

An adjourned meeting of delegates from the force of each Police precinct was held yesterday to adopt measures to contest in the courts the proposed reduction of 20 per cent. on their pay. Boundsman Wiegand, of the Twenty-ninth Precinct, acted as Chairman, and Roundsman Malone, of the Tenth Precinct, as Secretary. Capt. McCullagh, of the Seventeenth Precinct, reported that he had seen the Commissioners, and they had expressed their sympathy for the men, and their approval of the legal measures taken by the force, and had also consented to the levying of an assessment on the men to retain counsel and defray the legal expenses of the contest. A committee, consisting of Capt. McCullagh, Sergt. Phillips, Boundsman Martin and O'Toole, and Patrolman O'Keefe, was appointed to engage counsel to act in conjunction with the counsel to the Board of Police. The assessment agreed upon was as follows: Inspectors, $7; Captains, $5; Sergeants, $3; Patrolmen, $2, and doormen, $1 50, payable at next pay-day. The meeting then adjourned to the 4th prox.

A STAGE RIDE FOR FIVE CENTS.

THE FARE REDUCED ON ALL OF THE LINES —WHAT LED TO THE REDUCTION.

Large placards in the windows of the Broadway stages will announce this morning that the proprietors of the three stage lines, which are all that are left of the many that once existed in this City, have at length reduced their fares to 5 cents. The three firms who own the lines were compelled to take this step, as the horse cars and elevated roads were taking from them very many passengers. An attempt had been previously made to keep their regular customers by selling 17 tickets for $1, so that the cost for each ride was a trifle less than 6 cents, but the large majority of those who patronized the stages did not take advantage of the reduced rates, and as a consequence either paid 10 cents or took a horse-car or the elevated roads. This was the case particularly with persons from the country, the ladies who came in to shop, and who used to be among the best customers of the stages, avoiding that part of Broadway below Union-square, or taking the horse cars up the side streets so as to save 5 cents. This loss of custom in a certain part of Broadway brought about a movement in favor of a street railroad from Union-square to the Battery, and it would be reasonable to suppose that this caused the stage proprietors to reduce their fares to check the proposed opposition. Those firms, however, claim to have agreed upon the reduction before the railroad project was talked of, and thought that the 17 tickets for $1 would accomplish the end, but as the plan did not answer, it was agreed among the three ages to make the rate 5 cents as soon as the worst part of the Winter was over. They considered it prudent to get over the time of deep snows before reducing, and now congratulate themselves that they did not have the expenses this Winter have been unusually heavy.

Messrs. Andrews & Co., of the Fifth-Avenue Line, said yesterday that travel in the stages varied very much, and it was hard to estimate how much the elevated roads had injured their business. It was not over 15 per cent., however, and they thought some of that would be regained by the cheaper fare. The companies do not expect to have their stages overcrowded by the reduction, but should travel pick up they are prepared to put on more stages.

THE PARK DEPARTMENT.

AN INVESTIGATION REQUESTED BY THE COMMISSIONERS—CUTTING DOWN EXPENSES.

The Park Commissioners met yesterday. Engineer E. E. McLean presented plans for draining that new portion of the City known as Woodstock district, which is bounded on the north by Georgestreet, on the east by Union-avenue and White's lane, on the west by Delmonico and Concord avenues, and on the south by Long Island Sound. This district is considered unhealthy and is threatened with malaria. The plans were approved and the work of draining is to begin forthwith. A resolution was passed to the effect that the contractors for laying out the Riverside Drive be directed to proceed with the work in accordance with the terms of the contract.

President Denman then offered the following resolution, which was unanimously accepted without debate:

Resolved, That the attention of the board has lately been called to various insinuations published in the public press, and has also been openly accused by one of the Board of Assistant Engineers with bad management; and

Whereas, The board desire to have the fullest examination of their department; therefore be it

Resolved, That the President of the Board of Aldermen be, and he is hereby respectfully requested to appoint a committee to thoroughly investigate the management of the department under the present administration and report the same to the Mayor at their earliest convenience.

The board then proceeded to curtail the expenses of the department, and decided upon making the following reductions in salaries and wages:

William Irwin, Secretary of the board, from $3,500 to $3,000 per annum: F. A. Calkins, Assistant Engineer, from $1,900 to $1,700. The wages of several of the foremen are to be reduced on the 1st of February next from $4 to $3 50 per day. Two skilled blacksmiths, from $3 25 to $3; of other blacksmiths, from $3 to $2 50. The salary of Frederick Griffenberg, draughtsman, was increased from $1,000 to $1,200 per annum. The pay of the Park Police was not reduced, nor that of the President of the board, it being fixed by statute.

CONTESTING THE COPY OF A WILL.

THE DISPOSITION OF THE PROPERTY OF THE LATE BENJAMIN R. ROBSON.

A contest was begun in the Surrogate's Court yesterday over a copy of the supposed will of the late Benjamin R. Robson, who died in August last, at his residence, No. 50 South Washington-square. Mr. Robson made a will in July, 1865, in which he left his property, which was principally real estate, valued at about $300,000, to his three children—Benjamin R., Jr., William Henry, and Mary E. Sage—during their lifetime, with the provision that at their death it should be divided among their children per capita. William Henry Robson died in January, 1871, leaving three children; Mrs. Mary E. Sage has seven children, and Benjamin R. Robson has one child, making 11 legatees in all. Since Mr. Robson's death, last August, diligent search has been made for the will, but without avail, and a copy was presented for probate by Mrs. Sage yesterday. This copy, it is claimed by Mrs. Sage and her sons, was made by a clerk of the late Francis P. Sage, shortly after the original will was executed. Mr. Benjamin R. Robson and the children of the late William Henry Robson oppose the probate of the copy of the will, on the ground that they believe the testator has destroyed his own will before his death, and died intestate, preferring to have the property divided by law. The property named in the will comprises Nos. 19, 21, 23, and 25 Fourth-avenue, Nos. 13, and Irvelt-street, Nos. 188 and 190½ Division-street, Nos. 106 and 108 West Fourth-street, No. 300 Water-street, a cottage and surrounding land at Hamilton, Long Island, and one-half of a sawmill property at Babylon, Long Island. The first witness called yesterday was George W. Samson, who testified that within six months after the execution of Mr. Robson's will, in 1865, he, the witness, was employ of Messrs. Sage & Co. as a clerk, and was instructed by Mr. Francis P. Sage to make a copy of an instrument which proved to be the will of Benjamin R. Robson; Mr. Sage had enjoined secrecy on witness when copying it, but assigned no reason for his request. The witness claimed to be familiar with Mr. Robson's handwriting, but on cross-examination it was ascertained that he had never seen Mr. Robson sign his name at any time.

Benjamin R. Sage, a son of the late F. P. Sage, and grandson of the late Benjamin R. Robson, testified that he had received the copy of the will presented for probate from his mother about a month after the death of his father.

Frank Sage, a brother of the previous witness, testified that he was present when his grandfather made his will, in 1865, and had summoned as witnesses to the instrument neighbors of his grandfather, Anson Baker and Magellan T. Mix; he had also been present when his grandfather made a codicil, in 1870. He was cross-examined at length, after which the case was adjourned until this morning.

THE WEST-BOUND FREIGHT POOL.

Railroad men regard it as extremely probable that the West-bound freight pool will share the fate of the East-bound pool and break up. It was learned yesterday that at the meeting of representatives of the trunk lines last week Commissioner Fink presented a demand on behalf of the New-York Central Railroad for an increase of percentage from 33 1-3 to 40. The demand was based upon the alleged increased business derived from the several Western connections recently brought under the control of the road. The proposition met with decided opposition, and it is said that a very stormy discussion took place. The representative of the New-York, Lake Erie and Western Company claimed that his road had also largely increased its facilities for transportation, and he considered that it was entitled to an equal percentage with the New-York Central. The Pennsylvania Company's representative said that the feeders and terminal facilities owned by his road were not inferior to those of any other line, and he claimed that the percentage allowed it was already too small. A similar stand was taken by the representative of the Baltimore and Ohio Road. An adjournment was taken until yesterday without action. At the appointed hour yesterday Messrs. William K. Vanderbilt and J. H. Rutter were present on behalf of the New-York Central, but nobody appeared for either of the other three lines. After waiting a while an adjournment was taken until Monday next, on the alleged ground that President Garrett, of the Baltimore and Ohio Road, was too ill to attend, and that it was consequently impossible to get a quorum. It is said that Mr. Vanderbilt is firm in his determination to have an increased percentage, and that the New-York Company is equally determined not to grant it, and is, moreover, in a position to back up its refusal.

AN ALLEGED SMUGGLER ARRESTED.

The Customs authorities recently received information that the house No. 201 Garden-street, Hoboken, was used as a storehouse by smugglers, and they had it watched yesterday. The officers followed a quantity of goods from the suspected premises to No. 353 West Eleventh-street, and then, having obtained a warrant from Commissioner Lyman, raided the latter place and seized the following articles supposed to have been smuggled: 12 bottles of fine French brandy, 47 half-pound packages of snuff, 23 yards of Nottingham lace curtains, half a dozen handkerchiefs, 9 packages of cotton thread and braids, 6 towels, 3 packages of chocolate, and 1 package of gelatine. Frederick Ehlers, in whose possession the goods were, was arrested, and was held by Commissioner Lyman in $1,000 bail to answer. Ehlers pleads entire innocence of any attempt to smuggle, and claims that some of the articles seized were brought by him to this country when he arrived here three years ago.

CITY AND SUBURBAN NEWS.

NEW-YORK.

The Customs officers seized 200 bundles of smuggled cigarettes in a saloon in South-street yesterday.

Judge Choate, in the United States District Court, granted a discharge in bankruptcy to J. T. Lynch yesterday.

The annual ball of the New-York Lodge, No. 1, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, will be given in the Academy of Music on Feb. 6.

The passengers on the City of Para presented Capt. Carpenter with a congratulatory address on the arrival of the vessel at this port yesterday.

Sixty-three immigrants were landed at Castle Garden yesterday. The Wisconsin, from Liverpool, brought 29, and the Ethiopia, from Glasgow, 34.

The Parthia took out 32,221 letters and 57 bags of newspapers for Europe yesterday. The Santiago de Cuba, for Havana, carried 5,580 letters and five bags of newspapers.

Mr. Meyer Goodman was appointed a City Marshal yesterday by Mayor Cooper. He takes the place of Mr. Lawrence A. Carry, who is now an officer of the Court of General Sessions.

Rev. Newland Maynard will deliver an art and historical lecture on "Paris, Past and Present," at St. George's Church, corner East Sixteenth-street, this evening, with 50 camera illustrations.

Godfrey Hunter, the colored steward of the schooner Samos, who was recently charged with an assault on Capt. Henrahan, of that vessel, was discharged from custody by United States Commissioner Shields yesterday.

The schooner City of Chelsea, from Plymouth, lost a portion of her deck-load on Sunday last, and the schooner Grace Davis, from Pernambuco, which put into Norfolk in distress, arrived here yesterday in tow of the Ocean tug-boat Cyclops.

The tenth anniversary of the Ladies' Home Society of the Baptist Churches of New-York, in Sixty-eighth-street, near Fourth-avenue, will be held on Tuesday, Feb. 4, commencing at 3:30 P. M. Addresses will be made by Rev. Drs. Taylor, Bevan, Bridgeman, and Tyng.

The export of American cottons thus far this year aggregates 15,562 packages, against 7,952 packages for a corresponding period in 1878, and 5,638 packages in 1877. The shipments for the week have been 3,309 packages from this port, 38 packages from Boston and 85 packages from other ports.

The Inman steam-ship City of Chester, which returned to this port with her rudder gone, came up to the dock yesterday afternoon. It will not be known whether it will be necessary to discharge her cargo and put her on the dry-dock until a survey has been made. Her passengers left on the City of Montreal, which leaves at noon to-morrow.

One of the old merchants of New-York has passed away in the person of Mr. John W. Cooper, who died at his residence at Dobb's Ferry yesterday morning, in the 80th year of his age. Mr. Cooper conducted the business of provision merchant, in connection with his son, at No. 138 Front-street. His death was very sudden, as he was at his office Tuesday.

A small lot of unclaimed merchandise was sold at auction yesterday, by order of the Collector, at No. 97 Water-street. There was, as usual, a good attendance, and fair prices were realized. Two cases of smoked beef sold for $811 and $825 respectively; two trunks of ladies' apparel, $34; a case of confectionery, $60; a sample gun, $15, and a quantity of brandy, from $4 12½ to $4 25 per gallon.

The wretched condition of the streets of this City attracts general observation. Besides the snow and ice which still blockade so many streets, the garbage and ash boxes remain unemptied, and the warm weather of yesterday has caused a horrible stench to arise from the latter. The health of the City is certainly in peril, but the Street-cleaning Bureau appear to be supremely indifferent.

John Schmidt, who shot Henry Madden dead on Jan. 23 at No. 13 Oliver-street, was taken before Judge Barrett, in the Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, on a writ of habeas corpus, and an application was made for his admission to bail on the ground that he acted in self-defense, and can only be indicted for manslaughter in the second degree. Assistant District Attorney Leary claimed that the evidence was that Schmidt was guilty of murder. Judge Barrett reserved his decision.

In the suit brought by Messrs. Robbins & Appleton against the Firem

The New-York Times.

VOL. XXVIII.....NO. 8546. NEW-YORK, FRIDAY, JANUARY 31, 1879. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

JAN 31 1879

THE NATION'S LEGISLATURE

ANOTHER DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS.

THE WAR CLAIMS AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION DISCUSSED—WHAT THE POLICY OF THE DEMOCRATS WILL BE IN REORGANIZING THE SENATE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The Democratic Senators met in caucus to-night and continued in session for several hours. The caucus was called to consider and determine party action upon Mr. Edmunds' amendment to the joint resolution which passed the House, proposing a constitutional amendment prohibiting the payment of claims for property destroyed in the South during the war. The caucus was slimly attended, and there was no definite action taken upon the question. The discussion which took place developed the fact that a majority of those present were opposed to the amendment. Owing to the small number present, it was thought best not to take action upon the question, and it was postponed until next Monday, when another caucus will be held.

The question of the reorganization of the Senate after March 4 was then discussed, upon the assumption that there would either be an extra session of Congress or a session of the Senate for the consideration of executive business. In either case, it was thought best that there should be an understanding as to what the policy of the majority was to be in reference to the Chairmanships of committees as well as in reference to the officers and clerks of that body. No definite action was taken, but individual expression developed the fact that there would not be the wholesale dismissal of clerks and other subordinate officers that has been generally expected. New-York appointments were discussed, and the statement made that there had been some expression in favor of the confirmation of Merritt and Burt by leading Democrats of New-York. The brief discussion that was given this subject showed that the differences of opinion were too decided to attempt to make it a party question and it was dropped.

THE CUSTOM-HOUSE NOMINATIONS.

SECRETARY SHERMAN'S REJOINDER READY TO BE SUBMITTED TO THE SENATE—PROBABILITY THAT A DECISION WILL BE REACHED TO-DAY—RECANTING PETITIONERS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Secretary Sherman has completed his reply to the communication of Collector Arthur, and it will be sent to the Senate to-morrow, at which time, as there is now hardly a doubt, the New-York Custom-house cases will be decided. The friends of Acting Collector Merritt and the Administration have been working with great energy for the past few day , and they are again loud in expressions of confidence in their ability to defeat Senator Conkling and have their man confirmed. The supporters of Gen. Arthur, on the other hand, are quite as confident of success as they have been from the commencement, but both sides are now willing to concede that the vote will, in all probability, be very close. All efforts to have the case considered in open Senate seem now to have been abandoned, and the doors will be closed to the public at 1:30 o'clock to-morrow, the time appointed for the beginning of the debate.

Incredible as it may appear Senator Conkling has received a telegram signed by a number of members of the New-York Legislature, to the effect that they had been induced to sign the petition for the confirmation of acting Collector Merritt, because they believed that he [Conkling] desired them to do so, and that if he was not gratified they were anxious to rescind their action. The Senator, to use his own expression, is at a loss to know how he can, in fitting terms, reply to men who can be so easily deceived.

THE DEMOCRATIC QUARRELS.

MR. HOOKER AND HIS SOUTHERN FRIENDS AGAIN DEFEATED IN AN EFFORT TO OBTAIN TIME TO REPLY TO GEN. BRAGG.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Another effort was made in the House to-day by Mr. Hooker and other Southern Democrats to obtain a morning hour in order to reply to Gen. Bragg's recent denunciation of war claims. The Democratic leaders desire to prevent the reopening of the discussion, and for this purpose have thus far succeeded in preventing a morning hour where the bill upon which the discussion arose remains as the unfinished business. The Republicans generally have voted with those Democrats who are impatient to reply to Bragg, and to-day a majority was developed on that side. This majority was frustrated, however, by a resort to filibustering, which movement was materially assisted by the fact that District of Columbia bills were made the special order after 2 o'clock, to the exclusion of all other business. When the Post Office Appropriation bill was passed, Mr. Hewitt moved to take up the Army Appropriation bill. Mr. Hooker led the opposition, and the motion was rejected by a yea and nay vote. Before the result was announced Mr. Hewitt ascertained that his motion had been defeated, and changed his vote from yea to nay, so as to obtain the parliamentary right to move a reconsideration, which motion was promptly entered, and Mr. Hooker as promptly moved to lay Mr. Hewitt's motion on the table. On this the yeas and nays were ordered, and pending the roll-call the hour of 2 arrived, and the extreme Southern wing of the Democracy were thus again manœuvred out of position. The discussion, however, is only postponed, as Mr. Hooker and those who are acting with him are determined that Gen. Bragg's speech shall not stand unanswered.

CONGRESSIONAL TOPICS.

AN EFFORT TO BE MADE TO GET THE SUGAR BILL BEFORE THE HOUSE—THE PARLIAMENTARY DISPUTE BETWEEN THE SENATE AND HOUSE—AN ADROIT MOVE BY SENATOR EDMUNDS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The Committee on Ways and Means to-day, after considerable discussion, decided to report a resolution to the House to devote Feb. 8 to the consideration of the bill to readjust the duties on sugar, and Feb. 12 to the consideration of bills reported from that committee. Such a resolution can be offered in the House only by unanimous consent, except on Mondays, when a two-thirds vote is necessary to pass it. It is doubtful whether the necessary strength to pass the resolution can be obtained. The opposition to the Sugar bill is very determined and active, and in view of the crowded condition of the public and private calendars, and the near approach of the close of the session, the opponents of the bill are likely to control a sufficient number of votes to defeat the assignment of a day for its consideration. Many of the advocates of a protective tariff will oppose the bill because it abolishes the ad valorem duty of 25 per cent. now imposed. It may be predicted with reasonable safety that the bill will not pass at the present session.

Senators Edmunds, Ferry, Hoar, Thurman, and Whyte were to-day appointed a committee, in accordance with a resolution passed by the Senate several days ago, to consider the parliamentary questions involved in the dispute between the two houses on the Post Route bill passed at the last session. This is the bill to which the Senate tacked the Brazilian subsidy, franking privilege, and reduction of postal rates on foreign books. The House insisted that the Senate had no right to amend the bill in a manner to change the Customs revenue laws, and refused to confer with the Senate conferees in relation to the book clause. This objection, however, was technical, the real objection of the House being to the Brazilian subsidy. The friends of the subsidy in the Senate made several efforts to obtain a further conference with the House on the bill, but after much discussion were forced to accept the proposition to refer the questions in dispute to the committee appointed to-day. Three members of the committee—Edmunds, Thurman, and Whyte—have pronounced themselves against the subsidy, and, while this question is not involved in the points referred to the committee, it is likely that the entire matter will be delayed so long as to make the passage of the bill almost impossible.

Senator Edmunds' resolutions in regard to the constitutional amendments came up before the Senate to-day as unfinished business, and their author created a good deal of surprise, particularly among the Democrats, by saying that he had no intention of debating the resolutions, but preferred to submit them for the action of the Senate. Upon this, Senator Morgan, of Alabama, took the floor and occupied the entire day in the delivery of a set speech, supporting his substitute submitted on the 20th inst. There is no doubt that he will be followed by other Democratic Senators, and that the debate will thus be prolonged for several days. Senator Edmunds is to-night generally credited with having done an exceedingly adroit thing in failing to take the floor to-day. By refusing to do so he will draw the fire of the Democrats and then be able at his leisure to demolish their arguments.

LIGHT ON THE BARRON TRAGEDY.

DETECTIVES THINK THAT THE DEAD CASHIER COMMITTED SUICIDE—FURTHER INVESTIGATION TO BE MADE—HISTORY OF THE CASE.

DEXTER, Me., Jan. 30.—The Barron tragedy came to a sad conclusion to-day. It is stated, upon the authority of the officers of the bank, that detectives who have recently had charge of the matter have come to the conclusion that Barron committed suicide. The detectives declare that the position in which Barron was found in the vault, handcuffed and gagged, with the double doors of the vault locked upon him, could have been caused by himself. This has been demonstrated by actual trial, the whole being accomplished in less than five minutes' time by one of the detectives. The cause for committing suicide would naturally be supposed to be a deficiency in accounts or the misapplication of the funds of the bank. Whether or not this is the case cannot now be stated. It seems improbable that so large a deficiency existed that he could not easily have made it whole from property he held in his own name. It must have required very deliberate planning on the part of Barron to arrange all the little details of the matter to give the appearance of an attack by burglars. The bank officers are hard at work to ascertain what was the actual state of affairs at that time, but now promulgate this as the conclusions of the detectives. All sorts of rumors are current, but the reticent official statement affords no direct confirmation of any of them, beyond strengthening the idea of suicide with out complying the motive.

Cashier James W. Barron, of the Dexter (Me.) Savings Bank, was last seen alive at 5 o'clock on the afternoon of Washington's Birthday, Feb. 22, 1878. The day being a legal holiday, he took advantage of it to go to the bank and do a little writing. Such, at least, was what he said at the time. An insurance agent named H. C. Parsons, who occupied a desk at the front window of the banking-room, which is on the second floor of the Masonic Building, was also at work during the afternoon. He chatted with Mr. Barron, and left him apparently in good spirits at the hour mentioned. As the latter did not return home to supper, a messenger was sent after him at 7 o'clock, but the hall door was found locked, and there was no response to repeated knockings. Knowing that Mr. Barron was subject to attacks of heart disease, the messenger alarmed the other bank officers, but none of them having the key to the bank, the Cashier of the National Bank, the rooms of which are across the hall, was sent for. Entering those rooms and standing near the vault, feeble moanings were heard which convinced the searchers that the missing man was inside and suffering. Without hesitation they broke open the door of the savings bank room, but were unable at first to find Mr. Barron. On the floor lay an overturned coal-hod, a poker, a piece of rope, and Mr. Barron's false teeth. His overcoat and hat were on the rack, and the loose change drawer was open, but he was nowhere to be seen.

The vault is a large double affair, connecting both banking rooms, with doors opening into both. Inside were the safes containing the valuable property of both banks. The door on the savings bank side was closed and locked. The door on the opposite side was opened and a lad was pushed through the narrow space between the national bank's safe and the side of the vault. On the other side, in a passage barely 18 inches wide, between the savings bank's safe and the vault door he found the prostrate body of the missing cashier. By means of ropes passed around his unconscious arms and shoulders Mr. Barron was drawn gently out over the top of the safe door, which stood open, and placed upon an improvised cot in the National Bank office. He opened his eyes for a moment, and appeared to recognize his wife, but relapsed into insensibility, and died next morning. There was a gag in his mouth made from the handle of a water-pail, and his wrists were drawn so tightly that the physician said it was a wonder that he had not choked to death at once. Another noose of rope was around his neck in a manner to leave deep and livid marks when it was removed. His hands were manacled behind his back with a new pair of handcuffs of the finest Norway steele, nickel-plated, and of the latest fashion. He had also several bad wounds upon his forehead.

Every one supposed at the time that he had been murdered by robbers, though it was given out that the bank had only lost a few hundreds of dollars. It was said that about 6 o'clock a person passing the bank entrance saw three men, strangers, standing in the hall beside the open door, and evidently about to step out at that. A lady who entered the street about the same time saw two men walk out of the bank entrance and hurry away. A team was alleged to have been seen to leave Dexter about 6 o'clock the same evening and drive rapidly (treenville and thence to Moosehead Lake. It contained three men. A strange team was also said to have been seen early in the evening on the outskirts of the village driving very leisurely. Another team was reported to have left Dexter about 6:30 o'clock and to have gone in the direction of St. Albans. It contained two men, one of whom was said to have been recognized on the road as a desperate man who, a few years previously, gambled extensively on the Maine Central Railroad. It is believed that these men surprised Mr. Barron as he went to a closet opening out of a rear room for coal to replenish his fire. The key of the handcuffs and Mr. Barron's bunch of keys were found here. It was conjectured that he was seized from behind, gagged in an instant, and handcuffed; that he was told to open the inner door of the safe, and refused to do so; that the robbers threw the noosed rope about his neck, dragged him to the vault, beat and threatened him, and finding him still obstinate, took his keys from his pocket, thrust him inside, locked the door, and left him to die of suffocation. The safe door was protected both by a combination lock and a time lock, though the latter was not set at the time.

Mr. Barron's supposed fidelity to his trust in parting with his life rather than disclose the combination gained him universal applause as a hero. Bankers all over the country subscribed to a fund for his family, and an attempt was made to raise money to build a memorial church to be called by his name. His family received $16,000 of insurance which he had maintained upon his life for their benefit. Strange to say, however, the detectives who were put upon the case at once, could not find the slightest trace of the unknown thieves by whom the Coroner's jury asserted Mr. Barron was murdered. Not a lady-seeking tourist who had seen any suspicious strangers about the village at any time closely preceding the supposed robbery. Another strange circumstance, commented upon at the time, was that the bank refused to give anything to the fund that was being raised for Mr. Barron's family, and it is now remembered that no detailed statement was ever obtained from the bank's officers regarding their loss. The matter finally died out of the public recollection, and has remained as good as forgotten, until revived by the present investigations.

CONTINUING THE ICE HARVEST.

NEWBURG, N. Y. Jan. 30.—The low temperature last night froze the water and snow on top of the ice. The Ridgewood Company, at Hampton, commenced work this afternoon. The company's employés will work night and day, until the houses are filled. To-night the employés are working by lamp-light. Several other companies are preparing to start again to-morrow. The ice averages 10 inches where it had not been previously scraped.

THE LOUISIANA SENATORSHIP.

NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 30.—The Democratic caucus to-night nominated B. F. Jonas to succeed Senator Eustis in the United States Senate.

GENERAL FOREIGN NEWS.

THE EASTERN DISPUTES.

THE SIGNING OF THE RUSSO-TURKISH TREATY DELAYED BY THE ILLNESS OF THE SULTAN—RUSSIA'S OPERATIONS IN CENTRAL ASIA—THE BRITISH ABANDON KHOST.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 30.—The Agence Russe states that the delay in the signature of the treaty of peace between Turkey and Russia is in consequence of the indisposition of the Sultan.

Intelligence has been received here that Spuz and Zabliac have been evacuated by the Turks, and that Podgoritza will be surrendered to-day or to-morrow.

The Golos says, in reference to the movements of Russia in Central Asia, that these operations had a defensive, not an offensive, character. It is time to cease dreaming of expeditions of Russian outposts leading to a struggle with the advancing power of England, and to cease relying upon the hostility of local Emirs and Khans. It is time to concentrate and fortify our rule in the districts already occupied, which, especially the Caucasus, are held by the strength of bayonets as a base of defense against England, our determined enemy.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—A dispatch from Khost to the Standard says Gen. Roberts had no sooner evacuated Matoond (the capital of Khost) than it was surrounded by thousands of Mangals. The British returned, and rescued the chiefs whom they had left in authority, burned the fort and then returned to camp. In their retreat they were harassed by the Mangals. Gen. Roberts has abandoned Khost for the present, as he is convinced that such disturbances will be incessant.

A Constantinople dispatch to the Times says there is reason to believe that a representative of the French bondholders has made an arrangement with the Porte, which, if approved, will secure Turkey an advance of £10,000,000, and place the Turkish Customs under international supervision.

THE ADVANCE OF THE PLAGUE.

IT APPEARS IN ANOTHER ASTRAKHAN TOWN —PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES ADOPTED BY FOREIGN STATES.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 30.—It is officially announced that the plague has appeared at Selitrenoi-Gorodok, on the Volga, 70 miles from Wetlianka.

The Governor of Saratoff telegraphs that measures of protection against the plague, such as the isolation of the infected districts and their disinfection, and the establishment of sanitary cordons, have been taken throughout the Government of Saratoff, and especially on the Astrakhan frontier.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—A Berlin dispatch to the Pall Mall Gazette says: "Prof. Hirsch, of the University, and a young physician have been designated by the Government to proceed to Russia and inquire into the character of the prevailing epidemic.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 30.—The Sanitary Commission of the Scheldt have ordered quarantine of all vessels from the Black Sea.

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—An imperial decree is published, prohibiting, in accordance with the proposals of the Berlin Committee, the importation of all the articles which are prohibited by the Austrian Committee, and also all manufactures of felt. The Imperial Chancelleria has been authorized to draw up regulations relative to travelers' baggage. It is denied that Herr Finkelnberg declared that measures for establishing a military cordon around the infected districts were already being prepared.

CURRENT FOREIGN TOPICS.

THE CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY NEGOTIATIONS—A DENIAL FROM THE CAPTAIN WHO WAS CREDITED WITH THE PIRATICAL STEAMSHIP STORY.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The Pall Mall Gazette's Dublin correspondent says a lull has occurred in the discussion of the Catholic University question, the opinion being that whatever negotiations have taken place with the Roman Catholic Bishops have come to naught in consequence of their refusal to moderate their demands.

A dispatch from Rome to the Pall Mall Gazette says: "A consistory is fixed for the 21st of February. The Pope will retrace his allocution, and will retrace the Pontifical policy of the year. He will also give a sketch of his schemes for the future."

The United States frigate Constitution sailed to-day from Portsmouth for New-York.

The Captain of the ship Ralston denies that he wrote the letter to Lloyds in regard to a supposed piratical steamer seen off Fastnet, which has caused such a sensation.

MADRID, Jan. 30.—Captain-General of Cuba, Martinez-Campos, is expected to return to Spain by the next steamer.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The proposed reduction of wages of the engineers and dock laborers, in Liverpool, is to be carried into effect on Saturday. Some resistance is anticipated.

A dispatch to the Times, from Preston, says concerted action by the various Lancashire Cotton-master Associations is expected with a view to effect a 10 per cent. reduction of the wages of all classes of operatives.

Gen. Grant and party have arrived at Alexandria, Egypt.

FOREIGN BUSINESS TROUBLES.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—A liquidator has been appointed for the General Banking Company, (limited,) recently founded by Albert Grant, who is the Managing Director. The capital is £300,000.

Dyce, Nicol & Co., merchants at No. 55 Leadenhall-street, E. C., have failed. Their liabilities are reported to be £94,000.

The failure of James Hardy & Co., lace manufacturers, at Nottingham, is also announced. Their liabilities are £53,000.

LIVERPOOL, Jan. 30.—H. N. Hughes & Nephew, merchants and ship brokers, in this town, have failed. Their liabilities are £170,000.

SIX HUNDRED PERSONS SLAUGHTERED.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—A Vienna dispatch to the Daily Telegraph says a party of insurgent Arabs attacked a caravan near Hedjax, and killed 600 persons.

J. MADISON WELLS ACCUSED.

THE GRAND JURY INVESTIGATING AN OLD CHARGE OF BRIBERY.

NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 30.—The United States Grand Jury is hearing evidence in a charge of bribery, brought by one Ames against J. Madison Wells, Surveyor of the Port. It is an old case, from 1876, or about that time. Ames says that a broker in the interest of Wells offered him a position in the Custom-house, in the Surveyor's Department, on the payment of $200. He paid the money and was soon after dismissed. Chagrin and disappointment at this late day led to the charge, but there has been no indictment so far.

TRIALS IN BREATHITT COUNTY.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 30.—A dispatch from Jackson, Ky., dated Jan. 29, to the Courier-Journal, says the cases of those accused of killing Judge Burnett were called up yesterday for trial, but were not heard, as Judge Randall was sworn off the bench by Fred. Gambrel before the testimony was begun. Capt. Taylor starts to-morrow for Frankfort with a certificate giving notice to the Governor that no election for special Judge could be had. It is expected that Gov. McCreary will send a Judge at once, and then the trials will be proceeded with.

MONTREAL LUMBER MERCHANTS' FAILURE.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Jan. 30.—The liabilities of Cushing Brothers, lumber merchants, who lately failed, aggregated $230,000, of which $24,000 are personal. Some years ago the firm purchased 256 miles of timber limit, but only received 200 miles. Action was taken in the Superior Court at Joliette to recover the 56 miles, but it was unsuccessful, owing to some informality. The creditors believe the timber may be recovered, and at a meeting held to-day it was decided to take further proceedings in the name of T. Cushing, the father of the members of the firm. The value of the 56 miles is $58,000, and unless it is recovered there will be no assets. The creditors nearly all reside in the United States.

A TORNADO'S FATAL VIOLENCE.

HOUSES IN IUKA, MISS., RAZED TO THE GROUND—FOUR PERSONS KILLED AND MANY INJURED.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 30.—Iuka, Miss., about 125 miles due east from this city, on the Memphis and Charleston Railway, was visited Tuesday evening by one of the most destructive as well as remarkable atmospheric phenomena ever witnessed in this latitude. The sky for several days had been overcast with thick clouds, rain prevailing nearly the entire week. There was no indication of wind or hurricane until, suddenly, between 7 and 8 o'clock, as if a cloud had burst, a gust of wind coming from an easterly direction struck the south-eastern portion of the village with such force as to raze to the ground every building in its path. The place was inhabited only by negroes. Four of their houses were torn into kindling wood. Four of the inmates were killed instantly. Fifteen or twenty persons were more or less injured. Three colored children were taken bodily up into the air and blown away, neither having been found or heard of since.

Several houses in other parts of the village near the track of the whirlwind were unroofed, and more or less damaged, but, strange to say, not a single white person was injured. The track of the storm was about 100 yards wide, striking the earth in the place mentioned, veering to the south-easterly, sweeping everything before it. No information has been received of damage at other points, and it is supposed to have gone only a short distance when it expended its force, or rose into the clouds, whence it came.

THE TROY AND BOSTON ROAD.

HOW MASSACHUSETTS NEARLY LOST $12,000—MANAGEMENT OF PRESIDENT ROBINSON.

BOSTON, Jan. 30.—Through the financial operations of Daniel Robinson, President of the Troy and Boston Road, the State of Massachusetts just escaped loss. Within a year, it is stated, Robinson, as President, transmitted to the Treasurer of the Troy and Greenfield Railroad (owned by the State of Massachusetts) a check of his corporation for about $12,000 in payment of a certain obligation of the Troy and Boston Railroad to the State's railroad. This check was deposited in a North Adams bank by the Treasurer of the Troy and Greenfield Railroad, and by that bank credited to the account of the State's railroad. The North Adams bank sent the check to New-York for collection, but subsequently received notice of "no funds," and so informed the Treasurer of the Troy and Greenfield Railroad. That official demanded the check from the North Adams bank, and as that institution was unable to procure its return, compelled it to make the State's account good for the amount.

The Troy and Boston Railroad appears to be hopelessly involved. The road is only a little more than 34 miles long, but the last official return of its financial condition gives the following exhibit: Total indebtedness, $4,140,186; construction account, $1,799,000; surplus indebtedness, $2,341,186. In addition to this, a mortgage of $1,000,000 has been placed since the statement, making the gross indebtedness rising $5,000,000 at the present time. Those familiar with the movements of Robinson in all the financial operations of the last few years express the opinion that he has been acting with a view to "freeze" out the old stockholders of the road altogether and get control of its affairs as Receiver.

WISCONSIN EDUCATIONAL PLANS.

PROMOTING COMPETITION IN TEXT-BOOKS—ENCOURAGING A REFORM IN SPELLING.

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 30.—The State Board of Text-book Commissioners, created under the general laws of 1878, submitted a report to the Legislature to-day. The Commission was appointed to inquire into facts relating to the uniformity, number, and cost of text-books used in the public schools of Wisconsin, and also to inquire and determine whether any of the proposed systems of spelling reform before the public were feasible and could be properly or expediently adopted in the schools of this State. The commission was composed of five prominent and influential citizens—H. C. Whitford, Superintendent of Public Instruction; R. E. Davis, of Dane County; George H. Paul, of Milwaukee County; George S. Albee, of Winnebago County, and John B. Quinby, of Sauk County. The report is in the form of a bill for the consideration of the Legislature, and, although the commission does not claim that it is thoroughly digested, it believes it contains features worthy of adoption.

The report aims, in brief, to encourage uniformity without arbitrary enforcement; to insure to the people advantages which belong to a wholesale purchase; to introduce economy in the publishers, who desire to compete for furnishing text-books to the people of the State, and to afford home capital and home talent an opportunity to enter the contest on equal terms with outside pecuniary resources. The Superintendent of Public Instruction and Presidents of normal schools are constituted a Supervising School-book Commission. The section of the report relating to spelling reform is of general interest outside the State in that having reference to a spelling reform. The report of the commission on this subject was written by Senator Paul, and is ably written—and is very comprehensive treatise on the subject. The report recommends all practicable legislation to that end, alleges the power and duty of the State thus to promote economy and efficiency in the publication, and exhibits the deficiencies in existing orthography. It recapitulates and commends efforts for reform, opposes any compromise of principle on the ground of expediency in any proposed systems of reform, and suggests the introduction of changes in orthography whenever scholars and legislative authorities shall concur in acceptable amendments by means of dictionaries with alternative spellings, introduced in public schools by legislative sanction.

SENATOR CHRISTIANCY'S MISSION.

STILL UNDECIDED—PROBABILITY THAT HE WILL ACCEPT.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 30.—Senator Christiancy reached this city to-day. He has not yet absolutely decided to accept the Peruvian mission, and will hold the matter under advisement several days before making a determination. His health, which has been seriously impaired of late, is the compelling cause of his inclination to go abroad, and there is little doubt that he will resign his Senatorial seat as soon as he can arrange his private affairs. It is a fact that the Berlin mission, as well as the Peruvian, was offered him.

A TROY CORONER'S IRREGULARITIES.

TROY, N. Y., Jan. 30.—The exposure of frauds continues. A Supervisors' committee reports that Coroner Edward S. Flood's administration has been outrageous. The laws require the Coroner to file all inquisitions in the County Clerk's office after completion of inquests, and the testimony of Flood and Dennis J. Dewon, his clerk, shows that, in direct violation of such statutes, Flood has not filed a single inquisition. Flood keeps no record whatever of his official proceedings, and all papers and inquisitions are kept by Dewon, who, in his testimony, made the startling declaration that he had destroyed all inquisitions of Coroner Flood taken previous to the commencement of the present semi-annual session of the board. Such destruction could only have been perpetrated with the purpose of removing all evidence of the fraudulent character of certain bills against this county. Flood signs his subpœnas by the hundred in blank, and hands them over to Dewon to be used as occasion requires. When given to an officer to serve, the officer is directed by Flood to suppœna such witnesses as the officer deems necessary. This practice accounts for the circumstance of certain witnesses being on each Coroner's subpœna as having been subpœnaed to appear forthwith from distant parts of the State, such as Dankirk, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, &c. The Governor will be asked to remove Flood, and the Grand Jury to indict him and Dewon.

Ford, the implicated Superintendent of the Poor, refuses to resign.

YALE'S MEDICAL GRADUATES.

NEW-HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 30.—At the annual Winter examination for degrees in the Yale Medical School to-day, a class of eight was graduated as follows, all but one from this State: Scott R. Baker, of Birmingham; E. P. Flint, of Coventry; R. J. Gibson, of this city; T. B. Jewett, of Birmingham; W. S. Miller, of Killingworth; C. G. Surridge, of Vermont; J. K. Thatcher, of this city; N. P. Tyler, of Barrytown, N. Y.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 30.—A Methodist preacher named Knox, who belongs North, was arrested at Columbus, Tenn., and taken to Waynesboro to-day, on charge of having attempted a crime upon the person of Mrs. Lutes.

NOYES' TELL-TALE STUBS.

SOME OF THE SECRETS THEY MIGHT DISCLOSE.

HISTORY OF NOYES' CONTEST WITH COMMISSIONER STEDMAN—WAS THE MONEY PAID TO LEGISLATORS OR TO THE LOBBY?—THE VENALITY OF THE LEGISLATURE OF 1875.

NEW-HAVEN, Jan. 30.—Receiver Talcott H. Russell seems somewhat astonished at the noise produced by his admission that Benjamin Noyes' check-book shows that that noted inmate of a Jersey State Prison put between $30,000 and $35,000 "where it would do the most good" in the Connecticut Legislature of 1875, and he is as uncommunicative as the safe in which the tell-tale stubs are locked up. Attention was called to the venality of the Legislature of 1875 in another way during its session, as is shown below; but at that time it was not said that the members had absorbed Noyes' money, although their questionable connection with other schemes was plainly displayed. And—in the absence of the proof which may or may not be in Russell's check-stubs—it is not believed by men well-informed of the character of that Legislature and of Noyes's methods, that his money went into members' pockets; but that it did go to a host of able lawyers who were working for and with him seems clear.

Noyes was in the thick of his fight with Commissioner Stedman. The latter, worsted up to that point by his adversary, who is admitted to have been a remarkable fighter, applied to the Legislature for the repeal of the charters of Noyes' two companies—the American Mutual Life and the American National Life and Trust, both having a home in the insurance building in this City—on the ground that they were hopelessly bankrupt. He placed the deficiency in their assets at $400,000. Noyes was on hand with the smartest lobby ever seen in this State. Some were his counsel—for example, Col. Dexter R. Wright, of this city, now Speaker of the House, and Tilton E. Doolittle, who is the ablest criminal lawyer in this section. Others were able and prominent lawyers from Hartford, even, and from New-London County. At this late day their connection cannot be ascertained with absolute certainty, but it is clear that his lobby was one made up of many of Connecticut's most prominent lawyers, who do not work for nothing. With the Insurance Committee they effected nothing, but, nevertheless, they were surprised when that committee reported a bill repealing the charters if the deficiency of $400,000 was not made good by Sept. 1, and making the rectification depend upon the certificate of the Commissioner, whom Noyes believed to be his bitter enemy. To allow this to pass would be to court destruction. But, notwithstanding these precautions, it did pass the Senate. In the House, by the influence of a lobby, an amendment was pushed which would have postponed the whole matter virtually, and its adoption might have been effected but for the clear-headed legislator, Judge Lynde Harrison, of this city, who saw a more equitable middle course. He did not think it right to make the Commissioner both prosecutor and Judge, as the majority bill did, and he was the author of the amendment which provided for an examination of the companies' financial condition by Chief-Justice Park and an associate, (Judge Phelps, now Congressman from this district,) and a proposition based upon their decision. These Judges tried again the case of Stedman against Noyes at much length. Noyes was represented by Col. Wright and other able counsel, and Stedman by H. B. Harrison, the recent Democratic candidate for United States Senator. At the end, the Judges reported very briefly, without reasons or computations, that the deficiency was $59,000 only. This was an overstatement. Noyes claimed that there was really no deficiency, for the reason that it had cost the company $50,000 to defend itself against Stedman's prosecutions. But, as he felt sure that Stedman would unfailingly follow him, he at once took measures to merge his companies into the National Capitol Life of Washington, D. C., and so, by coming out under national auspices, to escape the supervision of the Connecticut Commissioner. Also having been quite fortunate before in absorbing other companies, he endeavored to make a bargain for the New-Jersey Mutual Life. This transaction abruptly terminated his career, and gave him the taste of Jersey justice which he is now experiencing.

The costly and able lobby which Noyes marshaled in Hartford did not accomplish its object, which was first, the recommendation of a bill antagonistic to the one presented, and second, the adoption afterward of an amendment vastly different from the one which was adopted. Probably the legal gentlemen relied upon their persuasive powers, and kept Noyes' money for their own use. It may be mentioned here that the long fight against Noyes' comparatively insignificant companies served as many people have believed and said, to draw attention away from the Life, which was then in bad condition, and which has since gone to pieces.

But the story about Noyes' check-stubs revives a scandal which gave the Legislature of that year a bad name, and one which is unsavory to the honest representatives in that General Assembly. The other great question before that session was the bitter controversy which had arisen out of the abandonment of the Plantsville Station by the New-Haven and Northampton Railroad Company. Both sides, warned by previous court-trials and work in the Legislature, appeared with able counsel, and lobbyists were active in the matter. Their tracks were not well covered, or else certain legislators were too eager to be convinced. So common became the rumors of corruption (for pitiably small sums, it may be said,) that on July 13, 1875, the legislative correspondent of the New-Haven Palladium, E. A. Tucker, editor of the Hartford Evening Post, sent a letter to that journal, in which charges were made in unmistakable language. "Certain of the leading men of the majority," said he, "and no inconsiderable number of the rank and file, are openly in the market for sale. The fact seems to be just as well established as any fact can be that has not been ascertained by the confession of criminals. There are men who make themselves prominent in debate who are understood to have their regular price in the market, while the smaller fry, who have nothing but their votes to barter, go very cheap. They find out who are managing the cases in which pecuniary interests are involved, and actually offer their votes for sale. These high-toned patriots do not wait to be seduced—they run after the supposed corruptors and prostrate themselves as before them. It is said by those who know the inside history of this business that the venality of this Legislature exceeds anything of the kind ever known in this State." Mr. Tucker proceeded to special reference to Litchfield County, and to say that "this shameless venality comes from the rural districts, where, we are told, 'the virtue of the country has an abiding place, and where its honest yeomanry dwell.' It is said to protect the cities and the rest of the Commonwealth from urban corruption."

These statements created much virtuous excitement in the Legislature, and one McMahon, of New-Milford, moved that Mr. Tucker be expelled from the floor. But at Judge Lynde Harrison's suggestion, an investigation before a special committee was provided for. His so-called investigation was the greatest farce and mockery ever seen in a Legislature. At the outset, after Mr. Tucker had given the committee a list of witnesses whom he wished sworn, the committee voted that they would not summon one of them. They employed two noted criminal lawyers, who conducted the case throughout as if for defendants. Mr. Tucker told his story, and when the trial became fresh and it was clear that a man's testimony was absolutely necessary to the committee, by their lawyers' advice, would decide not to hear this man. Among the discoveries made were some that showed that a careful investigation was imperatively demanded—for example, that the Speaker of the House had offered to the New-Haven and Northampton Road his vote and those of 12 others for $300, and that McMahon, the member who so indignantly had moved for Mr. Tucker's expulsion, had sent word to counsel for the road that he "was ready to be convinced." The so-called investigation was hurriedly ended and a whitewashing report made. All the persons implicated have made direct denials or explained certain stories by claiming that they originated in harmless jokes. This was the Legislature in or about which Benjamin Noyes is now said to have used $30,000 for "legislative expenses."

KILLED BY A BOILER EXPLOSION.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Jan. 30.—A special dispatch to the Commercial from Bloomington, Ill., says: "At 9 o'clock this morning a boiler in the mill of L. Gassner, at Secor, Woodford County, exploded, tearing away a large portion of the mill and instantly killing William Collins, engineer; Mr. Wheeler, a railroad section foreman; Charles Brauns and Henry Manstick, and badly injuring Joseph Horner. The bodies of the persons killed were literally torn to fragments and thrown a distance of 200 feet from the mill."

VERDICT IN THE ARLINGTON CASE.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Jan. 30.—The argument in the Arlington case was concluded this afternoon, Judge Robertson closing for the plaintiff. The case was then given to the jury, which was out only a few minutes, when it gave a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for the whole property in fee. Ejectments will now lie against Kaufman, who is in possession of the property, and Strong, who has the remainder of the property except the portion occupied by Maria Syphax, which is not in controversy. The defendants entered a motion for a new trial, on the grounds, first, that the court erred in overruling the objections made by defendants to the introduction of evidence; second, that the verdict is contrary to the evidence; third, the court erred in excluding evidence offered by defendant. The court wished the bills of exceptions to be made up as soon as possible, and stated that he would be in Richmond in two weeks, and would then sign them. It was agreed, after consultation, that the bills should be arranged by Messrs. Beach and Willoughby, and sent to Richmond. In the matter of instructions in this case, the court granted three for the plaintiff, and 13 out of 24 asked for by the defendants.

JUDGE BLODGETT'S ACCUSERS.

A. C. HESING CHARGES HIM, IN TESTIMONY, WITH ADVISING IRREGULARITIES—ALLEGING THE OFFER OF A BRIBE.

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—In the Blodgett investigation to-day, A. C. Hesing testified that he was indebted, after the great fire, to the Germania Insurance Company in the sum of $15,000, secured by 170 shares of the Staats Zeitung stock. This insurance company suspended and an Assignee was appointed. One day, Hesing says, he went to Judge Blodgett and stated that he was embarrassed and needed help. He was afraid he would have to forfeit his newspaper stock. There were men, he told the Judge, who were anxious to buy the stock, who were enemies of his. He wanted to know if there was not some way by which his stock and notes could be disposed of without being advertised and sold at public sale. The Judge told him he had better tell the Assignee to solicit offers from bankers and brokers, have him submit them to the court, and he [the Judge] would confirm the sale. Hesing said he instructed the Greenebaums to bid $5,000 for he stock and charge the amount to him; when a meeting of the creditors of the Germania Company was held Hesing told them what he had done, and three of them objected so strenuously against the arrangement with Blodgett that he was obliged to pay them $2,500 each to keep their mouths shut in reference to the private sale.

Mr. Hesing's connection with the Whisky Ring was then inquired into, and the circumstances of his incarceration in the County Jail were brought out. Mr. Hesing said that he had an interview with the attorneys of the Government in the whisky cases, in which they had made advances to him in regard to testifying against Hon. J. D. Ward. The witness had carried a large sum of money to Mr. Winston, as attorney, from "Jake" Rehm, who was also indicted. Mr. Hesing had gone to Winston about it, and he had told him that the first thing to be done was to employ Mr. Campbell, who had the ear of the Judge, and the next was to pay $20,000. Mr. Hesing asked Winston if Judge Blodgett would take the money. Winston replied: "I saw the Judge going to the depot yesterday to meet his daughter, who was returning from Europe, and he was so shabby that I was ashamed of him. I think I could make him a present."

Henry Greeneb

would, perhaps, expose them; seeing that what we do not do, others will do still more energetically; and if you prefer, as you tell us, to retire, not only will you not save those you wish to protect, but you will jeopardize those we are now really protecting." Here the conversation ended. Next day the Marshal signed the financial changes

M. Dufaure believing him won over, at Tuesday morning's council submitted to President MacMahon a decree affecting six Public Prosecutors. The Marshal examined it, and then, turning to M. Dufaure, said: "I am going to sign this, but I leave the responsibility to you," and signed it.

Gen. Gresley, Minister of War, submitted his list. The law provides for 18 high military commands, each intrusted to a General, who may be relieved every three years. Of the 18 Generals thus appointed nine have held their posts more than five years, and next September will have been six years. Marshal MacMahon's idea is that not having been removed after three years, they ought by tacit reappointment to finish another term of three years. The law certainly says nothing of the kind. It simply accords the power of removing the commander after three years.

Gen. Gresley's decree dealt with the nine Generals. Of these, four were to be transferred and five—Bourbaki, De Lartigue, Batallle, du Barail, and Montaudon—definitively relieved. Marshal MacMahon declared he could not sign this decree. "I cannot," he said, "sign a decree superseding brave Generals—my own friends and companions—whose legal terms of command only expires in five or six months. There is no danger in my refusal. I cannot consent to stay at such cost. I blush at the thought. I assert that in my heart I could not do it. It will have to be another who does it. Political categories must not be created in the Army. I would prefer to resign. My children would not forgive me for such an act. I cannot, when the Army is concerned, for which I am responsible before the nation, obey injunctions of newspapers like these"—and the Marshal showed two Republican newspapers which for some days back have been publishing lists of officers classed in political categories. As usual with him in such circumstances, his face flushed, and he spoke hurriedly, as if anxious to get what he had to do soon over. The Ministers said nothing, for after hearing this it was difficult to form an immediate resolution. The council accordingly adjourned. In the afternoon the Cabinet met again. After much hesitation the Ministers came to the conclusion that their propositions must be maintained. The law on the great military commands is one of the dangers bequeathed by the National Assembly as a piece of anti-Republican strategy. It calls into being 18 military powers, the chiefs of which have speedily come to look upon themselves as beyond the Government's reach, whom hitherto none dared to interfere with. The Ministers said that if they were to give in on this point they would be exposing the country to a possible danger and creating an insurmountable obstacle to the settlement of the Government. The Cabinet, therefore, determined to maintain its resolution. M. Dufaure was charged to inform Marshal MacMahon of this decision. He replied that in view of this official demand he asked for a Cabinet council on Thursday at 1 o'clock, at Versailles. The Ministers, meeting to deliberate will fit him to be Marshal MacMahon's successor. When the affair of the 16th of May, 1877, rendered the President's position and prospects unstationable, M. Grévy was put forward prominently as the man best able to inspire confidence in the Republic. With a long and spotless public career, he was recognized as a brave and steady man to have at the helm, and a wise and moderate statesman who would do much to give the Government the needed stability. Few of M. Grévy's fellow-candidates could have said with equal truth, as he did to his old constituents before one of the more recent elections, "You have known me now a long time. It is 28 years since you first elected me your representative. What I was then, that I am to-day." If not so brilliant as some of his confrères, he was more consistent. It is something in France to gain reputation as not being one of those men who conscientiously alter their opinions to suit their changes of position. Such reputation M. Grévy gained. The political sentiments which he uttered at one period never rose to testify against him at another. He was always frank to express his convictions, and did not hesitate to scandalize the prurient of his own party by admitting that all the rascals were not confined to other parties than his own.

François Paul Jules Grévy was born at Montsous-Vaudrez, in the Department of the Jura, Aug. 15, 1813. He was educated at the College of Poligny, and afterward went to Paris to make his way in his chosen profession of the law. At the revolution of 1830, Grévy, who was then a Latin Quarter student, took part in the fighting, and was one of the captors of the Babylone Barracks. He stood fire with cool bravery, and when the trouble was over returned quietly to his books, with the intention to become a successful lawyer rather than a politician. But he was speedily diverted from his bent by being retained to defend prosecuted conspirators and journalists. He was not a sensational pleader, however. He argued quietly, and never bawled. His work was done logically and effectively for the acquittal of his clients, rather than to build up fame for himself. He became interested in politics, and widely at variance with one of the distinguished members of the Republican Party. The events of 1848 found M. Grévy in possession of an enviable reputation for sense, and he was sent by the new Republic to his native Department, the Jura, as Chief Commissioner. He exercised the difficult functions of the position in such manner as to make the Jura content and prosperous, and the department testified its gratitude by returning the Commissioner to the Constituent Assembly by 65,150 votes.

M. Grévy had now become a well-known character. Stamped in public esteem as a man of will, of power, and of probity, he was elected Vice-President of the Assembly and member of the Committee of Justice. He took his seat on the Left of the House, and speedily achieved a position apart among those who were devoting France an intelligent and acceptable Republic. M. Grévy so conducted himself that he not only directed a turbulent Legislature with firmness, but secured an uncontested name for impartiality. He was described at this time as a short, dapper man, with a face smooth-shaved all but a trim fringing of gray whisker; thin, firm lips; a square bald head, gray eyes, and a peremptory voice; the incarnation of dignity and presidential authority, which he exerted unanimously. As a speaker, M. Grévy was noted for his firm and temperate spirit. He possessed the invincible logic of sincerity, which wins all good minds. A Republican, and a radical one, from the beginning, he was a Republican from reflection rather than from training. He could not conceive of progress except through liberty. Moderate and just as he was, M. Grévy was never half-hearted in his advocacies. He supported radical reforms, and would have nothing to say to party conditions. On all important occasions his vote was opposed to that of M. Thiers, in whose liberalism he positied the case. This famous amendment with regard to the Presidency set the seal to his opinions. Mistrusting both Gen. Cavaignac and Louis Napoleon, he moved that the Chief of the Executive be styled "President of the Council of Ministers," that he be elected for no definite time, but be removable by a vote of the Assembly. The amendment was lost by 643 votes to 158. The Presidency lapsed into Bonapartist hands, and three years later (1851) M. Grévy, driven from political life by the coup d'état which he had plainly foreseen, resumed his practice at law, and was little heard of as a politician till 1868. Re-elected in that year by his old supporters of the Jura, his majority over the official candidate was a crushing one. To arouse something of a panic at the Tuileries M. Grévy did not, however, return to the House as a speaking member. Not fond of wasting words where no practical result was to be hoped for, he let the officially-packed Chamber legislate as it pleased, and his name came prominently before the public only twice during two years—first, when he voted against the return of the Orleans Princes, and, secondly, when he declined to participate in the revolution of the 4th of September. In both of these emergencies he was at variance with the Liberal Party. When M. Grévy rose to explain his vote on the question of repealing the law banishing the Princes, M. Thiers exclaimed, "That is to speak in support of the Government!" "It is to speak," retorted M. Grévy, "as a Republican who wishes to be neither the dupe nor the accomplice of royalty." It became President of the meetings in opposition to those presided over by M. Picard, and declined to accept any compromise with the imperialists. He offered determined resistance to the plebiscite, and took all occasion of public employment with a resolute negative. After many times differing with M. Thiers, the two statesmen came together fully on the question of the 4th of September, and a friendship was established that steadily increased up to the death of M. Thiers. In 1871 M. Grévy was again re-elected by an overwhelming majority, and was made President of the Assembly by 514 votes to 108 of 638 cast. In 1873 he resigned in consequence of a dispute during which his impartiality was impugned. Although re-elected, he refused to serve, and sat in the House until 1876, when he was unanimously once more for the Jura, and at once raised to the presiding chair by 462 votes, out of a total of 468.

In former days M. Grévy had no liking for M. Gambetta. The fervid oratory of the popular tribune grated on the cool, logical, and methodical but ambitious mind of the "French Aristides," as he was termed. While Gambetta was at Tours struggling against Prussian force and Bonapartist intrigue, Grévy was insisting in Assembly that he should be convoked to give the Republican Government a legal sanction. Gambetta refused, adding that the time was one for acting, not for deliberating. Whereat M. Grévy responded: "Do what you may, you will never be a Republican; you are fated to die in the skin of a rebel." But time has brought moderation to M. Gambetta, has liberalized Grévy, and has fulfilled what seemed a wild prediction, that these two men, so opposed by nature, should come to work side by side in the cause of Republican France.

ENGLISH FEAR OF CATTLE DISEASE.

CANADIAN SHIPPERS ALARMED BY THE SLAUGHTER OF THEIR CATTLE—A CABINET MEETING DISCUSSING THE SUBJECT.

TORONTO, Ontario, Jan. 30.—Information of the slaughtering of cattle lately shipped to Liverpool on a steam-ship creates an anxious feeling among dealers here. On or about Jan. 14 inst. the steamship Ontario started from Portland for England with a cargo of cattle, the shippers being T. Crawford & Co., of this city. The cattle numbered 265 head, and were, according to Mr. Crawford's statements, in sound condition, having been examined by competent men at both Montreal and Portland. The Ontario reached Liverpool on Sunday last, and on the following day Crawford & Co. received a cable dispatch from their agents there that the cattle had been detained for inspection by order of the British Government. This inspection was evidently attended with unsatisfactory results, for on Tuesday the agent sent a dispatch that the cattle had been condemned and slaughtered. Autopsies were to be slaughtered. The disease was said to be pleuro-pneumonia. The Toronto Exportation Company and Crawford & Co., the two firms that do the largest shipping business in their line in the city, were given notice by their respective agents to ship no more. The Exportation Company has a cargo of 170 head on the steam-ship State of Alabama, which it is anticipated will arrive at Liverpool on Friday next.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Jan. 30.—Information having been received that the British Government had totally prohibited the importation of cattle from the United States, the Cabinet met last evening to consider the question. The effect of the regulation was the adoption of a resolution that steps would be taken to prevent any injury being done to Canada.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Jan. 30.—Considerable anxiety exists in regard to the order from the Imperial Government prohibiting the importation of Canadian cattle into England. It is said that if the order is continued cattle will be slaughtered here and the meat taken across in refrigerators.

A CURIOUS SUICIDE.

WILLIAM J. EAMES, OF JERSEY CITY, CUTS HIS THROAT WITH A PAIR OF SCISSORS.

That part of Jersey City known as Lafayette was thrown into a state of excitement last evening, by the announcement that one of the most respected residents of the locality had committed suicide. For some years past William J. Eames has lived in one of a handsome row of brick buildings on Communipaw-avenue near Pine-street. He was engaged in business as commission merchant, on Market-street, New-York, dealing in silks, satins, and other fabrics. His business was affected by the prevailing financial depression, and within the last two or three weeks he had sustained heavy losses. He became despondent and melancholy. Last Monday his symptoms became so marked as to attract the attention of his family, and he had been kept under the closest surveillance. He manifested a tendency to suicide, and was watched night and day to prevent it, everything with which he could harm himself being kept out of his way. Yesterday afternoon, while in the care of his son, W. W. Eames, he managed to conceal a pair of scissors beneath his coat, and, when unobserved, plunged one of the blades into his throat. Drs. Lampson and Hardenburg were summoned, but they saw at once that the jugular had been severed, and that his recovery was out of the question. He lingered till about 7 o'clock in the evening, when he died. He was 55 years of age, and leaves a family of five grown-up sons and daughters.

BOSS M'LAUGHLIN'S MISTAKE.

When Boss McLaughlin made out the ticket to be elected at the Fifteenth Ward primary, in Brooklyn, he put on it the name of Montgomery Conklin, a man who some time ago kept a liquor store at No. 579 Grand-street. Mr. Conklin was duly elected, and then the discovery was made that he had been dead for about a year.

WORKING DAYS AT ALBANY.

MR. REPBURN'S FIGHT FOR A CLERK.

THIS ASSEMBLYMAN SUCCESSFUL IN HIS OBJECT AT LAST—MORE INFORMATION WANTED FROM THE INSURANCE DEPARTMENT—A QUAINT PETITION FROM AN ADVOCATE OF CREMATION.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—Mr. Hepburn returned to the fight to-day which he began a few days ago to secure the appointment of a clerk for the Special Committee on Apportionment. He beat down all opposition single-handed, and induced the Assembly to vote for the man named in his resolution for the clerkship. He moved his resolution from the table immediately after the presentation of the report of the Special Committee on Expenditures of the House had been made. Mr. Hepburn was rather vehement in manner. He insisted that his request for a clerk should be considered immediately. Expecting that gentlemen would vote against him, he preferred that they should do so at once and have the matter disposed of. He offered as a substitute for his original resolution one declaring the election by the House of Ira L. C. Lockwood as clerk. Mr. Sheard desired to limit the pay of the clerk to the 40 days which the committee was given to make their report. Mr. Strahan very sensibly suggested that it was probable that the services of the committee would extend beyond the 40-days' limit, and that the clerk's services would also be required beyond that date.

Mr. Brooks entered the discussion at this point. Armed, as usual, with figures, he pointed out the fact that the expenses of the Legislature had increased from $229,417 in 1867 to $442,153 in 1878, and he thought it was time to cry halt, in these days of great public taxation and distress. In the old days men imposed upon themselves many legislative duties which they now turn over to clerks. He said that now $500 was spent here for each member's employes, $2,300 for each member of the United States Senate, and $650 for each Representative in Congress. He again asserted that he was for economy wherever opportunity offered. He made some statements that led Mr. Ogden to suppose that he desired a Democratic clerk, if a Republican was to be appointed, and Mr. Ogden had a word to say. He thought that it was important for the dominant party in the Assembly to meet the issue of making an apportionment, but to meet it fairly and squarely, and he called upon his Democratic friends to help, as he believed they had not done hitherto, in securing a just apportionment. The neglect or refusal to appoint a clerk should not be allowed to prevent a conclusion on the subject. Mr. Skinner's opinion was that the clerk was not necessary, and he said his experience was that they had done little last Winter. The sum of the labors of two clerks last year was eight pages of computation. He offered an amendment that two messengers already appointed be detailed to perform the duties of clerk and messenger. Mr. Hepburn sprang to his feet at this suggestion. He declared that this could not be done, as the duties of clerks and messengers were defined by statute.

An amusing discussion—to the House at least—followed. Mr. Hepburn replying to Mr. Skinner, Mr. Sheard, and Mr. Brooks alternately. The Speaker ruled that Mr. Skinner's suggestion, offered as a resolution, was out of order, and that it could not be carried out even if accepted by the Assembly. Mr. Skinner appealed from the the decision of the Chair, but a moment later withdrew his appeal, although he declares that he considered the ruling arbitrary in the extreme. The discussion dragged, when Mr. Grady came in with his demand for a Democratic clerk, but Gen. Sharpe attracted attention when he rose to speak. He had heard with pleasure the words of the gentleman from Kings, and he would go hand in hand with satisfaction the day when the Democratic Party should ride into power and divide the patronage. He had read the history of the Democratic Party, and was convinced that they would do this. He asked that Mr. Brooks should point out the clerks, either of the Ways and Means, or Cities and Rules Committees, who had nothing to do. Then he would gladly consent that they should do double duty. After further discussion, in which the yeas and nayes, the vote was taken, and Mr. Hepburn won his clerk by a vote of 79 to 25. Mr. Grady's motion to appoint a Democrat was voted down by a strict party division, only Democrats voting "aye."

Pursuing the policy of keeping the Insurance Department busy, Mr. Fish introduced a resolution asking "That the Superintendent of Insurance be requested to furnish a friendship was established that steadily increased up to the death of M. Thiers. In 1871 M. Grévy was again re-elected by an overwhelming majority, and was made President of the Assembly by 514 votes to 108 of 638 cast. In 1873 he resigned in consequence of a dispute during which his impartiality was impugned. Although re-elected, he refused to serve, and sat in the House until 1876, when he was unanimously once more for the Jura, and at once raised to the presiding chair by 462 votes, out of a total of 468.

In former days M. Grévy had no liking for M. Gambetta. The fervid oratory of the popular tribune grated on the cool, logical, and methodical but ambitious mind of the "French Aristides," as he was termed. While Gambetta was at Tours struggling against Prussian force and Bonapartist intrigue, Grévy was insisting in Assembly that he should be convoked to give the Republican Government a legal sanction. Gambetta refused, adding that the time was one for acting, not for deliberating. Whereat M. Grévy responded: "Do what you may, you will never be a Republican; you are fated to die in the skin of a rebel." But time has brought moderation to M. Gambetta, has liberalized Grévy, and has fulfilled what seemed a wild prediction, that these two men, so opposed by nature, should come to work side by side in the cause of Republican France.

ENGLISH FEAR OF CATTLE DISEASE.

CANADIAN SHIPPERS ALARMED BY THE SLAUGHTER OF THEIR CATTLE—A CABINET MEETING DISCUSSING THE SUBJECT.

TORONTO, Ontario, Jan. 30.—Information of the slaughtering of cattle lately shipped to Liverpool on a steam-ship creates an anxious feeling among dealers here. On or about Jan. 14 inst. the steamship Ontario started from Portland for England with a cargo of cattle, the shippers being T. Crawford & Co., of this city. The cattle numbered 265 head, and were, according to Mr. Crawford's statements, in sound condition, having been examined by competent men at both Montreal and Portland. The Ontario reached Liverpool on Sunday last, and on the following day Crawford & Co. received a cable dispatch from their agents there that the cattle had been detained for inspection by order of the British Government. This inspection was evidently attended with unsatisfactory results, for on Tuesday the agent sent a dispatch that the cattle had been condemned and slaughtered. Autopsies were to be slaughtered. The disease was said to be pleuro-pneumonia. The Toronto Exportation Company and Crawford & Co., the two firms that do the largest shipping business in their line in the city, were given notice by their respective agents to ship no more. The Exportation Company has a cargo of 170 head on the steam-ship State of Alabama, which it is anticipated will arrive at Liverpool on Friday next.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Jan. 30.—Information having been received that the British Government had totally prohibited the importation of cattle from the United States, the Cabinet met last evening to consider the question. The effect of the regulation was the adoption of a resolution that steps would be taken to prevent any injury being done to Canada.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Jan. 30.—Considerable anxiety exists in regard to the order from the Imperial Government prohibiting the importation of Canadian cattle into England. It is said that if the order is continued cattle will be slaughtered here and the meat taken across in refrigerators.

A CURIOUS SUICIDE.

WILLIAM J. EAMES, OF JERSEY CITY, CUTS HIS THROAT WITH A PAIR OF SCISSORS.

That part of Jersey City known as Lafayette was thrown into a state of excitement last evening, by the announcement that one of the most respected residents of the locality had committed suicide. For some years past William J. Eames has lived in one of a handsome row of brick buildings on Communipaw-avenue near Pine-street. He was engaged in business as commission merchant, on Market-street, New-York, dealing in silks, satins, and other fabrics. His business was affected by the prevailing financial depression, and within the last two or three weeks he had sustained heavy losses. He became despondent and melancholy. Last Monday his symptoms became so marked as to attract the attention of his family, and he had been kept under the closest surveillance. He manifested a tendency to suicide, and was watched night and day to prevent it, everything with which he could harm himself being kept out of his way. Yesterday afternoon, while in the care of his son, W. W. Eames, he managed to conceal a pair of scissors beneath his coat, and, when unobserved, plunged one of the blades into his throat. Drs. Lampson and Hardenburg were summoned, but they saw at once that the jugular had been severed, and that his recovery was out of the question. He lingered till about 7 o'clock in the evening, when he died. He was 55 years of age, and leaves a family of five grown-up sons and daughters.

BOSS M'LAUGHLIN'S MISTAKE.

When Boss McLaughlin made out the ticket to be elected at the Fifteenth Ward primary, in Brooklyn, he put on it the name of Montgomery Conklin, a man who some time ago kept a liquor store at No. 579 Grand-street. Mr. Conklin was duly elected, and then the discovery was made that he had been dead for about a year.

the position of Senators who favored the first section and yet opposed the second, which was merely designed to make the first operative. They appeared to him to stand in the attitude of men who favored the passage of a law, but were opposed to any provisions that would prevent its evasion. For his part he could not see the necessity of any change in the present laws regulating the rate of interest. There had been no public demand for such a change; no petitions had been sent here asking for it, and there was no evidence that the people at large were not entirely satisfied with the law as it stands. The bill was "progressed" for future discussion, with very little indication that it will pass the present Senate.

The Assembly's resolution, asking the State's Representatives in Congress to urge an appropriation for removing obstructions in the St. Mary's, St. Clair, and Detroit Rivers, was called from the table by R. V. Pierce and unanimously adopted.

Mr. Oakley's bill for the consolidation of the Jamaica, Woodhaven, and East New-York Railroad Company with the Jamaica and Brooklyn Plank-road Company was ordered to a third reading.

Judge Robertson introduced a bill for enlarging the powers of the Five Points House of Industry. This provides that that institution may adopt into families any orphan, half orphan, or destitute child who may have been in its care and charge for the space of one year unprovided for, in case said child be under 10 years of age or over 6 months. In case of any child over 10 years old, the Board of Managers may, by a vote of two-thirds of the yeas and nayes, the vote was taken, and Mr. Hepburn won his clerk by a vote of 79 to 25. Mr. Grady's motion to appoint a Democrat was voted down by a strict party division, only Democrats voting "aye."

Pursuing the policy of keeping the Insurance Department busy, Mr. Fish introduced a resolution asking "That the Superintendent of Insurance be requested to furnish to his knowledge, the facts, as established at this session before the Committee on Insurance Frauds, relative to the connection of the Manhattan Life Insurance Company with the Equitable Life Insurance Company, and the Mutual Life Insurance Company, and that he report to this House at the earliest practicable moment, whether, in his opinion, the relations of the Manhattan Company with the Equitable and Mutual companies, or either of them, are such as to require the exercise of the powers of the Superintendent of Insurance, under the provisions of section 7 of chapter 328 of the laws of 1877, and if so, what action he has taken, or proposes to take, in the premises." Mr. Fish explained that the Manhattan Company had been organized by the Equitable Company, and that the Mutual Company had been interested in the organization. The Manhattan Company had been organized for the purpose of doing a business which the Equitable Company could not do, and which the Mutual Company could do, but which it was not desirable that it should do. The Manhattan Company had been organized for the purpose of doing a business which the Equitable Company could not do, and which the Mutual Company could do, but which it was not desirable that it should do. The Manhattan Company had been organized for the purpose of doing a business which the Equitable Company could not do, and which the Mutual Company could do, but which it was not desirable that it should do.

Mr. Oakley's bill for the consolidation of the Jamaica, Woodhaven, and East New-York Railroad Company with the Jamaica and Brooklyn Plank-road Company was ordered to a third reading.

Judge Robertson introduced a bill for enlarging the powers of the Five Points House of Industry. This provides that that institution may adopt into families any orphan, half orphan, or destitute child who may have been in its care and charge for the space of one year unprovided for, in case said child be under 10 years of age or over 6 months. In case of any child over 10 years old, the Board of Managers may, by a vote of two-thirds of the yeas and nayes, the vote was taken, and Mr. Hepburn won his clerk by a vote of 79 to 25. Mr. Grady's motion to appoint a Democrat was voted down by a strict party division, only Democrats voting "aye."

Pursuing the policy of keeping the Insurance Department busy, Mr. Fish introduced a resolution asking "That the Superintendent of Insurance be requested to furnish to his knowledge, the facts, as established at this session before the Committee on Insurance Frauds, relative to the connection of the Manhattan Life Insurance Company with the Equitable Life Insurance Company, and the Mutual Life Insurance Company, and that he report to this House at the earliest practicable moment, whether, in his opinion, the relations of the Manhattan Company with the Equitable and Mutual companies, or either of them, are such as to require the exercise of the powers of the Superintendent of Insurance, under the provisions of section 7 of chapter 328 of the laws of 1877, and if so, what action he has taken, or proposes to take, in the premises." Mr. Fish explained that the Manhattan Company had been organized by the Equitable Company, and that the Mutual Company had been interested in the organization. The Manhattan Company had been organized for the purpose of doing a business which the Equitable Company could not do, and which the Mutual Company could do, but which it was not desirable that it should do.

INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT.

THE AUTHOR'S RIGHT TO PROTECTION—VIEWS OF MR. GEORGE H. PUTNAM AS PRESENTED IN A PAPER READ BEFORE THE NEW-YORK FREE TRADE CLUB.

At a meeting of the New-York Free Trade Club, at No. 21 West Twenty-fourth-streets, last evening, Mr. George H. Putnam, Sr., member of the firm of G. P. Putnam's Sons, read a paper on "International Copyright in its Relations to Free Trade." Among the audience were Mr, Horace White, Rev. Dr. S. I. Prime, Mr. A. D. F. Randolph, Mr. George W. Carleton, and Mr. A. S. Armstrong. Capt. John Codman presided. Mr. Putnam said it must be recognized that international copyright is based on simple propositions. Legislatures cannot make or modify the laws of trade. What a man has made belongs to him, and the results of his labors should not be used to his detriment. Too much stress cannot, he said, be laid upon the fact that a system may be sound in theory and false in practice. The free traders are the true protectionists, and authors are laborers. A copyright represents their right to duplicate their own work and to prevent others from doing so. They claim the same protection as those who work with their hands and sell their wares how and when they please. The non-existence of an international copyright has checked the sale of American books at home, because publishers will sell foreign books on which they can make more money. American fiction must be very good to compete with foreign fiction. Mr. Putnam enumerated the efforts made since 1838, both here and in Great Britain, to establish an international copyright law. Rejecting the suggestion of giving protection only to books of which the type had been set and the printing done in this country, and the author's proposition to extend the right of copyright without limitation or restriction, as not giving sufficient consideration to business requirements, Mr. Putnam recommended a measure based upon the suggestion of the British Commission coupled with one or two of the provisions that have been included in the several American schemes: First, that the title of the foreign work be registered in the United States simultaneously with its publication abroad. Second, that the work be republished in the United States within six months of its publication abroad. Third, that for the limited term, say 10 years, the stipulation shall be that the republishing be done by an American citizen. Fourth, that for the same term of years the copyright protection be given to those books only that have been printed and bound in this country, the privilege being accorded of importing foreign stereotypes and electrotypes of cuts. Fifth, that subject to these provisions the foreign author, or his assigns, shall be accorded the same privileges now conceded to an American author. He believes that in the course of time the general laws of trade would and ought to so regulate the arrangements for supplying the American public with books that, if there were no restriction as to the nationality of the publisher, or as to the importation of printed volumes, the author would select the publishing agent, English or American, who could give him the best terms. The competition will doubtless be made in the course of the year by the British Government for the appointment of an international commission for a fresh consideration of the question. Such a commission ought to prepare for this international commission by the appointment of a home commission to give due consideration to the several interests involved in the question.

During the past 10 years there has undoubtedly been a growth of enlightened public sentiment on the question, but Mr. Putnam is still indisposed to intrust its settlement to the House of Representatives. He believes that it would probably be handled to the best advantage by the Senate in the shape of a treaty. It seems probable, said he, that if the present conditions of trade are maintained, American book-makers need not be specially troubled 10 years hence by the competition of books manufactured in England, and that if the various duties affecting the manufacture could be abolished we could well spare the duty on books themselves. It was a mistake for publishers to explain that in the absence of an international copyright there had grown up among them a custom of making payments to foreign authors for the use of advance sheets, during the last 25 years, a matter of very considerable importance. Some of the English authors who testified before the British Commission stated that the payments from the United States for their books exceeded their receipts in Great Britain. These payments secure, of course, for the American publisher no title of any kind to the books. In some cases they obtain for him the use of advance sheets, by means of which he is able to get his edition printed a week or two in advance of any unauthorized edition that might be prepared. No understanding has been reached among even the leading British houses similar to our American "courtesy of the trade," and the few firms that have made payments for American volumes have found themselves at once confronted by rival and cheaper editions. Mr. Putnam fears, however, that even with the publishers here the courtesy of the trade is not going to retain its effectiveness. The concerns which are now publishing cheap "libraries" have not heretofore dealt in standard fiction, and are not prepared to respect the international arrangements or trade courtesies of the older houses. It was very evident to the speaker that in the face of competition of this kind the payments by the old houses to foreign writers of fiction must be materially diminished or must cease altogether. If these 10-cent series have, however, emphasized more clearly the imperative need of an international copyright, they will not have been without their service. In fact, their competition has already exercised the most important influence upon the opinions of some publishers who have for years past stoutly opposed any efforts in behalf of international copyright, but who are now quoted as prepared to give active co-operation to the early establishment of some equitable arrangement.

At the conclusion of the reading of the paper the club thanked Mr. Putnam for such an able and comprehensive expression of opinion on the subject, and voted to have the paper printed for distribution. It was briefly discussed by Rev. Dr. S. I. Prime, Mr. A. D. F. Randolph, Mr. George W. Carleton, Mr. Charlton T. Lewis, and Mr. Horace White.

SENATE'S DISCUSSIONS.

A BILL REGULATING THE RATE OF INTEREST—MR. MURPHY'S RESOLUTION FOR INVESTIGATING NEW-YORK CITY EXPENDITURES.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—The Senate spent most of the session discussing Mr. Edick's bill amending the statute regulating the rate of interest. The substance of the bill is embodied in the following sections:

SECTION 1. The rate of interest upon the loan or forbearance of any money, goods or things in action, shall, from and after the first day of July, 1879, be upon $100 for one year, and after that rate, for a greater or less sum, or for a longer or shorter time. But nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to in any way affect any contract or obligation made before the passage of this act.

SEC. 2. No person or corporation, nor any attorney, agent, trustee, or any person acting in behalf of, or for the borrower or lender, shall directly or indirectly take or receive in money, services, goods, or things in action, or in any other way, any greater value for the loan or forbearance of any money, goods, or things in action than is above prescribed. And the acts of the attorney, agent, trustee, or any person acting in behalf of the borrower or lender, shall be deemed the acts of their principal. But nothing herein shall be so construed as to prevent the lender of any money, or other personal property, from paying his or its own agent or attorney for his services in negotiating loans.

Mr. Edick made a carefully-prepared speech in favor of the bill, but his arguments found little favor among his colleagues. Mr. McCarthy opposed it in the interest of the large class of borrowers who had no real estate to give as security for loans, but whose business life depended upon their ability to borrow money as their exigencies might require. Such men would be powerless to obtain relief under the provisions of this bill, for they could not find lenders at 6 per cent. interest, especially in face of the restrictions contained in the second section. Mr. St. John had no objection to the reduction of the rate of interest to 6 per cent.; in fact, most of the savings banks were now borrowing money at that rate, but he objected to the second section, which would impose upon the banks the expense of searching titles, and other legal expenses incident to their loans. Mr. Loomis also objected to the second section, which he thought, in its practical operation, would prove to be a greater hardship to the borrower than to the lender. Mr. Raines could hardly appreciate

THE NATION'S RED WARDS.

WHO SHALL MANAGE THEM?

FOUR OF THE EIGHT MEMBERS OF THE JOINT COMMITTEE REPORT AGAINST THE PROPOSED TRANSFER TO THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The report embodying the views of Senators Saunders and Oglesby, and Representatives Stewart and Van Vorhes—four of the eight members of the joint committee on the Indian transfer question—has been completed, and will be presented to the Senate to-morrow. The report reviews the history of the Indian service while it was under control of the War Department, from the formation of our Government up to 1849. It is shown that various evils and abuses grew up under the administration of Indian affairs by military officers, and this branch of the report concludes as follows: "The Secretary of War [Hon. James Barbour] in his report of Feb. 3, 1826, said that in the management of Indian affairs, 'The history of the past presents but little on which the recollection lingers with satisfaction.' He said further: 'The future is not more cheering, unless resort be speedily had to other counsels than those by which we have herstofore been governed.'" The admonitions of the Secretary were unheeded, and abuses grew from that time forward, and notwithstanding the reformatory legislation of March 3, 1847, they continued to grow, up to the last hour in which the War Department had control of the Indian population, and so little had been done toward Indian civilization under the War Department management that public opinion had acquiesced in the assumption that the Indians were not susceptible of civilization and progress. The report continues: "We find a quarter of a million of aborigines (Alaska Indians excepted) scattered over 12 States and 9 Territories, and by far more than one-half of these are semi-civilized, while not more than 50,000 (scattered as they are) can be classed as the genuine savage, more prone to hostility than inclined to peaceful pursuits. It is estimated that if all the fighting Indians of the country could be got together they would not muster more than 15,000; and the idea of their ever concentrating for warlike purposes is simply preposterous, because it is impossible. The Indian wars on a large scale are over, and we may reasonably hope that that portion of our national history is in the past.

"Your committee find that the general expressions of the Indians and the civilians, with a few exceptions of the latter, are in opposition to the change of control, while the officers of the Army give many reasons why the transfer should be made, yes invariably express a personal disapproval of the transfer, because, as they allege, it would devolve upon them onerous and thankless duties. Throughout the testimony given by the Army officers their disapprobation was stated. This leads the committee to consider the question whether, if the transfer were made, the Army would not be much injured thereby, and without any corresponding good result to the Indians. The sentiment of the Indians who were visited by the committee (as their testimony will show) was unanimously against the transfer, except in the case of Young Joseph, chief of the Nez Percés, who was found a prisoner in the Indian Territory. He would make no choice, but said: 'I think both of them could be set aside,' and that 'we should have one law to govern us all, and we should all live together.' In reference to the sentiment of the Indians on the subject, the Secretary of the Interior made to the committee a statement giving the views and votes of the various tribes, which gives an average vote of 16 to 1 against the transfer, nearly all the tribes being unanimously opposed to the proposition."

The report next sets forth what it terms the Christian view of the subject, and says: "That the Indian has repeatedly advanced in civilization whenever he has had a fair chance is shown by actual facts and figures. Out of the 252,000 we find that over 16,000 are attending school. Say that there are 50,000 children, this shows that about one-third of them are attending school. Should not the blanket, the scalping-knife, and the war-whoop be as novel and repulsive to these children as to the children of the whites? The force of educational training promises to insure this result. When blanketed Indians enter the Indian Territory they soon learn to doff their unsightly gear and don more civilizing habiliments. To be respected or honored they must do this, and the force of example is a great incentive to an Indian. If this is the case with the men and women, it will prevail with the children at school. That the Indian can be Anglo-Saxonized is proved beyond all cavil in the case of the Winnebagoes and Omahas, who reside on reservations in the State of Nebraska. They live in comfortable houses, have good barns, cultivate their land, and raise as good wheat, corn, and potatoes as are produced through the labor of the white man. They have churches and schools, and no more orderly community can be found than on these two reservations. They are petitioning to become citizens, a question of such vital importance in their case that it must soon be solved. Is it necessary to place these people under military management? We think not."

The proposition that 250,000 men, women, and children out of a possible 50,000,000 must be governed and controlled by the military arm of this great nation seems absurd, and to the European savant's a source of much comment and ridicule whenever the subject is mentioned. That we have among these quarter of a million of Indians some unruly tribes is a lamentable fact, and to this your committee would respectfully call the attention of Congress to the fact that in such exceptional special cases the military should have temporary control, and that the President should have power to place such warlike and unruly tribes under military discipline, the same as he would a city or State for interference. If the officers and soldiers of our gallant Army bring order out of chaos, and redeem the savage and make a peaceful and industrious citizen of him, their praises will doubtless be sung in every land of peace and justice. It is proposed by your committee to submit a bill embodying these views, and it is to be hoped that Congress will take early action in relation thereto. Whether the management of the Indians remains where it is or is relegated to the War Department, the general system of reform and improvement should continue, and among the most important things commanding immediate attention is to provide that the civil law of the United States be extended over all Indians who will agree thereto, with a code of laws applicable to them, defining crime and providing a judiciary especially in what is known as the Indian Territory. In the opinion of the committee such legislation is imperatively needed, and no time ought to be lost in making the necessary provisions therefor.

The Indian agent seems to be the objective point to which all those opposed to the present policy of the Government point in scorn and derision. They assert that "Indian Agent" is synonymous with "fraud and corruption." The committee made diligent inquiry into the present system of conducting the agencies, and are of the opinion that, as a general rule, the agent is more sinned against than sinning. There are now 74 agents employed, and as every opponent of the present system proposes to reduce this number, by the consolidation of agencies and the lessening of reservations where it can be done with justice to the tribes. Men of character who are competent to administer the affairs of an Indian agency successfully, can, in most cases, earn larger salaries at less sacrifice nearer their homes. The salary should be large enough to command the services of men of decided executive ability, and to enable them to take their families with them to their agencies and to support them there. The pay ought to be more liberal, and the tenure of office should be secure for a term of years, provided the agent should prove worthy. The laws provided for the punishment of wrongdoers in this branch of the service ought to be exceedingly severe. The guilty should be punished with an unmistakable earnestness that will convince all others of the firm purpose of the Government.

The signers of the report say they cannot find any good ground for the common statement that the Indian Department is any more economical and efficient than the Interior Department in the purchase of supplies and their transportation. It is found that both departments have systems and methods that have made great improvements of late years. The improvement in the management of the Indian Bureau is said to be especially marked.

The report shows that 143 reservations, comprising 150,326,915 acres of land. Your committee are of opinion that there are too many reservations, and that the number should be rapidly lessened. The smaller bands of Indians who decline to take land in severalty, and also refuse to become citizens, should be moved on the large reservations. In this connection your committee would suggest that the present large reservations in the northern part of Dakota, Montana, and Wyoming Territories be set apart by the Government as a permanent reservation for all those Northern tribes whose smaller reservations will be abolished under this system of consolidation. These views have frequently urged by many of those who have given the Indian problem much attention and long study, that the entire government of the Indians ought to be placed under a separate and distinct department, the chief of which should be a member of the Cabinet. Your committee coincide with such views, and deem that this branch of our Government is of such importance that its chief officers ought to be in a position to have direct communication with the President. If he be a member of the Cabinet, he can at all times gain access to the President and advise and counsel with our chief magistrate as to the welfare of the Indians. In times of peace neither the War nor Navy Department have so much complicated business as comes under the Indian Bureau. Your committee, however, do not urge immediate legislation on this subject, but do wish to call the attention of Congress to its importance, with the hope that in the near future some chance may be made that will give the prominence to this great and grave national question that its importance demands."

The report concludes as follows: "Your committee can discover no one good reason why the proposed change should be made. They believe that harm rather than good to the red men would result from the change, and that no possible advantage could result to the Government from it. Your committee

THE YELLOW FEVER PLAGUE

REPORT OF THE BOARD OF EXPERTS.

STATISTICS OF THE RECENT SCOURGE—A THOROUGH STUDY OF THE DISEASE BY A MEDICAL BOARD URGED—A NATIONAL HEALTH BOARD AND A MORE PERFECT QUARANTINE SYSTEM RECOMMENDED.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The Board of Experts authorized by Congress to investigate the yellow fever epidemic of 1878 submitted their report to the Joint Congressional Committee at its meeting this morning. After quoting the several questions which were laid before them by the Joint Committee, upon which they were to base their inquiries, the report sets forth that a great number of facts have been gathered respecting the history of the late epidemic of yellow fever, which have guided the board in arriving at the conclusions which are respectfully submitted in reply to questions of the Congressional Committees on Epidemic Diseases. It should be borne in mind that these conclusions are based upon evidence of a necessarily incomplete investigation of the epidemic—incomplete, because of the urgent demand for public health legislation during the present session of Congress. Otherwise, the board might not be held excusable for the seeming haste in dealing with this great subject. The board are unanimous in the opinion that the investigation of the late epidemic should be completed, and the study of the natural history of yellow fever should be systematically pursued, and especially that the inquiries should embrace the perpetually infected ports of the West Indies, whose fields give the greatest promise of practical results as the reward of faithful scientific inquiry. It is accordingly recommended that two or three skilled experts be charged with the completion of the study of the late epidemic, which can be concluded in a few months, and that at least two such experts be authorized to proceed to the West Indies, there to make a more thorough study of yellow fever than has ever yet been undertaken, and that they be accompanied by an experienced microscopist. It is further recommended that the necessary steps be taken by Congress to secure the co-operation of the Spanish and other foreign Governments, through an international commission or otherwise, in an earnest effort to ascertain the cause or causes which perpetuate yellow fever from year to year in the West India Islands, and to devise ways to remove the cause or causes or to lessen the chances of transporting the poison to the United States or other countries.

To no other great nation of the earth is yellow fever so calamitous as to the United States of America. In a single season, more than 100,000 of our people were stricken in their homes, and 20,000 lives sacrificed by this preventable disease.

A SYSTEM OF QUARANTINE.

In the light of scientific experience, and of such facts as have been obtained, the board have given careful consideration to the outlines of a system of observation of yellow fever and cholera, and, as connected therewith, to shipping in foreign ports, to the interchange of information, and to the inspection and sanitation of infected vessels and persons, outside of our ports and after their arrival, together with the supervision of inter-State travel and traffic in times of epidemic within our borders. Two classes of medical officers are suggested: First—Medical officers of health, to serve in foreign ports, over which we receive importations of yellow fever and cholera. Second—Medical Officers of Health to have charge of quarantine stations, and to supervise inter-State travel and traffic from infected places in times of epidemic. The two classes of medical officers suggested are considered indispensable to any method of quarantine which does not involve a complete suspension of intercourse with infected ports.

One of the difficulties which have confronted the board in considering the subject of quarantine, is the lack of definite knowledge respecting the duration of life or the virulence of the poisons of yellow fever and cholera. It is well known that the poison of either is susceptible of long vitality when exposed to the open air, but it is not yet determined how long its infectious properties may be preserved in closely-shut chambers or in the interior of cotton bales or when confined in the folds of clothing or goods. It consequently follows that ships are especially dangerous carriers of these diseases, and also that they remain capable of infection for months after having been infected with the poison.

Another difficulty arises from the imperfect state of scientific knowledge respecting disinfection as applied to the destruction of the poison of yellow fever. It is deemed of great importance that provision be provided by Congress for obtaining trustworthy information by telegraph in respect to the outbreak and progress of cholera, yellow fever, and other epidemic diseases in all parts of the world, and the departure of vessels from infected ports bound for ports in the United States. The diffusion of trustworthy information among the people respecting the existence and progress of epidemic diseases, both at home and abroad should be encouraged, as tending to avert the evils of panic and to promote measures of prevention.

The sweeping into effect of an efficient system of quarantine contemplates a central authority or health department. It is considered important that such a department should be so organized as to gain strength from, and to command the support of, municipal health organizations. In view of the diversity of circumstances attending vessels arriving from infected ports, the difference exhibited by different ports in respect to their liability to infection, and the difference in such liability in the same port at different seasons and under varying circumstances, it is desirable that matters of detail should not be fixed by law, but should be left to regulations to be prepared under proper restrictions. The great interests which such regulations would guard, and the necessity for changes in them from time to time, as increased experience and knowledge or other causes may indicate, warrant the recommendation for the establishment of an Advisory Board of Health, to be composed of men eminent in sanitary measures, together with the chief officer of the Health Departments, shall frame all needful rules and regulations for carrying into effect, subject to the approval of the President, such national public health laws as may be enacted.

ORIGIN, CAUSE, AND DESTRUCTIVENESS OF YELLOW FEVER.

The board dwell at considerable length on the origin, cause, and destructive features of yellow fever, and say it is a specific disease, and is produced by the introduction in the human organism of a specific poison. The specific poison of yellow fever has never been, microscopically nor chemically, demonstrated, nor in any way made evident to the human senses. Nevertheless, we hold that it is safe to assume that it is material and particulate, and endowed with the ordinary properties, and subject to the ordinary laws, of material substances. Yellow fever is not a malarial disease, that is, it is not the offspring of that marsh miasm which produces paludal or periodic fevers, and we know of no facts which warrant the conclusion that malarial influences contribute toward the dissemination and mortality of yellow fever in any other way or to any greater extent than they contribute toward the dissemination and mortality of other epidemic diseases. In all the countries, or trade routes of the United States, which have been visited by it, yellow fever has at all times, and in all of them its introduction can be traced either directly or indirectly to the West Indies. Yellow fever has invaded the present territorial limits of the United States, according to the testimony of existing records, in 88 different years. For 77 of these 88 years we have evidence, more or less complete, of importation, and in 71 out of these 77 the evidence points to the West Indies as the source of the infection. Four times—namely, in 1839, 1844, 1847, and 1867—the infection has been traced to Mexico, but in 1867 it was also traced to the West Indies. It is true that in 1800 and 1838 the disease was brought from Demerara, but in 1800 it was also brought from the West Indies. The fever of 1870 is attributed to Honduras.

While we know of no facts which establish the proposition that yellow fever has become indigenous or epidemic in any part of the United States, there are facts which seem to point to a reference that in some of our Southern cities the specific poison of the disease, when hidden away from the cold in sheltered places, may live through a mild Winter and give rise during the succeeding Summer to scattered cases of the fever. It would seem to be theoretically probable that these scattered cases would, in their turn, give rise to an epidemic, but the proof that they have ever done so is not conclusive.

NECESSARY PREVENTIVE MEASURES.

Under the heading of the third question with which the board were charged, with regard to the proper steps necessary to be taken for the prevention of the introduction of yellow fever and cholera into the United States, appears the following: The board submits that the recommendations most worthy of confidence include, first, the surveillance of ships at the time of sailing from infected ports to any port of the United States; secondly, their inspection, detention, and disinfection, when found necessary, upon reaching our coast.

The following scheme of quarantine, constructed from a purely medical point of view, is recommended: The scheme contemplates two classes of medical officers—one class, foreign service and one class for home service. Medical officers of health for foreign service should be stationed at the various foreign ports having commercial relations with the United States, where yellow fever, cholera, or other epidemic infectious diseases prevail. Their duties should be to acquaint themselves thoroughly with all diseases usual to, or at any time prevalent in or around, the respective places to which they are assigned, and to make to a chief health authority at Washington the same reports as are now required of consular officers by section 2, of the National Quarantine act, approved April 29, 1878. They should forward reports of outbreaks of cholera, yellow fever, or other epidemic diseases, and of the departures of vessels from infected ports, or of vessels having on board persons or goods from infected ports, to be communicated by telegraph, or the most expeditious manner, to a chief health authority at Washington. It should be their further duty to obtain the medical history of all ships trading to or from their respective ports, in regard to any previous occurrence of yellow fever or cholera or other infectious epidemic disease on board, and transmit the same for the information of said health authority.

There is much testimony showing that the effluvium which emanates from the bodies of the dead may be associated with infection. It is therefore recommended that the bodies of persons who die of yellow fever be promptly buried, and that the assembling of persons at funerals be discouraged.

At least 18,000 (and probably as many as 20,000) deaths from yellow fever have occurred during the late epidemic. Of this number, some three-fifths were minors and two-fifths were adults, representing a loss of $12,600,000. It is believed that at least 120,000 cases of sickness from yellow fever took place during the same period. The loss of time of these patients was a public loss, and should be considered in any computation on the subject. The average duration of their illness and convalescence is not far from 25 days, and the value of their time may be put at 50 cents a day. This item would amount to $1,500,000. To this sum should be added the value of the labor diverted from production or useful activity by attendance upon 120,000 sick persons for 10 days each at 50 cents per day, $600,000. We are not able to estimate correctly the total losses to this country, but these losses have been variously estimated by others at sums ranging from $100,000,000 to $200,000,000.

FIRE INSURANCE BUSINESS.

FORMING AN ASSOCIATION TO MAINTAIN RATES AND REDUCE COMMISSIONS.

The representatives of fire insurance companies favorable to forming a Tariff Association held an adjourned meeting in the Board of Underwriters' rooms yesterday, and listened to the report of the sub-committee previously appointed to draft a plan of organization. The points of the report are substantially as follows: The association is to be known as the New-York Tariff Association; its object is to secure uniform rates of premium, and to establish better rules for the government of the fire insurance business; companies are to charge and obtain, in all policies or contracts of insurance, the rate fixed by the association, and by local boards or associations throughout the United States at points where they have no agent; no rebate is to be allowed, and no brokerage, commission, emolument, or compensation is to be paid to any broker, agent, or other party, either directly or indirectly, except as subsequently provided, and no payment of brokerage or other compensation to an employe of the assured is to be permitted in any case. Members may appoint agents under a commission which shall contain instructions that he shall not, directly or indirectly, return any part of his compensation or brokerage to the assured; that he shall not place business with any company not represented in the association unless he shall have obtained consent of the Committee on Rules, or shall report within 24 hours to said committee the circumstances under which such insurance was effected, and that in every case he shall charge the rate established by the association, or if the property be located outside the jurisdiction of the association, the established or current rate at such location. Such agents may be paid a commission of 10 per cent. only upon the premium on any risk located within the limits of New-York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, or Hoboken, whether rated or not rated. A brokerage not exceeding 15 per cent. may be paid to agents upon risks located at other places. To any other person (except the insured or his employe) a brokerage not exceeding 5 per cent. upon the premium may be paid on policies applying on property in New-York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, and Hoboken, and adjacent jurisdiction, and 10 per cent. on premiums on property at other places, in lieu of separate commissions issued by each company, the association may elect such agents by a two-thirds vote of all members present, or may delegate such duty to a Committee on Rules. All commissions shall be signed by the President and Secretary of the association. No commission shall be in force until registered at the office of the association. Violation of any of the regulations or rules of the association or of any of its rules shall subject the agent to a penalty at the discretion of the Committee on Rules, and repeated violation shall subject him to the cancellation of his commission. All agents, sub-agents, or managers of branch offices in New-York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, or Hoboken, or at any places where risks in either of these cities are written or placed, and all special agents or persons employed to solicit business for members of the association, shall be employed only as a fixed salary, which shall be in lieu of all brokerage or commissions, but a member may make a contract with the manager of his branch office, providing for the payment of a contingent commission upon the profits of such branch office in addition to such fixed salary, and managers of branch offices may pay to commissioned agents and to brokers, such commissions as may be paid at the chief office of the company under this agreement; and the company which he represents shall be held to a strict accountability for all his acts.

A manager is defined to be only such as has power from his company to bind risks, and to make or countersign and issue policies.

Managers shall, in their accounts current, furnish the names of parties to whom commission has been paid or allowed, and the amount so paid or allowed. Any violation or error in fixing rates shall cause a forfeiture of an amount equal to the correct premium, and any violation of the rules relating to rebate, commission, or brokerage shall subject the offender to a penalty of $50; the violations of any other rule shall be punished by penalties to be hereafter agreed upon. Errors or violations must be corrected with promptness by the offender. Each member shall deposit $200 with three Trustees, to be elected by ballot, and this shall be forfeited should penalties not be paid to the Treasurer, after 10 days' notice. Members shall bind themselves to use due diligence to prevent their employes from violating the rules of the association.

After discussion the meeting adjourned, without action on the report, until Monday next.

THEATRE CHILDREN AT TEA.

LITTLE ONES OF THE LONDON STAGE ENTERTAINED IN A NOVEL WAY.

From the London Daily News, Jan. 10.

Mr. Forbes, who has lately entertained numerous parties of ballet-dancers, chorus-ladies, and theatrical dressers at tea at Exeter Hall, has taken a further step in this direction, and yesterday afternoon he invited 200 or more of the children who are at present engaged at the London theatres to a tea-meeting at the same place. The "professional engagements" of these little ladies and gentlemen requiring their presence at the theatre rather early in the evening, the hour for assembling was fixed for 4:30. When and how the invitations had been distributed did not appear, but it was understood that they were delivered in some instances with the assistance and co-operation of the managers of the various places of amusement at which the children are employed. The response, in any case, was appreciative and even grateful. The children, whose ages might range from 5 and 6 years to 12 or 14, came in for the most part very punctually, and were speedily ranged at four long tables in the lower hall. Some of them came alone, notably the little boys, and some came in twos and threes, many being accompanied by their mothers or other relatives. It cannot be said that there was any appearance of want or hardship, or even discomfort, among these small persons. Some were better dressed than others, but among the poorest there were no rags, no squalidity, and, it would have seemed, except for the appetite displayed at tea, no extraordinary hunger. The behavior of the children was exemplary, despite the fact that no stern ballet-master was present to enforce discipline. Mr. Forbes' formidable threat that the invitation would not be repeated unless the conduct of his little visitors warranted it, was quite sufficient to secure quiet and order, even when the tongues had been loosened and the spirits raised by the substantial meal that he had provided. Another noteworthy feature was the excellence of the singing, and the aptitude with which the children picked up and sang the various hymn tunes. This is probably to be explained by the fact that almost all of them attend either Board, Ragged, or Sunday schools, where education in vocal music holds a much more important place than it once did. The words of the hymns, clearly articulated and audibly pronounced, showed also that almost all present could read the printed slips with which they had been provided. Singing, of course, formed the staple of the proceedings subsequent to the meal, but several addresses were given and attentively listened to. Mr. Forbes, who has a pleasant colloquial style, and who relates anecdotes in a manner well calculated to attract children, and, indeed, adults as well, engaged the attention of the children while he incuicated a few simple moral lessons, and other addresses were delivered by the ladies and gentlemen upon the platform, among whom were Alderman Sir R. Carden, Mrs. Eli Johnson, from America, and Miss Varney, of the Young Women's Christian Association. As an early hour of the evening the assembly dispersed, having previously received an invitation from Mr. Forbes to some again on another evening.

DEATH OF A SCHOOLMATE OF MACAULAY.

From the Philadelphia Times, Jan. 28.

John Larard, who died on Saturday last, aged 88 years, in obscure lodgings at No. 442 Keyser-street, had a career containing many interesting particulars. He was an Englishman by birth, of a wealthy family. He was given a first-class collegiate education, and it is said that at Trinity College, Cambridge, he was a schoolmate of Lord Macaulay and on intimate terms with him. He was particularly distinguished as a mathematician and astronomer. When Wellington conducted the campaign in Spain against the French invaders, England was stripped of her regular soldiery. Larard enlisted in the Militia organized for the home defense, and was stationed at Portsmouth and Dover. Fifty years ago, on account of some family troubles, he came to America and became a celebrated manufacturer of woolen machinery, and perfected many improvements in the mechanism. Business reverses happened to him, and he gave up manufacturing. His judgment and skill were so excellent that he was constantly consulted by manufacturers at Germantown, Manayunk, Bridesburg, and in the city. For 40 years he resided in the one-story tenement in Keyser-street. He at one time possessed an extensive and valuable library, but by necessities had been compelled to part with nearly all of his volumes. He continued his mathematical and astronomical researches to the last. His death was caused by the debility incident to age.

FORTY-FIFTH CONGRESS.

THIRD SESSION—Jan. 30.

SUMMARY.

After the expiration of the morning hour in the Senate, Mr. Edmunds' resolutions affirming the validity of the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth amendments to the Constitution were taken up, and Mr. Morgan proceeded to speak in opposition to their adoption, and in favor of the substitute agreed upon by the Democratic Senators in caucus. Before he had concluded his address, the Senate went into executive session, and soon after adjourned.

In the House, the Post Office Appropriation bill was taken up and passed. Considerable debate occurred as to whether the Army Appropriation or the Army Reorganization bill should be taken up, during which the time set apart for the consideration of District Committee reports arrived, and the House acted upon the business from that committee. A resolution was then adopted that after Feb. 10 the sessions of the House shall begin at 11, instead of 12 o'clock.

SENATE.

THE RIGHTS OF THE SENATE.

The VICE-PRESIDENT appointed as the committee to consider and report as to the rights of the Senate in the matter of the amendments to the Post Route bill of last session Messrs. Edmunds, Ferry, Hoar, Thurman, and Whyte.

THE ANNUAL PATENT OFFCE REPORT.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Commissioner of Patents, transmitting his annual report, showing the receipts and disbursements of the office, number of patents issued, &c. Referred to the Committee on Printing

THE IMPROVEMENT OF HARLEM RIVER.

Also, a letter from the Secretary of War, inclosing a report of Lieut.-Col. John Newton, Engineer Corps of the United States Army, in regard to the improvement of Harlem River, New-York. Referred to the Committee on Commerce.

POSTAGE ERRONEOUSLY PAID.

Mr. HAMLIN, of Maine, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported, without amendment, the Senate bill for the relief of the American Grocers' Association of the City of New-York. Placed on the calendar. It authorizes the Secretary to pay to said association $500, for postage erroneously paid by it.

THE RICHMOND FEMALE INSTITUTE.

The Senate took up the bill on the calendar to pay the Richmond Female Institute, of Richmond, Va., $4,933 33, rent for use of its building by the Army of the United States from 1865 to 1868. Pending discussion, the time assigned to consideration of bills on the calendar expired, and the bill was laid aside.

MR. EDMUNDS' CONSTITUTIONAL RESOLUTIONS.

The Senate then resumed consideration of the unfinished business, being the resolutions of Mr. Edmunds declaring the validity of the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth amendments to the Constitution.

Mr. MORGAN, of Alabama, said it had been stated that he was entitled to the floor. The Senator from Vermont [Mr. Edmunds] had generously assigned him the floor, but he [Mr. Morgan,] did not want it. The Senator from Vermont could occupy it if he desired to.

Mr. EDMUNDS said that he did not want the floor. All that he wanted was a vote on the resolutions.

Mr. MORGAN said the Senator from Vermont persistently declined to explain his resolutions, believing that they were sufficiently explained of their own accord without any explanation. Mr. Morgan then had read the substitute for the resolutions submitted by him on the 20th inst., and said the Senator from Vermont was unable to get his resolutions before the Senate until aided by the Democratic votes on the right. No Senator had been sworn here who did not understand that his oath of office included the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth amendments to the Constitution. Senators from the North, South, East, or West, and no Senator had, by any vote, motion, or speech, indicated that he did not intend to support the amendments as a part of the Constitution. Mr. Morgan's substitution referred to the date of the final adoption of each amendment, and said the Senator from Vermont had never considered it necessary, until now, to bring the question of their validity before the Senate and the country. The Senator now seemed to think that some new affirmation was necessary. He seemed to think that in order to get a man to observe an oath in this country he must give security to do so. The Senator wanted Democratic Senators now to pledge themselves by a resolution to keep their oaths to support the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth amendments. He had seen on the right side of the chamber would rather have this matter left to his own conscience, sanctioned by an appeal to Almighty God, than to any political resolution. He then explained his substitute for Mr. Edmunds' resolutions, and said it did not involve the question the country any harrowing question, but rested upon the ground that the amendments were a part of the Constitution, and as valid as any other part of it. The Democratic Party and, he hoped, every American, concurred with the Senator from Vermont that the amendments were valid. Was not that enough? What more could they do? He then read from the remarks of Mr. Garfield on the Senator Mitchell bill, delivered in the Senate a few days ago, to the effect that when called upon to act as a law-maker the decisions of the Supreme Court could have no more influence over him than decisions could have over the Supreme Court, and continuing, he said he now found that the real quarrel of the Senator from Vermont was with the Supreme Court of the United States. Because it was the democratic doctrine to support the decisions of the Supreme Court, resolutions of the Senator from Vermont now before the Senate were an attack upon that doctrine, and, therefore, an attack upon the Democratic Party, and when that party failed to meet such an attack it would amount to naught. The resolutions declared the people of each State had a common interest in the enforcement of the whole Constitution. The people of Alabama never considered that they had any interest in the enforcement of the Constitution in the State of Vermont. So far as Congress was the agent of the people to enforce the Constitution for the good of all, and by legal methods, the people were interested; but the people of Alabama did not claim any right to send remonstrances to Vermont complaining of her acts. If a man should be deprived of the right of trial by jury, or of the right to vote in that State, the people of Alabama had no right to complain. A common right was a right enjoyed by each individual in the State, and might be called to account by another for any act deemed unconstitutional. For instance, the people of New-Hampshire might have been called to account for not allowing any one to hold office or vote unless he was a professor of the Protestant religion.

Mr. EDMUNDS said he did not say in his resolutions that the people had a common right. He said they had "a common interest," &c.

Mr. MORGAN said he would like to hear the Senator from Vermont declare on the floor of the Senate that by the word "interest" he meant that the people of each State had merely a friendly care for the welfare of the people of other States.

Mr. EDMUNDS—I will send my friend the dictionary rather than disown anything. [Laughter.]

Mr. ROLLINS, of New-Hampshire, in reply to Mr. Morgan's remarks about New-Hampshire, said all the people of that State could hold office and vote, too.

Mr. MORGAN inquired how long such had been the case.

Mr. ROLLINS replied since the Republican Party had control of the State. [Laughter.]

Mr. MORGAN then resumed his argument, and referred to the part of Mr. Edmunds' resolutions declaring it the duty of the executive department of the Government, faithfully and with diligence, to carry all laws to enforce the amendments into effect, &c. He argued that the Executive was simply the right hand of the judiciary to enforce its decrees. Did the Senator from Vermont mean to leave out of his resolution any reference to the judiciary? When he came to reply, would he deny that he ignored the rights and powers of the judiciary?

Mr. EDMUNDS said lest he should forget it, he would deny it now.

Mr. MORGAN said, with great respect to the Senator from Vermont, he would suggest some improvement in the language of his resolution. If the Senator meant that the President of the United States had the right to use the force of the United States when no court required its use; if he meant to give to the executive department authority to go by other agencies than those prescribed by civil law, then the Senator had differed as to the constitutional powers of the Executive.

Before concluding his argument, Mr. Morgan yielded to Mr. McCrery, of Kentucky, who submitted a motion that the Senate go into executive session, which was agreed to, and the Senate, at 4 o'clock P. M., went into executive session, and at 4:45 adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

DAYS SET APART FOR MEMORIAL ADDRESSES.

Monday, the 3d of February, Saturday, the 8th of February, and Tuesday, the 11th of February, were set apart for the delivery of the memorial addresses respectively upon the late Messrs. Quinn of New-York, Schleicher of Texas, and Hartridge of Georgia.

THE FREEDMEN'S BANK.

Mr. ELLIS, of Louisiana, introduced a bill to secure from loss, depositors in the Freedmen's Savings and Trust Company. Referred.

THE POST OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER announced the regular order to be the consideration of the Post Office Appropriation bill.

Mr. HOOKER, of Mississippi, gave notice that as soon as that bill was disposed of he would insist upon the morning hour.

The pending question was on the amendment increasing, by $50,000, the appropriation for route agents, and it was agreed to—yeas 125, nays 103, and the bill was then passed.

ARMY REORGANIZATION.

Mr. HEWITT, of New-York, moved to go into Committee of the Whole on the Army Appropriation bill.

Mr. BANNING, of Ohio, asked Mr. Hewitt if he would not allow the bill for the reorganization of the Army, which was a special order, to be considered before the Army Appropriation bill. He made the motion to proceed to the consideration of the Reorganization bill.

The SPEAKER said that that motion was not in order, inasmuch as the Reorganization bill was not the special order until after the morning hour.

Mr. HEWITT then asked unanimous consent that between that time (1:05 P. M.) and 2 o'clock, when District business would be in order, the House should dispose of the Army Reorganization bill. It would greatly simplify the work of the Appropriation bill.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New-York, and Mr. HOOKER, of Mississippi, objected.

The question then recurred on Mr. Hewitt's motion to go into Committee of the Whole, and the vote by tellers resulted—yeas 96, nays 101.

The yeas and nays were then ordered and resulted —yeas 113, nays 123.

Just before the announcement Mr. HEWITT changed his vote to the negative, and upon the announcement was recognized by the Speaker to make a motion to reconsider.

Mr. HOOKER moved to lay that motion on the table.

Mr. HEWITT—And upon that I demand the yeas and nays.

Mr. HOOKER—Well, I hope you will not get them.

The yeas and nays were ordered, but the hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the SPEAKER interrupted the roll-call, stating that the House was at the disposal of the Committee on the District of Columbia.

DISTRICT BUSINESS.

Mr. CLAFLIN, of Massachusetts, from that committee, reported the bill imposing a license on all trades and professions carried on in the District of Columbia. Ordered printed and recommitted.

Mr. SPRINGER, of Illinois, presented a petition of citizens of Washington asking for the right of suffrage. Referred.

AN EARLIER HOUR FOR MEETING.

A resolution was adopted providing that on and after Monday, Feb. 10, the session of the House shall commence at 11 o'clock A. M.

NEW BILLS.

Bills were introduced and referred as follows:

By Mr. HASKELL, of Kansas—Authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to ascertain the amount of money expended by Kansas in suppressing Indian hostilities.

By Mr. FEDDIS, of New-Jersey—For the construction of a ship-canal to connect the waters of New-York Bay with the waters of Newark Bay.

The House then, at 3:45 P. M., adjourned until to-morrow.

NOMINATIONS BY THE PRESIDENT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The President sent to the Senate to-day the following nominations of Postmasters: Robert H. Hunter, at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and Henry A. Green, at Jersey City.

CONFIRMATIONS BY THE SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The Senate, in executive session to-day, confirmed the following nominations:

Collector of Customs.—William Wallace Bowers, San Diego, Cal.

Indian Agent.—Augustus R. Keller, Ohio, Crow Agency, Montana.

Registers of Land Offices.—John Murphy, Harrison, Ark.; William H. Wright, Bayfield, Wis.

Army Promotion.—Second Lieut. James S. Marsteller, to be First Lieutenant, Twenty-fourth Infantry.

Navy Promotion.—Passed Assistant Engineer Isaac N. McNary, to be Chief Engineer.

Postmasters.—Horace C. Little, Lewiston, Me.; Walter D. Blaisdell, Plymouth, N. H.; Phineas R. Goold, Littleton, N. H.; Justin W. Moody, Waterbury, Vt.; Chester W. Green, Fall River, Mass.; Rowland D. Bowen, Millbury, Mass.; Charles E. Horne, Stoneham, Mass.; Temple Dodge, Malden, Mass.; Samuel H. Canfield, Se mour, Conn.; John F. Clark, Whitehall, N. Y.; David S. McLaughlin, Fishkill-on-the-Hudson, N. Y.; Robert H. Hunter, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Orlando A. Summers, Kokomo, Ind.; George J. Langsdale, Greencastle, Ind.; Robert S. Fenn, Mount Sterling, Ill.; Henry Becker, Monroe, Mich.; Hiram J. Kreamer, Grantville, Mich.; Fayette W. Crayon, Maquoketa, Iowa; James F. Parker, Parkersburg, Iowa; Robert H. Spenser, Algona, Iowa; Charles W. Reynolds, Grundy Centre, Iowa; William Eathgum, Fairchild, Iowa; Junius M. Rhoads, Jefferson, Iowa; Edward Whalley, Prairie du Chien, Wis.; Christopher F. Case, Marshall, Minn.; Miss Hattie E. Carroll, Plain View, Minn.; Alonzo F. Lewis, Carthage, Mo.; William T. Purse, Louisiana, Mo.; William G. Rice, Pierce City, Mo.; Mrs. Mary J. Hammond, York, Neb.; Alexander S. Sheppard, Fairmont, Neb.; Edward A. Gessard, Columbus, Neb.; Joseph F. Woods, Schuyler, Neb.; O. L. C. Fairchilds, Tuscarora, Nev.; John H. Clendening, Fort Smith, Ark.; Mrs. Mary C. Daniels, Wilson, N. C.; Henry S. Glover, Macon, Ga.; Daniel W. Jervis, Darien, Ga.; Charles W. Arnold, Albany, Ga.; Thomas T. Allington, Eufaula, Ala.; J. McLemore, Lafayette, Kan.; Charles A. Womble, Tuscumbia, Kan.; Finis H. Little, Aberdeen, Miss.; John Clinton, Brownsville, Tenn.

WHAT THE "WORLD" SAYS.

From the London World, Jan. 15.

"It will never do," prophesied a cynic when he heard that Sarah Bernhardt and Croizette were to play together in the "Sphinx;" "you must keep them apart." He was not far wrong. Croizette was just about to pass from time into eternity the other night before a hushed audience when Sarah whispered to her, for her private ear, "By the bye, my dear, I hear you have left your old house; where are you living now?" "You know as well as I do," returned the other, in a rage; "why do you try to put me out in that way?" Then, turning from her tormentor to the audience, she finished her role, and did put her out effectually; and for that night the great scene was spoiled. The next day Sarah was withdrawn from the cast.

It may be safely said that at Gen. Grant's reception the object which, next to the ex-President himself, attracted the most attention, was a lady adorned with scarabæi. She had a beetle on her bonnet, beetles on her muff. The Prince, the American said, was man-made, the other was God-made, and it was the latter which every one wanted to see. Ministers left off their endless discussions on the Eastern question, and ladies their on the last new fashions, to interview this beetle. It was most positively alive—not a good piece of machinery, but a genuine living, crawling pet. Round its waist was a fine band of gold; attached to this what might be called a golden snapper; a small chain was fastened to this armor, which prevented it straying. Its owner states that since its arrival from Mexico, six months ago, it has neither eaten nor drunk, nor been undressed. She was not sure if it was affectionate. L'Dame aux Scarabées was extremely attractive, her pet wondrously repugnant.

In Paris the other day a young lady went into one of the great drapery houses to shop with her maid. They keep watchers there; and one of these, making sure he had seen something, presently tapped the young lady on the shoulder, and asked her to follow him to the searching-room. "You have just put a pair of new gloves in your pocket, Mademoiselle; don't deny it." "I know I have," said the young lady, quietly; "and if you will be good enough to look inside them you will see that as they were bought at another house, they could hardly have been stolen from this." "That was so," as our cousins say. The watcher had simply made a mistake; and he and the whole gang of searchers began to grovel in excuses. "Now," said the lady, turning to her maid, "go to the nearest Commissary of Police, and tell him that the daughter of Prince O—— requires his protection." It was the very awkwardest of blunders; her father was an Ambassador. The contrite drapery company offering thousands to hush it up. The thousands will not be accepted, of course. The Ambassador cannot sue for fear of the scandal, and for the same reason cannot kick the watcher—perhaps the best remedy for this gross wrong. The watchers and their employers know all that, and consequently revel in their sense of impunity. The Russians have invented "Siberia without trial," to meet difficulties of that sort; and the Ambassador's keenest regret is that the mistake did not happen at home.

THE POISON OF SERPENTS.

From Galignani's Messenger, Jan. 15.

M. De Quatrefages presented to the Academy of Sciences at its last sitting a note from M. Lacerda relative to some researches he has been making at Rio de Janeiro into the action of the venom of the rattlesnake. Hitherto, the general belief has been that the poisonous matter secreted by certain species of reptiles was nothing more than a poisonous saliva, acting in the manner of soluble ferments. His investigations, however, show that the matter in question contains what is called figured ferments, the analogy of which with bacterides is very remarkable. From a young and vigorous crotalus, subjected to the action of chloroform, he obtained a drop of the venom, which, carefully clean, put on a glass, and at once placed it under a microscope. Almost immediately he observed the formation of a filamentous pulp in an aborescent disposition. Gradually the thickened filament, after having given off spores, dissolved and disappeared, and the liberated spores swelled and enlarged visibly, each of them sending out a minute tube, which lengthened rapidly. After a very short period the latter separated from the first spores and constituted another nucleus for engendering the deadly contamination. In the examination of the blood of animals killed by the bite of one of those snakes, M. Lacerda noticed that the red globules of the blood commenced by presenting some small brilliant points on the surface which spread with great rapidity, and ultimately the globules melted one into the other, forming a sort of amorphous paste, which could no longer circulate in the veins. Other animals, in which that blood was injected immediately after the death of the first, expired in a few hours, presenting all the symptoms of having themselves been bitten, and their blood always showed the same alteration. M. Lacerda concludes by stating that numerous experiments have shown that the true antidote for serpent poisoning is the injection under the skin of alcohol, or its administration by the mouth.

HOW ESPARTERO BEAT THE CARLISTS.

From London Truth, Jan. 16.

I have perused many an obituary notice on Marshal Espartero, but I have seen nowhere the real story of the great achievement of his life, the pacification of Bergara. The Carlist Army had suffered great losses, but could still have held the field for some time; on the other hand, the Liberal Army, after seven years' campaigning, felt truly sick of the business. Don Carlos had gone to France for a holiday; on each side the leaders had a genuine desire of following his example. It was under these circumstances that Espartero had a conference with Maroto, the Carlist General, for the purpose of negotiating a truce. They were old chums of the South American wars, but since that time they had exchanged only cannon-balls, in addition to more than one fierce proclamation. When they met in a lonely farm at night, in the greatest secrecy, it was feared by many lest a quarrel, or even perhaps a personal encounter, might arise from the occasion. Both entered a lower room, in which a table had been disposed with candles, paper, pens, and ink, and then were left alone. For more than five hours they were there closeted. What were they doing all this time?

Simply this: On seeing Espartero, whom he knew well for the greatest gambler that ever lived, Maroto had taken out of his pocket a pack of cards, and challenged his foe at tresillo. Espartero had always been lucky. He won first all the cash of his opponent, then he won his own terms for the truce; then, article after article, he won the entire submission of the Carlist Army. Maroto paid his debt, like a gentleman, within 24 hours, and so ended the first Carlist war.

GEN. JACKSON'S SENTIMENTS.

WHAT OLD HICKORY THOUGHT OF THE UNION AND OF NULLIFICATION AND SECESSION.

Correspondence of the Cincinnati Commercial.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24, 1879.

Mr. Ellis' remark that the South went into the war in obedience to Democratic teachings renders it still more puzzling to understand what Democracy really is. In conversation lately with a gentleman who served in Congress 40 years ago, he observed that he had voted the Democratic ticket all his life, since he was eligible to vote, but he sadly realized the fact that the party has ceased to be Democratic, except in name. "John Thompson, ('who made and sold hats,' according to Dr. Franklin's anecdote,) is still over the door, but the business has been changed, and John himself is with his fathers. I drop into the old shop occasionally from long habit. The Democracy of Jackson and Van Buren and Polk is as much a thing of the past as John Thompson." Mr. Ellis certainly never found anything in the teachings of the first-named of these worthies justifying secession. His celebrated proclamation to the South Carolina nullifiers in 1832, and his messages to Congress during that period, express his views on that subject very clearly and unmistakably. In examining, recently, a large number of his letters and papers, hitherto unpublished, I came across the annexed memorandum in the General's handwriting, which has so decided a bearing upon this point that I respectfully invite Mr. Ellis' attention to it. I give it precisely as it was written, save to insert or amend a punctuation mark here and there, to prevent the sense being confused:

"The people possess the sovereign power. It was the people by States who formed the first confederation of perpetual union, &c., which carried them triumphly thro' the Revolution, and established the freedom and independence of these United States. On a full experiment of the confederation of States and perpetual union, the people found that the conditions on which this perpetual union was founded, by which the people had reserved to each State its sovereignty, freedom, and independence, and every power, jurisdiction, and right not expressly surrendered, it was found that this confederation was not adapted to the great ends of regulating commerce and revenue. Upon a full experiment, it was found that these powers were necessary to be lodged in a Federal body, which constitutes a more perfect union of the people of these United States of America. It was therefore why the present Constitution was formed to give authority to the national will on these subjects of general concern. The Constitution of these United States shews that it was formed by the people to operate directly upon the people, and not upon the legislative power of the States. The Constitution commences with 'We the people of the United States, to form a more perfect union,' &c. What people? Why, the same people who had formed the confederation and perpetual union, and to make this perpetual union more perfect; appointed their delegates who met in convention and formed a Constitution to make the union more perfect by granting to the Federal Government more power, and, amongst others, to regulate trade and raise a revenue. This was the act of the whole people by their agents; it was ratified by the people inhabiting each State by their agents, and was the act of the people of the United States. The people are the sovereign power; this was their sovereign act, and the power of a State to secede from the Union without the consent of a majority of the people of the States to the Union, never did exist since the adoption of the confederation of the States, and the formation of our present Constitution upon that confederation of perpetual union. Mixed up as the Union of States is, it never declares, was made more perfect. If a mere majority of the people inhabiting a State has a right to suspend the Revenue laws and stop the wheels of Government, and to secede, then has any less portion of the people a right to secede from the Confederacy. Then, indeed, our Government is a rope of sand. Nullification is revolution; and if a State attempts to secede from the Union, the United States by force it is rebell

JAN 31 1879

INDEX TO CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS.

AMUSEMENTS—Seventh Page—5th and 7th cols.
AUCTION SALES—Sixth Page—7th col.
BANKRUPTNOTICES—Sixth Page—5th and 6th cols.
BATHS—Seventh Page—4th col.
BOARDING AND LODGING—Seventh Page—5th col.
BUSINESS CHANCES—Seventh Page—1st col.
BUSINESS NOTICES—Fifth Page—6th col.
CITY HOUSES TO LET—Seventh Page—1st col.
CITY ITEMS—Fifth Page—6th col.
CITY REAL ESTATE—Seventh Page—1st col.
COUNTRY HOUSES TO LET—Seventh Page—1st col.
COUNTRY REAL ESTATE—Seventh Page—1st col.
DANCING—Sixth Page—5th col.
DEATHS—Fifth Page—6th and 7th cols.
DIVIDENDS—Seventh Page—5th col.
DRY GOODS—Sixth Page—6th col.
ELECTIONS—Seventh Page—5th col.
FINANCIAL—Seventh Page—3d and 4th cols.
FURNISHED ROOMS—Seventh Page—5th col.
HELP WANTED—Sixth Page—7th col.
INSTRUCTION—Seventh Page—7th col.
LECTURES—Seventh Page—7th col.
LEGAL NOTICES—Seventh Page—6th col.
MARRIAGES—Fifth Page—6th col.
MEETINGS—Seventh Page—7th col.
MISCELLANEOUS—Sixth Page—6th col.
MUSICAL—Seventh Page—5th col.
NEW PUBLICATIONS—Fifth Page—7th col.
RAILROADS—Seventh Page—3d col.
REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION—Seventh Page—1st col.
REWARDS—Sixth Page—7th col.
SHIPPING—Seventh Page—2d and 3d cols.
SITUATIONS WANTED—Sixth Page—7th col.
SPECIAL NOTICES—Fifth Page—7th col.
STEAM-BOATS—Seventh Page—7th col.
STORES, &c., TO LET—Seventh Page—1st col.
TEACHERS—Seventh Page—7th col.
UNFURNISHED ROOMS—Seventh Page—5th col.

The New-York Times.

NEW-YORK, FRIDAY, JAN. 31, 1879.

AMUSEMENTS THIS EVENING.

FIFTH-AVENUE THEATRE.—Dr. Clyde.
BOOTH'S THEATRE.—The Danites.
WALLACK'S THEATRE.—Ours.
UNION-SQUARE.—Banker's Daughter.
PARK THEATRE.—Dot.
STANDARD THEATRE.—H. M. S. Pinafore.
BROADWAY THEATRE.—King Lear.
LYCEUM THEATRE.—H. M. S. Pinafore.
CHICKERING HALL.—At 11 A.M.—Lecture.
NILLO'S GARDEN.—Hero.
THEATRE COMIQUE.—Vaudeville.
THE AQUARIUM.—Afternoon and Evening.
SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS.—Minstrelsy.
AMERICAN MUSEUM.—Curiosities.
COOPER INSTITUTE.—Billiard Tournament.
GILMORE'S GARDEN.—Skating and Music.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

TERMS, POSTAGE PAID.

The Daily Times, per annum, including the Sunday Edition	$12 00
The Daily Times, per annum, exclusive of the Sunday Edition	10 00
The Sunday Edition, per annum	2 00
The Semi-Weekly Times, per annum	2 50
The Weekly Times, per annum	1 00

The Signal Service Bureau report indicates for to-day in this region, partly cloudy or clear weather, a slight rise in temperature, falling barometer during the day, followed during the evening by increasing cloudiness.

The Potter committee continues to mark time without advancing. If the committee were a board of German Professors intent on writing a series of bulky volumes on the genesis, development, and purpose of the cipher dispatches, its ponderous efforts to lay a solid foundation for future inquiry might be appreciated. As it is, they bear too close a resemblance to a mere partisan device to stave off unpleasant revelations to be either commendable or useful. It is proposed to send a sub-committee to New-York to take the evidence of Mr. Tilden. When that is done, there will be at least a beginning made in laying bare the mystery of the ciphers. Not that the defeated candidate will be likely to cast much light on the efforts made to steal the Presidency, on his behalf, but that the extent of his ignorance of the intrigues which went on under his nose will indicate the extent of the knowledge which is to be sought for elsewhere. Mentally and physically, Mr. Tilden is likely to present a somewhat suggestive spectacle in the witness-box.

The discussion of the Constitutional resolutions of Mr. Edmunds was opened in the Senate yesterday by Mr. Morgan, of Alabama, who made some perfectly sound objections to the necessity for reaffirming the validity of the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth amendments, but carefully dodged all reference to the really vital point of Mr. Edmunds' resolutions, viz., the right of the General Government to regulate through its own officers the elections for members of Congress. Mr. Morgan affirmed the doctrine of State rights in its most pernicious form by denying that the people of each State had a common interest in the enforcement of the whole Constitution. He insisted that if men were deprived of the right of trial by jury, or of the right to vote, in Vermont, the people of Alabama had no right to complain; and, of course, that if these things happened in Alabama it was no business of the people of Vermont. That is a line of argument which Mr. Morgan and his Democratic friends would have done well to leave untouched. But one fate can overtake any set of politicians who openly declare the enforcement of the Constitution of the United States to be a question of local option merely.

It is rather late in the session to recommend new legislation respecting Indian affairs, and the report just made by Senator Saunders' branch of the Congressional joint committee is only useful as embodying suggestions for another Congress. This report does not favor the transfer of the government of the Indians to the War Department, but it does recommend that warlike or persistently troublesome tribes be turned over entirely to that department. It is also recommended that civil law be extended over all the tribes which are migratory, and that the authority of the United States be enforced through the courts. The members of the commission must have forgotten that the Indian Territory, to which they direct particular attention, is a foreign country, and that its inhabitants deny the right of the United States to establish law courts there. The strongest point in the report is the statement that all "the fighting Indians" in the national domain cannot exceed 15,000 in number, and that it is not worth while to burden the Army with the care of 250,000 Indians on account of this handful of malcontents.

The report of the Board of Experts appointed by Congress to investigate the yellow fever epidemic of 1878 does not bring to light any new facts or suggest any new measures by which another visitation of the plague can be prevented. The experts say that the disease is exotic to our own country, and that, although the specific poison of yellow fever is particulate and material, it has never been microscopically or chemically demonstrated to the human senses. This was all well known before this report was written. The chief recommendations of the board are the appointment of a committee to visit the West Indies for the purpose of prosecuting further inquiries, and the enforcement of strict quarantine regulations. Aside from the statistics which accompany the report, it contains nothing that throws much light on the subject investigated. It is not likely that scientific men expected any immediate or valuable result from an inquiry which was necessarily prosecuted with considerable haste. We are as far as ever from arriving at any conclusions which can be useful in arresting the deadly disease.

There is some danger that the question of retrenchment in the City Government will get smothered under an accumulation of legislative resolutions. The latest proposal for the relief of New-York tax-payers is Senator Murphy's plan of a joint committee, consisting of three Senators and five members of Assembly, to be empowered to investigate all the departments of the City Government, and to report whether any of them can be abolished or consolidated, and, generally speaking, what saving can be effected in their administration. This plan would, no doubt, yield some valuable information, but it would waste a good deal of time, and might, very readily, be made a pretext for staving off all action on the subject whatever. That would be a decided relief to the office-holders, but would be somewhat warmly resented by the tax-payers, in whose interest the proposed investigation is asked for. The simplest and most direct plan of economy yet submitted is, unquestionably, that of Mr. Strahan. His bill should be vigorously pressed before the good resolutions of the early session begin to tarnish, and its passage, with any needful amendments, ought to be secured in ample time to satisfy the objections which the Governor may urge against it. Legislators who are honestly desirous of doing something for the tax-payers of New-York should take the most direct and practical way of accomplishing it.

CONGRESS AND THE RAILROADS.

The opponents of the Reagan bill, for the regulation of inter-State commerce, so far as they have been heard before the Senate sub-committee, are rarely consistent and quite as rarely candid. Few of them venture to declare hostility to any legislation on the subject. More commonly, they allege that some legislation might be desirable, but that this particular bill is too objectionable to be tolerated. Their tactics are a repetition of those employed by Mr. Hewitt and others in the House, when vainly resisting the passage of the measure. "No doubt proper regulation would be good," said they, "but the regulation now proposed is not proper." A similar declaration is relied upon by an official of the Pennsylvania Railroad to explain away a friendly expression of opinion attributed to Col. Scott. He favors the object, we are told, but condemns the means provided in the present bill. Opposition of this nature may serve as a pretext for unfavorable action, but it cannot satisfy the public judgment. It aims at the defeat of the bill. But if the professions put forward were genuine, the effort would be to amend it. We might then obtain a more perfect measure. As the issue is presented, the alternative seems to be the bill substantially as it is or nothing; and with the choice thus narrowed, railroad managers should not wonder that the popular preference is for the bill, defective as it is admitted to be, rather than a continuance of the injustice which it is intended to remove.

Dissatisfaction with railroad management, especially in relation to the roads on which remote parts of the country depend for their traffic with the seaboard, is one of those great facts which challenge recognition without being susceptible of precise explanation. Perhaps this is because the grievances complained of vary, according to the localities and the manner in which the managers exercise their power. In the case of the Union Pacific, the grounds of complaint are easily stated. To the exactions of a monopoly is added the discrimination that operates disastrously on local interests. As a witness before the Senate committee puts it, the Union and Central Pacific Roads have become more powerful than the States they traverse; their indifference to specific legal obligations is equaled by their disregard of the rights of the communities to whose wants they minister. In other cases, local interests are sacrificed to through business; discrimination in the matter of rates is the rule; combinations destroy the chance of relief which competition would afford. There are cases in which business is unfairly controlled, where favoritism increases the offensiveness of monopoly, and inflicts injuries for which the law provides no redress. However different the causes of complaint, their prevalence is too significant to be safely overlooked. When the demand for legislative regulation first arose, it was mainly sectional. The Granger movement was essentially a Western movement; the laws restraining railroad management were Western laws. This peculiarity has disappeared. New-York merchants now make common cause with Chicago merchants in support of the demand for a Congressional regulation of inter-State traffic. The Western farmer and the Eastern trader suffer from different phases of the same wrong. The Reagan bill cannot be set aside, therefore, as a sectional measure. It may require amendment to render its working smooth and effective, but in its general purpose it reflects a feeling which delay will only intensify, and perhaps render unmanageable.

Undoubtedly, the corporate interests involved are too large to be subjected to crude experiments or a supervision not nicely adjusted to the objects to be obtained. But the officers who urge this as a reason against the Reagan bill have urged it as strenuously against all other measures having the same end in view. They make no advance. They stand this year where they have stood whenever the subject of legislative regulation has been raised, whether at Washington or in States. The plea, then, lacks the force it would have if they who present it used their opportunities to facilitate the solution of the problem dealt with in the Reagan bill. It is absurd to suppose, however, that a question affecting vitally the development of the country's resources and the prosperity of its trade can be postponed, year after year, to suit the convenience of persons who try to escape responsibility by hiding behind the widows and orphans who happen to be among the shareholders. Consideration for shareholders is well, but it ought not to be accepted as an excuse for the perversion of corporate power which Congress is asked to correct. Indeed, before the controversy is disposed of, the movement in favor of Federal supervision may so enlarge its range as to take cognizance of more than the traffic arrangements of great roads. Between their policy and their financial condition there is, in most instances, a connection so close that the just and efficient regulation of one may be inseparable from an investigation of the other. The connection between a speculative increase of share capital, or a growth of liabilities, and rates and combinations, is obvious. An unwise policy in one direction may necessitate an exacting policy in another. Thus, to trace the motives of managers in their arrangements, whether with their customers or with other companies, it will be desirable to fathom the mysteries of railway accounting, and to reveal the true state of affairs. Looking at the subject from this point of view, the regulation of inter-State commerce seems to be only part of the task which will devolve on Congress as a result of the proportions acquired by the railroad system.

THE NEW PHASE OF FRENCH AFFAIRS.

Events have moved more rapidly in France than the Republican leaders anticipated or dared to hope. In fact, the more moderate of them, including M. Gambetta, had a wholesome dread of any precipitate change. Before the Senatorial election, the great tribune of the French people began to counsel prudence and patience, and after the triumph of the 5th January, he continued to impress upon his followers the importance of this policy, with some show of anxiety. The strength of the Republic depended upon its moderation, and upon the assurance that it meant stability and freedom from disquieting agitations. France had become extremely sensitive on this point, and the cause of the Republic had become the cause of real conservatism. The people did not wish to risk any revolutionary movement from either side. They accepted the Republic, and were ready to build their hopes upon it, but it must justify their confidence by moving on without any serious jar or disturbance. The need of consolidating its power and bringing all the institutions into harmony with its spirit was generally recognized, but there was extreme anxiety that this should be done as cautiously as possible, and that precipitate action should be avoided. Gambetta saw this, and realized the difficulty of restraining the more ardent factions of the Left and carrying out the plans of the Moderates. He hoped that MacMahon would remain at his post and the Dufaure Ministry continue in place, at least for the present, because chances here would beget apprehension if they were sudden. When the Chambers met, Gen. Gresley took the place of Borel in the Ministry of War, and the Government put forth its mild statement. Gambetta was not pleased, but he held to his resolution of moderation, and carried his followers with him. The Ministry remained, and it was hoped that the President, who had been so docile since his memorable defeat in 1877, would yield to the voice of France and give his consent to the changes determined upon in the administration of the civil departments and the Army. The Marshal gave way with stern reluctance till the reforming hand of the Ministry reached his old companions, the military commanders, and then he refused to go further and determined to resign.

The changes which he was called upon to sanction were somewhat sweeping, but the importance of having the high commands of the Army in the hands of men loyal to the Republic, if it was to be prepared for every emergency, can hardly be overrated. The Ministry was firm and MacMahon stepped out of the way of Republican progress. The change, coming as it does, will be hailed with delight by friends of the Republic in and out of France. They would have deprecated any effort to drive the Marshal from his place, but so long as he is pushed aside by the inevitable pressure of events in themselves desirable, it is a gain unattended with risk. The Constitution of 1871-2 was the work of Monarchists, and though circumstances then forbade the attempt to restore any monarch, it was intended to be adapted to such an occurrence, if events should become opportune. After Thiers was driven from the Executive chair, MacMahon was set to hold it for the Royalists. For months he has seen that his task was rendered futile by the determination of France to have a republic. The current has dragged him along, but he has had no sympathy with the tendency of the time, and was no fit instrument to carry out the manifest purposes of his countrymen. He was an obstruction which no one was inclined to take the responsibility of removing before the expiration of his term of office; but his voluntary withdrawal under circumstances devoid of special excitement is a cause for congratulation. The prompt election of M. Jules Grevy by an overwhelming vote of the Congress of Senators and Deputies, is a sufficient evidence that moderation is the order of the day. Though a thorough believer in Republican principles from his youth, the venerable ex-President of the Chamber of Deputies has long been recognized as one of the coolest and most prudent of French statesmen. He is a man of strong convictions, decided character, and great firmness, and no steadier hand could have been found to take the helm than his.

Much of the news sent over the cable yesterday consisted of the somewhat excited conjectures of London correspondents in Paris. Among these was one to the effect that the Dufaure Ministry would resign, and that Gambetta himself would form a Cabinet and preside over its action while holding the portfolio of Foreign Affairs. Much more probable is the later report that he is likely to succeed Grevy as President of the Chamber of Deputies, though it may be doubted whether his qualifications specially fit him for that post, which requires so much coolness and tact. But it is difficult to see why it should be supposed that the success of the Ministry itself in carrying out its plans, even against the resistance of the President, would lead to its resignation. Besides, it has all along been evident that Gambetta was anxious to avoid the direct responsibility and the political peril of heading the Cabinet. There appears less reason than a week ago for expecting or desiring a change of Ministry. But whether such an event takes place or not, it is evident that the prospects of the French Republic are opening up with more brightness than ever before, though the occasion for prudence and patience has by no means passed. With the moderate leaders firmly directing the course of events, there is every reason to hope that they will not forget their moderation, and that the confidence of France will rest safely in their keeping. Their task has come upon them with more urgency than was expected, and can be more rapidly executed, but their responsibility is all the greater for the time being. The Republic must give guarantees for its conduct, under their guidance, that it means security and good order for society, and that it will neither countenance radical reaction nor give occasion for conservative reaction. It is in their power now to settle the Republic so wisely and firmly on its foundations as to give fair assurance of its permanency. The comparative lack of popular excitement at Paris and Versailles, while the momentous changes were going on yesterday is a good sign, and it is to be hoped that the completion of the transition of France to a Republic, which has dragged so long, and has suddenly taken on such startling rapidity, will be unattended with demonstrations calculated to fill its friends with misgiving or its enemies with hope.

"A MERE POLITICAL DODGE."

If there were any doubt as to the political significance of the passage of the Anti-Chinese bill, the frank expressions of popular sentiment in California settle the case. It is conceded by the Republicans, and joyfully claimed by the Democrats, that the Democratic House is entitled to the credit of passing the bill. The Republicans think that the partisan advantage thus gained may be counterbalanced by prompt and favorable action on the part of the Senate. In fact, Senator Sargent, of California, when the House bill came over from the other end of the Capitol, took opportunity to remark that a similar bill had been pending in the Senate for some time, and that he hoped that it would not be longer delayed. If there is anything creditable in the action of the House, the Senator from California thinks that the Republican Senate, of which he is a member, should secure its share of praise. The tone of the California press, as reported by telegraph, is purely partisan, only one or two newspapers regarding the bill on its own merits; and even these do not hesitate to say that its passage is a political move, considered more or less shrewd as the prejudices of the commenting journal naturally incline.

Parties are pretty nearly evenly balanced in California at present. From the time when the Republicans swept the State during the stress of the civil war until 1867, California was reckoned as stanchly Republican. Dissensions in the party, in 1867, led to the election of Gov. Haight, Democrat, though the Republicans were successful in the Legislature and in many of the local elections; and their candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, John P. Jones, now Senator from Nevada, came very near an election on a ticket which was otherwise overwhelmed with disaster. Since that time the Democrats have, until lately, been very strong in the State. They have repeatedly elected their State ticket, and have chosen the Senator who will succeed Mr. Sargent next March. Latterly, however, the Democratic Party in California has lost prestige. This was shown by the result of the elections in the Congressional districts, as well as in the canvass for delegates to the Constitutional Convention. The Republicans have strong hopes of carrying the State next Fall, and the presumption is fair that, with a popular candidate and a united party, they will regain their lost control. The Democrats are aware of their danger. They have not concealed from their brethren in the House of Representatives that something must be done to save the State. Under such a pressure the Anti-Chinese bill was passed. It is not likely that many of the Congressmen who voted for this bill knew or cared anything about its probable effect on the country or upon the people against whom it was aimed. They only knew that it was a Democratic measure, necessary to sustain their party in the Pacific States, and they gave it their blind and unreasoning support. But it must be admitted that no politician from the Pacific States would dare to vote against the measure, whatever may be his party affiliations. People will not stop to consider whether such a bill as this is constitutional, or even the best that can be done to prevent the evil of which they complain. A man who opposes it is in danger of losing his popularity.

Considering how insecure are the foundations on which the political hopes of most Congressmen rest, it is not surprising that the California Congressmen are afraid to oppose any bill, however monstrous or absurd, which is clamored for by the anti-Chinese element. That element is undeniably in the ascendency in California. And in this view of the case, too, we can understand why California politicians, without distinction of party, do not dare to criticise any measure which is approved by those who want to see "the Chinese invasion" turned away from the shores of their State. The next election in California will be an important one. There must then be chosen a Governor and other State officers, a Legislature, and four Congressmen. The Legislature then to be elected will choose a successor to Senator Booth, whose term expires in 1881. And not the least important feature in that canvass will be the choice of Mayor, Supervisors, and other officers, in the City of San Francisco. Here is a list of political prizes worth striving for. And shall any leader who has at heart the interests of his party put in jeopardy his party's chances by any act which shall give rise to a suspicion that he is unsound on the all-absorbing question of Chinese immigration? In the nature of things, this is too much to ask. Thus it happens that the Anti-Chinese bill which passed the House the other day was never considered on its own merits as an abstract proposition, but only as a political expedient.

It may be conceded that, since the feeling of a vast majority of the people of California is hostile to the Chinese as settlers, measures should be adopted by the Government to stay the tide of immigration. It is not necessary for us of the East to argue the question of the desirability of the Chinese as dwellers on American soil. We are forced to admit that, whether it be well grounded or not, there is in California an almost universal opinion that the Chinese element is detrimental to the best interests of the State. And, since we must also admit that the citizens of that State are most competent to decide what they do not want, it is clear that the United States Government is bound to do what it lawfully and justly can to mitigate the evils of this peculiar form of foreign immigration. No other power can touch the objectionable thing. The people of California, after trying a variety of absurd and brutal experiments, have at last come to this conclusion. It was agreed in Washington that Congress and the Executive should immediately apply such remedies as seemed natural and dignified. The revision of existing treaties and frank representations made to the Chinese Government were suggested; and it is certain that something in this direction would have been speedily accomplished. But the politicians cannot wait. The California election is near at hand. And the bill to forbid the landing at any American port of more than fifteen Chinese passengers from any one ship is passed by the House. In a barbarous nation such a prohibition would be defied as monstrous. In this country it is called by an astute popular leader "a mere political dodge."

WATER-COLORS.

To-night the twelfth annual exhibition of the Water-Color Society will be ready for a preliminary viewing at the Academy of Design. One year ago this journal aroused the indignation of members of the society by some remarks tending to subordinate water-color painting to painting in oils. One of their number took occasion to deny that any inferiority existed. And in a certain sense he was quite right. Regarded from the broadest stand-point, no one field of art is in itself lower than another. For circumstances are supposed to be molded by genius, not genius by circumstances, and the medium may be looked upon as of so little account in comparison with the thought which directs it, that the different materials and methods used in art may well seem on one plane. Nevertheless, not even the most devoted adherent to water-colors will claim that in certain respects—for instance, in striking the note of sombre and grand ideas—water-colors are on a par with oils. Let the most robust of all the British water-colorists, past and present, do his best, he cannot give his paper the luminous depth and tragic force that landscape painters like Constable and Jules Dupre embody in oils. Turner probably came as near them in that respect as any one we know of, but even he could not do it. But to say that is very far from decrying water-color painting in itself; it is merely trying to define it, and its relative position in the arts, by a comparison with a sister branch. But what charming effects, what spirited sketches, what a fine, open, out-of-doors look, a good water-colorist can give his paper! Especially is water-color suited to a climate like ours, where sunshine is lavish and nature prodigal of brilliant colors. You cannot take a stroll in any direction about New-York—on Long Island or Staten Island, into New-Jersey or Westchester—without meeting at every turn sufficient material for a sketch.

Water-colors are supposed to be a comparatively modern development of art, springing from English artists of the last century. On this account, since it seems to be a product of the more intricate civilization of the latest days, a greater complexity might be assumed for it. Yet nothing is more probable than that water-color painting greatly antedates that of oils. The child who for Christmas gets a box of paints, and forthwith begins to rub them in water, is only repeating in a somewhat more artificial form what the savage does with mineral or vegetable pigments, prior to adorning his own valuable carcase for war. For, like everything else, the arts begin and end in the individual. Where formerly, in our savage state, we painted our bodies concretely, we may be said now to paint abstractly our individuality into easel pictures. Water-colors, even when applied by savages to their persons, probably antedated oils. We may suppose the Australian black to content himself with a daubing of water-color pigments over his cheeks and forehead. We know it to be a fact that the high-grade Indians of Virginia in the seventeenth century painted themselves with colors mixed in oils. Water-color painting, in one form or another, must always have existed in Europe up to the great development of book illumination, in the centuries following the Crusades. The art has as honorable a history as any, and as ancient. The Van Eycks, therefore, when they began to use oils, merely erected an old accomplishment into a guild of the arts. Both oils and water-colors had been waiting for the artist who should first begin to insist upon their independent existence; oils merely received development earlier. When Cozens took up the neglected and hitherto underrated craft, he gave it the energetic impulse which everything receives at British hands; whereupon Europe in turn awoke to its importance. New capabilities were discovered by Italians, Frenchmen, and Dutchmen, so that at present Charles Blanc, the most systematic of recent art critics, is forced to notice at least three main subdivisions which come under our generic term water-colors. They are aquarelle, gouache, and laris, all words meaning pretty much the same thing, and apparently adopted into French from different languages by the cosmopolitan artists of Paris. He defines aquarelle to be a water-color in which the white of the paper ground is used for the brightest parts or "lights" of the picture, the transparent colors being washed on, instead of added in successive layers. Gouache, on the other hand, has the paper completely covered, the "lights" being put in with white. The colors are diluted with gum-water, and applied successively, drying quickly, unless specially treated to retard desiccation. Lavis, finally, is a water painting in one color, generally India ink or sepia, and, though much fallen from the popularity it once had, is still in use for washing in quick sketches that are rather mementoes than serious pictures. Of course, to these may be added a number of variations, such as those made by finishing with pastels to enhance the colors, in which cases the effects are not always so durable as they should be, owing to the fragility of the pastel.

Opaque colors of one kind or another are used very freely by some artists; others think that water-colors should remain as true to their name as possible, and stop short at aquarelle. The boldest spirits, again, put no limits whatever to this or any branch of art, and call him a Philistine who hesitates to use whatever material or whatever vehicle of materials shall contribute to a sensation of pleasure, whether by pleasure be understood a feeling of happiness, surprise, anger, or terror. When Courbet painted with a palette knife, he was protesting against the layman who dares to prescribe to the artist in what manner a picture shall be painted. Another painter might, in sober fact, fling colors on a canvas quite at hap-hazard, and then, by pulling them together a little, "arrange" a fantasia to suit himself. This would be the kind of wicked revenge that a man like Whistler might be inclined to take for interference by critics. And so with water-colors. There is really no limit to the liberties which may be taken with them, seeing that the bold handler of material can always point to the actual fact that they have roused sensations of some kind in most observers, and stimulated to pleasurable emotions a few elect.

If there still be any sticklers for the old genuine water-color drawing, they will do well to study Japanese art. Allusion has been made before in these columns to the debt which the modern Dutch water-colorists—the nearest to the English—owe to Japanese models. From France they may have caught the grace, the suavity, that characterizes their work, but from Japan comes their bolder juxtaposition of colors. Artists of Latin countries have carried the same thing to much greater lengths. The English seem to remain apart from the Japanese influence now making itself felt in a thousand ways in European art, and, with a few exceptions, the same may be said of our artists. Yet if the English remain comparatively unaffected, it is not because they have not studied the Japanese, but rather that they lack the versatility of mind which extracts from the seemingly barbaric magnificence of Oriental art, the true inspiration of color. Japanese art has had an effect on them, but they have not seized the vital point. This is the danger before our artists, whenever they shall in turn submit, more directly than they do now, to the influence of Japan. Although we are more versatile than the English, we have a good share of their crudeness, and it will take all the knowledge of the European schools, added to independent study of Oriental models, to save us from the rococo or grotesque. Yet there can be no doubt of the direction in which our artists, and especially our water-colorists who have profited thoroughly by the European schools, should look. They must look westward, beyond the path of empire, to a country like Japan, where a fearless, fresh simplicity of art still lingers, not yet entirely undermined by the railway and representative government.

Col. T. W. Higginson, in the Woman's Journal, of Boston, takes exception to some comments made by The Times upon the intellectual training of American young women. While we would not needlessly enter into a controversy with the gallant Colonel, in which he would receive all of the rewards due to courtesy, whether vanquished or victorious, we must affirm that his experience has been out of the common order if it leads him to believe that the average young woman of this country can hold her own in, or be materially improved by, a philosophical discussion. That there are a favored few who possess the ability to thoroughly comprehend and critically analyze the teachings of a man like Mr. Ralph Waldo Emerson we are quite willing to admit, and Col. Higginson may have had the singular good fortune never to have ventured beyond this contracted circle. If this is the case, we fear that his experience has not been shared by many others. We do not doubt that American women possess inherent abilities which, if properly developed, would put them on an intellectual level with those of the other sex. The trouble is that in most instances the development never takes place, and to be convinced of this one has only to visit during the season some Summer resort to which well-bred, and, presumably, well-schooled young women are apt to go. It may be objected that the test is not a fair one; but it is certain that such disciplined mental endowments as they possess usually make themselves apparent under these conditions. We anticipate a question by saying that the great majority of the young men one sees are equally thoughtless; but then, as Col. Higginson says, these ill-conditioned youths devote their time, in as well as out of college, to billiards and private theatricals, and do not attempt with a single stride to step from the commonplaces of life into its mysteries.

Clubs in London have had severer financial stress within a few years than clubs in New-York. All told, there are some 50 there; but many of these have no club houses, only meeting-places, and are not materially different from colloquial groggeries. At least two-thirds of the London clubs are heavily in debt, and old ones are dying from lack of support quite as rapidly as new ones are forming. Last year not less than 10 clubs became extinct, and it is probable that as many more will join them in the land of nowhere before the end of next December. The two leading causes of non-success are waste in the larder and expense and improvidence of servants. These will eat and drink (wages are comparatively of small importance) any club, not carefully and continually managed, into early bankruptcy. Some of those bodies have 100, 125, and even 150 servants; and when their capacity for consuming viands and potables is considered, the prospect is alarming. The principal or fashionable clubs are only 23; nearly all are extravagantly conducted, and not a few wholly mismanaged. Their membership is often large, from 1,000 to 2,700 or 2,800. The Junior Carlton, for example, has 2,300, and the Junior United Service, 2,500 members. Initiation fees and annual dues are about the same as here; but London clubs are not so pleasant, on the whole, as New-York clubs, by reason of their division into sets and the greater stiffness, reticence, and unadaptability of British character.

The Chinese Official Almanac, issued annually in December, and carefully prepared by the Board of Astronomy, is decidedly a curiosity, and shows that, notwithstanding the general shrewdness and intelligence of the people, they continue singularly superstitious. The board is imperially appointed; is presided over by a Prince of the blood, and equal in learning and character to any association in the land. The almanac is bestowed as a special act of grace by the Emperor on his faithful subjects. A large part is astrological, and intended for a "practical guide in the common affairs of life." The first day of the month is favorable to sacrifice and entering school, but unfavorable to setting out on a journey or changing residence. The fourth day one may make or receive visits, set out clothes drawn up contracts or barter, but not break ground or embark in any enterprise. The fifth day one may bathe, shave, or scrub, but not plant or sow. The eighth day is auspicious for holding weddings, burials, conjugal union, engaging servants, traveling. The twenty-third it is allowable to pull down old houses and walls, though not to open drains or weed gardens. Violators of law are put on guard by the declaration that the twenty-fifth alone should be employed for arrests, and no other day in the month should be. Bathing days are often a week or two apart, and bathing is enjoined at very inconvenient hours. The bulk of the Chinese, strange to say, regulate habit and business by the almanac, and even educated persons obey its counsels. From this, one might think that the Celestial Empire should be called the Flowery Domain of Nincompoops.

A Dublin correspondent gives an account of that capital which should be of interest here, inasmuch as New-York is the second, if not the first, Irish city on the globe. He says he has seen more wretchedness there in one day than in all Paris in six months. Infant mortality exceeds that of any place of its population in Europe. Mothers are under-fed and children are hardly fed at all. The food openly sold there is very bad, and so unnutritious as to be incapable of preserving health or sustaining nurslings. It is a disgrace to civilization, and the press, which is forever fuming about Home Rule, seems wholly indifferent to domestic rule. Pallid, sickly mothers, wasted offspring, mortal disease, pauperism, mendicancy, misery meet one at every turn. Trade is extremely dull, as it has been for years; a great many persons are unemployed, and those who are employed get very small wages. A single pound of good beef daily in the family of an ordinary workman costs one-fourth of the entire income of the family, and most of it goes to him because he needs physical strength to labor. There seems to be no ambition, no enterprise, no hope in Dublin, which the Irish always speak of as beautiful and charming, though it is one of the most melancholy and depressing cities, by reason of its poverty, ignorance, and vagabondage, to be seen in the Old World. As may be imagined, the Irish lay all its defects upon perfidious Albion; but nobody can stay any length of time in the capital without noticing that much of its misfortune comes directly from the character of its inhabitants.

The Saturday Review is such a prig that it is always a pleasure to point out its blunders. In the issue of Jan. 11 is an article on "Bibliomania in 1878," made up from a brochure, lately put forth by Gustave Brunet, of whom the Review writer speaks as being the author of the "Manuel de Libraire." Anybody who knows anything about bibliography knows that M. Jacques Charles Brunet, the author of the "Manuel," died in 1867, at the good old age of 87. The Saturday Review would have him, at the age of 99, still active in the field, attending all the book auctions, laying plans for future purchases, and tossing off gossiping pamphlets in his leisure moments. It was this same accurate and pains-taking journal that elected Gen. Butler Governor of Maine last Fall; that unsexed Mme. Blavatsky in noticing her book, and that spoke of Aldrich's "Queen of Sheba" as "a book of poems." Gustave Brunet has written enough upon other subjects than bibliography to have his identity respected—even by the persons who edit the Saturday Review; though his name is now directly associated with that of Jacques Charles—who, by the way, is not his kinsman—through his publication of a valuable supplement to the "Manuel," in collaboration with M. P. Deschamps. Brunet's "Manuel de Libraire" is the most complete and useful work of its kind, and is practically indispensable to the book-collector, though he must pay dearly for the last edition, published in six volumes in 1865; $75 will hardly buy it, and large-paper copies sell for $100. It is not generally known, even among collectors, that the recasting and enlarging of this edition from that of 1842 was done by a younger and firmer hand than that of the aged J. C. Brunet—though his name alone appears on the title-page.

Extensive, important, and profitable as our rivers are in respect to commerce and development of the country, they are wholly unequal to the rivers of South America. The Amazon alone furnishes a host of watery resources, and is fitly named the Mediterranean of that continent. Together with its tributaries, it is navigable by steamers, according to official reports, for 26,853 miles; its average breadth in Brazil is 4¼ miles; it rises, when high, 54 feet above its ordinary level, and its volume is so vast that sailors at sea drink its water and find it fresh out of sight of land, its current being visible 500 miles from shore. The volume of the principal rivers of our sister continent is, in proportion to the area drained, far greater than the volume of rivers here, on account of increased rain-fall. The annual rain-fall on our Atlantic coast averages from 40 to 45 inches; on the coast of Brazil, 79 inches. The main channel of the Amazon is, for the first 1,000 miles from the ocean, nowhere less than 30 fathoms. Beyond the Peruvian frontier, it continues to be a big river more than 1,000 miles into the heart of the Andes, the head of steam navigation being at Mayro, (Peru,) 3,623 miles from the Atlantic and 325 miles from Lima by public roads; so that it is only 331 miles from Callao—the port of Lima—on the Pacific, to the head of steam navigation on the Amazon. Peruvian railways will soon bring steamers on the Amazon within one day's travel of the Pacific, and Peruvian enterprise will speedily improve Andean communication, and open the interior of South America to civilization and commerce. The tributaries of the Amazon are longer than the largest rivers of Europe. The Madeira is navigable by steamers to its falls, on the Bolivian frontier, over 1,000 miles, and above the falls its tributaries furnish 4,300 miles of continuous steam navigation, thus rendering commercially accessible the whole of Bolivia and the western part of the Brazilian Province, Matto Grosso. Brazil has lately granted a subsidy to a foreign company to build a railway around the Falls of Madeira. The large rivers, Napo, Maroni, and Putumayo, are navigable from the Amazon, through Ecuador and Colombia, for almost 1,000 miles beyond the frontier of Brazil to the Andes, within 400 miles of Quito and Guyaquil, and so open communication with all the region of Ecuador east of the Cordilleras. The Rio Negro, entering the Amazon at Manaos, some 1,100 miles from the Atlantic, rises near Bogota, Colombia's capital, passes through southern Venezuela very close to the Orinoco, and is a channel of trade between Venezuela and Brazil; while the Orinoco is navigable for sail and steam vessels from the ocean to the Andes, in Colombia. Thus, the Amazon and its tributaries are commercial highways for Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, Brazil, and are navigable for steamers a greater distance than is included in the globe's circumference.

NEW-JERSEY LEGISLATURE.

A BRIEF SESSION OF THE HOUSE—SPEAKER JACKSON'S RECEPTION.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 30.—The House last evening decided to sit this morning, but a bare quorum was present when Clerk Pott called the roll at 10 o'clock to-day. The other members had gone to the Reform School at Jamesburg to inspect the institution. The House sat for only three-quarters of an hour to-day, and then adjourned for the week. Mr. Pancoast introduced a bill placing the salary of the Clerk of the Supreme Court of the State at $5,000. Mr. Lilliendahl introduced another, formally wedding the Township of Harrison to Kearney. They are adjoining suburbs of Newark, and there is no necessity for separate governments, except to provide political places for small-fry politicians. Mr. Rogers introduced a bill to make the District Court bill inapplicable to Trenton. It is questionable if such a bill would be constitutional, as regulating the internal affairs of a city by a special and local act. Two bills concerning the Morris Canal were acted on this morning. One is that repealing the act allowing the Newark Water Board to issue bonds for the purchase of the Morris Canal or other water supply, which was ordered to a third reading. Mr. De Witt's bill, giving the Morris Company power to dispose of its franchises for aqueduct purposes was laid over for future consideration.

Speaker Jackson tendered a reception to the members of the two houses at his home in Newark this evening. A large party gathered in his elegant house on High-street, in response to his invitations. Besides the members of the houses, a large number of prominent Newark residents were present.

SARATOGA'S DEFAULTING TREASURER.

Troy, Jan. 30.—Seven of the fifteen bondsmen of Wright, the defaulting Treasurer of Saratoga County, have agreed to make good his deficiency. The others are bankrupts

JAY GOULD AND THE STREET

A HEAVY BEAR MOVEMENT YESTERDAY.

BROKERS WHO DO NOT BELIEVE THAT GOULD WAS RESPONSIBLE FOR IT, AND OTHERS WHO DO—A STORY ABOUT UNION PACIFIC—EFFECT OF THE EXPOSURE OF GOULD'S FINANCIAL CONDITION—WHAT MR. SAGE SAYS.

Jay Gould walked into the busy lobby of the Windsor Hotel last night, about 9 o'clock, and as he passed through the talking throng but five persons recognized him, and of these two or three appeared to be messengers who were waiting for him. Among the crowd about him were men like William Belden, his late partner; Samuel W. Boocock, James Keene's principal broker; Frank Work, Harvey Kennedy, Charles Osborne, a few years ago Mr. Gould's confidential agent and broker; D. P. Morgan, and others not less active in the Street at this time, but none of them seemed to know him. A few years ago had he entered that brilliantly-lighted vestibule under such circumstances half of the crowd would have rushed to shake his hand and have the first word with him. His appearance there at all last night was somewhat of a surprise, for he has not lately visited the Windsor so frequently as he used to. The opinion was expressed by some of the gentlemen present that it was done as a little piece of tactical side-show—to let the Street see that he was still alive. And precisely the same construction was put upon the afternoon movement in the stock market yesterday. The exposure of Gould's position on his "long" holdings and "short" contracts in THE TIMES yesterday morning, they say, goaded him into desperation, and led him to make a savage "bear" attack about 2 o'clock yesterday, which had the effect of shaking prices down a few points, and was followed by a quick recovery. The whole movement was over in half an hour, and if it was his work it was planned well, for it was begun at a moment when the market was quiet but strong, and the "bulls" were off their guard.

The market opened buoyantly, and nothing unusual occurred until about 1:10 o'clock, when suddenly, as by a concerted movement, a simultaneous "bear" raid was made by brokers all over the floor. The stocks principally attacked were Lake Shore, North-western and St. Paul. These were offered freely, and, amid great excitement, dropped at the rate of ½ per cent. at a time, and in one or two instances at the rate of 1 per cent., until Lake Shore had fallen 3¼ per cent., North-western 7⅝ per cent., St. Paul 4 per cent., Canada Southern 3 per cent., Michigan Central 3½ per cent., Delaware, Lackawanna and Western 3 per cent., New-Jersey Central 3½ per cent., Hannibal and St. Joseph 2¼ per cent., and Western Union 4¾ per cent. These were the principal sufferers, but the entire list was depressed more or less. For a while it looked as if a panic was about to prevail, such was the rush of demoralized weak holders to realize. It was fully half an hour before those not in the movement began to recover their scare and then stocks rebounded almost as quickly as they had tumbled. The excitement inside the Exchange was more than equaled outside. When the unusual fluctuations began to come out on the tape, and the existence of a raid became known, men stopped instantly whatever occupation they happened to be at, and rushed for the nearest instrument. In Delmonico's the tables were deserted by those who had been dining, and a partition was thrown down in the frantic attempts of the mob to get near the "ticker." As in the majority of cases, this was a sheer impossibility, shouts of "Read it out!" "Call it off!" arose from the outskirts of the struggling crowd, and the man nearest the instrument complied, every announcement being greeted with wild shouts and exclamations. This scene was repeated in every place where a gold and stock instrument is kept for the convenience of the public. Each one was surrounded by a howling, pushing mob, eager to learn the latest news. Lawyers deserted their offices and brokers their stores. It seemed as though the entire down-town community was engaged in the stock business. The excitement continued unabated until the raid was over and the reaction had set in, and throughout the afternoon the raid was the sole subject of conversation.

Only a few of the Wall-street men give Gould the credit of the break, and even those believe that it was purely a "wash" so far as Gould's share in it was concerned, and that whatever actual transactions were made during that brief flurry were not on his account. So far as any of Gould's known outward appearances, it was a Gould "washing" raid, for the reporter who was in the Exchange at the time distinctly saw what appeared to be squads of five or six men enter the room in a body, act apparently in concert, though scattering themselves all over the room, and subside by a similar concert of movement. By far the most intelligent body of men on the street believe that the temporary break was but a natural result of a strong and high market. When the market is so high, they argue, there must of necessity be sharp fluctuations, and they say they look for others of a similar kind at follow at intervals just as long as the market is sustained at its present high point.

In conversation with leading brokers yesterday, one of them, who is thoroughly posted as to Gould's affairs, said that THE TIMES had rather underestimated Gould's recent losses in fixing them at $100,000 a week on an average, and that if he is actually carrying 125,000 shares of stock, it costs really $300,000 a week against a market whose average rise is 5 per cent. a week. It is true he has got a large amount of Union Pacific on his hands, but he cannot realize on it except by loans, for, as soon as he attempts it, it will be inferred that he is unloading, and down goes the price of Union Pacific. In a like manner, he cannot go into the market to "cover" his shorts, for as soon as he buys or a demand is made for a block or for a large number of small parcels of stocks, up goes the price at that end of the line, and this is precisely Mr. Gould's dilemma. It is a matter of common rumor that on Michigan Central, Lake Shore, and Illinois Central alone, he is short 65,000 shares, at a range of from 20 to 50 per cent. below the present market. His inability to realize or make a turn safely in Union Pacific is manifest from the fact that the sales in that stock do not amount to over a few hundred shares a day. Moreover, it is asserted that the dividends on Union Pacific have not been actually paid for some time past, although Mr. Gould claims that it is paying a dividend of 2 per cent. a quarter—which if maintained would make it a first-class investment paying 8 per cent. per annum. It is claimed that the dividend has been paid only "where it could do most good," that is, among the outsiders, for appearance's sake alone, and that the manipulators of the inside ring have agreed to pass or omit the collection of their dividends. A leading man on the Street, yesterday said this was a fact not generally known or suspected, but that he knew that the Union Pacific managers could not show how or when the dividend had been paid. He also stated that quite recently Mr. Gould parted with some Union Pacific—between 10,000 and 20,000 shares—at nominal figures.

The main topic of conversation yesterday in Wall-street was in respect to Gould's condition and the statements concerning it published in THE TIMES. This led to a raking up of Gould's later history and to the circumstances attending his recent copartnership dissolution. In respect to this the reporter learned that Mr. Belden had openly stated that he was tired of looking probable ruin in the face and of "washing" stocks for day after day and week after week, sometimes to the extent of 100,000 shares a day. Gould's present broker, Washington C. Conner, was a boy in the office of Belden & Co., and was ultimately taken into the firm with a 10 per cent. interest, but no capital. Belden and his brother Henry furnished half of the capital, and Gould the other half. Conner is still retained in Gould's confidence, as some people think, because he knows a great deal about the Black Friday transactions of the Gold Ring of 1869, and there are still a number of suits pending against Gould for a settlement of that dismal affair. They say that Conner is a valuable witness in Gould's behalf. A very shrewd man, who knows exactly what Mr. Conner knows about Black Friday, says that Gould keeps his encircling arm about Conner not because he can testify in Gould's behalf, but in order to prevent him from being used to testify against Gould.

In respect to Mr. Sage's relations with Jay Gould, the former gentleman stated to a TIMES reporter yesterday that he had not advanced any large amount of money to Gould, but that the latter owed him some $300,000, which he offered to pay early in January, and which Mr. Sage refused, saying he did not need it at that time. It still stands as a loan, and Mr. Sage still holds Gould's ticket for the amount.

DISASTERS TO VESSELS.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The British ship Thomas E. Kenny, Capt. Grant, from New-York Jan. 6, for London, foundered on the passage. All of her crew with the exception of four persons was saved.

The British bark Ettie, Capt. Pearce, from Antwerp Jan. 7, for New-York, has arrived at Belfast disabled.

CHATHAM, Mass. Jan. 30.—A schooner is reported sunk three miles northeast of Pollock Rip Lightship. Her masthheads and topmast are above water.

TROY'S SUSPENDED BANK.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—In the matter of the petition for instructions by Charles E. Patterson, Receiver of the Merchants' and Mechanics' Bank of Troy, Justice Osborn has appointed Charles O. Parmalee, of Lansingburg, Referee, to take such proofs as may be offered as to or affecting the question of priority and preference; also, to report and return such proofs to the court that the latter may further proceed thereon. This order is granted on account of the Receiver applying for advice as to whether the Troy Savings Bank has a preference and is entitled to priority of payment over the general depositors and creditors of the defunct bank.

SLOSSON BEATEN AT LAST.

MAURICE DALY'S BIGGEST RUN.

YESTERDAY'S CONTESTS IN THE BILLIARD TOURNAMENT—DALY BEATS SLOSSON AND SCHAEFER DEFEATS GALLAGHER.

George Slosson, of Chicago, and Maurice Daly, of New-York, played last evening in Cooper Institute the most exciting game of the Brunswick and Balke Championship Tournament, in the presence of a large assemblage of ladies and gentlemen. It resulted in a crushing defeat for the previously invincible Chicagoan, the changing hands of a very large amount of wagered money, and the general upsetting of the calculations of the sporting fraternity in respect to winning combinations. As a tournament contest, the game has not been equaled in interest by any that has occurred in New-York in many years. As far as the tournament itself is concerned Daly's well-earned victory leaves Schaefer at present with the best chance for the championship emblem and first prize, and assures Daly himself a prize. As Schaefer has still to meet Sexton and Slosson, however, it is possible that there will be three "ties" between these brilliant experts, the playing "off" of which will insure very fine exhibitions for the public. In the afternoon game Schaefer defeated Gallagher, adding four victories to his banner.

Both Daly and Slosson were applauded as they approached the table, and the Chicago expert, catching the eye of a pretty brunette with whom he is acquainted, smiled and bowed, and then, picking up his billiard-cue, strung for lead, and, winning, selected the "spot" ball and made a counting stroke from the string, and made a run of two caroms, while Daly gathered a "goose-egg." Slosson then "fouled" on an object-ball, and, under the rules, played for "safety." Daly failed to count, and after a number of safety shots on each side, Slosson strove hard for a position on the rail and gained it, but, by a too-delicately played shot, left it in Daly's hands. The latter played the ivories around the corner successfully, and started them on a slow journey around the table, until, on his sixty-eighth shot, they "froze," and he retired. A little later on Slosson played a "round-the-table" shot, and feeling confident that it would count, started after a piece of chalk lying at the other end of the table, when, just as he was about to pick the latter up, the cue-ball ran around the red without counting, and he sat down amid general laughter. Up to this time Slosson's play had been more remarkable for "misses" than for good play, while Daly, on the other hand, had been playing in fine form, making caroms with his usual grace and ease. He started the spheres on another journey along the rail, coaxing them onward with a cue that was handled with great skill and judgment. They checked 130, and still went cheerily on their way. Traveling down the left rail, they turned the corner and crossed to the bottom rail, and then, in the best of humor, went slowly along the right rail, toward the foot of the table, so quietly that the sound could scarcely be heard. Two hundred were counted amid a tumult of applause, but, undisturbed by the gladsome outburst, the little spheres continued on their way, and, turning again, crossed to the top rail, along which they strolled leisurely to the accurate guidance of the cue. They rang 250 just as they rounded yet another corner, and at 280, having completed the round of the table, they started afresh on the same journey, making 300 just as they set out. Slosson, meanwhile, wiped his hands with his handkerchief, looked down at his polished boots, up at his brunette friend, and then remarked to the referee, "This is nice game for me." The constant glare of the gas hurt Daly's eyes after a time, and he began to grow so dizzy that he could hardly see the balls, and sat down to recover. He arose shortly afterward, and continued his play, but now the ivories began to show a disposition to scatter, and after making 370, the largest and most brilliant run of his life, his arm failed him, and missing a "kiss caron" in the "croton," the player retired amid an ovation of cheering. Slosson next made but 9 on a good "leave," to which his tired opponent responded with 2 carons. Slosson was evidently nervous, and appeared to have lost his skill and confidence. He changed his cue some time later, however, and the change proved beneficial to his interests, for he gathered the balls on the rail in half a dozen shots, and settled down to one of his long "nurse" runs, on which he always relies to crush the effect of any lead his adversary may gain upon him. The ivories became as obedient to his deft-handed cue as they had previously been to Daly's leadership, and with each succeeding shot the player regained his somewhat shattered "nerve," and the winning of the game seemed only a question of time. At this stage the Chicago boy's hand could keep up the "clock-work" caroming without losing its skill through weariness. On the two hundred and seventy-first shot the ivory sphere unexpectedly left the rail, questions themselves by "freezing," and the player slipped on the "string" shot and retired to gaze steadfastly at his adversary with an ever-watchful eye. The score stood: Slosson 5346, Daly 4726. The latter began at 12, on which Slosson responded with 24, the interest of the spectators having meantime been raised to so high a pitch that, as they silently watched each shot, it seemed as though the great ball were deserted by all save Daly and those directly connected with the game, a burst of applause, now and then, being the only sign, indicating that the spectators were really alive, and not a crowd of wooden figures seated in concentric rows. Finally, the New-York expert had only 89 to go to defeat his Western adversary, and he played "safe" shots with great judgment to guard his score, while Slosson began to grow shaky again. Taking advantage of these opportunities the New-Yorker gathered the balls in his twenty-second inning, and began to "nurse" them with great care, and at length, amid the wildest enthusiasm, closed the game, with a finely-played run, beating Slosson 224 points. Appended is the score:

Daly—0, 0, 7, 0, 68, 2, 0, 0, 7, 8, 3, 370, 2, 0, 1, 9, 12, 22, 0, 2, 2, 26—800.
Slosson—2, 4, 0, 19, 2, 0, 2, 0, 0, 0, 2, 9, 19, 0, 15, 271, 24, 1, 1, 2, 2—376.

Winner's average, 32 11-11; loser's, 17 1-11.
Best runs—Daly, 370, 85, 68; Slosson 271, 24.
Umpires—Mr. R. F. Brown for Daly, Slosson for himself.
Referee—Michael Geary; Marker—G. H. Ellis.
Time of game—1 hour 53 minutes.

The afternoon game between Schaefer and Gallagher opened in a sleepy way, until the former woke up in the third inning, played for position, gained it, and started the ivories on an extensive tour along the rail. He handled his cue with his usual skill, keeping the balls under perfect control, turning the corners with great precision, and affording a pretty exhibition of "nurse" play, until, on the one hundred and fifty-first shot they "broke," and the left rail. A number of well-calculated and finely-executed position shots followed, when the player, slipped up on a "round-the-table" shot, and took his seat, having scored 170. Gallagher, who seemed to regard his defeat as a foregone conclusion from the start, in his seventh inning gathered the balls on the left rail and began to "nurse," when they "froze," at the outset of what promised to be a fine run, and he retired after scoring 32. Indifferent play followed, until Schaefer again gathered the balls, and began to play rapid "nurse" carooms, rolling the spheres along the rail by delicate cue manipulation, which the spectators watched with interest. As the balls journeyed onward, it became evident that another large run was in store for them. Along the left rail, turning the corner nicely, across the bottom rail, up the right rail, and sticking softly as they went, "breaking" at times when the player chose to have them do so, but returning instantly at the beck of his cue, until a run of 178 had been made, and the player retired on a fairly easy "massé," leaving his adversary a good position. The latter took advantage of it, at once, and began some neat "rail" play that yielded him 67 points, the effect of which, however, was instantly nullified by Schaefer's superior "nursing." The latter rolled them backward and forward on the bottom rail for a while, and then separated them, and played on the open table until they "froze," which brought a run of 108 to a close. The player's score stood 491 points, which had been netted in just 57 minutes, including his unoccupied moments, when Gallagher was at the table, being an average of over eight shots to the minute. Schaefer now began to fool with the ivories, while Gallagher put to his credit some well-played runs, one of which aggregated 111 pretty points, when, gathering the spheres in his seventeenth inning, "nursed" them, and continued to fool around the table, until his cue finally ran the game out for him. Schaefer's exhibition was watched by Gen. Grant, Parker, formerly a member of Gen. Grant's staff. The following was the score of the game:

Schaefer—0, 0, 179, 9, 0, 0, 6, 2, 0, 9, 178, 108, 4, 3, 5, 0, 71, 0, 2, 3, 9, 6, 1, 0, 5—600.
Gallagher—2, 0, 7, 5, 0, 5, 32, 0, 7, 5, 67, 34, 6, 2, 3, 111, 9, 2, 1, 2, 0, 15, 4, 5—326.

Winner's average, 24; loser's, 13 7-12.
Best runs—Schaefer, 179, 178, 108; Gallagher, 111, 67.
Umpires—Mr. Newland for Schaefer, Mr. Murphy for Gallagher.
Referee—Michael Geary; Marker, J. H. Ellis.
Time of game—1 hour 44 minutes.

At the matinée to-day Schaefer will play Heiser, while in the evening Sexton will meet Gardner.

ENGLISH TEAMS COMING OVER.

The cricket season of 1879 promises to be marked by three important events—first, the visit of Lord Harris' team, now playing in Australia, on their way home via San Francisco; second, the visit of the noted amateurs, the Lacelles Hall Club of England, in August next, and, finally, the arrival of a team under the control of Daft, who will bring a professional eleven from England in September next. The fine play of the Philadelphia eleven against the Australians, in October last, has aroused quite a desire to try their mettle with the English elevens.

A MYSTERIOUS BABY.

A telegram from the Eighteenth Precinct was received at the Central Office last night. It stated that at 9 o'clock a carriage stopped in front of No. 125 East Sixteenth-street. It contained two ladies and two gentlemen. One of the ladies alighted, placed something on the ground, hurriedly re-entered the carriage, and was driven away rapidly with her companions. Some curious persons went to the spot when the carriage had left, and found a female baby, which physicians, who afterward examined it, said had just been born. It was alive, healthy, and well wrapped up. The little one was taken to Bellevue Hospital.

AMUSEMENTS.

MR. O. B. BOISE'S CONCERT.

Mr. Boise made his first appearance as a composer and conductor last evening at Chickering Hall in an ambitious programme, consisting entirely of his own works. Such an essay on the part of a comparatively unknown musician would seem at first glance presumptuous; but Mr. Boise, having undertaken to bring his compositions before the public, perhaps adopted the wisest course in not subjecting himself to comparisons with other authors on the programme, and selected an able and competent set of artists to interpret his own works exclusively. The programme was as follows:

Symphony—"In Memoriam."(Allegro, Scherzo, Marche Funèbre, Finale.).....Orchestra
"Child's Requiem."..... Vocal Quartet and Organ
Concerto for piano-forte and Orchestra.....
Mme. Nanet e Falk-Auerbach and Orchestra.
Songs. (a. "Good Night." b. "Cradle Song," c. "There is Fallen a Splendid Star.").....
Miss Emily Winant.
"Festival Overture,".....Orchestra and Organ

Of these works, the symphony at first would seem to be the most meritorious, but it is well-nigh impossible to judge of the merits of orchestral compositions at a single hearing. The work was certainly original in its conception, and showed the knowledge of the resources of an orchestra. The "Marche Funèbre" was, indeed, no march at all, and was the least interesting number of the symphony. The concerto for piano was admirably played by Mme. Auerbach. It abounds in technical difficulties, and in less competent hands would have been a failure. Mme. Auerbach was recalled, and played a second time. The "Child's Requiem," for quartet, with organ accompaniment, was a singular composition, and, not being well sung, was not of special interest. Miss Winant, who is the fortunate possessor of a beautiful and genuine contralto voice, gave Mr. Boise's three songs with much taste and expression. The singing was better than the songs. These compositions do not strike the ear pleasantly. They lack something of musical grace, and verge toward the sentimental, and in their form are crude and unsatisfying. They seem like inspirations which the composer has not been able to put into shape. Mr. Boise may congratulate himself on a very successful first venture. The audience was attentive and appreciative last evening, and, considering the somewhat monotonous nature of the programme, the success of the concert was something phenomenal. The orchestra Mr. Boise had was a most excellent one, and contained many of the best of our resident players, who gave a thorough and conscientious performance of the work assigned to them.

GENERAL MENTION.

Mr. D. H. Harkins will play a leading part in Mr. J. S. Mackaye's new drama, soon to be made known at the Fifth-Avenue Theatre.

This is the last week of "H. M. S. Pinafore" at the Lyceum Theatre. The same delightful work has evidently started on a long and prosperous career at the Standard Theatre

To-morrow afternoon, at the Broadway Theatre, "Enoch Arden" will be produced, with Mr. Joseph Wheelock in the title rôle. Mr. Wheelock's abilities, which are rapidly becoming apparent, will have full scope in this character.

The lovers of chamber music will be glad to know that it has been arranged to give a series of four concerts, beginning Thursday evening, Feb. 6, at the Theatre of the Union League Club. Dr. Damrosch and Mr. Max Pinner have the undertaking in charge, which fact is a guarantee of the musical character of the entertainments.

The rehearsal yesterday afternoon of the fourth concert of the Symphony Society, to be given Saturday evening, was attended by a great number of people, who completely filled Steinway Hall in every part, and rendered it necessary to open the doors of the small hall. Herr Wilhelmj was the principal attraction, and excited the greatest enthusiasm. The concert to-morrow evening promises to be one of the very best ever given in this City, and should receive the acknowledgment of a full house.

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

AN ADDRESS BY MR. GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS

—WHAT WE NEED IN THIS COUNTRY.

A large audience was present last evening, in the Anthon Memorial Church, to hear an address by Mr. George William Curtis, on the subject of "Civil Service Reform." After some remarks by Rev. R. Heber Newton and Rev. Samuel Osgood, Mr. Curtis was introduced, and said that when asked to read a paper touching upon both religion and politics he had selected our civil service system as illustrating how religion might be perverted in politics. It was a moral deterioration of political character, arising from the public and not from the Government. This statement was a trenchant appeal to public opinion, for upon the latter depended the necessity of bringing morality and politics nearer together. The principle of civil service was not a new one. Bolingbroke described it 170 years ago as a series of great employments for great numbers. At a later period in our own country, during the Jacksonian campaign, a certain Mr. Samuel Swartout, upon hearing of Jackson's election, hurried to Washington for the purpose of obtaining a position under the Government. Shortly after his arrival he wrote a letter to a friend, containing the following: "The great goers are new men; the old goers are spavined and broken down, and I'm darned if I can carry the weight." "This scramble for plunder," Mr. Curtis continued, "this notorious abuse which England has discarded is now known as the American system. It is a system too contemptable, too incredible for a great nation like our own, but it is vast and thoroughly organized, and ascends in regular gradations until it reaches the Government itself. It is a hierarchy which holds us in a firm grasp, but we have no alternative; our choice lies between a horse lame in two legs, or a horse lame in three. A few days ago we read in the newspapers of a powerful Senator, who represents our own State, challenging the Executive of the nation in respect to certain Custom-house appointments; does not this seem irregular and incredible? There is not a Midshipman in the Navy, nor a Lieutenant in the Army who is not proud of his gold lace and brass buttons; is the civil service less honorable than the Army or Navy? Within three or four days the joint committee on Indian Affairs reported in favor of transferring the management of the Indian Bureau to the Army, and the reason of this is that the honor of Army men was indisputable. We must put the considerations of politics aside all questions of honor—that is tenure of office, honesty is the best policy. The civil service agents are appointed by the party in power, hold a short term of office, and have not the same inducements, as would Army men, to manage the affairs of the department faithfully and honestly. But nevertheless, if a Midshipman must be faithful to his trust, why not a clerk in the Post Office as well?

Office-holders say, "We must oppose the election of so and so, for it will take the bread out of our mouths," thus creating a selfish interest in politics. Young men, born with the generous ambition of our race, find that an entrance into political life is something which must be bought. Why is it, says the voter that the best men refrain from taking active part in politics; no wonder that the civil service should be impure, because the best men hold aloof. That, however, is not the reason; it is because political parties set a price which honorable men will not pay. The system which excludes them from political affairs is a bad and impure struggle, and an unscrupulous and successful party is often allowed to force its way into the Capitol. Gen. Butler, during the recent campaign in Massachusetts, said in his appeal to the people of that State—in the interest of economy, purity, honesty, and all the cardinal virtues—that with a swarm of hungry office-seekers it was impossible to abolish offices and stop leaks; it was necessary rather to create offices and make leaks."

Speaking of the New-York Custom-house, Mr. Curtis said that the late Collector had made a statement to the effect that under his three predecessors more than one-fourth of the employes were removed every year. So immense a percentage would seem to indicate dishonesty or—what was more likely—dismissal without reason. It was no reply to say that the revenues were collected with great cheapness, for they would not be less cheaply collected under another system. A civil service was based upon politics, and a reform of the system would be the signal for a storm of hostility. It seemed strange, Mr. Curtis thought, that a nation which had shown itself capable of paying one-third of a great debt should be so wholly incapable of controlling its servants. Public offices were public trusts, not personal perquisites. "America means fair play for all," said Mr. Curtis, "and to quote the familiar saying at the military and naval academies, 'Let the best boy win.'" In conclusion, Mr. Curtis said: "Our fathers were fierce partisans, but there were some things they would not do; they could take an interest in politics without expecting to be paid for it. To-day the bugle of reform calls us to renew the battle we have lost, and to uphold the honor of our fathers."

GEN. SHERMAN'S SOUTHERN TRIP.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 30.—Gen. Sherman today reviewed the troops at McPherson Barracks, and visited the various battle-fields around Atlanta. He expressed great gratification at the prosperity of Atlanta. He will leave here at 2 P. M. to-morrow for Savannah.

THE MUTUAL LIFE'S PLAN.

IS THE SYSTEM OF REBATE LEGAL?

A STRONGLY ADVERSE OPINION FROM EX-GOV. HUBBARD, OF CONNECTICUT—POLICIES ISSUED UNDER THE NEW PLAN A BREACH OF TRUST—PROF. GRAY SUSTAINED.

BOSTON, Jan. 30.—A very strong and plainly-worded opinion of the rebate plan of the officers of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, of New-York, to catch new members at the expense of the old, has been obtained from ex-Gov. Richard D. Hubbard, of Hartford, Conn., long recognized as the leader of the Connecticut Bar, whose opinion, as one eminent lawyer of that State puts it, "no responsible lawyer would dare to combat." Gov. Hubbard goes further than Prof. Gray in his opinion, the first published, and declares that every policy issued under the new plan is a breach of trust by the managers, and a fraud on the rights of every new policyholder. In his judgment the courts would be obliged, on proper proceedings brought, to order every such new policy canceled, and to enjoin the company from making any new contract on similar terms and conditions. The opinion, as was that from Prof. Gray, which has had the indorsement of the Attorney-Generals of New-England, was obtained by ex-Alderman John T. Clark, of this city. The fu l text is below:

HARTFORD, Jan. 21, 1879.

Hon. John T. Clark, Boston, Mass.:

DEAR SIR: By the new plan of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New-York, 30 per cent. is deducted for the first two years of each risk from the regular and tabular rates of premium. The company acknowledges the receipt of the amount withheld as cash actually paid by the assured, and credits him accordingly, though not one cent of it is paid by him or received by the company, and in addition to this pays the agent out of the partial amount received full commissions on the amount withheld. The least that can be said of such a proceeding is that it is a written falsehood, and known to be such by both parties to the transaction. What results from this fiction as between old and new members of the company? Obviously this: The new members are admitted by the managers, by force of this false receipt, into the same fellowship of present assets and future earnings as if they had actually and honestly paid their full premiums in cash. In other words, every $70 paid, under this system of rebate, by every new member, is forced into a fraudulent relation with every $100 paid by every old member. The logic of the argument is the logic of arithmetic. What apology can be offered for such a flagrant discrimination between old and new policyholders?

It is urged by the managers that the deficit of the premium due by regular rates from the new member, is paid for him by the company out of a fund not belonging to the old members, but resulting from lapsed and purchased policies. But to whom does this fund belong? Nominally to the company, of course, and that is the only answer; but an aggregation of policy-holders. Who, then, are the real owners of the fund? I answer, every asset of the company of every name and description belongs to the policyholders as an equitable estate in proportion to their relative contributions. Whether its assets are the result of profit on insurance as such, or of income on investments derived from accumulations, or from the company should venture on one, or of gains on forfeited or purchased policies, in every such case and in every other like case the policy-holders suffer the loss, if any there be, take the profits, if any there be, and are equitable tenants in common, in the ratio above stated, of all resulting assets, as certainly and indefeasibly so as if they were the holders of the legal estate. This is common law, common honesty, and common law all in one. If I am right in the premises, this new plan of the managers, with all its duplicities is nothing in the world but a scheme to make the old policy-holders insure the new out of moneys belonging to the old.

If the company has an excess of surplus, very well. The managers have no right, for that reason, to waste it in rebates, bounties, or gratuities on any one policy-holder or any class of policy-holders. They are bound to divide it, or to apportion it, rather, to all the members according to their respective contributions, without favor or discrimination. This fact once established, the principle just as well apply the surplus to the premiums of a selected class of old policy-holders, requiring all others to pay in full, as to apply it to the premiums of the new members, requiring the old to pay in full. Suppose the company had attempted to introduce the same discrimination between different classes of old policy-holders as they are now attempting to enforce between old and new. It would be a self-evident fraud, and would find a swift correction in the courts. But in the case in hand the fraud is still more palpable than in the case supposed, for in the case supposed the favored class would have some rights in the premises created during their membership; but in the case in hand none at all, not even a pretense. If this company finds itself the wet of "new blood," the managers cannot legally supply that want by taking the old policy-holders, and it makes no difference where they tap them, whether at the jugular or at the extremities, at the arteries or the veins, for all the assets of the old corporation are the property of each, what source derived, belong to the policy-holders in proportion to their relative equities. To all this I know of but one possible answer, and this the managers have never ventured openly to suggest, viz., that the drafts given by the new policy-holders for the deficit of the first two years' premium are to be set off against their rights to subsequent dividends. But this is a pretense, for nothing in the world but a false pretense and a man-trap for new recruits. I add, if this deficit is to be made up to the company in the manner last supposed, then the rebate stripped of its terrorities, is only a payment of dividends in advance. I deny, then, the right of the managers of this company or of any other to pay dividends in advance. I deny, next, their right to pay dividends, even when earned and equitably due, to any one member or class of members by partiality or preference—but last of all and least of all to an incoming member, a mere neopnyte, whose premium has not only not earned a single cent to pay dividends with, but has not even reached the company, and if it had, is less in its reduced amount than the reserve required by law for the support of the risk.

It is true the managers of the company have authority under the charter to "fix and determine the rates of premium." But they are also required by the charter to credit each member "with an equitable share of the profits of the company." Their right to fix and determine rates is, therefore, subject to this limitation by the very letter of the bond. The proposed change of rates violates in my judgment the radical rights of every old policyholder, by trampling down that fundamental principle of law and common honesty by which, in the administration of trusts, the measure of equity is made the measure of right. The Legislature of the State of New-York has not undertaken. I take pleasure in believing, to confer upon the managers of the company the prerogative of violating the rights of property, nor of making one man pay another man's debt. If it had undertaken to do so, I should have little need to discuss the value of such a prerogative, for no sensible man could be found to take, after such a discovery, a policy in such a company. I am, therefore, of opinion that every poly issued under the new plan is a breach of trust by the managers and a fraud on the rights of every old policyholder. In my judgment the courts would be obliged on proper proceedings brought, to order every such new policy canceled, and to enjoin the company from making any new contract on similar terms and conditions. R. D. HUBBARD.

The committee of the Trustees, of which ex-Gov. Rice, of this State, is Chairman, appointed to consider the protests of the old policy-holders, are receiving some strong statements, and a satisfactory report to the meeting in February is confidently expected.

BOSTON'S SUGAR-DEALERS.

RESOLUTIONS IN REGARD TO DUTIES TO BE SENT TO WASHINGTON.

BOSTON, Jan. 30.—At a full meeting of sugar importers and refiners here to-day resolutions were passed unanimously that the duties on sugar should be assessed by the graduated scale of specific rates, adjusted as nearly as possible to the ad valorem principle, and that this could be done by the use of the polariscope better than in any other way —its use in buying and selling in all civilized countries proving that it was less complicated and more trustworthy than any other method of determining the actual value of sugar. It was further resolved that the duties ought to be so regulated and assessed as to encourage the largest possible supplies of sugar from all places of production, and not in any way made so as to favor one place more than another, and that the amount of revenue now derived from the lower grades of sugar could not be increased without injustice and injury to the consumers, as it was now too high in proportion to high grades. These resolutions are to be sent at once to Washington, with the signatures in approval of a large number of Boston importers, refiners, and dealers, representing the largest and most influential houses.

BISHOP WILMER'S SUCCESSOR.

NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 30.—The Episcopal Council of this diocese has decided, by a vote of both the clergy and laity, to select Right Rev. J. H. Winsfield, now Missionary Bishop of Northern California, to occupy the position made vacant by the death of Bishop Wilmer.

OBITUARY NOTES.

Michael Sullivant, a man of national reputation as one of the largest cultivators of land ever known, died suddenly on Wednesday, while sitting in a chair in the sabin of the steamer Guthrie, on his way from Evansville, Ind., to Louisville, Ky. At one time Mr. Sullivant possessed 80,000 acres of land in Illinois. In 1872 he had under cultivation 18,000 acres of corn, with a proportionate acreage of oats and hay.

A telegram has been received at Franklin, N. H., from Bishop McQuade, of New-York, now in Italy, announcing the death of Dr. Timothy Kenrick in this country, yesterday, of typhus fever. Dr. Kenrick was formerly Assistant Surgeon at Barlow Asylum for the Insane at Flushing, N. Y., but for the past two years he was connected with the Asylum for the Insane at Utica, N. Y., and at the time of his death was traveling with a patient of the latter institution.

CONSIDERING VIRGINIA'S DEBT.

BEGINNING OF THE CONFERENCE OF THE COMMITTEES.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 30.—At 4 o'clock the Joint Committees on Finance met, after a brief morning session. The remaining space in the Council Chamber was occupied by members of the General Assembly and others interested in State debt matters; but up to 6:30 P. M. only two of the conferees on the part of the creditors, Messrs. McCulloch and Ward, had appeared. Mr. Barbour, Chairman of the House Finance Committee, stated that he understood that this public conference was not agreeable to the gentlemen who had come here to endeavor to settle the debt question, and he therefore moved that a sub-committee be appointed to meet the bondholders' representatives in private, and, after conferring with them, to report to the joint committee. This was agreed to, and the meeting adjourned, subject to the call of the Chairman.

To-night the sub-committee had a three hours' conference with the representatives of the creditors. There was a general interchange of views on the subject matter, in the course of which the impecuniosity of the people and the condition of the State's finances were fully discussed. No proposition looking to a plan of settlement was advanced. All seemed anxious to further the end in view, although some members of the committee rated the State's ability to pay any fixed rate of interest at a very low figure. Papers and documents were submitted to the creditors and taken under consideration in order that they might act understandingly. It appeared that some of the bondholders' representatives are not empowered to conclude any definite arrangement without advising with their principals.

THE RENO INVESTIGATION.

TWO MORE WITNESSES IN FAVOR OF THE ACCUSED OFFICER.

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—Lieut. C. C. De Rudio was recalled at the Reno investigation this forenoon, and gave some additional testimony in relation to his seeing Custer while the fight was in progress. The witness, who was cut off at the time Reno's retreat was making, saw Custer again about 1,000 yards away, on a hill, swinging his hat, and heard him cheer lustily. This was about three minutes before the retreat began. He expected every minute to see Custer come to their aid, but instead of this he suddenly disappeared. Had Custer been disposed to help Reno, he could have done so.

The next witness was Sergt. Daveson, who said that about an hour after reaching the hill, on the retreat, he heard heavy firing, and, calling Reno's attention to it, said: "I guess that is Custer firing down there;" Reno listened and said: "I guess that's so;" it was about two hours later that Capt. Weir moved forward with his company to try, he supposed, to open communication with Custer. The witness heard Custer's order to Reno before the charge was made, and it was this: "The scouts report that the Indian village is about two miles ahead and moving; you will take your three companies, cross over and drive everything before you. Capt. Benteen is to your left and has the same instructions." The witness said he had never seen any exhibition of cowardice on the part of Reno.

Sergt. Culbertson was next examined.

NAVY AND ARMY MATTERS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The Tallapoosa, from Norfolk, which has been for several days ice-bound in the river below, arrived at the Navy-yard here today.

Major A. H. Nickerson, Assistant Adjutant General, has been relieved from duty in the Department of the Columbia, and ordered to report in person to the Adjutant-General of the Army for duty in his office. Assistant Surgeon U. S. Tremaine has been ordered to this city to give certain information to the Committee on Military Affairs of the United States Senate.

GOING HOME FOR INSTRUCTIONS.

HAVANA, Jan. 30.—Captain-General Martinez Campos will embark for Spain on Feb. 5 for the purpose of consulting with the home Government. He will, it is said, return soon.

"Its Victims"

Are those who carelessly, and without thinking of the consequences, continue at their daily work or business, constantly hacking, coughing, and spitting, pain in the left side, night-sweats and restless nights, supposing all the time they can wear it out. But when the family physician is called in, and pronounces to that husband, wife, sister or daughter, that to be treated of all diseases, Consumption, then it occurs to the patient, "How much better it would have been if I had taken this in time." Parents, be on your guard, and always have in the house, ready for use, that popular remedy known as HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR, an article which was used for many years in the private practice of Dr. Hale, a celebrated physician in Europe, for all Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Difficult Breathing, and all Affections of the Throat, Bronchial Tubes, and Lungs, leading to Consumption. It is now prepared according to the original recipe by C. N. CRITTENTON, No. 7 6th-av., who is also the sole proprietor. It is sold by all druggists at 50 cents and $1 per bottle. Great saving to buy the large size.

PISO'S TOOTHACHE DROPS cure in one minute.—Advertisement.

A Trusty Cure for Colds.
JANE'S EXPECTORANT.
—Advertisement.

Phillips' Palatable Cod Liver-oil,
In combination with PHOSPHO-NUTRITINE, is a matchless remedy for Emaciation, Debility, and Consumption. All druggists. Depot, No. 2 Platt-st.

For Relieving Pain, both Internal and External, use BROWN'S HOUSE

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

SALES AT THE STOCK EXCHANGE—JAN. 30.

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—10:15 A. M.

U. S. 4½s R. '91. | U. S. 4½s R. '91. | U. S. 5s '81, R.
$10,000..... 106 | $10,000..b.c.106 | $5,000..... 105

FIRST BOARD—10:30 A. M.

A. C. R. & N. 1st.	Un. Pac. 1st.	Wells-Fargo Ex.
$1,000..... 71½	1,000..... 107⅝	100..... 99
C., B. & Q. 8s.	Un. Pac. 7s, l. g.	Canton.
1,000..... 110⅛	10,000..... 111¼	100..... 80¾
K. & D. M. 1st.	Erie 2d.	Homestake M. Co.
2,000..... 88	2,000..b.c.104¾	200..b.c. 25⅝
R. J. C. 1st.con.ss.	C., C., C. & I. con.	Western Union.
15,000..b.c. 81⅞	1,000..... 98¾	100..... b.c.102⅞
N. J. C. conv. ss.	4,000..... 99⅞	1500..... 102¾
1,000..... 81⅛	Pacific of Mo. 2d.	1600..... 102⅝
10,000..... 81¼	1,000..... 104⅞	100..b.r.c.102⅝
N. J. C. Adjm't.	4,000..... 104¾	N. Y. C. & H.
500..... 94½	Southern Pac. 1st.	200..b.c.117
6,000..... 94⅝	2,000..... 99⅝	Erie Railway.
M. & St. P. o. s. f.	Kan. Pac. Den. Div.	4400..b.c. 26⅜
15,000..... 103⅛	Trust Rec.	1500..... 26½
M. & St. P. 1. & D.c.	10,000..... 81	St. L. & K. S.
5,000..... 102¼	8,000..... 80⅞	900..b.c. 73⅜
M. & St. P. Sa. 1st.	5,000..s3. 80⅞	Illinois Central.
14,000..... 125⅜	10,000..s3. 80⅞	240..b.c. 98¾
Mor. & Es. 7s, 71.	15,000..b.c. 81	Chi. & N. W.
3,000..... 105	C., C. & I. C. 1st.	200..b.c.102⅝
Mor. & Es. 2d.	7s. '95.	Chi. & N. W. pf.
1,000..... 110½	100..... 99⅝	300..b.c.c. 87½
L. & W. B. con.ss.	C., C. & I.	300..b.c.c. 87⅜
10,000..b.c. 45¼	1,000..... 100	C., C. & I.
N. W. C. C. G.	A. & T. H. inc.	300..b.c. 47⅜
3,000..... 106⅞	A. & T. H. inc.	Central of N. J.
Pacific of Mo. 1st.	1,000..... 44	100..b.c. 75¼
3,000..... 108⅝	Gl. W. 1st, 8's cp.	C., M. & St. P.
D. & H. R. '91.ex.	3,000..... 109⅞	600..... b.c. 44⅞
1,000..... 100	Gl. W. 2d 8's cp.	1500..... 44¾
D. & H. C. 7s, '94.	5,000..... 86⅞	C., M. & St. P. pf.
5,000..... 101⅞	4,000..... 86¼	300..b.c. 84¾
D. & H. R. '84.	T. & W. 2d, ex cp.	300..b.c. 84½
6,000..... 98¾	10,000..... 86¼	Wabash.
D. & R. G. 1st.	Marietta & C. 1st.	100..b.c.s3. 23⅝
5,000..... 92⅝	1,000..... 87⅞	600..b.c.s3. 23¾
10,000..... 92¾	C. & S. 1st. 6's by	Del., L. & West.
E. & St. Jo. 8s, con.	Lake Shore.	700..b.c. 52¼
18,000..... 107⅜	5,000..... 97	Chi. Bur. & Q.
Can. So. 1st 6's.	C. P. 1st. S. J. Br.	100..b.c.117¾
$7,000..... 78¾	4,000..... 98⅜	Canada Southern.
10,000..... 78⅝	Central Nat. Bank.	100..b.c. 53¼
Mich. Cen. 8s, 7.	1,000..... 97¾	100..b.c. 53⅜
1,000..... 112½	Am. Ex. Bank.	St. L. K. C. & N.
N. Y. Ele. 1st.	25..... 105	200..b.c. 84¾
14,000..... 106⅛	Bank of Republic.	200..b.c. 84¾
Ohio & Miss. 2d.	22..... 90	St. L. K. C. & N. pf.
6,000..... 85	St. Nicholas Bank.	100..b.c. 79
Den. Pac. 1st 6's.	7..... 79	100..... 79¼
2,000..... 107¾	American Ex.	St. L. & Pac. Tel.
D. & S. 1st. 6's by	20..... 45	900..b.c. 38½
200..b.c. 97¾	New-Jersey So.	50..... 38⅝
5,000..... 91¾	50..... 23¾

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—1:30 P. M.

U. S. 5s, '81, R.	U. S. 6s R. '81.	U. S. 5-20 C. '67.
$5,000..... 105⅛	100,000..... 106⅜	5,000..... 102
U. S. 5s C., '81.	10,000..s3. 106⅜	16,000..... 102
30,000..... 106¾

SECOND BOARD—1 P. M.

N. J. C. Adjm't.	Amer. Ex. Bank.	Western Union.
$2,000..... 94½	5..... 107	400..b.c. 101⅜
5,000..... 94¼	American Express.	200..... 101⅝
Chi. & Alt. 1st.	12..... 49	200..... 101⅞
2,000..... 116½	U. S. Express.	Central of N. J.
Chi. & Alt. s. f.	200..... 49⅛	400..b.c. 44⅜
3,000..... 103⅞	200..b.c. 49⅜	200..b.c. 44⅝
C. B. & Q. 8s.	At. & Pac. Tel.	500..... 45
1,000..... 131	100..... 34	Chi. & R. I.
Chi. Bur. & Q. 7s.	3,000..... 111	200..b.c.127⅝
5,000..... 117	200..b.c. 25⅜	100..... 127¾
M. & St. P. 1st, 7's.	Pull. Pal. Car.	C. M. & St. P.
5,000..... 102¾	200..... 81	200..b.c. 44⅜
M. & St. P. C. & M.	Erie Railway.	200..b.c. 44⅝
1,000..... 110¾	1700..b.c. 26⅜	1750..... 44½
D. & H. R. '94.	Erie Railway pf.	200..... 42¾
2,000..... 107⅜	200..b.c. 50	100..b.s. 43¼
D. & H. R. '91.	100..... 49⅝	800..... 43⅝
7,000..... 99	100..b.10. 49⅝	500..b.c. 43¾
D. & R. G. 1st.	L. S. & M. S.	Chicago & Alton.
10,000..... 92¾	8:0..b.c.s3. 73⅞	100..b.c. 87½
10,000..... 92¾	300..b.c.s3. 74	Wabash.
5,000..... 92¾	300..s3. 73⅞	100..b.c. 23¾
Michigan Cen.	Michigan Central.	Ohio & Miss. pf.
1,000..... 117	100..... 89	100..... 50
M., K. & T. 2d.	100..b.c. 89	Fort Wayne.
2,000..... 116	50..b.c. 66¾	100..... 89
L. S. 2d con. reg.	Chi. & N. W.	Homestake M. Co.
4,000..... 106¼	100..... 67	100..b.c. 25⅜
L. S. 2d con. reg.	Chi. & N. W.	N. Y. Ele. 1st.
2,000..... 108⅜	300..... 66⅞	200..b.c. 88
Pacific of Mo. 1st.	200..b.c. 66⅞	Canada Southern.
4,000..... 108⅜	500..... 65⅞	50..b.c. 56¾
3,000..... 108¾	Chi. & N. W. pf.	S. L. I. M. & S.
K. P. 1st's, D. 10's.	200..... 87½	100..b.s.30. 12½
3,000..... 81⅞	600..... 87¾	100..b.s.60. 12½
3,000..... 81¾	300..... 87⅞	M. K. & T.
K. P. Pac. Inc. 6's.	C., C. & I.	400..b.c. 6½
5,000..... 15	100..b.c. 47⅛	Ohio & Miss.
T. & W. con. conv.	100..b.c. 47¾	200..b.c. 10
1st consoln.	Han. & St. Jo. pf.	300..b.c. 10
3,000..... 73½	200..b.c. 33¾	Homestake M. Co.

SALES FROM 2:30 TO 3 P. M.

Pacific of Mo. 1st.	Michigan Central.	Ohio & Miss. pf.
$4,000..... 108⅜	100..... 89⅛	100..... 50
3,000..... 108⅜	300..... 89	Fort Wayne.
C. & S. 1st. g'd 5s.	100..... 89⅛	100..... 89
Lake Shore.	100..... 88½	North-west pf.
1,000..... 97¼	100..... 87	500..... 87¼
Cen. Pac. S. J. Br.	100..... 87⅜	500..... 87⅝
1,000..... 98½	100..... 87⅝	200..... 87⅞
Chi. & Alt. 1st.	1100..... 88½	300..... 87⅞
2,000..... 116½	300..... 88⅝	1500..... 88¼
K. P. 7s, D. 10's with coup. cer.	300..... 87½	1500..... 88¾
$2,000..... 81½	1,000..... 100	300..... 88⅞
M., K. & T., r. ss.	300..... 87⅞	100..... 89
10,000..... 81	100..... 87⅝	400..... 89⅛
Central Nat. Bank.	200..... 87½	200..... 89⅜
10..... 91	Lake Shore.	100..... 89½
American Ex.	100..b.s. 74	200..... 89⅝
12..... 49	100..... 73⅞	300..... 89⅝
25..... 48¾	1500..... 73⅝	300..... 89⅝
U. S. Express.	700..... 73¾	1400..... 85
200..... 49½	1400..... 73¾	100..... 85¼
Adams Express.	1300..... 73¾	100..... 85⅜
58..... 100	1400..... 73⅝	100..... 85⅝
Delaware & Hud.	1000..... 73⅝	100..... 85⅞
100..... 42⅜	600..... 72⅞	300..... 84¾
100..... 42⅝	300..... 73	200..... 84⅞
100..... 41⅞	2675..... 72⅝	300..... 84¾
Canton.	300..... 73	300..... 84¾
100..... 50	3600..b.s. 73	300..... 85
Pull. Pal. Car.	1500..... 72⅞	1100..... 85⅛
200..... 81	900..... 72⅞	1100..... 85¼
Homestake M. Co.	300..... 72¾	100..b.s. 23⅜
100..... 25⅝	100..... 72⅝	600..... 23¾
A. & F. Tel.	200..... 72⅝	200..... 23⅝
200..... 38¾	500..... 72¾	100..... 23¾
200..... 38⅝	100..... 72⅝	100..... 23⅝
200..... 38⅜	1500..... 72⅝	100..... 23¾
200..... 38	500..... 72⅞	100..... 23⅝
500..b.30. 38⅛	700..... 72	200..... 23¾
Pacific Mail.	200..... 72⅛	200..... 23⅝
800..... 12⅝	1200..... 72¾	400..... 23¾
500..... 12⅜	1100..... 72⅜	400..... 23⅝
Illinois Central.	300..... 72⅝	200..... 23¾
200..... 88	500..... 72⅜	200..... 23⅝
100..... 88¼	1275..... 72	400..... 23¾
100..... 87⅞	1200..... 71⅞	400..... 23⅝
Western Union.	Pittsburg.	100..... 23¾
800..... 101¾	100..... 94	200..... 23⅝
200..... 101⅞	C., C. & I. C.	Han. & St. Jo. pf.
200..... 101⅝	100..... 84½	100..... 39
110..... 101⅞	North-west.	300..... 38¾
200..... 101⅝	100..... 84⅝	200..... 38⅞
200..... 101⅞	North-west.	300..... 38¾
200..... 101⅝	200..... 84⅝	500..... 38⅞
200..... 101⅞	100..... 84⅜	Kansas & Texas.
200..... 101⅝	100..... 84⅝	100..... 6¾
200..... 101⅞	500..... 84⅜	A. & T. H.
200..... 101⅝	500..... 84⅝	100..... 23
200..... 101⅞	500..... 84⅜	200..... 23¼
100..... 101⅝	500..... 84⅝	New-Jersey So.
200..... 101⅞	500..... 84⅜	100..... 23⅜
100..s10.100⅜	500..... 84⅝	St. Paul.
100..... 100⅞	200..... 84⅜	200..... 44¾
100..... 100⅝	200..... 84⅝	200..... 44¾
100..... 100⅞	200..... 84⅜	100..... 44¾
100..... 100⅝	200..... 84⅝	100

THE REAL ESTATE MARKET.

The following business was transacted at the Exchange yesterday, Thursday, Jan. 30:

E. H. Ludlow & Co., by order of the Executors, sold the three-story brick building, with lot 18.9 by 98.9, No. 13 West 35th-st., north side, 237.6 feet west of 5th-av., for $16,900, to Leonard J. Carpenter.

Louis Mesier, foreclosure sale, John M. Barbour, Esq., Referee, sold the five-story brick building, with lot 37.9 by 13.8 by 37.2 by 16, Nos. 118 and 120 Elizabeth-st., east side, 49 feet south of Broome-st., for $2,500, F. P. J. Goddard and others, as Trustee and plaintiffs.

Woodward & Lewis, foreclosure sale, Thomas F. Wentworth, Esq., Referee, sold two three-story brick dwellings, with lots, together in size 33.4 by 95.9 by 30.8 by 91, Nos. 213 and 215 East 27th-st., north side, 180 feet east of 3d-av., for $11,800.

The foreclosure sale by E. F. Raymond of the house, with lot, No. 733 Broadway, north of Waverley-place, was adjourned to Feb. 6.

RECORDED REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

NEW-YORK.

Wednesday, Jan. 29.

8th-av., n. w. corner of 89th-st., 25.8x100; Charles Osmond and wife to Samuel Lockwood. nom.

3d-av., n. e. corner of 93d-st., 75x201.5 to 94th-st.; Jacob Michelski to Jacob L. Maschke. $115,500

9th-st., n. s., 125 ft. w. of 1st-av., 25x92.3; Phillip J. Kopp and wife to John Korwahlka. 250

2d-st., n. s., 242.9 ft. e. of 8th-av., 19.3x98.9; Richard Lappin and wife to James Horler. 8,145

40th-st., s. w. corner of 1st-av., 75x148.1½; Solomon Sellmann and wife to Henriette Boukofsky. nom.

6th-av., n. w. corner of 135th-st., 87.4x99.11; Joseph Zweifel to Richard Arnold and others. 12,500

13th-st., n. s., 133.6 ft. e. of 3d-av., 16.6x103.3; John E. Underwood and wife to William J. Underwood. nom.

13th-st., n. s., 95 ft. w. of Avenue B, 25x103.3; Johann Otterstedt and wife to Christian Otterstedt. 3,000

81st-st., s. s., 174.4 ft. w. of 1st-av., 8 in.x102.2; John H. Deane and wife to John McLaughlin. 125

52d-st., s. s., 282.11 ft. w. of 9th-av., 17.11x100.5; William H. Adams and wife to Alfred Lane and others. nom.

72d-st., n. s., 210 ft. w. of 3d-av., 40x102.2; Carrie T. Dryfoos and husband to Louis Dryfoos. 3,200

Grove-st., s. s. corner of Bedford-av., 24.1x100; William B. Cocks and others to David B. Cocks. 14,000

56th-st., s. s., 78 ft. e. of Lexington-av., 22x100.5; Frank Simon to Madelaine Damuth. 10,600

125th-st., n. s., 100 ft. w. of 9th-av., 82x178x irregular; H. Brewster, Referee, to Mary A. Woodcock. 4,000

29th-st., s. s., and 7th-av., 25x98.9; D. C. Graham, Referee, to William F. Keyt. 3,000

80th-st., n. s., 166.8 ft. w. of 3d-av., 16.8x100; Hattie Jones, Referee, to Ira E. Doying. 2,000

Ludlow-st., Nos. 41 and 43; Simon Poons and wife to Philip Bohnet. nom.

Hish Bridge-av., n. s., 146.6 e. of King's Bridge road, 50x100; also, 175th-st., 150 ft. w. of 11th-av., 100x211.4x irregular; also, 10 lots w. of Kings Bridge road; David Barry to William McDonald. nom

47th-st., s. s., 300 ft. w. of 8th-av., 30.5x85; Theron G. Strong to Christopher Rosenberg. 16,000

Fordham-av., Lot No. 50, 25x137; William W. Brackett, Referee, to Ferdinand Engelsohlm. 4,450

2d-av., e. s., 20 ft. s. of 124th-st., 20x80; W. H. Clapp, Referee, to Frederick D. Tappen and others, Executors. 8,700

LEASE RECORDED.

Vesey-st., Nos. 82 and 84, 3 years; Albert L. David to Elijah C. Schanck. $3,600

MORTGAGES RECORDED.

Donohue, Thomas, to Mary Darby; s. s. 100th-st., w. of 9th-av., 1 year. $1,000

Glisey, Julius and wife, to Frederick Rosenstein; n. s. 80th-st., w. of 1st-av., 4 months. 4,000

Glisey, Julius and wife, to Samuel J. Constant; n. s. 81st-st., 100 ft. w. of 1st-av., 3 months. 4,500

Haser, John, and wife to Edward Purcell and another, n. w. corner of 9th-av. and 57th-st., 3 months. 2,500

Hunt, Henry G., and wife to George Ehret; s. s. 93d-st., w. of 3d-av., 1 year. 3,500

Kip, Lawrence, and wife to Eliza L. Parsons; s. w. corner of 40th-st. and 5th-av., 3 years. 20,000

Lewis, Phebe T., and husband to Charles F. Hunter, President, &c.; n. e. corner of Hudson and Leroy sts., 5 years. 40,000

Mooney, Christopher, to Helenah Kowanhoven; s. s. 47th-st., w. of 8th-av., 1 year. 7,500

Peterson, Peter, and wife to Herman Watjen and another; n. e. corner of 9th-av. and 40th-st., 3 years. 8,000

Stickel, Christopher F., to August C. Hassey; No. 109 Allen-st., 1 year. 700

ASSIGNMENTS OF MORTGAGES.

Chamberlain, James F., and another, Executors, &c., to Frances A. Fanning. nom. $3,500

Davies, J. Manafield, and another, to Patrick Daly. 1,500

Decker, Paul G., to Louise M. Beckman. 700

Livingston, Mary L., to the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company. 1,018

Pardee, Elizabeth, to Julia A. Clark. 5,000

Tappen, J. Nelson, Chamberlain, &c., to W. G. Hunt. 6,210

Willett, James O., to Caroline G. Bishop. 7,600

Wing, Louise F. H., Administratrix, &c., to Eva Muller. nom.

CITY REAL ESTATE.

PACIFIC HOTEL AND FURNITURE FOR sale at a bargain, by order of the Executors, to close the estate of the late John Patten, comprising Nos. 170, 172, and 174 (about 80 feet front) Greenwich-st., this City. Fully and completely furnished. Now is and has been for many years in successful operation; well and favorably known as a first-class, first-floor business hotel. For further information apply to HOMER MORGAN, No. 2 Pine-st., or E. H. LUDLOW & CO., No. 3 Pine-st.

FOR SALE—AN ASSORTMENT OF HOUSES, of gold prices, from $3,500 to $15,000. Situate on 82d, 81st, 80th and 79th streets, and Columbus, 79th and 80th sts. and 1st-av.; desirable as an investment. Call and see them. Office, corner 79th-st. and 1st-av.

A LOT ON 57TH-AV., 25X140, WITH RIGHT of alley, fronting the Park, near 57th-st.; price, $20,000. Also, No. 627 West 57th-st.; price, $5,000. For sale by order of Executors to close an estate. HOMER MORGAN, No. 2 Pine-st.

FOR SALE—ON WEST 57TH-ST., NEAR 8TH-av., an elegant four-story brown-stone house; cabinet finish and all modern improvements. Built expressly for the owner. Apply at No. 160 Fulton-st., Room 10.

NO. 210 EAST 16TH-ST., NEAR STUYVESANT PARK—Well located, fine, medium-size dwelling; bargain. Permits from C. K. STEVENSON, Jr., Offices, 4 Pine, 35 East 17th-st., and 661 5th-av.

HARLEM—RAPID TRANSIT.

Houses, stores, and floors, to let and for sale. PORTER & CO., No. 173 East 125th-st.

REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION.

BERNARD SMITH, AUCTIONEER, NO. 5 Pine-st., will on TUESDAY, Feb. 11, 1879, at 12 o'clock, at Exchange Sales-room, No. 111 Broadway, by order of the Supreme Court, in partition, under the direction of Henry E. Pugh, Esq., Referee, the five-story brick warehouses, Nos. 19 and 21 Bridge, No. 4 Stone, and No. 272 Water-sts.; and the five-story brick house, No. 128 East 126th-st.

Sales. COUDERT BROTHERS, Plaintiff's Attorneys, Nos. 68 and 70 William-st.

CITY HOUSES TO LET.

FLATS TO LET—CORNER 55TH-ST. AND 8TH-av., in complete order; steam, modern conveniences, bath-room; have every convenience. Apply to FLOYD CLARKSON, No. 60 Wall-st., or to the janitor, No. 301 West 55th-st.

AN ELEGANT CORNER FIRST FLAT—Eight rooms; all improvements; 71st-st. and 3d-av.; rent reasonable. L. J. CARPENTER, No. 26 3d-av. (Bible House.)

TO LET FROM FEB. 1—A NUMBER OF three-story brick houses in West 51st-st., near 6th-av.; all improvements; rent, $750. For full particulars apply to J. CORBIT, No. 253 9th-av.

TO LET—A FIRST FLOOR AND BASEMENT, 18x75 rooms, boiler, range, gas, &c., No. 351 West 25th-st.; rent, $28. Apply to J. CORBIT, No. 253 9th-av.

STORES, &C., TO LET.

FOR LET FROM FEB. 1—STORE AND BASEMENT, No. 1,258 Broadway, corner 32d-st. Apply to JOHN R. MORRIS, City Treasurer.

OFFICES TO LET IN THE TIMES BUILDING. APPLY TO GEORGE JONES, TIMES OFFICE.

TO LET—WITH OR WITHOUT STEAM-POWER in the new iron-front building, Nos. 108, 110, 112, and 114 Wooster-st., the second floor, 50x50; the fifth floor, 100x100; one store, 100x100, or two stores, 50x100, and basements; all elevators, steam, hot-and-cold water, and gas throughout; will be rented very low. Inquire of BRUNN & MOORE, Nos. 41 and 43 West 14th-st.

COUNTRY REAL ESTATE.

A BEAUTIFUL COUNTRY RESIDENCE AT TARRYTOWN.—Five acres land in lawn and garden, large and good frame house, and stable. This place is very eligibly located, and is surrounded by costly and elegant residences. For sale at $15,000—less than half its cost. Also, a residence at Kingsville, Staten Island; 8¾ acres land, frame house, and stable; price, $8,000. HOMER MORGAN, No. 2 Pine-st.

FOR SALE—FARM OF 84 ACRES, ALL UNDER cultivation, near Bound Brook, N. J.; high ground, healthy location; Raritan River running in front of the place; one mile and a half from depot; splendid house, with lawn and shade trees; all kinds of outbuildings, in good order. Address W. D. BANCKER, No. 430 Clinton-av., Brooklyn.

COUNTRY HOUSES TO LET.

ORANGE, N. J.—HOUSES AND COUNTRY seats to let and for sale; a great variety attractively situated. BLACKWELL BROTHERS, No. 243 Broadway, Room No. 3.

TO RENT—A VERY NICE COUNTRY PLACE ON the Hudson River, one hour from New-York; five acres in lawn and garden; rent cheap. Address Y. L., Box No. 253 Times Up-town Office, No. 1,258 Broadway.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

$4,000 WILL PURCHASE ONE-HALF of a manufacturing business that will pay 80 per cent on whole now being made. Apply at once at No. 28 Powers-st., Williamsburg, Long Island.

SHIPPING.

CUNARD LINE.

NOTICE.

With the view of diminishing the chances of collision, the steamers of this line take a specified course for all seasons of the year.

On the outward passage from Queenstown to New-York or Boston, crossing the meridian of 50 at 43 latitude, or nothing to the north of 42.

On the homeward passage, crossing the meridian of 50 at 42, or nothing to the north of 43.

FROM NEW-YORK FOR LIVERPOOL OR QUEENSTOWN.

SCYTHIA....WED., Feb. 5 | BATAVIA...WED., Feb. 19
ABYSSINIA, WED., Feb. 12 | ALGERIA...WED., Feb. 26

Cabin passage and return tickets on favorable terms, including a special low rate for the Fall and Winter months.

Steerage tickets to and from all parts of Europe at very low rates. Freight and passage office, No. 4 Bowling Green. CHAS. G. FRANCKLYN, Agent.

WHITE STAR LINE.

UNITED STATES AND ROYAL MAIL STEAMERS FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.

NOTICE—The steamers of this line take the Lane Routes recommended by Lieut. Maury, U. S. N., on both the outward and the homeward passages.

BRITANNIC, Capt. PERRY.....Saturday, Feb. 1, noon.
REPUBLIC, Capt. IRVING.....Thursday, Feb. 6, 3 P. M.
GERMANIC, Capt. KENNEDY...Sat., Feb. 15, 12:30 P. M.

From White Star Dock, Pier No. 52 North River.

These steamers are uniform in size and unsurpassed in appointments. The saloons, state-rooms, smoking, and bath rooms are amidships, where the noise and motion are least felt, affording a degree of comfort hitherto unattainable at sea.

Rates—Saloon, $80, $90, and $100, gold; return tickets on favorable terms; steerage, $30.

These steamers carry neither cattle, sheep, nor pigs.

For inspection of plans and other information, apply at the company's office, No. 37 Broadway, New-York, or No. 140 Walnut-st., Phila. R. J. CORTIS, Agent.

GUION LINE.

UNITED STATES MAIL STEAMERS. FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL. Leaving Pier 38, N. R., foot of King-st.

WISCONSIN.....TUESDAY, Feb. 4, 3 P. M.
WYOMING.....TUESDAY, Feb. 18, 3 P. M.
NEVADA.....TUESDAY, Feb. 25, 7:30 A. M.
MONTANA.....TUESDAY, March 4, 2 P. M.
WISCONSIN.....TUESDAY, March 11, 7 A. M.

☞ These steamers are built of iron, in water-tight compartments, and are furnished with every requisite to make the passage across the Atlantic both safe and agreeable, having bath-room, smoking-room, drawing-room, piano, and library; also, experienced surgeon, stewardess, and caterer on each steamer. The state-rooms are all on deck, thus insuring those greatest of all luxuries at sea, perfect ventilation and light.

CABIN PASSAGE, (according to state-room,) $55, $65, and $75. INTERMEDIATE, $40; STEERAGE, $26.

OFFICES, NO. 29 BROADWAY. WILLIAMS & GUION.

STATE LINE,

TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, DUBLIN, BELFAST, AND LONDONDERRY.

From Pier No. 42 N. R., foot of Canal-st., as follows:

STATE OF VIRGINIA.....Thursday, Feb. 6
STATE OF GEORGIA.....Thursday, Feb. 13

First Cabin, $55 to $70, according to accommodations; excursion tickets, $100 to $120. Second Cabin, $40; excursion tickets, $75. Steerage at lowest rates.

AUSTIN, BALDWIN & CO., Agents, No. 72 Broadway, New-York.

STEERAGE tickets at No. 45 Broadway, and at the company's pier, foot of Canal-st., North River.

ANCHOR LINE U. S. MAIL STEAMERS, NEW-YORK AND GLASGOW.

From Pier No. 20 North River, New-York.

Ethiopia.....Feb. 1, noon. | Bolivia.....Feb. 15, noon.
Anchoria.....Feb. 8, 6 A. M. | Circassia.....Feb. 22, 6 A. M.

Cabins, $60 to $80. Excursion tickets at reduced rates. Second Cabin, $40. Steerage, $28.

NEW-YORK TO LONDON DIRECT.

From Pier No. 43 North River, foot of Charles-st.

California.....Feb. 1, noon. | Australia.....Feb. 8, 6 A. M.

Cabins, $55 and $65. Excursion tickets at reduced rates. HENDERSON BROTHERS, Agents, No. 7 Bowling Green.

NORTH GERMAN LLOYD.

STEAM-SHIP LINE BETWEEN NEW-YORK, SOUTHAMPTON, AND BREMEN.

Company's pier foot of 2d-st., Hoboken.

WESER.....Sat., Feb. 1 | ODER.....Sat., Feb. 15
MOSEL.....Sat., Feb. 8 | DONAU.....Sat., Feb. 22

RATES OF PASSAGE FROM NEW-YORK TO SOUTHAMPTON, HAVRE, OR BREMEN.

First cabin.....$100
Second cabin.....60
Steerage.....30

Return tickets at reduced rates. Prepaid Steerage certificates, $30. STEERAGE TICKETS TO ALL POINTS IN THE SOUTH OF ENGLAND, $30.

OELRICHS & CO., No. 2 Bowling Green.

GENERAL TRANSATLANTIC COMPANY

between New-York and Havre.

Company's Pier, (new,) No. 50 North River, foot of Morton-st.

FRANCE, TREDELLE.....Wednesday, Feb. 5, 3:30 P. M.
CANADA, FRAMORENT.....Wednesday, Feb. 19, 3:30 P. M.
AMERIQUE, DELORD.....Wednesday, March 5, 3 P. M.

Steamers marked thus * do not carry steerage passengers.

Checks drawn on Credit Lyonnais of Paris in amounts to suit.

For freight and passengers apply to LOUIS DE BEBIAN, Agent, No. 55 Broadway.

INMAN LINE ROYAL MAIL STEAMERS.

FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.

CITY OF MONTREAL.....Friday, Jan. 31, noon
CITY OF BERLIN, (new).....Friday, Feb. 7, 6:30 A. M.
CITY OF NEW-YORK.....Thursday, Feb. 13, 10:30 A. M.

From Pier No. 37 North River, foot of Charlton-st.

CABIN, $60, $80, and $100, gold. Return tickets on favorable terms. STEERAGE, $28, currency. Drafts at lowest rates Saloons, state-rooms, smoking and bath rooms amidships. These steamers do not carry cattle, sheep, or pigs.

Nos. 31 and 33 Broadway, N. Y. Philadelphia Office, No. 105 South 4th-st.

IMPERIAL GERMAN MAIL.

Hamburg American Packet Company's Line for PLYMOUTH, CHERBOURG, AND HAMBURG.

CIMBRIA...Thurs., Feb. 6 | WIELAND, Thurs., Feb. 20
LESSING...Thurs., Feb. 13 | SUEVIA.....Thurs., Feb. 27

Rates of passage to Plymouth, Cherbourg, and Hamburg, and all points in Europe: First Cabin, $100; second cabin, $60. Steerage, $26.

KUNHARDT & CO., C. R. RICHARD & BOAS, General Agents. General Passenger Agents, No. 61 Broad-st., N. Y. No. 61 Broadway, N. Y.

ROTTERDAM LINE.

Steamers leave Jersey City, near Pavonia Ferry.

W. A. SCHOLTEN.....Saturday, Feb. 1
MAAS.....Wednesday, Feb. 12

Cabin, $65-$70. Intermediate, $45-$50. Steerage, $23. H. CAZAUX, General Agent, No. 27 South William-st. FUNCH, EDYE & CO., L. W. MORRIS, 27 So. Wm-st., Freight Agts. 50 B'way, Gen. Passage Agt.

THE RED STAR LINE FOR ANTWERP.

Carrying the Belgian and United States mails. Sailing every 12 days from Philadelphia and New-York.

WITZELSLAU sails Saturday, Feb. 8.

For rates of passage and other information apply to PETER WRIGHT & SONS, General Agents, No. 307 Walnut-st., Phila., and 72 Broadway, New-York.

JNO. McDONALD, Agt., No. 3 Battery-place.

NATIONAL LINE—FROM NEW PIER 39 N. R. FOR LONDON. (Victoria Docks:)

Canada, Feb. 1, 11:30 A. M. | Denmark, Wed., Feb. 12, 9 A. M.

FOR LIVERPOOL AND QUEENSTOWN.

Egypt, Sat., Feb. 1, 11:30 A. M. | Erin, Sat., Feb. 8, 6:30 A. M.

Cabin, $50 to $70, currency; steerage, $26. Drafts from £1 upward issued at very low rates. Company's offices, 69 and 73 Broadway, F. W. J. HURST, Manager.

GREAT SOUTHERN FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE, FOR CHARLESTON, FLORIDA, SAVANNAH, AND ALL POINTS IN THE SOUTH AND SOUTH-WEST.

SAILING FROM PIER 35, NORTH RIVER, WEDNESDAYS AND SATURDAYS AT 3 P. M.

CITY OF ATLANTA.....SATURDAY, Feb. 1
CHARLESTON.....WEDNESDAY, Feb. 5

SUPERIOR PASSENGER ACCOMMODATIONS.

Insurance to destination, one-half of one per cent.

Consignees notified of arrival of steamer. Passenger tickets and bills of lading issued and signed at the office of JAMES W. QUINTARD & CO., Agents, Office on Pier.

Or W. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green.
Or BENTLEY D. HASELL, General Agent, Great Southern Freight Line, 317 Broadway.

PALMETTO FREIGHT LINE.

VIA STEAM-SHIP TO CHARLESTON, S. C., and the SAVANNAH AND CHARLESTON RAILROAD, to all points in the South and South-west.

Freight rates and Insurance at lowest figures.

Bills of lading signed at Pier No. 37 North River. CHAS. D. OWENS, General Agent Palmetto Freight Line, No. 315 Broadway.

UNITED STATES AND BRAZIL MAIL STEAM-SHIP LINE.

FOR ST. THOMAS, PARA, PERNAMBUCO, BAHIA, AND RIO DE JANEIRO.

Connecting at St. Thomas with German steamers for Porto Rico and Spanish Main. The new first-class iron steam-ship CITY OF PARA, Capt. CARPENTER, will sail for the above ports on Wednesday, Feb. 5, at 3 P. M.

Positively no freight received after 3d. Freight must be paid in advance. Freight at low rates taken for the above ports. Freight received at Roberts' Dock, Brooklyn. Insurance lower than by any other line. Shippers desiring insurance can effect same under our open policy. For freight engagements or passage, having elegant accommodations, apply to C. H. MALLORY & CO., Agents, Office, Pier No. 20 East River.

FLORIDA RAILROAD AND STEAM-SHIP LINE.

ONLY DIRECT LINE TO FLORIDA. SAILING EVERY SATURDAY. LOWEST RATES OF FREIGHT AND PASSAGE. Steamer ASHLAND, SATURDAY, Feb. 1, and every SATURDAY thereafter.

For Fernandina, Fla., and Brunswick, Ga., at 3 P. M. Only line issuing through tickets and bills lading to all points in Florida, and on Chattahoochie, Appalachicola, and Flint Rivers, and Bainbridge, Ga. Insurance, ½ per cent. Bills lading signed on pier. For further information, through bills lading, and passage rates, apply to No. 177 West-st., up stairs.

SAVANNAH AND FLORIDA.

From Pier No. 43 North River, at 3 P. M.

CITY OF SAVANNAH, Capt. MALLORY.....Sat., Feb. 1
GATE CITY, Capt. DAGGETT.....Wednesday, Feb. 5

Connecting with the Central Railroad of Georgia, Atlantic and Gulf Railroad, Georgia and Florida Steamboat Company, and with the new and elegant iron steamer ST. JOHNS.

C. D. OWENS, General Agent A. & G. R. R., No. 315 Broadway. GEO. YONGE, Agent. Ocean S. S. Co. and Central R. R. & C. of Ga., No. 409 Broadway.

PACIFIC MAIL STEAM-SHIP COMPANY.

Pier foot Canal-st., North River.

For SAN FRANCISCO via ISTHMUS OF PANAMA: Steam-ship ACAPULCO.....Friday, Jan. 31, noon

Connecting for Honolulu, China, Japan, and Mexico. From San Francisco for Japan and China:

Steam-ship CHINA.....Wednesday, March 5, noon

From SAN FRANCISCO to HONOLULU, NEW-ZEALAND, and AUSTRALIA:

Steam-ship CITY OF NEW-YORK, Monday, Feb. 17, noon

For freight or general information apply to Company's office, on the pier, foot of Canal-st., North River, and for passage at Company's Ticket Office, No. 257 Broadway.

NEW-YORK AND HAVANA DIRECT MAIL LINE.

These first-class steam-ships sail regularly at 3 P. M. from Pier No. 13 North River, at following:

Steam-ship MORRO CASTLE...WEDNESDAY, Feb. 19
Steamer SANTIAGO DE CUBA...SATURDAY, March 1

Accommodations unsurpassed. For freight or passage apply to WILLIAM P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green. LAWTON BROS., Agents in Havana.

SHIPPING.

NEW-YORK, HAVANA & MEXICAN MAIL S. S. LINE. Steamers leave Pier No. 3 North River at 3 P. M.

FOR HAVANA DIRECT AND VERA CRUZ.

Calling at Progreso, Campeche, and Frontera.

CITY OF WASHINGTON, (Havana only,) Thurs., Feb. 6
CITY OF MERIDA.....Saturday, Feb. 8
CITY OF NEW-YORK.....Saturday, Feb. 22

Steamer leaves New-Orleans Jan. 29 and Feb. 19 for Vera Cruz via Matamoros, Tampico, Tuxpan, connecting with steamer for Havana, New-York, and above ports.

P. ALEXANDRE & SONS, Nos. 31 and 33 Broadway

NEW-YORK AND CUBA MAIL S. S. LINE FOR HAVANA DIRECT.

FROM PIER 17 EAST RIVER AT 3 P. M. Magnificent accommodation for passengers.

S. S. NIAGARA.....Saturday, Feb. 1
S. S. SARATOGA.....Wednesday, Feb. 12

Tickets issued also for VERA CRUZ AND WEST INDIA ISLANDS in connection with French and English S. S. Lines from Havana. JAMES E. WARD & CO., No. 113 Wall-st.

RAILROADS.

METROPOLITAN ELEVATED RAILWAY.

Open from 5:30 A. M. to 12 P. M.

RECTOR-ST.—Nearest point for Wall-Street Ferry, and connects with cars for South Ferry.

CORTLANDT-ST.—Nearest point for Jersey City and Communipaw Ferries.

PARK-PLACE.—Nearest point for Post Office, City Hall, and Barclay-Street Ferry to Hoboken.

CHAMBERS-ST.—Nearest point for Pavonia and Erie Railway Ferry.

FRANKLIN-ST.

GRAND-ST.—Nearest point for Desbrosses-Street Ferry to Jersey City, and connects with cars for Desbrosses and East Grand Street Ferries.

BLEECKER-ST.—Connects with cars for East and West.

EIGHTH-ST.—Nearest point for Christopher-Street Ferry to Hoboken, connecting with cars for Christopher and East Tenth Street Ferries.

FOURTEENTH-ST.—Nearest point to Union-square, Wallack's and Lyceum Theatres, Academy of Music, Irving and Tammany Halls, connecting with cars for East Twenty-third and Thirty-fourth Street Ferries.

TWENTY-THIRD-ST.—Nearest point to Booth's, St. James, and Park Theatres, Grand Opera-house, Gilmore's Garden, and Masonic Temple, and Twenty-third-Street Ferry to Jersey City.

THIRTY-THIRD-ST.—Nearest point to Standard, Broadway, and Fifth-Avenue Theatres, Aquarium, and San Francisco Minstrels, connecting with cars for Weehawken Ferry.

FORTY-SECOND-ST.—Connects with New-York Transfer Company's cabs, for Grand Central Depot.

FIFTIETH-ST.

FIFTY-EIGHTH-ST.—Nearest point for Central Park, connecting with cars of Belt Line Railroad.

For up-town trains take east-side stations.

For down-town trains take west-side stations.

FARE 10 CENTS.

Except between the hours of 5:30 and 7:30 A. M. and 5 and 7 P. M., when fare is 5 cents.

WM. R. GARRISON, President.

M. VAN BROCKLIN, Superintendent.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD. GREAT TRUNK LINE AND UNITED STATES MAIL ROUTE.

On and after Jan. 13, 1879,

Trains leave New-York, via Desbrosses and Cortlandt Streets Ferries, as follows:

Express for Harrisburg, Pittsburg, the West and South, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, 9 A. M., 6 and 8:30 P. M., daily.

For Williamsport, Lock Haven, Corry, and Erie at 8:30 P. M., connecting at Corry for Titusville, Petroleum Centre, and the Oil Regions. Williamsport and Lock Haven, 9 A. M.

Baltimore, Washington, and the South, "Limited Washington Express" of Pullman Parlor Cars, daily, except Sunday, 10:2 P. M. Express with sleeping car, 8:30 A. M. and 12:20 A. M. For Baltimore, 4 P. M., except Sunday.

Express for Philadelphia, 4:30, 7:30, 8:20, 9, (10 limited) 11 A. M., 3:30, 4, 5, 6, 7:30, 8:30, and 10 P. M. Sunday, 4:30 and 9 A. M., 5, 6, 7:30, 8:30, and 10 P. M. Telegraph and second cars on 8:20 P. M. train.

Boats of "Brooklyn Annex" connect with all through trains at Jersey City, affording a speedy and direct transfer for Brooklyn passengers.

Trains arrive: From Pittsburg, 6:50, 10:40 A. M., 10:10 P. M., daily; 9:40 A. M., 8:20 P. M., daily, except Monday. Washington, 6:50 A. M. and 8:50 P. M. Baltimore, 6:50 A. M. and 3:50, 4:45, 10:10 P. M. Sunday, 6:50 A. M. and 10:10 P. M. From Philadelphia: 4:30, 6:50, 9:40, 10:40, 11:30 A. M., 2, 3:50, 4:50, (5:20 Limited) and 10:10 P. M. Sunday, 4:30, 6:50, 10:40, 11:30 A. M., 6:20, 10:10 P. M.

Ticket offices, No. 526 and No. 944 Broadway, No. 1 Astor House, and foot of Desbrosses and Cortlandt sts.; No. 4 Court-st., and Brook yn Annex Depot, foot of Fulton-st., Brooklyn; No. 114, 116, and 118 Hudson-st., Hoboken; Depot, Jersey City; Emigrant Ticket Office, No. 8 Battery-place.

FRANK THOMSON, General Passenger Agent.
J. P. FARMER, General Manager.

TO PHILADELPHIA via PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

THE OLD ESTABLISHED ROUTE AND SHORT LINE between NEW-YORK AND PHILADELPHIA.

14 Through Trains each way daily. 3 Depots in Philadelphia, 2 in New-York.

Double Track, the most Improved Equipment, and the Fastest time consistent with absolute safety.

On and after Dec. 16, 1878,

Express Trains leave New-York via Desbrosses and Cortlandt Streets Ferries, as follows:

4:30, 7:30, 8:20, 9 (Limited) 11 A. M., 1, 3:30, 4, 5, 6, 7:30, 8:30, and 10 P. M. Sundays, 4:30 and 9 A. M., 5, 6, 7:30, 8:30, and 10 P. M.

Boats of "Brooklyn Annex" connect with all through trains at Jersey City, affording a speedy and direct transfer for Brooklyn travel.

Returning, trains leave Philadelphia 12:01, 3:45, 3:55, 7, 7:35, 8, 8:30, and 11 A. M., (Limited Express, 1:30 P. M.,) 2, 4, 5:30, 7, and 7:35 P. M. On Sunday, 12:01, 3:45, 3:55, 8, 8:30 A. M., 4, 7:35 P. M.

Ticket offices, Nos. 526 and 944 Broadway, No. 1 Astor House, and foot of Desbrosses and Cortlandt sts.; No. 4 Court-st., and Brooklyn Annex Depot, foot of Fulton-st., Brooklyn; Nos. 114, 116, and 118 Hudson-st., Hoboken; Depot, Jersey City. Emigrant Ticket Office, No. 8 Battery-place.

FRANK THOMSON, General Manager. L. P. FARMER, General Passenger Agent.

NEW-YORK CENTRAL AND HUDSON RIVER RAILROAD.—Commencing Dec. 30, 1878, through trains will leave Grand Central Depot, as follows:

8:00 A. M., Western and Northern Express. Drawing-room cars to Albany and Rochester, and from Albany to Montreal via Saratoga.

10:30 A. M., Special Chicago and Western Express, with Drawing-room cars to Canandaigua, Rochester, and Buffalo.

11:00 A. M., Express to Albany and Troy, with connections to Utica and Rutland.

12:00 M., Montreal Express, with through sleeping car via St. Albans.

6:00 P. M., St. Louis Express daily, with sleeping cars for St. Louis, Cincinnati, and Chicago, Pullman cars also, sleeping cars for Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Toledo, and Detroit, and for Montreal, excepting Sunday night, via Saratoga.

7:30 P. M., Fast Express for Rochester and Corning via Geneva. Sleeping cars to Geneva and Rochester.

8:30 P. M., Pacific Express, daily, with sleeping cars, for Rochester, Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Cleveland, Toledo, Detroit, and Chicago, and, excepting Saturday night, to Carvville and Niagara Falls.

Tickets for sale at Nos. 252, 261, and 413 Broadway, and at Westcott Express Company's offices, Nos. 3 Park-place, 785 and 944 Broadway, New-York, and 333 Washington-st., Brooklyn.

C. B. MEEKER, General Passenger Agent.

THE ERIE RAILWAY

will hereafter be known by its new name,

THE NEW-YORK, LAKE ERIE AND WESTERN RAILROAD.

Arrangement of Through Trains From Chambers-Street Depot. (For 23d-st. see note below.)

9 A. M., daily, except Sunday, Cincinnati and Chicago Day Express. Drawing-room coaches to Buffalo.

6 P. M., daily, Fast St. Louis Express, arriving at Buffalo 8 A. M., Sunday excepted, connecting for West and South-west. Pullman's best Drawing-room Sleeping Coaches to Buffalo.

7 P. M., daily, Pacific Express to the West. Sleeping Coaches through to Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Cincinnati, and Chicago without change. Hotel dining coaches to Chicago.

7 P. M., except Sundays, Western Emigrant train.

Above trains leave Twenty-third-Street Ferry at 8:45 A. M. for Piermont.

For local trains see time-table and cards in hotels and depots. JNO. N. ABBOTT, General Passenger Agent.

NEW-YORK, NEW-HAVEN, AND HARTFORD RAILROAD.—Commencing Monday, Dec. 2, Grand Street Depot for Boston at 8:05, 11 A. M., 12 M., 1, 3, 4, 8:30 P. M. For Boston and Albany R. R.—8:05, 11 A. M., 12 M., 3, 9 P. M. For Connecticut River R. R.—8:05, 11 A. M., 12 M., 3 P. M. For New-York and New-England R. R.—8:05 A. M., 12 M., 11:35 P. M. For Newport—8:05 A. M., 1 P. M. For Shore Line Division—8:05 A. M., 3, 5:15, 11:35 P. M. For Harlem and New-York Air Line R. R.—9, 9:05 A. M., 3 P. M. For New-Haven and Northampton R. R.—8:05 A. M., 3 P. M. For Naugatuck R. R.—8:05 A. M., 1, 3, 4:40 P. M. For Housatonic R. R.—8:05 A. M., 3 P. M. For Danbury and Norwalk R. R.—8:05 A. M., 3, 4:40, 5 P. M. For New-Canaan R. R.—8:05 A. M., 1, 4:40 P. M. For local trains, see time-tables.

LEHIGH VALLEY RAILROAD. ARRANGEMENT PASSENGER TRAINS, JAN. 1, 1878.

Leave depots, foot of Cortlandt and Desbrosses sts., at 6:30 P. M.—Night express, daily for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Wilkesbarre, Pittston, Sayre, Elmira, Rochester, Auburn, Geneva, Ithaca, Manlius Falls, and the West. Pullman sleeping coaches attached. Central Eastern Office, corner Church and Cortlandt sts.

CHARLES H. CUMINGS, Passenger Agent.
ROBERT H. SAYRE, Superintendent and Engineer.

WICKFORD RAILROAD ROUTE TO NEWPORT, R. I.—Passengers for this line take 8:05 A. M. and 1 P. M. express train from Grand Central Depot, arriving at 4:10 and 9 P. M. as New-York.

THEODORE WARLEN, Superintendent.

FINANCIAL.

THE TRADERS' NATIONAL BANK OF BANGOR, ME.—This bank on the 14th inst. voted to go into liquidation, and it is now closing up its affairs. The holders of its notes and other creditors are notified to present the notes and other claims against the bank for payment. TEASK, Cashier.

BANGOR, Me., Jan. 15, 1879.

THE NEVADA BANK OF SAN FRANCISCO. Capital, $10,000,000, gold. Reserve, $3,500,000, gold. NEW-YORK AGENCY NO. 62 WALL-ST. Buys and sells exchange and telegraphic transfers. Issues commercial and travelers' credits. Executes orders for mining stocks at San Francisco.

UNITED STATES EXPRESS COMPANY, TREASURER'S OFFICE, No. 52 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK, Jan. 18, 1879.

THE TRANSFER-BOOKS OF THIS COMPANY will be closed Feb. 1 at 3 P. M. and reopened Feb. 17, 1879. THOS. F. WOOD, Treasurer.

BROWN BROTHERS & CO., No. 59 WALL-ST., ISSUE COMMERCIAL AND TRAVELERS' CREDITS, AVAILABLE IN ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

KOUNTZE BROTHERS, BANKERS, NO. 12 Wall-st., New-York, issue Letters of Credit or Circular Notes on the Union Bank of London for the use of travelers in all parts of the world.

$150,000 TO LOAN AT 6 PER CENT. in sums to suit. Apply to MOMER MORGAN, No. 2 Pine-st.

NOT SCARED YET. FIRE INSURANCE stocks bought by R. S. BAILEY, No. 7 Pine-st.

MONEY LOANED ON SALARIES. ADDRESS M. LEX, Box No. 127 Times Office.

FINANCIAL.

First Mortgage SEVEN PER CENT. BONDS OF THE Rochester and State Line Railway Company.

This road runs from Rochester through the rich Genesee Valley to Salamanca, New-York, about 109 miles, and forms the connecting link between the New-York Central and the Atlantic and Great Western

THE ELECTION-DAY ARRESTS

TAMMANY'S FIGHT WITH COMMISSIONER DAVENPORT.

ANOTHER BATCH OF WITNESSES BEFORE THE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE—WHAT A DISINTERESTED JACKSON DEMOCRAT FROM NEW-JERSEY SAW.

Before the Davenport investigating committee yesterday, Adolph Zerrenner, a gardener, testified that he was naturalized in September, 1868, on his discharge papers from the Army; he tried to vote and was arrested at 2 o'clock; after dark he was released; through his arrest about $38 worth of celery was spoiled. On cross-examination Mr. Davenport produced the witness' original application to be naturalized, which showed that he was naturalized as a minor. He signed the petition to Congress. Patrick Green, who appeared in a policeman's uniform, said he was naturalized in 1868, tried to vote, was arrested, and was impertinent to Commissioner Davenport, who, therefore, held him in $2,000 bail, which was furnished. Michael Obright, a Hungarian, declared that he received a notice from Commissioner Davenport before election day to bring his 1868 papers to the Commissioner's office; he did so, and his papers were taken from him; the witness went after them day after day, but could not find Mr. Davenport, "for," said he, "I could see the Pope himself quicker than Judge Davenport." Obright swore in a vote on election day, and was arrested. "Were you put in the pen?" asked Gen. Wingate. "No, Sir," was the answer; "they didn't put no such disgrace on me as that." Obright is going to Texas to-morrow, and is to be recalled in the meantime. Joseph Farrell told a similar story of vain attempts to get his 1868 papers back from from the Commissioner, who was "as hard to find as a needle in a bottle of hay." "Did you vote at the last election?" Gen. Wingate asked. "How could I?" replied the witness; "he intimidated me," pointing to Commissioner Davenport. Patrick Ryan, another Democratic citizen who was naturalized in 1868, had also given up his papers to Mr. Davenport before the election. Finally, fly the advice of his Tammany friends, he went to the Superior Court, and was renaturalized on the 24th of October on the strength of the court records of 1868. Ryan swore that he went to the polls to vote on his 1878 papers, although previously warned that a warrant was out for him; he was arrested, resisted, and was taken to some head-quarters at Twenty-seventh-street and Seventh-avenue; on the way he struggled with the Marshal, and his papers were torn; a large crowd followed; after some time, he was released with a warning not to try and vote again, and told to go home and get express himself; he was not taken before any Commissioner, and no warrant was shown to him. Later in the day, Ryan was recalled for cross-examination, when Mr. Davenport offered to prove that the witness was registered on an 1868 paper, and that in the original application for his naturalization papers there were several glaring irregularities. Among other irregularities, his witness had not known him the required length of time. Gen. Wingate objected to this evidence, and Chairman Lynde sustained him. William Kelly, who testified on Wednesday, was recalled to say that he was a brother of John Kelly, but whether he meant the Comptroller or not, did not know. Thomas Keyworth said he was naturalized in 1868, and had his vote challenged in 1876; last year he was arrested when he went to vote; he was put in the Post Office "pen," and suffered for lack of food and water; he signed the petition to Congress in Gen. Wingate's office.

Commissioner James R. Angel testified that he sat as a Commissioner in Morrisania on election day, to hear cases from the Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth Wards; he disposed of 80 or 81 cases during the day—all that came before him; all the men were discharged except one, who was held in bail on a charge of knowingly voting on an illegal paper. The witness narrated in detail his manner of disposing of the cases, and said he sat at the request of Commissioner Davenport. "I waive all claims for witness fees," said Mr. Angel as he left the stand. Gen. Wingate then offered in evidence the papers in the naturalization cases before Judge Freedman last year, and the latter's decision, and Mr. Davenport objected. After discussion, the papers were handed by the committee "for what they are worth," and then Robert Peterson, a clerk in the Police Department, said he had calculated from the Police records that 5,054 holders of 1868 naturalization papers registered last year. Of these 3,951 voted. On cross-examination the witness said the 5,054 covered papers issued in 1868 from all the courts. Mr. Davenport stated that 3,197 holders of papers issued from the Supreme and Superior Courts in 1868 registered last year; 3,103 warrants were issued, and only 1,299 of the holders voted. Commissioner Angel was then recalled to tell how he committed to the city prison certain men brought before him were Anti-Tammanyites, and that he heard them complain of the fact that Tammany Hall had played a trick on them, and was getting the best of them. Gen. Wingate read to in evidence the pamphlet issued by the Tammany Committee last year concerning the United States naturalization laws, and then called Bernard Walsh to the stand. This witness said he did not vote because he was not a citizen, and then walked over to the Clerk to get his witness fee, while David R. Lambourn, aged 73, took the vacant witness-chair. He tried to vote on 1868 papers, was arrested, taken to "some head-quarters" in Bleecker-street, and there told to go back and vote, as his papers were all right; he voted the "combination" ticket, and was not disturbed. Mark Whelan said he was arrested, taken before Commissioner Deuel, and discharged on his promise not to vote; he went from the court-room to the polls, voted, was re-arrested, and Mr. Deuel sent him to Commissioner Davenport, who committed him to Ludlow-Street Jail in default of $5,000 bail. Mr. John Foley offered bail, but it was not considered acceptable at the time, and the witness remained in jail until the next Thursday afternoon. Henry J. Mansfield, a book-keeper, testified that he was a Democratic Inspector of Elections in the district in which Albert Pohl was arrested. He saw J. Dennis, No. 721 Broadway, vote for Republican ticket on 1868 papers without being arrested. Joseph Keller lives in Elizabeth, N. J., and works in this City. He said he came to the City at 10:10 o'clock election morning, and visited various polling-places from the Battery to Forty-sixth-street, to see what was going on. He saw large numbers of men arrested. Mr. Keller amused the spectators with a humorous account of his travels during the day. Finally he followed a lot of arrested men to the Post Office building, but could not gain admittance. One of the doormen "insulted" him by declaring that if the witness said anything more about getting in he would be arrested. "That was the end of my day's journey," said the witness, who went on to say that he was a witness in the present investigation because he was an old Jackson Democrat. "In the Army," said he, "I was at war against the rebels. Now I'm at war against those who usurp the power of the United States. I could write the Book of Genesis full of the scenes I saw that day." "Do you know of any persons who were intimidated from voting by these arrests?" Gen Wingate asked. "Plenty of them," replied Mr. Keller. When cross-examined Mr Keller said he was a voluntary witness. "Who requested you to come here and testify?" Mr. Davenport inquired. "Mr. Joseph Keller, Sir," replied the witness. Afterward Keller was recalled to deny that he had ever said "I had a word to pluck with Commissioner Davenport." Matthew P. Breen followed, and his evidence completed the day's session. He was one of the Tammany lawyers who looked after arrested Tammany adherents, and passed the day attending to cases before Commissioner Deuel. He gave the scenes in court, and the particulars of a large number of cases which Commissioner Deuel disposed of out of their regular order, because the men would be seriously troubled by delay. The witness succeeded in getting the case of a Superintendent of a gas company hurriedly disposed of, by telling the Commissioner that there would be no gas if the man was detained.

At 4:30 o'clock the committee adjourned until this morning. It is expected that Tammany's case will be disposed of in time for Commissioner Davenport to begin calling witnesses in his own behalf tomorrow.

NEW CUSTOMS REGULATIONS.

The Secretary of the Treasury, having been informed that certain importers, particularly of leather gloves, German hosiery, and toys, were in the habit of omitting from their invoices the cost of the coverings or "cartons" in which their goods were packed, and in this way getting in, free of duty, valuable fancy boxes, issued an order that on and after Jan. 1 last, where the invoices did not specially declare that all charges were included, an addition should be made to the invoice value of the goods sufficient to cover a proper amount of charges. Yesterday Assistant Treasurer French issued a supplementary order suspending the first order until April 1, in view of the fact that many merchants complained that they had not received sufficient notice of the strict enforcement of the law. It is alleged that boxes of great value have been purposely packed with inferior goods and imported into this country without payment of duty, owing to the lax administration of the law. The Assistant Secretary has issued another order, permitting Collectors to extend the time of reporting for prosecution bonds given for the production of the certificate of a landing of merchandise abroad, for a period equaling one-half the original time, whenever the principal shall make application under oath for an extension and the sureties assent in writing and continue responsible, and evidence is presented under oath showing that due effort has been made to satisfy its conditions.

DISHONEST RAILROAD EMPLOYES.

The discovery of an extensive conspiracy to defraud the New-York Elevated Railroad culminated yesterday in the arrest of two of the employes. Some weeks ago it was found that a large number of the conductors and station agents of the road had been engaged in a conspiracy to rob the company by failing to punch tickets, and then returning them in order that they might be resold. A watch was set upon the suspected parties, and one of the station agents was directed to appear to acquiesce in the overtures of the conductors, in order that the plans of the conspirators might be ascertained. Sufficient evidence to convict several of the station agents and conductors, and reader a number of the others unworthy of holding positions of trust, was secured, and measures were taken to checkmate the dishonest employes. It was also determined to adopt the boxes for the receipt of tickets in use at the stations of the Metropolitan Road, and the new method of collecting tickets went into operation some days since. Forty of the employes of the railroad have been dismissed for being implicated in the conspiracy. The matter was laid before the Grand Jury also, and indictments for embezzlement and larceny were found against several of the discharged employes. Two of them—William Mells and John H. McOlean—were arrested yesterday and committed to the Tombs.

PURSUIT AND CAPTURE OF A THIEF.

AN EXCITING CHASE THROUGH THE STREETS OF JERSEY CITY.

Between 11 and 12 o'clock yesterday, Mrs. Christian Bauchle, wife of a confectioner doing business at No. 189 Newark-avenue, Jersey City, went to her rooms overhead to prepare the dinner. When she reached the head of the stairs, she discovered that the door of her kitchen, which had been locked, stood open; and, on going into the room she observed that a bowl of milk which had been left standing on the floor in a passage-way, had been overturned. She suspected that a thief had forced an entrance, and passing through the rooms she saw a man in the front bed-room. The window looking out into the street was raised, and he seemingly contemplated leaping from it to escape capture. Mrs. Bauchle ran into the hall and blew a Police call-whistle, and stamped on the floor. Her husband and brother understood the signal and started for the rooms. Mrs. Bauchle had no sooner blown the whistle, however, than the man dashed into the hall and tried to escape. Mrs. Bauchle stepped in front of him and grasped him by both arms. Neither spoke, but he easily disengaged one of his arms, and drawing a pistol presented it at Mrs. Bauchle's head. Prudence was the better part of valor to her mind, and she released her grasp. The fellow had gone but half way down the staircase, when he was met by Mr. Bauchle. His answer to Bauchle's command to halt was the drawing and presentation of his revolver. Mr. Bauchle, convinced that the thief could not go far, ran down stairs ahead of him. The thief, following, was next confronted at the doorway by Mrs. Bauchle's brother Louis, who grasped him, but let go again when the man shoved his revolver in his face. The thief escaped into the street, and turned his face toward Jersey-avenue. Bauchle and his brother-in-law followed him, and at the corner he turned and pointed his pistol at Bauchle. He fired, and the ball struck Bauchle in the left leg, inflicting a painful but not a serious wound. Then the thief resumed his flight through Jersey-avenue to Third-street. A crowd had by this time joined in the pursuit, but he kept the lead. He held his revolver, cocked and ready for use, and kept the crowd of yelling pursuers at bay by turning, after running a few hundred feet, and presenting his revolver at them. During the two miles vigorous, however, that at one time for half a block he was obliged to run backward, covering his followers with his pistol. So the chase continued up Third-street from Jersey-avenue to Coles-street, through Coles to Second, and down Second to Jersey-avenue again. As he reached the corner, he turned and ran rapidly backward, with his face to the crowd. Jacob Stuckey, a kindling-wood vendor, was driving his wagon in advance of him. His attention was drawn by the excitement of the chase. He dismounted, and, springing to the sidewalk behind the desperate thief, he laid him flat on the sidewalk with a well-directed blow behind the ear. While Bauchle and Officer Goetze, who sprang upon the prostrate man as soon as he fell, were disarming him, he deliberately pulled the trigger and fired a second time at Bauchle, whose hand was burned by the powder, but who escaped more serious injury.

At the Police station he gave his name as George Bartell, aged 25, and said he had no home. Upon his person were found a revolver, 40 cents in money, and a ticket to the Workhouse on Blackwell's Island. He said he did not care what became of him, and he was committed for examination. Bauchle's wound was probed, but the ball was not found, and it is believed to have fallen out of the wound in his struggle with Bartell.

TWO WANDERING YOUTHS.

THEY LEAVE HOME IN BROOKLYN TO SEEK THEIR FORTUNE—THEIR RETURN.

Edgar C. Bird, aged 15, the son of Dr. James R. Bird, of No. 122 Putnam-avenue, and Frederick Bushnell, an orphan lad of 17, who lived with a relative near Dr. Bird's house, left their homes on the 15th inst. The following day Mrs. Bird received a postal card from her son saying that he had left home for the purpose of supporting himself. He did not think it right that his father should support him any longer. Young Bird, who returned to his home at 2 o'clock on Wednesday morning, tells a rather remarkable story. On the 15th he went with Bushnell to Boston, taking the afternoon boat, in the hope of obtaining a situation in Ward & Gay's, a large stationery house in that city. The firm had advertised for two journeymen, and the boys had seen the advertisement in a Boston paper. Messrs. Ward & Gay refused to engage the youths because they had no reference. On the 17th they returned to New-York. A man about 35 years of age, who had been watching them on the boat, followed the boys when they landed and asked where they were going. They told their story, and he advised them strongly to go home. This, however, they refused to do. He then promised to get them places for him, promising to provide for them. He said he had been an actor, but became so enfeebled by wounds and exposure during the war that he was obliged to abandon his profession. With their new-found friend the boys went to No. 127 Crosby-street, where the actor engaged a room on the top floor. He had, he said, learned how to make chains and the proper plan they should go about the City seeking orders, and that he would do the work and also teach them the business. The boys acquiesced and set to work. Becoming conscience stricken on Wednesday night young Bird got out of bed and started home. His father had been searching constantly for the boy since he left home, and traced the fugitives to Boston, but lost all track of them in that city. He did not see Bushnell for some hours after his son. Young Bushnell has also returned. Yesterday the actor who met the lads in New-York, called, by invitation, at Dr. Bird's house and was heartily thanked by the parents of young Bird for his kindness to the boys.

THE LATE DR. JACOB BIGELOW.

Dr. J. G. Adams delivered a eulogy upon the late Dr. Jacob Bigelow, of Boston, last evening before the New-York Academy of Medicine. Dr. Bigelow was born in 1787, and in 1810 he began to practice in Boston. He was also a skillful botanist, and published several standard works on botany. He was well acquainted with a number of botanists in Europe, and several plants there were called after his name. With reference to his standing as a physician, he occupied a Chair of Materia Medica in Harvard College, and was a physician to the Massachusetts General Hospital, and practiced long in Boston. He delivered a series of lectures on "Technology," which were subsequently published in book form, and he was appointed one of the committee to form the American Pharmacopœa. After his retirement from active service Dr. Bigelow took an interest in technological schools, and he has been regarded as a pioneer in the subject of special technical knowledge. His strength gradually failed, and he died on the 10th of the present month. He was a laborious worker, a skillful physician, refined in taste, and fluent in diction as a lecturer.

THE SEA-SIDE SANITARIUM.

Dr. F. B. Clark, who recently visited the Sea-side Sanitarium, at Rockaway Beach, speaks in the highest terms of the management of the institution, and the care and attention bestowed on the inmates of the "Convalescents' Home." He says that he and Mr. Henry King, the President, who accompanied him, found the building in complete order, and furnished with all the comforts of a well-regulated home. The convalescents are all homeless, penniless men, who had been recommended to the Sanitarium by the doctors or Superintendents of our City hospitals, and were being restored, as far as possible, to health and strength. A want of funds is at present severely felt by the managers, and, as the Sanitarium is entirely dependent upon voluntary contributions, an urgent appeal is made for assistance.

UNDER A NEW MANAGEMENT.

The Board of Directors of the New-York Elevated Railroad held a meeting yesterday afternoon and appointed Mr. N. Gulliford—formerly general freight agent of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and Commissioner of the Western Division of the East-bound Pool, and subsequently Secretary of the Western Executive Committee—Acting Vice-President of the company. It was intended to make him a full Vice-President, but it was found that under the charter it was necessary for him to be a Director to hold that office. Mr. Robert Stewart, formerly Superintendent of Telegraph of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, was appointed Superintendent. The new officers will take their places on Feb. 1.

LOCAL BUSINESS TROUBLES.

An assignment for the benefit of creditors, with preferences, not stated, from Morris H. Rieders to Julius Harlem, was filed yesterday in the County Clerk's office.

Schedules in the matter of the assignments of Charles Knox, hatter, to Charles F. Abbott, Daniel Webster Arnold to William B. Swift, and Theodore Granbery to Edward Grimm, were filed in the Court of Common Pleas, yesterday. The schedule of Charles Knox shows liabilities of $307,827 75, nominal assets, $110,211 30, and actual assets, $41,211 30. Daniel Webster Arnold's schedule is: Liabilities, $11,159 43; nominal assets, $28,019 11, and actual assets, $20,628 52. That of Theodore Granbery is: Liabilities, $17,813 13; nominal assets, $17,846 50, and actual assets, $12,884.28.

MISCELLANEOUS CITY NEWS

THE POLICE DEPARTMENT.

TRANSFER OF CAPTAINS — COMMISSIONER ERHARDT'S LETTER PLACED ON FILE—THE REDUCED SALARIES.

One good result of the squabble between the members of the Board of Police was achieved at the meeting of the board yesterday by the assignment to duty of Capts. Thomas Ryan and William F. C. Berghold. These men were appointed Captains on Sept. 13, 1878, and since that time have been drawing Captain's pay for doing nothing, every attempt to assign them to precinct duty having failed. The failure of the board to assign these Captains to precincts was the foundation for one of the principal charges of neglect made by Commissioner Erhardt against his associates. During the meeting of the board yesterday the subject of assigning the new Captains to duty was again brought up, and Commissioner Wheeler offered a resolution that Capt. Ryan be placed in charge of the Sixteenth Precinct, and Capt. Berghold in command of the Ninth Precinct. The resolution was unanimously adopted, and thereupon Capt. A. J. Allaire, now in command of the Sixteenth Precinct, was transferred to the Tenth Precinct, which has been without a Captain since the dismissal of Capt. Foley, nearly a year ago, and Capt. Thomas J. Kennedy, now in command of the Ninth Precinct, was transferred to the Thirty-fifth Precinct, which has also been without a Captain since the dismissal of Capt. Lowery. Sergt. Little, who has been in charge of the Tenth Precinct since Feb. 26, 1878, was transferred to the Nineteenth Precinct for regular Sergeant's duty. Sergt. Little was transferred from the Twenty-second to the Seventeenth Precinct, and Sergt. Konoer from the Seventeenth to the Twenty-second Precinct. A number of patrolmen were also transferred. The communication to the board which has come to be known as "Erhardt's manifesto," was read, and, without debate or comment, was placed on file—Messrs. Smith, Wheeler, and Nichols voting yes, and Mr. Erhardt not voting. No allusion to the contents of the document was made during the proceedings. A meeting of the board will be held to-day to dispose of a large number of complaints against members of the force heretofore tried and now pending before the board for decision.

Commissioner Wheeler, the Treasurer of the Police Department, has given instructions to the Captains of the various Police precincts to make out pay-rolls of their commands for the month of January with the proposed deduction of 20 per cent. New time cards have been issued to those in charge of the matter, and the pay-rolls will be made out on the following basis: Inspectors, at the rate of $2,800 per annum; Captains, $1,800; Sergeants, $1,400; patrolmen, $960, and doormen, $720. On this basis the pay of the patrolmen will be $2 63 per day, and that of doormen $1 97. As there was some doubt whether the Police surgeons came under the rule, the matter was referred to the Corporation Counsel, and yesterday he sent to the board his opinion that their pay was liable to the same deduction as that of patrolmen, and that the pay in future, if the question of the 20 per cent. deduction shall be decided by the courts, will be at the rate of $1,800 per annum. A communication was received from the policemen who had met for the purpose of testing the legality of the proposed deduction of 20 per cent., asking for permission to employ counsel and to raise money by assessment on the members of the force to retain counsel and pay the legal expenses. The communication was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Commissioner Wheeler, the Treasurer of the Police Department, has given instructions to the Captains of the various Police precincts to make out pay-rolls of their commands for the month of January with the proposed deduction of 20 per cent. New time cards have been issued to those in charge of the matter, and the pay-rolls will be made out on the following basis: Inspectors, at the rate of $2,800 per annum; Captains, $1,800; Sergeants, $1,400; patrolmen, $960, and doormen, $720. On this basis the pay of the patrolmen will be $2 63 per day, and that of doormen $1 97. As there was some doubt whether the Police surgeons came under the rule, the matter was referred to the Corporation Counsel, and yesterday he sent to the board his opinion that their pay was liable to the same deduction as that of patrolmen, and that the pay in future, if the question of the 20 per cent. deduction shall be decided by the courts, will be at the rate of $1,800 per annum. A communication was received from the policemen who had met for the purpose of testing the legality of the proposed deduction of 20 per cent., asking for permission to employ counsel and to raise money by assessment on the members of the force to retain counsel and pay the legal expenses. The communication was referred to the Committee on Finance.

ANOTHER CENTENARIAN DEAD.

Among the death notices published in yesterday's TIMES, was one announcing the death of Phebe Nichols, aged 102 years. Mrs. Nichols was a colored woman, and her maiden name was Phebe Conroy. She was born in Bloomingdale, and her age was 102 years 11 months 14 days. In early life she followed the occupation of nurse, and was employed as such in many of the oldest New-York families, including the Bullmans, the Fishes, the Crosbys, and others. She was the mother of 11 children, four of whom are still living, and her immediate descendants include six grandchildren, six great-grandchildren, and two great-great-grandchildren. Her husband was the coachman of C. L. Rutgers, at the time of the last visit of Gen. Lafayette to this country, and drove the coach that contained that distinguished personage from the Battery up Broadway. Mrs. Nichols' memory of early events in the history of Manhattan Island was very vivid, and her reminiscences of the revolutionary period were many and interesting. She remembered Gen. Washington, Gen. Lafayette, and other prominent persons of the time. She retained her mental and physical faculties to a remarkable degree, and was able to take care of herself up to within about two months of her death. The last time she was out of the house was a year ago last Thanksgiving, when she walked a block and a half, to the residence of one of her grandsons, to dinner. From that time until about two months ago, she was able to be about the house and to go up and down stairs. Although somewhat bowed down with the weight of years, she walked remarkably erect for one of her age. Her death is attributed solely to old age and a general wasting away of her physical powers. She did not appear to be afflicted with any particular disease, did not require the attendance of a physician, or the administration of medicine. For the last few days of her life she slept most of the time. She was for many years a member of St. Philip's Episcopal Church, in Mulberry-street, from which her funeral will take place at 12:30 P. M. to-day. The body will be taken to Cypress Hills for burial.

HOLDING TWO GOVERNMENT OFFICES.

Chief Deputy Marshal James R. Cosgrove, of the Eighteenth Assembly District, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Lyman yesterday, on a warrant issued at the instance of Assistant District Attorney Fiero, on a charge of drawing pay for services which he had not performed, he having held two positions at the same time under the Government. It is understood that his case is to be made a test one. Warrants being out for Assistant Doorkeeper William Guilfoyle, Harry Paddleford, Nathan Koehler, R. F. Pennen, Coles Raynor, Robert Evans, and Mark F. Healey. Ex-Judge Dittenhoefer appeared for Cosgrove, and said that Cosgrove's offense being purely a question of a political fight between two party leaders, his client should be allowed to go on his own recognizance. Mr. Fiero objected to that course, but acceded to a proposition that Cosgrove should go on Judge Dittenhoefer's recognizance until this morning, when he will be required to furnish $1,500 bail, and a day will be fixed for the examination.

APPOINTMENTS BY MAYOR COOPER.

Mayor Cooper has made the following appointments in his office and in the office of the First Marshal and the Permit Bureau: James E. Morrison, Secretary and chief clerk, $3,500 per annum; John Tracey, general clerk, $2,000; William A. Marshall, clerk, $1,000; Charles P. Clapp, clerk, $1,000; David S. White, stenographer, $1,500; Michael W. Brown, messenger, $800. Marshal's Office—John Tyler Kelly, First Marshal, $2,500; Herman Schroeder, Second Marshal, $1,500; Henry D. Appleton, clerk, $1,000; Lloyd W. Milnor, temporary clerk, $1,000. Permit Bureau—Daniel S. Hart, Registrar, $2,400; Robert Prasts, Interpreter, $1,200; Philip W. Gaulon, clerk, $1,000; Edward L. Waterbury, clerk, $900; William H. Magee, temporary inspector, $800; George R. Cole, temporary inspector, $800; Bernard Nels, inspector, $800; James P. Burns, inspector, $800. These salaries embody a reduction of $5,400 on those paid during the administration of Mayor Ely.

A COUNTERFEITER ARRAIGNED.

TESTIMONY OF CHARLES ULRICH BEFORE COMMISSIONER DEUEL—THE MATTER OF EX-TRADITION TO BE CONSIDERED.

Jacob Ott, one of the gang of counterfeiters recently arrested for manufacturing and uttering counterfeit national bank notes, was arraigned for examination before United States Commissioner Deuel yesterday afternoon. Ex-Judge Dittenhoefer appeared for the prisoner, and Assistant District Attorney Fiero conducted the case for the Government. Capt. H. B. Curtis, of the Secret Service detectives, produced several bills of the denominations of $5 and $50, and testified that $50 counterfeit bills on the Tradesmen's National Bank of New-York had been sold to an officer of the Secret Service by Henry Peckham, now serving a term of eight years for their utterance, and that "fives" on the Bank of Tamaqua had been uttered by Michael Connors, who is now serving a term of five years for the offense. Ott had told witness that he lived with Charles Ulrich for the past two years in Philadelphia, and at Oak Lane and Charon Hill, suburbs of Philadelphia.

D. H. Gilkinson identified a rubber bed, and several pieces of cotton and woolen flannels which he said he had found in Ott's trunk; the prisoner told him that he had brought them from Columbus, Ohio, where he had been engaged in the lithographing business.

Charles Ulrich was the principal witness, and as it appeared by his testimony, the principal in the whole business. He said that he was an engraver, and had learned his business at Berlin, Prussia; he was a German, and 43 years of age; came to this country in 1853, and had followed his trade since he came here, except a period of two years, when he was a volunteer in the war; had lived eight years at Columbus, Ohio; knew Jacob Ott; met him first in July, 1876, at Cincinnati, where witness had advertisements for a printer; Ott applied for the situation, and was engaged; the prisoner worked for witness for three or four months, and accompanied witness to Philadelphia in December, 1876, when witness began the counterfeiting business at Cumberland and Sixth streets; witness began with $50 plates, and followed it up with $5 plates; he identified the bills in the possession of the United States Government as the products of his engraving and Ott's printing; witness moved his establishment to Oak Lane, in December, 1877, and there a lot of "fives" were printed and sent to Europe; 2,000 pieces of the denomination of $50, and 8,000 of $5, had been printed at Oak Lane, and 2,000 of the "fifties," and 16,000 of the "fives" were issued at Charon Hill; witness gave up the business in April, 1878; Ott received during that year the sum of $3,000 in cash, as his board of lodging for himself and family during the same period.

On being cross-examined by ex-Judge Dittenhoefer, witness contradicted his previous testimony by stating that he had learned his trade of his father at Dantzig; witness had been in prison twice before the present arrest, once at Sing Sing, N. Y., and next at Columbus, Ohio; was sent to Sing Sing in 1858 for five years on conviction for counterfeiting; was pardoned in 1861; was sent to prison at Columbus on a similar charge in 1867 for 12 years, and was pardoned after serving eight years of his term of sentence; between the years 1861 and 1867 he was in business as an engraver at Maiden-lane and Nassau-street; began counterfeiting in less than a year after he received his second pardon; witness said he did not know that he was following a "State's evidence" against Ott; had received no intimation to that effect; he denied the assertions published to the effect that he had ever done any counterfeiting in Europe; witness did not think he had "led Ott astray;" the prisoner was 40 years old, and "ought to have known what he was about;" the reason witness confined his counterfeiting trade to small bills was because the wholesale dealers could obtain no better than bills of larger denominations; "country people," he said, "fight shy of large bills, good or bad." In conclusion, the witness said that he expected to get all the punishment he deserved, and if he did not he should be "much surprised."

Commissioner Deuel held the matter over until Monday to consider the matter of the extradition of Ott to Pennsylvania for trial.

THE KILLING OF OFFICER FURNESS.

TESTIMONY REGARDING THE SANITY OF WILLIAM L. PALMER.

The commission appointed to inquire into the mental condition of William L. Palmer, Jr., who shot officer Asa H. Furness, of the Fourteenth Precinct, in the Metropolitan Hotel, held another session yesterday, in the District Attorney's office. Mr. William P. Dixon, a cousin of Palmer, was in attendance to look after his interests. John H. Hunter, of No. 523 Washington-street, Brooklyn, who married an aunt of Palmer, testified that he knew the latter from his boyhood, having lived near his father's house at Stonington, Conn.; from 1870 to 1875; Palmer had lived in his [Hunter's] house continually, except when he went to Europe; Palmer read a great deal, and preferred heavy reading; he went into the commission business at Burling-slip with a Mr. Vandenventer, but the venture was not a success; his father, who lived at Stonington, Conn., was in independent circumstances, and supplied him with money; Palmer once paid his address to a young lady, but did not appear anxious to press his suit, and, in the opinion of the witness, the young persons were never engaged to be married; on entering Yale College he exhibited an extraordinary love of athletic sports, and neglected his studies; as a member of the boat crew of his class he subjected himself to severe training, paid no attention to his studies, and was expelled from the Sophomore Class; on returning home, he said he was ill, but made no mention of what had happened in college; Dr. Dwyer, of Stonington, informed his parents that he was suffering mentally, and under a pledge of secrecy the young man told his mother of his reverses in college; he grew moody and irritable, but kept up the same athletic exercises as he had in college; his mother, to whom he was very much attached, died last Spring, and the young man was inconsolable; he locked himself in his room, refusing to see anybody, and it was feared that he would commit suicide; his manner underwent a great change, especially toward the children of witness, of whom he was very fond; he grew suspicious of the members of his family, and expressed the opinion that they had entered into a conspiracy to poison him; Palmer had some delusion about his mother's property; he thought he was entitled to his father's property left by his mother, and had made a demand on his father for an allowance of $2,000 a year; Mrs. Palmer had left her property, amounting to only about $15,000, to her husband, in trust for the children; witness did not know whether this trouble about the property had in any way accelerated Palmer's mental delusions; he had always understood that Palmer had had a disagreement with his father, but witness had never heard so from Palmer himself; he was a man who would be likely to be affected by a disappointment in love; last September Palmer purchased a pistol, which he carried constantly, and showed dangerous symptoms; he insisted on cooking his own meals, in order, as he said, to circumvent those who had conspired to poison him; he bewailed his college and business reverses, and declared that within a year he would either be in a lunatic asylum or in his grave; Dr. Butler, proprietor of an insane asylum at Providence, R. I., was consulted, and he recommended that the young man should be sent to the asylum; on the day of his removal, he drew his pistol, and it took the combined strength of Dr. Butler and two assistants to overpower and disarm him; he was a splendid athlete, and his training had rendered him capable of coping with the three men, all of whom were muscular; he was taken on board the boat and conveyed to the asylum in a close carriage; he remained there for 10 days, but refused to take any food, and nutrition had to be forced down his throat through tubes; he resisted this operation so successfully that by advice of Dr. Butler of the institution, but contrary to the advice of his own physician in Boston, he was discharged; it was feared that he would die for lack of food, and his discharge was therefore determined upon; while being taken back to Stonington, Palmer escaped, and was next heard of in this City; he wrote to his father for money from his boarding-house at No. 210 East Sixty-second-street, but kept moving constantly so that his family might not be able to discover his whereabouts; the next known of him was when the newspapers published the account of the shooting of Officer Furness.

Very little is known of the movements of the prisoner from the time he escaped from the custody of his father to the killing of the officer. He seemed to be imbued with the idea that everybody was engaged in a conspiracy to kill him, and for that reason never stopped longer than a few days at any hotel. He would not allow the same waiter to attend him a second time, and changed his place of residence continually. He was very reserved, and expressed fears of being chloroformed and kidnapped. The hotels of the City are being scanned for waiters with whom he came into contact while so affected, and the Commissioners expect to have some additional witnesses in attendance on Tuesday next.

THE KILLING OF HENRY MADDEN.

The petition of John Schmidt, who shot and killed Henry Madden in his saloon at No. 13 Oliver-street on the 23d inst., to be admitted to bail on the ground that he acted in self-defense, was denied yesterday by Judge Barrett, in the Supreme Court, Chambers. In his decision Judge Barrett says that by the evidence a case is presented upon which a jury may be fairly asked to determine whether the prisoner took the life of the deceased intentionally, and whether his motive was revenge. There is certainly enough to hold the prisoner upon the charge of murder, and he ought not to be admitted to bail pending the action of the Grand Jury."

CITY AND SUBURBAN NEWS.

NEW-YORK.

Mr. Herman Inman, a son of the owner of the Inman Line, is among the passengers of the City of Montreal, which sails for Liverpool to-day.

The third annual invitation ball of the Enterprise Base-ball Club takes place to-night in Irving Hall. Arthur Bent, the cornet player, will perform during the evening.

One hundred and twenty-six immigrants were landed at Castle Garden yesterday. The Somerset brought 9; the Switzerland, 44; the W. A. Scholten, 21, and the Scythia, 52.

Mr. Francis D. Moulton has sailed for Europe. While abroad he will visit the dairy interests of England, Ireland, Scotland, France, and the dairy Provinces bordering on the German Ocean.

York Lodge, F. and A. M., will work the third degree in their rooms in Masonic Temple, on Tuesday evening next, and tickets for the lodge entertainment of Feb. 11 will then be ready for distribution.

The steam-ship Glenbervis started for London on Wednesday afternoon, but coming into collision with the tug-boat Uncle Abe, she anchored off the Battery. On examination it was found that the steamer had sustained no damages and she proceeded on her voyage yesterday afternoon.

The proposed case on appeal from the judgment rendered in the action brought by Mr. William Herries to recover the salaries of a number of reporters on the Republic, was submitted to Judge Van Brunt for settlement yesterday, by Mr. Spellissy, at Chambers of the Court of Common Pleas.

Patrolman William Muldoon, of the First Precinct, who was to wrestle with William Bauer for $500 a side next week, fell down stairs at the New-Street Police Station yesterday morning and fractured his left wrist, so the match will be postponed until the policeman has fully recovered.

Rev. W. H. Ferris, D. D., formerly Presiding Elder of the New-York Conference, and lately of the Canoon-Street Church, of Poughkeepsie, has been appointed to the pastorate of the Thirtieth-Street Methodist Church, of this City, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Rev. William P. Abbott, D. D.

Patrick McMulkin, a young man, of No. 160 West Twenty-eighth-street, was committed for trial in default of $1,000 bail by Justice Flammer, in the Jefferson Police Court, yesterday, on a charge of stealing on the 19th inst. a barrel of whisky, valued at $120, from the store of James Kelly, a liquor-dealer, of No. 298 Seventh-avenue.

The State Charities Aid Association has for several years supplied the hospitals and other charity institutions with reading matter. The association now appeals to the public to send to its office, No. 6 East Fourteenth-street, their old illustrated weeklies, magazines, and books, from whence they will be distributed among the sick and suffering in the hospitals.

It was reported at the Custom-house yesterday that the staff of Special Treasury Agents and some of Collector Merritt's assistants were busily at work, under orders from Secretary Sherman, searching for fresh evidence against Collector Arthur and Naval Officer Cornell, to embody in the Secretary's supplementary report to the Committee on Commerce of Congress.

The contest over the copy of the supposed will of the late Benjamin B. Robson was continued yesterday afternoon before Surrogate Calvin. Magellan T. Mix, one of the witnesses to the original will, and George W. Clark, a witness to the codicil, testified as to their connection with the execution of the instruments, and the case was adjourned until to-morrow at 10:30 A. M.

The monthly returns of the New-York City Mission and Tract Society for January exhibit the figures following: Forty City missionaries, 5 schools, 3 churches, with 846 communicants: 4 Sabbath-schools, with 2,000 scholars; 5,600 missionary visits, 530 meetings, 154 pledges, 75,000 tracts, 42,250 pages of tracts. Receipts, $3,268 15; expenditures, $3,929 52; debt, $5,592 49.

Gen. Armstrong, Principal of the Hampton (Va.) Normal and Agricultural Institute, solicits contributions for the purpose of providing sleeping-rooms and a workshop for the use of the 67 Indians now being educated as teachers at the institute; $12,000 is needed for the rooms and $6,000 for the workshop, and money may be sent either to Gen. Armstrong, at Hampton, or William E. Dodge, this City.

At the annual meeting of the Gramercy Boat Club the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, William M. Dean; Vice-President, Charles F. Naething; Treasurer, Harbeck Mills; Recording Secretary, George F. Krapp; Corresponding Secretary, Julius D. Mahr; Captain, Charles Eatwicker; Lieutenant, William C. Taggard. Board of Trustees—Charles B. Keyes, Charles Hazelton, John Kyle, D. Cunningham, P. E. Dolan.

At the meeting of the Board of Police yesterday a communication was received from Mr. H. J. Schumacker, Consul-General of the German Empire at this port, complaining of the arrest of a number of German sailors by the Police without notice to him, as is required by the treaty between the United States and Germany. The communication was referred to the counsel of the board to draft suitable rules for the arrest of sailors on foreign ships.

Julius J. Lewin, who was expelled from the Produce Exchange on Feb. 27, 1874, has applied for reinstatement, and his application has been posted, to remain open to objections for 10 days. Lewin was agent for a foreign house, and had a dispute with another member, which he agreed to submit to arbitration, instead of doing so, fled to Europe. He sent in his resignation before leaving, but the Board of Managers refused to accept it. It will require a three-fourths vote to reinstate him.

Judge Sedgwick rendered a decision yesterday, in the Superior Court, Special Term, against the application of the Gold and Stock Telegraph Company for the